

Poll indicates governor's race remains tight

By MICHAEL ROWELL
State Press

A governor's race that is expected to go right down to the wire will be just one of the major decisions voters will be faced with today.

According to a poll released Monday by the Behavior Research Center for KAET-TV, Channel 8, and KTAR radio, Republican candidate Evan Mecham held a slight lead with 33 percent of the vote.

Democrat Carolyn Warner follows with 32 percent and Bill Schulz 29 percent. Six percent of the voters are undecided.

The poll, which surveyed 800 registered voters statewide, has a 3.5 percent margin of error.

Valley residents also will be voting on the following:

•In the U.S. Senate, voters will be choosing between Democrat Richard Kimball and Republican John McCain to fill the seat vacated by retiring Sen. Barry Goldwater.

According to the KAET/KTAR poll, McCain leads with 60 percent, Kimball with 36 percent and 4 percent are undecided.

•In District 1 for U.S. Congress, Democrat Harry Braun and Republican John J. Rhodes III are vying for the seat vacated by McCain.

•Democrat Phil Davis and Republican Jon Kyl are running for the U.S. House of Representatives' District 4.

•Incumbent State Treasurer Ray Rottas, a Republican, is being challenged by Democrat Mike Morgan.

•Former elementary school teacher C. Diane Bishop, a Democrat, and Republican Arizona Sen. Anne Lindeman are competing for superintendent of public instruction, a post held by Warner for the past 12 years.

•Incumbent Corporation Commissioners Renz Jennings and Sharon Megdal, both Democrats, are being challenged by Republicans Ted Humes and Dale Morgan respectively.

In Tempe's District 27, where ASU lies, voters will choose between Republican Doug Todd and Democrat Victor Aronow for state Senate. They will also be asked to choose between Republicans Bev Hermon and Jenny Norton and Democrat Bruce Mason, an ASU professor, for two Arizona House seats.

Voters also will be asked to decide on the following propositions:

•Prop 100: An amendment to the Arizona Constitution, which will give the Legislature authority to determine which telecommunication services will be regulated by the Corporation Commission.

•Prop 101: A "yes" vote would raise the limit on school district spending by 10 percent.

•Prop 102: Passage of this proposition would amend the constitution to allow counties to ask voters to exceed state imposed spending limitations every two years instead of every four years.

•Prop 103: Would amend the constitution, giving the Legislature authority to establish liability claim limitations.

•Prop 200: Would limit the amount of campaign contributions to state and local candidates from individuals and campaign committees.

•Prop 300: Would raise the salaries of state legislators from $15,000 to $20,000.

•Prop 301: Would limit a liquor license holder's liability for property damage, injury or death caused by a person to whom the license holder serves alcohol.

Polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. Voter information can be obtained by calling 262-1511 and 258-VOTE.

2 bioengineers labor to decrease diabetics' high health care costs

By TRACY SCOTT
State Press

Two ASU bioengineering professors are working to cut the $15 billion health care costs of diabetics in the United States.

Bruce Towe and Eric Guilbeau are trying to perfect a sensor that, when paired with a pump, would regulate the flow of insulin to diabetics.

The sensor would monitor a diabetic's blood-sugar level, and the pump, which is already on the market, would release the insulin into the bloodstream, Guilbeau said.

"The sensor device measures the temperature difference when the glucose level undergoes a change," he said.

Towe said the sensor would operate according to a "feedback control."

When the level of blood sugar becomes high, the sensor will instruct the pump to disperse insulin into the body, Towe said.

Jan Cooke, spokeswoman for the American Diabetes

Association, said there are 5.8 million diagnosed diabetics and about four million or five million undiagnosed in the United States.

Cooke said 500,000 diabetics are diagnosed each year and make up 2.5 percent of the U.S. population.

Although Towe said the pump can be used without the sensor, it is not ideal for diabetics.

"The problem with the pump is that it is set for a constant delivery rate of insulin into the blood stream," Towe said. "This is dangerous because the diabetic's need can change."

But he said the sensor would solve the problem. "The sensor would be in the body continuously measuring the blood-sugar level," Towe said.

A common method diabetics use to measure blood-sugar level is to prick their finger and wipe the blood on a chemically coated strip, Guilbeau said.

But Guilbeau said the sensor would be a more reliable

ASU profs' visas suspended; visit to Bhopal denied

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Five ASU professors, working at ASU's vocational training center in Bhopal, India, have had their visas suspended, the director of the project said Monday.

William Lewis, assistant dean of the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences, said University professors working at the Bhopal Vocational Training Center are not able to go to India to implement programs at the center.

The training center was established last year to aid victims of the Union Carbide gas leak that killed 2,000 and injured 200,000 Bhopal residents.

Funding for the center came from a $2 million grant by Union Carbide.

"(Indian officials) have taken the project under review,"

Lewis said. "It's a matter of the project, not the people involved."

ASU officials have not been able to travel to India for more than three months, Lewis said. He said he expects Indian officials to either grant new visas or ban the professors from their country by late December.

"We are trying to work with the government," he said. "We are looking at all avenues. If we can't get our visa restrictions lifted, we can't effectively install curriculum."

Lewis said Union Carbide officials have been notified about the problems but are not directly involved in the project other than providing funding.

He said Indian officials may be reluctant to let the ASU professors into the country because the center is funded by Union Carbide and litigation is pending against the corporation.

