Pac-10 probes allegations against ASU cagers

By JERRY BROWN
and BRAD HALVORSEN
State Press

The Pacific 10 Conference is investigating the ASU men's basketball program in light of allegations of rules infractions between spring 1982 and spring 1985, University officials announced Thursday.

The inquiry involves at least one former ASU player who allegedly received extra money for off-season jobs and two others who reportedly were furnished with transportation or use of a school car for their jobs.

Names of the players involved were not disclosed.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson received the inquiry notice and designated Athletic Director Charles Harris as "the official University spokesman on this matter."

Harris, who said the inquiry "is a result of an ongoing investigation regarding the program since the winter of 1984," said the University has retained Michael L. Slive, a former executive director of the Pac-10, to investigate the allegations for ASU.

"We expect the process to move quickly and anticipate appearing before the Pac-10 Compliance Committee prior to the end of the calendar year," Harris said. "At such time that the entire process is completed, we intend to make disclosure of the findings to the Compliance Committee."

"My singular desire is to bring this embarrassing matter to a quick and fair closure, to build a new spirit in our athletic program."

Pac-10 spokesman Jim Muldoon said the timetable would be based on completion of Slive's investigation.

"Once the findings go to the Compliance Committee, there will be a hearing," Muldoon said. "First they would decide if there was any violation. If they do, then they would decide what, if any, action would be taken."

ASU basketball coach Steve Patterson said he knew the inquiry was coming and was happy to see it had finally surfaced.

"It's been going on for a long time," Patterson said. "In one sense, I'm glad it's here. Now let's deal with it and get it over with."

Patterson said he was surprised to see that the investigation included the spring of 1985.

"That indicates that it includes something fairly recent and that the inquiry has just concluded," Patterson said. "That surprised me."

Patterson replaced Bob Weinhauer, who was fired in July for reasons that were never disclosed by University officials, a policy set by the Arizona Board of Regents. Weinhauer had said he was aware of a "low-level investigation" by the Pac-10, and that conference officials told him the alleged violations "were relatively minor."

Professor of public affairs Frank Sackton, who held the position of deputy athletic director in the winter of 1984, said that when the conference informed him of the initial investigation, he interpreted it as minor.

"All of the events occurred three years ago involving actions by players and maybe boosters," said Sackton, who left the athletic department on Oct. 1. "But at the time, looking at the nature of the charges, I termed it as a low-level inquiry."

When asked if he thought the latest investigation was minor, Harris said: "Anytime you get a notice of inquiry, it is serious. That is the position we're taking."

Nelson said in a prepared statement that he is confident Harris will handle the situation.

"I want to stress again that I do not condone and will not tolerate improprieties in our program," Nelson said. "There is new leadership for a largely new coaching staff in our athletic department."

"I have full confidence in Charles Harris to infuse the program with class, dignity and integrity and to put the past where it belongs — behind us. We should be judged not by what we were but by what we are."

ASU was placed on probation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association in 1980-81 for football violations, and the baseball team was penalized by the Pac-10 last year for financial aid improprieties.

But Harris said the alleged infractions would not cause the NCAA to invoke the newly passed "death penalty" due to the fact that the legislation proposed by the NCAA Council only involves proven violations that took place after September 1985.

The death penalty — which at its harshest could mean a two-year exile in a particular sport — is handed down by the NCAA when a team is penalized for major infractions twice in five years.

Reagan expected to approve Seidman 'soon' for FDIC job

By COLLEEN MOORE
State Press

ASU College of Business Dean L. William Seidman's appointment to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation board of directors will be finalized by President Reagan "very soon," an FDIC spokesman said Thursday.

Reagan, following the U.S. Senate's confirmation Wednesday, is expected to sign Seidman's official appointment during the next few days, the spokesman said.

Seidman will be sworn in as a member of the FDIC's board of directors Monday, and the board is expected to elect Seidman as chairman, she said.

Reagan nominated Seidman for the post on July 30.

The FDIC insures deposits for up to $100,000 in more than 14,000 banks across the nation.

Jack Kinsinger, ASU's vice president of academic affairs, said Thursday: "It's a great honor for him to have been chosen."

"It reflects very well on the University. I'm saddened that we're losing him as a dean, but he will remain on tenure as a professor of accounting."

Seidman has held federal government positions in the past.

He was an assistant for economic affairs to Gerald Ford from 1974 to 1976 and was co-chairman of the White House Conference on Productivity during 1983 and 1984.

L. William Seidman

He was also vice chairman of Phelps Dodge Corp. from 1976 to 1982.

Seidman visited the FDIC office in Washington, D.C., recently, the spokesman said.

"He has already started working here," she said. "He has been in and out of the office when he is in town. When he takes oath on Monday morning, he will begin working immediately afterward."

Journalist killed in Afghanistan called CIA agent in Tass report

MOSCOW (AP) — The official news agency, Tass, said Thursday Afghan authorities have evidence showing that Charles Thornton, the Arizona journalist killed in Afghanistan last month, was a CIA agent.

Thornton, a 50-year-old medical reporter for The Arizona Republic, was killed Sept. 19 when Soviet-backed Afghan troops attacked the truck in which he was riding in Kandahar province.

Richard Robertson, city editor of the Arizona Republic, described the Tass report as "ridiculous."

He said Thornton and Republic photographer Peter Schlueter, 29, were on assignment in Afghanistan when the writer was killed.

The Tass report from Kabul said "competent authorities of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan" had established that Thornton and two companions were CIA agents "posing as journalists and physicians" who visited bases of a number of Afghan "counter-revolutionary gangs."

"Thornton would think that's pretty funny," Robertson said of the Tass report.

Tass quoted Afghanistan's Bakhtar news agency in claiming that "the adventure of American citizen Charles Thornton, who unlawfully penetrated the DRA's territory among a gang of Afghan counter-revolutionaries, is striking proof of the direct participation of U.S. imperialism in the undeclared war against the DRA."

"The U.S. State Department is trying to disassociate itself from its involvement in the sending of Charles Thornton and other American citizens with hostile aims into the DRA," Tass said.

City warns AIDS victims that sex could result in felony charges

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The city health department has hand-delivered letters to 14 AIDS victims warning that sexual activity will result in felony charges, and the mayor says carriers of the disease should "transcend their individual rights" in deference to society.

The letters dispatched this week also order the AIDS victims to avoid exposing others to the disease through sharing needles or donating blood or plasma, and to caution physicians and dentists with whom they come into contact.

