

Court mandate halts allotment of bylaws

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

Two Associated Students executive officers are questioning an ASASU Supreme Court mandate prohibiting the distribution of ASASU's bylaws until three articles are deleted.

The supreme court ruled late last week that the $100 and $500 campaign spending limits and the $20 deposit requirement for ASASU candidates violate freedom of speech as interpreted through the U.S. Constitution.

But Executive Vice President Bridget Shelton said the court is not allowed to issue a permanent injunction if the case does not involve a violation of the ASASU bylaws or constitution.

In its decision, the court imposed a four-week deadline in which ASASU must delete the "unconstitutional" bylaws because it did not adhere to a similar decision rendered by the court in 1981.

Sen. Ed Rubacha, College of Law, said the court does not have enforcement powers and cannot require ASASU to delete the articles.

According to the bylaws, the supreme court may issue an order requiring an officer or any person holding a position under the jurisdiction of the court to perform a specific act.

But the court is prohibited from taking action "against any individual where the issue arose from an action of a legislative or executive body."

The spending limitation and deposit requirement became part of the bylaws in 1977.

Sen. Mark Isenberg, College of Liberal Arts, said an attempt was made last year to restrict the court's jurisdiction to interpreting alleged violations of the ASASU bylaws and constitution, not of the U.S. Constitution.

Shelton said the senate might discuss the bylaw conflict tonight at its meeting in the MU Mohave Room 222 at 5:30 p.m.

Currently, the ASASU staff is not distributing the bylaws but they are available on reserve in the office, she said.

"We're at a standstill right now," Shelton said.

She said President Chris Cummiskey attempted to delete the three "unconstitutional" articles Friday but Shelton and LeeAnne Seall, activities vice president, questioned whether an executive officer has the power to change the bylaws.

According to the bylaws, only the senate can make bylaw changes.

Certification process condensed by new program

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

The College of Education has launched a new condensed teacher preparation program that cuts the certification process from two years to one, making it the only such program in the western United States.

Nancy Coolege, the college's ombudsman, said the program is designed to meet the rising local and national demand for educators.

"What we've done is streamline the courses required by the state for certification," Coolege said. "The program will enable qualified persons to get through the teacher prep in about half the normal time, or about one year."

Applicants for the program must hold a bachelor's degree from an accredited institution, have a GPA of at least 2.5, and majored in an area taught in elementary or high schools.

For certification in elementary education, a 45 credit hour program must be completed, while certification for middle and high school teaching requires 30 hours of course work.

The program can be completed in a shorter period because several classes have been combined and the material is repeated less, she said.

"We expect students in this program to be more mature and capable," Coolege said. "They should be able to handle an accelerated pace of study."

She added that a unique aspect of the program is its emphasis on the recruiting of retired military personnel.

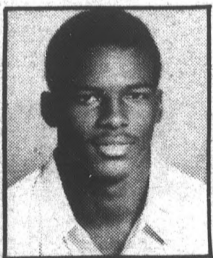

"Often military people coming out of the service are looking at their career options," said Coolege. "Many of them have bachelor degrees, and experience in training and teaching in the military."

"This program is perfect for them."

Course work in the program, which currently has 300 students enrolled, stresses the design of curriculum, evaluation of student-learning programs and management of students.

According to statistics provided by the college, education programs at Arizona universities are providing less than half of the teachers needed in English, math and science.

University fund-raiser successful; 1988 goal raises to $100 million

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

The success of ASU's national fund-raising campaign has prompted the University to raise its 1988 goal of $75 million in private donations to $100 million, President J. Russell Nelson said Monday.

"We've already raised $61 million, and we still have two years left to go in our five-year national campaign," Nelson said. "Because of the outstanding progress, we've decided to raise the goal an extra $25 million."

A national campaign for private funds was started three years ago when the Board of Regents and the Arizona Legislature encouraged ASU to raise more money in gifts and donations.

"ASU needs to become competitive with the best public universities," Nelson said. "However, there is not enough state support to achieve that goal."

"We changed our attitudes about fund-raising and decided to aggressively seek contributions to the University to help make the difference between a good university and a great university."

Nelson said the money will provide scholarships, fellowships for graduate students, endowments for faculty positions, selective programs and some new facilities.

"This is an important and ambitious undertaking," he said. "I'm delighted with the progress so far."

"I have no doubt we'll be able to meet our goal by the end of 1988."

The Campaign for ASU is a joint effort of ASU and the National Cabinet, a non-profit corporation that receives and manages gifts to the University.

Lonnie Ostrom, ASU development director, said there are 19 employees full-time employees working with individuals and corporations who are interested in donating.

"We should have no problem meeting our goal," he said. "I believe people give because their heart tells them to give."

Ostrom said some of the money already has gone to the College of Engineering, which has received $13.5 million of a projected $15.9 million from the campaign. The college is the chief benefactor of the campaign.

He also said that other prime benefactors include chairs and professorships, which has received $2.2 million of a projected $7 million, and the College of Business, which has received $1.4 million of a projected $4.7 million.

Robert Davies, a National Cabinet member, said he would not be surprised if ASU went beyond the $100 million mark in 1988.

"We've been working with the corporations, but now we're about to begin our campaign to solicit our alumni," Davies said. "We could easily go over our goal."

Cabinet Chairman Robert Bulla said that in addition to cash gifts, ASU also has received several gifts of property.

