ASU group says CIA visit nixed; agency disagrees

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

An ASU group is claiming victory in the cancellation of a CIA recruiting program even though an agency spokeswoman said the event only has been postponed.

Members of Students for Cooperative Alternatives, a group that supports "economic democracy and social freedom," said the CIA canceled plans for a Thursday recruiting drive because it encountered a protest from students during its last visit.

Jay Jurie, a SCA member, said the group passed out leaflets at a CIA meeting on Feb. 26 stating that the CIA had "broken international law and exercised terrorism."

Jurie said the audience of approximately 35 had mixed reactions to the pamphlet, titled "Make a Killing with the CIA," but the agency representative in charge of the program "was very surprised to see protesters and very unnerved about it."

Although Jurie said the CIA had canceled recruiting activities here because of the protests, a CIA official said the meeting only has been postponed until April.

The official, who refused to identify herself, said Maughn Lee, the CIA West Coast regional recruitment director, had to delay his visit to ASU because of an unexpected trip to Washington D.C. She said the visit would be rescheduled when he returned.

She said she had not heard of any protests against CIA recruitment at ASU and expressed surprise that one had taken place.

'We usually have no problem at ASU.'
— CIA spokeswoman

"We usually have no problem at all at ASU," she said. "Phoenix is such a good area."

Jurie described an earlier report that the CIA had stopped recruiting at ASU because of a hiring freeze as "somewhat less than plausible."

He said SCA would continue with a demonstration planned for Thursday to protest CIA the recruitment effort, but the 11:30 a.m. meeting at the Cady Mall Fountain instead will be a "victory rally."

Varnell to veto placing 'absurd questions' on ballot

By KARI BLAND
State Press

Associated Students of ASU President Dave Varnell said he will veto a bill tonight that would place two "absurd questions" on the April ASASU election ballot.

The bill, which was passed unanimously by the Senate, would poll students about two issues: color preference of the "A" on Tempe Butte, and seating at ASU football games.

"If we are going to use space on a ballot, we need to address more relevant questions, such as academic advisement, instead of these absurd questions," Varnell said.

The bill originally was introduced as a resolution by Sen. Alex Vakula from the College of Law, who said he did not understand why Varnell would veto the bill when it costs nothing.

"I cannot accept any argument that says it would make the Association look ridiculous," Vakula said. "We already look ridiculous with a 3 to 4 percent voter turnout."

Vakula compared the turnout at ASU to student elections at other universities, where he said 30 to 40 percent of the students vote.

ASASU Elections Director Laurie Levin said the questions are irrelevant because ASASU does not have control over either issue.

The Tempe City Council maintains control over the "A" on the mountain, and seating at ASU football games is an Intercollegiate Athletic Board policy.

"I think the idea of having questions on the ballot is a good one," Levin said. "But not these questions. This is just putting something on the ballot for the sake of putting something on the ballot."

Vakula, however, said the questions give student a chance to "vent their opinion" on the subjects. He said students were never given that chance when the block seating policy was implemented.

Vakula said the question of whom students would vote for, Ronald Reagan or Walter Mondale, in the 1984 presidential elections was used on the ASASU ballot that year.

Varnell will present his veto message at the Senate meeting in the MU Mohave Room at 5:30 p.m.

Legislator to favor university workers' multiyear contracts

By JOHN CONWAY
State Press

PHOENIX — The chairman of the first Arizona House of Representatives' committee to hear a bill favoring multiyear contracts for university employees said Monday he will support the bill because it does not favor coaches.

Rep. Jim Cooper, R-Mesa and chairman of the House Education Committee, said: "I don't favor it too much, but I don't oppose it. I don't have any problem with it as long as it applies to everyone."

The Senate passed the bill Feb. 25 by a 26-3 vote with one abstention.

Senate Bill 1032, sponsored by the Senate Education Committee, would permit the Arizona Board of Regents to enter into contracts with non-tenured employees for more than one year.

Cooper said he expects his committee to begin hearing Senate bills sometime next week.

Sen. Pete Corpstein, R-Paradise Valley, said earlier there is support for such an initiative within the Arizona Legislature.

Hoopla about the need for multiyear contracts peaked last year when ASU basketball coach Bob Weinbauer was fired from his position three years after he had received a five-year verbal agreement from ASU officials. Weinbauer eventually settled out of court for $300,000.

The Arizona Court of Appeals recently ruled that not all multiyear contracts are invalid.

The court decision involved former UA basketball coach Ben Lindsey, who was dismissed in 1983 after less than one year with the university. Lindsey told the court he had a four-year verbal agreement with UA.

Judge Joseph M. Livermore ruled that multiyear contracts are valid if the Legislature has provided the funds for the position. Since Lindsey's position was filled after his dismissal, Livermore ruled that the Legislature had provided the funds for a contract extending over a single year.

Surgeon sentenced to 4 years in prison

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heart surgeon Donal M. Billig, convicted of involuntary manslaughter and homicide in the deaths of three patients at Bethesda Naval Hospital, was sentenced Monday to four years in prison and ordered dismissed from the service.

