In-state tuition may double in next four years: lobbyist

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Resident tuition at state universities will double in the next four years if the Arizona Board of Regents approves a Presidents' Council proposal, a student lobbyist said Tuesday.

Diane Zipley, executive director of the Arizona Students Association, said that under the council's plan to base tuition on the regents' continuation budget, fees for resident students could reach $2,133 in four years.

The continuation budget is the universities' operating budget from the previous year, with allowances for inflation, salary increases and additional university projects.

Tuition currently is set using the budget from the past year.

'The $1,040 rate is our compromise. The regents will have to justify any other compromise.'

— Diane Zipley

Zipley said because the continuation budget will contain decision packages — appropriations for future university projects — tuition would increase almost 12 percent each year for the next four years.

The regents could approve the use of the continuation budget for the 1986-87 tuition rate at their meeting Thursday and Friday at UA.

The regents' Finance Committee voted unanimously to support the council's recommendation last week.

Regent Jack Pfister, a member of the Finance Committee, said he received the figures Tuesday, but refused to comment on the ASA projections until the entire board discusses them.

Zipley said ASA plans to use the figures as a rebuttal to the council's proposal that calls for $1,136 resident tuition for 1986-87.

She said ASA, which recommended a $35 to $50 increase over the current $990 tuition rate, will not ask for a tuition increase higher than $1,040.

"The $1,040 rate is our compromise," Zipley said. "The regents will have to justify any other compromise."

A council recommendation requiring resident students to pay 25 rather than 20 percent of their own education costs also would contribute to the large increases, she said.

The cost of education is the amount of money spent to educate each student, excluding research and public-relations costs. The current COE at ASU, NAU and UA is $5,682.

The council has recommended that over the next five to 10 years, the percentage each resident student pays be increased by at least one-half a percentage point.

The Finance Committee had voted to defer the 5 percent increase, Pfister said, adding that the committee is only recommending increases based on the 20 percent COE rate.

ASA members expect tuition for non-resident students to increase dramatically under the council's recommendation.

A provision in the recommendation would lower the out-of-state COE by 10 percent and gradually increase it over the next 10 years.

Non-residents currently pay 85 percent of their COE, but according to the council's recommendation, that number would be reduced to 75 percent.

Nora Colton, student regent and an ASA member, said out-of-state tuition could reach $7,954 for the 1991-92 school year if the COE is increased by 1 percent each year for the next 10 years.

Colton said that if the rate increases by 2 percent each year for five years, non-resident tuition would be at $8,451 in 1991-92.

University plans to open Phoenix office

By CARRI L. MITCHELL
State Press

ASU will establish a downtown University office site in Phoenix next fall to offer classes to business and government employees.

Brent Brown, vice-president for University relations, said the site will offer short courses and workshops for students and office facilities for professors conducting research downtown.

"It's to make some things at ASU more accessible for downtown employees," he said.

The new downtown site will serve businessmen, their clientele and the employees of government agencies who work downtown.

Brown said the classes and workshops offered will depend on the need and requests of people using the center.

While the Legislature has approved University funding for the site, a location with adequate office and classroom space has yet to be selected, Brown said.

"We'd like to stay as close to the main downtown as we can," he said.

Brent Brown

Brown said University officials are looking for an administrator to run

"We've already advertised and have received some applications (for the position)," he said.

Offices in the facility should be available for the spring semester in January, Brown said, although no credit courses will be offered at that time.

Plans for an ASU downtown center have been considered since 1981 when the Arizona Board of Regents issued the mission and scope statement listing the future plans for state universities.

In accordance with the statement, ASU will expand into a multi-campus institution and will develop a downtown center.

Brown said the downtown center should not be called a branch campus, because "campus" implies a facility that offers a degree program.

Brown said the new site will offer classes in business, public programs, liberal arts, architecture, law and some education courses.

ASU works closely with Rio Salado and other Maricopa County community colleges to avoid duplicating programs, Brown said.

Schultz, Gorbachev end discussion; fail to cut arms control differences

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz wound up 14 hours of "vigorous discussion" with Soviet Leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and other Kremlin officials Tuesday, saying the talks failed to narrow the superpowers' differences on arms control.

Shultz said that despite "serious disagreements, the two sides had pledged to work hard in preparing the Nov. 19-20 summit meeting between President Reagan and Gorbachev in Geneva.

"Basically, we have a lot to do," Shultz said.

In a news conference before departing for an overnight refueling stop in Iceland, Shultz tempered his downbeat appraisal of the two-day visit by observing "we see some positive developments" in the U.S.-Soviet relationship.

But he was unable to cite any major area of reconciliation or prospect of an accord for the first superpower summit in more than six years.

In fact, Shultz said, he would not bet on an agreement in principle between the two leaders on how to pursue a treaty to curb the arms race.

He twice described the talks as "frank," which in diplomatic parlance often means considerable disagreement.

But Shultz said, "It was far from a shouting match. The discussions were straightforward, always quite cordial and I think they reflected our desire to use the time well."

Besides arms control, Shultz singled out regional issues and human rights.

"As we broke up we wished for success at the upcoming Geneva meeting and beyond and pledged to each other that we would work hard for continuing preparations."

Massacre of Mexican policemen directs attention to drug gangs

The massacre of 22 policemen in Mexico's southern marijuana belt has pointed up the brazen power of the Mexican narcotics empires, gangs that feed the demand of millions of American drug users.

The Mexican attorney general, Sergio Garcia Ramirez, has described the wealthy marijuana-heroin rings as "extensive, complex and strong organizations." They are clearly deadly dangerous as well.

The Mexican government reports that 315 soldiers were killed in a series of military sweeps against narcotics operations nationwide in 1983-84.

In the latest bloodshed, traffickers ambushed a police anti-drug squad last Friday in a remote marijuana-growing area of Vera Cruz state, 300 miles southeast of here.

The "narcotraficantes" derive their power from more than guns, however. Their organizations are built on the labor of tens of thousands of Mexican peasants who earn three or four times the minimum wage of 1,260 pesos a day — $2.62 — by working marijuana and opium poppy fields in areas stretching from Mexico's tropics to the U.S. border.

In a giant bust last November, Mexican law officers seized 7,000 tons of marijuana and detained some 6,000 peasants working on a vast plantation in the northern state of Chihuahua.

Arguments to regulate abortions end in technicalities discussion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Long-awaited arguments before the Supreme Court over state efforts to regulate abortions developed into a discussion of technicalities Tuesday and the justices suggested they may not resolve the disputes.

The cases involve attempts by Pennsylvania and Illinois to expand, by threat of criminal sanctions, their regulatory powers over doctors who perform abortions.

At one point during public argument sessions, Justice Thurgood Marshall pointed to procedural problems in the Illinois case and exclaimed, "What is before us is exactly nothing."

In both cases, almost all questions from the justices centered on procedural matters and not on the underlying — and always divisive — constitutional issues.

The cases have been closely watched by "pro-life" and "pro-choice" forces since the court last spring agreed to review them.

The Reagan administration last July urged the justices to use the cases to overturn their landmark 1973 decision legalizing abortion — a bold move widely viewed as having no chance of succeeding.

Lower courts, relying on the 1973 ruling, said the Pennsylvania and Illinois regulations represented too much interference with women's constitutional right to end their pregnancies.

Catfish sausage compared to pork; frozen patties to be sold in stores

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — It looks, smells and tastes something like pork sausage, but the critter it's made from never squealed or oinked, never had ears or a curly tail or even feet, and didn't grow up in a litter.

This sausage is made of quite a different Southern delicacy — catfish. And "cat dogs" and "corn cats" and other catfish products are in the planning stages.

Later this month, consumers here and in Dallas will get a chance to taste catfish sausage when Delta Industries Inc.

stocks the shelves of a handful of Jitney Jungle and Kroger stores to test market the frozen patties, Delta President Thomas Slough said Tuesday.

