

Security re-evaluated after gunshots in hall

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Manzanita Hall officials said Monday they will re-evaluate security procedures after a man who did not live in the hall shot himself there Friday.

The man, who is not affiliated with ASU, is in stable condition with bullet wounds to the head, according to ASU Police Lt. Craig Emanuel. The man is in the intensive care unit at St. Joseph's Hospital in Phoenix.

The man apparently was visiting a female friend at about 7 a.m. Friday when he shot himself, according to ASU police reports.

Barbara Wood, one of the three directors at Manzanita Hall, said the man was not stopped by desk attendants before entering a women's floor.

"Because of the fact we have a coed building, no visitors are checked in the lobby," she said. "We expect residents to take responsibility for their visitors."

Visiting hours at the residence hall end at midnight on weekdays and at 2 a.m. on weekends, according to a desk assistant at the dorm.

The assistant, who did not want to be identified, said a "night host" checks visitors from 9 p.m. to midnight on weekdays, but no one monitors visitors during early morning hours.

Jim Rund, acting assistant director for Residence Life, said current security systems are "pretty solid."

"Desk assistants pretty much bear the responsibility for who comes into the building," Rund said. "Any kind of security system that we, or any other institution, implements is going to have loopholes."

Meanwhile, ASU's Counseling and Consultation Center will offer programs tonight that deal with suicide prevention.

Ilene Rosenstein, a staff counselor, said groups will meet at 7 p.m. in MU Room 216 to discuss suicide and depression.

Programs also will be held at 8 p.m. in Manzanita's dining room and at 9 p.m. in the Sahuaro Hall dining room.

Study shows advisement lacking in ASU colleges

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

The College of Business and the College of Education both have severe problems in academic student advisement, according to a study released Monday by Associated Students.

The report also said four other colleges — fine arts, architecture, public programs and the graduate college — have the foundation for good advisement programs but have inadequate resources.

Given a clean bill of health were the engineering, liberal arts, nursing and social work colleges, which were identified as "good, solid advisement programs."

According to the report, the quantity of advisement is the main problem.

Jo Ann Hennington, assistant dean of the College of Business, said she has been telling the administration that the college's advisers have too many students to assist.

Hennington said approximately eight advisers serve 9,023 undergraduate business students, a ratio of almost 1,128 students per adviser.

But she said the college recently received funds to hire four additional advisers to meet the student demand for advisement.

The new advisers probably would not be hired before preregistration, which begins Nov. 3, Hennington said.

According to the report, the College of Education has "suffered from poor organization and communication."

Marigold Linton, director of educational services for the college, said the primary problem with advisement is management.

"The students have been so badly served because (advisement) was all done by hand," Linton said.

She said the college recently computerized its student records but it needs additional computers.

"We need more funding, more advisers and more computers," Linton said.

The report used three criteria by which to judge college's advisement programs: the size of the advisement staff, printed materials to help direct students and a centralized advisement staff.

U.S. district attorney may prosecute suspect who sent feces in package

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

Prosecution is expected soon against an individual suspected of mailing four packages filled with urine, feces and cactus to ASU parking and transit services over the summer, the department's assistant director said Monday.

Richard Landreth said the first package, which was unexpected, seriously injured an employee when it was opened.

Landreth said his department turned each package over to a federal postal inspector for investigation.

"They have been in communication with the U.S. district attorney," Landreth said. "The last word we have is that they intend to pursue prosecution for violations of postal regulations."

He said each package, "upgrading in repulsiveness over a period of time," originated from the same individual.

But Landreth declined to identify the person other than as a member of the University community because, "we don't want to jeopardize anyone's rights."

In addition to the cactus and excrement, the packages "contained (ASU parking) tickets and other material to identify the individual responsible," he said.

For legal reasons, Landreth also declined to identify the parking services employee who was injured when the first package was received at the beginning of the summer.

But Landreth said the employee's injuries, caused by fine cactus slivers, "were quite substantial."

He said the injury was similar to that caused by jumping cholla cactus: "like little needles being pushed into her hand every time she touched something."

Landreth said that to the best of his knowledge the employee's injuries were not complicated by infection from the excrement contained in the packages.

"As future letters were received from this individual, they were handled very carefully," he said. "They risked the life and well-being of an individual over something that's not very major, which also doesn't show very good sense."

Mason takes stand on issues in House seat race

By MICHAEL ROWELL
State Press

Democratic Arizona House of Representatives candidate and ASU political science professor Bruce Mason said Friday he considers only one of two Republican candidates to be his main opponent in the race.

Mason, 62, is running against Republicans Jenny Norton and two-term incumbent Bev Hermon for two District 27 house seats.

He said that Hermon would certainly be re-elected, and the race is between him and Norton for the seat vacated by Senate candidate Doug Todd.

"I think Jenny Norton clearly is unqualified to serve in the Legislature," he said. "She demonstrates a very limited knowledge of government — of state government in particular, of social problems (and) other problems that exist in our society."

"I believe that blind partisanship is an inadequate substitute for other qualities."

Mason said he, like the other candidates, would work for a funding balance between ASU and UA.

Citing an $8 million difference in amount paid per student credit hour, Mason said, "I would work to close that gap as much as possible."

Mason, who has been a ASU faculty member for 26 years, said he would be the best representative of the University because he knows more about the needs of ASU.

Mason said he supports giving the student regent a vote, and if elected, he would also propose appointment of a faculty

'I believe that blind partisanship is an inadequate substitute for other qualities.'

— Bruce Mason

regent with a vote.

"I think you not only need one of each, but they each need to vote because without a vote, you're not listened to."

He said the faculty regent would be a position that would alternate between the three universities.

Mason said he would also work to create a scholarship fund to help compensate for the loss of federal loans.

He also said he would attempt to improve the retirement plan for ASU staff and make himself available not only to administration but faculty, staff and students as well.

If elected, Mason said he will retire from the University in December 1987, adding, "If I'm not elected, I will not retire."

Mason said he also would work to improve education in general and said, "I'm hoping that Proposition 101 passes."

If approved by voters, Proposition 101 will increase school district spending limits by 10 percent.

Mason said one of the major problems he would address if elected would be the state corrections system.

He said too much money is being spent on building prisons, and the money should be spent on other methods of rehabilitation.

"We've got too many people incarcerated at the present time who don't need to be there."

Mason said rehabilitation programs would save the state money, and those dollars could be spent on "human services" such as care for the elderly and child care.

He said he was supporting Proposition 103 — which would limit damages awards and attorney fees in some situations — but added that it was "flawed."

"It is, in fact, one interest group essentially trying to hammer into the ground another interest group, with the public in the middle being torn in two directions," he said. "I hope that the legislation that the Legislature must pass will be more intelligent than the proposition."

Mason said he opposes punitive damages going to individuals but not to the state.

"It is the prerogative of the state to punish, not the individual."

Mason said he would address the problem through better regulation of insurance companies.

"They've been guilty of some bad investments."

Regarding initiatives in general, Mason said the initiative process should be "looked at to make sure it results in more appropriate legislation."

Lawmen mark increase in smugglers trading drugs for guns

By The Associated Press

TEMPE — Senior law-enforcement officials say drug smugglers more and more frequently are accepting guns in trade for drugs smuggled into Arizona from Mexico.

"We are seeing an enormous increase in paramilitary weapons," said John Paraska, head of the Phoenix office of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Hard statistics are hard to come by because guns often are smuggled across the U.S.-Mexico border in shipments with a small number of weapons, but authorities suspect weapons by the thousands cross the international line each year, Paraska said.

Arizona Attorney General Bob Corbin said his office, which coordinates statewide drug-enforcement operations, has noticed a relationship between the increased demand for drugs in the United States and the demand for weapons in Mexico, possibly as far south as Central America.

"We think some of them are going farther south, to Central America," Corbin said. "It's been picking up a lot more because of the great demand in this country for cocaine, heroin and marijuana."

Guns have become more valuable than cash in Mexico, where the complexity of getting a permit to purchase even a small hunting rifle makes it nearly impossible to own a firearm. Civilians are prohibited from owning handguns.

Aside from an illicit weapons market that include Central American revolutionaries, drug runners themselves want guns to arm themselves.

"Cash is cash. You take a weapon and pay $400 for it up here and you can get $1,000 worth of drugs down there," Corbin said.

The guns-for-drugs trade has become so refined that law-enforcement officials now describe the relationship in terms of supply and demand.

"Stopping the gun trade won't really stop the drug trade into the United States," Corbin says.

But he said cooperation between Mexican and U.S. authorities would allow the Mexicans to work to curb the northward drug trade while the Americans would work to curb the southward gun flow, Corbin said.

Meetings between U.S. law-enforcement officials and the Mexican government are planned in January 1987 in Sonora, Corbin and Paraska said.

Among the most popular guns this year have been small, rapid-fire guns and semiautomatic rifles, Paraska said.

Law-enforcement officials have known about the trade for years, but they are just now beginning to determine the extent of it, thanks to the creation in mid-August of Operation Alliance, a $266 million anti-drug campaign, Paraska said.

By year's end, agents will have tabulated and noted the types of smuggled weapons and where they are going, he said.

No more tuition hikes, please

Someone once said there are only two guaranteed things in life: death and taxes.

Now, there is a third: tuition hikes. This Friday, the Arizona Board of Regents will meet in Tucson to discuss tuition recommendations for Arizona's three universities for the 1987-88 academic year.