The real estate includes a donation by Arizona Public Service land for the ASU golf course and the Sundome in Sun City West.

Tucson paper names new publisher, editor

By The Associated Press

TUCSON — C. Donald Hatfield has been named editor and publisher of the Tucson Citizen, it was announced Monday.

Hatfield, 51, was executive editor and publisher of the Huntington (W.Va.) Herald-Dispatch. The Citizen and the Herald-Dispatch are Gannett papers.

Hatfield also was named a vice president of Gannett West with responsibilities for the Gannett newspapers in El Paso, Texas, and Santa Fe, N.M., and the USA TODAY production facility in Chandler.

He was regional vice president of Gannett East with responsibilities for six newspapers.

The appointment, effective immediately, was announced by Gary Watson, president of Gannett's community newspaper division.

Hatfield replaces Gerald Garcia Jr., who announced Wednesday his resignation from the Citizen.

Garcia's appointment as publisher of the Bryan-College Station (Texas) Eagle, a Harte-Hanks Communications Inc. newspaper, was announced Thursday.

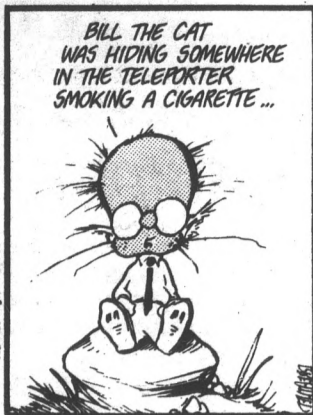

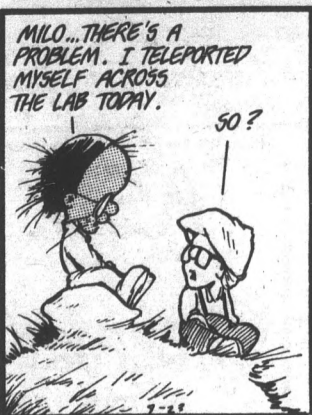

Garcia will be "a tough act to follow. He was popular and very committed to this newspaper," Hatfield said.

"The Tucson Citizen is known in and out of Gannett as a good newspaper," he added. "There's not that much that needs fixing."

Hatfield is a graduate of Marshall University in Huntington, W.Va., and is married to Sandra Soto Hatfield. They have two sons and a daughter.

Hatfield had been editor and publisher of the Herald-Dispatch since 1982.

Series to offer students plan for healthy lifestyle

By MICHAEL BURGESS
State Press

ASU's Health Dimensions will kick off its fall "wellness" series Wednesday, the program director said.

Billie Lindsey said Monday this will be a first program of its kind for ASU.

"We have had a lot of health education classes in the past but this will be the first series of presentations," she said.

The hour presentation begins at noon in the Student Health Center, Room 158, with a discussion about "Wellness and Lifestyle."

The presentation will include a personal health assessment and a film on stress, nutrition, exercise and habits.

This will be the first in a series of eight presentations running until Nov. 19.

Other series presentations will include topics such as stress management, fitness, dieting and nutrition.

Lindsey believes students have a need and an interest in a healthful lifestyle.

"There is an increasing consciousness of students with their own health," she said. "Many college students are at the point in their lives where they are creating their own lifestyles."

"We want to provide strategies for them to live a healthy lifestyle."

Lindsey, a health and physical educator, came to ASU in June from the University of Iowa where she headed a similar program called Health Iowa.

She has replaced and expanded the Health Center's Physical, Intellectual, Emotional, Spiritual (P.I.E.S) program with Health Dimensions.

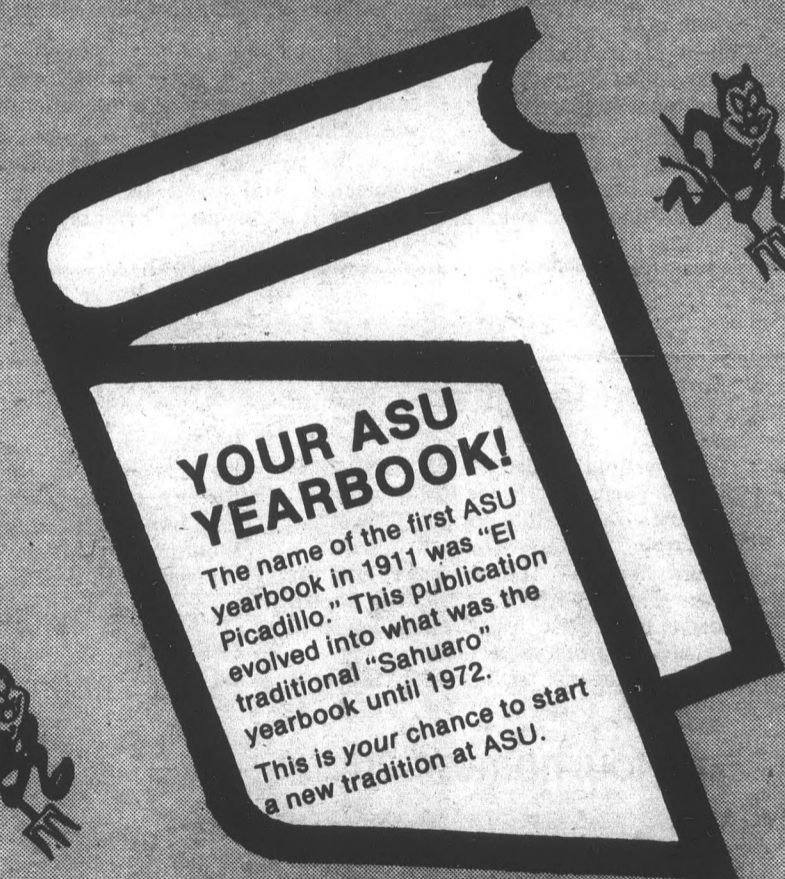

"Overall, college students are a very healthy population because they are physically active," she said. "But they are also deciding whether to drink, smoke or take drugs."