The sausage tastes something like its pork competitor, but is lower in cholesterol, fat and calories, he said. It will be sold in 12-ounce, eight-patty packages under the brand name Leroy's, and will cost about the same as high-grade pork sausage.

Consisting only of catfish, pepper, sage and other spices, the sausage contains no preservatives, which requires the company to freeze it to keep it fresh.

Privately held Delta Industries refined the recipe for catfish sausage after researchers at Mississippi State University came up with the idea and two Jackson restaurateurs perfected it.

Then there are "cat dogs" or "corn cats," a fishy version of the corn dog.

TV report shocks Polish viewers by showing Solidarity supporters

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish television recently shocked viewers by showing Solidarity supporters outside Poland's U.N. mission in New York shouting "down with Jaruzelski" and carrying placards urging the visiting leader to "go back to Moscow."

The report did not translate the more caustic references to Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski as a "butcher." Viewers, however, did not need to know English to understand the shouts of "Gestapo" or a placard equating a Communist hammer-and-sickle with a Nazi swastika as Jaruzelski's motorcade arrived at the mission.

Although the 15-minute broadcast was intended to discredit the protesters as extremists ignored by New Yorkers during Jaruzelski's September visit, the TV report would have been unimaginable in any other Soviet bloc country.

The broadcast was a striking example of the Communist government's new offensive in an information war with the Solidarity underground press and Polish-language services of Radio Free Europe, the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corp.

Unable to enforce a monopoly on information, the government has changed its propaganda tactics. No longer ignoring opposition, the authorities regularly publicize and ridicule Solidarity protest calls and anti-government commentaries on Western radio.

They also have been more forthcoming about economic, environmental and health problems which were often covered up under past governments.

Officials respond to residents' questions over dormitory fate

By LINDA COULSON
State Press

McClintock Hall residents upset over plans to close their dormitory received a promise Tuesday from ASU President J. Russell Nelson that his administration will be honest about the building's future.

About 30 residents turned out for a question-and-answer session in the dorm's courtyard to discuss closure plans with Nelson, Vice President of Student Affairs Betty Turner-Asher and Residence Life Director Cliff Osborne.

Many residents were angered earlier this semester when plans were revealed to convert the dorm into classroom and office space. They complained they were not getting information from residence hall officials, and formed a task force in October to examine the situation.

"There's no hidden agendas or information that we have that you don't have," Asher said. "We'll be open and candid with you."

Nelson added, "We may disagree with you, but it won't be in secret."

Nelson said the residence hall is being considered for conversion because the University is short about 1.5 million square feet of office and classroom space, and the dorm is in a prime location in the center of campus.

"Additional classroom and office space will be built over the next 20 years.

"If we could close (Tempe Center) it might change our outlook in this situation, but that won't be an option until 1992 or 1993," he said.

But it's the dorm's prime location and atmosphere that are causing residents to protest loudly the proposed closure plans.

"What gives McClintock its charm is it's located at the core of campus and it's part of a little home here," said resident Lisa Tozzi, who moved into McClintock last year after living in Best Residence Hall.

"You can't re-create that atmosphere; it should be left as it is," she said as members of the audience clapped with approval.

Cathy Stefaniak, a third-year resident and member of the six-member task force examining the closure issue, said her mother lived in McClintock Hall when she attended ASU.

Renowned attorney speaks on effective litigation

By ANDREA HAN
State Press

Trial lawyers today lack the basic training they need to confront liars on the witness stand, criminal lawyer F. Lee Bailey said Tuesday.

Bailey, defense attorney for Patty Hearst, "Boston Strangler" Albert DeSalvo and other famous clients, said the profession needs good lawyers who are better trained to litigate.

"Lawyers are not equipped to confront and expose liars because they have a lack of training in the science and art of cross-examination," he said.

Bailey, who spoke to a crowd of about 300 students, faculty and staff, said lawyers are "ill-equipped" to litigate because their specialties are diverted elsewhere.

Current undergraduate curricula train students in political science, accounting and government, but overlook the tools every litigator needs, he said.

To be successful, trial lawyers must have a consummate command of the English language and a deep background in psychology, he said.

"I don't mean the ability to read off 50 or so sentences.

"I mean the ability to speak and converse persuasively in an interesting fashion so the judge or jurors don't fall asleep," he said.

Bailey graduated from Harvard University with a degree in English because the most effective advocates in trial law are people with a command of the English language, he said.

In an interview with the State Press prior to the lecture, Bailey advised students interested in trial law to major in English.

"What law school does, it does right," he said. "Law schools turn out people who are very well-rounded in a lot of subjects, but not litigation."

In September of 1986, Bailey said he hopes to establish a masters program in litigation at the National University of Law in San Diego.

The program will be intense and difficult, but Bailey promised that graduates of the program will be in great demand.

The key factor in defending a trial is speed, he said.

"If you are sneaking through law school, cutting classes, cramming for exams and cracking them, then you have the ingredients.

"That is not a cheat on the system at all, although it is disappointing to a professor.

"But it is the professors who structure the programs, so that he who does well on exams gets out on top of the class," he said.

Bailey said he likes the idea of lawyers advertising their fees and services.

"It is helpful to the public," he said. "Advertising gives the public a good idea about the mystic of legal fees and gives them choices.

Bailey said the public has a distorted view of the trial lawyer.

"Perry Mason is a phenomenon that never exists (in trial law) but he is embedded in the consciousness of generations of older Americans.

"He is basically a coward — afraid of what the jurors might do to him," Bailey said.

Bailey, who defended Patty Hearst in 1975, said Hearst did not get a fair trial.

Hearst, daughter of publishing magnate William Randolph Hearst, was kidnapped by members of the Symbionese Liberation Army. During her captivity, she was involved in a bank robbery in which a woman was killed.

"I don't think she got a fair shot, but our main objective was to get her out of a murder indictment and we did that," he said.

Pursue peace, evaluate issues realistically

Editor:

Recently, Peace Links sponsored a discussion by three Soviet women on U.S./Soviet relations. The ostensible purpose of the discussion was to foster understanding and friendship between the peoples of the two superpowers. This understanding and bridging of cultural gaps would lead to peace between us. This is an ideal which all people, regardless of ideological perspective, can agree with. Yet there was an important ingredient missing from the discussion. That was reality.

At first, the women briefly gave their respective life histories. This was a nice touch because often times we view the Soviets through malignant stereotypes instead of seeing them as human beings who in many ways lead similar lives to our own. Cutting through stereotypes is indeed an important step in ameliorating the misperceptions that divide foreign peoples.

Yet, it was the question-and-answer period that revealed the absurdity of this peace mission. The Soviet women were clearly not interested in discussing the issues in an objective manner. They persistently cloaked ominous Soviet actions and policies with benign words. A few examples are worth illustrating.

When asked about the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, Oydin Obbova replied, "When the government of Afghanistan asks our country to help, we do it." What she failed to mention was that the Afghan government that asked for help was installed with Soviet assistance by a coup that overthrew the presidency of Mohammed Daud Khan in 1978. She also failed to mention the slaughter of Afghan civilians that has been going on since 1979 when the Soviets began "helping" Afghanistan.

The Soviet offer of a unilateral ban on nuclear testing was hailed by members of that group. What wasn't discussed was that this unilateral gesture of good faith was offered only after the Soviets had stepped up their testing in the first half of the year. They were in a position to make this offer because they had already completed their testing. This move was an obvious diplomatic ploy to portray Ronald Reagan as the jingo at the summit meeting in Geneva.

When asked if activists in the Soviet Union were imprisoned for their political activities, the three women responded by calling such allegations "nonsense." There is tremendous evidence that contradicts their answers and I need not elucidate the ludicrousness of their emphatic denials.