The court-martial jury of nine naval officers also ordered Billig, a Navy commander who served as chief of heart surgery at Bethesda, to forfeit all future pay and allowances.

The jury foreman, Rear Adm. Harry S. Quast, read the sentence as Billig stood and showed no emotion. The jury had deliberated 90 minutes and could have returned a sentence of up to 1½ years.

Billig, 55, was taken into custody by Naval Investigative Service personnel. Under military law, he would be eligible for parole after serving one-third of his sentence.

Billig, nearly sightless in one eye, was found guilty last Thursday of causing the deaths through gross surgical errors during operations in 1983 and 1984.

Acting prime minister to tolerate bodyguards

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The acting prime minister said Monday he will tolerate bodyguards until Olof Palme's murder is solved, but called the ability of leaders to go unguarded an essential element of Sweden's "open, democratic society."

Prime Minister Palme, 59, and his wife Lisbet were strolling without guards in downtown Stockholm when a man shot him Friday night.

Police were reported to be making little progress in solving the murder. The Foreign Ministry confirmed that a claim was made that the Red Army Faction, a West German terrorist group, was responsible, but West German officials discounted it.

Ingvar Carlsson, who had been deputy premier and now is acting prime minister, was chosen unanimously as new leader of Palme's party, the Social Democrats.

Carlsson said he would accept being surrounded by bodyguards, but reluctantly, "until this murder is cleared up." He said he preferred privacy, as Palme had.

Marcos loyalists pledge cooperation to Aquino

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Leaders of Ferdinand E. Marcos' political party pledged on Monday to cooperate with Corazon Aquino and to have her presidency confirmed by the National Assembly, in which they hold two-thirds of the seats.

The nation's central bank said it was taking legal action to recover documents and money Marcos took with him last Wednesday when he fled the country he had ruled for 20 years.

Demonstrations were reported in two Manila suburbs and a province north of the capital against Aquino's decision to replace some local officials before their terms expire.

In another development, guerrillas of the communist New People's Army killed 15 policemen and four civilians in an ambush in the Bicol region of southern Luzon Island.

After a daylong caucus of the Marcos party, its leaders said they recognized the legitimacy of Aquino's government

Cameras, sensors may aid freeway travel

PHOENIX (AP) — The Arizona Department of Transportation has prepared an $87 million freeway improvement plan that would include using video cameras and speed sensors in an attempt to reduce accidents and increase the traffic capacity of the Phoenix freeways.

The state Transportation Board is scheduled March 21 to cover the ADOT recommendation, the first step in a $692 million program to increase the two freeways' traffic-carrying capacity by 43 percent by the year 2005, said Harry Reed, ADOT planning director.

The improvements would be funded with interstate highway rehabilitation money, 94 percent of which comes from the federal government.

The Maricopa, which runs east-west across southern Phoenix, and the Black Canyon, which is Interstate 17 and runs north-south through western Phoenix, "are the backbone of our freeway system and studies show they will remain so in 20 years after all the new freeways are built," Reed said.

The surveillance and control equipment would include television cameras, speed monitors and traffic lights at on-ramps, "all tied into a computer," he said.

Foreign TAs' English not problem at OSU

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Graduate teaching assistants who lack English speaking skills are not a significant problem at Oregon State University, several University professors said.

"No student has complained to me this academic year," said John Owen department head of electrical and computer engineering.

Owen stressed that foreign students only were used for recitations and labs, not for lecturing.

Recently, however, the Associated Students of OSU Academic Affairs Task Force called for a standardization of English speaking skills for foreign students taking graduate teaching assistantships.

Owen said a high score on the Test of English as a Foreign Language is the standard element used for evaluating a potential foreign TA in his department.

Kenneth Krane, department of physics chairman, expressed similar sentiments to Owen's comments. However, Krane said the English speaking abilities of foreign TAs are of national concern.

He said he has received only one or two complaints a year, and that the department was very careful to screen students before putting them in the classroom.

Prof's concern for peace gives rise to discussion group

By ANDREA HAN
State Press

An ASU professor's concern for his children and grandchildren has flourished into a program of weekly meetings on world peace.

Roger Axford, professor of adult and higher education, said Coalition for World Peace was formed four years ago to heighten awareness of the necessity for nuclear disarmament.

"I want to save your life, my five grandchildren, my wife and three children from nuclear annihilation," he said.

"We aren't death people. We are people who affirm life." The group meets Mondays at noon in the MU Santa Cruz Room to discuss peace issues.

"We listen, discuss and raise questions concerning issues that affect our lives everyday," he said.

The organization already has discussed such issues as peace in the Middle East, and war and its meaning for civil liberties.

Lectures scheduled for later this semester include: "An Inventory of Arizona Military Activities," "Oppression in Guatemala," "Citizens' Attitudes Toward Use of Nuclear Weapons," and "The Growth of Peace Activism in the Universities."

Doug Holden, student co-chairman, said the organization's main purpose is to educate.

The informal meetings are open to allow members to discuss all sides of world issues, Holden said.

"When we talk about things in the world, we want to be an open campus where we can discuss these things, not a closed campus," he said.

Holden said he likes the peace organization because students can hear what is going on in the world from a source other than the press.