Something completely different

It is late on a Sunday night. There is nothing on television except "Fight Back!" with David Horowitz.

Wouldn't it be nice if our own Public Broadcasting Service affiliate, KAET-TV Channel 8, had something that always attracted an audience?

We are talking, of course, about "Monty Python's Flying Circus."

Need!

The late-night bunch has been pondering too long without the spoofs and comedy performed by Michael Palin, Terry Jones, John Cleese, Eric Idle and Graham Chapman.

KAET-TV always had the reputation of airing these hilarious episodes on Sunday nights.

Students forgot about Chemistry 104, English 345 and Marketing 300 for just 30 minutes a week and laughed themselves sick.

I don't like sex on the teley; you keep falling off.

However, with major cutbacks and loss of revenue from PBS, some programs had to be pulled from the airwaves and replaced with cheaper shows. It is understandable that economic feasibility is a major factor in influencing what appears on television, but from the way students at this campus talk, Monty Python is extremely popular.

Sometimes, students go on ad nauseum reciting lines from the series itself, as well as "Monty Python and the Holy Grail," "Life of Brian" and "The Meaning of Life."

I took the liberty of examining this bird once I got it home, and I found that the only reason it had been sitting on its perch in the first place was that it had been nailed there.

We are not asking for much. But "Monty Python's Flying Circus" is a Valley favorite and should be returned to Channel 8 as soon as possible.

If Monty Python doesn't make it back to Phoenix airwaves, drastic action should be taken, but KAET managers probably won't worry. It is not like they are expecting the Spanish Inquisition.

Nobody expects the Spanish Inquisition! Give the general manager of Channel 8 the comfy chair!

Bicycle problems disrupt harmony on campus

Anyone who has attended ASU for at least one day knows the bike situation at this fine University. It is the danger zone of Tempe, Ariz.

Every semester, the State Press receives at least one letter containing a gripe about the bike paths and why the bikers don't use them. It's an old subject that gains new life and meaning with every incoming class. But it's not just the paths. There are dozens of little gripes out there just waiting to jump out.

I'm going to attempt to present the facts to spark some action out there.

J. Russell Nelson — pay attention.

Richard Landreth — pay attention, too. There's a bit in here for everyone.

The most common gripe comes from the ASU pedestrians. They claim that if bikers would ride on the designated bike paths, everything would be just peachy.

But please note that this is a prime example of a two-way gripe. Bikers have been known to complain that pedestrians walk on the bike paths. Just the other day, a State Press reporter came from class and said he was verbally abused by a pedestrian he accidentally ran into while riding on the bike path. Who's playing boss? The pedestrian is nearly flattened by fault of her own, and she dares to pin it on a biker? They yell at us and we yell right back.

It is necessary to mention that this problem has become even worse this semester because of the increase of students.

Amy Frischknecht
Asst. Managing Editor

It would be ideal if ASU could really expand to accommodate all of us, but that's another column.

The root of this problem is the bike paths themselves. I am a part-time bike commuter and speaking from experience, the problem is simple to define. The paths don't go anywhere! You can be cruising along a path and all of a sudden, it ends. Now you find yourself to be the root of the problem because you're in the middle of a few hundred angry students trying to get to class.

The solution is just as easy to define. Why don't we construct bike paths that connect? Wasn't there some money allotted just for this purpose not too long ago?

It would be great to see the College of Architecture and Environmental Design take on this task and treat it as a class assignment. I would trust a skilled student more than a confused administrator.

Now, it is time for the newest gripe to hit campus. Bike registration, excuse me? This just adds to the confusion and complete insanity that causes students to look at administrators in a peculiar way.

Oh, Mr. Landreth, we never knew anarchy was such a great form of government.

If it's not one hassle it's another. These administrators seem to just love tormenting themselves with more work than is really necessary, while at the same time, draining money or valuable time from the students.

I've heard mixed reactions from students about bike registration, and none of them were very positive. One student told me that it would be over her dead body that a parking sticker would be plastered on her $400 bike.

I honestly do not see the point. Just because a bike has a registration sticker from ASU on it doesn't make it a lesser target for bike snatchers. Besides, many owners have their bike already registered with the Tempe Police. It may not be the most effective system, but it seems to be working for the majority of students.

It is absolutely ludicrous to suppose that bikers, pedestrians and administrators cannot peacefully co-exist at ASU.

Gripes about bike paths and the people who ride them will come and go forever, or until some inventor finds a better way for students to travel.

As far as bike paths are concerned, let's get them connected. And about the bike registration, well, let's consider it a mountain of red tape we don't want to tangle with.

Letters

Women's services ineffective

Editor:

As senators, we are extremely concerned that students received the wrong impression concerning the elimination of the Women's Services Department from Associated Students. It is important to understand that the senate is not turning its back on the needs of women studies. What we have done is to eliminate a department that was no longer serving those needs. All of the programs sponsored by Women's Services are currently being duplicated by other campus departments, clubs or organizations.

