

Mecham says universities' tuitions will rise

MICHAEL BURGESS
State Press

Arizona's governor-elect Republican Evan Mecham said Wednesday Arizona's three universities will experience tuition increases and out-of-state students will be the hardest hit.

Mecham, 62, won the bid for the state's top office Tuesday by upsetting Democrat Carolyn Warner and Independent Bill Schulz.

Tuition will increase while he is governor, Mecham said from his Glendale Pontiac dealership during his first official press conference since winning the election.

"It's a fact of life that when the value of the dollar drops you have to increase tuition," Mecham said. "I'm most interested in the in-state student because I'm interested in building industry inside Arizona, but I will try to keep it as low as possible."

Mecham, who said he will be an active Arizona Board of Regents member, said out-of-state students will notice a larger increase in tuition.

Mecham said he will make a complete review of the state government before taking office in January.

"We don't have a transition team set up," he said. "We have 30 days to put together a budget."

Mecham also said he may keep some of exiting Governor Bruce Babbitt's employees.

"It's up to us and them, but we are going to search the state for the best people," he said.

Mecham, who has been at odds with Phoenix newspapers for recent articles about him, opened the press conference by telling reporters he wants to start his term in office with a new image with the press.

"The press should tell them how it is," he said. "But voters should have faith they can judge for themselves."

Mecham said he will try to repeal the 1-cent sales tax passed in 1983 "as quick as possible."

He also said he will revoke Arizona's Martin Luther King Day.

"It is not a matter of race," he said. "It's because Bruce Babbitt shouldn't have used executive power to make it a holiday."

Mecham said he would like to reduce the state Department of Public Safety and transfer about 300 of their employees to drug enforcement.

He said he is in favor of voluntary drug testing.

"My job will be to set up an agenda and take it to the legislature and say, 'Please, pretty please.'"

Mecham, who was endorsed by President Reagan and retiring Sen. Barry Goldwater, said although people have been quick to label him as a far-right Republican he considers himself to be more middle-of-the-road.

"I think I'm acceptable to most people," he said.

When asked if he would sell his dealership when he takes office, Mecham said, "I'll sell anything but the wife and kids."

Mecham, who will be Arizona's first Republican governor in 12 years, said he has "felt great" since winning the election after four unsuccessful attempts.

24 football players accumulate deficient GPAs

By KIM MATTINGLY
State Press

Twenty-four of 91 ASU football players had grade point averages below the University's requirement for good standing in 1985-86, but new requirements and tutoring programs could mean more athletes will pass their classes this fall, Assistant Athletic Director Joe Ferguson said.

According to a report to be presented to the Arizona Board of Regents at their meeting here Friday, 26 percent of ASU football players and 14 percent of the basketball players were academically delinquent according to University standards last year.

To remain in good academic standing, ASU requires a 1.6 GPA for freshman, 1.75 for sophomores and 2.0 for juniors and seniors.

Odus Elliot, the regents' associate director for academic programs, said the board reviews the academic progress of athletes at ASU, NAU and UA each fall.

"It's an annual reminder that this is an area that requires constant attention and often needs additional support services," he said.

Elliot said the review results fluctuate each year.

Thirty percent of the 1982-83 ASU football team, or 32 of 105 players, fell below the requirement for good academic standing. In 1983-84, 21 of 93 players were in poor academic standing, and in 1984-85 that number rose to 25 of 91 players.

In basketball, six of 16, six of 13 and five of 14 players were academically delinquent in 1982-83, '83-'84 and '84-'85, respectively.

In accordance with these figures, Ferguson said the athletic department has 50 on-call tutors and has added five academic advisers in the past two years.

He said ASU Student Services monitors athletes' class attendance and academic progress, and there is a general study hall for all student athletes, as well as specific team study halls that often are mandatory.

Football coach John Cooper said: "We recruit the very best student athletes we possibly can. Class attendance is mandatory; study hall is mandatory, and we have a good tutoring program."

Cooper said football players must run extra drills if they miss study hall, and then they must go study.

He said he hopes the players' academic standing will improve this year.

Freshmen athletes had to satisfy new eligibility requirements established by the National Collegiate Athletic Association this fall.

They must have obtained a 2.0 GPA in their high school core curriculum and a basic score of 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or 13 on the American College Test.