"We want peace, but the purpose of the discussions is not to choose sides," he said. "We want people to choose themselves."

Although the organization meets informally, Holden said he wished more students would attend meetings.

"We would get more people to meetings if the issues were hitting close to home," he said. "If people were coming home from Guatemala in boxes, more people would attend."

Despite low student participation, Holden said the organization does not recruit like a fraternity or sorority.

"We aren't out to rush students and recruit," he said. "We are there and would meet even if two people showed up."

Axford said students lack an awareness of world issues because they "are politically asleep and many don't realize that the rest of the world, especially the underdeveloped countries, look upon us as warmongers."

He said most Americans fail to actively pursue peace because they are tied up in their daily activities.

He said military spending should be reduced so more money can be spent on cultural education programs and child care centers.

"Funding these areas would be less than the price of one atom bomb," he said.

Time to build up, not out

It's about time ASU built a parking garage. The rumors would surface every year, but with the construction under way at Lot 18, we finally have some tangible evidence that something is being done about what is perhaps ASU's most pressing problem.

With limited space around a trapped campus, ASU's only option is to build up, not out. One wonders what Manhattan would look like if the planners had taken the position ASU has over the years. New Jersey would have the equivalent of Lot 59 and there would have been anarchy in the streets.

The ASU student body has moaned passively about the parking situation for some time. So now that something is actually being done about the problem, a few more moans about the construction should not get in the way.

But complaints by residents of Ocotillo, Best, Irish and Hayden, who now have to park in lots farther from their dorms, are valid. The question is, why did the University wait until the semester was well under way to inform these residents of the hassles they would face? A better time to clue them in would have been at the beginning of the semester, before they paid for the stickers.

But the long-run payoff — a completed garage — far exceeds the short-run discomfort of the construction.

As ASU continues to grow, mostly in the form of added commuters, parking garages offer the best solution to the growing need for parking space.

That the present garage will accommodate 1,567 spaces versus the 340 offered by Lot 18 is an indication that ASU is finally taking a step in the right direction.

Start using ears to listen, not mouths to preach

Patrick J. Kucera News Editor

have evolved. But one aspect that could use modification has remained unchanged.

This is the belief that the major role is to be the preaching tool of Jesus Christ.

It is unfortunate that this is the case. The church should be used not only as that preaching tool, but as more of a listener.

One only needs to look at the first 200 years of the formation of the church to notice that Christ, His apostles and His disciples were to serve not only as proclaimers of the good news, but to act as representatives of God.

Currently, a majority of churches are more concerned about addressing the problems of members of the individual church in sermons than listening to what the congregation believes are the problems it faces.

The church should not only be giving its weekly sermons but should encourage individuals to realize that God is meant to be a counselor, and that includes yelling at Him from time to time as a way to get things off your chest.

God is a force people sometimes pray to in times of need and included in that need is a need to say, "I had a horrible day. Everything went wrong and I am very angry about the whole thing."

Ministers and priests also should be a listening ear to people who are having problems and need to vent their anger, disappointment or whatever else ails them.

The world is already filled with representatives of God who have chosen to witness, preach and espouse their views — more power to them.

But churches, as a whole, must realize that in these troubled times, the people of this world need a concerned ear as much as a preaching mouth.

Paul, in many of his epistles, answers questions that various churches have posed to him. Each has different difficulties and asks Paul for advice on how to solve these problems.

Paul does his best to respond, sometimes angrily, to these questions.

And isn't that what the churches of today should be doing? No one is suggesting that churches remain silent on issues indicative of the times. After all, it is part of their duty.

Likewise, the church should be willing to shut up and let the individual churchgoers speak.

Ministers, preachers, priests or evangelists should never take for granted the possible questions Christians might have.

It is time for the church to listen for awhile. Besides, God is the greatest psychologist.

A 16-year-old girl was a devout Catholic, and every day she stopped by the church on her way to school to say her prayers. Day after day, without fail, the girl made her "pilgrimage." One day, on the way to school, the girl was attacked, beaten and raped. After being released from the hospital, the girl went to her church and, with full emotion, yelled at the crucifix and altar.

"How could you let this happen to me? After all the faith I have had, you let this happen," the girl said in a loud voice.

Two nuns sitting in the back of the church heard the girl in her ire. One turned to the other and said; "What blasphemy!"

The second nun responded, "What faith!"

Editor:

In response to your comments on the 'Grammys' (Feb. 21), your perplexity at Mick Jagger's comment, "For all those people who took a piss, the joke's on you," is understandable. However, Mr. Jagger was slightly misquoted in that he actually said, "...took the piss..." This was a reference to the colloquial expression in England of "taking the piss (out of someone)," which loosely translated means to give someone a hard time. Mr. Jagger was obviously referring to people who had previously criticized his music and was directing his remark, "...the joke's on you," to those critics.

Don't feel bad, however, since Lionel Ritchie appeared to be equally baffled by the colloquialism.

Rescuer should be congratulated, not sued

Editor:

It seems these days college students do not get enough recognition for what they do for the good of society and some of the unselfish acts they perform.