Frankly, Women's Services has not operated effectively since 1981 when, according to the director's records, 1,709 students attended the programming. Attendance has since steadily declined, with several programs being canceled due to a lack of interest. In 1985, only 206 students attended Women's Services programs. When Vice President LeeAnne Seall contacted three previous directors of the department, all of them agreed that the department is no longer feasible. As with any other budgetary matter, we considered many other alternatives, both in committee and before the full senate, before coming to the final recommendation. For example, we discussed the possibility of putting the department under a probationary or warning period, reducing the allocation or bringing the needs before the Select Committee on Student Affairs. The fact is that 93 percent of the $6,426 had gone for director's salaries and advertising — only 7 percent went to programming. Even with such a large amount of the funds going to promote the programs, students support for the Women's Services Department was still absent.

ASASU stands firmly committed to effectively serving the needs of all students and not wasting student fees on an ineffective department.

Satire a la Ritter

Editor:

I am writing in defense of State Press editorial cartoonist Mike Ritter who has been criticized of late for his irreverent, bold style. Letters from oversensitive readers like Mr. Thorsen have errantly characterized Ritter's work as racist, whereas back East, his cartoons would be regarded as "biting social commentary."

Must Arizonans such as Mr. Thorsen continue to perpetuate the image of backwardness and narrow-mindedness that Easterners have of them? So what if Ritter's commentary is slightly off-color and happens to step on a few toes? A thought-provoking editorial page is supposed to ruffle some feathers.

Loosen up readers; the cutting edge is the place to be.

Pool tournament kudos

Editor:

For the past four years, I have seen an event come and go from ASU without your paper writing about it. I am referring to the Jack White Pool Tournament and Clinic.

Jack White, the sponsor and director of this event, visits our campus every fall, as well as many other nationwide college campuses. It seems to me quite an honor to have a professional pool player take time from his busy schedule to visit us.

The first couple of days of the week, Mr.

White holds pool clinics, where men and women get advice and tips for a better game. Then he has a tournament where students play each other for trophies and prizes. Finally, on Friday, Mr. White presents first, second and third prizes to the winners of the tournament, and then he exhibits some very impressive trick shots.

I would personally like to thank Jack White for his advice and for his time.

Computers growing vital to education

Student deals available from University, stores

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

If you have wanted a personal computer but just could not afford it, this may be your chance. Computers are now cheaper than ever, especially for students, the director of academic computer services said.

"Students can get excellent deals on computers," Neil Armann said. "By purchasing through the school or through a discount house, students can save between 35 to 40 percent."

Armann said ASU has access to six different computer vendors. Discount prices for computers usually range between $800 and $1500.

"We carry everything from IBM to Macintosh to Zenith," said John Finnan, a microcomputing specialist for the ASU Academic Computing Services.

"We have extensive deals for all qualified students."

Finnan said students must be taking at least seven credit hours to qualify for the discount.

"We're trying to give students the opportunity to buy a computer at the best price possible," he said.

Armann said he believes computers have become an integral part of education.

"We living in a computerized society," he said. "Computers are becoming almost as important to education as the library."

Finnan said the use of ASU computers is also growing at an increasing rate. More than 12,000 computer accounts were issued last semester.

"In addition to using our computers for homework, any student can also use our software and data processing," he said.

"We provide extensive facilities at no cost. Many students students find they don't need to buy a computer."

Armann said discount houses also offer "good deals" on computers.

"If students shop around, they're bound to find a computer in their price range," he said.

Tom Perrine, the manager of electronics of Target retail store in Mesa, said there are several discounted computers on the market with prices ranging between $699 to $1,999.

"I think the computers are a great deal, especially for students," Perrine said. "If you bought an IBM, you would spend around $2,000. The discounted computers save you a lot of money, and they're IBM and Apple compatible."

Democrats claim 3/4 of Schulz' petition signatures invalid

By The Associated Press

PHOENIX — As many as three-quarters of the signatures filed to nominate Phoenix businessman Bill Schulz as an independent candidate for governor appear to be invalid, state Democratic Party officials claimed Monday.

But a Schulz spokesman predicted that about 95 percent of the more than 30,000 signatures would be validated, and party officials said they had not decided whether to mount a formal challenge by Friday's deadline.

Schulz needs 10,259 valid signatures to make the Nov. 4 general election ballot to run against Democratic nominee Carolyn Warner and Republican nominee Evan Mecham.

His supporters filed petitions bearing more than 30,000 signatures, but Glenn Davis, the state Democratic Party's executive director, said at a news conference here Monday that about 75 percent of the signatures checked so far appeared to be invalid.

Davis, party worker Wayne Doty and other officials said some signatures should be tossed out because the signers did not appear to be registered voters, while others should be thrown out because petition circulators were not registered.

In addition, Doty said, at least one petition appeared to have every signature written in the same handwriting.

Davis and Doty said the 75 percent figure was based on a spot-check. They said they could not estimate how many of the signatures they had checked, but Doty said it was "closer to 100 than 1,000."

The number of invalid signatures could go higher when party workers see if signers voted in the Republican or Democratic primary earlier this month.

State law requires signatures to come from people who are registered voters but did not vote in a primary or sign a petition for any other gubernatorial candidate.

"It's a very large percentage" of signatures that seem to be invalid, said state party chairman Sam Goddard. "There was a great deal of very sloppy procedure in getting this accomplished."