Previously, entering athletes only had to show a 2.0 high school GPA overall to be eligible for college sports.

Ferguson said midterm academic progress reports on ASU athletes "look pretty good."

"They're better than last year's," he said. "The freshmen are doing quite well, which is a reflection of the high (eligibility) standards."

Because of these and other stricter NCAA eligibility requirements for an athlete's college curriculum, Ferguson said he expects to see a gradual improvement in the academic standing of ASU athletes.

'Fatalistic' Schulz suggests political career at end

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Campaign workers cleared Bill Schulz's campaign headquarters Wednesday, ending not only the 1986 gubernatorial race, but also a political career.

More than 12 hours earlier, Schulz announced he was conceding in the race for Arizona's top post.

Applause from campaign workers kept him from speaking for several minutes, and then the workers began to cry.

"This was it," he said. "I'm taking a very fatalistic attitude."

"I am not a political groupie. This was either get in there and do the job or quit."

It was Schulz's second unsuccessful bid for public office in six years — he lost to Barry Goldwater in the 1980 Senate race — and realizing Arizona voters turned to the established parties rather than an independent candidate, Schulz closed the book on his political career.

"We gave it a shot; we did our best," Schulz said. "I really don't want positive campaigning and issue-oriented campaigning to take a rap for this."

"We did what we thought was right . . . and let's be big enough to respect the voters' opinion."

Mark Regan, Schulz's spokesman, said

Wednesday about 25 workers had turned out to clean the campaign headquarters at 721 E. Missouri Ave.

"When you lose you don't walk around with a smile on your face," he said. "We have accepted, very graciously, the choice of the voters."

It was a long campaign for the Schulz family, the candidate said. He had decided to enter the campaign last year, but withdrew to care for a sick daughter.

He rejoined the race six-and-a-half weeks ago at the urging of local political and economic leaders who were unhappy with the selection of Carolyn Warner and Evan Mecham as party candidates.

Schulz said if he had stayed with the campaign from the beginning, he would have surely captured the Democratic nod during the primaries.

But he said he does not regret dropping out of the race to help his daughter through her depression.

"I had no choice," he said. "I did what any father would do. That was my finest hour."

Regan, who will return to work as a television newsman, said Schulz is drawing fire from state Democratic leaders for splitting the party's vote.

"If we split the ticket then so be it," he said. "There is no reason this system can't be a three-party system."

The campaign was marred by allegations from Governor-elect Evan Mecham and Democratic candidate Carolyn Warner that

Schulz was trying to redesign the state.

"The Arizona Governor," a 63-page document outlining Schulz's plans for the state, was the target of accusations.

Warner and Mecham said Schulz was planning to do away with military bases in Arizona and eliminate the state treasurer's job.

The two candidates also published materials attacking Schulz, and he said that was the turning point in the campaign.

Schulz said he never answered the accusations, and concentrated on "positive campaigning and issue-oriented campaigning" instead.

"We are willing to accept the verdict of the people very readily," he said. "I think we all felt that the primary election had not discussed the issues."

"I think we were a little arrogant. I think we should have put out our own newspaper."

Schulz stressed he did not want to campaign "negatively," but admitted that he most likely lost the race because he never answered any allegations.

"I'm not blaming anybody but myself for this," he said. "I want to hold the torch up high for for issues-oriented campaigning and for positive campaigning."

"I don't want that to go down the tubes."

Election brings 'most sophisticated' media coverage to Valley

By BENNY MCCONNELL
State Press

PHOENIX — Election watchers at the Phoenix Hilton Tuesday night said this year's election was "one of the craziest" and warranted the most sophisticated media coverage in Arizona history.

Phoenix Mayor Terry Goddard, in an interview shortly before introducing Democratic candidate Carolyn Warner before she conceded defeat to Republican Evan Mecham, said he kept a close eye on the campaign, especially watchful for his Democratic Party.

"I think it's interesting that this election broke standard political party breakdowns," he said. "Mecham had the older vote, Carolyn had the middle-aged vote and (Independent Bill Schulz) had the younger vote."

Goddard said he was surprised by Schulz's early concession.

"You could see his campaign tailspin during the last week. His statements about education, I think, really hurt him."