Officials at the Indian Embassy in San Francisco could not be reached for comment.

Lewis said ASU may consider seeking other sources of funding for the center if the visas are not reinstated.

K.A. Vijasimh, an ASU computer science faculty associate, said the center provides training in welding and other vocations for those injured in the gas leak.

Programs also are available for women and residents blinded in the accident.

The ASU professors had been traveling to India to develop curriculum for the 300 students at the center, Vijasimh said, but program changes have been halted since the visas were suspended.

"The students have expressed concern that continued delay of ASU people can have a negative impact on overall performance," Vijasimh said.

He said ASU officials call or write the Bhopal campus several times a week.

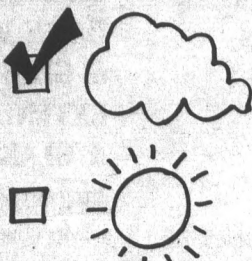

"Remote control, long-distance management is not the best way," Vijasimh said. "But we are keeping the program alive."

He said curriculum for the center still is being developed in Tempe but will not be transferred to Bhopal until the visa restrictions are lifted.

Homecoming royalty selected in close competition

By DAVE HODGES

State Press

Two ASU seniors were named the 1986 king and queen yesterday in front of about 300 onlookers at the opening ceremonies for Homecoming Week.

Finance major Brad Golich and Stephanie Chilton, criminal justice major, were crowned on the West Hall Lawn around noon.

Kiffie Spangler, Homecoming publicity director, said a prince and princess were not chosen because the competition was fierce and the applicants were closely matched.

"Any one of the people could be king or queen because it was so close," she said. "I think this is the first time if not one of the few that ASU hasn't had a prince and princess."

"Everyone was about one-tenth of a point away from each other."

Members of the Homecoming Court include Drew Diedrich, Rob Hathaway, John Kelleher, Karrin Kumasek, Christine Roth, Sandy Seamans, J.B. Sinnott and Kathy Trestrain.

"It's a great honor and it's quite surprising," Golich said. "I didn't think I would win because the competition was so great."

Chilton had the same idea about her chances of winning. "I'm so pleased and honored," she said. "I didn't think I had a chance because of the quality of the other candidates."

"Homecoming is a chance for students and alumni to pay back what ASU has given them. People need to take a chance and get involved."

"They need to say, 'Yes, I am a good person and I can contribute,'" she said. "Give yourself a chance. There's always something to do."

Master of Ceremonies for the opening ceremonies was Don Robinson, coach of the 1985 National Champion ASU men's gymnastics team.

Robinson said ASU students should practice the idea they have the possibility to be anything, the responsibility to do it, the inheritance of spirit and traditions being passed down, the democracy to remain free and the opportunity to take advantage of education.

Associated Students President Chris Cummiskey said Homecoming offers a chance for students and alumni to "share the pride and dignity they had while attending ASU."

"And at the end (of Homecoming Week) we'll celebrate another victory (for the football team) on our way to the Rose Bowl."

Other speakers included Eddie Goitia, 1983 ASU Homecoming chairman; ASU President J. Russell Nelson; Mike Pulos, owner of Spaghetti Company, who donated $1,500 scholarships to Golich and Chilton; and Steele Edwards, general manager of Tempe Mission Palms Hotel, the official sponsor of the 1986 ASU Homecoming.

The ASU men's glee club and concert choir, Colleen Ferg, the Rainbow Connection Singers, and the ASU pep band provided entertainment.

Today is American Day and festivities begin 11:30 a.m. on the West Hall Lawn on Cady Mall.

"The theme for American Day is 'baseball and apple pie,'" Spangler said.

Highlights of today's festivities include:

- A dunking tank;
- Free apple pie and an eating contest;
- ASU student comedian Bob Kaboda; and
- A concert by local band Tracy and Ridley.

ASU students complain about Tempe judge's temperament

By MICHAEL BURGESS

State Press

At least 12 ASU students have registered complaints with the ASU Student Legal Service concerning the judicial temperament of a Tempe judge who is running unopposed in today's election.

David Swain, a Student Legal Services advisor, said he has had at least six students complain about Judge Fred S. Ackel in the last two years.

A legal services coordinator, who asked not to be identified, also said he has had at least six complaints in the last two years.

"If I had heard one isolated case, perhaps I would think the student was just mad,"

Swain said. "But with more students, I tend to think there is more merit to their stories."

Ackel, 51, has been Tempe Justice of the Peace since 1977.

Geoff Beckett, a senior sociology major, said he had trouble with Ackel in August when he went to court to have an injunction, which had been placed by his former girlfriend, removed.

"He gave me a look like I had done something wrong," Beckett said. "This whole thing has made me feel like I have been raped."

The injunction was placed on Beckett after he and his girlfriend broke up. It ordered Beckett to stay away from the woman, her home, her work and Mesa Community College.

The injunction was issued when the woman said Beckett verbally abused and harassed her.

Beckett said Ackel did not let him show evidence that his former girlfriend was lying, and Ackel refused to lift the injunction.

"Before I had a chance to show proof, he cut me off," Beckett said. "He basically told me to get out."

Another student, who asked not to be identified, said he filed a small claims suit in Ackel's court three years ago and was intimidated by the judge.

He said Ackel verbally abused him during the hearing, and on another occasion, used obscenities during a phone call.

He said he did not know if his complaint against Ackel was valid until he visited legal services and found that other students had complained about the judge.