"I think most people are reasonable and that they will follow the last paragraph in the letter 'to accept this letter in the spirit in which it was intended and help me in my effort to protect the public health,'" Dr. Courand Rothe, director of the health department, said Thursday.

Rothe said he became concerned about the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome after a male prostitute in Houston, who is an AIDS victim, said he would continue to engage in sexual activity.

Rothe said his agency is working under the authority of the Texas Communicable Disease Prevention and Control Act, which allows controls on people who are health risks to the community.

Rothe said he received a report from a physician that one of his patients knew of at least three AIDS patients in the San Antonio area who would not limit their activities.

Tuition-setting proposal meets dissent

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

The Arizona Students Association is protesting a proposal by University presidents that would change the formula used to set tuition costs, the ASA director said Thursday.

Diane Ziple said a tuition-setting proposal using the anticipated costs of education will substantially increase tuition rates.

"We are very concerned about that," Ziple said. "Basically what we have said and what we continue to say is that we are simply not going to change."

"If we don't rebut then they are just going to be able to go ahead and raise tuition."

Education costs are the average amount of expenditures per student, not including research and public relations costs.

In-state students pay 20 percent of their own education costs. Out-of-state students are responsible for 85 percent of their educational funding.

Molly Broad, the regents' executive director and member of the President's Council, said the council is looking at the possibility of setting next year's tuition rate on the anticipated education costs for the 1986-87 school year.

But Ziple contends that if the education costs were less than anticipated, students would have to pay inflated tuition rates.

"It's kind of like changing the rules in the last minute of the game," Ziple said.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson said the council has not decided if they will recommend a change, and it will discuss problems with the new formula at a council meeting Oct. 24 in Tucson.

The regents will make a final decision on the 1986-87 tuition rates at their Nov. 8 and 9 meeting in Tucson. The board was originally scheduled to reach a decision in October, but delayed action after the council requested more time to study the formula change.

Ziple said the council is under the impression that there is enough financial aid available to off-set a large tuition increase, but students will instead be denied access to the universities because of decreasing financial aid.

"They are not paying attention to the $800 million in Guaranteed Student Loan cuts over the next three years," she said.

Paul Barberini, ASU's director of student financial assistance, said the proposed tuition increases may force students to quit school or work longer hours to keep up with the increases.

"If you are going to increase (tuition) you better darn well make sure you give people warning," Ziple said.

An estimated 20,500 ASU students receive some form of financial aid.

"We feel we have already compromised," Ziple said. "We are supposed to be the students' advocate."

She said the proposed ASA increase, which would push resident tuition over $1,025, is "as much as we are going to compromise."

Ziple said ASA had met with regents to discuss the proposals and had found them to be responsive to the students' concerns, but that several board members had said they want to raise tuition.

She said Donald Pitt, the board's president, has been particularly "bullish" on the tuition increases.

"He wants (tuition increases) more than anybody else," Ziple said. "It is his philosophy if you want quality undergraduate education you are going to have to pay for it."

Pitt, a Tucson attorney, was out of town Thursday and could not be reached for comment.

Lack of academic freedom sometimes justified

Gray T. Echols
Opinion Editor

The United States is globally revered for its superior technological sophistication. The atmosphere of academic freedom has facilitated advanced scholarship in all branches of study and has thereby attracted many dedicated students from every nation.

The case in point is that of Libyan students pursuing nuclear-related curricula in American universities. Now this might not seem a dangerous endeavor unless, of course, one considers how desperately Libya's Colonel Muammar Qaddafi wants atomic weaponry.

From The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, March 1985:

•Col. Qaddafi attempted to purchase a nuclear bomb from China shortly after seizing power in 1969.

•Col. Qaddafi has offered one million dollars in gold to anyone who steals a nuclear bomb for Libya.

•Col. Qaddafi gave Pakistan millions of U.S. dollars and tons of uranium concentrate in hopes of receiving a nuclear bomb from that country.

•Arab scientists working in the United States have been offered lucrative incentives to work for Qaddafi in Libya.

Col. Qaddafi's attempts are not always so overt. In 1981, it was learned that some 200 Libyan students were studying nuclear engineering in America, and that more than 300 were involved in similar undertakings elsewhere. Qaddafi's more subtle means to acquire nuclear capability gradually became clear: the Libyan intellectual.

It was within this context that the federal government passed legislation forbidding Libyan students from taking "nuclear-related" courses. It was the first time in history that American universities were required by the government to restrict classes on the basis of nationality.

Given the belligerent attitude and volatile personality of Col. Qaddafi, it seems reasonable that the law was passed. If the United States is to do its part in preventing nuclear proliferation, what better place to start than universities training aggressive foreigners in nuclear engineering?

Yet the law has met with hostility from some professors who claim that "academic freedom" has been seriously compromised. Government action to deport violating Libyan students has drawn fire from these academicians, who demand that the integrity of our "open society" be preserved.

Academic freedom means nothing if not saddled with proper moral responsibility. An open society is doomed to permanent closure if the necessity of a few reasonable restrictions is not recognized. Dissenting professors would do well to leave their ivory labs and lecterns and consider what would happen to our "open society" if Col. Qaddafi's ends were realized. Proper moral responsibility precludes the training of Libyans in so sensitive a discipline as nuclear engineering.

The United States should continue to welcome earnest Libyan scholars. But the welcome should be tempered. No student from a nation so blatantly bent on aggression should be allowed to pursue studies in potentially dangerous fields. The government is justified in deporting Libyan violators. Terrorism is simply not part of the American curriculum.

Arabs thanked for evidence

Reader thought hypocritical

Editor:

I would like to thank the Arab nations and their own hand-picked terrorist organization, the PLO, for providing convincing and irrefutable evidence of their attitudes and intentions towards the United States of America.

In the most recent PLO atrocity, when President Reagan truly demonstrated the American resolve to fight terrorism, the Arab nations condemned him. The Arabs were just angry that the terrorists were detoured from the victory celebration that was going to take place at PLO headquarters. Why else did Egypt lie about the hijackers' whereabouts?

At the same time, the PLO threatened to retaliate because their guests of honor were going to pay for their crime and not get paid for their crime.

The only way to fight terrorism is to screw our enemies and help our friends, like Israel, who fight our enemies.

David Makowsky
Graduate, Computer Science

Editor:

Upon reading the article on the divestment rally in Monday's issue, I found one particular quote extremely hypocritical.

