Student injured

Above, Tempe fire paramedics treat ASU senior Gregory Bluth while a Tempe police officer investigates the accident in which Bluth was injured. Bluth's motorcycle was traveling westbound on Apache Boulevard when it skidded into a car driven by ASU student Vince Joe Killian, who was attempting a right turn from Rural Road, police said. Killian was cited for failing to yield right on red. At right, Southwest Ambulance paramedics turn over Bluth, who was transported to Maricopa Medical Center with a broken leg and cuts to the head and arms. Killian was uninjured.

ASA will battle to limit tuition hike to $36

By KIM MATTINGLY
State Press

The Arizona Student Association is ready to battle the university presidents' proposed $96 tuition hike with "mass mobilization" during student protest rallies this week at ASU, NAU and UA, the ASA director said.

Diane Ziple said ASA feels their proposed $36 increase in resident tuition is enough "to maintain quality," but said it is going to take a tri-university effort to emphasize the point.

"There aren't many alternatives when your proposal is met without compromise," Ziple said.

Terri Hoffman, ASA member and state relations director for Associated Students of ASU, said UA students are rallying at the Tucson campus today, and rallies at ASU and NAU are scheduled for Friday.

"(The regents') minds are basically made up," Hoffman said. "We feel the only way they'll listen to us is if we do have mass mobilization ... a united front for students."

The Council of Presidents, made up of the three university presidents and the regents' executive director, Molly Broad, proposed the tuition increase last week at a meeting of the finance subcommittee of the Arizona Board of Regents.

The $96 increase would bring resident tuition to $1,232 for 1987-88.

Out-of-state tuition for ASU and UA students would rise $368 to $4,628 for an academic year and $336 at NAU to make its tuition $4,028.

While these figures represent between an 8 and 9 percent increase, ASA has proposed that next year's tuition rise only 3.2 percent or $36 for in-state students.

Non-resident tuition should be increased only $135 at ASU and UA, and $118 at NAU, ASA's proposal said.

Esther Capin, chairwoman of the regents' finance subcommittee, said the regents are favoring the presidents' proposal, and Regent Donald Pitt called ASA's proposal "unrealistic" for maintaining quality education.

Bill Richards, ASA member and president of Associated Students of NAU, said ASA is "extremely frustrated" with the regents' reaction.

"I feel we have arguments to counter or answer every argument they have," Richards said. "But often those answers aren't listened to."

"The regents have some preconceptions ... no matter how good our argument is, those obstacles are still there."

ASASU and ASA members will be rallying on the West Lawn of Cady Mall Friday with tuition fact sheets and the regents' and state legislators' names and addresses for students who want to write personal letters.

All three universities are circulating cards for students to sign which ask for a lower tuition increase.

Hoffman said ASU students have signed more than 3,000 cards, UA more than 5,000 and NAU about 1,000.

Chris Cummiskey, ASA member and ASASU president, will speak at the rally and present ASA's report.

ASASU also is inviting Democratic gubernatorial candidate Carolyn Warner to speak at the protest, along with the candidates for superintendent of public instruction and others from the Legislature.

No speakers have confirmed their appearances at the rally.

The finance subcommittee will review additional information regarding tuition at their Nov. 6 meeting at ASU. They will present a final recommendation to the regents at their meeting here the following day.

Capin said the presidents' recommendation is still tentative because they have not considered a proposed increase in the regents' tuition waiver program, nor the universities' debts for capital development.

She does not know if those considerations will further raise the proposed increase, she said.

College expanding student advisement to conform to accreditation standards

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

The College of Business is expanding its student advising program to meet accreditation standards of the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, the dean of the college said.

However, the expansion will not be implemented fully until next semester, leaving the program understaffed for preregistration.

John Kraft said the Business College already has added two additional phone lines and is in the process of hiring four more advisers, but the positions would not be filled before January.

The college's accreditation was deferred by AACSB last spring when the agency found there was a deficiency of advisers and full-time faculty members.

Once the positions are added, students will be able to make an appointment at any time for weeks in advance.

Under the current system, students must wait in line between 8 a.m. and 10 a.m. on Monday to sign up for an appointment for the following week.

Kraft also said students will be able to see an adviser on a walk-in basis.

Jo Hennington, assistant dean, said until the college is able to hire additional advisers, the program will depend heavily on group advising.

"We just don't have the manpower ... we're advertising to fill the new positions right now, but this process takes awhile."

Kristin Schmidtke, a senior finance major, said she has waited in line up to an hour for an appointment.

"It's almost impossible to get into see a counselor," she said. "It's easier to figure out your schedule yourself."

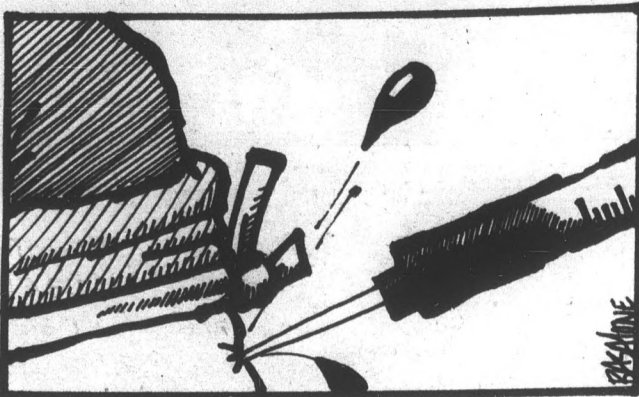

Bonnie Wilcox, the academic advising coordinator, said the college advised approximately 18,000 students last year.

"We want to give students the impression we're here to help," Wilcox said. "Once we get the new advisers, we're going to beef up the at-the-counter advising and add advisement groups for new freshmen, transfer students, students filing their petition of study, and continuing students."

ASASU bill would change supreme court's title

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

The Associated Students Government Operations Committee is expected to consider a bill tonight that would change the name of the ASASU Supreme Court.

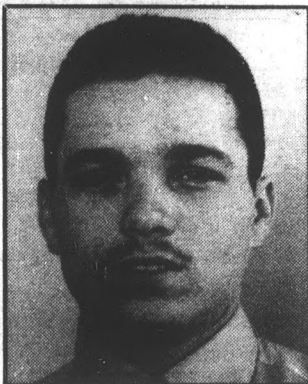

College of Public Programs Sen. Kate Lehman, who co-sponsored Senate Bill 27 with College of Engineering Sen. Kevin Anderson and College of Business Sen. John Colombo, said the measure would change the name of the court to the Board of Disputes.

"All the bill will do is change the name back to what it was seven or eight years ago," Lehman said.

"The name supreme court gives everyone the impression that it has more power and knowledge than it really does."