In November, the regents will decide whether to raise tuition and by how much.

Forget the fact that tuition was raised last year from $990 to $1,136 a year.

To the regents, capital improvements at the universities have to be paid some way or another, and guess where they will probably decide to make up the money.

We deplore the fact that students at ASU, NAU and UA may have to plunk down more money in the coming years to offset the money spent for university capital improvements.

Many students are faced with an end to their education because several factors are depleting the sources of revenue available to pay for their schooling. Pell Grants are being cut, Guaranteed Student Loans are being scrutinized and the amount of monies available for other grants and scholarships are slowly drying up.

Now, in an effort to pay for capital expenses on the three universities' campuses, the regents well may decide to let the students foot the bill.

How much might the regents raise tuition? That is unclear. But with a $146-a-year precedent, the sky could be the limit.

That could force many student to drop out of the three universities. We wonder if that is not contrary to what the state's universities are here for.

The regents are falling into a bad habit of raising tuition every year. Students should not be expected to bear most or all of the burden of budget cutbacks or capital improvements.

If tuition hikes continue in the future like they have in the past, education may return to the days when the wealthy were the only ones financially able to afford post-secondary education.

And if the wealthy are the only ones who can afford an education, those capital improvements on the three campuses won't be helping anyone.

Letters

Fund all groups

Editor:

This letter is to announce M.E.Ch.A.'s endorsement of the non-funded organizations on campus. M.E.Ch.A. (Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlan) is a Chicano organization on campus. Our goals are to retain and promote our culture, sensitize the non-Latino population of our unmet needs and help our fellow human beings who are also being discriminated against.

The reason we are endorsing the non-funded organizations such as the Lesbian and Gay Academic Union, the Greens, Students Against Apartheid, the Nuclear Disarmament Organization and others is because we believe in equality, liberty and justice for all.

It is unfair that certain organizations were funded and others were not. To say that the reason for this is the lack of funds is a cop-out. There is enough money in the Associated Students student government to fund all of the organizations on campus.

What we have, in reality is a student government that is trying to force its values down our throats and we shouldn't stand for it.

How can funding these organizations be wrong? The LGAU is not promoting homosexuality or lesbianism. It only serves as a support group for gays on campus. They are not hurting anybody. One of the reasons LGAU wanted funding was to being a speaker on campus to inform us about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

Yearbook reflection

Editor:

I feel obliged to address your objections to the choice of the "Sun Devil Spark" as the new name for the yearbook. A yearbook exists to capture a school's traditions, so the tone of the title must be similarly traditional, which "Bob" is not.

The name must convey some sort of meaning to the people who read it. The "Sun Devil Spark" captures the major symbols of ASU. "Bob," as your editorial pointed out, is absolutely devoid of significance.

You write that "Bob" would be great for AIDS is a disease that a majority of the population knows nothing about and which also increasingly is affecting the heterosexual population.

The main reason the Greens were denied funding was because they were considered "controversial" by ASASU — controversial because ASASU said they were biased on environmental issues. However, ASASU funded the Nuclear Engineering Society. Do you think the Nuclear Engineering Society is not biased? Do you think they are going to publicize alternative energy sources?

Opposing apartheid and nuclear war are just causes. However, organizations who support these views were not funded because these views do not reflect the views of the current administration.

Although M.E.Ch.A. has been funded for this fall, we have been gradually receiving lower amounts over the past few years.

Discrimination of any kind is wrong and we deplore it. We hope other funded organizations will endorse the non-funded organizations. We also hope the ASASU Senate will fund all of the organizations for the spring semester. If they do not fund all of the organizations because they consider them "controversial," then perhaps ASASU should not be funded because they are currently the most controversial group on campus.

students to laugh about in the future. A yearbook right down to the title represents each student's college education — something I do not regard as a joke. Although some students may have found some aspects of university life less than pleasant, what attitude does "Pages from Hell" indicate?

The new name may tend toward the poetic than the profound, but it embodies all that a yearbook title should. I suggest you re-examine your criteria.

Look around you, Kucera

Editor:

I enjoyed Patrick J. Kucera's editorial concerning parental apathy toward children. However, as the mother of a preschooler and the wife of a resident who moonlights in an emergency room, I felt obliged to respond to some of his comments.

The real problem, Mr. Kucera, is not necessarily the parents who fail to notice the new Trans Am — which is supposedly purchased with the money gained through the sale of illicit drugs — but the parents who congratulate each other on the fact that their child is only drinking alcohol. It is alcohol, not drugs, that is the big killer of young adults. Look around you. How many drug-related injuries and deaths occur at ASU?

Perhaps you should spend more time reading the police section of the newspaper that you work for. People who work in emergency rooms around the Valley will tell you that they are filled to capacity an hour or so after the bars close and the "knife and gun clubs," as they are called, meet or get in their cars and try to drive somewhere, not when the drug pushers go to bed.

Don't get me wrong. I am not a prohibitionist, but I think that you need to look at the problem you cited in its proper perspective. Don't you think that the greatest harm your example parent inflicts on his children is the value he places on his after-work drink? Again, look around you. We are a society that is increasingly materialistic, and many of us resort to any substance that keeps us on a constant and euphoric high.

Many of us sincerely believe that is it not OK to feel tired, depressed, anxious, fat, stupid or anything else we deem as negative. We seem to live by the creed that there is something we can swallow that will make life's problems easier to deal with, then wonder why "Junior" cannot or does Ssshhh!!!

Editor:

For a while last night in the library, I was thinking irrationally.

Murder all the Greeks.

Man, those Greeks were acting and not want to handle his problems without the same things.

As for your "non-caring" parent, you are perhaps condemning him without knowing the full story. Many couples must both work in order to provide food, clothing and shelter. I am not talking about Chicken Kiev, designer clothes, mansions and Trans Ams either. I am talking about chicken pot pie, Marshall's, apartments and used Volkswagens. Many of the women who stay at home so that their children will not be your ill-starred "latch-key" kids, do so at the expense of a husband who works overtime on a regular basis, or moonlights somewhere after work.

Did it ever occur to you that your "non-caring" parent may not get home until 8 or 9 p.m.? Going to bed at 10 p.m. instead of 9:30 p.m. may make a difference to someone who gets up at 4:30 a.m. to get to work by 6 p.m.

As for the couples you cited who bear children as a favor to society, I have never met any of them, and I seriously question whether you have either. Most couples have children for very selfish reasons, and many choose to have them at times that may appear to you to be very inappropriate and inconvenient. On the other hand, I know several women who waited until just the "right" time and are now in the unenviable position of waiting for the results of their amniocentesis.

Do you have children? If not, you may find that raising children is not as easy as it looks from behind your desk. When it comes to raising our children, all we can do is our best. Maybe we do not all come up to the standards of what you think good parenting should be, Mr. Kucera, but it is our best.

Proposition 100 would deregulate phone industry

Arizona voters will have the opportunity to vote on six propositions in the Nov. 4 general election. This is the first in a four-part series of articles examining the ballot propositions. Today the State Press examines Proposition 100.

By J.B. SINNOTT
State Press

Proposition 100 will give the Arizona Legislature the power to call for the Arizona Corporation Commission to deregulate parts of the state's telecommunications industry.

Advocates of the proposition say the potential deregulation will give phone users in the state a wider variety of services and will guarantee residents an affordable phone service.

Opponents say the Legislature has neither the time nor the resources to regulate the phone industry properly, and the effect will be an industry controlled by a handful of lobbyists, particularly Mountain Bell's.

The proposition has a coalition of supporters, ranging from unions and educators to senior citizens and the governor. The proponents also have a strong activist group, Arizonans for Fair Competition.

Chuck Shipley, spokesman for the group, said the proposal "allows regulations to be eliminated where they no longer make sense" but lets the commission decide where such deregulation should occur.

Supporters of the initiative point to a section of the proposition which will "assure statewide availability and affordability of telecommunications service."

In a letter supporting the proposition, Gov. Bruce Babbitt said Proposition 100 "will provide for an updating of the laws regulating communications carriers and, further, will introduce fair competition to the industry."

There was no concerted campaign against the initiative until recently, when a group called Consumers for Fair Telephone Rates was organized.

Perry Baker, spokesman for the called group, called the bill "onerous."

"The effect of this (proposition) would be to totally deregulate Mountain Bell," he said. "There is a lot of hesitation on the part of voters to give this a blank check."

Baker said the campaign to defeat Proposition 100 was organized last Sunday. He said the coalition is made up of a variety of groups representing consumers and retired people, as well as two current state corporation commissioners, Renz Jennings and Marcia Weeks.

The pro-100 group is far ahead of the anti-100 group in terms of fund raising, Baker admits. He said the reason the other group is so well-funded is because of substantial donations from telecommunications companies.

Baker said the financial statement of Arizonans for Fair Competition shows its support comes from only five groups, including Mountain Bell and American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

"We did a survey and raised $15,000," he said. "That pales in comparison to $2 million for Mountain Bell."

The consequences of such a change are potentially frightening, Baker said.

"In other states where similar legislation was passed, they've seen an increase of up to 60 percent in rates."

University construction costs may lead to tuition increases

By KIM MATTINGLY
State Press

ASU's three-year $100 million capital expansion plan and other building projects at NAU and UA will impact tuition-setting decisions and could result in more increases, the president of Associated Students said.