Ackel said he was not unfair to Beckett, but said he has used obscenities on occasion when students ask court secretaries and clerks questions.

"I might have gotten on the phone or gone out there if they have harassed my clerks," Ackel said. "If they are going to start cussing, I ain't going to put up with that."

Vote: make your voice heard

Today, you have the opportunity to make changes or keep things the way they are.

Across this country, senators, governors, mayors and other representatives will be elected to office to serve us. Many propositions will be made available to tell our government how we want things to be handled.

It is election day and the polls are open until 7 p.m.

Unfortunately, we often take for granted that we have a precious right that most of the people of the world do not have — the right to oust or keep whomever we see fit.

If you are a registered voter, there is still time to cast an informed ballot and make your voice heard.

There are always charges by radicals that the elections are fixed and the establishment controls who will serve in Washington, D.C., Arizona, Maricopa County, Phoenix or on the school board. But your voice does matter and it is important.

Do not sit back and think you cannot make the difference. Some races are decided by just a matter of votes. It is a civic duty and responsibility for everyone qualified to vote.

If you are not registered, why not? It is a simple process and opens up a variety of avenues to make yourself heard.

It is appalling enough that less than 50 percent of all qualified voters are registered to vote. But when only 30 percent of the electorate bothers to show up at the polls on the first Tuesday of November, it is a sad statement on this country that prides itself on a government by the people!

The excuses that people make to get out of voting are paper thin. It does not take more than 10 minutes. The polls are open all day to be convenient to everybody. It is a big deal. Your vote is no more or less important than anyone else's.

The irony in today's election is that those who do not vote will probably be the ones who complain the loudest when the elected official does not do what they want.

Vote today. If not for you, then do it for your country.

Lottery for the fittest

Editor:

In response to Amy Frischknecht's editorial regarding the ticket lottery for concert tickets, I would like to present ASU Public Events' view of ticket lotteries.

Yes, we are concerned about the possible damage that could be done by those camping out for concert tickets around Gammage Center and we are also concerned about patrons attending our events having to climb over campers to gain access to the facility, but these are not the main reasons we hold ticket lotteries at Gammage. Back in the days when we sold tickets on a first-come, first-serve basis, it became more and more obvious to the Public Events staff that the people first in line everytime to get concert tickets were inevitably ticket scalpers. These people make their money by getting the best tickets and receiving top dollar for those tickets. Consequently, they would stack the deck in their favor.

They started the line and then packed the lines with people who would go into the box office and buy tickets for them to resell. The average Joe off the street has a slim chance of buying front row, or even main floor, tickets to a very popular concert. Since there are no laws against ticket scalping in Arizona, there was not really much that could be done about the situation. Please understand that to the scalpers, getting the best tickets is their business and they approach it that way.

To make the whole process a little more fair to the average Joe just trying to get a good seat, we decided to try the ticket lottery. The ticket lottery eliminates the need to camp out. Why stand in line for 12 hours when you have just as good a chance as the next guy of getting the first ticket, or of at least getting good seats, in the half hour to an hour it take to do a lottery? We always post lottery information on the box office doors — when you can line up, when the ticket lottery will take place, how many tickets you can buy, ticket prices, etc.

We try to do the lotteries early in the morning or later in the evening to give those who have 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. jobs a chance to get a good lottery ticket and then find someone to get their tickets for them if they can't be there when the box office opens.

The really wonderful thing about the lottery is that the scalpers no longer have the advantage. They have to take a chance, too. Granted, the scalpers have come up with a system of bringing in carloads of transients or friends to give them a better chance at a good lottery ticket. However, the more average Joes that are there, the more the odds even out.

We feel that it is important that everyone has a chance to get good seats to see their favorite performer. We urge everyone to come to our lotteries. Don't let the scalpers get the best seats! Even if you don't get a great lottery ticket, your presence increases the odds that the real fans, not the scalpers, will get good seats. You might think it is a worthless waste of time, but at least you had a chance, which is a heck of a lot more than you would have had if we didn't have lotteries.

Buying concert tickets should not be survival of the fittest — believe me, the fittest are the scalpers. It should be the survival of the fairest and the lottery system is fair to everyone!

In reading your paper, I would like to compliment you on publishing an informative paper. A paper is a very powerful and important tool to each individual. Your paper captures the issues which affect its readers on campus and worldwide social issues.

You have noticed that many papers tend to leave out areas which they feel that their readers are not interested in. The area generally left out is the business world. As freshmen in college, we do not really think about it, but we are living in this world. As seniors approaching graduation, we must look at the world of business.

Think of the great service you would be doing if your paper were to have but one page on business news. It would open the door to a very fast-paced and competitive marketplace — a market place where all of your readers will either be working or looking for employment. The information that a page on business news could make maybe the difference between a person getting a job they really want or just a job. Businessmen are looking for that person with that edge — the edge being knowledge.

Knowledge is power. Your paper, the State Press, is in a position to pass along this power. I ask that you and your staff actively consider adding a business section to your paper. It will be not only a great asset to you, but more importantly, a great service to your readers.

Editor:

Believe it or not, discrimination exists in this enlightened age.

There are females out there who will not have anything to do with geeks.

Affirmative action must be taken to see that the disparity between the number of girls who go out with unattractive men and those who associate with the other variety is reduced to acceptable levels.

To measure the progress made by the social reformation, I have devised a system of quotas to compare existing levels to established goals of equal opportunity.