Supreme Court Chief Justice John Matelski opposes the measure and said it "is a waste of the senate's time and will not affect the court or the way we make decisions at all."

"The title of supreme court may not be our original rightful name, but it is a name that distinguishes us as part of the student government," he said.

'The title of supreme court may not be our original rightful name, but it is a name that distinguishes us as part of the student government.'

— John Matelski

Lehman said the name gives students a "false sense of recourse," and the "justices do not have the legal training or experience to make interpretations of the law" or be called a supreme court.

The bill is the latest of several senate measures aimed at altering the court.

Senate Bill 19, approved Oct. 21, prohibits the supreme court from "declaring the conduct of the senate ... unconstitutional based upon interpretation of federal, state or U.S. constitutional law."

The senate also approved a resolution that limits the court to using only the ASASU constitution and bylaws when they make decisions.

"It is quite clear to me that the legislation, like this bill, that has been presented lately is there to undermine the court in one way or another in response to a decision the court made against ASASU," Matelski said.

Matelski was referring to two ASASU campaign spending-limit rules and a $20 deposit required of ASASU candidates that the court ruled unconstitutional Sept. 18.

But Lehman said, "Senate Bill 27 is not in response to a specific decision.

"I just think the idea of the court justices interpreting law when they are not qualified to do so is dangerous."

ASASU Senate decides to loan yearbook $4,000 sponsorship

The Associated Student Senate has decided to loan the newly revived ASU yearbook $4,000 so the staff can meet its initial production deadlines.

ASASU Senate Bill 24 created a revenue line for the yearbook by transferring funds from the senate contingency account.

But the bill specifies that the first profits from yearbook sales must be returned to the senate.

The $4,000 will provide sponsorship for 40 pages of the yearbook on a loan basis.

College of Liberal Arts Sen. Mark Isenberg, who co-sponsored the bill with his liberal arts college colleague Sen. Karl Karg and College of Education Sen. Kymberly Leicht, told the senate that getting a yearbook published is important to ASU.

"ASU students will take this book back home where their brothers and sisters will see it and want to go to Arizona State," Isenberg said.

Karg said the University "lacks a sense of community, and a yearbook would help overcome that."

College of Nursing Sen. Wendy Schwartz said ASU is the only school in the Pac-10 without a yearbook and stressed the importance of the project.

"The revenue line will help (the yearbook staff) get off the ground and enable them to meet their production dates," she said.

Yearbook editor Frank Fender said some pages of the book have been sent into production, and the final deadlines are approaching.

"We have a deadline in November, and our final date is at the end of January," he said.

A few senators acknowledged the importance of the yearbook, but expressed concern about the money being returned to the senate.

Although he voted for the measure and supports ASASU funding of a yearbook, College of Law Sen. Phil Stanfield said, "Knowing the apathy at ASU, I'm concerned about whether we will ever see the money."

But Fender said repayment will not be a problem.

"There is no chance that they won't get their money back over a period of time," he said.

Fender said that at the current format of 448 pages, the yearbook will need to sell about 2,000 copies to break even.

But he said the number that need to be sold to repay ASASU will "depend on what the final sales are, what we scale the book down to be, and how we meet our goals."

Fender said the yearbook staff has sold 425 books.

Kimball

A candidate for ordinary citizens

Ellen Young
Columnist

Why should I vote for Richard Kimball? Who is he, anyway? That is what I hope to explain.

A lot of people are not too familiar with Kimball, even though he has served as chairman of the Arizona Corporation Commission for three years, and as an Arizona state senator for four years. During his terms in elected office, Kimball has fought for the causes that affect the lives of ordinary citizens — issues such as the environment, education, and the rights of senior citizens, tenants and veterans.

John McCain will tell you that he also cares about these matters. But what has he done to prove it? In 1984, the National Council on Senior Citizens examined McCain's voting record on issues affecting seniors and gave him a rating of 0 percent.

Kimball, on the other hand, walked door to door for months to create a senior citizens organization. While on the Corporation Commission, he set up a program called "Lifeline" to prevent the elderly and disabled from losing their telephone service. He complains that the United States abandons people when they age, and he opposes the high fees that seniors currently pay for physicians and Medicare.

During McCain's first year in Congress, the League of Conservation Voters also rated him at 0 percent. Since 1982, he has voted against over 90 percent of all environmental legislation and has supported amendments to weaken existing legislation. He was one of only 27 congressmen to vote against the Safe Drinking Water Act. Kimball points out that while Arizona used to be the cleanest state environmentally, it is now one of the most polluted. He supports the Clean Air Act and believes that polluters should suffer the consequences of their actions economically. He has been endorsed by the Sierra Club, the Arizona Friends of the Earth, the Arizona Environmental Political Action Committee and the National League of Conservation Voters.

McCain's environmental record can partly be explained by the contributions he receives from defense contractors, since the defense industry pumps chemicals into the ground rather than taking the more costly route of shipping them to toxic waste dumps. When the defense PACs examine his voting record, they rate him at 100 percent. His record on veterans' issues also has been poor.

Kimball is not opposed to defense. He is opposed to giving the defense industry carte blanche and allowing them to get away with constant cost overruns. If nothing else, it simply isn't a good business practice. A contract with a defense contractor should require that the goods come in on time and at cost. If they come in late, or above cost, it should be the contractor's loss, not the loss of the United States government. Kimball also opposes recent cutbacks on education and medical care for veterans. He feels that these actions send a poor message to society — the message that the human element of defense is less important than the mechanical element. He has been endorsed by the Arizona Veterans Advisory Council.

Part of John McCain's popularity has been due to the fact that he was once a prisoner of war. Kimball agrees that McCain's war record deserves respect, but he points out that U.S. Senate seats should not be handed out as compensation for it. Nevertheless, whenever Kimball makes a criticism of McCain — no matter how valid — someone accuses him of "picking on a prisoner of war." Is McCain to be considered a saint?

The Arizona Republic appears to think so. The paper has largely kept silent about Kimball's positions, while it has taken every opportunity to make personal attacks. Republic writers have consistently referred to Kimball as an incompetent who deserves to lose. The Tucson newspapers have not had this bias against Kimball. They have done numerous articles on his positions, and not surprisingly, he's way ahead in the polls there. To sum things up, if Kimball wants the truth about his positions to be heard in Maricopa County, he must pay for advertisements. McCain, who has received tremendous funds from various corporations, hasn't really needed to purchase publicity with the Republic on his side. But he has spent a great deal, nevertheless. In a recent saturation of the airwaves, McCain spent more money than both Democratic gubernatorial candidates Carolyn Warner and Tony Mason before the primary.