About three weeks ago a member of Pi Sigma Epsilon rescued a child from a frozen lake. This student risked personal safety and performed mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to keep the child alive.

To show their gratitude the parents of this child filed suit against the rescuer and another party who assisted on land. It seems to me that in such a situation where the alternative is death to the child, an individual should be thanking, not suing rescuers. This student should be congratulated for a job well done, not subjected to litigation.

police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending at 6:30 a.m. Monday:

- An ASU student was arrested early Monday morning in connection with driving while intoxicated, police said.
- James Michael Schultz was arrested after an officer stopped him for erratic driving.
- The officer spoke to Schultz, who police said appeared intoxicated. An intoxilyzer test revealed Schultz' blood alcohol level to be .236 percent.
- An ASU employee said four men tried to run her over in Lot 35 Sunday afternoon.
- The woman said she was riding her bicycle in the lot when a small white car tried to run her over.
- The woman was not injured. Police are investigating the incident.
- A man who said he was an escapee from a mental health institute was found lying in front of the main doors of McClintock Residence Hall early Sunday morning, police said.

Four women had called police earlier, complaining that a man followed them from Hayden Residence Hall to McClintock.
The women said the man had given them his identification card, and they recognized the man on the bench as the one who had followed them.
The man told the officer he had escaped from the Cherokee Mental Health Institute in Cherokee, Ind.
The officer called Cherokee Institute but was unable to verify the man as a former patient.
The man was warned of trespassing laws and told to leave campus.
•An ASU student was warned against shooting off fireworks Sunday evening at the Sigma Nu fraternity house, police said.

A complainant had called police reporting fireworks exploding behind the fraternity.
An officer found a student working on his car behind the house. The policeman saw a pack of fireworks in the open trunk of the car.
The student admitted lighting the fireworks. He was warned of the state law prohibiting fireworks.
•An ASU student was cited early Sunday morning in connection with driving with a suspended license, police said.
William R. Janisch was cited after an officer saw Janisch drive erratically and fail to stop for a flashing red light.
When the officer questioned Janisch, he discovered the student's license was suspended.
•An ASU student's white 1984 Honda motorcycle was stolen Friday afternoon in Lot 32, police said.

Official: ASU needs balance of qualified minority workers

By ROBIE KAKONGE
State Press

The focus of concern at ASU should not be employing more minorities but ensuring that qualified minorities are not excluded from the office or the classroom, an Affirmative Action official said.

Joseph Sena, assistant coordinator of the state university chapters of Affirmative Action, said ASU is "definitely understaffed in regards to minorities."

However, Sena said the University's goal should not be to balance the percentage of minorities in the work force.

"What we are most concerned with is making sure that people are not excluded from working at ASU because of their color or ethnic background," he said.

Currently, less than 14 percent (644 of 4,680) of ASU's current full-time work force are minorities, while only 12 percent (59 of 501) of ASU's administrative positions are filled by minorities.

And fewer than 10 percent (nine of 93) of University professors are minorities.

Meanwhile, more than 10 percent (3,745 of 36,288) of ASU's full-time students, excluding international students, are minorities.

To compare, 14 percent of UA's entire work force consisted of minorities.

The ASU Affirmative Action office has a tentative plan to address the Arizona Board of Regents at their April 24th meeting about balancing minority faculty and staff at state universities, Sena said.

Joyotpaul Chaudhuri, ASU associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said the University has taken an active role in recruiting minorities since ASU President J. Russell Nelson took office in 1981.

"Unlike other schools, who are taking a passive role on balancing their minority staff, faculty and students by waiting for the minorities to apply for the jobs, we are taking action," Chaudhuri said.

"We are conducting an aggressive search through several on-campus minority programs which assist in making sure that the minorities hired at ASU are qualified personnel to represent ASU's staff."

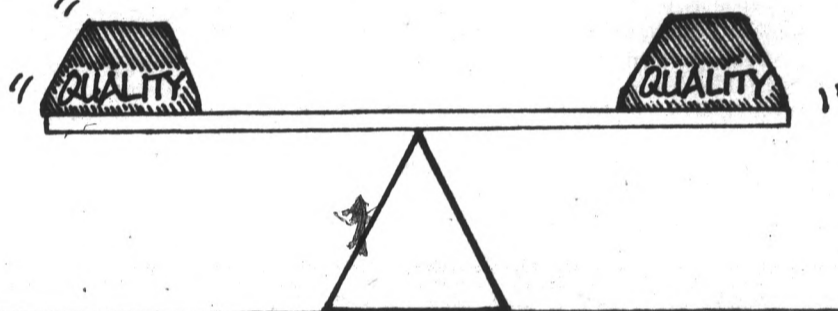

Chaudhuri said a number of campus organizations, such as the Chicano Study Center, contribute to attracting and retaining minorities.

"When minorities arrive at ASU, they tend to get lost in the crowd," he said. "The different programs help minorities to get involved by linking them to different organizations on campus that minorities would be interested in."

These programs also work closely with minority groups in Valley schools, Chaudhuri said.

Art Carter, ASU assistant dean of student life, said having more minority faculty members also would attract more minority students.