Based upon percentages developed by the National Bureau of Weights and Standards, female dating activity will be made directly proportional to the population's composition of minority groups: wimps, geeks and jerks.

Other groups such as goofs and dorks will not be included due to their statistical irrelevancy and lack of political clout. Special merit will be given to those who actually marry and bear children through the program of the EOEC (Equal Opportunity Engagement Commission).

Society has a lot to gain from the accomplishments of these citizens.

Remember, a mime is a terrible thing to waste.

This is for ASU Parking.

You have taken away the only available two hour parking slots on campus. What is the matter? Could you not ticket the overtimers enough to reap your rewards? Time is precious to students and having to work to attend your classes is enough. Forcing the parking sticker purchase on struggling students is too much! Why should I pay $35-$65 per semester when only using it three hours weekly?

The solution, you ask? How about a bus to service the local students instead of disserving our situations? You continue to build parking facilities with our tuition and parking fees which do not accommodate the needs. Buy some buses. Forget creating more of these unsightly parking structures. Get some of the autos off campus and let me get to class.

the sensor would be a more accurate method," he said.

The sensor also would allow diabetics to lead a more normal life.

"No longer would it be necessary for them to constantly monitor their own sugar level, but it would be done for them," he said.

But the bioengineers are faced with the problem of determining the best location for the sensor.

"The most likely place for it to be placed is in a blood vessel, but it could be placed elsewhere," Towe said.

Although a blood vessel would be the ideal location, Towe said it is also "the most hostile."

"The body's natural immune system would have a tendency to attack the sensor more strongly," Towe said.

He said a possible location is the abdominal cavity, where the pump is implanted.

Cost is another factor that has not been determined.

"A dollar cost couldn't be put on it," Guilbeau said. "The important thing in relation to its cost is that it would get rid of diabetics' problems and reduce their health care costs."

Guilbeau said 5 percent of U.S. health care costs are spent on problems related to diabetes.

Towe said diabetics experience gangrene in the feet, blindness, and heart, kidney and vascular disease later in life.

He said diabetics experience these problems because "an elevated sugar level is damaging to the body."

The two professors said they created the device because there was a large need for one.

"The need for a sensor of this type is so great that almost every bioengineer in the United States is aware of it," Guilbeau said.

The professors have been working to develop the sensor for four years and don't think it will be ready for three more years.

Towe said the sensor must be tested first and then approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

The FDA requires that medical devices to be tested for three years.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents for the period ending midnight Monday:

•An officer working undercover Oct. 30 apprehended a man selling a white, crystalline substance presumed to be cocaine, police said.

The officer observed the man place his index fingers to his nose, a gesture the officer interpreted to mean he had cocaine he wanted to sell.

When confronted, police said the man said he had "some real dynamite cola."

The man produced a small zip-lock bag of white, crystalline substance.

Police said the officer then arrested the man.

The substance was sent to the Department of Public Safety laboratory for analysis.

•Police said a man robbed Circle K Convenience Mart, 1865 E. Broadway Road, by pretending he had a weapon.

The suspect entered the store Nov. 2, purchased a package of doughnuts, and then proceeded to shove the clerk.

The man said "I want all your money," placed his finger under his shirt to simulate a gun and took $25 from the register.

He fled the scene on foot.

Police describe the man as black, 24 years old, 5-foot-11, 145 pounds, wearing Levi's and a white T-shirt.

•An employee of Keg World, 1010 N. Scottsdale Road, was cited for misdemeanor assault Nov. 1, police said.

The employee was helping to remove three men who had been causing a disturbance inside the store, when he allegedly kicked one man in the buttocks.

The men came to the store to request a discount on a keg that was warm.

Police said that when the request was refused, the men began verbally abusing employees.

The victim offered to forget the incident if the employee would buy him a 12-pack. When the employee refused, the man called police.

Archbishop touts blend of fun, faith, rock music

By The Associated Press

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, at the start of a rock 'n' religion revival featuring The Monkees, exhorted some 15,000 screaming teen-agers to make enough noise to raise the roof off the concert hall.

"There's no neighbors here to complain," the leader of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago said Sunday night.

Bernardin did not stay for the entire show, admitting that he was not a big fan of rock music. But he called the evening a success, saying it proved, "You can unite rock 'n' roll and youth without sex and violence."

The archbishop led the cheering teen-agers in prayer before the concert featuring The Monkees, Herman's Hermits, Gary Puckett and the Union Gap and the Grass Roots.

Chicago's Catholic Youth Office sponsored the concert to show teen-agers they can mix faith and fun.

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 29-hour period ending 6:30 a.m. Monday:

- ASU student Paul E. Williams and a juvenile male were arrested and charged with burglary after University police caught them attempting to steal food from the Saga Foods storage area at the Sun Devil Stadium, police said.
- Police said six cylindrical concrete trash receptacles along Cady Mall were turned over and broken, resulting in $1,850 in damage.

Police have no suspects, but they said they have reason to believe the damage was caused by skateboarders.

- Police told a group of 12 juvenile skateboarders to keep on the sidewalk near the Farmer Education Building rather than on benches, police said.

- Police told three juveniles, who were jumping off benches with their skateboards near the fountain on Cady Mall, to keep off the benches, out of the flower beds and away from campus buildings if they did not wish to be cited, police said.

- University police found a bulletin board charred and smoldering on the sixth floor of the Cholla Apartments B-wing after they responded to a fire alarm, police said.