McCain has pointed out that he has had experience in national government, while Kimball's experience is only at the state level. This is true. But where a man gains his experience is hardly as significant as what he has done with that experience. Before Kimball entered the Corporation Commission, it was being investigated for fraud by the FBI and sued by the Attorney General for allowing utilities to draft their own rate increases. Kimball reversed that trend. He exposed mismanagement and fought against constant utility rate hikes.

It is because of Richard Kimball that the Corporation Commission is no longer a mere pawn of the utility companies. He began a consumer-oriented tradition that has been continued by people like Renz Jennings, Marcia Weeks and Sharon Megdal. Obviously, he has not been popular with the utilities. That's why the large corporate campaign contributions have gone to McCain. In fact, Kimball has been sued by virtually every utility in the state, and he's never lost one of those cases. Kimball sees his service on the commission as his "proudest moment in politics."

Where a man gains his experience is hardly as significant as what he has done with that experience.

I urge you to vote for Richard Kimball, not because he belongs to my political party, but because he's an honest and compassionate man who votes his conscience.

You hear a lot of apathetic voices these days, claiming they do not bother to vote because "politicians are all crooks and you can't trust any of them." But if you asked them to describe someone who would be worth voting for — a candidate who would actually motivate them to vote — they would describe someone like Richard Kimball. It's people like these who need to be told that they can have faith in government again, and that Kimball is a man who will prove worthy of that faith.

McCain

Experience, not theatrics, needed

Patrick J. Kucera
Opinion Editor

Dear Richard Kimball,

Last week, I received one of your fliers on my car at a shopping mall. I was a bit surprised. Since I had not received any of your campaign literature at my home in Phoenix, I have had to rely on reading the newspapers and watching television.

Well, after reviewing all the evidence, I regret to inform you that I will be casting my vote for your opponent, John McCain.

Let me say, first of all, that I think your campaign is sincere and that you have a lot to offer Arizona, but when your qualifications, policies and promises are lined up next to Mr. McCain's, I have concluded that the best candidate is McCain.

There are several factors that have solidified my decision to vote for McCain. You might want to pay attention to them because they may help you the next time you run for a federal office.

First and foremost, John McCain has the experience in Washington, D.C., that you don't have. You have said in the past that you have plenty of experience in the Arizona Senate and the Arizona Corporation Commission. However, McCain is running circles around you in the experience game.

When McCain was sent to the House of Representatives by the voters of District 1, he impressed just about everyone at the Capitol. That led to his election as the Congressional freshman class president, a position that is not handed out to just anyone.

After four years in Congress, McCain has proven himself an effective representative and would make an impressive senator from Arizona. I was quite happy with the fact that McCain sent a flier to my house every three weeks announcing when he would be in town to listen to his constituents. That is what made him a great congressman instead of a good one.

I know that you are thinking that McCain is too conservative for Arizona and that his views are pro-Establishment. Maybe that is what the voters of Arizona may want — someone who supports business and industry and is conservative. But your arguments against McCain are groundless.

You have accused him of being the sweetheart of the defense industry, pointing to the contributions his campaign has received from those companies. Isn't that the pot calling the kettle black? How much money have you received from the big labor forces in the state, Mr. Kimball?

You also indicate that McCain is anti-environment. What you mean is that McCain refuses to rubber-stamp every bill that has come up that deals with the environment. I am wondering, Mr. Kimball, if you would vote to build a dam that could systematically prevent flooding in Phoenix for the next 50 years or would you be more concerned about the Algerian mosquito that may have inhabited the upper Salt River? Your endorsement from the Sierra Club would affect your vote, wouldn't it?

By the way, Mr. Kimball, I would like to bring up some of the comments you have made about McCain that I consider to be cheap theatrics to pander to certain elements of the voting public.

At the beginning of your campaign, you capitalized on a comment that McCain had made during a speech at the U of A. McCain referred to the senior citizen community

"Leisure World" as "Seizure World." You took that comment and tried to make it seem as though McCain was against senior citizens. C'mon, Richard. Granted, it was not the best remark to make, but for you to say that one bad comment indicates that someone is going to trim Social Security benefits or cut Medicare is ludicrous. You mean to tell me that you have never made an off-color remark. If you say you haven't, you are either a saint or a liar. The Kimball campaign has made more of the comment than some citizens of Leisure World, who, in letters to Valley newspapers, said they were not offended by the comment. Some even thought it was funny.

You also continually try and misinform the public on McCain's military service in Vietnam. More than once you have reiterated that the junior Senate seat from Arizona should not be given to a person simply because he was a prisoner of war. McCain keeps saying the same thing, but it falls on your deaf ears, and you harp on the fact that he may be trying to get the sympathy vote. No one, repeat no one, deserves a Senate seat. It must be earned through the trust of the public. Hopefully, you will drop this issue.

Maybe you also can drop the related issue about McCain's record on support for veterans groups and benefits. McCain is one of the foremost authorities on veterans' rights. You can promise the world on a platter to veterans groups, but the fact still remains that McCain's record is solid and he knows more about the subject than you do.

I lost a lot of respect for you when I saw you take on McCain in a televised League of Women Voters' debate. During part of your speech, you stooped to make a critical comment about McCain's height. You told him that he was misleading the public and was trying "to make himself look good" by standing on a platform on the stage. Big deal! I find it hard to believe that you do not have a hair stylist or makeup man who makes you look good, Mr. Kimball. What you were going for was the quick saber thrust to the heart and what you got was a loss of respect from me and many others.

No one is doubting your ability as a state senator or corporation commissioner. I have the utmost respect for the good you have done for Arizona. However, my vote is really based on two important matters.

What you were going for was the quick saber thrust to the heart, and what you got was a loss of respect.

First, McCain has the most experience of the two candidates. His record is impressive and he has been a good representative so far. As the old saying goes, "If it is not broken, don't fix it."

Secondly, you are spreading yourself too thin. You are promising everything to every special interest in Arizona. Big labor, veterans, environmental groups, taxpayers, Indians, college students are all on your list of people to make promises to.

Walter Mondale tried that technique in 1984. I did not vote for him because of that, and I won't be voting for you.

Sincerely
Patrick J. Kucera

'Hotbed'

ASU prof says peace threatened in Costa Rica

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

Costa Rica has survived without a standing army since 1948, but an ASU professor familiar with the country fears its days of peace may be numbered.

Patrick Lauderdale, a professor of justice studies, spoke to about 20 members of the Coalition for World Peace in the MU Santa Cruz Room Monday on "Peace Issues in Costa Rica."

Lauderdale said he began a social science research institute in Costa Rica in 1980 to study its unique institutions.