"This would also provide the minority students with more mentors," he said.

'Racist' lecturer fails to show, tensions rise at many schools

By the College Press Service
PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — When University of Pennsylvania students returned to campus a few weeks ago, Legal Studies lecturer Murray Dolfman wasn't there.

No one knows why Dolfman, whose presence has exacerbated racial tensions on the campus since he allegedly referred to black students as ex-slaves and made other questionable remarks in his class in 1984, did not show.

But even in his absence, students report "a huge amount of racial tension, a real lack of faith in the administration," and a feeling that "the administration will react to a crisis, but they won't prevent one."

Penn is not alone. Minority students on a startling number of campuses have complained, almost in unison, of escalating racial tensions in the last three months.

And in almost all cases, they claim administrators are less sensitive to their feelings of isolation.

Observers think it's because the Reagan administration no longer forces large institutions to push to hire and recruit minorities or to continue to integrate their campuses actively.

"People at schools who thought affirmative action was a nuisance use Reagan's lead to support them in not doing anything," says Robert Ethridge, affirmative action officer at Emory University in Atlanta and president of the American Association of Affirmative Action Administrators.

"And the president sets the tone on campus. Why should lower-level administrators care if he doesn't?" Ethridge asks.

Ethridge reports "more than just a few incidents" of college presidents demoting affirmative action officers.

For example, officers who once reported directly to the campus president now find their desks moved to more remote offices, and their once-direct lines to the president are now intercepted by two or three medium-level administrators.

"All of this indicates to the campus that the affirmative action office no longer has clout, that black concerns are no longer important," Ethridge says.

"It means you don't have the influence you once had, so lower level administrators say, 'we don't have to try, either.'"

Administrators still haven't responded, for instance, to University of Alabama Student Vice President John Merrill's disturbing survey showing that Alabama students still have "real racist feelings."

"They'll listen to it, but won't act on it until the turn of the century," Merrill says.

Frustrations with perceived administrative foot-dragging are near the boiling point at Texas, too, reports UT Black Student Alliance President Kevin Williams.

Black students, only three percent of the Austin campus' enrollment, daily feel isolated, Williams says, as they walk by "four or five buildings named after KKK members, a statue of Jefferson Davis, and another building named after a former UT president who said he'd never admit a black to this school."

Liberal arts educations provide useful outlook

By National On-Campus Report
 A well-rounded education prepares students for life, not merely for final exams, according to a study at Hood College.
 After four years of liberal arts learning, students are less interested in material gains, and place greater values on having a philosophy of life, participating in the community, promoting racial understanding and keeping up with current affairs.

 The positive effects of a liberal arts education were confirmed by comparing Hood's 1985 graduating seniors' survey responses to answers they gave to the same survey as incoming freshmen in 1981.

Sun Devils wrestle their way to the Pac-10 top

By JON WILEY
State Press

"I would consider us the favorites," said ASU wrestling head coach Bobby Douglas before he and the team took off for Sunday's Pac-10 Championships in Pullman, Wash.

And they performed like favorites; the team won the tournament for the second time in a row by a score of 86½. Placing second was Oregon State with a score of 80½. Stanford placed third, scoring 46½.

Washington State came in fourth place with 45½ points and Oregon came in a close fifth with 45 points.

In the 118-pound division, ASU's Jim Lefebvre placed first as he defeated Oregon's Robert Pelayo 15-4. At 126-pounds, Sun Devil Gary Bairos also placed first, defeating Oregon State's Rodney Hawthorne 6-4.

Stanford's Jeff Bradley took first place in the 134-pound division when he beat Oregon's Glenn Jarrett 8-2. ASU's Glenn McMinn placed third in the division by defeating OSU's Ronald Arnold 10-9. McMinn was also a wildcard qualifier for the NCAA Championships.

Scott Cardwell from OSU won the 142-pound division 16-0 on a technical fall over Washington State's Andre Taylor. Sun Devil Wayne Sharp placed third, defeating Stanford's Jeff Hazzard 10-3.

ASU's Adam Cohen, named outstanding wrestler at the end of the tournament, pinned OSU's Jeff Cardwell with 3:23 left in the match to capture the 150-pound division. In the 158-pound division, Sun Devil Jim Gressley took second place after losing to OSU's Marvin Feal 14-6.

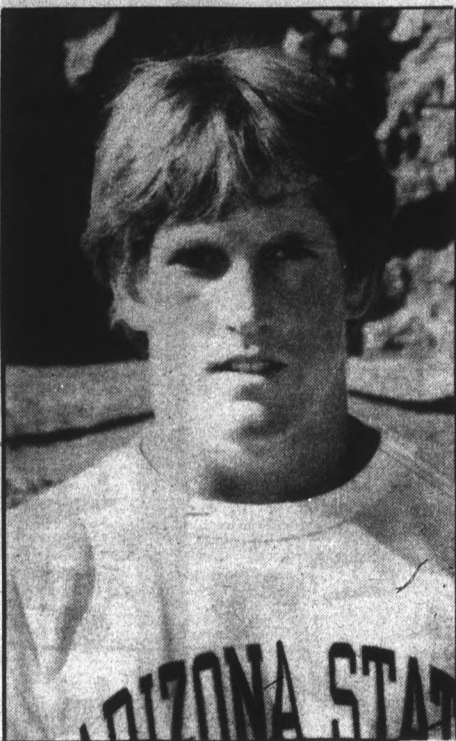

David Lee from Stanford won the 167-pound division when he defeated OSU's Pat Gibson 6-5. ASU's Don Frye took third in the division, defeating Oregon's Dan Martin 8-7.