Police evacuated the building but did not find any suspects, police said. Estimated value of the damage is $100.

Proposition 103

Victim's mother wants limit on 'silly'

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

The Arizona lawsuit system may be in need of reform, but the mother of a murdered Tempe girl said if voters approve Proposition 103 today, the system will be even worse.

Carol Fornoff said crime victims' ability to collect damages will be severely limited because Proposition 103 allows the Arizona Legislature to set amounts for specific damages.

Fornoff's daughter, Christy, was strangled and sexually assaulted two years ago by Donald Beatty, a maintenance man at Rock Point Apartments in Tempe.

The Fornoffs filed suit against the owners of the apartment complex because Beatty was convicted of eight felony charges before he was hired.

The lawsuit, which was filed in May, does not ask for specific damages, but should go to court in about a year, Fornoff said.

"Christy was a child. She had no economic value," she said. "How can you arbitrarily set or suggest what a life is worth?"

Fornoff said the proposition will encourage lawsuits that ask for higher awards "because companies are going to say 'Sue, we don't have to change.'"

She said there is a need for reform in Arizona and suggested lawmakers consider restricting lawsuits that are brought to court for "silly reasons" and educating jurors about awarding multimillion dollar suits.

Fornoff said changes can be made in attorney's share of jury awards without changing the constitution.

"If you want to limit what lawyers make, you can do that without changing the constitution," she said. "The jury has been awarding the large cases peers."

But Susan Fuchs, a spokeswoman for the Arizona Medical Association, said Proposition 103 is protecting people because it will lessen the number of award lawsuits being filed in civil court.

She said because doctors are increasing liability insurance rates, the average Arizona doctor pays $65 for insurance — they are limiting suits.

"If the no vote wins... this state will be in a lot of trouble," Fuchs said.

Fuchs said the Arizona Medical Association initiated Proposition 103 because it is one of five states with a constitutional provision for liability awards. Business ranking

Arizona senator supports Warner

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

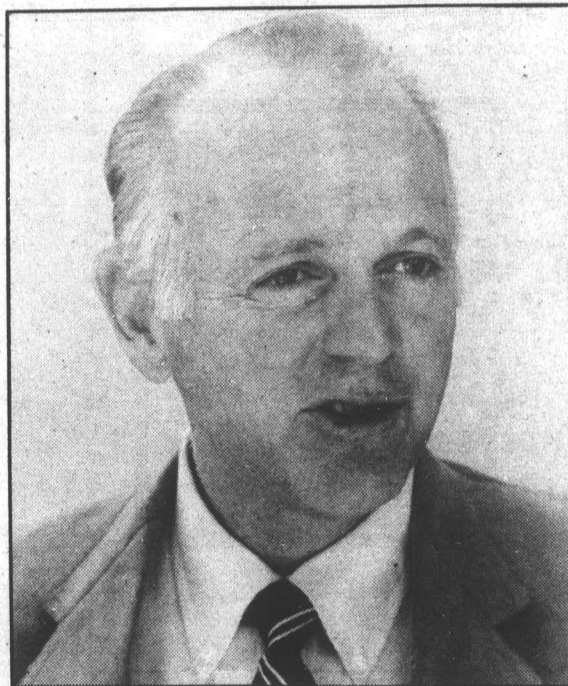

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., told about 400 ASU students Friday he supports Carolyn Warner in her gubernatorial race against Republican candidate Evan Mecham and Independent Bill Schulz.

"I am supporting Carolyn Warner very, very strongly because she helped me (after DeConcini defeated Warner in her bid for the Democratic senate candidate nomination in 1976)."

"I'm happy to support her," DeConcini said. Bob Maynes, DeConcini's press secretary, said Monday Warner had endorsed DeConcini in the 1976 general election and he was returning the favor.

Maynes also said DeConcini supports the Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, Richard Kimball, who is running against John McCain for the seat vacated by retiring Republican Barry Goldwater.

In answer to a question about Schulz's bid for governor as an Independent, DeConcini said, "Mr. Schulz hasn't broken any rules. He's just someone who could afford to get on the ballot."

But, DeConcini added, "I str two-party system has worked we important to the structure politically."

DeConcini, a political science graduate from UA, said he feels the system guarantees the nominating works.

"If Schulz had not come in, (V have had an easy victory," he said.

dealers to real estate developers will also benefit from approval of Proposition 103, she said.

She said the increasing insurance rates have caused the medical industry to limit the number of companies that produce syrums for vaccinations and reduce the number of midwives available in rural areas.

"If you can't get medicine for your kids or a doctor to deliver your baby, then I am telling you are losing your rights already," Fuchs said.

She said the main opposition to the proposition is attorneys who are trying to protect their share of awards to victims.

Fuchs said attorneys are asking for about 50 percent of the damages awarded to victims who win their lawsuits.

the office about 9 o'clock," DeConcini said.

He said 7:40 a.m. classes "should be unconstitutional," evoking laughter from the audience.

"(The country) would be in big trouble if senators had to start at 7:40."

He said he usually spends an hour talking to his staff and then he attends committee meetings during the rest of the day.

DeConcini serves on the Senate Appropriations, Judiciary, Veteran's Affairs, Rules and Indian Affairs Committees. He also sits on subcommittees concerned with security and terrorism and constitutional amendments.

In regard to the Strategic Defense Initiative, he said, "I support the research area of the SDI," but nothing "outside the research area."