"Costa Rica is the only country in Central America without a standing army," Lauderdale said. "We thought that was fairly interesting in a place that's been a hotbed for 150 years."

He said Central American nations have been in a state of almost constant war since becoming independent in the 1850s, but Costa Rica has escaped much of the region's violence.

"Costa Rica is an anomaly," Lauderdale said. "It's different than the other nation-states down there."

"When Costa Rican men accidentally bump into each other in the street, they'll grab each other by the arm, smile and say 'I'm sorry! I'm sorry! I'm sorry!'"

"There's something very different about the society."

"It's been almost 40 years since Costa Rica has had an army. They feel they can be more secure without an army than their militarized neighbors."

Costa Rica is bordered on the north by Nicaragua and on the south by Panama.

Lauderdale said a standing army was banned by the constitution Costa Rica adopted in 1948. The constitution also forbids the introduction of foreign troops without the approval of the Costa Rican National Assembly.

But tension has been increasing in Costa Rican society since 1982, due to economic and social destabilization, he said.

Lauderdale said 1982 was the first year inflation was more than 100 percent.

Since then Costa Rica has suffered widespread unemployment, rampant inflation and has been dependent on the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the United States for loans, he said.

"Increased militarization is being offered by some as a means of economic stability," Lauderdale said.

He said some Costa Ricans argue that militarization would bring more American aid and more jobs.

But others feel the United States is taking advantage of Costa Rica's hardships to push it into a war against Nicaragua, he said.

No move has been made to revive a standing army, but the Costa Rican police force is being "professionalized," and Lauderdale said many wonder whether "it is being professionalized, para-militarized or militarized."

He said equipment Costa Ricans have received from the United States include M-60 machine guns, Huey 500E helicopters, amphibious troop carriers and 81mm mortars.

Lauderdale said there was a controversy as to whether U.S. troops were present in Costa Rica to train police, which would be a violation of the Costa Rican constitution.

In 1985 a Costa Rican newspaper reported 24 U.S. Green Berets were training police in a camp near the country's Nicaraguan border, Lauderdale said.

"I was on a Fulbright there at the time, and we got permission to go up to the base," he said. "There were 18 Special Forces troops (Green Berets) there."

Lauderdale said an airstrip near the resort town of Liberia, also near the Nicaraguan border, was also a point of contention.

"The airstrip was identified as a tourist development, but unofficial U.S. advisers and the local police chief supervised its construction," he said.

Though some have alleged the airstrip is being used by Nicaraguan Contras fighting the Sandinista government, Lauderdale said it is "indeterminate whether Contra planes have been using the airstrip."

Candidate denies memory of telling 'sexist' ape joke

By The Associated Press

PHOENIX — U.S. Senate candidate John McCain's spokeswoman said Monday he does not recall having told an allegedly sexist joke that a former Democratic staffer said he heard the Republican tell two years ago.

McCain, who now represents Arizona's 1st Congressional District, has been sharply blasted by the Arizona chapter of the National Organization for Women, which called him "insensitive, cruel and sexist."

Bruce Wright, the former chief of staff for Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said Monday he heard McCain tell the joke at a meeting hosted by Udall for Arizona mayors and city councilmen in March 1984 in Washington.

Wright said he did not recall the exact wording of the joke, except that it involved a woman who was raped by a gorilla.

"As I remember it, afterward she was angry at the ape for not having said he loved her," Wright said, adding that he had considered the joke to be in poor taste.

His version differs from the one given by NOW, which claimed McCain said, "When she finally regains consciousness and tries to speak, her doctor leans over to hear her sigh contentedly and to feebly ask, 'Where is that marvelous ape?'"

McCain spokeswoman Torie Clarke said, "He does not recall telling that joke."

Veteran states spying urged by vengeance

By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A disgruntled former Air Force man was arrested Monday and charged with trying to deliver secrets about an Air Force reconnaissance program to the Soviet Union, authorities said.

Allen John Davies of San Jose, Calif., a naturalized American citizen who works for Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp., was arrested by FBI agents in Palo Alto, south of San Francisco, said U.S. Attorney Joseph Russoniello.

The charge is punishable by up to life in prison.

On Sept. 22, Davies met with an undercover agent who posed as a representative of the Soviet consulate in San Francisco and offered information about the Air Force program, according to a sworn statement by an FBI agent filed in federal court.

Davies provided "detailed verbal information" about the program as well as a "hand drawing depicting various aspects" of the program, according to the statement by agent Roger Edstrom.

He said that much of the information Davies provided was classified as secret, according to Air Force Maj. Boyd Lease, director of the reconnaissance program.

Davies, 33, said he had worked on the reconnaissance program while in the Air Force in 1983 and 1984, the agent said.

Davies said he was providing the information "out of revenge because of the unfair way he was treated while in the Air Force," the agent said.

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 6:30 a.m. Monday:

•The fire alarm at the Community Services Building was activated due to a power outage that centered on the Mill Avenue and Curry Road intersection, police said.

The Community Services Building also suffered a temporary loss of electricity until Salt River Project crews were able to repair the damage, police said.

•During a routine check of the rooms at McClintock Residence Hall, police found a set of room keys in a door lock, police said.

Officers knocked on the door but no one answered, police said.

The residence assistant was contacted and opened the door to see if anyone was inside the room, police said.

Inside the room the owner of the keys was found asleep and unaware that she had them in the door, police said.

•Police warned a man not affiliated with the University of trespassing laws and asked him to leave 609 Alpha Drive, where he was apparently causing a disturbance, police said.

Police did not arrest the man even though members of the fraternity house called police to remove the man.

Police said they could not find the student who called for help, and therefore could not formally charge the man with trespassing or disturbing the peace.

•A student called police to help her friend, who had taken several types of prescription drugs and was not feeling well, police said.

An ambulance was called to treat the student, and she was transported to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital, where she was treated and released, police said.

•Police found a transient sleeping on the grass at the Sun Angel track, police said.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents for the period ending midnight Monday:

•Police said a man robbed a clerk at Clothworld, 1711 E. Southern Ave., at gunpoint Oct. 24.

The man entered the store, approached the clerk and demanded all the money in the cash register.

The clerk told police she thought the man was playing a "Halloween joke" on her because he had black makeup smeared all over his face.

The man insisted he was not playing a joke and displayed a revolver to reinforce his point.

The gunman removed $95 from the register and fled on foot.

Police describe the suspect as Hispanic, 25 years old, 5-foot-8, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes.

He was wearing a white sportshirt and Levi's denim jeans.

•An officer was dispatched to investigate reports of threatening phone calls Oct. 26 at a Tempe woman's residence, police said.

The woman reported she was receiving calls from a man who repeatedly threatened to kill her.