Chris Cummsiskey, also a member of the Arizona Students Association that makes tuition recommendations every year, said: "We would hope that tuition would not have been used to offset the explosion of capital building on campus."

"We understand ASU wants to be a great institution, comparable to other great institutions, but you can't indenture the students to pay it off."

Last year's $146 resident tuition increase was the largest ever, but Cummsiskey said

ASA recommended only a $55 to $85 increase.

"Last year ASA put together a very good report," he said. "But obviously it wasn't enough evidence compared to capital construction costs."

Molly Broad, executive director of the Arizona Board of Regents, said, "There is a very ambitious capital agenda that is certainly far from concluded."

The regents have issued more than $240 million in bonding authority during the past six months for building projects at ASU, NAU and UA, she said.

Broad said the regents will consider the three universities' "debt service" — interest they pay on bonds — in their tuition decisions and added that these debts "certainly could" impact tuition increases.

ASA Director Diane Zipley said: "There's not a direct relationship between tuition and capital projects, but I'm sure there is a relationship."

"(The University) is experiencing a phenomenal amount of growth, but if growth impedes student access, then the growth has got to stop."

Despite record tuition hikes, enrollment increased at all three Arizona universities in 1986-87.

But Zipley said: "We call it the invisible statistic. The people who are dropping out can't be seen."

"Types of students have been changing; there's a lot more part-time and re-entry students. People are falling through the cracks."

Broad said the regents will meet in Tucson on Friday to hear tuition recommendations from the Council of Presidents and ASA.

She said a decision on 1987-88 tuition will be reached by the board's finance subcommittee on Nov. 6 and voted on by the regents at their Nov. 7 meeting at ASU.

But the Council of Presidents, composed of Broad and the university presidents from ASU, NAU and UA, have not yet met to discuss its recommendations, Broad said.

"We all have thought about it individually," she said.

The council will meet on Thursday to compile its recommendations for Friday's meeting, she said.

Likewise, Zipley said ASA is scrambling to complete its tuition report for Friday.

Both groups were waiting for the regents' Cost of Education figures which are calculated by a formula based on the 1987-88 university operating budgets.

Secret societies implicated in Virginia campus fund fraud

By College Press Service

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA. — There is $60,000 missing at the University of Virginia.

And it has something to do with one of the secret societies on campus, in which members fiddle with fictional characters from C.S. Lewis' "The Chronicles of Narnia" and seem to buy computer equipment without paying for it.

Trouble is, the secret society — one of at least four on the tradition-bound UVA campus — is so secret that no one knows what to make of the missing $60,000, another $20,000 in unpaid bills and what one local merchant calls a trail of "boogie woogie."

At issue is The Council of the Stone Table, about which campus police Detective Sgt. William Morris said, "We're not even sure it exists," and former student Patrick Pierce II, who apparently founded the council in 1984.

Real or not, Morris is investigating them for fraud, he said. Hints of trouble started three weeks ago, when the University comptroller noticed the society's campus account was some $60,000 overdrawn, and called in the police.

The police, in turn, raided Pierce's Charlottesville home, finding $40,000 worth of society stationery, computers and office equipment.

And even since then, the University has received another $20,000 in bills for equipment and services "bought" by the society at a time when there was less than $100 in the account.

The council, investigators eventually found, was not stingy. It had promised to give a $16,000 scholarship to a Charlottesville freshman going to Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

The letter promising the scholarship was "very legitimate-looking and on official letterhead," said CMU financial aid counselor Robert Meck.

It was so good-looking that Meck revoked the aid package he already had assembled for the student Pierce promised to help, but the promised check, he said, never arrived.

The council did donate approximately $20,000 to two private schools in the Charlottesville area, Morris said.

Headmaster William Porter of the Tandem School, where Pierce reportedly worked for a while, said he received two Council of the Stone Table checks and then letters from the council promising more.

The letters were signed with names of characters from C.S. Lewis' series of children's books, "The Chronicles of Narnia."

Ken Shapero of OmniComp, a local computer store, figures the secret council took him "down the garden path."

Shapero said he sold Pierce $2,500 worth of MacIntosh computer equipment and accessories and was told to contact Pierce at the University for the charge number to bill him.

He said he had his bookkeeper call the University repeatedly for the charge number, and each time he called he was put off by Pierce.

Pierce dropped off a letter at the store, Shapero said, that was "the biggest pile of boogie woogie I've ever seen — and no charge number."

"Finally, I called him up and told him I'd charge him with fraud, theft and grand larceny if he didn't bring back my equipment in 20 minutes," Shapero said. "He brought it back in 15."

Other Charlottesville computer retailers were not so fortunate.

"Because of litigation, I cannot comment," said Irvin Cox, manager of Entre, "but we do have assets tied up, and we have had dealings with Patrick Pierce."

Pierce himself could not be reached for comment.

"(These people) became so involved in 'The Chronicles of Narnia' that they began to live what they perceived as reality," Morris said. "They took on the personalities of the characters."

But no one really knows because the campus secret societies — others are called The Seven Society, the Society of the Purple Shadows and the Z Society — are so secret, campus spokesman Chip German said.

"We used to have to communicate with the Seven Society by leaving a letter at the foot of the statue of (Thomas) Jefferson," German said.

The societies themselves offer members joint activities and shared experiences and surface usually only to donate funds to campus departments and local charities. In return, the University keeps the societies' books.

"We have a well-established tradition of trust, and there is not University process for sanctioning and setting up a secret society," German said.

Ohio 'university' offers $13 doctorate degrees

By College Press Service

CINCINNATI — Last year it cost nearly $1,800 for U.S. Congressman Claude Pepper, D-Fla., to get a mail-order doctorate degree.

If he would have waited a few months, Pepper — who was trying to dramatize the prevalence of "diploma mills" — could have become a doctor of Aztec Cuisine or Yodeling for just $13, said Christopher Wigert, the "Dean of Deans" at Fergle University in Cincinnati.

"I got up early one morning and started thinking of strange universities and the catalogue business," Wigert said. "There's a gap in between the Harvard University catalogue and Spiegel's."

One need only send Wigert $13 for an official Fergle University T-shirt and a diploma — thus saving thousands of dollars in tuition and hundreds of hours of studying at a regular college.

"We're talking about $100,000 — just for a B.A. — at some of the finer institutions," he said. "Here at Fergle, you can skip all that and go right for your Ph.D."

As for the low, low cost of an education, Wigert said it can not be beaten.

Wigert said, "We're definitely in a class by ourselves. Even Harvard can't compete."

"Take Bennington (College), which costs about $15,000 an hour. For what students spend for a few days there (for a bachelor's degree), they can come here and get their Ph.D."

By sending their kids to Fergle, he said, parents "can save enough money to buy that new house or that new car."

Hells Angel member pleads innocence in criminal case

LOS ANGELES — The president of the Ventura chapter of the Hells Angels motorcycle club pleaded innocent Monday to charges that he tried to arrange the murder of a prison inmate.

George Christie, 39, who was in the public spotlight in 1984 when he paid $3,000 to run a kilometer in the Summer Olympics cross-country torch relay, entered the innocent plea before U.S. Magistrate John Kronenberg.

The magistrate set a Dec. 2 trial date before U.S. District Judge Dickran Teverizian on the conspiracy to murder and solicitation to commit a violent crime charges. An indictment alleges that Christie believed the intended victim was a police informant.

A co-defendant in the case, Daniel Joseph Fabricant, 37, of Ventura, may be brought to federal court for arraignment next Monday, Assistant U.S. Attorney Stephen Czuleger said.

Fabricant, a state prison inmate, is charged with conspiracy to murder, solicitation to commit a crime of violence and aiding and abetting, Czuleger said.

Christie and Fabricant each face a maximum term of life in prison for the conspiracy count, and up to 20 years for the solicitation count.

An indictment alleges that Christie and Fabricant sought to arrange the murder of Thomas Arthur Chaney, an associate of the Hells Angels, who was being held at the Federal Correctional Institute at Safford, Ariz.

In mid-August, Christie allegedly contacted Michael Mulhern in Ventura and asked him to arrange the slaying of Chaney, the indictment says.

Instead, Mulhern notified the FBI, which on Sept. 24 arranged a fake death report on Chaney. Christie was arrested a day later as he allegedly gave $500 and the registration slip for an automobile to Mulhern as partial payment for the slaying.

College of Business to eliminate insurance major

Industry may help fund restoration of program

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

Lack of funding and faculty members has caused the business school to drop the insurance major, the department chairman of finance said Monday.

But members of the Arizona insurance industry are "infuriated" at the college's decision, said Lanny Hair, the executive vice president of Independent Insurance.

Richard Smith, the department chairman, said because of budget cuts the major "just didn't work out economically."

"In 1981 we had three full-time insurance professors," he said. "The program was good and the students enjoyed the courses, but there wasn't enough enrollment."

"The professors have since left and we haven't replaced them. We've had to tighten our belt."

Hair, an ASU insurance graduate said he thinks dropping the major is "a bad idea."

"The industry is growing and the people are grossly needed," he said. "We've voiced our concern to ASU and we're not giving up."

"Insurance is not a lost major."

Smith said the department is working with the insurance agencies to develop a possible solution.

"This is not a closed question," he said. "If we get the financial support from the industry, the major might be reinstated."

Smith said the major will not be officially dropped until the University and the Arizona Board of Regents vote on the proposal later this month.