"I don't want to see us project this process out into outer space."

DeConcini estimated SDI research will cost about $3.5 billion and the implementation between $1 trillion to $2 trillion.

"Whenever you create a new weapons system, your adversary will create a defense, too," he said.

He said SDI would require about 4,000 satellites to shield the United States and would cost about $150 billion per year to maintain.

On other matters, DeConcini said he opposes the recently approved immigration bill which imposes criminal penalties on employers who hire illegal aliens.

He said his main objection to the bill is the provision for criminal penalties.

"That's a responsibility that shouldn't lie with business — it should lie with the government," he said, adding, "I am prepared to support civil penalties."

He also criticized the bill which he estimates will cost about $4 billion to fund and questioned where the funding should come from.

Arizona highway patrol investigators have determined an accident that killed one ASU student and injured another early Sunday morning was caused when the driver fell asleep at the wheel, a patrolman said Monday.

Two women were driving from Tucson to Phoenix when Kimberly Segal, 18, fell asleep at the wheel and her car rolled two-and-a-half times.

Officer Mike Miller said Elizabeth Henderson, 18, was ejected from the car the first time the car rolled over near Casa Grande on Interstate 10 near the Interstate 8 junction.

Henderson landed on the side of the road with fatal wounds, Miller said.

Paramedics took Henderson to Good Samaritan Hospital in Phoenix, where she was pronounced dead on arrival at 2:58 a.m. from multiple injuries, a nursing supervisor said.

Miller said, "Segal woke and tried to regain control of the car and oversteered the car back onto the road and off to the left side of the road."

"After the car veered off the left side of the road, it rolled two-and-a-half times."

Segal was taken to Casa Grande Regional Medical Center, where she was treated and released for cuts and bruises, a nursing supervisor said.

Miller said neither drugs nor alcohol played a role in the accident.

Henderson, from Chesterfield, Mo., and Segal, from Longport, N.J., were residents of Sahuaro Residence Hall.

Cross-country team finishes 5th at Pac-10 Invite

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

The Sun Devil cross country team fared exactly how Coach Ken Lehman had expected, finishing in the top five at the Pac-10 Invitational.

Lehman had predicted before the meet that ASU would be in the top five teams when the points were tallied. Also, the second-year coach had hoped that the Sun Devils' one-two punch in seniors Dan Fisher and Steve Preston would cross the finish line in the top five places.

Again Lehman was correct. Both runners finished with their best times of the season in the conference Invite. Fisher clocked in with a 30:46.1 pace to cross the wire fourth. The veteran used his experience to better his 10th-place finish in '85. Preston proved himself as an elite runner in Pac-10 competition with a fifth place finish. Preston followed his teammate across the line with a 30:48.1 time.

Contributing to the fifth-place honors for the Devils were junior Jeff Smith and senior Fred Herlitz. Smith, a Phoenix College transfer, placed 30th as he clocked in with a 32:31.6. Herlitz assisted in the strong ASU placing with a 32:43.6.

The Pac-10 Invite was held Monday at Stanford. Before the meet was run, the stage was set for a very good field of runners. Three schools were nationally ranked in the Top Ten.

Arizona was highly favored going into the Invite. The Wildcats were ranked second in the nation and, as expected, won the honors of conference champs.

Oregon went to Stanford ranked sixth. When the meet ended, they were touted as the Pac-10 runner-up, finishing far behind Arizona.

The host team, Stanford, finished third, while Washington came in fourth in front of the Devils.

The second five consisted of UCLA, USC, Oregon State, Washington State and California.

Men's cross country runners, from left, Fred Herlitz, Dan Fisher, Jeff Smith and Steve Preston.

Rick Wiley/State Press

In the inaugural running in the women's division, Arizona State made Coach Lehman happy as the inexperienced squad pulled out a fifth-place finish.

The Devils' top finisher was Laura LeMena, a transfer from Houston. Her clocking was 17:39.7, which earned her 11th-place honors.

Adding to the ASU cause was freshman Jen Van Horn. The newcomer posted a 18.05.1 time to place 23rd. Another freshman, Kim McKay, followed Van Horn across the finish line as she was clocked in with a 18:12 to place 25th.

Lehman had two other freshmen attempting to earn top honors. Dawn Arrigoni and Tracey Bowers finished 29th and 33rd, respectively.

The Sun Devils will be tuning up for the district meet at Fresno State Nov. 15.

Emergency!

Sun Devils healthy; other Pac-10 teams need help, stat

If this Pac-10 football season were a television show, it would probably be one of those medical shows like "Medical Center" or "St. Elsewhere."

Call it "Pac-10 Trauma Center."

In the show, ASU would be the healthy patient. The guy who has his health, is listed in stable condition and generally is in good shape. With a 7-0-1 overall record and a 4-0-1 Pac-10 mark, the Devils fit that bill very nicely.

There is one problem. The Sun Devils had a mild heart palpitation earlier in the show in a tie against Washington State, but are now taking an overconfidence vaccine to eliminate the possibility of a relapse against either Cal or Wichita State.

And there is an ugly family medical history. Several ancestors had been leading happy, healthy lives when they were stricken with ailments out of the blue, cutting them down in the prime of life.

The anti-overconfidence medication is guaranteed to work if the patient takes it regularly. It is being administered by the coaching staff in healthy doses.