Goddard said Democrats were considering an effort to knock Schulz of the ballot to help Warner as well as other Democrats running for other offices in November.

Having Schulz on the ballot would make it "a lot more difficult to raise money" for Warner and could bring more Republicans to the polls, a development that could hurt the underticket, he said.

But Schulz spokesman Mark Regan said the system set up to gather signatures had been designed to minimize errors by asking would-be signers a series of questions beforehand.

"You're going to have some in there that are going to wash out — no question — maybe 5 percent they could have problems with," he said. "We went through a pretty thorough screening process not only with circulators but with the phone people in here."

Volunteers are generally considered more reliable than paid circulators, and Regan said about half the signatures were gathered by volunteers.

"We don't put any credence at all in the concerns" that Democratic Party officials raised, he added.

Muslim leader stresses self-improvement, minority unity

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — Black Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan, known best for his alleged anti-semitic remarks, has launched his own line of shampoo, soap and deodorant here, telling his followers they could bring themselves out of poverty by selling the products.

The products, marketed under the name of Clean and Fresh, will be distributed to members of Farrakhan's Nation of Islam Church to sell for a commission.

He announced the sale of his products Sunday during his speech at the Phoenix Symphony Hall. Farrakhan followers Monday did not return phone calls about Farrakhan's product sales.

Farrakhan, best known for his alleged racist remarks and financial ties to Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, also confirmed reports he is moving from his Chicago residence to a house in the 2100 block of E. Violet Drive, in Phoenix.

Farrakhan, flanked by white-clad female security guards during his two-and-a-half hour speech, said by selling the products, Phoenix blacks could become self-supporting and more of a force in the Valley.

"Economic development must become a reality, and we cannot look to government to do it," Farrakhan said. "FDR started welfare as a medicine, but when you keep a medicine going beyond its time, it begins to kill the patient."

Dressed in a blue suit and his trademark bow tie, Farrakhan told about 1,800 predominantly black audience members that the products will also help them become better Muslims.

'When I speak to the Jews, I don't speak to them with hatred.'

"You have to wash and be clean if you want to come out of this devil condition," he said.

He added he also plans to market his own line of household cleaners within the next few months.

A soft-spoken man who spent time joking with his followers, Farrakhan also called for unification between Hispanics, blacks and Native Americans.

"Our unity is more important than the things that keep us divided," he said.

"When people struggle to become one, there is joy and peace in that union. Humanity should no longer be divided in its joy and peace."

Speaking on "Self-improvement — The Basis of Community Development," Farrakhan asked Phoenix residents to build character rather than buildings.

"Unless we build people, unless the human potential . . . is developed, the man in his undeveloped state will destroy the magnificent buildings he has erected," Farrakhan said.

Of his alleged anti-Semitic views, Farrakhan said: "When I speak to the Jews, I don't speak to them with hatred. I am concerned for them. I am saying what they are doing to the Palestinians is wrong.

"Jewish mothers would tell you when you are wrong. I am like her. But Brother Farrakhan is black. I don't look like a Jewish mother, and I am better by that."

He said he also does not think of whites with "malice or hatred," but added, "You have desired to be the center of life of all other peoples of the world.

"White folk, you are not the center. You have to take your place. Your desire to be the center has ruined you.

"It is childishness that produces racism," he said. "Chinese say it is time for the slanted-eyed people to rule. Mexicans say 'no, no, no. It's tortilla time.' These are children."

Farrakhan also condemned sexism as childish and told women not to allow their husbands to control them.

"When a man dresses you up like a piece of meat, and you don't care, (you are) nothing but a piece of meat for a man to look at and measure."

ASU West slates construction of library, entrance for Oct. 1

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

Initial construction will begin by Oct. 1 on the $19.6 million library and main entrance gate at ASU West, a branch campus official said Monday.

Richard Eribes, assistant vice president for facilities and planning for ASU West, said the four-story brick building with limestone banding will be constructed in two phases. When phase two is completed, the library will cover 200,000 square feet and hold 334,000 volumes.

The scheduled completion date for phase one is Sept. 21, 1987.

Eribes said Nielsen Construction Company of San Diego was the low bidder for construction of the first phase, which will consist of 95,100 square feet of the library and the main entrance to the campus.

"The contract is scheduled to be signed on Sept. 26," Eribes said. "Once the contract is signed they (Nielsen) have five days to break ground. So we're looking at somewhere in the neighborhood of Oct. 1 (for groundbreaking ceremonies)."

Eribes said the library will be the first building to be constructed on the West campus, located at 4701 W. Thunderbird Road in Glendale.

"All we have done right now is some major landscaping work and a mile-long utility tunnel," he said.

Eribes said the library will feature an electronic communication network. The network will make more materials available through computerized access to libraries on the main campus in Tempe, community colleges and other libraries.

"We're still working on what the final attributes of the system will be," he said. "But it will help us to communicate with the Tempe libraries more quickly and efficiently."

A temporary library facility, serving current ASU West students, is located at 4510 N. 37th Ave.

Eribes said class space will not be available on the West campus until the 1988-89 academic year.

The first phase is expected to accommodate 10,000 people, and the second phase will raise the occupancy to 20,000.

ASU's current library system in Tempe contains more than 1.7 million volumes, 1.6 million microform units and 20,000 periodical and serial subscriptions.

ASU West is an upper-level branch of the Tempe campus. More than 200 courses are currently offered at several temporary facilities in the Northwest Valley.