When asked if the excitement of election returns and the throng of jubilant supporters was kicking Goddard's political aspirations into high gear, he said, "It makes me very glad I'm not running for office. It's nice to have a year off."

An election watcher who was taking a reportorial breather by kicking her shoe-less feet up on a chair shortly after midnight was KTSP-Channel 10 anchor Claren Scott.

Scott, who was covering her first Arizona election, said the long campaign and election night coverage was sophisticated for a local market, and the most sophisticated coverage Phoenix has seen.

"We're using all sorts of computers, satellites and microwave transmissions now. . . I think the stations here have gone full-out on this election," she said.

Scott said her station, which had camera crews placed throughout the Hilton, began planning for election night coverage "months ago," but she didn't know how much her station spent on the election.

On the hotel's fifth-floor terrace, Channel 10 reporter Diane Ryan was dancing to Frankie Goes To Hollywood's "Relax."

After Mecham's speech to the Republican terrace crowd, in which he took back his early claim of victory, KTVK-Channel 3 missed the opportunity to have the first Mecham interview when directors at the station didn't switch to the remote location and the impatient Mecham through pushed on.

Hayden Library Addition Survey

ASU Libraries is planning a two-level underground addition to Hayden Library. The structure is to be built underneath Cady Mall and the West Lawn, connecting to the lower level of the existing library. A plaza will be reconstructed on the West Lawn. The designers plan to create a handsome, warm environment within the underground addition.

Construction is expected to begin in mid '87, but we need your help now in planning this new facility. Please take a few minutes to fill out the survey which will give library planners an idea of how you use the library and what you would like to see in it.

Drop the completed survey in the boxes marked "Hayden Addition Survey", located in Hayden, Noble, Architecture, Bimson, and Music Libraries, or send it through campus mail to: Maxine Reneker, Associate Librarian for Public Services, Rm. 333, Hayden Library.

Blame Idaho for lack of interest in campus events

Damn! I wish I were in Idaho.

Because if I were in Idaho, I wouldn't have to go through this post mid-semester slump that plagues most of us just about the time deficiency reports are sent through the mail.

If I were in Idaho right now, I wouldn't have to memorize 38 different quasi-metaphysical Italian verbs that end in -eri, or even worry about why we really went to Vietnam in my history class.

Yeah, if I were in Idaho, I'd get a nifty little lawn chair and park it right next to a potato patch and make friends with the buds. Nothing real serious — just good, clean, non-hectic fun.

It would make me and my brain very happy. I guess we all need a taste of our own secluded potato farm once in a while.

But I'm not in Idaho. I'm at ASU — home of the Sun Devils. And it's Homecoming Week. Gosh, why the heck aren't I savoring up the spirit of it all. I looked in the mirror and, yes, there's real person there — I hope. Somehow I can't seem to savor.

Not only that, there's a lot of other things many of us aren't savoring or, like myself, are being convinced there isn't enough time or energy to savor them.

It's participation in club-sponsored events around campus that I am talking about.

Suddenly, I'm struck with the realization that ASU is indeed filled with an abundance of activities furnished by some of the most hard-working, student-oriented clubs around. They are good events, too, but they're ones that I and my secluded Idaho have neglected to participate in.

A few weeks ago, I attended the MU Activities Board

Greg Krzos
Asst. Arts Editor

comedy showcase at Neeb Hall. I was surprised that a club run by students and without much funding could incorporate some of the funniest comedians around the country.

Appearing in the show were Glenn Hirsch, Evan Sayet and Mark Cordes, three professional entertainers who have toured the country with their individual acts via the David Letterman Show and the like. Yet, despite MUAB's attempt to bring them here, Neeb Hall was not even half full.

Actually, the joke may have been on the people who chose not to attend. The comedians were pretty fantastic and it baffled me that only two dozen bothered to show up. For $3, you can't get that kind of quality entertainment.

It troubles me to think where everyone could have been. Doing homework?

Down the street Sun Devil Theaters seemed filled to the brim with people watching "Shanghai Surprise." Then again, it was Thursday night and, who knows, maybe "The Colby's" got a little spicier. And there's always Devil House.

I don't mean to knock The Colby's or Devil House — each can be very entertaining. But why not spend an hour before hand attending something equally entertaining.

It gets to me, especially where MUAB is concerned. And I'm sure if it were another group and this happened, I'd feel the same way.