Professor Reader is quoted as saying "No one is free anywhere until people are free everywhere."

If that is so, professor, how come the Rainbow Coalition and Jesse Jackson do not protest in front of the embassies of, or favor disinvestment in companies that do business or banks that give loans to the Soviet Union, Hungary, Poland, East Germany, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Albania, China, North Korea, Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia, Afghanistan, Angola, Mozambique, Zimbabwe, Ethiopia, South Yemen, Cuba, and Nicaragua?

In fact, professor, if you and the Rainbow Coalition honestly believe in freedom, why did Jesse Jackson go to Havana in 1984 and proclaim, "Long live Castro!"?

Paths answer to problem

Editor:

Regarding the letters published in the week of Oct. 7 on bicycle-pedestrian problems, several points should be made.

First, Miss Reidy brings up the bike-pedestrian issue, which does need attention at this time. However, she complains that pedestrians should be fined for walking on bike paths. What a great source of income for ASU! With all the letters of complaint we have read about the parking citation problem, why would anyone be so anxious to suggest such an absurd solution as this?

Second, as for Miss Ramirez-Nightingale's suggestion to eliminate cyclists completely from campus, I have but one thing to say... Miss Ramirez-Nightingale was probably walking on the bike path when she was hit. Bicycles are an integral part of ASU - the bike co-op, bicycle racks in front of every building (including the Health Center, Miss Ramirez-Nightingale). ASU would not save money - just the opposite. Eliminating bicycles would mean more cars and more parking problems.

Ticketing pedestrians on bike paths is not the answer, nor is prohibiting bicycles completely. I suggest if we stay on our designated paths we won't risk fines or injuries.

Insoluble democratic problem

Editor:

It does not seem to be understood that there exist problems which cannot be solved in a democracy. Consider the following puzzle. Suppose that by economic history or by legislative action it comes about that two-thirds of the labor is performed by one-third of the population while four-fifths of the income is received by the remaining two-thirds of the population and that this is perceived as an injustice by the minority third of the population. It cannot be redressed by popular vote because the majority will never vote to shift more of the labor load to itself. It seems then to be a problem which cannot be solved by democratic processes. Can any of your readers find a solution?

Dorm dwellers dance-a-thon benefits Valley Big Brothers

By CARRI L. MITCHELL
State Press

The old term "bop 'til you drop" will take on a new meaning this weekend when Sahuaro Hall hosts a 12-hour dance marathon to benefit the Valley Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

Cheryl Brennan, director of the residence hall, said the dance marathon is the result of a brainstorming session with the hall council.

The dance, located in the hall's cafeteria, starts at 8 p.m. today and lasts until 8 a.m. tomorrow. The dance is open to the entire campus, with pre-registration required, Brennan said.

Dancers will be required to dance for 45 minutes each hour and rest the other 15 minutes, she said.

Special contests, such as the limbo, will be held during the dance, and special music hours will take place.

Bill Geist, the development director with Valley Big Brothers, said the marathon came about after Brennan proposed the project to him.

"We don't like to have our name associated with just anything," Geist said.

Geist said Valley Big Brothers spends $500 a year per child on professional counselors who help match the child with the big brother and help provide information.

"The kids do have problems," he said. "It's not as simple as it sounds."

Brennan said food and drink will be available during the entire marathon.

Student protests at nuclear testing site

An ASU student plans to practice civil disobedience this weekend as part of the American Peace Test.

Keith Shcolnick said he is going to the Mercury nuclear testing site 100 miles north of Las Vegas, Nev. with the intention of getting arrested.

He said he will be trespassing on government property while protesting the testing of nuclear weapons.

"It (testing) is a dangerous thing; we shouldn't be testing nuclear bombs everyday," he said.

Shcolnick is president of the Organization to Prevent Nuclear Annihilation, but will not represent the group in Nevada.

The American Peace Test is a month-long protest organized by the National Nuclear Weapons Freeze Campaign. The protest starts today and will finish when President Reagan meets with Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev in November, Shcolnick said.

"It's a national campaign to put pressure on the government to stop testing nuclear weapons."

The organizers of the event are not advocating that protesters try to get arrested, he said.

However, he said several ASU students will go to the testing site during the final weekend of the protest and some may be arrested in a display of civil disobedience.

Shcolnick said everyone practicing civil disobedience will be trained in how to conduct a peaceful protest.

"If you do it wrong you can get killed," he said.

During the last weekend of the protest, demonstrators from all over the country will be in Nevada.

Shcolnick said no minors will be allowed to protest.

Ask Mother Theresa

A weekly advice column debuts next Friday in the State Press, written by the staff's only mom, Theresa Willeford. Most of her answers will be serious, based on diligent research, such as interviews with experts on campus. Other answers simply will ridicule people who ask asinine questions. Ask any question about the University and the people who work and study here, and we can answer it. Broader questions about life in general are fine. Submit questions (preferably typed — no SAGA napkin etchings please) to the State Press, basement of the Matthews Center, or our classified advertising office in the north side of the MU.

Pep rally: spirit booster for home football game

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

The game is tomorrow, but the cheering begins tonight. This evening's pep rally is a "campus-wide affair to boost the spirit of ASU" prior to Saturday's football game with the Utah State Aggies, said an organizer of the rally.

Mike Birdsell, a junior marketing major and chairman of the special events committee of the MU Activities Board, said his committee, the Student Athletic Board, and the athletic department are coordinating their efforts for the event.

The hour-long rally is scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. at Palo Verde Beach, the grassy open area south of the Palo Verde Main Residence Hall.

The Sun Devil Marching Band, $1,200 worth of fireworks, the Sun Devil cheerleaders and guest speakers from the athletic department are the featured events, Birdsell said.

A rally, featuring a bonfire in the riverbed north of Sun Devil Stadium and music presented by a disc jockey will be held Nov. 15, the evening before the game against Stanford University, he said.

Birdsell said tentative plans have been made for the Sun Devils and Coach Cooper to attend the rally, which may include a cookout.

Campus clubs and organizations can earn "spirit points" for helping with the festivities, he said.

Points can be earned from such tasks as collecting firewood for the bonfire, Birdsell said. The club with the most points would be publicly recognized during halftime.

"We're trying to get everybody kind of psyched-up," Birdsell said.

police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending at 6:30 a.m. Thursday:

•A man who is not affiliated with the University was found looking through binoculars at the Palo Verde East Residence Hall from his car in Lot 46 Wednesday evening, police said.