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 6:30 a.m. Monday:

- A mauve Buick car received $1,500 in damages after another vehicle hit it in Lot 59 and left the scene, police said.
- Dennis A. Luz, 20, an ASU student, was arrested at 717 Alpha Drive for criminal damage, police said.

He thrashed on the car of a fellow Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity member, causing $180 in damages, and tried to run away from police who responded to the call, police said.

After he was caught, he was booked for criminal damages at the Tempe Police Department and released on his own recognizance.

•John M. Quinn, 21, an ASU student, was arrested on Cady Mall for reckless driving and fleeing from a police officer after he led police on a chase through the campus on his Honda motorcycle, police said. He was booked into Tempe jail and released on his own recognizance.

•Police escorted a student who was "noticeably intoxicated" from the football game Saturday night to the north end zone, where he was turned over to East Valley Counseling Service, police said.

Police received "numerous complaints" from spectators about the student's behavior and after talking with the student called for psychological help rather than arrest him, police said.

•A glass door, valued at $175, was broken at the Cholla Apartments while the student was gone from the room, police said.

•A Timex woman's wrist watch with a black leather band and gold trimming, valued at $50, was reported stolen from the seventh floor hallway of Palo Verde East Residence Hall, where it was left unattended, police said.

—LAUREN MILLETTE

Tempe police report

The following incidents were reported by Tempe police for the period ending midnight Sunday:

•A man exposed himself to two elementary school children at the 1000 block of S. Evergreen on Sept. 20, police said.

The children were picking flowers by the side of the road when they were approached by the man, who was driving an old model white two-door car with white interior and the letters KLCM painted on the side in faded red paint.

The man asked to see the flowers, but after the victims approached and handed him one he refused to return it.

He then unbuckled his pants and exposed himself.

Police describe the man as caucasian, 20 years of age, with a slight mustache.

•An ASU Sahuaro Hall resident was cited for being in possession of an altered ID on Sept. 17, police said.

An officer apprehended the student near the corner of Rural Road and Apache Boulevard for having expired license plates on his motorcycle and for failing to wear a helmet.

While examining the student's drivers license, the officer noticed that the date of birth seemed to have been tampered with.

The student initially claimed that "a truck had run over it," but upon further questioning he admitted that he had altered the license.

Police said the student was issued three citations and released.

•Two employees of Walker Research, 4655 S. Lakeshore, became ill after drinking tampered liquids while on a break Sept. 21, police said.

The victims purchased the drinks at a local fast food restaurant, consumed some, and then placed them in the company's break room refrigerator.

An unidentified substance found in the drinks was sent to the Department of Public Safety lab for analysis.

Tracy Barberie (left), Tammy Webb and Regina Stahl prepare for a point. The team beat USC, but lost to UCLA this weekend, making its record 4-1.

Devil spikers on right track despite season's first loss

By STEVE BRENNAN
State Press

Despite a tough loss to UCLA Sunday night, the ASU volleyball team is right on target for where it wants to be, according to Coach Debbie Brown.

"We really started playing the way we are capable of," Brown said. "I don't think the loss has set us back at all."

The Sun Devils, who defeated USC three games to one on Saturday, fell to the Bruins in four games (13-15, 15-0, 12-15, 10-15), despite dominating them on the statistics sheet.

"We played well," she said. "I have the confidence that we can beat them over here, and the girls should too."

The loss puts ASU in second place in the Pac-10 behind UCLA, and Brown said the Sun Devils are still definitely in the race for the championship.

"We have a legitimate shot at winning the Pac-10," she said. "As long as we continue to get better each game. I am anxious to play them again. We have a lot of matches to play, and there are sure to be upsets along the way, so who knows what might happen."

ASU will play the Bruins again on Oct. 31 in the University Activity Center.

Brown said there are areas the Sun Devils need to work on.

"The weakest part of our game is our blocking," she said. "We'll work on that in practice this week. We also still need to work on our serving."

After losing a close first game, the Sun Devils destroyed the Bruins in the second, 15-0. The two teams played close the next two games, but UCLA came out on top, 15-12 and 15-10.

'We have a legitimate shot at winning the Pac-10. As long as we continue to better each game.'

— Debbie Brown

"The first game began at a very fast pace," Brown said. "I wasn't sure if we could keep it up for four or five games, but we did."

"The second game we played really well, we were putting pressure on them and we got some good plays, but they just scored the most points in the last two."

"They didn't do anything fancy," she said. "Their play in the middle was more effective than the outside, though."

Valentina Vega led the Sun Devils with 30 kills, followed by Tammy Webb with 19. Lisa Ettesvold led the Bruins with 21. ASU dominated the Bruins in total kills, 85-79, and in hitting percentage, .317 to .291.

ASU defeated the USC Trojans on Saturday night in four games; 15-2, 15-8, 9-15, 15-8.

"We didn't play as well against USC," Brown said, "but we won."

USC hitter Nancy Hillman led both teams with 14 kills, while Christy Nore topped the Sun Devils with 9.

The weekend's action puts the Sun Devils at 4-1 overall and 3-1 in conference play. ASU will play its next match at home on Thursday night against Illinois State in Physical Education Building East.

Sun Devil fever: it just might prove fatal for some

Jay Taylor

Sports Analysis Editor

If ASU football continues at its current pace, I will be dead by midseason.