A phone trace was completed through Mountain Bell, and Phoenix police apprehended the man at a phone booth after observing him place a call.

Police identified the man as Patrick Joseph Driskill, 1533 W. Roosevelt St.

•Police said a Tempe woman reported observing an indecent exposure Oct. 24 in Daley Park, 1800 S. College St.

The woman was walking to her car in the parking lot of the park when she was approached by a man in a silver two-door Toyota.

Warner launches attack o

By BENNY McCONNELL
State Press

PHOENIX — With recent polls showing her falling behind Independent candidate Bill Schulz, Democrat Carolyn Warner brought out her guns and began a heavy artillery assault in the gubernatorial race.

Resting comfortably among her Democratic colleagues of the Nucleus Club at the Phoenix Hilton Thursday, Warner gave her most dramatic speech in the campaign.

She said of Schulz, "I simply can't understand how a man can spend two years of his life and $600,000 studying government and still know so little of Arizona."

Warner wasted no time in attacking Schulz's government plan, "The Arizona Governor."

She said, "He proposes to eliminate the state treasurer and consolidate its responsibilities in the Department of Finance. There is no Department of Finance in Arizona. His answer is to create one."

She said Schulz intends to eliminate the elected job of state superintendent — which she held for 12 years. Warner did not defend the superintendent's position, but did stick up for local school boards.

"Well, he says, their effectiveness has declined," she said. "I quote (from his plan), 'The job is being shouldered mainly by homemakers and they can't be trusted to be solely effective in demanding operational and financial efficiency.'"

Mudslinging candidates 'dirty' pol

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Negative campaigning, the volatile "dark side of politics" that some call mudslinging, is making its presence felt heavily this year in campaigns across the nation.

Personal attacks as well as accusations of conflict of interest, absenteeism in high office and political extremism have left their stamp on many Senate, House and gubernatorial campaigns.

"In these last weeks before an election, we see again the dark side of politics," Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., told the Senate earlier this month. "Each campaign plumbs new depths of name-calling in 30-second TV commercials that transform personal attack into an art form."

"Politics becomes an even dirtier job, hardening to its practitioners, revolting to the public," he said.

That is the conclusion Pennsylvania Republican Lt. Gov. William Scranton III said he reached when he ordered his staff to scrap negative adds aimed against Robert P. Casey, his centralized power," she said. "(He says) the voters, the citizens of Arizona, have too much say."

Warner said Schulz plans to appoint a real estate "regent," who would oversee operations and development of state-owned land.

"I have no doubt he can find a real estate entrepreneur to take charge of our land," she said.

Schulz is a real-estate and apartment complex owner and developer who recently disclosed his net worth is about $55 million.

"Our state land trust is simply too important, too valuable, to ourselves and to our children to entrust to this friendly real estate developer who has no constraints or accountability in law," Warner said.

Party' political races across country in the race for governor. Nader has deteriorated into an unproductive... Scranton said last week. "It has become... mudslinging is not leadership... We... it is time to clean that up."

Nader, questioning why Republican Sen. Robert Kasten's drunk-driving arrest has not become a bigger campaign issue, said Kasten "needs rehabilitation rather than re-election."

Joe Sims, Kasten's news secretary, referring to Democratic candidate Edward Garvey, said Nader's comments "show Mr. Garvey is sinking to a new low." A Garvey spokesman said the candidate hadn't known what Nader was going to say.

-In Illinois, a spokesman for Democratic challenger Adlai Stevenson accused GOP Gov. James Thompson of being "close with unsavory elements in labor" because he had accepted a $10,000 contribution from the Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union which the President's Commission on Organized Crimes has linked to racketeering.

-In California, Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston said the moderate image of his opponent, Republican Rep. Ed Zschau, is based on "political expediency, flip-flops and a lack of conviction."

Police in 2 states disrupt high-tech gambling setup

By The Associated Press.

PHOENIX — A high-tech gambling ring operating in Arizona and Colorado has been broken up, authorities said Monday.

Police in Phoenix, Scottsdale and Broomfield, Colo., the Arizona Department of Public Safety and the Maricopa County attorney's office served warrants Sunday at five locations, said Sgt. D.P. Davis of the Phoenix Police Department's special investigations unit.

Civil racketeering liens and complaints were also filed under Arizona's Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organization Act, he said.

Phoenix police detectives David Bauer and Gary Ball described the gambling ring as "very sophisticated," saying each of the bettors was assigned a number and placed bets by calling a beeper.

Investigators estimated that 25 players had wagered at least $1 million since their probe began last month.

The players were upper-income, upper-middle-class people who usually bet more than $500 on individual games, the detectives said.

Gambling records and cash were seized from the five Arizona and Colorado residences, police said.

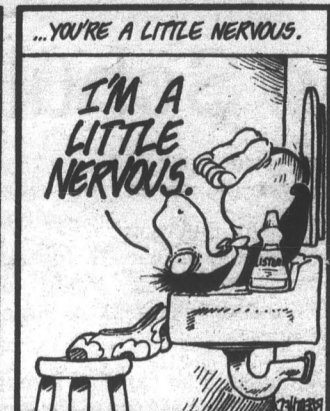

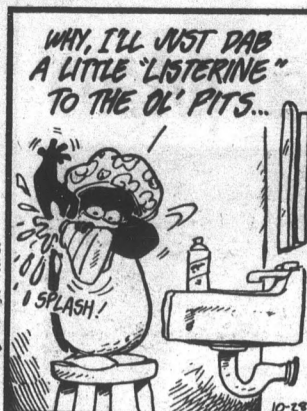

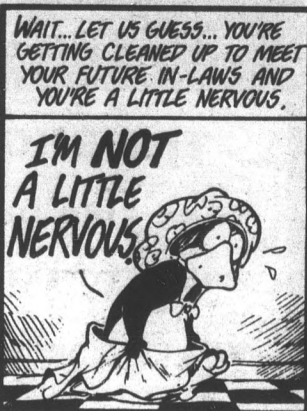

The search warrants were served on John F. Chase, 52, and his son, John D., 21, of Broomfield, a Denver suburb; Orest J. Alex, 65, of Scottsdale; John V. Fitzgerald, 50, of Phoenix; and Anthony Aitoro, 46, of Prescott.

Davis and the elder Chase was "the main man" in the gambling ring. Chase was arrested on unrelated charges when the warrant was served at his residence, Davis said. The other men were not arrested, he said.

Survey shows Legislature supports arts funding increase

By MARY MICKLE State Press

Nearly two-thirds of 127 candidates for seats in the Arizona Legislature favor an increase in spending for the arts, according to a survey by the Arizonans for Cultural Development board.