I laud the efforts of organizations such as Peace Links for trying to work for peace. Yet, I was left extremely disappointed by the discussion of the three Soviet women. Their distortion of reality can only foster continued misunderstanding and hostility between the two nations. The idea of peace is something that is in our interest to pursue. But the pursuit of peace must be based on a realistic evaluation of the issues not on erroneous and wishful thinking.

Blackmail is the motive

Editor:

The Soviet Union is adamantly against our Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). Why? SDI poses no military threat to the Soviet Union.

Some University professors, many media Moguls and other radical leftists are also against SDI. Again, why?

The Soviet Union plans, eventually, to take over the world, including the United States, but they are not so foolish as to want a nuclear holocaust. Therefore, the only practical way they can get us to surrender is by threatening our nuclear destruction. This is commonly called "blackmail."

However, they cannot "blackmail" us if we develop a viable system, possibly SDI, for defending ourselves against their nuclear bombs. Thus, the Soviet Union is adamantly against SDI. Furthermore, these Americans are also against SDI because they are sympathetic with Soviet efforts to maintain their ability to "blackmail" us into surrender! What other reason could anyone logically have for objecting to a defense against nuclear bombs?

Newman in a 'dream world'

Editor:

I am writing in response to Doug Newman's article on the Organization to Prevent Nuclear Annihilation (OPNA), which I found very offensive, opinionated and grossly distorted. His article reflects the apathy and ignorance that is unfortunately so prevalent on the ASU campus. He quoted Keith Shcolnik's statement out of context; the statement was made in a light-hearted manner in an attempt to offset the devastating grimness of the subject matter.

Mr. Newman is in a dream world. He should wake up and face reality. If he thinks that a film depicting the aftermath of the dropping of nuclear bombs is emotional "drive" how would he feel watching his family being annihilated or being left mentally and emotionally destroyed. He makes light of the possibility of extinction by rationalizing that if it is going to happen, it is going to happen. He seems to be advocating apathy because in his opinion there is nothing we can do anyway. He feels the government is handling the situation by producing more nuclear arms everyday, but OPNA feels that this will lead to inevitable extinction. Why should a group of young concerned students who want to live, and want the world to live including future generations to get the chance to be born be so snidely put down? This is a sad commentary on today's apathy towards matters that affect us all.

Students urged to take computer precautions

Editor:

Will a person be annoyed if someone copies his/her work? A computer site at ECG 150 has a different system from any other computer terminals at ASU. The system at ECG 150 is divided into several units and each unit has only one machine to place in a diskette for fourteen users. If one user wants to bring in a file from a floppy disk to the computer workspace, the user has to type in only one particular command. This command is not given to only one user but to all the users who use the system. This is why someone can have somebody else's file very easily.

This is surely an opportunity for a student that does not know how to write a program to copy from those who had finished. In one occasion while I was in the computer room, by chance I saw that one student's computer screen was identical to another student's in the same unit who was sitting not far away. Both of them had the same name printed on! Moreover, they were not friends.

One does not have to sweat to copy a program, one just has to look out for someone who puts in a diskette. Then one just has to type in the command that will bring the other person's entire program to one's workspace. That is simple!

There is nothing the administration can do about it. It is entirely dependent on the users themselves, they must not put a diskette in for a long period. They must take their own precautions to make sure their program is safe from the cheaters.

Christianity not a religion, but a relationship with Jesus Christ

Editor:

This letter is in response to the letter published in the Oct. 22 issue of the State Press.

I commend Mr. Lundquist and Mr. Myers for their comparison of many world religions, and finally representing Christianity; however, I have a few additional comments. Many people refer to Christianity as a religion — it's not a religion, it's a relationship. A relationship between the believer and Jesus Christ. Christians may be found in all religions: Catholic, Nazarene, Methodist or Lutheran. All Christians acknowledge Jesus Christ as their personal Lord, Savior, the Son of God and their best friend.

Many world religions require one to pay their way to heaven, or follow strict rules and regulations of do's and don'ts in order to acquire salvation. For example, I will have salvation if I go to church daily, if I don't smoke or drink, if I'm poor or if I pray the same prayer five times a day; however, the Christians believe differently. Mr. Lundquist and Mr. Myers were accurate in their quote of John (14:6), explaining the simple Christian belief,

"I am the way, the truth, and the life; No one comes to the Father but through Me."

Jesus meant that Salvation is through faith in Christ (Acts 4:16) and is of his grace alone (Ephesians 2:8-9). Christians believe that entrance into the Kingdom of God is by having a born-again encounter with Christ (John 3:3) and by accepting Him as personal Lord and Savior. Grace is what we live by, and as "Petra," a contemporary Christian rock group, sings, "...there's nothing that his blood won't wash away when I tale it to the Cross and start to pray." We are living by grace: God's riches at Christ's expense.

The challenge to check out the history and validity of Christ which Mr. Lundquist and Mr. Myers made is a fair challenge. One will find that Christ actually lived and 12 men devoted their lives to spreading the news of His resurrection, and many of these men died in the name of Christ. If he were not the Son of God and did not do all that he claimed to, then many people did and still are dying in vain.

Profs who repeatedly give same test hurt good students

Editor:

Pride for students is nothing more than doing well on every exam. They are sacrificing their time cracking books when exams are approaching. Their main concern is not only how well they are going to do, but also their classmates' capability. However, there are some students who can do very well even without really struggling hard. This is because some instructors are giving the same exam questions over and over.

During the spring semester this year, I took GCU 102. I thought I had done very well, but the result did not reflect what I had anticipated. Quite a number of students were doing terribly well in that course. Ironically, those students who did well were those who I saw come to class to take the exams only. I was baffled by their performance. It was just unfathomable. For me, some of the questions were quite abysmal. They scored 95 percent and above in every exam. I don't mean it's impossible to do well without coming to class, but it does not always work for many students. I only managed to get a "B" grade for the semester with an average score of 87 percent. I could have gotten an "A" if there were not so many students that did very well. Unquestionably, those lackadaisical students passed with flying colors. All they did was memorize the answers from the past exam questions given by their friends who had taken the same class with the same instructor. I had no one to turn to.

Then, I took REL 100 during the first summer session. I was confronted by the same problem. After that, I told my friends to take the same course to see if that instructor was giving the same questions. All of them got an "A." It was that easy to get a very good grade.

It would be very much better if those instructors who have "stale questions" could change the questions. If they want to give the same questions over and over, then they should make the past exam questions available to all students. Another good solution is to keep the answer sheets or question papers so that there is no circulating of exam questions and they do not have to make new questions every semester.

Israel not merely 'occupied land'; Arabs not the first in Palestine

Editor:

A recent letter from the General Union of Libyan Students insinuated that Israel is merely occupied land. How can a democratic country of 4 million people, that has existed for 38 years, is a member of the United Nations, and has the world's fourth or fifth most powerful army be considered "occupied land"? Based on this reasoning it is logical to conclude that America too is "occupied land." After all, she is only 210 years old and was also founded by people who had been repressed by their former governments.

But really, any country that was founded by a people who did not originate upon the land where they dwell today (i.e. either evolved or created) could be considered invaders! The Bible says that the Jews were in Palestine over 2000 years ago. Who was in the area before that time? Go ask an evolutionist. But it definitely was not the Arabs because they are known to have invaded the area only 1400 years ago.

Students incur hidden costs for different majors

By COLLEEN MOORE
State Press

The major a student chooses can be costly, in the form of expenses for books and supplies needed for taking courses in that discipline.

The varying costs between disciplines does not, in most cases, influence a student's choice of a major, the director of ASU's financial aid office said.

"We would understand from our dealings with students that their career objectives are more important than some small increase in book costs," Paul Barberini said.