The man told police he had come to ASU to "look around."

Police warned him of trespassing laws and told him to leave campus.

•A female student received an obscene phone call from a woman in her room in the Palo Verde East Residence Hall Wednesday afternoon, police said.

The victim told police she and her roommate have received similar calls in the past.

The roommates were advised to call Mountain Bell security, which handles obscene phone calls.

•Two fraternity members who were allegedly bothering women and loitering in the lobby of the Palo Verde Main Residence Hall around midnight Thursday were told to leave the area, police said.

Tonight: all is fair at a Fair

By CINDY PEARLMAN
State Press

This time, when they yell out "how ya' doing Phoenix?" they will be speaking to the real thing. You know the people on stage will never yell out "how ya' doing Tempe?" when we are all gathered together in the UAC, but that's beside the point.

It's the Arizona State Fair 1985, starting tonight and running through Nov. 3, which brings to mind a great 1950s movie appropriately titled "State Fair."

In the movie (starring Elvis, Ann-Margaret and Pat Boone) they camp, spend fun-filled days with mincemeat and hogs and end the yearly tremor of a vacation with a massive song-fest in which they rhyme the word state with the word state a lot.

If you're wondering if the 1985 Arizona State Fair will be like this, here are a few words of reassurance. Don't be foolish.

The "Junior Beef (Dairy and Goats)" competition ends Sunday.

Other Fair notables at Veterans Memorial Coliseum include:

- Willie Nelson and Family tonight at 7 p.m.
- Stevie Ray Vaughan, Saturday at 7 p.m.
- Red Skelton, Sunday at 4 p.m.
- Donna Summer, Monday at 7 p.m.
- Kenny Loggins, Tuesday at 7 p.m.
- Smokey Robinson, Wednesday at 7 p.m.
- Janie Fricke and T.G. Sheppard, Thursday at 7 p.m.
- John Parr, Oct. 25 at 7 p.m.
- Rich Little, Oct. 26 at 4 and 7 p.m.
- Paul Anka, Oct. 27 at 7 p.m.
- Howard Jones, Oct. 28 at 7 p.m.
- George Strait with Exile, Oct. 30 at 7 p.m.
- Beach Boys, Nov. 2 at 3 and 6 p.m.
- Charlie Daniels Band, Nov. 3 at 7 p.m.

And the real low down and dirty:

The Fairgrounds are located between McDowell Road and Encanto Boulevard at 17th Avenue in Phoenix.

Admission is $4 for adults, 50 cents for children ages 7-12, $1 for senior citizens and free for children six and under.

Admission is half-price Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. until noon.

For more information call the 24-hour hotline: 268-FAIR.

What's love got to do with it?

Love's got plenty to do with it these days when you mention Tina Turner. You just can't say a nasty word about this lady.

So, what do you say? We've heard the comeback-of-the-year story a million times. Turner was big when she landed on soul charts in 1971 with "Proud Mary." Turner was a hit when she was a supporting act for Rod Stewart in 1980, for the Rolling Stones in 1982 and for Lionel Richie in 1984.

Now, she is her own private dancer. And so it should be.

When a self-possessed Turner takes the stage, audiences have walked out exhausted. And not from dancing. It's from just watching.

For a little history: 18-year-old Anna Mae Bullock (Tina Turner) was brought to the attention of Ike Turner in 1958. He invited her to join his band, "The Kings of Rhythm" in a now-legendary recording session. The demo tape that emerged led directly to Ike's signing with Sue Records — on the condition that Anna be included in the group.

They married. She changed her name — both first and last. They divorced. She became the first woman ever invited to sing a duet with Mick Jagger during the Rolling Stone's '82 North American tour.

And it was one hell-fire rendition of "Honky Tonk Women."

Tina Turner's on stage at the UAC at 8 p.m.

— CINDY PEARLMAN

etc. . .

A view from behind is better than no view at all. Tonight's the night and believe it or not, there are still tickets available for Tina Turner's concert at UAC. Oh sure, there's tickets available, you are saying. Well, we hear that there are about two dozen seats left behind the stage.

There will be no backdrop and no video screens at the Turner show, says Evening Star Productions. And Tina is well aware that people will be sitting behind her, so she will be accommodating.

For $15, tickets are at Gammage and Diamond's outlets. Mr. Mister is the opening act. Mr. Mister's Richard Page is from Phoenix and went to Central High School. Remember the group and the single, "Broken Wings," from the Don Henley UAC show last month?

Haunting ASU-UAC on Oct. 31 is Foreigner. Last night, they were in Portland, Ore. and they said on the phone that they will bring an exploding jukebox for the Tempe show.

Now that everyone can rest easy, Foreigner will also bring Rhode Island rocker, John Cafferty, who will bring his Beaver Brown Band.

Tickets, at $14.50, are still available at Gammage and Diamond's box offices. More on Foreigner next week.

We hear that Paul Young, probably won't bring the "Everytime You Go Away" single to ASU's UAC around the first of November. We'll keep you posted.

He refused to surrender. Corey Hart is coming to Gammage Center on Nov. 25 at 8 p.m. Now, after giving everyone time to wipe up the drool, the man who wears his sunglasses at night is charging $12.50 for tickets. They will be available at Gammage and Diamond's box offices soon. The official when is pending.

Tele-Vid Movie Rentals Inc. will allow every ASU student, faculty and staff member to receive one free movie rental per week until June 1986.

There's no deposit required and no membership fee. All you need is a valid ASU I.D. and a completed membership application. Tele-Vid is also offering a reduced rate on VCR rentals. Call 966-0855 after 4 p.m. for details.

The Odyssey Music Video Network is now accepting videotapes from college comics.

They're in the initial stages of production for a new feature to be called "Odyssey Funnies". The idea is to give national television exposure to new comics or would-be comics. The two requirements are: he/she/they have never appeared on national television before and must be funny. Got it?

More information at 1150 W. King Street, Cocoa, Fla., 32922 or by calling (305) 632-1000.

ASU will present "We Won't Pay, We Won't Pay" in Drama City, Oct. 18-20. The play, says Drama City, is a "political farce, a fast-paced Italian comedy that spotlights the harsh economic conditions of the Italian working class while dishing out an evening full of belly laughs."

Curtain time is 8 p.m., except Sunday, when there will be a 2 p.m. matinee. Tickets, priced at $5, $3 for students and senior citizens, are available at the Lyceum box office weekdays, noon to 3 p.m., or can be purchased at the door before each performance.