"Never before have we had a result this satisfying to us. The level for the importance of art and cultural development seems to be rising," ACD President Richard Whitney said.

The direct mail survey of candidates for the Legislature was conducted by Phoenix's Behavior Research Center on behalf of ACD.

ACD sent 127 questionnaires to the candidates after the September primary election. A second mailing was sent in early October to those who had not yet responded.

The final sample of completed questionnaires included 44 candidates for the House of Representatives, 17 of them incumbents, and 23 Senate candidates with 16 incumbents.

Twenty-three of the House of Representative candidates are Democrats and 21 are Republicans. Among the Senate candidates, nine are Democrats and 14 are Republicans.

More than 80 percent of the candidates agree that Arizona should provide support for art education in public schools, and more than 90 percent believe the state should support art in rural areas.

Accessibility to the arts by minorities, handicapped and the elderly was supported by 87 percent.

"An overwhelming number of respondents agree that developing the arts in Arizona is important to tourism and economic development," Whitney said.

On the question of whether cultural institutions, such as the Phoenix Symphony and the Arizona Opera, should receive state funding, 43 percent agreed, 18 percent dissented and 39 percent did not know.

"When we only have 43 (percent) approving and 39 (percent) who have no opinion, we still have a ways to go," Whitney said.

"Another thing that was of concern to us was that a significant number of people did not think that quality arts and cultural organization are an importance as far as attracting quality businesses to the state," he said.

Jack Whiteman, president of Empire Machinery and member of the Arizona Commission of the Arts, said: "Art is very important. I don't think that we are a cultural desert, but that certainly is our reputation."

"We have a great arts and great cultural amenities here, but very few people know about them," he said.

"The Phoenix Symphony, which is in dire shape, is a major class orchestra. If we let it go, it will be disbanded. The young musicians will go other places to get jobs, and it will take us a long time to get back to where we are and 10 times as much money."

Whitney said the Legislature currently is not providing direct funding for arts in education but do provide some monies through the Arts Commission.

Reagan signs multi-faceted drug measure

By The Associated Press WASHINGTON

President Reagan signed a $1.7 billion anti-drug law Monday to bolster local and federal law enforcement efforts, stiffen criminal penalties for traffickers and launch an educational and medical campaign aimed at reducing user demand.

The comprehensive measure contains $200 million for information programs and $241 million for treatment.

The bill was passed in the waning hours of Congress Oct. 17 after some proponents caved in on a demand for a death penalty in murder cases related to drugs. That provision threatened to scuttle the bill in the Senate, where opponents of the death penalty were prepared to wage a filibuster.

Though the death penalty was dropped, the bill still provides tougher sentences for drug-related crimes and creates new penalties for selling the particularly insidious new form of cocaine called "crack."

It defines crack as a separate drug, and empowers federal agents to make arrests for possession of as little as five grams.

Cross country runners gear up for Pac-10 Invite, District meet

By CHRIS DORSEY
Contributing Writer

Cross Country season is underway and the Sun Devil runners are gearing up for two important meets: the Pac-10 Invitational and the NCAA district meet, both coming in November.

Doing well in the Pac-10 Invitational is especially important because it is where qualifying times for the district meet are calculated.

"The latter meets are stepping stones for the upcoming contests," said Ken Lehman, head cross country coach.

"The Pac-10 invitational and the district meet will be the meets we will be keying on."

Two top runners from the men's division, Dan Fisher and Steve Preston, are expected to do well in both meets. In the women's division, Laura LaMena is having a good year as the Devils move into their fourth meet.

Lehman's team consists of 14 men and 10 women.

In the men's division the best finish has been second place finishes in the UTEP and the ASU Invitational, but the squad's performance fell to sixth place in the Stanford meet.

Going into the Pac-10 meet, Fisher's fastest time of the year has been 31:03 on the 10-meter (6.2 mile) course. He achieved this time at the ASU invitational where he crossed the wire in front of the pack.

In the Devils' action at UTEP, Stanford and the ASU invitational, the senior placed fourth.

Last year, Fisher was the highest Sun Devil finisher in the Pac-10 Championship, placing 12th.

"I feel Dan and Steve are running very well," Lehman said.

And the statistics prove he is running well.

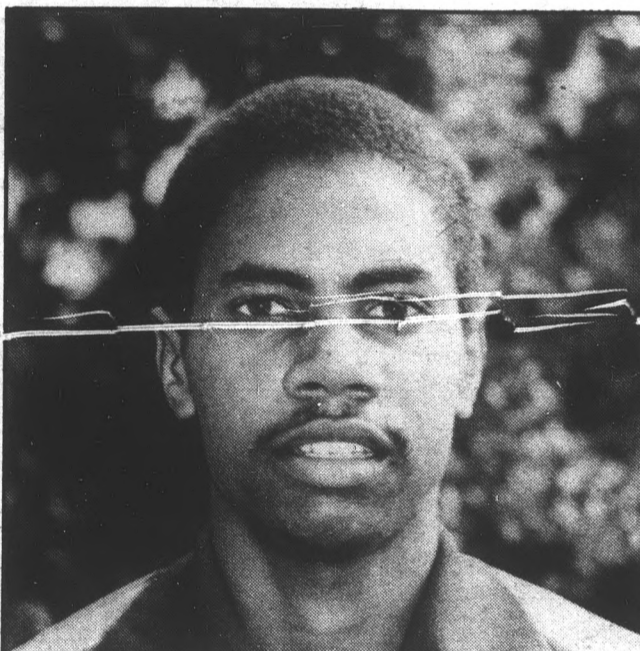

Fisher's time of 31:03 on the 6.2 mile course is just ahead of Preston's 31:29 mark.

In the women's division, LaMena ran her best time of the year on Sun Devil turf, 17:33. The NCAA women's course is a 5,000-meter (3.1 miles) outgoing.

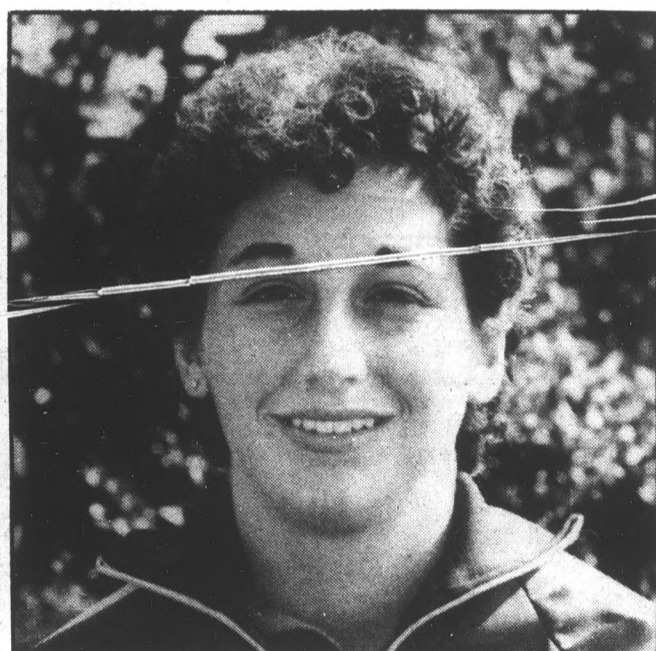

The schedule for the Sun Devil runners will be completed Nov. 15 at Fresno State where qualifying times will be calculated for the NCAA qualifying meet.