"There's still a few finance professors teaching insurance classes on a limited basis," he said. "Some courses are still offered for the remaining majors and students who want to take insurance electives."

According to the Office of the Registrar, there are currently 18 insurance majors.

Tom Morehart, one of the three professors who taught insurance full time, said he took a leave of absence two years ago when the department moved away from the emphasis in insurance.

"The major has been in a state of limbo for a long time," he said. "The college could not afford to put the money into the program."

"It didn't fit the University's new research and graduate emphasis."

Morehart said he thinks dropping the major is a mistake. "ASU had a unique program," he said. "We were the only school in Arizona who offered an insurance major."

"Now the closest insurance program is on the West Coast or in Texas."

Smith said universities across the nation have been dropping their insurance programs.

"From an academic standpoint a major in finance with insurance electives is better because students are given a wider education," he said. "But insurance companies want students trained to go right to work in the office."

Rudy Campbell, an insurance agent with Campbell, Schoneberger and Associates in Tempe, said his agency is training more and more employees themselves.

"At first I was concerned when I heard ASU was dropping the insurance major," he said. "But from what I understand this is a national trend."

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 6:30 a.m. Monday:

•An ASU student crushed her right hand in a printing press in in the Art Building, police said.

Tempe paramedics treated her four smashed fingers and she was transported to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital, where she was treated and released.

•An ASU student suffered an acute asthma attack in a room at Palo Verde West Residence Hall, police said.

The student was treated by Tempe paramedics and transported to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital, where he was treated and released.

•A Tempe man was riding his bike along Cady Mall when a student stepped out in front of him causing him to fall, police said.

Police said the man riding the bike injured his nose, lip and chin and was treated by Tempe paramedics. He was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital, where he was treated and released.

•A blue Nishiki mountain bike was stolen from the west side of Hayden Library, where it was locked to itself, police said.

Cables, shoulder straps and a book rack were also missing, police said.

Estimated value of the loss is $500.

Witnesses describe the man who rode off on the bike as a Caucasian male with sandy blond hair. He was wearing shorts and a T-shirt, police said.

•Palo Verde West Residence Hall tenants called and asked police to escort a Phoenix man out of the lobby, police said.

When police questioned the man, he told them he was just waiting for the cafeteria to open, police said.

Police warned the man of trespassing laws and advised him to leave after they took photos of him, police said.

•A student's car sustained $100 in damages while it was parked in the parking lot at the Dash Inn, police said.

Someone used a blunt object to make a large dent in the driver's side door and several smaller dents on the front and rear panels, police said.

•A door leading to the rooms of the vice president of academic affairs and the vice president of research was left open for no apparent reason, police said.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents for the period ending midnight Sunday:

•Police said a Tempe woman was sexually assaulted Oct. 19 in her apartment, 929 E. Vista Del Cerro.

The attacker entered the apartment through an unlocked front living room window and confronted the woman in the bedroom of the apartment.

He grabbed the victim by the throat and told her that she would not be hurt if she cooperated.

Police describe the attacker as a Caucasian male, 24 years old, 5-foot-10, with short brown hair and a two-day growth of beard.

•Unknown persons entered Miguel's Music Center, 122 E. University Drive, and removed several guitar accessories, police said.

The thief entered through an air conditioning vent and removed guitar strings, picks, distorters and cash valued at $1,143.

Police have a suspect in the case.

•Police said unknown persons forcibly entered Radio Shack, 1813 E. Baseline Road, by hitting the front door with a vehicle jack.

A security guard working for another business in the area observed two men breaking the door Oct. 20 and called police.

The men entered the store, removed several VCR's and fled the scene by climbing a dividing wall separating the parking lot from a rear alley.

The guard told police he saw a purple 1985 Chevrolet Camaro leaving the area following the incident.

•Police said Wendy's, 790 W. Broadway Road, was burglarized Oct. 18.

The manager of the restaurant reported that he arrived at work and discovered $1,973 missing from the floor safe.

Police have a suspect in the case. —DARRIN HOSTETLER

Poll says most parents OK religions in textbooks

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Textbooks that expose students to varied religious beliefs are welcomed by most Americans, who don't think that alternative textbooks need to be provided for students whose parents object to books on religious grounds, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

Three-quarters of the 1,464 respondents in the nationwide telephone poll said textbooks should expose school children to religious beliefs that may not necessarily be those of their families.

Seven in 10 respondents did not think schools need to provide alternative books for children whose parents disapprove of textbooks on religious grounds.

The issue is at the heart of a lawsuit in Greeneville, Tenn., where seven Christian fundamentalist families have objected to the reading books provided by the Hawkins County school system. The suit contends the books violate the families' religious beliefs. The parents want the schools to provide alternate primers for their children, but the school system has refused on the grounds that a second reading series would unduly burden classroom instruction.

The parents object to stories they say are about feminism, the occult, evolution, magic, pacifism, one-world government and other religions. Among other things, the parents said they were offended by the description of magic in Cinderella, a suggestion in "The Diary of Anne Frank" that all religions are equal, and the appearance of a "good witch" in "The Wizard of Oz."

The books in dispute are the widely used "Holt Basic Readings" for grades one through eight, published by Holt, Rinehart & Winston.

A decision in the case is pending, but both sides have said the case would likely be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

In the Media General-AP poll, only 16 percent of the respondents said textbooks should not expose students to beliefs outside the religious beliefs of their families. Eighteen percent said schools should provide alternative textbooks for student whose parents object on religious grounds to the books their children are using.

A majority of respondents who had children in school said they were happy with the textbooks their children were using.

Seventy percent said they reviewed their children's textbooks, and only 14 percent said they had any objections.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,464 adults across the country Sept. 8-17.

UA task force to clarify enrollment procedures

By Intercollegiate Press

TUCSON — UA administrators are taking steps toward creating a task force to address student concerns about enrollment procedures, said Donald A. Aripoli, assistant vice president for student services and co-chairman of the Enrollment Services Task Force.

Aripoli said the group will look at areas where the communication with students "needs to be clarified, consolidated and expedited."

Aripoli said the task force is comprised of a group of people "whose offices have a great deal of student contact."

"They will look at how we say things to students and when we say it," Aripoli said.

Jerome A. Lucido, director of admissions and co-chairman of the task force, said it will try "to coordinate more closely our efforts" for better communication channels with the students.

"This is not an earth-shattering task force that will have major implications for the university," Lucido said.

"But it will provide better use of university facilities for students," he said.

Advise

ASASU President Chris Cummiskey said he sees three components for an effective advisement program.

"First, the administration needs to go beyond a philosophical statement to make advisement a priority," Cummiskey said. He said advisement recently became a part of the faculty evaluations.

Cummiskey also said individual colleges and faculty members "have to recognize that academic advisement is a critical component if (the University) is going to educate the types of students that are competitive and well-rounded."

Thirdly, he said students need to seek advisement and not ignore the resource available to them.

The report offers six recommendations for improving advisement, including establishing an ASASU task force to work with business college officials and an advertisement campaign for the Academic Advisement Center at ASASU.

The center, located in the lobby of the Social Sciences Building, was opened Aug. 18 and served more than 500 students on its first day.

Cummiskey said the center primarily was designed for undeclared undergraduates but it is open to all students. The center's grand opening ceremony will be 3 p.m. Thursday.

But Hennington said she does not recommend business students use the center because it only answers general questions.

"Once students have declared their major in the business college, their home is here with us," Hennington said.

She said students can follow the college's "paper trail" and advise themselves.

Hennington said many students graduate without ever seeing an adviser because printed materials spell out degree requirements step by step.

Faculty senate debates administrators' term limit

By BENNY McCONNELL
State Press

After considerable debate with two amendments adopted, the faculty senate Monday had to cease discussions on a motion to limit terms of administrative service because too many senators left before the debate was over.

Senators debated heavily over the wording in the Krinsley/Shinn Amendment, which calls for a six-year term limit for ASU administrators, ranging from associate vice presidents to department chairpersons.

Currently, there is no limit to the amount of time those administrators can serve.

Senators argued over whether "extraordinary circumstances" — such as administrative duties that one person is exceptional at handling — should be considered in the bill.

The senate also heard from President J. Russell Nelson, who delivered an overview of the recent $5 million federal appropriation for a research center ASU received Friday when President Reagan signed legislation.

Nelson said he anticipates financial support to extend to a $25 million package that will build a 200,000 square-foot research building on campus.

"It will make a significant impact on the campus," he said. "We haven't yet identified a site to place the building, though."

He said the College of Engineering will occupy 60 percent of the building with the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences picking up the remaining 40 percent.

Nelson also responded to criticism of faculty members being excluded from the lobbying proposal by saying, "This was a proposal for a building — that's different for a program objective or for research."

"We proceeded in a manner that seemed to be successful with other universities that have presented these kinds of proposals."

Nelson also announced beginning in 1988 that all salary adjustments will conform to a performance basis scale.

He said problems still exist with the program and called for a work group to identify deficiencies in the program.

Sen. Donald Rabiner, an associate professor of art, called for the practice of honoring faculty during halftime and timeouts at football games to be placed on the agenda of the next faculty senate meeting.

J. Russell Nelson

Rabiner said, "The problem with it is that no one listens. It smacks of tokenism and I think there are more appropriate ways to honor faculty."

He termed the practice "Mickey Mouse." Discussion of the University Faculty Club, a club that would serve alcohol on campus for faculty, was tabled until the next meeting when Dick Jacob, professor of physics, asked to delay discussion of the issue until the Nov. 17 meeting.