"We think their motivation would still be high enough that if their family resources weren't high enough to cover the costs, they would appeal to financial aid (for more money) or get a job or something," he said.

If a student is paying thousands of dollars to go to college, Barberini said, he or she probably won't worry about a few hundred dollars for added expenses.

Barberini said that because costs vary among individual students, depending on actual courses taken and supplies purchased, it is difficult to estimate expenses for particular majors.

"There's not a 'good' average you can take.

"We do a survey every year on what students are spending on books and supplies," Barberini said. "We come up with averages based on credits, and we use these averages (in awarding financial aid)."

Average expenses for all ASU students is $15 per credit hour.

"For some majors you wouldn't spend that much, and for others you would spend more," Barberini said.

Barberini said the ideal approach to finding out how much students spend would be more individualized than the current approach. "The most accurate thing to do would be for each student to tell me the cost requirements for his courses each semester."

This would be impractical, Barberini added, because many students apply for financial aid before they sign up for courses.

"But students who think they didn't get as much money as they should have can file an appeal with the financial aid office, Barberini said.

The appeals are judged on how "unusual" the students' circumstances are, Barberini said.

Appeals come mainly from students majoring in architecture, art, photojournalism and sometimes nursing, Barberini said.

Students who appeal must have a supporting statement from a faculty member, he said.

Pat Clark, associate director of financial aid, said ASU's most expensive majors are architecture, law and several of the majors in the College of Fine Arts, such as jewelry-making and painting.

Clark said "quite a few" students appeal, but she doesn't know how many.

ASU financial aid's approach is individualized, she said.

Professor Roger Schluntz, director of the College of Architecture, said one of the reasons architecture is an expensive major is the high cost of textbooks, which must be printed in small quantities.

A Washington State University financial aid study estimated that architecture majors should budget $1,960 for added expenses they will acquire during the five-year program.

Schluntz said ASU majors probably pay "at least" that amount in extra expenses.

David Pimentel, associate professor of art, said most freshman jewelry-making majors are not aware of added expenses.

Knowledge of such expenses "would probably scare them away," Pimentel said.

He estimated a student's added expenses for a jewelry-making course to be "at least $75."

A student's cost for one course "could go anywhere up to $500, depending on the materials they use," he said.

Pimentel estimated a jewelry-making major's extra expenses for four years of college to be at least $1,200.

A law student will spend at least $3,500 in added expenses during three years of law school, said Chris Smith, coordinator of administrative and student services in the College of Law.

"Books usually cost $200 to $300 per semester. In your second year you have interviewing season, and you have to have a suit or wardrobe, which costs a couple of hundred dollars," she said.

Fees for the state bar exam and multistate professional responsibility exam are about $275, she said, and fees for review courses to prepare for these exams total about $825.

The large, hardbound case books required tend to be expensive, Smith said.

Smith said she thinks beginning law students are usually aware of the added expenses they will accumulate while studying law.

"We're working with the financial aid office to make a brochure for law students to outline the expenses they will incur during law school, and how to pay for these expenses," she said.

Jeannette Robson, coordinator for the cooperative education program in the College of Engineering, said "I think the added expenses for engineering students are possibly higher than for some other majors, but some students decide to purchase really expensive calculators, which can cost anywhere from $50 to $200."

Robson said she would support a study by ASU financial aid to provide estimates of added expenses for each major. "They could better adjust their rates," she said.

police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday:

•Harold Vatinio Bowie, who is unaffiliated with the University, was arrested and charged in connection with criminal trespassing in the ROTC office Monday morning, police said.

Bowie marched into the office in the Old Main Building and demanded forms he needed in order to be recommissioned as an officer in the army, police said.

The major in charge replied he did not have the forms. Bowie became angry and refused to leave the building until the necessary forms arrived.

After arguing for 10 minutes, the officer called police who arrested Bowie.

Police took Bowie to the Tempe Justice Court after he refused to give them his address.

Bowie refused to answer county Judge Fred Ackel's questions. He was jailed in lieu of a $2,740 bond.

•A Schwinn Cruiser one-speed valued at $125 was stolen from the Sigma Nu fraternity house Monday afternoon, police said.

The theft occurred when a man who called himself Rusty arrived at the room of a Sigma Nu member. Rusty told him he was there to inform another member, whom he named, about the death of his aunt and uncle.

Rusty asked to borrow a bicycle so he could go to the store and buy beer to soften the blow for the Sigma Nu. He told the fraternity members he would inform the "nephew" of the deaths when he returned.

Rusty was directed to the room of a third member who loaned him a bicycle.

Rusty never returned with the bicycle.

The Sigma Nu he named told his fraternity brothers he did not have an aunt or an uncle.

Rusty is described as 25 to 30 years old, with brown hair and a moustache. He is approximately 6-foot-2, 240 pounds and was wearing gray shorts and shirt.

•A student's black and silver Kenwood equalizer and amplifier were stolen from her 1980 Chevrolet Camaro parked in Lot 59 sometime Tuesday, police said.

The owner told police she left the car locked at 9 a.m. When she returned five hours later the doors were still locked and the equipment was missing.

Backstage pass

Behind-the-screams, real fun begins

By CINDY PEARLMAN
State Press

A man walks by in a T-shirt that reads "Joe Walsh Band. You're out of here."

Another passes in a shirt that reads "Deep Purple, Scorpions, Night Ranger, Ted Nugent, Bon Jovi, Grim Reaper and Victory — Texas Fest 1985."

It's 2 p.m. on Halloween and under a sky of pea-green cement, we're backstage at the University Activity Center — a rock 'n' roll rendering of what the office is to J.R. Ewing.

We're hanging out, avoiding those seriously checking for passes, and finding out what this behind-the-scenes business is all about.

We learn that four very different people will be absolutely livid before the Foreigner/John Cafferty concert is over.

One: John Cafferty will be pretty upset because after landing in Sky Harbor International Airport at 4 the night of the show, a slimy cab driver will turn a 15-minute ride to ASU into a two-hour trek, because how was Cafferty to know? He's never been to ASU before.

Two: Foreigner, not a real happy band to begin with, will get a little testy with security because someone dared to enter their dressing room, which they are pretty adamant in the first place about no one entering. A little later, security will dub this "The Room."

Three: David Foster, Cafferty's tour manager, a very happy man to begin with, will be upset during soundcheck minus John (who is in the cab). This will mean that Foster will have to sing Cafferty's lines, so the back-up singers can practice. People will laugh when Foster sings.

Four: A member of VIP security isn't too happy because, hey, "they had Uzi machine guns like all the President's men carry around backstage during the Tina Turner concert a few weeks ago and how do you top that?"

"Where's Cafferty?" Foster asks.

Backstage for ten hours during a major ASU concert — who will make it through, who will die, who will crack from the pressure, who will trip over the boards on the floor?

This is the stuff great events are made of.

Three signs telling people exactly where to go adorn the backstage walls at UAC.

One: Foreigner. Two: Foreigner choir. Three: Beaver Brown Band.

The fourth comes later: food, showers and (with a zigzag line pointing nowhere in particular) home.

Boxes are everywhere. John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown band's equipment reads: Scorpio Sound — Beaver bases. "East Texas" is chalked onto the side of a crate.

"Money for Nothing" plays on the main UAC speaker system. "Hey, Dire Straits' in concert tonight?" More backstage humor.

Over 500 cans of Coca-Cola are wheeled in on plastic carts by Saga workers in black pants and white shirts. Then, the food comes. Hundreds of loaves of bread. A lot of apples. More Coke. Around 100 bags of ice.

"I turn my back. I leave for five minutes and they change their mind for the fifth time today," says a member of Cafferty's crew. It is unclear what he is talking about.