Drama City is east of Tower Center at University and Myrtle.

Batten down the screen. "Blown Away," the typhoon of windsurfing movies, comes to the MU Cinema on Oct. 22 at 4, 6, 8 and 10 p.m. This is the world premiere of the first big-screen windsurfing movie, says the film committee board.

They say that audiences can expect the whole nine yards and ninety knots "helmed by the world's greatest high performance boardsailors."

Comedian Howie Mandel of "St. Elsewhere" will come to the Celebrity Theater on Nov. 29. Tickets, at $12.50, are available at Diamond's and Celebrity box offices.

'Silver Bullet'

One King stings a wolf of a thriller

By MARTIN WEISS
State Press

For people who constantly tell others that they cannot be frightened while viewing a motion picture, the time has come to eat those words. Stephen King's "Silver Bullet" is one of the most terrifying films of the year as well as one of the best werewolf films — period.

All of the elements that contribute to nail-biting terror can be found in "Silver Bullet." There is an abundance of sit-on-the-edge-of-your-seat suspense, good old-fashioned terror, a slight touch of gore and a small amount of comedy relief to momentarily restore your breath.

In fact, the only difference between "Silver Bullet" and most other horror movies of the present is this film actually has an interesting plot that not only holds the attention of the audience, it keeps each viewer emotionally involved with the characters.

The terror begins instantly in the town of Tarker's Mills late one night during the spring of 1976. An old man walks along the railroad tracks while something lurks through the brush nearby.

As the creature approaches, the brilliant musical score by Jay Chattaway builds. And the suspense becomes overpowering. The only truly grotesque sequence of the film follows. The terror expressed in this scene may be strong enough to make Lon Chaney Jr. ("The Wolfman") sit on the edge of his grave.

The morning after the attack, the main characters, the Coslaw family kids, are introduced. As their parents listen to Rev. Lester Lowe speak at the town fair, their crippled son Marty plays with Brady, a neighborhood pal. Marty, played by Corey Haim of "Firstborn" is a Henry Thomas ("E.T.") look-alike who captures hearts while proving that a wheelchair-bound child is not helpless.

Jane, Marty's sister, as portrayed by Megan Follows, seems too childish to believe as she becomes the victim of a Brady/Marty practical joke involving a garter snake. However, her later confrontation with the person she assumes to be the the killer could send chills down the spine of the most avid horror film fan.

Lawrence Tierney, right, and Bill Smitrovich join a local posse armed with log at a forgotten ravine in search of a murderous "creature" in "Silver

Rounding out the cast is Marty and Jane's uncle portrayed by Gary Busey ("The Buddy Holly Story"). Uncle Red is the technological wizard of the family, a builder of motorized wheelchairs for his close friend and relative, Marty. He is also a drunk who teaches Marty how to play poker using baseball cards as chips.

Even though Marty knows he can only turn to Red and his sister after his premiere encounter with the hairy beast, he almost ends up like "The Boy Who Cried Wolf."

Current attacks in the village result in a suspense-filled, hilarious hunt for what the townspeople believe to be a "non-mythical" fiend.

owner whose baseball bat, "The Peace Maker," which is used to keep his patrons tranquil, becomes anything but peaceful in the wrong hands.

Do not expect all of the deaths to be humorous, though. The combination of fine editing, eerie music and the talented direction of rookie Daniel Attias heightens the anxieties of the viewer to excruciating levels during every other kill.

The only flaw in "Silver Bullet" is the makeup used for the werewolf. Carlo Rambaldi ("E.T.," "Alien") attempted to make his creature too realistic.

Overall, this motion picture is terrifying, funny, well constructed and highly entertaining. Anyone who has ever enjoyed watching any horror movie will probably delight in being terrified by "Silver Bullet."

'Bullet's' lacking; jerks should die

By GREGORY ROBERT KRZOS
 State Press

Author Stephen King should write a horror cookbook. In it, he could list all the ingredients he thinks a real classic thriller needs.

Under the "B" section, one could turn to "brains" and realize that in a chiller only two people or less are allowed to have them.

Under the "P" section one would find a recipe explaining how to create a plot to one of these stories. All it takes is 20 minutes of jibberish, 45 minutes of screaming and an hour of blood and guts. Mix in a little girl, boy, woman or dog and have something evil lurking out in the middle of nowhere and you've got yourself a movie.

That's basically the overall concept of "Silver Bullet."

Watching his latest extravaganza is like flipping through the pages of a cookbook. There's a formula behind everything here and unfortunately the ingredients have been used too many times before in other adaptations of King's novels.

Besides the excess gore in this movie, "Silver Bullet" is a cute attempt to give audiences some pre-Halloween jitters.

Once you've seen one movie version of King's novels the others seem like carbon copies.

"Silver Bullet" centers around the murders in a small town called Tarker's Mill. Remember "Children of the Corn"?

The townsfolk realize that something weird is going on when people start getting murdered by some evil being. Remember "Cujo"?

Along comes a young crippled boy in a wheelchair named Marty. This kid has keen insight. Remember Drew Barrymore in "Firestarter"?

Marty is a bit spoiled by his parents, which naturally upsets his sister Jane, but the kids still love each other.

Still, tell me why would anyone have a picnic at night when there have been brutal murders in the area?

And what parent would pick up and leave their children for a vacation on Halloween when a werewolf is out killing the townspeople?

Maybe this doesn't matter. If people weren't stupid in horror movies, they wouldn't die.

And how much fun would that be?

Drama City play explores bad economy troubles

By GREGORY ROBERT KRZOS
State Press

The setting is a supermarket in an economically unstable town in southern Italy.

You are deciding what pasta to buy for the evening's dinner and as you ponder your decision, two hysterical women appear and begin ransacking the supermarket, ripping items off the shelves and causing havoc by not paying for them.

You suddenly realize that you've just witnessed the hijacking of a supermarket.

It has probably never happened at Smitty's, but this scene is just one of the many humorous elements in "We Won't Pay! We Won't Pay!" an outrageous Italian farce that is showing in Drama City tonight at 8.

The play, written by Dario Fo, portrays the lighter side of harsh economic conditions experienced by two working class couples.

"The story is a strong proponent of a people's theatre," said James Yeater, director. "It is zany, outrageous and socially orientated."

The story centers on two Italian couples as they experience the aftermath of being let go from their jobs.

It stars ASU graduate student Jean Thomsen as Antonia, a frustrated woman who resorts to some drastic measures as she gets even with the economic system.