While Lehman is in favor of conditioning, he doesn't want to push his runners too hard.

"We plan to slack off on the training so that the runners can get enough rest," Lehman said. Hopefully these future contests will be their best meet."

Huskies come to town after Utah massacre

It's big-game time again for the Sun Devil football team.

For those of you who have been asleep for the last few weeks, ASU takes on Washington Saturday at Sun Devil Stadium in a game that will go a long way toward determining who plays in Pasadena on Jan. 1.

Stanford fell out of the race by losing to Southern Cal, 10-0 Saturday. Washington State blew what lost chance it had by getting its doors blown off, 54-16, by UCLA. That leaves ASU, Washington, UCLA and UA in the race.

Who will win the remaining games is hard to say. If you like to try to figure it out by comparing scores against common opponents, try this on for size:

ASU tied Washington State 21-21 and beat UCLA 16-9. But UCLA beat the Cougars by 38 points. Everyone beat up Oregon; ASU won 37-17, UA beat the Ducks 40-17 and Washington made them quack up in a 38-3 loss. ASU beat USC 29-20, but the Trojans beat the Huskies 20-10. So what we can tell about the race by comparing scores?

Nothing.

One thing we can tell, though, is that something is wrong in the polls. How is it that ASU did defeat Southern Cal and Washington lost to them, and the only blemish on the Devils' record is a tie with a team that beat USC, 34-17, and the Huskies are ranked ahead of the Sun Devils? If this makes any sense, consult your doctor.

Perhaps the fact that ASU is ranked below

Jay Taylor
Sports Analysis Editor

the Dogs is due to the fact that, in the words of the venerable Steve Baker, Utah defensive lineman, "(The Sun Devil offensive line) were pretty good, but no better than the other teams we have played."

Some of the other teams the Utes have played are Wyoming, New Mexico and San Diego State. If ASU's offensive line isn't light years ahead of the likes of those teams, I'll eat Baker's socks after the Utes' next drubbing.

But let's take a little closer look at just how effective Baker was against the ASU offensive line, of which he thought so little.

Baker did not make a single tackle in the game. Not a solo tackle. Not an assist. Nothing.

Now where does a guy who was as ineffective as anyone could be defensively get off criticizing ASU's offensive line? I can safely say that I could have suited up for the game, lined up on Utah's defensive line and made exactly the same contribution to stopping the Devils as Baker did: zero.

In addition to that moronic insight, where does anyone from Utah's defense get off making any kind of a comment about the relative strength of another team? The Utah defensive unit has no relative strength, since they are the worst in the country.

But now that I have that off my chest (I wonder if Baker has gotten the cleat marks from the ASU offense off his chest yet?), let's get back to the issue at hand.

This week's game shapes up as a war in the trenches. Both ASU coach John Cooper and Husky coach Don James like to run the ball on first and second down, and if it is working, they will keep on doing it.

The Huskies have two of the Pac-10's top nine rushers, while Darryl Harris moved back up from fourth to second in rushing with his 166-yard performance. In addition to Harris, Channing Williams and Paul Day have both run effectively, along with a cast of thousands who gained experience against the Utes.

The quarterbacks, Washington's Chris Chandler and the Devils' Jeff Van Raaphorst, are ranked 1 and 2 respectively in the Pac-10 in passing efficiency. But neither has thrown all that much — Chandler about 23 times per game; Van Raaphorst, 20.

So don't look for the air to be filled with footballs, unless it is from punts. Both teams have strong defenses, and the game will more than likely be won on mistakes, which makes ASU a strong candidate for the win since they haven't turned the ball over in three weeks.

But unfortunately for all of you out there who don't already have tickets or a satellite dish, you are going to have to be content to stand outside the stadium and listen to the crowd or listen on the radio because it will not be on television.

Now where does a guy who was as ineffective as anyone could be defensively get off criticizing ASU's offensive line?

That's right, in its infinite wisdom, "CBS Sports" has decided that all of us in the West would rather watch Miami play unranked Florida State than the Huskies and Devils, who in all likelihood will be ranked sixth and seventh this week.

There is absolutely no reason for this to happen. The game last year was moved to 1:30 in the afternoon for TV, and it didn't carry a third of the significance this does in terms of the conference title or a possible national championship.

So pull your heads out, CBS. Wake up and smell the coffee. Get it together. Straighten up. Think about what you're doing before you just assume we want to see Miami beat the hell out of Florida State, and put on the game that really means something to people who live west of the Mississippi, not to mention the game that will be more entertaining.

Intramurals crown corec volleyball champions

Hui O'Hana repeat A-league victory; Just For Fun II grabs B-league title

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

The corec volleyball championship matches got underway Sunday with defending champion Hui O'Hana retaining their title in the A division, while Just For Fun II captured the B title.

Hui O'Hana advanced to the finals by defeating Wrecking Crew in two games, 15-3, 15-7.

In the other division A semifinal game, Mango was pitted against the Radicals. The match proved to be no contest as the Radicals took the match in two games, 15-3, 15-11.

This set up a confrontation between two teams that had met two times previously, with Hui O'Hana coming out on top in both of those games.

"We played them in the finals last year, and we knew they were going to play us tough this year," said Debbie Morgan, manager of Hui O'Hana.

There was a lot on the line in the championship game for Hui O'Hana; not only were they trying to retain the championship but they were trying to keep a perfect record going.

"We were psyched going into the final because we had not lost a game or a match the whole season," Morgan said.

Hui O'Hana and fatigue proved to be too much for the Radicals as they lost the best-of-three series, 15-10, 15-13.

"They (Radicals) had a lot more games to play since they had to come up through the losers' bracket," said Juliette Moore, assistant director of intramurals.

"Hui O'Hana had a good break in between their match and were rested up to play," Moore said.

As far as the Hui O'Hana were concerned, they had accomplished what they had set out to do: play together as a team in order to win.

"We weren't cocky. We played together as a team," Morgan said.