Wayne Robinson, Cafferty's keyboard specialist, is unpacking equipment. He is one of the 13-member Cafferty

'They had Uzi machine guns like the President's men carry backstage at the Tina Turner concert.' —Security road crew that includes technicians, two bus drivers, a truck driver and a merchandiser.

Foster introduces everyone to Cafferty's sound engineer.

"This is the man who is the difference between what sounds shitty and what sounds good," he says.

"And this is the very exciting laser box we use," says Foster.

Closer to the stage is another sign placed over a box featuring wires and plugs galore: "High Voltage. Please don't put your drinks here."

A man walks in wearing a gray, starched business suit. He carries a metal briefcase and looks like the person who usually comes to announce death in military movies.

"Hi, Stan."

It's 5 p.m. He's the piano tuner.

"Small town ... blank ... make me crazy," sings Cafferty's band after a rousing "Tough All Over" instrumental.

"Falling for a small town girl," sings Foster, filling in for Cafferty during soundcheck at 6:30 p.m. because John's not there.

There are a few snickers from the combination ten band/crew members on stage. The rest of the 14,300 seats at UAC are empty.

They move on to "Living in the C-I-T-Y" and Foster dances around with an engineer while making cheerleader motions with his arms of the letters "C-I-T-Y."

More snickers.

TOUGH ALL OVER

BACKSTAGE

A.S.U.

It's been a tough tour for John Cafferty and his sax man, Michael Antunes.

He started with Cafferty six years ago when he was a senior in college. He began the summer after graduation.

"We're not big-time yet. We're still struggling as a national act that plays small theaters, but we're the type of band that knows our limitations."

Foster said his day begins at 8 to 10 a.m. depending on how long the ride was the night before.

"At 11:45, we're required to be in the building. We have 15 to 20 minutes to get the gear in the building," he said.

"Union loaders, it's a big, sectioned-off, political thing. When the hall is unionized like this one is, you can't touch your gear. It can be a big game, but as long as you're cooperative, it usually works out."

"While the crew is here, John does interviews and the band works out. The crew does not get a hotel room unless we have a whole day off. We sleep on the bus and shower here," Foster said.

"A lot of people need a lot of attention — all the time," he said. "There's always a problem."

John Cafferty throws his fist in the air and 14,000 people at the UAC roar their approval. He has just finished "On the Dark Side."

It's 8:45 p.m. He has been at this concert hall for two hours.

The song is from a movie, "Eddie and the Cruisers." But, "this ain't no movie," Cafferty yells to his concert crowd.

It's all-American, down-home rock 'n' roll that includes an encore of "Runaround Sue."

Backstage, later, Cafferty will say, "We want everyone to go home and say it was good to come out tonight. It doesn't matter if you play a football stadium or a small club."

Concerning the hassle, he's more poetic.

"From the plains of the Midwest to the steel mills in Pittsburg to the wide open space in Arizona, things are tough all over," says Cafferty.

police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday:

•Harold Vatino Bowie, who is unaffiliated with the University, was arrested and charged in connection with criminal trespassing in the ROTC office Monday morning, police said.

Bowie marched into the office in the Old Main Building and demanded forms he needed in order to be recommissioned as an officer in the army, police said.

The major in charge replied he did not have the forms. Bowie became angry and refused to leave the building until the necessary forms arrived.

After arguing for 10 minutes, the officer called police who arrested Bowie.

Police took Bowie to the Tempe Justice Court after he refused to give them his address.

Bowie refused to answer county Judge Fred Ackel's questions. He was jailed in lieu of a $2,740 bond.

•A Schwinn Cruiser one-speed valued at $125 was stolen from the Sigma Nu fraternity house Monday afternoon, police said.

The theft occurred when a man who called himself Rusty arrived at the room of a Sigma Nu member. Rusty told him he was there to inform another member, whom he named, about the death of his aunt and uncle.

Rusty asked to borrow a bicycle so he could go to the store and buy beer to soften the blow for the Sigma Nu. He told the fraternity members he would inform the "nephew" of the deaths when he returned.

Rusty was directed to the room of a third member who loaned him a bicycle.

Rusty never returned with the bicycle.

The Sigma Nu he named told his fraternity brothers he did not have an aunt or an uncle.

Rusty is described as 25 to 30 years old, with brown hair and a moustache. He is approximately 6-foot-2, 240 pounds and was wearing gray shorts and shirt.

•A student's black and silver Kenwood equalizer and amplifier were stolen from her 1980 Chevrolet Camaro parked in Lot 59 sometime Tuesday, police said.

The owner told police she left the car locked at 9 a.m. When she returned five hours later the doors were still locked and the equipment was missing.

Backstage pass

Behind-the-screams, real fun begins

By CINDY PEARLMAN
State Press

A man walks by in a T-shirt that reads "Joe Walsh Band. You're out of here."

Another passes in a shirt that reads "Deep Purple, Scorpions, Night Ranger, Ted Nugent, Bon-Jovi, Grim Reaper and Victory — Texas Fest 1985."

It's 2 p.m. on Halloween and under a sky of pea-green cement, we're backstage at the University Activity Center — a rock 'n' roll rendering of what the office is to J.R. Ewing.

We're hanging out, avoiding those seriously checking for passes, and finding out what this behind-the-scenes business is all about.

We learn that four very different people will be absolutely livid before the Foreigner/John Cafferty concert is over.

One: John Cafferty will be pretty upset because after landing in Sky Harbor International Airport at 4 the night of the show, a slimy cab driver will turn a 15-minute ride to ASU into a two-hour trek, because how was Cafferty to know? He's never been to ASU before.

Two: Foreigner, not a real happy band to begin with, will get a little testy with security because someone dared to enter their dressing room, which they are pretty adamant in the first place about no one entering. A little later, security will dub this "The Room."

Three: David Foster, Cafferty's tour manager, a very happy man to begin with, will be upset during soundcheck minus John (who is in the cab). This will mean that Foster will have to sing Cafferty's lines, so the back-up singers can practice. People will laugh when Foster sings.

Four: A member of VIP security isn't too happy because, hey, "they had Uzi machine guns like all the President's men carry around backstage during the Tina Turner concert a few weeks ago and how do you top that?"

"Where's Cafferty?" Foster asks.

Backstage for ten hours during a major ASU concert — who will make it through, who will die, who will crack from the pressure, who will trip over the boards on the floor?

This is the stuff great events are made of.

Three signs telling people exactly where to go adorn the backstage walls at UAC.

One: Foreigner. Two: Foreigner choir. Three: Beaver Brown Band.

The fourth comes later: food, showers and (with a zigzag line pointing nowhere in particular) home.

Boxes are everywhere. John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band's equipment reads: Scorpio Sound — Beaver bases. "East Texas" is chalked onto the side of a crate.

"Money for Nothing" plays on the main UAC speaker system. "Hey, Dire Straits' in concert tonight?" More backstage humor.

Over 500 cans of Coca-Cola are wheeled in on plastic carts by Saga workers in black pants and white shirts. Then, the food comes. Hundreds of loaves of bread. A lot of apples. More Coke. Around 100 bags of ice.

"I turn my back. I leave for five minutes and they change their mind for the fifth time today," says a member of Cafferty's crew. It is unclear what he is talking about.

Wayne Robinson, Cafferty's keyboard specialist, is unpacking equipment. He is one of the 13-member Cafferty

'They had Uzi machine guns like the President's men carry backstage at the Tina Turner concert.' —Security road crew that includes technicians, two bus drivers, a truck driver and a merchandiser.

Foster introduces everyone to Cafferty's sound engineer.

"This is the man who is the difference between what sounds shitty and what sounds good," he says.

"And this is the very exciting laser box we use," says Foster.

Closer to the stage is another sign placed over a box featuring wires and plugs galore: "High Voltage. Please don't put your drinks here."