Another graduate student, Steve Mastroieni, plays her husband, Giovanni.

Their counterparts, Luigi and Margarita, are played by a husband-and-wife team, ASU graduates Douglas and Yvonne Edwards.

David Barker, who is a faculty member in the theatre department, has a recurring role.

The play should provide some belly laughs, especially in one scene where the two women attempt to hide the food from the market from their unsuspecting husbands.

That is where the fun comes in and it becomes increasingly complicated as the two women cover up their secrets.

Yeater explains that the play is an example of the inflexibilities of a bureaucratic system pushing people into a corner and having them respond to it.

"You reach that point and then there has to be a way of letting off steam," Yeater said.

"We Won't Pay, We Won't Pay" is one of four plays presented through the ASU theatre department's scholarship series.

The play opened Wednesday and runs through Sunday. Curtain time will be 8 p.m. except for Sunday, when there will be a 2 p.m. matinee.

Tickets are $5 for students and $3 for senior citizens. They can be purchased at the Lyceum Box Office weekdays or at the door before each show.

Drama City is east of Tower Center at the intersection of University and Myrtle.

Jean Thomsen and Yvonne Edwards examine the groceries they stole in "We Won't Pay, We Won't Pay."

Cullum nothing short of outstanding in Cyrano role

By PATRICK J. KUCERA
State Press

It should come as no surprise that an actor who has received as many awards as John Cullum has delighted an audience Wednesday night in "Cyrano de Bergerac."

With the entire production performed on a set of stairs, Emily Frankel's version of "Cyrano de Bergerac" will truly be one of the fonder memories of Gammage Center.

Cullum, a Tony-winning actor for his theatrical works, gave a shining performance in the title role as he and his nose upstaged almost all of the other actors.

This is not to discount the acting of the rest of the cast, but the fine job by Cullum was the highlight of the show.

From the war scenes in the south of France to the convent outside of Paris, "Cyrano" delighted the audience with a set of stairs that changed as the scenery did, taking a position that complemented the actors.

Megan Gallagher, who portrayed Roxane, was a superb addition to the play.

Her good looks and passive voice made her character seem more believable to the audience.

Frankel is to be congratulated on an exquisite rendition of the tale of romance, drama and adventure, because she adds a special brand of comedy to Cyrano's life — without which would have made the production just another remake.

Praise is also deserved by Marcus Smythe who plays the youthful cadet who eyes Roxane and falls in love at first sight. Smythe delivered his lines with a more than adequate amount of flair.

However, the stage belonged to Cullum as he danced, sang, cried, laughed, fought and died on the steps to his honor.

Cullum was nothing short of perfect in the role and the emotion with which he played it drew the audience's attention away from his 3-inch nose, even if Cyrano reminded everyone how hideous it was.

With comic wit, Cyrano spews a 5-minute speech on the virtues of his nose.

"A nose, a nose, my kingdom for a nose," he shouts at a man who has dared criticize the exaggerated appendage. He then pierces the man with his rapier to teach him a "lesson."

For those who saw this rendition of the classic tale, it was intriguing how the steps were attached to a hydraulic lift system that would raise and lower steps to form a bakery, a convent, a balcony and a battlefield.

The battlefield scene was the overwhelming favorite of the audience because the scene forced the people to imagine the horrors of the French/Spanish War in the 17th century.

The lighting design, composed by Marc B. Weiss, was exceptional, especially when considering the sets on which "Cyrano" was performed.

Although "Cyrano de Bergerac" was scheduled for only one appearance, it is the Valley of the Sun that misses out, not the actors.

HELP ME,
RHONDA

Dear Rhonda,

I'm a freshman living off campus in the only housing I could find. It's miles from ASU. It looks like a dive and the roaches are getting very cozy. My social life is the pits. What can I do to meet people? Please help me, Rhonda.

Roach Motel

Dear RM:

Yeesh! I wouldn't want to meet you either. How often do you shower, anyway? Upon casting aside my deep personal abhorrence for your little housemates, I've determined that your best bet is to switch majors and study entomology. With your steady supply of bugs, you're sure to be the most popular person in class. In no time at all, you'll be breeding friends faster than your live-in buddies can reproduce. Rhonda guarantees it. Of course, I do have an alternative solution. With the vast network of connections that I possess, Rhonda personally is putting your name on the University Towers reservations list. Unfortunately, this leaves the daughter of my generous sponsor out in the cold, but I'm confident she will understand the gravity of your situation. But, just in case, I heard there's a tremendous sale on economy size Raid at K-Mart.

Dear Rhonda,

Should I walk to class or carry my lunch? This dilemma has been troubling me ever since the semester began. Until you answer, sign me

Pedal Pusher

Dear Pedal:

Wow! How exciting! My first existential question. I was just about to phone my long-time friend, Sartre, for a discussion on the matter, but I realized he was dead. I was so depressed. I almost didn't carry my lunch to work. Well, I guess I'll have to tackle this one alone. If you walk to class, you'll improve your cardiovascular system, burn calories, lose weight and starve until you can grab a chile burrito at noon. If you carry your lunch, you'll probably eat it all before the end of your first class. And then, you'll sit in your second class, watching cellulite attack your thighs. Not a pretty picture, I assure you. Yes, you have evoked the eternal question: whether to feast or famine? This time, Rhonda has done her homework. After extensive consultation with Buber, Laing and the like, the answer ultimately depends on what's inside your lunch bag.

Need some trend-setting advice on your love life, university life or your existence in general? Write to: HELP ME, RHONDA, 1990 West Camelback #306, Phoenix, AZ 85015. Sorry, no personal replies.

Aggies shoot for perfection against favored Sun Devils

By BOB HEILER
State Press

Utah State coach Chris Pella is searching for perfection from his Aggies Saturday night against ASU — just to stay in the game.

"We can not afford to make a mistake against a team like ASU," Pella said.

ASU (3-2 overall) hosts the Aggies (2-4) Saturday in Sun Devil Stadium. The Sun Devils are favored by 22 points.

One key to the game may be the Devils' pass rush, since the Aggies have been sacked 22 times for 158 yards in only six games. Pella has noted ASU's tendency to take charge of the trenches.

"ASU is really able to dominate the line of scrimmage," Pella said. "They've been pretty solid, both offensively and defensively. They have good depth at tailback and fullback, and their quarterback (Jeff Van Raaphorst) is excellent. They are as physical a team as any in the country."