Sun Devil John Ginther took second in the 177-pound division, losing to Oregon's Mike Harger 4-1. OSU's Jeff Smyth won the 190-pound division when he pinned WSU's Mike Sudduth with 2:34 left in the match.

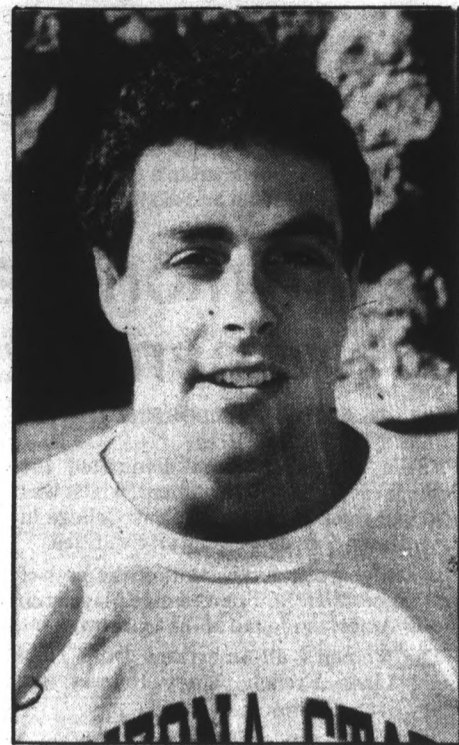

ASU's Dennis Roberts took fourth at 190 pounds when he lost to Stanford's Kurt Kassulke 7-1.

And wrapping up ASU's victory, Sun Devil Rocco Liace took second place in the heavyweight division, losing to WSU's Wendell Ellis 4-1.

ASU's first and second place finishers (Lefebvre, Bairos, Cohen, Gressley, Ginther and Liace) along with McMinn, the team's wildcard qualifier, will now be preparing for the NCAA Championships to be held in Iowa City March 13-15.

Apathy: the most common social disease at ASU

Bob Heiler
Asst. Sports Editor

Revenge is sweet. And the Sun Devil basketball team has a chance to let the whole campus enjoy the sensation. We play the U of A Sunday. The Cats.

You remember them. The same bunch of Tucson toilet scum who kept us out of Pasadena not so long ago. And a little longer ago. As a matter of fact, they've pulled that garbage twice in the last four years.

But we've finally got them where we want them. Now their fate is in our hands.

The Wildcats are leading the Pac-10 basketball standings. They've been tough to beat this year and will almost certainly earn an NCAA berth. But they haven't sewn up the Pac-10 championship yet.

Granted, a Pac-10 championship in basketball is not quite the same as a Rose Bowl bid. The stakes are not as high, either financially or in terms of prestige.

But the emotional effect is much the same. We have a chance to make the Cats feel as bad as we did when we wound up in the Holiday Bowl. We have a chance to make them understand what it is to have an intrastate rival ruin an otherwise great season.