In other action, the senate unanimously approved the following:

- Establishment of a Master of Fine Arts in Child Drama;
- The reorganization of majors in technology;
- Establishment of a doctorate in Science and Engineering of Materials;
- Establishment of a Master of Science degree in Building Design;
- Establishment of a Master of Urban Planning degree;
- and after some debate, approved that the required attendance policy stay intact in the University catalog.

Toxic tide invades Gulf Coast, contaminates fish harvest

By The Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas — A toxic "red tide" that has killed millions of fish along Texas' Gulf Coast has moved into Mexican waters and could linger until the end of the year if temperatures do not drop, officials said Monday.

Since the explosion of microscopic organisms appeared in late August near Galveston, officials in this city of 250,000 have closed beaches to swimmers, and the oyster harvest, which was scheduled to open Nov. 1, has been suspended from south of Galveston to the Mexican border.

Merchants complain that publicity about the red tide has hurt business and scared off tourists.

For now, authorities and businessmen are hoping for a cold front that will drop water temperatures to 60 degrees or lower, a level that hinders red tide.

The water temperature has been in the upper 70s to the 80s, and a dip to 60 may not occur until mid-December or later, said Pat Patterson, a forecaster at the National Weather Service in Corpus Christi.

Hal Osburn, harvest program leader for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's marine laboratory in Rockport, said Monday the red tide was about 1 to 4 miles wide from Port O'Connor to the Mexican border, a distance of about 170 miles.

"It could be up to 3,000 square miles of the Gulf of Mexico that has some red tide in it," Osburn said.

It has killed pinheads, hardheads, catfish, mullets and some large redfish, Judd said.

The red tide has stabilized off the coast, he said, but officials are concerned that it will enter the Laguna Madre, a nursery for shrimp, oysters and other fish located between Port Isabel and South Padre Island.

"There's really nothing to prevent it from moving in there," Judd said. "It can change overnight."

Judd said the worst day for the red tide was last Thursday, when people were coughing and experiencing irritated eyes and noses because of the toxins.

To merchants, the national attention given the puzzling natural phenomenon is bad news.

Israel swears in new prime minister; plans to increase Jewish settlement

By The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Yitzhak Shamir, leader of Israel's right-wing Likud bloc, was sworn in Monday to replace Shimon Peres as prime minister and vowed to increase Jewish settlement of occupied Arab territories.

Shamir and his 24-member Cabinet took their oaths after the Knesset, or Parliament, debated for four hours and then gave Shamir an overwhelming 82-17 vote of confidence. There were three abstentions in the 120-member Parliament.

Under an unprecedented 1984 coalition agreement between Peres' left-leaning Labor Party and Shamir's Likud, Peres takes Shamir's previous job as foreign minister.

The 71-year-old Shamir said a "supreme priority" of his government would be to funnel funds into increased Jewish settlement of occupied Arab territories.

"The (national) economy will be based not only on solid economic principles but also on the Zionist values which must be our guide, among them the supreme value of settlement throughout the Land of Israel," he told the Knesset as he presented his new government.

Increased Jewish settlement in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, where 1.4 million Palestinians live, could antagonize peace efforts with Jordan. Israel captured the West Bank from Jordan and Gaza from Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

Shamir said he favors peace talks with Jordan but refuses to accept Jordan's demand for an international peace conference. Both Jordan and Kuwait on Monday repeated calls for a peace conference to be attended by the permanent members of the U.N. Security Council and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

He reiterated Israel's rejection of the PLO as a negotiating partner, denouncing it as a terrorist group.

"PLO terrorism once again raised its murderous head," he said, referring to a grenade attack in Jerusalem last Wednesday in which one Israeli was killed and 69 others were wounded. Israel has said it captured three Palestinians responsible for the attack and that they were acting on orders from the PLO.

Shamir also said, "We will prevent the (Palestinian) gangs from entrenching themselves in Lebanon and establishing bases there."

Members of Peres' Labor Party denounced Shamir's plans for expanding Jewish settlements, saying the money was needed in other areas.

During his two years in office, Peres reached unprecedented agreements with labor unions and industrialists, allowing his government to curb inflation from an annual 445 percent in 1984 to a projected 16 percent this year.

Shamir was expected to face more pressure from the Labor Party-allied trade unions to increase wages and government spending on defense, health, welfare and education.

Shamir, a former spy, headed the underground "Stern Gang" that fought against British rule in what was then Palestine and is now Israel. He was prime minister for 12 months in 1983-84 after his mentor, Menachem Begin, resigned.

Peres resigned as prime minister Oct. 10, in keeping with the September 1984 coalition agreement, which called for Shamir and Peres to swap jobs midway through the government's term of office. The pact was forged after neither party won enough votes in the July 1984 elections to rule by itself or in coalition with smaller parties.

'Old cuss'

ASU prof relates conservatism

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

He describes himself as "a dyed in the wool conservative" and "a prejudiced and opinionated old cuss."

At 83, ASU Professor Emeritus W.P. Shofstall manages to keep himself immersed in controversy through writing a steady stream of letters to the State Press and other Arizona papers.

He writes to express his conservative views and warn of encroaching socialism, internationalism and secularism, as well as to uphold the ideals of the Judeo-Christian ethic and the U.S. Constitution.

But he also writes for his health.

"I do this because I don't write easily,"

Conservative views to stay healthy

Shofstall said. "I find trying to say something important in a very few words is very challenging mentally."

"I'm 83 years old, and I've found the key to keeping alive physically is to keep alive mentally."

To keep in shape, Shofstall said he spends 50 minutes every day, except Sunday, climbing Tempe Butte, come rain or shine. Also, he will agree to give a speech "at the drop of a hat."

He said one of his greatest concerns is the tendency of the United States to act against its own national interest, which first alarmed him when he was working in Germany after World War II.

"While in Europe, I saw with my own eyes our State Department try their level best to turn West Germany over to the Soviet Union," Shofstall said. "I didn't understand it then and I don't understand it today."

"I have become painfully aware of the destructive tendencies of our government to turn its back on our friends and assist our enemies. We did it with Czarist Russia and Nationalist China. We did it with Cuba and Nicaragua."

Shofstall said today the United States is "attempting to turn South Africa over to the Communists by embargoes, disinvestment and sanctions."

"It is insane. I don't understand."

Shofstall began his career as an educator in 1919, teaching in a one-room school house in Missouri.

He was Dean of Students at ASU from 1950 until 1969, and he said his conservative views made him controversial to liberal faculty members — especially as sentiment against the Vietnam War grew during the late 60s.

"I was an administrator at ASU in the late 50s and early 60s when students at ASU and all over the United States were turning pink," he said.

"As a conservative at ASU, I was much like a

'I do this because I don't write easily. I find trying to say something important in a very few words is very challenging mentally.'

— Emeritus W. P. Shofstall

cat trying to survive in a doghouse full of pit bulls."

He said part of the explanation was left-wing bias in the media, the public schools — which Shofstall refers to as "government schools" — and universities:

"Our teaching institutions were taken over in the 20s — I was there, Charley, I know — by the likes of John Dewey who went to Russia and came back saying: 'I have seen the future and it works.'"

"Education in America turned pink in the 30s and there is a tendency today for education to turn completely secular and almost red."

Shofstall said his penchant for controversy sometimes leaves him with an unfair reputation.

"I've been called a right winger and a Nazi — that sort of thing," he said.

But Shofstall said that people usually like him once they get to know him.

He said he recently overheard a woman he had sat next to at a luncheon later remark: "I sat by (Shofstall) at lunch the other day, and he's really a pretty decent fellow."

After retiring as dean of students in 1969, Shofstall was appointed by Gov. Jack Williams to fill an unexpired term as state superintendent of public instruction, a post he held until 1975.

Writer relates personal experiences through literary works

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA — When it comes to personal tragedies, most people hesitate to hang out their dirty laundry or let the skeletons out of the family closet.

Not author Pat Conroy.

Throughout his career, he has coped with problems such as job failure, mental breakdown and family feuds by including them in such autobiographical novels as "The Great Santini" and "The Lords of Discipline." Recently he began a book dealing with the alleged sexual abuse of his stepdaughter.

"The reason I write is to explain my life to myself," he said in a recent interview. "I've also discovered that when I do that I'm explaining other people's lives to them."

Conroy said his wife's former husband has been charged with molesting their 12-year-old daughter.

"My family has been devastated," he said last week in Atlanta, where he began a 16-city tour to promote his new book, "The Prince of Tides."

"We're worried about the child. No one knows how to deal with this. . . Our whole family has been crying every night because of what's happened to this kid," he said.

DeKalb County Assistant District Attorney J. Tom Morgan confirmed that Dr. Alan Fleischer was indicted Aug. 14 by a DeKalb County grand jury on a felony charge of molesting his daughter. Fleischer is a neurosurgeon at the University of Arizona Medical School in Tucson, Ariz.

"I'm totally, completely innocent," Fleischer said in a telephone interview from Tucson. "It's a personal vendetta. . . Conroy's been trying to do this for a long time based on what's happened in the past. He's out to destroy me, plain and simple. His goal is to destroy me."

'The reason I write is to explain my life to myself. I've also discovered that when I do that I'm explaining other people's lives to them.'