The Aggies have been plagued by unfortunate occurrences, according to Pella and starting quarterback Brad Ipsen.

"We've done weird things like dropping two touchdown passes or fumbling twice on the goal line," Ipsen said. "But if those things don't happen, we can play with anyone in the country."

Pella said, "We're a little bit frustrated.

We felt like we played well enough in the first six weeks to win every one of them."

Utah State's turnover record and scoring pattern support Pella and Ipsen. The Aggies have committed 21 turnovers in the last five games, and almost half of their total points scored — 44 out of 101 — came in the first quarter. Turnovers and other problems have cropped up mostly in the later stages of their games. That may make ASU's job easier; Sun Devil opponents have scored 36 of their 79 points in the fourth quarter, although that statistic is heavily affected by Utah's 27 fourth-quarter points last week.

Game at a Glance, page 18

ASU may have a tough time moving the ball on the ground, since Utah State is nationally ranked in defense against the run. The Aggies' line, which averages 278 pounds, has allowed only 91 rushing yards per game and 2.34 yards per carry this season.

ASU coach John Cooper may be worried about overconfidence, judging by his remarks at a media luncheon earlier this week.

"Some of the first string is getting a little fat-headed," Cooper said. "They have not improved like we had hoped they would.

The Sun Devil pass rush may get a chance to shine Saturday. Utah State quarterback Brad Ipsen has been sacked 22 times in six games; ASU defenders have buried opposing quarterbacks 22 times in five games.

"The attitude of some of the older players in practice is, 'We didn't do it this way before.' I tell them, 'Well, you didn't win very many football games that way, did you? I don't care what happened here in the past. Do it our way.'"

Cooper also is unhappy with the effort he is seeing from a few key players.

"Some of the secondary people are not playing as well as they can," he said. "I put David Fulcher, Anthony Parker and Eric Allen in that category."

"We just don't have an awful lot of leaders on this football team. We only have eight seniors and that's a problem. That's not a healthy situation."

Women's cross country team presses on despite setbacks

By CHRIS MCKAY
State Press

Despite two disappointing outings, ASU women's cross country coach Ken Lehman says he will continue to show support and confidence for success as his team approaches its third meet.

But he will be rooting for individual success when the Sun Devils run against UA at 10 a.m. Saturday at Scottsdale's El Dorado Park. No. 2 runner Cathie Koss' back problems have left the Sun Devils with only four healthy women on the squad; the minimum number for team competition is five.

Lehman said the Wildcats have agreed to run, knowing ASU's circumstances.

"The UA coach (Chris Murray) is aware of the problem," Lehman said. "He still wants to run."

UA runners have looked tough earlier this season, placing three in the top 25 at the Aztec Invitational in San Diego. Camillia Harron leads the Wildcats into the meet coming off a first-place finish last week in the Tucson Invitational.

Lehman said he is aware of UA's talent and expects a strong performance from his No. 1 athlete Susan Radford.

"I think she is going to compete a lot better," he said. "She'll be on her home course which should help a lot. The only thing she needs is more self-confidence."

Though team competition presently has been eliminated, Lehman said the Sun Devils' confidence remains high.

"There's a lot of spirit and enthusiasm," he said. "The girls are really close."

Lehman said one of the team's problems was his own hiring. He said he cannot expect them to adjust quickly to his program after previously being trained by another coach.

"They had their own system," he said. "Now they've got to change to mine. Just having a different coach makes it hard.

"They're going to improve. It takes time. We're just going to have to ease back into it little by little."

Accompanying Radford in tomorrow's meet for ASU will be Wendy Sihner, Kristan Johnson and Sarah Krumme.

Since the injury to Koss, which happened last Friday, Lehman does not know what the future holds for Koss or the team.

"They (doctors) think she might have a stress fracture," Lehman said. "We're still going to run."

Koss saw a doctor earlier this week but no definite diagnosis was given. She visited doctors again Thursday but the results from that examination came after State Press deadline.

Lehman said he has run her lightly this week and does not want to put any sudden pressure on her.

Thoughts on Game 1 (if necessary) of the '85 World Series

Jerry Brown
Asst. Sports Editor

Yes, the battle for the World Series is ready to begin.

Yes, it's too late to change the teams.

So hang on to your hat America, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Kansas City Royals will battle for the World's Championship of Baseball.

Whoopie.

The possibilities for an exciting series looked promising this year. First we had a chance for a "subway series" — New York Mets vs. New York Yankees. Then we had a chance for a "Concorde series" with a battle of foreign cities — Toronto vs. Los Angeles. We wound up with Kansas City and St. Louis.

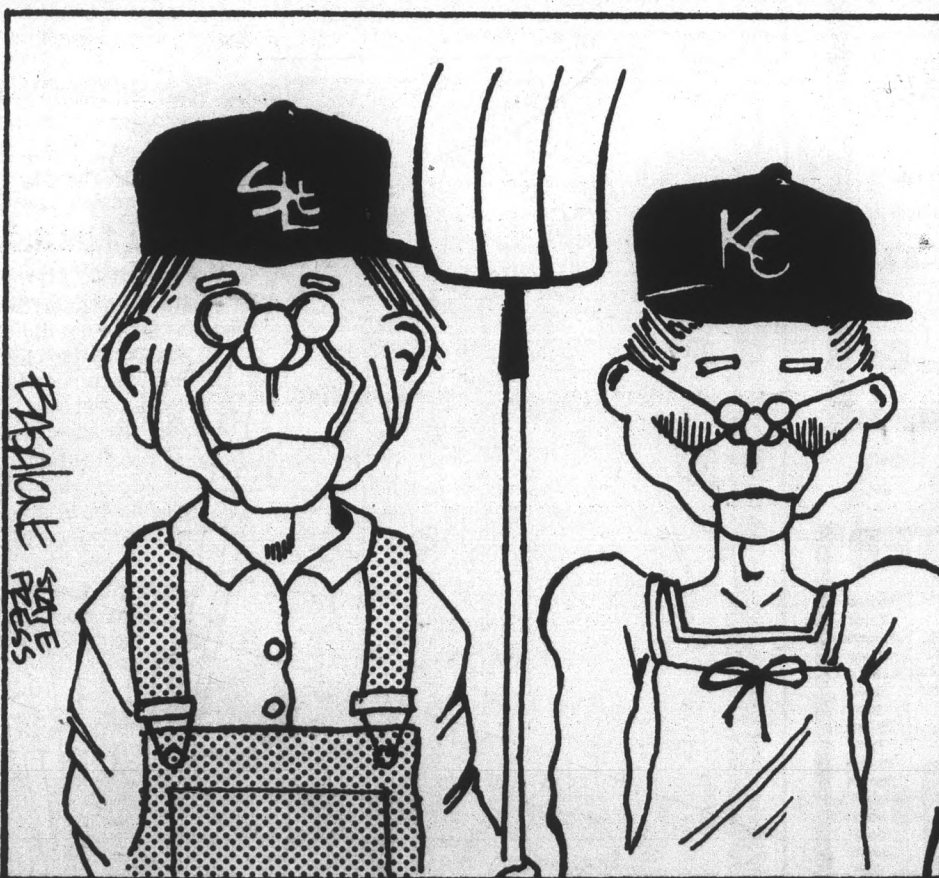

A tractor series? Let's get world serious.