So, I found out some more things about MUAB and discovered that through an executive board of students, they try to sponsor enough substantial activities around ASU (comedy shows, films, student orientation, etc.) — students for students, if you will. Last semester they held a "Red Eye" special in the MU which turned the MU into a mini-carnival. The turnout wasn't that spectacular.

Tonight, they will present another comedy show at Neeb Hall featuring comedian Daniel Rosen. We will see how great the turnout is.

Maybe the problem MUAB and some other organizations is having is publicity. Then again, these events were advertised through the paper and other media vehicles and that didn't do any good. The lack of time may play an important factor, so one must assume that 41,512 students can't attend something like this.

Admittedly, I'm probably at fault the most. I can't remember the last time I thought about attending one or two homecoming events, or even going to the parade. And there's still an onslaught of other organizations I don't even know much about or think that I haven't enough energy to know about.

I guess it's Idaho's fault. I've become so wrapped up with thinking that I'm too busy and too tired to do anything else but park my pretty lawn chair next to the fictitious Boise potato patch in my brain. Maybe you have, too.

ASASU Senate 'only students'

Editor:

I think it is natural to be skeptical of one who argues against a principle or an action of which he is guilty himself. An example might be a debator arguing the evils of obscenity with his pants down.

Another example might be the arguments that the Associated Students Senate put forth in favor of Senate Bill 19 which prohibits the ASASU Supreme Court from using federal, state or U.S. Constitutional law in declaring senate or executive conduct unconstitutional. With the exception of Liberal Arts Senator Karl Karg, the senators argued that the ASASU Supreme Court Justices were "only students," that they lacked the competence to make decisions based on anything but the ASASU Constitution, and that ones so ill-equipped should be prevented from making binding decisions that have a great impact on the operations of student government (e.g. Murphy vs. ASASU).

I would expect that, as elected representatives to the student government, the senators would be responsible enough to have a thorough understanding of the ASASU Constitution and the powers attributed to the court therein. Their recent vote seems to indicate otherwise.

According to the ASASU Constitution and bylaws, the Supreme Court has the power to rule on the validity of a bylaw. It also has the power to review the actions of the executive branch and the senate and to issue writs of specific performance of these branches. The Supreme Court has "exclusive jurisdiction over the interpretation" of its Rules and Procedures, in which it is stated that the court is to be guided by relevant previous decisions. The court, is using the U.S. Constitution in Murphy vs. ASASU, was, in fact, being guided by a past decision — Clark vs. Cosgrove, 1981. The fact cannot be denied that the ASASU Constitution and bylaws grant the Supreme Court these powers. Senate Bill 19 is a clear usurpation of judicial power by the senate and violates the basic governmental principle of separation of powers.

I would also expect our senators to be competent enough to know that the U.S. Constitution is encompassing, and that ASASU, as a public agency, cannot exclude itself from its consideration.

I would trust our elected senators to be responsible enough to have become as informed as possible about the bill before voting for it, perhaps by reading what prompted the bill — the courts nine page decision of Murphy vs. ASASU, where the court spells out its reasoning.

Oh, but maybe I am expecting too much from our senate. Perhaps their irresponsibility results from the fact that they are "only students" and that they might not have had time to read the ASASU Constitution or the court's decision. Perhaps the senators, as students, also aren't competent enough to really understand their responsibilities as public agents.

The senate irrationally reasoned that it could limit the court's powers because the court was comprised of students not qualified for those powers. And so the pot called the kettle black.

A better defense

Editor:

Let us assume that Reagan had spent $2 trillion to build a "Star Wars" system, and that it worked perfectly as he claims that it would. Could the Russians still launch a first strike against the United States?

A hydrogen bomb is small enough to carry in a suitcase. The casing for such a bomb could be made in the United States. The electronics that would detonate the bomb could be bought over the counter in any city in the country. The triggers that would detonate the bomb could be manufactured in a machine shop by Russian agents in the United States. The plastic explosives that would cause the initial explosion could be bought or made in the United States. Would Reagan's "Star Wars" system defend the country against this type of nuclear attack?

College of Education

Reviving school in pursuit of "quality reputation"

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

ASU's College of Education, recently considered by many to be terminally ill, is recovering from a series of difficulties, some real and some imagined.