— Pat Conroy

The allegations focus on events in 1982, when Fleischer and the Conroys lived in the Atlanta area. The girl has been in the custody of Conroy and his wife, Lenore. Conroy said he recently moved his family to Rome, Italy, to escape the problems.

All three of Conroy's previous works have been based in part on personal experience and have been made into movies.

"The Water is Wide," Conroy's first published book, led to the film "Conrack." The book was based on Conroy's unhappy experience as a teacher of poor, black children at a school on Daufuskie Island, S.C. He was fired from the job after complaining about standards at the school.

His second book, "The Great Santini," was based on Conroy's stormy boyhood relationship with his authoritarian father, a Marine fighter pilot who sent Conroy to The Citadel, a military school in Charleston, S.C.

Conroy's father, Don, was so enraged by his portrayal in the book that he heaved it across a room and disappeared for three days.

But father and son resolved their differences after actor

Robert Duvall earned an Academy Award nomination for his portrayal as Santini. Don Conroy was so delighted he began giving interviews on talk shows as the Great Santini.

"My father now considers himself a literary and mythological figure," Conroy said.

Conroy's third book, "Lords of Discipline," is a scathing attack on military schools. In the book, a military school's savage system of initiation rites drives freshmen cadets to the point of mental breakdowns and suicide.

"The Prince of Tides," Conroy's latest work, is the story of Tom Wingo, a former high school football coach in South Carolina who is forced to re-examine his life when his marriage and career crumble and his disturbed sister tries to commit suicide.

Conroy said a central character in the book, Lila Wingo, the manipulative mother of Tom Wingo, was based on his own mother, who is now dead. He also said he drew on the experience of his own mental breakdown in 1976 to illustrate the mental problems suffered by Wingo's sister in the book.

Houghton Mifflin, which has sold less than 40,000 copies of Conroy's three previous hardcover books, issued 250,000 copies in the first printing of "The Prince of Tides." It is the second-largest first printing in the company's 154-year history, said spokeswoman Marly Rusoff.

Despite mixed reviews in the nation's major newspapers and news magazines, "The Prince of Tides" shot to fifth place in its third week on The New York Times Book Review Best Sellers list.

The book also is a Book-of-the-Month Club main selection and will be adapted next year into a United Artists film based on Conroy's screenplay.

Mourning Mozambique's president dies in airplane crash

By The Associated Press

KOMATIPOORT, South Africa — President Samora Machel of Mozambique, who led his Marxist nation through 11 crisis-ridden years of independence, was killed when his plane crashed into a rainswept South African hillside.

Marcelino dos Santos, No. 2 man in Mozambique's ruling Frelimo party, said in a nationwide radio address that Machel, 53, and other senior officials died in the crash of the presidential plane Sunday night just across the border in South Africa "in circumstances not yet clarified."

South Africa said all but 10 of the 39 people aboard were killed.

The first official confirmation by Machel's government came more than 12 hours after dos Santos said in his first announcement on the radio that the president's jet had not returned on schedule from Zambia. The radio played solemn music throughout the day.

He said Monday night that a 60-day period of national mourning had been declared.

The Soviet-built plane crashed 200 yards inside South Africa's frontier with Mozambique about 30 miles south of his border town, said the South African foreign minister, R.F. Botha.

South Africa's Bureau for Information said the Soviet pilot and nine other people survived the crash. Among the senior officials killed was Transport Minister Luis Alcantara Santos, it said.

Machel's body was brought to Komatipoort by truck and flown to Maputo, the bureau said at a temporary office it established here.

Earlier reports put the death toll at 27, but two more bodies were found in the wreckage of the twin-engined Tupolev 134A jet, it said.

In Lisbon, the Portuguese news agency ANOP quoted official sources and aviation experts it did not identify as saying the crash was caused by human error. It did not elaborate.

Machel's death left Mozambique without a leader at a time of worsening drought, increasing attacks by anti-Marxist rebels and growing conflict with South Africa.

Prime Minister Mario Machungo and dos Santos, who is the secretary of Parliament, are expected to share decisions until a successor is chosen after the funeral, expected sometime next week.

Both are considered candidates along with Joaquim Chissano, who was prime minister in a transitional government before independence from Portugal in 1975 and has been foreign minister since.

It was in Komatipoort that Machel and President P.W.

Botha signed the 1984 Treaty of Nkomati, which is the name of the river here and means, in Swazi, a cow with a calf and lots of milk.

The agreement was hailed as the start of an era of friendly relations. After signing it, Machel also made overtures to the West for investment and met with President Reagan in Washington.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said the news of Machel's death caused "profound regret."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz had met Machel "and had great respect for him," Redman said, adding that "we extend to the government and the people of Mozambique the deepest condolences of the American people."

There was no indication of foul play in the crash, but the United Democratic Front, South Africa's largest anti-apartheid coalition, said South Africa's recent verbal attacks and diplomatic measures against Mozambique "give us reasonable grounds to suspect South African involvement in this plane crash."

Alfred Nzo, general secretary of the African National Congress guerrilla group, said in Denmark that the ANC had similar suspicions.

Botha would not speculate on the cause of the crash. He said South Africa had proposed a joint investigation with Mozambique and foreign aviation experts should take part.

'Star Wars' protestors call initiative 1st step to WWII

By The Associated Press

Demonstrators protesting the "Star Wars" missile defense program blocked streets and sidewalks Monday in Atlanta, Washington, Cleveland and Sunnyvale, Calif., and police arrested 93 people.

The demonstrators, members of a group called No Business As Usual, said the Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly called "Star Wars," is a first step to World War III.

In Atlanta, about 100 people turned out for a protest at Georgia Tech, which is engaged in various defense-related research projects.

"We expect that our researchers will proceed with this type of research in the firm conviction that their work will be broadly beneficial," said a statement from acting school president Henry C. Bourne Jr.

The all-day demonstration included a "die-in" and a "pledge of allegiance to SDI." "There were no arrests and nothing non-peaceful," said Tech spokeswoman Jill Sewell Rice.

There was a brief attempt to slow morning rush hour traffic, but that was halted by police.

In Washington, about 50 protesters chanted "We're the future, not the bomb!" outside the building that houses the main SDI offices and the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Officer Thomas Randolph said 27 were charged with disorderly conduct, but one was also charged with assaulting a police officer, a felony.

Police at Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. in Sunnyvale arrested 45 people on charges of disrupting traffic into the Silicon Valley defense plant after a march by about 100 protesters.

One person was arrested for assault on a police officer, a felony, police said.

Instead of issuing infraction citations to the arrestees, which would have allowed them to leave immediately on a promise to appear in court later, police formally booked the demonstrators, said police Commander Alex Michaelis.

"We booked them and took them to the (Santa Clara) county jail on the probability of reoccurrence," he added. "In order to stop them we had to arrest them."

Castro announces plans to install nuclear reactor

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — Cuban leader Fidel Castro has announced that a third nuclear reactor is planned for his country, according to a Havana Radio broadcast monitored Monday in Miami.

Cuba has two 400-megawatt reactors under construction at Cienfuegos in southwestern Cuba, 150 miles from Florida. Castro said many of the technicians from that project will stay to build the third reactor, in northern Oriente Province on the island's eastern end.

He gave no details about the type of reactor to be built, nor when it would start. The Cienfuegos plants are to go on-line in 1990.

The plants at Cienfuegos are Soviet models, but Western experts say they use safer, more modern technology than the ill-fated Chernobyl plant.

"No installations in the world are built safer than the one we are constructing at Cienfuegos," Castro said Sunday.

Tax reform may cause firms to lower donations to colleges

Expert says money gifts may decline $11 billion

By College Press Service

STAMFORD, Conn. — Colleges reaped a record-breaking harvest of corporate and individual donations in 1984-85, a new tally of campus giving found last week.

But the report's authors — as well as other observers of college fund raising — said tax reform may stop many corporations from giving as much to higher education as they have in the past.

"1986 won't be a bad year," said George Brakely Jr., chairman and founder of Brakely, John Price Jones Inc., which prepared the annual Higher Education and American Philanthropy report.

But in 1987, when the government will stop letting taxpayers who do not itemize their returns take a charitable deduction for gifts to colleges, Brakely said donations could go down about $11 billion.

For the moment, however, donations to colleges are escalating.

Corporate giving to the 71 colleges that belong to HEAP rose 46 percent to $2 billion in 1984-85, Brakely said.

Brakely attributes the gain to the bull stock market and the relatively stable economy.

An earlier, larger survey of more than 1,000 universities determined average giving to colleges rose by 13 percent.

"Total voluntary support rose about 13 percent to $6.3 billion from last year and 66 percent over 1979-80" said Paul Miller of the Council for Financial Aid to Education in New York.

"Individual business corporations gave $1.6 billion to higher education institutions," he said. "That's up 23.8 percent over the previous year, and up an incredible 126 percent" from 1979-80.

Harvard got $145.6 million in "voluntary support" in 1984-85, Miller said.

Stanford was the next most successful collegiate fund raiser, bringing in $125 million.

Regardless of deductions, Miller said the business community itself benefits from donating huge sums of money, and the benefits far outweigh taxes alone.

"Over the last five to 10 years, the (business) community has become very deeply concerned about its future workforce. Demographics are changing and businesses are running into a shortage of workers," he said.

"That's just one aspect. Another is clearly research. Businesses realize the country's ability to compete in the world and come up with new ideas depends on educated people."