But for those of you who agree Missouri is a good argument for secession right now, let me say that both the Royals and Cardinals proved in the playoffs that they deserve their league championships.

My question is, after a record-setting attendance mark in 1985, do you think the fans deserve a better payoff after seven months of heavy-duty rooting than artificial turf and amber waves of grain?

Me too.

A good measuring stick for any state is a survey of its most famous citizens. Let's see, Mark Twain, Harry Truman, George Washington Carver and Sherman Potter. Come on, none of these guys could hit their weight.

But there is no recourse. The baseball world will descend on Missouri's two thriving metropolises for the first wall-to-wall carpeted series since 1980, and we are powerless to stop it.

Yankee Stadium, Wrigley Field and Comiskey Park will sit unused in the dark while workmen in St. Lou and KC sprinkle Carpet Fresh in the outfield and change the batteries on the automatic tarps.

Have you ever heard "Take Me Out to the Ballgame" on compact laser disc? Then you've never been to Busch Stadium.

Somehow, I don't think Alexander Cartwright counted on all this when he invented the sport. Of course in Missouri, the most revered Cartwrights are Ben, Hoss and Little Joe.

The whole thing, quoting one of Missouri's most famous citizens, is "horse hockey!"

But I babble.

For this is the only World Series we have and since such is the case, I will watch each and every game with undivided albeit untranced attention.

I will watch Whitey Herzog, baseball's answer to Dennis the Menace, continue his verbal assault on former Cardinal players. During the heat of the pennant race, he put now Met first baseman Keith Hernandez through the press corps' wringer for a cocaine habit Herzog himself helped fester by ignoring.

Former Card/now Royal Lonnie Smith, who experienced similar bouts with cocaine, might well prepare to be Herzog's next verbal victim. Hopefully, it won't happen.

I will watch George Brett, "The Essence of Conceit," dip his celebrated bat in pine tar once more, hoping the World Series problems he was "saddled" with five years ago won't return.

I will have to watch ABC's coverage of the World Series. Former State Press sports editor Al Michaels is a credible play-by-play man, any combo of Scully (not Matt), Garagiola, Costas and Kubek easily outdistances a Cosell-less ABC.

Prediction? OK, how about Cardinals in six. Good pitching on both sides, but better hitting and relief pitching by committee will give the Cards an edge. Dan Quisenberry is a great reliever, but KC has to get a lead to use him.

The guess here is, they won't.

Ammaccapane helps move women golfers back into hunt

By BRAD HALVORSEN
State Press

Danielle Ammaccapane's even-par score of 71 lifted the ASU women's golf team into third place Thursday after two rounds of the Nancy Lopez Invitational in Tulsa, Okla.

The final round at Cedar Ridge Country Club will be played today.

"We played really well today, which is good to see," said Coach Linda Vollstedt, whose team entered the round in a seventh-place tie. "Our team total was 299 — the low score of the day — and that's quite a score."

Ammaccapane, the defending NCAA champion who has struggled this fall, recorded the best score of the day.

She cut 10 strokes off her first-day score of 81, and now ranks 10th with a two-round total of 152. She trails leader Laurette Maritz of U.S. International University by seven strokes.

"(Wednesday), Danielle was having problems with her attitude," Vollstedt said. "She was letting it get in the way of her game. Today she just played, and she did good."

ASU made up six strokes on leader Tulsa after falling behind the Golden Hurricanes by 20 strokes after the first round. Tulsa's first-place score is 602. Stanford follows at 609, and ASU is at 616.

Vollstedt said the Devils now have a chance to win the tournament; she had ruled out the possibility following the first round.

"There definitely is a possibility of doing that on this golf course," Vollstedt said, referring to the difficulty of the Cedar Ridge CC course. "We have to come out and play just great, but on this course anything can happen."

The Devils all shot in the 70s Thursday after posting three scores over 80 on Wednesday.

Pamela Wright had the second-best ASU score at 75, and trails Ammaccapane by one stroke at 153.

Pearl Sinn shot her second straight 77 to hang behind Wright one shot at 154. Heather Hodur carded a 77 for a total of 158. She is tied with Michelle Estill, who cut six strokes off her first-round score with a 76.

ASU passed four teams — Southern California, Southern Methodist, New Mexico and USIU — during the second round.

Fourth-place SMU now trails the Devils by four strokes at 620, followed by fifth-place Oklahoma at 627.

New Mexico and USIU fell in to a sixth-place tie at 629, with Florida International in eighth place at 632.

Spikers face Stanford, get 2nd crack at No. 1

The ASU volleyball team hosts the nation's new top-ranked team tonight when it plays Stanford at 7:30 in the Physical Education Building East.

The match will end the first half of conference play for the Sun Devils (15-7), who are winless in three Pac-West outings.

It also will be the second time a conference rival ranked No. 1 in the nation has visited ASU. The Sun Devils lost to UCLA, 3-1, in the earlier outing.

Stanford took over the No. 1 ranking from UCLA by beating the Bruins in a conference match. The Cardinal has remained undefeated with a 14-0 record overall.

The Cardinal is led by Kim Oden, a 6-foot-2 senior middle blocker. Oden consistently has been one of the top players in the nation over the past four seasons.

Oden was named as this week's Pac-West athlete of the week. In three matches, she compiled 48 kills, 19 digs and 16 blocks, leading Stanford to victories over No. 2 Pacific, unranked Santa Clara and No. 4 San Jose State.

Oden is ranked No. 1 in conference blocking statistics. ASU has two players leading stats lists — Regina Stahl in assist percentage and Tracey Barberie in service aces.