Two years ago, faced with crisis and criticism that called into question the very reason for its existence, the college teetered on the brink of disaster.

In the wake of studies that charged a majority of ASU College of Education graduates were not obtaining a complete general education, accusations by state lawmakers that the college offered an "easy degree," a declining reputation among students and spotty faculty unrest, some proposed the college should be eliminated.

This year, buoyed by the energetic leadership of a new dean, the college has revived in purpose, philosophy and outlook, and is steadily pursuing its new goal of "excellence."

More than any other factor, the arrival in May of Dean Gladys Johnston has helped assuage critics and allow the college to take a look at itself and begin correcting its deficiencies.

Saying she is in "hot pursuit of a tough, quality reputation" for her department, Johnston has toughened the standards for both admission to the college and for those continuing in the college's curriculum.

A great deal of the "easy degree" label attached to the college can be attributed to the fact that previously students were averaging 45 hours or more of methods courses, or "how-to-teach" classes.

Johnston has radically cut that figure, allowing a maximum of 11 hours of methods courses.

Education majors must now also complete a 56-hour general studies program as part of a shifting emphasis from methods to content.

Students who now hear the education college offers an easy degree may be in for a surprise, because Johnston has instituted a new 2.5 minimum GPA requirement for admission, up from 2.25.

"We will not accept as many applicants as in the past. In fact, we will not accept most applicants, because they won't make it," she said.

"That is just fine with me."

The toughening of standards will undoubtedly have a negative effect on enrollment. With some surveys predicting that the supply of new teachers could fall as much as 20 percent short of the demand by 1988, shouldn't the college be concerned about its "teacher production?"

Gladys Johnston, new dean of the College of Education

Quite simply, enrollment figures do not concern Johnston.

"I think that enrollment may be hurt for two or three years, but in the long run it will grow," she said.

"The only way to build a quality reputation is to have quality standards. I don't want an easy attitude here."

A long standing criticism of the college has been that the elementary education department was failing to educate students on how to teach basic reading skills.

"The problem with teaching reading education is that there is widespread disagreement on what approach should be used, phonetics or other methods," Johnston said.

The college is attempting to get around this problem by not emphasizing any one approach, but by instead presenting a balanced view of several programs designed to teach basic reading.

Another priority for the college is the correction of a somewhat negative faculty reputation, a faculty that Johnston nevertheless has the utmost praise for.

During the tenure of one of Johnston's predecessors, Dean Robert Stout, there was some grumbling among the faculty about his administration of the college. The new dean, however seems to enjoy universal support.

"We couldn't be accomplishing what we are here if I didn't have the complete and total support of the faculty."

"There are some excellent professors in this college," she said.

Upon arrival, Johnston faced the task of reorganizing the teacher education program, and found herself handicapped by a lack of resources.

"We were underfunded. Some of the departments had not hired anyone for seven or eight years," she said.

The college hopes to hire more regular full-time faculty next year, in an effort to get away from the concept of part-time lecturers and move toward assembling a faculty dedicated to the students and with enough time and a willingness to advise them.

Rumors circulating about deficient faculty at the college may be the best example of misconceptions that have troubled the institution as much as the actual problems it faces.

While Johnston admits that there were many criticisms of the college that were valid, it is also probable that many were not. In some cases the problems may have been limited to faulty perception.

Eliminating many of the misconceptions may be the first step in easing unfounded criticisms. Toward that end Johnston makes frequent speeches and views her job from more than just the academic angle.

"My job is to improve public relations as well as the Education College. I am an advocate, representing the college, letting people know about the good things that are going on," she said.

"I think we've turned the corner as far as public perception goes."

The release last week of a statewide education survey, co-sponsored by the college and Phi Delta Kappa, was an effort to gauge public opinion and then respond in appropriate ways.

"When I see that substance abuse is the number one problem in our schools according to Arizonans, I know action must be taken," Johnston said.

The college will be making an effort to educate its students to recognize the signs of drugs in schools and their effects. Corrective options will also be explored.

The College of Education has its faults, just as it possesses strengths. Students and faculty alike should be aware that at the very least, the college is proceeding in the right direction, seeking the goal of "excellence" so often mentioned by Johnston.