A man walks in wearing a gray, starched business suit. He carries a metal briefcase and looks like the person who usually comes to announce death in military movies.

"Hi, Stan."

It's 5 p.m. He's the piano tuner.

"Small town . . . blank . . . make me crazy," sings Cafferty's band after a rousing "Tough All Over" instrumental.

"Falling for a small town girl," sings Foster, filling in for Cafferty during soundcheck at 6:30 p.m. because John's not there.

There are a few snickers from the combination ten band/crew members on stage. The rest of the 14,300 seats at UAC are empty.

Dance company grabs Gammage

By LISA POLLYEA
 State Press

ASU's Gammage center will be rolling out the red carpet for the distinguished Paul Taylor Dance Company performing tonight at 8.

The fact that the Paul Taylor Dance Company has earned this high acclaim from noted dance critics is par for the course.

Especially when the company is celebrating its 30th electrifying anniversary season, leaving audiences and critics alike wondering at "the ability of dancers to transform themselves into beings of divine radiance" as the Washington Post put it.

Ballet News called the 15-member Taylor company, "One of the few authentic geniuses in the world of dance."

At the Gammage performance, the company will perform two of Taylor's latest works including "Roses" to music created by Richard Wagner and "Last Look," with music specifically composed by Donald York. In addition, they will feature a Taylor identifying piece, "Esplanade," to music by J.S. Bach.

"Last Look" has been called a "vibrantly theatrical production which takes a look at the decline of human civilization with an amazing expenditure of energy."

"Roses" is unusual for Taylor's style, a tribute to romantic love, requiring "the kind of elegant, vigilant partnering usually associated with the classical ballet," wrote Martha Duffy of Time magazine.

The company has performed in more than 300 American cities and has traveled on 29 overseas tours to 53 different nations.

Paul Taylor has choreographed an incredible 80-plus dances for the company, and many of his pieces are also in the repertoires of the Royal Danish Ballet, American Ballet Theatre, the Paris Opera Ballet, the London Contemporary Dance Theatre and others.

The motivation behind the company is Paul Taylor.

Taylor studied painting at Syracuse University before doing a 360-degree major switch to dance, including study in New York under the celebrated choreographers and dancers, Margaret

cosmic corner

This week, and for weeks to come, ASU will be blessed with the astrological forecasts of "Cosmic Corner". Remember — live your life by the stars and you just might catch one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Beware of moochers — don't loan your roommate laundry money — as your financial scene looks none too bright.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be direct. Tell your psych teacher you don't understand why you must study the behavioral effects of Alpo on salivating dogs. Pisces natives will influence your decisions this weekend. Don't be a wimp.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep your resolutions this week. Don't waffle: blueberry syrup is not your strong suit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't be such a show-off. Do be more modest about your accomplishments in the social realm. Not everyone wants to know who you thought was cute on "Dating Game."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Moderation is the key this week. Don't indulge fleeting whims. Libra, Aries influence means it's time to guard your privacy. Hide your undies.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Big rewards in store for you. Libra female, Virgo male may confuse you with insignificant babble. Ignore them or risk love triangle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Invitation may be coming your way. To refuse it could mean big strike-out with major love interest. But don't let it worry you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spotlight on contacts this week. Get to know everyone who's anyone. Libra, other Geminis play at ego-building. Beware of false praise — especially while wearing plaid.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be positive. Insecurities only give you ulcers. And with all your problems... Avoid Capricorns, Leos this week if you want to preserve your tenuous self-image.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your diplomatic nature makes you a favorite of advice-seekers. Be kind, people are depending on you. Pisces, Gemini natives important to your sanity by fielding questions from inquisitive freshmen.

Recent Alarm disc has many 'strengths'; worth price paid

By RICK BETTS
Contributing Writer

The LP has no real blockbuster hits, but it is a good danceable album that has a pleasing amount of diversity and continuity.

The lyrics fit well with the rhythms, which is a key ingredient in any hit. Although "Strength" is my favorite track, it is a slim favorite to the rest of the album.

My album library grew by one yesterday.

While thumbing through the stacks, I came across the Alarm and thought "Hey, I've heard of them." That thought cost me $7.48.

The Alarm brings to this disc a wide array of sounds, from mode synthesizers and grand pianos to harmonica.

The percussion is rather strong and defined, but it mixes well with the other sounds.

The lyrics, written by Peters and Eddie MacDonald, are rich with feelings of love, loneliness, envy and sorrow.

The band originated in North Wales in 1977, and until 1982 was a simple garage band trying to bang out a living.

In the latter part of '82, the band cut its first album, "Declaration," which appeared on the British charts.

From there, the Alarm were opening up for the likes of the Boomtown Rats, the Beat and U2.

Prior to Christmas 1984, the group played its first series of concerts in the Far East and then spent the first part of the following year writing and preparing for their biggest British and European tour to date.

My favorite song is the title track "Strength" which is frequently played on Valley album-orientated rock stations. "Strength" is a song which starts slow and gets faster as the music continues.

The Alarm's new album "Strength" will be a winner, and currently is a definite addition to any good music library.

Award-winning pianist to be featured with Toulouse orchestra at Gammage

Pianist Brigitte Engerer, winner of the 1974 Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow, will be the featured soloist when the acclaimed Orchestre du Capitole de Toulouse performs at Gammage Center on Nov. 12 at 8 p.m.

Music Director Michel Plasson, who has been with the orchestra since 1968, will conduct the orchestra in a program of works by Debussy, Saint-Saens and Franck.

Engerer has been called "a pianist to be reckoned with" by the New York Times, and she has been such since winning the Marguerite Long International Competition at age 16. She also has won the Tchaikovsky competition and the 1978 Queen Elizabeth Competition.

She has performed with the Orchestre de Paris and several times with the Berlin Philharmonic under Mehta, Rostropovich and von Karajan. She made her American orchestral debut in 1984 with the New York Philharmonic.

The Orchestre du Capitole de Toulouse was founded in the early 1800s for the opera season of Toulouse. It became a symphony orchestra in 1945. Plasson's arrival in 1968 has proven the most decisive event in the orchestra's history.

Under Plasson, the orchestra has vastly expanded its symphonic repertoire and has performed in internationally renowned tours and concerts, and made recordings outside France.

The orchestra has performed at numerous festivals and has won such awards as the Prix de l'Academie du Disque Francais and the Grand Prix de l'Academie Charles Cros.

Plasson, who formally studied piano, percussion and conducting, has become practically synonymous with the orchestra in the past 17 years.

In addition to gaining new prestige for the orchestra, he has revolutionized the cultural life of Toulouse.

As artistic director he transformed the old grain exchange into a 3,000-seat concert hall where the orchestra's concert season takes place. The hall also has become an important operatic theatre since 1977.

With the orchestra's role expanding, Plasson resigned as artistic director in 1983 to devote his energies to the orchestra. He has also served as guest conductor for such ensembles as the Berlin and London Philharmonics and major opera houses in Europe and the United States.

Tickets for the Nov. 12 concert are $13 and $11 and are available at Gammage and all Diamond's outlets.

Coach seeks improvement for ASU-Washington battle

By JERRY BROWN
State Press

Riding a four-game winning streak that includes convincing back-to-back Pac-10 road wins, you might expect ASU football coach John Cooper to be complimentary in his assessment of the Sun Devils.

Guess again.

ASU takes a 6-2 record (3-1 conference) into Saturday afternoon's showdown with the Washington Huskies (5-3, 4-1) at Sun Devil Stadium, but Cooper is not impressed with his team's performance — especially on offense.

"We had better play a lot better this week than we have," Cooper said at his weekly media luncheon. "If we don't play 30 or 40 percent better, we won't win. Eight weeks into the season, we are a frustrated offensive football team."

"Normally, teams are adding a play or two each week to their offenses. But we are still throwing things out of ours. We are keeping a minimal amount on offense."