Jay Taylor
Sports Analysis Editor

But aside from the Devils, the cast is not well. Washington (6-2, 3-2), UA (6-2, 3-2) and Stanford (6-2, 3-2) have all been in major accidents recently. Washington and USC were hit by a hurtling train last Saturday, and Stanford and UA both had accidents in the bathroom, where, as we all know, most household accidents occur.

All are in critical condition. Their vital signs are weak. It's not like they are actually dead, but there is a priest at their bedside saying a few choice Latin words.

If they live, the best they can hope for is a Holiday, maybe a vacation in the Sun, or possibly the Freedom to do something else.

In better condition is UCLA. The Bruins are also in trouble, but the only way we know that is the premonition they had earlier in the show. They have made it this far with a 6-2 overall mark, 4-1 in the conference. But we, the viewers, know what lies ahead for the Bruins.

It is a terrible fate. It barely got by the censors. It is Stanford at home, Washington on the road, and USC at home in the next three weeks.

It looks grim for UCLA.

Even if the Bruins manage to weave their way through this gauntlet of doom, they still might not be able to extend their life expectancy to Jan. 1. In order for that to happen, ASU must have a relapse. If the Devils achieve a win and a tie in their last two conference games against Cal and UA, they will fly off into the sunset with the beautiful guest star, Rose, at the end of the show.

Let us talk about what the rest of the Devils' season means in terms other than the Pac-10 race. It is not unreasonable to think that ASU could play for the national championship Jan. 1.

Of course it would take a little help from a few teams, but nothing really incredible would have to happen for it to come to pass.

The Devils are ranked fifth this week. The only teams ahead of the Devils are Miami (Fla.), Penn State, Michigan and Oklahoma.

Now here is what I would give five years off my life to see happen:

Nebraska beats Oklahoma in their showdown Nov. 22 in Lincoln to win the Big 8 title, eliminating one team from in front of the Devils. The Huskers then go on to defeat Miami in the Orange Bowl, eliminating another obstacle.

All that leaves, sports fans, is Penn State, which would come to the Fiesta Bowl to play Oklahoma, which would beat the Nittany Lions.

Just what the doctor ordered.

That leaves ASU and Michigan. If the Wolverines get by Ohio State in Columbus Nov. 22, they will most likely play ASU in Pasadena. To the winner goes the national title. To the loser goes a toe tag and a one-way ticket to the county morgue. Maybe even a guest spot on "Quincy, M.E."

I would like our chances against Michigan pretty well, given the less-than-outstanding bowl record of their mentor, Bo Schembechler. Bo has lost several patients at the most crucial time of the operation.

However, they might not get by the Buckeyes, who have won seven in a row after corrective surgery cleared up neonatal complications and an 0-2 start, and are playing the best football in the Big 10 right now. Just ask Iowa, which lost to Michigan two weeks ago, 20-17, and Ohio State Saturday 31-10.

Maybe it is a bit premature to think national championship right now. But what the heck, that's what makes college football so much fun. Anything can happen.

Just ask the directors of "Pac-10 Trauma Center."

The Pride captures intramural Superstars' title

By STEVE ADAMS

State Press

The Battle Royale of the intramural department got underway this past weekend, as the Team Superstars ran, pulled, bowled, and hit their way for a chance to win the ultimate competition.

The Pride came out of the pack the ultimate winner with a total point score of 113, followed closely by Never Surrender and Best of Center with 105 and 104 points, respectively.

"This was definitely a tougher competition than last year," said Chris Cabanillas, manager of The Pride.

"We never knew until the end of the very last event (obstacle course) whether we were going to win it or not."

Members of the winning team were Greg Ausley, Ian Gallicano, Lan Munson, Pete Johnston, Cabanillas, Sandy Christian, Shelli Overmyer and Anna-Lisa Byrne.

The Pride, a team with a year of experience under its belt, fell behind early and had a lot of ground to make up because they forfeited volleyball.

"Two of our guys didn't show up for volleyball, and consequently we had to forfeit," Cabanillas said.

"The rest of the team wasn't very pleased because we received zero points, and it meant we had to do extremely well in the rest of the events in order to have a shot at winning the overall," she said.

The situation didn't look much brighter when The Pride lost the tug of war.

"We thought we had lost the whole thing when we lost the tug of war," Cabanillas said.

"One of team members said we had to win it to get our point total up there and win the championship.

"As it turned out, the member of the team miscalculated the point total, and in actuality we had more points than anybody thought," she said.

The situation The Pride faced this year was quite different from last year.

"Last year we were so far ahead in the point total that it was quite a contrast from this year, when we had to strive to do exceptionally well in every event in order to have a chance at winning the title," she said.

Swimming and track were the strongest events for The Pride; they took first place in both events.

"What it came down to was beating Best of Center and Never Surrender in the obstacle course if we were to have a chance to win the title," Cabanillas said.

The Pride didn't win the obstacle course. In fact they came in third, but they had accumulated enough points to pull out a come-from-behind victory.

"We are really happy and also very fortunate," Cabanillas said.

The rest of the teams in order of finish were: Daredevils, 88 points, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Tuff Stuff, both tied with 62 points, I Tappa Kega, 49 points, Lambda Sigma Tau, 40 points, Bud Studs, 31 points and Massacres with 20 points. Two teams forfeited the competition.

As far as other team reactions on the competition were concerned, one team felt that lack of preparation and experience were their downfall.