Morgan believes the one aspect of her team's game that really was the deciding factor was the accuracy and power of their serves.

"We were playing really tired, considering the matches ran from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., but our serve really came through for us to win the important points and the championship," Morgan said.

In the semifinals of corec B division, the Mochi Pounders defeated Just For Fun II in two games, 15-13, 15-9.

This loss knocked Just For Fun II down into the losers' bracket, where their chances were still alive for a shot at the championship since they had only lost one game in the double-elimination tournament.

Just For Fun II then took on The Edge in the losers' bracket where they crushed them in two games, 15-10, 15-3.

They had now earned a rematch against Mochi Pounders.

Since Just For Fun II had already lost one match and Mochi Pounders had not lost, Just For Fun had to defeat them twice to win the championship.

In the first match, Just For Fun II succumbed to the pressure and was badly defeated in the first game, 15-5.

It seemed to be after this game that Just For Fun II came to life as they came back to take the second game, 15-11, and even the match.

The third game proved to be a real battle as the score went back and forth until the score reached 15. Then Just For Fun II smashed two quick points to win the first match and hand Mochi Pounders their first loss of the season.

This set up a rare championship match, according to the intramural department.

It is a rare occurrence for a team that had dropped down into the losers' bracket to be able to battle back to get into the championship match.

Mochi Pounders came out strong and stopped Just For Fun II cold in their tracks, 15-6.

However, it was all Just For Fun II after this as they came back to batter Mochi Pounders, 15-7, 15-2 and take home the championship.

"It was a really tough game," said Darcy Carlson, manager of Just For Fun II.

"All I can say is that we are tired, sore but very happy."

In club-sport news:

•The ASU Rugby club defeated the Phoenix Old Boys Rugby football club on Saturday, 19-6.

Steve Findley scored two tries for eight points, Corey Davis scored one try for four points and Jeff Burnett kicked one penalty kick for three points and had two conversions for two points each.

ASU is now 4-1 overall and 2-0 in league play.

Arbitrator reverses Rozelle's drug testing plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — An arbitrator on Monday struck down NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle's plan to randomly test all players twice for drugs during the regular season.

Arbitrator Richard Kasher of Philadelphia ruled that Rozelle's plan conflicted with the league's bargaining agreement with the NFL Players Association, which expires in August 1987.

Rozelle's edict last July, following the cocaine-related deaths of Cleveland Browns safety Don Rogers and University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias, would have made the NFL the only professional sports league to require mandatory random drug testing for all players.

But Kasher noted that the 1982 collective bargaining agreement with the players addressed the drug issue by calling for a preseason test of all players as well as individual tests when club physicians suspect a particular player of drug dependency.

"Accordingly," Kasher wrote in his 78-page ruling, "we conclude that the part of Commissioner Rozelle's augmented drug program, which establishes unscheduled testing, is in conflict with the specific provisions" of the contract "and is therefore superceded" by the agreement.

Rozelle's plan had been held in abeyance for Kasher's ruling, the second victory on the drug issue for the players association within a week. Another arbitrator ruled last week that nearly 200 players were improperly fined for refusing drug tests last season.

Gene Upshaw, executive director of the players association, called Kasher's decision "a victory for collective bargaining. It reaffirms the agreement we made in 1982 and says that changes in what we agreed to then cannot be made unless the union agrees to them. It confirms that the clubs cannot have Rozelle do independently what they cannot do themselves under the agreement.

"We're not trying to protect drug users," Upshaw said. "The players recognize they have a responsibility both on the field and off. But they also have rights, and it is our obligation to protect those rights."

Kasher upheld other elements of Rozelle's anti-drug program, including the designation of Dr. Forest Tennant to head an educational drive within the league. The arbitrator also ruled that the NFL could conduct urinalysis tests of draft-eligible players in the annual February tryouts of college seniors, since they are not covered by the collective bargaining agreement.

Kasher reached his decision after hearings in New York City, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C., a process involving 17 witnesses, 200 exhibits and 1,500 pages of transcripts.

In a statement issued by the NFL, Rozelle said he was "convinced that minimal unscheduled drug testing is a necessary part of any fully effective league-wide anti-drug program."

PGA sparks controversy by shortening tourney

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The sports world has become accustomed to asterisks in the record books, but this weekend marks the first time such an asterisk has had an effect on a $3 million booty.

A $3 million asterisk?
 "I've never been in this position before," Ben Crenshaw said after being declared the winner in the new, storm-shortened Vantage Golf Championship.

"Just put an asterisk on it," Crenshaw said.
 "I'm speechless," said Payne Stewart, who was denied a scheduled 18 holes in which to make up a one-shot deficit against Crenshaw. Crenshaw won the 54-hole tournament with a score of 196. Stewart finished with 197.

Some of golf's other touring pros were far from speechless, however, over the controversial weekend decision to cut the new, $1 million Vantage tournament from the scheduled 72 holes to 54.

Even Crenshaw, the chief beneficiary of the decision, said, "It's unfortunate . . . I'm sorry we didn't finish."

"I'm hot — steaming. (Payne) Stewart's hot. (Bobby) Clampett is hot. Everybody I've talked to is hot," said Tom Kite, who saw the reduction of the tournament format — rather than extend the event through an extra day — as a policy decision by the PGA Tour.

He pointed out that the Vantage marked the sixth time in 42 official events this season in which tournaments were shortened to less than 72 holes.

"It isn't right. It isn't fair," he said, and added that he intended to write letters of protest to PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman and the Tour's Policy Board.

The competition was interrupted on two occasions by inclement weather, necessitating either another day of competition or the shorter number of holes.

The tournament was thrown off schedule by rain last Thursday. In order to get in the regulation 72 holes, a double round of 36 holes was scheduled Sunday.

But shortly after Crenshaw and Stewart finished the first 18 holes, a thunderstorm lashed the Oak Hills Country Club course with rain, wind and lightning.

After a delay of more than two hours, Gen. John Roberts, president of the San Antonio Golf Association and the tournament's general chairman, announced that not enough daylight remained to play another round Sunday and that "the tournament is completed (after 54 holes) and Ben Crenshaw is the winner."

Roberts said the decision to end the tournament on Sunday, rather than extend to Monday, had been made last Thursday and the players were informed. He said representatives of the title sponsor, a subsidiary of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., concurred in the decision.

Since the full purse of $1 million was paid, Roberts said, the PGA Tour did not have a voice in the decision.

Adding to the irritation of the touring pros was the fact that the tournament served as the climax to the Vantage Cup competition, a new, year-long series that offered $2 million in bonus money. With the reduction to three rounds, the players lost an opportunity for a final 18 holes in which to improve their positions.