'Offensively, it looks like they have what we want to have ...' — Don James

One player that did please Cooper on offense was fullback Vinnie Amoia. Amoia gained 102 yards, his best performance as a Sun Devil, in ASU's 30-8 win over California.

"It's ironic that our fullback has the two longest runs from scrimmage this season," Cooper said. "Vince had by far his best game for us last week."

With a five-team logjam at the top of the conference standings, both the Devils and Huskies find themselves in a must-win situation. Washington coach Don James said the Pac-10 picture will clear significantly after this weekend.

"It is a five-team race now, but it will be a three-team race after our game and the UCLA-UA game," James said. "UCLA is probably the best team I've seen in the league, but it's going to be very interesting."

Cooper shares James' feelings about the conference race.

"UCLA is the best team we've played, but that may change after this week," Cooper said. "Everyone is in a good position right now, and everyone's got a chance at it."

The Huskies handed UCLA its only conference loss, defeating the Bruins, 21-14, in Seattle.

Cooper took time to read the ever-swelling ASU injury list. After naming a dozen or so players out or hurt with a variety of ailments, Cooper cracked, "Other than these guys, we're not in bad shape."

Cooper said one member of the list, senior tailback Darryl Clack, would practice Tuesday in full pads for the first time since having the cast removed from his right leg last week.

Clack, who suffered a fractured right fibula, ran the 40-yard dash under Cooper's eye after Monday's practice, and was clocked at 4.79 seconds.

"I can't tell you much more about him until he goes in pads," Cooper said.

The Huskies struggled in the early going this season, losing their first two games of the season to Oklahoma State and Brigham Young. Since then, Washington has won five of six, the only loss coming when Oregon State stunned the Huskies, 21-20, in Seattle three weeks ago.

James said the ASU defense ranks with those of UCLA and Oklahoma State, and he expects them to be physical.

"You know ASU is going to hit," he said. "They are young, but they have a lot of experience. (ASU linebacker Greg) Battle is a fine player, and they are physical."

"Offensively, it looks like they have what we want to have — a balanced offense. I'm impressed with their offensive line, and the tight end is a fine player."

Cooper said one advantage the Huskies hold over ASU is the amount of bodies they have to fill football uniforms. The Huskies have 158 players in their football program. ASU has under 100 players on its varsity roster.

"You can have a lot of contact when you

Washington fullback Rick Fenney, shown carrying the ball last season, leads the Huskie running attack along with tailback Vince Weathersby.

have 150 people to work with," Cooper said. "We can't fill a plane with players to take on a road game."

"Washington has more alignments and presents more problems on defense than anybody. And in Don (James) they have one of the great coaches on their side. They are not going to beat themselves."

ASU's Dan Fisher finished 11th at the Pac-10 Championships, ahead of every UA runner.

Lehman pleased with runners' effort

By BRAD HALVORSEN
State Press

A seventh-place finish at the Pac-10 Championships may not be outstanding, but ASU cross country coach Ken Lehman said he is pleased with his team's performance.

"We have room for improvement, but overall I'm happy," Lehman said. "We had some good individual performances. Last year (ASU) also finished seventh, but this year I think some of other teams scored higher."

Meanwhile, UA coach Dave Murray expressed a different point of view after his nationally top-ranked and favored Wildcats finished a disappointing fourth, well behind champion Stanford.

"I never thought we'd end up fourth," said Murray, who was shooting for his third-straight conference title. "We ran into some bad luck coming into the meet. Two of our guys were sick and another injured."

The Wildcats totaled 116 points, well behind Stanford's 60 and not far ahead of ASU's 147.

Lehman said four of his seven runners ran particularly well, including top ASU finisher Dan Fisher, who beat the best of UA's highly regarded runners while placing 11th over the 10,000-meter course, which was the Stanford Golf Course, in Palo Alto, Calif.

The Devils' Steve Preston finished 6½ seconds behind Fisher in 14th place with 31:24.8.

"Dan and Steve were right up there with the leaders for the first three miles or so," Lehman said. "The first 15 runners were grouped together for the first three or four miles, and Dan and Steve were with them."

Lehman was also pleased with Treg Scott, primarily a middle-distance runner, who finished 29th, and Paul Boudreaux, a freshman who placed 52nd.

Murray was not as pleased with his runners, but takes part of the blame for employing an unfamiliar strategy for the race.

Instead of using his usual strategy of hanging back in the pack for most of the race and putting on a late surge, Murray instructed his runners to establish an early lead.

"I felt that we were the favored team, and we were going to let the other teams chase us instead of us chasing them," Murray said.

"I don't think we were nearly as strong this way, and I'm certainly not going to try to change anything like this around in the future."

Two Wildcat runners, Aaron Ramirez and Chris Morgan, competed while ill, which Murray said added nearly two minutes to their times.

Morgan finished 32nd, while Ramirez took 36th.

Also, James Maxwell ran with a pulled upper back muscle he suffered during a workout on Friday and finished a disappointing 33rd.

Still, Murray said his healthy runners should have done much better. Andre Woods, the Wildcats top runner who finished eighth in the conference finals last year, ran 13th, nearly one minute behind winner Mark Oleson of Stanford.

Murray said his team could have run even better than last year, when five Wildcats placed in the top 10.

Women runners take 5th, p. 18

"We had five or seven guys who ran in this same meet last year," he said. "It was run over the same course, and the weather conditions were identical. So our times should have come out about the same."

"If our times were the same as last year, we would have had five guys in the top seven."

Lehman said Arizona did not look nearly as potent as earlier in the season.

"They looked so sharp in San Diego (at the Aztec Invitational) and then again at their own invitational, but they didn't look quite like the same team," he said. "It makes you wonder."

Both teams have more than a week left to prepare for the District 8 meet in Seattle, Wash., on Nov. 16, when top individuals and teams will qualify for nationals.

Lehman said the Devils are improving with each meet and should do better at the District meet.

"I think we're closing in on people," he said. "The longer the season goes on, with us not running in many meets, the better off we're going to be."

So Farr, so good

Former Devil golfer pursues career on LPGA tour

By BRAD HALVORSEN
State Press

Former ASU golfer Heather Farr knew she would earn her professional playing card this fall, but what a relief it was to finally get it.

Farr, who decided to drop out of school in June to pursue a career in professional golf, earned her playing card by finishing seventh at the Ladies Professional Golf Association Qualifying tournament Oct. 16-18 in Sugarland, Texas.

Former ASU golfer Heather Farr has taken her show on the road as a member of the LPGA tour.

"Yeah, it was a relief," Farr said. "Now I don't have to hear anybody say to me, 'When are you going to get your card?' and 'What are you going to do for a backup?'"

"But I always knew I would get my card."

The card classifies Farr as a fully exempt player on the LPGA tour starting Jan. 1, 1986, meaning she can enter most LPGA tournaments without meeting qualifying standards.

"It makes it easier on you when you're regarded as a tour player," she said. "When you're in that stage where you haven't gotten your card yet, but you're still playing in LPGA tournaments, you're just a nobody."

Farr will join 16 other former ASU golfers on the LPGA tour, including Joanne Carner and Alice Miller. ASU leads the nation in placing players on the tour.

'It makes it easier on you when you're regarded as a tour player.'

— Heather Farr

The fight for earning the card began in August at a regional qualifying tournament in Wichita, Kan. Farr had to finish in the top 25 in order to earn an invitation to the national qualifiers.

She placed 12th.

At Sugarland, Farr was one of 95 golfers vying for 35 available cards. The 36th- through 55th-place finishers received conditional cards, which allowed them to play as fillers or alternates.

The others are waiting until next year.

"I thought there were only going to be 20 or 25 cards available, so that took some of the pressure off," Farr said.