Miller notes corporate giving rose "despite falling profits during the 1981-83 period of recession."

Brakely said colleges, too, have been soliciting corporate donations more aggressively.

"There's been more capital campaigns recently than in past years," Brakely said.

Miller said, "Colleges and universities have strengthened their fund-raising offices, worked on their constituency and offered better programs. People bought it."

Brakely said, "There's been a great increase in (donors) establishing chairs, endowments, scholarships and distinguished professorships."

The great bull stock market also helped swell campus coffers, he said.

"Foundation assets increased 30 percent because of the stock market," Brakely said. "As such, (foundations) are required by law to give 5 to 6 percent (of their earnings) away."

Both Brakely and Miller fear the bubble may burst if Congress passes the tax reform bill it is now debating.

"1987 is a year of uncertainty," Brakely said. "It's quite possible — if not probable — that large donors will hold back to see what (tax reform) means and how it will affect them," he said.

"The rate of philanthropy has increased 10 percent each year. The great concern is 1987 and the effect of the tax bill on larger corporations."

Miller is not sure just how big a bite tax reform will take out of college giving.

"It may cause some bumps along the way. People will make their gifts this year instead of next year. It may be a case of borrowing from Peter to pay Paul," he said.

UA administration refuses students' bid to make dorm coed

By Intercollegiate Press

TUCSON — Despite unanimous support from student government and the Residence Hall Association, a recent recommendation to introduce more coed living halls on campus has been rejected by the UA administration.

Last semester members of the Coed Housing Information Committee recommended that the Arizona and Sonora residence halls be converted to coed halls on a floor-by-floor basis.

In addition, their proposal included a concept of 24-hour visitation rights in the study lounges of those halls.

Both ideas received the full support of the Associated Students of UA and RHA but were rejected by UA Vice President for Student Affairs Dudley B. Woodard.

Ieva Bilsens, president of RHA, said: "Those changes could have made such a big difference in the rowdiness and vandalism problems in those halls."

Rosalind E. Andreas, dean of students, said the recommendation and response came too late in the spring semester, and new students were already informed of current living situations.

Woodard said, "We want to introduce changes into the system step by step."

The possibility exists that coed housing could be put into effect in those halls in 1987-88, Woodard said.

Both Bilsens and Cecil R. "Corky"

Taylor, director of residence life, agreed that the Arizona and Sonora halls are the biggest behavioral and management problems in the UA residence hall system, and studies show that coed halls have lower vandalism rates, Bilsens said.

"They are not using the coed situation where it could make the most difference," Bilsens said.

The 24-hour visitation request was denied for security reasons, Woodard said.

Woodard said student and public opinion also influenced the decision.

"Our first concern is security, and it is very hard to maintain with a 24-hour visitation policy ... (and) not all students are in favor of a 24-hour visitation policy. It really cuts down on the residents' privacy," he said.

Concepts of the proposal that were accepted, however, are the conversion of Manzanita-Mohave residence halls to coed living on a wing-by-wing basis and the permanent unlocking of doors that separate wings in Kaibab-Huachuca and Apache-Santa Cruz residence halls.

The physical layout and configuration of Manzanita and Mohave halls lend them to the success of the conversion, he said.

In addition, both halls have been predominantly occupied by upperclassmen, he said.

Sun Devils' fans bring Benjamin to ASU ball club

By CAROL BOOS
State Press

Many people choose ASU because the sun shines 90 percent of the year, but Devil shortstop Mike Benjamin has a different reason: the baseball fans.

"I came to the UA game during recruiting season, and the way the fans yelled and everything was great," he said.

Benjamin came from a junior college in Cerritos, Calif., where he won Most Improved Player in his freshman year and was team captain his sophomore year. Then he found out about ASU, where he saw a chance to play. But he didn't see that academically there can be a lot of difference.

"It was hard at first; school is a lot tougher, and I wasn't able to spend as much time on the field," he said.

If he wasn't able to spend as much time on the field as he wanted to, it didn't show in his stats. Last season the 6-foot, 170 pound senior had 19 errors in 383 chances, and he batted over .300 with six home runs and 32 RBIs.

Although Benjamin originally came to ASU hoping to play second base, he found himself playing shortstop.

"I like it (playing shortstop) because there is more freedom than when I played second," he said.

Now that he is a veteran, Benjamin hopes to be able to contribute to the team in other ways besides batting.

"I hope to become some type of team leader as well as hold my own on the field and at the plate," he said. "I want to be consistent in both aspects."

Last year was a year the Devils are happy to see end; nobody likes being on probation. Now they are able to look forward to a new season and a chance for the College World Series in Omaha, Neb.

"I think our chances are pretty good," he said, "if everyone molds and plays up to their capabilities."

One thing Benjamin said will help make the road to Omaha shorter is the pitching staff.

"The whole pitching staff is new, and it should help us out,"

ASU second baseman Mike Benjamin, shown here in action last spring, is looking forward to a possible College World Series berth next season.

Benjamin said. "We have a lot of good arms coming in."

The Devils also have experience on their side. The infield has only one rookie, third baseman Freddie Combs.

"Everyone basically knows the system," Benjamin said.

The Devils opened their fall season last Thursday, losing to Grand Canyon College, who rallied to win, 8-6, but came back to beat Cal-Poly in a series, 2 games of 3.

"The series was a lot of ups and downs," he said. "We would get up for the game and then level off during the game.

"We had to try to get back up, and it doesn't always work."

The fall season is basically a practice time for the Devils. Their record goes virtually unnoticed, except by the players and Coach Jim Brock.

Benjamin hopes to continue his career in baseball by playing professionally.

Number of contenders for Pac-10 title dwindling rapidly

Jay Taylor
Sports Analysis Editor

And then there were five.

That's how many teams have a realistic shot at winning the Pac-10 title after this weekend's games, and I think we all know which team has the best chance.

That's right. If you answered ASU, come on down and pick up that new Buick, because you are absolutely right. The Devils have the inside track to the conference title after their 29-20 win over USC with a 5-0-1 overall record and a 3-0-1 Pac-10 mark as we pass the halfway point in the season, and there are several reasons to believe they can stay there.

First and foremost, they are already leading. Other teams must go into games knowing they cannot lose and hope to go to the Rose Bowl. The other four teams with a shot at the title — Washington, UCLA, Stanford and UA all have one loss in the conference — know they can't lose.

Second, ASU has the best schedule. The Devils are home for the next four weeks against Utah, Washington, California and Wichita State. Their sole remaining road game is the showdown with the Cats in Tucson Nov. 22.

Washington still has to travel to ASU and arch-rival Washington State, where they have had little luck recently. They also have UCLA and Oregon at home. It is highly doubtful the Huskies will emerge unscathed from that schedule.

Stanford has a tough task ahead of it. They host USC this week and Washington State next week. Then they travel to UCLA and Cal, then play the Cats in Tokyo in the season finale. Not much chance for the Cardinal.

If Stanford has it tough, they can always be encouraged they don't have to play

Strong tackle Jim Warne shows his appreciation to almost 10,000 Sun Devil fans who went to USC to support the Devils. The fans got to watch the Devils beat USC 29-20, improving their record to 5-0-1 and remaining on top of the Pac-10 conference. The only conference games still to play for the Devils are against Washington, California and UA.

UCLA's schedule the rest of the way. They host WSU this week, then play Oregon State. Then things get tough as the Bruins play Stanford, Washington and USC on consecutive weekends. Not a snowball's chance in hell for the Bruins.

So who does that leave? Right again. UA plays California, a team Washington State coach Jim Walden referred to as a moped among all the tanks on his team's schedule, this Saturday. Then they host the Trojans and travel to WSU before taking a week off. And then ASU comes to town the 22nd of November, and the Cats travel to Tokyo to wrap up their season against the Cardinal.

In short, sweet terms, the ASU-UA game is looking more and more each week like the game of the year.

The third reason ASU should win the conference is that they have the best team. They are certainly the most disciplined, having given up only one fumble all year and no interceptions in the last three games.

But even more impressive has been the lack of mental errors. Coach John Cooper is putting a smart team on the field, as evidenced by the fact that the Devils are the least-penalized team in the conference. Against the Trojans they were flagged three times for a total of 20 yards.

Reason number four — defense. ASU may not have the great statistics, but the defense gets the job done. One of the major reasons it does that is depth. The Devils play eight men consistently on the defensive line and it shows late in the games, as they wear down the opposition.

ASU is just stronger in the fourth quarter than its opponents are, a tribute to both the depth of the team and the conditioning of the team, something that was always lacking before Cooper. You can't win the Pac-10 without good coaching, and the Devils now have it.

The fifth reason is the offensive line, a strength of the offense all year. ASU's mammoth offensive line is opening the holes for Channing Williams, Darryl Harris and Paul Day, as well as giving Jeff Van Raaphorst time to throw. The passing game has become one of the best in the conference, and Van Raaphorst has moved from eighth in the conference in passing efficiency to second, behind only Chris Chandler of Washington.

Another reason the Devils should win is the backing the fans are giving the team this year. Granted there has been no reason for the fickle Sun Devil fans to turn on the team yet. But they are doing a great job of supporting the club.

For last week's game against USC, the Trojans allotted a certain amount of tickets for sale at ASU. Those were sold out by Monday and more had to be ordered. Those sold out by Thursday, but I was assured on the phone that there would be plenty of tickets available in the ASU section for sale at the Los Angeles Coliseum the day of the game.