"Many of the teams had competed in this last year and knew what to expect and how to prepare," said Tony Turner, manager of Lambda Sigma Tau.

"Our team was very much in the dark and

Devils jump to No. 5 in AP poll

By The Associated Press

ASU's 34-21 victory over the previously sixth-ranked Washington Huskies launched the Devils into fifth place nationally, while sending UW into a tailspin that landed them 13th in the Associated Press poll.

Miami, Penn State and Michigan, the only three unbeaten and untied teams in major-college football, held onto the top three spots Monday in this week's AP poll.

All three are 8-0 after weekend victories.

Oklahoma remained fourth but Auburn fell several positions along with Washington, while ASU jumped from seventh to fifth.

Miami, which defeated No. 20 Florida State 41-23 and knocked the Seminoles out of the Top Twenty, received 53 of 58 first-place votes and 1,153 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and sportscasters. The Hurricanes are No. 1 for the sixth consecutive week.

Penn State, which moved into the runner-up spot a week ago, received four first-place votes and 1,076 points following a 19-0 triumph over West Virginia. The other first-place ballot went to Michigan, which swamped Illinois 69-13 and received 1,053 points.

Oklahoma, 7-1, totaled 953 points after thrashing Kansas 64-3 and ASU's 34-21 victory over Washington lifted the Sun

Devils, 7-0-1, into fifth place with 921 points while the Huskies fell to 13th.

Alabama rebounded from last week's 23-3 loss to Penn State and trounced Mississippi State 38-3. The Crimson Tide received 861 points in climbing from eighth to sixth while the Bulldogs dropped out of the rankings after a four-week stay.

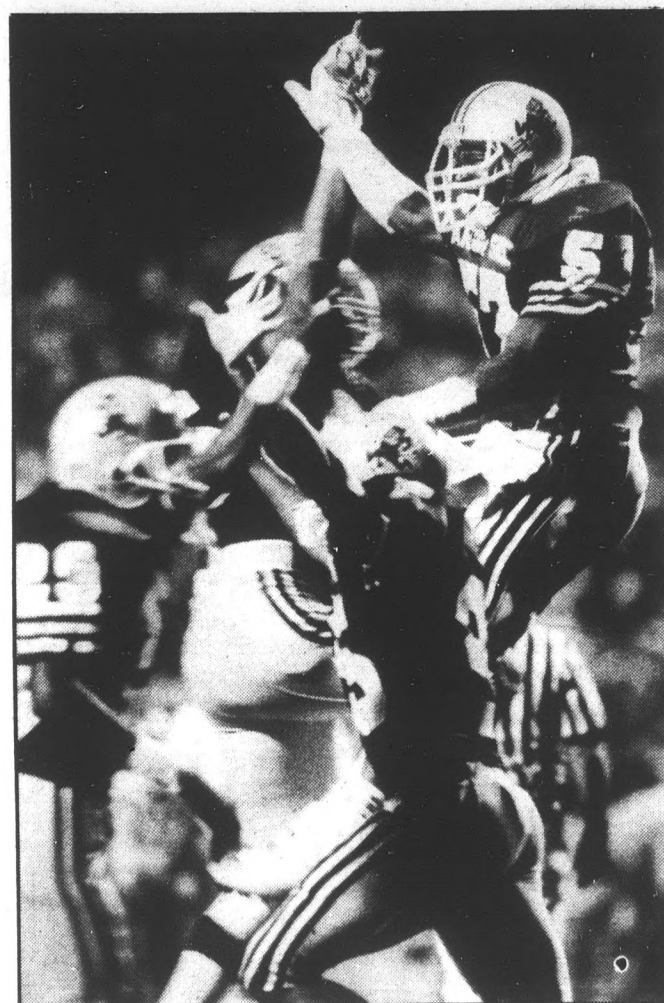

Nebraska moved up from ninth to seventh with 793 points with a 38-0 rout of Kansas State and Texas A&M vaulted from 10th to eighth with 740 points after edging Southern Methodist 39-35.

Auburn suffered its first loss of the season, bowing to Florida 18-17 and dropping from fifth to ninth with 660 points. Arkansas, No. 13 last week, rounded out the Top Ten with 639 points after trimming Rice 45-14.

The Second Ten consists of Ohio State, UCLA, Washington, Southern California, North Carolina State, Iowa, Arizona, LSU, Georgia and Clemson.

Last week, it was Iowa, LSU, Arkansas, Arizona, UCLA, North Carolina State, Ohio State, Southern Cal, Mississippi State and Florida State.

While Mississippi State and Florida State dropped out of the rankings, Georgia and Clemson moved in. Georgia had been ranked in the first three polls but missed the last six while Clemson dropped out last week after being ranked in the three previous polls.

it showed, as we were not prepared and consequently, outmatched in events such as track and bowling," he said.

As for the reaction of the intramural department, they were pleased with the competition but not very happy with the lack of teams.

"We would have liked to have had more teams sign up," said Juliette Moore, assistant director of intramurals. "We do understand, however, that it was a very busy weekend and many students had concerns about tests and the football game."

Moore extended thanks from the intramural department to all the sponsors of the competition.

The top prize, going to The Pride, was eight six-month memberships to the Arizona Athletic Club.

In other intramural news:

- The National Collegiate Flag Football qualifying tournament is set to kick-off Nov. 6.

Nine teams are signed up to vie for the chance to represent ASU in the national tournament in New Orleans Dec. 27-31.