"But I knew I would finish in the top 15 anyway. I really thought I could win it."

Farr shared the lead with Carole Charbonnier after shooting a first-round 72. She followed with a score of 77-76-75-300 to finish in a seventh-place tie, only three strokes behind winners Sheryl Steinhauer, Mary Murphy and Tammy Fredrickson.

But getting that far was not easy.

Rain forced the cancellation of the first round, scheduled for Oct. 15, and left 36 holes to be played the following day.

Farr teed off Oct. 16 with the final group, but quit after only 32 holes because of darkness. On Oct. 17 she had to show up at the course at 7 a.m. to finish the remaining four holes, then wait for her regular tee-off time at 12:40 p.m.

"That made it such a long day," she said. "It was odd. You warm up, play four holes of golf, then sit around and watch TV or whatever for a few hours, then play again."

Farr enjoyed her lead for about 25 minutes, the amount of time between the two rounds on Oct. 16.

"Actually, I didn't know I was tied for the lead until the fifth hole of the next round," she said.

Despite playing the tournament to earn her card, Farr said she was shooting for the win.

"I play best when I'm going all out," she said. "At Wichita I didn't play for the win, and I'm sorry I didn't. I think I would have done much better."

Farr will have three months off before her first tournament as an official LPGA tour player. She plans on competing in three straight tournaments, starting in Florida on Jan. 23, then coming home to Phoenix for a week of rest, and then playing in two local LPGA tournaments.

Farr said she prefers playing as an individual to competing on a college team.

"Sometimes it's hard to get used to playing with four other players," she said. "I think it's easier when you're playing for just one person instead of five. That's what golf is meant to be — an individual sport."

"But (college golf) was a good experience, and I wouldn't trade it for anything."

Lumberjacks provide spikers with non-conference breather

By MICHAEL KONZ
State Press

The ASU volleyball team will take a break from its difficult Pac-West schedule to take on an NAU team tonight in Flagstaff that Sun Devil coach Debbie Brown says is "one of the weakest teams we play."

ASU (17-10 and ranked tenth in the Tachikara Collegiate Volleyball Coaches Association poll) is coming off losses to Stanford (17-1 and top-ranked in the CVCA poll) and UCLA (21-3 and ranked second) in the past two weeks.

ASU also was upset Thursday by Nevada-Las Vegas in five games.

The Sun Devils should not have that problem against the Lumberjacks.

"It's nice because we've been playing grueling matches," Brown said. "We don't have to play our best to beat them. It will build our confidence."

ASU's break will not last long, however. The Sun Devils take on sixth-ranked Southern California Saturday.

"Hopefully, (the NAU match) will get us ready for USC," Brown said.

Brown said the NAU match will also give her a chance to use new strategies that she may later employ.

"We'll run different offensive patterns," she said. "We'll experiment a little with plays that in a regular match you don't want to experiment with.

"If it works, we'll use it more and more." ASU did not practice Monday, the first day off Brown has given her team this season.

"It's been a long season," she said. "Some had tests, and we wanted to give them a break. Some wanted to sleep—whatever."

Although the Sun Devils lost to Stanford in three sets Saturday, Brown said they played well and will not lose much confidence.

"You always lose a little confidence, but I've always been honest with my team," she said. "If they've played badly, I tell them. But they played really well."

"They're looking forward to playing USC."

ASU remains relatively injury-free late in the season, Brown said.

She said Shelley Beaton was suffering from the flu Tuesday, but the rest of the team is healthy.

"I think the girls have stayed pretty healthy," Brown said. "We've practiced extensive preventative medicine. We're doing a good job of keeping healthy."

"When we have had injuries, we've been able to get them right back into the lineup."

Sihner, Radford finish high for women runners

By JON WILEY
State Press

Despite top-20 performances by Wendy Sihner and Susan Radford, the ASU women's cross country team finished in last place in the five-team Pac-West Conference Championships at UCLA.

Despite the finish Saturday, Coach Ken Lehman said he was satisfied with his team's effort.

"The course was fairly difficult," he said. "But I think we ran what we are capable of running."

For the 5,000-meter course in Westwood, Calif., Sihner placed highest among the Devils in 17th with a time of 18:47. Radford was close behind, placing 19th with a time of 18:59.

Sarah Krumme, the third Devil finisher, placed 25th overall in 19:28. Kristan Johnson and Mette Berger, who replaced the injured Cathie Koss for ASU, finished 28th and 29th with times of 20:33 and 20:43 respectively.

Stanford, a leading team in the conference, won both the men's and women's titles.

The Cardinal placed first among the women with an overall team score of 31, easily outdistancing the second-place UCLA, which finished with 42 points. Stanford's Regina Jacobs captured the best score of the championships, blazing through the course with a time of 16:45.

UA finished third overall with a score of 66, while Southern California captured fourth with 97 points.

On November 16th, ASU women's cross country, along with the men's cross country team, will participate in the District 8 Championships at Washington.

Pick 'Um

First prize will be an ASU sweatshirt from University Sporting Goods. Second place will get 50 percent off any purchase at Poster's Mostly (excluding Patrick Nagel posters). Third prize is a lunch for two at Bandersnatch and fourth place will dig into a 16-inch pizza with a choice of toppings at Gino's Pizza.

Entries must be turned in to the State Press by 3 p.m. Friday in the Matthews Center basement. Only one entry per person. The top four entries will be listed in WEDNESDAY'S paper, which is the first day of publication next week after Veteran's Day. The first Pick 'Um copy will also appear Wednesday.

The Arizona State game will be used as the tie breaker, so just predict the score. Place an "X" in both boxes to predict a tie in any game with the point spread taken into consideration. The teams on the left are the favorites, and the points shown will be subtracted from their final score.

State Press/KASR Top-10 Poll

Because of Iowa's upset loss to Ohio State, the Nittany Lions of Penn State moved up two spots and find themselves atop the State Press/KASR Top-10 football poll.

Iowa (7-1) lost to the Buckeyes, 22-13, while Penn State (8-0) squeaked by Boston College, 16-12. Because of their loss, the Hawkeyes dropped to fifth place.

Nebraska (7-1) destroyed Kansas State to creep into second place and give Penn State a run for first.

Ohio State (7-1) moved up from eighth place after defeating Iowa.

Close on the Buckeyes' heels is Air Force (this year's BYU?), who has the best record in the nation (9-0). The Falcons were in fifth place last week.

Michigan (6-1-1) suffered a surprising tie to Illinois, 3-3, and tumbled from second place into sixth.

Miami, Fla., and Oklahoma find themselves in a deadlock for seventh place. The Hurricanes (7-1) are in the poll for the first time this season and play Maryland this weekend, while Oklahoma remains seventh for the second straight week.

The surprising Baylor Bears (8-1) are the only Southwestern Conference team in the poll and not in jail. They moved up from ninth place in last week's poll.

Rounding out the Top-10 is Auburn and leading Heisman Trophy candidate Bo Jackson, which lost to Florida, dropped from sixth place.

1. Penn State	8-0-0
2. Nebraska	7-1-0

Spinks goes on as heavyweight

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Spinks, the newly-minted International Boxing Federation heavyweight champion, relinquished his light heavyweight title belts Tuesday, and his promoter said a first defense would be announced within two weeks.

Ex-champ Larry Holmes and Gerry Cooney were among the possible opponents.

Representatives of the World Boxing Council, World Boxing Association and IBF reclaimed the light heavyweight hardware, figuratively if not literally. Promoter Butch Lewis said Spinks will keep the actual belts that identified him as the undisputed light heavyweight king.

The decision to continue in the much more lucrative heavyweight division surprised no one.

"Michael's immediate plans are to defend the heavyweight title in February," Lewis said. "Negotiations have started with Holmes, Cooney and all the other guys in the top ten who call every five minutes."