Wrong. The ASU section in the north end zone was completely sold out and several hundred fans had to be given general admission tickets in the south end zone.

There were approximately 10,000 ASU fans at the game, and they were extremely vocal. In fact they made as much noise as the 55,000 USC fans, but basically all they did was listen to the Trojan marching band play the USC fight song about 1,200 times.

I knew the ASU fans had made an impression on the USC players when starting inside linebacker Rex Moore gave the ASU section the finger on his way out of the stadium. Rex is a real class act.

Speaking of class acts, let's not forget to leave the rest of the USC defense out of that category. ASU offensive guard Todd Kalis told The Phoenix Gazette he couldn't believe the language the Southern Cal defensive players were using.

"They were using words I can't even tell you," Kalis said. "They were swearing and talking all the time. They can say they're classy, but that's the most talking and swearing I've ever heard. I can't believe how much the refs took from their guys. We just walked away. We had pride and poise."

Maybe the USC defense should start to hang out with the New York Mets. It sounds like they have about the same mentality.

But getting back to the point, ASU has a lot of things going for it in its run for a conference title. In fact, who could ask for anything more? Well, we can always look forward to the Devils running the wishbone. Yes, the wishbone.

On third down and three early in the fourth quarter, ASU called time out, and Dan Ford went in at quarterback, and the Devils actually ran a play from the 'bone. The play was stopped short of a first down, but gained the desired effect of surprise.

So we don't know what Cooper is going to come up with from week to week. If he ran from the wishbone against USC, God only knows what he might try against Utah.

Maybe he might even throw the ball. Can you say shotgun? I thought you could.

But there is one thing we do know about Cooper. Right now he is putting the best Pac-10 football team on the field every week, and if he keeps doing that, nobody is going to beat the Devils.

NBA expected to expand; decision is due today

PHOENIX (AP) — Six cities hoping to land an expansion franchise made presentations Monday to the NBA's Board of Governors, but league officials expressed mixed emotions about diluting their product.

Representatives from Minneapolis, Toronto, Miami, Fla., Charlotte, N.C., Orlando, Fla., and Orange County, Calif., each made 30-minute presentations to the board's advisory and finance committee.

The 23-team league, which hasn't expanded since 1980, is expected to make its decision Tuesday. Eighteen votes are needed for final approval.

"We won't expand for the sake of expanding," San Antonio Spurs president Angelo Drossos said. "I've been an expansionist for a long time, but it won't hurt the league if we say 'no.'"

NBA Commissioner David Stern said he favors expansion, however.

"I think that expansion would be a good idea. But if it was next year, I think one (team) would be all I would recommend," he said. "I'm supporting the issue of expansion. We hope to have a firm and positive response to the subject of expansion before we close these meetings."

Board members said they will examine each city's strength of ownership, playing facilities, population growth, market area and projected fan support before casting their votes.

"It's a lot for the owners to absorb. They're still in the middle of discussing the pros and cons of expanding at this time," Stern said. "I've been preaching restraint and caution and the owners are reading that back to me. It's a normal businessman's caution."

"We've tried very hard to tell each of the cities that they were welcome to apply, but we didn't tell them to build massive media campaigns. How much money they spent is not going to determine anything."

Toronto has NBA Hall of Famer Wilt Chamberlain as one of its financial backers and plans to play in Maple Leaf Gardens, which seats 16,182 for hockey.

The Toronto Huskies hosted the first NBA game in 1946, but the city's team folded after the 1946-47 season and league officials are skeptical of competing again against hockey.

Nick Mileti, who owned the NBA's Cleveland Cavaliers from 1970-80, heads the Orange County group that already has built the 20,000-seat Westdome Arena in Anaheim.

League officials, however, said they are hesitant to add a third NBA team to the Southern California area. The Los Angeles Lakers and Los Angeles Clippers are already there.

Former Philadelphia 76ers player and coach Billy Cunningham is a partner in the Miami group with ex-76ers General Manager Pat Williams involved with Orlando's bid.

Miami already has its nickname of "Magic" chosen, has started construction on a 16,930-seat arena and has sold 14,000 season tickets, while Orlando is ready to break ground for a 15,300-seat facility if it gets a franchise.

The Charlotte group, backed by business magnate George Chinn, has started building a new 23,500-seat arena and has sold more than 7,000 season tickets. But with a population of about 300,000, Charlotte is the smallest of the six cities seeking an expansion franchise.

Minneapolis hopes to have an 18,000-seat downtown arena built in two years while its team plays in the Metrodome.

Harvey Ratner and Marvin Wolfenson are trying to bring the NBA back to Minnesota after unsuccessfully trying to buy the Utah Jazz last summer for $25 million. The two businessmen once owned about 3 percent of the Minneapolis Lakers in 1957-60 before the team transferred to Los Angeles.

Minneapolis, Miami and Anaheim all had teams in the old American Basketball Association while the ABA Carolina Cougars played some of its games in Charlotte before eventually moving to Denver and becoming the NBA's Nuggets.

Each of the six groups has paid a partially refundable $100,000 application fee.

Dallas was the last city to be granted an expansion franchise six years ago. The Mavericks were second in the league in attendance last season at 16,904 per home game.

"What we need is another Dallas," Drossos said. "The Mavericks are the blueprint for a successful franchise."

Stern said 20 of the league's 23 existing clubs "are operating with a profit" and "it's a much healthier situation than it's been."

"But our business turnaround hasn't completed that cycle. Whether it's time to respond with a full-blown expansion plan is the issue on the table. You don't make money by grabbing a few bucks by expanding. Just because there are more cars in the parking lot doesn't mean you have to expand."

"The response of the owners has been a cautious one so far. But what their resolution will be, I'm not prepared to say. Anything can happen."

Heffers win intramural volleyball title

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

The women's intramural volleyball championships spiked into action last Thursday with the Heffers and Rez Rebels clinching the A and B titles, respectively.

The Heffers, the Class A defending champions, went up against Serves Up and came out of it winning the best-of-three series, 2-1.

"This was a very good game," said Chris Olson, a member of Serves Up.

"All the matches were really close, but it was the third game that was extremely close and in fact proved to be our downfall."

The Heffers took the first game, 15-10, and appeared to be on their way to an easy two-game sweep of Serves Up.

However, Serves Up came ready to play in the second game, pounding the Heffers, 15-4. This set up a showdown for the third and final game.

The third game went back and forth until the score was tied, 12-12. The Heffers appeared to have had enough of this see-saw battle, as they pounded three straight winners and put the game away for the championship.

In the other championship game, the Rez Rebels went up against the perennially powerful Sigma Nu Sweethearts and handed them a resounding two game to zero defeat.

"We played the Sigma Nu Sweethearts before and didn't do that well," said Valerie Dalton, manager of the Rez Rebels. "Considering that half of our players didn't show up for the first match earlier in the season and didn't know what to expect, I'm very pleased that we won the championship."

The Rez Rebels, an all-Native American team, came out smoking in the first game and pierced the Sweethearts, 15-9.

That loss seemed to spark the Sweethearts in the second game until the score was knotted at 13 all.

At this point the Rez Rebels played flawlessly, breaking the hearts and backs of the Sigma Nu Sweethearts in a 15-13 victory to carry home the women's B championship.

"We were really psyched up for this and it was a big thrill for the team," said Dalton.

The winners will receive a Champion Intramural Women's volleyball T-shirt and a Michelob volleyball intramural T-shirt.

The corec volleyball tournament, scheduled to start last Sunday, was postponed due to the racquetball tournament. Players can contact the intramural office to find out when the games will be rescheduled.

Hurricanes top AP writers' poll 4 weeks in row

By The Associated Press
Runner-up Alabama made up some ground Monday on No. 1-ranked Miami as the top seven teams remained the same in The Associated Press' college football poll.

Miami's 45-13 victory over Cincinnati enabled the Hurricanes to remain No. 1 for the fourth consecutive week. They received 55 of 59 first-place votes and 1,174 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Meanwhile, Alabama crushed Tennessee 56-28 and received three first-place votes and 1,111 points. Last week, Miami led 56-2 in first-place votes and 1,175-1,099 in points.

Nebraska held onto third place with 1,024 points by trouncing Missouri 48-17 and Michigan's last-second 20-17 triumph over Iowa enabled the Wolverines to stay No. 4 with 997 points while the Hawkeyes slipped from eighth place to 11th.

Fifth-ranked Oklahoma blanked Oklahoma State 19-0 and received 937 points. The other first-place vote went to No. 6 Penn State, which routed Syracuse 42-3 and received 902 points. Seventh-ranked Auburn trimmed Georgia Tech 31-10 and polled 861 points.

Washington swamped Bowling Green 48-0 and climbed from ninth place to eighth with 704 points, Arizona State jumped from 10th to ninth with 695 points by downing Southern California 29-20 and Texas A&M rose from 11th to 10th with 606 points by edging Baylor 31-30.

The Second Ten consists of Iowa, LSU, Mississippi State, Arkansas, Arizona, Clemson, UCLA, Stanford, Southern Methodist and North Carolina State.

Last week, it was Texas A&M, LSU, Mississippi State, Arkansas, Southern Cal, Arizona, Clemson, North Carolina and UCLA with Baylor and SMU tied for 20th.

Southern Cal, which had been in the Top Twenty the last four weeks, suffered its second consecutive setback against Arizona State and dropped out of the rankings.