I may just be getting older, but my body doesn't hold up as well as it used to after a weekend of celebrating the Sun Devils' latest victory.

The scary thing is, they are showing all the signs of sending me to an early grave. But what a way to go.

This year's defense is the best since the 1982 squad which has four members currently playing in the NFL: Paul Moyer, Mike Richardson, Jim Jeffcoat and Vernon Maxwell.

This year's defense has speed. Lots of speed. And they hit people. Hard. And often.

The defense also has depth, and is getting more this week with the return of second-team all-Pac-10 nose guard Dan Saleaumua and outside linebacker Fred Gaddis.

The defensive backs are doing a good job of shutting down the pass. Anthony Parker, Darrin Willis, Robby Boyd and Eric Allen have yet to be burned by a long pass and have kept opposing quarterbacks in check. They have also done a good job on run support, closing off the outside running game.

And while we're talking about what is working for the Devils, how about those special teams?

Last year Coach John Cooper said his special teams didn't win a single game for ASU. That was corrected in the season opener this year. But for an encore, Anthony Parker returned four punts for a school-record 148 yards and a touchdown Saturday against SMU. What will it be this week, a fake field goal pass to an usher coming out of the stands?

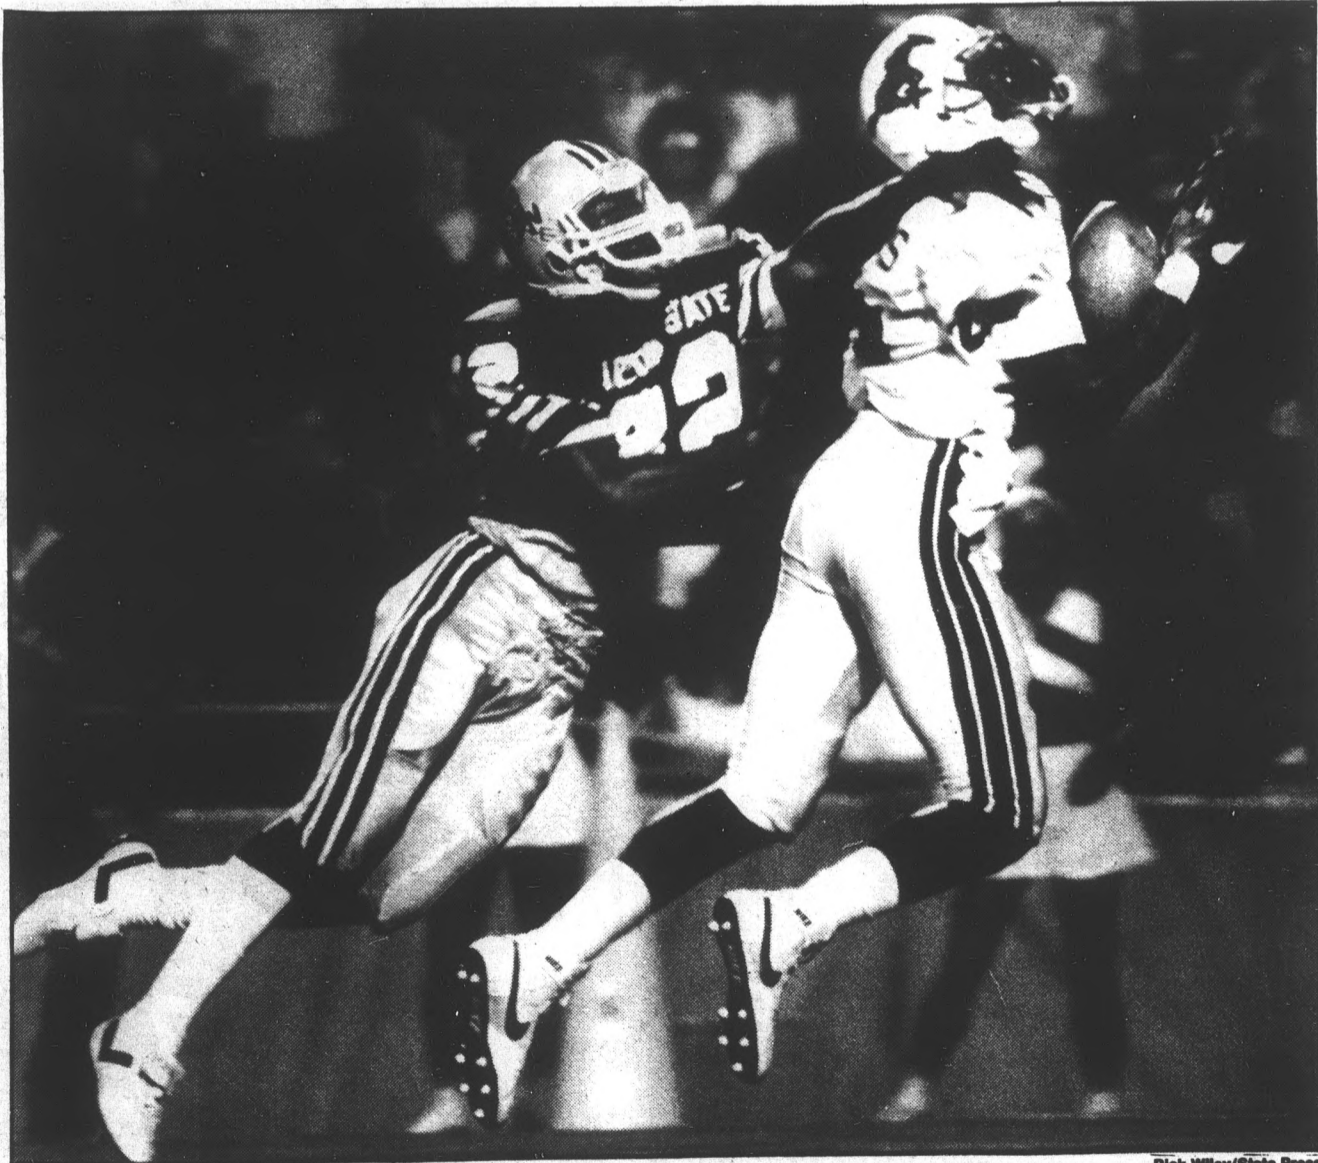

Speaking of passes (and that's about all we can do so far since we hardly ever see one from ASU) Cooper needs to spice up the play-calling some. The Sun Devil offense is far too predictable. Virtually every series is two runs and a pass.

Cooper needs to throw on first down to prevent defenses from keying on the run. When you have a quarterback like Jeff Van Raaphorst, who is as good as anyone in the conference, use him. Past experience shows that the more he throws, the better he throws. It sure would be nice to see the Devils air it out against Washington State this week.

Look for Cooper to start using Paul Day a little more at tailback and Darryl Harris to get more rest. Harris carried the ball 28 times against SMU while Day had only four. Day gives ASU the added dimension of a big-play receiver coming out of the backfield and he has blazing speed.

On the surface it looks like the Devils should have an easy time of it with the Cougars this Saturday. But don't be fooled by their 1-2 record.

Washington State has won two of the last three meetings, spoiling good starts by the Devils each time. In 1981 the Devils were 2-0 and went to Pullman looking ahead to the next week's showdown in Seattle with the Washington Huskies. They were abruptly brought back to reality with a 24-21 defeat.

In 1983 the Sun Devils were 4-0-1 when the Cougs came to Tempe and defeated ASU 31-21, the beginning of a three-game losing streak.

And although the Devils won in Pullman last year, it wasn't easy as they had to hold on for dear life in a 21-16 win.

Don't look for a blowout this week. Jim Walden always puts a good team on the field and the Cougars seem to always get fired up to play ASU. But the Devils have the talent and, perhaps more importantly, the attitude, to go a long way this year. This game could be an important stepping stone.