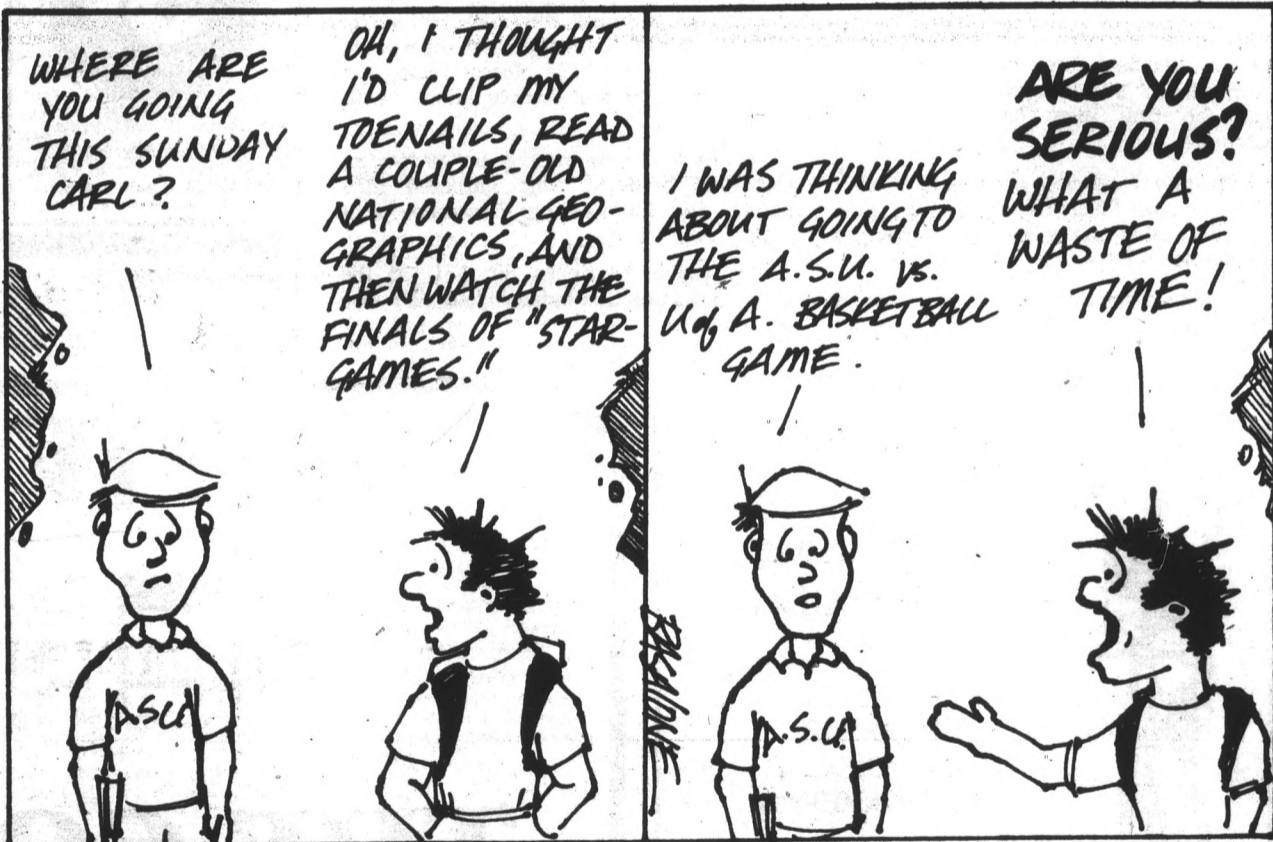

This is not an opportunity to be taken lightly. Especially if one hates the U of A with the vigor to be expected of all ASU sports fans. Making the existence of Tusconites unhappy is a noble calling indeed, and one that any Sun Devil worth his brimstone ought to be proud to answer.

Unfortunately, not everybody realizes the shot they're wasting. Because there are other things to think about in spring, because ASU isn't full of sports fans, because we have never supported our basketball team like we have the football program — who knows what the excuse is. But people just aren't paying attention to this golden opportunity to make the Cats feel lower than toejam.

The result of this apathy is disturbing indeed. There is a rumor around that more tickets have been sold in Tucson than here in Tempe for The Game. There will be more of those Southern vermin stinking up the UAC than Sun Devils to repel them.

I may wretch. The prospect of going to The Game and being outnumbered in our own Activity Center is nauseating indeed. I can't — I won't — believe the problem of support for the cagers has progressed that far. That is the makings of an epidemic.

Oh, it's always been bad. A few years ago, we had a team full of men who are now outstanding NBA players. Byron Scott, Alton Lister, Fat Lever — the names were all there. But even then, the team never sold out two games in a row. In fact, average attendance was only 5,178 — a dismal figure in a facility equipped for more than 14,000.

But if this campus actually is going to let the Wildcats buy more tickets and be more of a force in The Game than the home crowd, then the students here actually may be more worthy of contempt than even the Slime from the South.

I know, I know, it's only a game. The beautiful people of Tempe have more important things on their minds. But this is no minor point. Cosmopolites may look down their noses at sports and claim there is no real point to being an athlete, and even less to being a sports fan. But what is at stake here is far more than a basketball game.

One of the nicest things about sports is that they can function as a model for life. Concepts like courage and honor come into play on the courts and fields of athletic competition.

And there is definitely a point of honor at stake here. These creatures have spoiled the Sun Devils' plans once too often. They deserve to have their hides kicked all over the court. They deserve a taste of their own bitter medicine. In fact, in more ways than one, we owe it to them.

But the team can't do it alone. In fact, with the conditions ideal, the Devils still will have their work cut out for them. We just lost to Washington by two points, and the Devils played about as well as they are capable of. The Scumcats beat Washington once. The second time they met, The Cats humiliated the hapless Huskies.

And that is why there is a point of honor at stake. When the outlook is bleak, that's when the true and honorable fan stands by his team more than ever. That's the only time he's needed.

Observers of the sports world have always had disdain for the "fair-weather fan" for that precise reason. But at ASU, we can't manage to support the team even when the skies are cloudless.

The Devils showed a lot of heart in their gut-wrenching loss to Washington. The players have endured a difficult season and still have a shot to finish with a .500 record. But they can't be expected to have that kind of guts indefinitely when they are constantly surrounded — or rather, never surrounded — by people that don't care enough to come to The Game.

Tickets are still available for The Game. Hopefully, by game time, there will be more Devils in the stands than Wildcats. Hopefully, the student body at ASU will find it in them to remember the intrastate rivalry. Hopefully, the U of A will not be able to show us up in our own back yard.

If not, I may be forced to go back on a sacred vow. I may actually have to respect that ridiculous institution.

Devil baseball team continues to swing big bats

By BRAD HALVORSEN
State Press

For a few innings, it looked as though the ASU baseball team might letdown after Sunday's emotion-draining victory over UCLA.