BUY HIM SOME PEANUTS AND CRACKER JACK

I noticed in the paper Monday that it was Tommy Lasorda's birthday. Does anyone know how to send a letter bomb?

The paper said he was 59, but I didn't know that was years or inches around.

Lasorda is the most overrated manager in baseball. The only thing that rivals his obnoxiousness is his girth. If Lasorda had a few less pasta dinners with Frank Sinatra and paid a little more attention to what he was doing on the field, maybe the Dodgers wouldn't be tied for last place in the N.L. West.

Then again, few things are more pleasing than seeing the Dodgers in the cellar. Have a nice dinner, Tommy.

Delta Sigs, Kappa Alpha Theta capture golf titles

By STEVE ADAMS

The men's Class A and women's intramural golf tournament swung into action at the Camelot Golf Course Sunday with an unprecedented three-way tie for first place in the men's division and a four-way tie in the women's.

The Intramural Committee met Monday and decided that the ties would stand, since it might prove difficult to get the tied players together to settle it.

"We (the intramural department) were debating on whether the golfers should play sudden death or whether we should end it all in a tie," said Juliette Moore, assistant director of intramurals.

"We decided to just give out the prizes to all the ones that were tied," said Moore. "It's just too hard to get everyone together next Sunday (when the B-league tournament is slated)."

Alex Clark (Phi Delts), Clay Coffeen (Sigma Alpha Epsilon), and Rick Davis (Homeboys) all shot rounds of 69 to qualify them for top honors in the men's Class A division.

In the women's division, Donna Johnson (Kappa Delta), Jennifer Johnson (independent), Julie Duffy (independent), and Shawn Anderson (Kappa Alpha Theta) all shot rounds of 83 to earn top honors.

Intramurals

Meanwhile in the team competition, Delta Sigma Phi, whose team members were John Masters (who shot 70), Dean Obenauer (71), Chris Patton (72) and Chris Bidwell (72), ran away with the title by shooting a 5-over-par 285, 10 shots better than Phi Delta Theta and Stosslet, who tied for second place with a round of 295.

"We had several gentlemen's bets with some other fraternities," Obenauer said.

"They're still gentlemen, but we've got the trophy and the cotton."

The qualifiers for the top spot this year did not even come close to the record rounds shot last year.

Brian Leff shot an intramural record round of 65 in the men's Class A last year, while Mary Tierney shot a record 79 in the women's division.

Since last year, the course has had two par 4s lengthened and converted to par 5s, changing the par from 68 to 70.

The winners of each division will receive beach towels as well as an Intramural Golf Champion T-shirt.

In other intramural news:
•The intramural department has been displeased with the number of forfeits in the volleyball leagues.

"We need to emphasize the importance of all the teams being organized and showing up for their games," said Moore.

•The men's Class B golf tournament will be held Sunday, Sept. 28, at the Camelot Golf Course. Tee off times begin at 7:34 a.m.

•There will be an individuals' meeting for flag football today at 3:30 p.m. in Physical Education Building West Room 157 to form teams.