But a slew of home runs and sharp relief pitching by Royal Clayton silenced any hopes Azusa Pacific had of upsetting the Sun Devils, who recorded a 16-4 victory at Packard Stadium Monday.

The two-game series concludes this afternoon at 2:30. ASU (19-6 overall, 2-1 Six-Pac) will send Jeff Sutter to the mound for his first appearance of the season.

Two Sun Devil errors gave Azusa a 4-3 lead going after 2½ innings. But an eight-run fourth inning, highlighted by Ted Dyson's grand slam and Bob Dombrowski's three-run home run, blew the game open.

"There wasn't much emotion going into the game," ASU coach Jim Brock said. "I think it helped us out that they got two runs in the first. That got us going."

"It's sort of a journeyman's type of game. They had a job to do and they went out and did it."

The Cougars, an NAIA team from California, entered the game with a 1-8-1 record. They committed six errors, including two wild throws over first base.

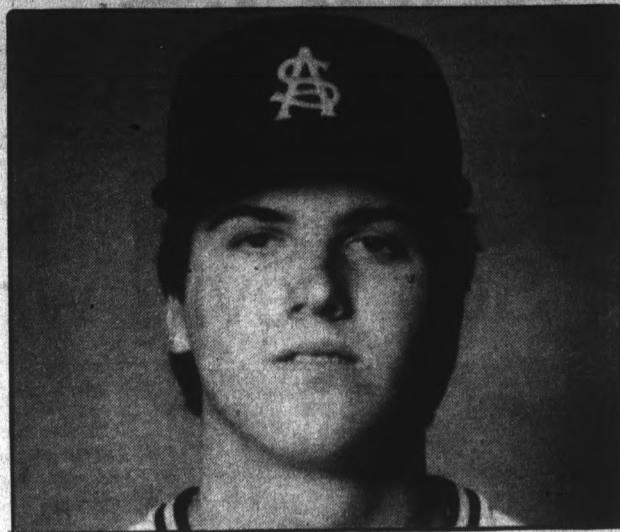

The Devils scored in each of the first six innings, but none could match the fourth-inning onslaught. ASU sent 13 batters to the plate, knocked out two Azusa pitchers, racked up five hits and took advantage of two Cougar errors in the inning.

The following inning, ASU catcher Bob Dombrowski nailed a three-run homer over the leftfield fence to give ASU a 15-4 advantage. The Devils added their final run in the sixth inning on Roger Smith's RBI double.

Royal Clayton, the Devils long-range reliever, raised his record to 2-1 pitching 5½ innings of shutout ball. The junior righthander faced no more than four batters in each of the final five innings.

"I'm feeling pretty good now," said Clayton, who had been erratic earlier this season. "My slider's working better now, and I got the ball moving again."

Clayton said he felt healthy Monday after having to leave Saturday's game against UCLA because of tendinitis of the left knee.

Badminton team wins 5 titles at tournament in Bryn Mawr

By ANDREW DELORENZO
State Press

ASU's badminton team dominated the Collegiate National Tournament, which was held last weekend at Bryn Mawr College in Bryn Mawr, Pa., by winning all five titles.

In the process of devastating the rest of the competition, ASU placed nine players on the all-American squad at the tourney.

The women's all-Americans were Nina Lolk, Linda French, Tracy Holmes and Mary Fran Hughes.

Chris Jogis, Benny Lee, Karl Knudsen, Sanjay Malde and Tom Carmichael made up the ASU men's team.

Leading ASU's attack on the rest of the nation was Denmark native Lolk, who defeated reigning champion Joy Kitzmiller of Stanford 11-3 and 11-7 in women's singles competition.

Kitzmiller has been a thorn in the side of ASU for the last three years by winning every singles title in sight. Nina's victory was the first ever for ASU against Kitzmiller.

"This match was very exciting to watch," ASU Assistant Kathy Gonzales said. "Nina just controlled the game and outplayed (Kitzmiller) for the title."

The men's singles title was retained by ASU's Jogis, who defeated his doubles partner Lee, with scores of 7-15, 15-6 and 15-3. The Sun Devils completely dominated this event with all of the semi-finalists hailing from ASU.

The women's doubles competition featured another all ASU battle with the team of Lolk/French defeating a fellow Devil team of Hughes/Holmes 15-5 and 15-5.

The men's doubles had ASU's Jogis/Lee combination beating Paul Rubin, from Cal-State Claremont and Peng Ahoong Chung from Delaware, 15-6 and 15-2.

Mixed doubles again were dominated by ASU as the team of Lee/French defeated Jogis/Hughes 15-2, 3-15, and 15-12.

"We are very pleased with the effort the team put forth this weekend," Gonzales said. "We worked hard and I'm happy with the results."

ASU outdistanced the competition by large margins in team play, with the women totaling 71 points. The closest team was Stanford with 23, and Temple followed with 20.

The men's team racked up 58 points, thrashing Stanford, who gathered nine points, and followed by Flossmore with eight.

The season continues for ASU at the California State Championships in San Jose March 29-30.