"The goal is to make your degree worth more to you and worth more in the marketplace," she said.

"The end product should be the best it can possibly be."

New education dean's vision 'contagious'

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

The new dean of the College of Education breathes energy.

Talking to Gladys Johnston, one gets a sense that she has to deliberately restrain her enthusiasm for the sake of professional decorum.

Nevertheless, her vision for the college is contagious.

Johnston says she is "embarrassed" by her reputation as a prodigy — she started college at the age of 15 — but she is outspoken about her own confidence and her confidence in the Education College:

"I've never been associated with anything that's been a failure in my whole life."

The expectations and standards Johnston sets for herself also apply to the college as a whole.

"I don't accept second best from anyone who works for me," she said. "I see no reason to settle for second best. No one ever remembers who came in second."

But while she is demanding, Johnston also conveys a sense of personal warmth. Her staff does not address her as "Dr. Johnston." They call her "Gladys."

It may be that Gladys Johnston is the best thing to happen to the College of Education in a long time.

The College of Education has been through some rough times in recent years.

Two summers ago, there was talk in the state Legislature of possibly abolishing the college. This was a suggestion with enormous implications, considering the ASU education program accounts for about 50 percent of the teacher training accomplished in the state — and at a time of a growing teacher shortage.

There are some, such as Arizona Senator Anne Lindeman, who have argued that the college is institutionally weak. In 1975, Lindeman said the college was known as offering an easy degree.

Others argue the college has been the victim of unfair publicity, politics, and perhaps some hysteria in the wake of educational reports such as "A Nation at Risk," one of 30 in just the last three years, which have negatively assessed the quality of American education.

The debate over the College of Education has been of particular interest to me because I have been, so to speak, in the middle of it.

Now in my third semester in the secondary education program, I've developed certain impressions of the college. For what it is worth, here is one student's assessment of the College of Education:

First, the overall quality of instruction offered by the college is at least equal to that of any other ASU program I'm familiar with — which includes journalism, social science, English and foreign language.

There are many excellent professors in the college. Moreover, this year's new curriculum emphasizes liberal arts, increased field experience in Valley schools, and college-wide core courses in educational psychology and school administration, which makes for a more well-rounded academic content than before.

Also welcome is the refreshing de-emphasis on methods, or "how to teach" courses, down from an average of 45 hours per student to a maximum of 11.

It is not an easy curriculum. To get in and stay in the program requires a GPA of 2.5, higher than the 2.0 required by the University as a whole.

If the college offered an easy degree a decade ago, it certainly does not do so today.

Walking through the college at the start of this semester, one encountered a sense of urgency on the part of the faculty, administration and staff. In addition to changes in curriculum, Johnston reorganized the administrative structure of the school, physically relocating about 50 percent of the faculty. The filing cabinets in the hallways and the sometimes chaotic bustle throughout the college left one with the impression: "Hmmm. The new dean must have arrived."

But reform, even if it is judged to be altogether salutary, is not the whole problem Johnston faces, and she knows it.

"How people perceive becomes a reality," she said, meaning if negative impressions of the college based on real or imagined shortcomings of the past do not fade in light of the new reality, the new reality itself could fade. Even students is a strong program can be persuaded they are in a substandard one if that is what they keep hearing. Negative stereotypes can become self-fulfilling prophecies if they are repeated and believed.

It is a little hard to imagine how this could happen in the education program, as the extent and pace of change has been so great. But perhaps that is only obvious within the college. It is to be hoped that those who have been critical of the college in the past will recognize that the institution is going through a period of rapid and profound transformation, and that the dean's reforms are being carried out with the enthusiastic support of the faculty.

"The amount of change that has taken place in this college since I've been hired is phenomenal," Johnston said. "It would not have been possible if I did not have immense support from the faculty."

The College of Education is not the same institution it used to be. It is not even the same place it was last semester.

Regents may revise on-campus alcohol policy

By KIM MATTINGLY
State Press

The proposed University Club will serve alcohol, and ASU students may be able to serve alcohol at on-campus events if the Arizona Board of Regents approves a revision of its alcohol policy this week.

The Council of Presidents, made up of the three state university presidents and the regents' executive director, Molly Broad, will propose a more liberal version of the board's alcohol policy at its meeting in the MU Friday.

The current policy allows students to drink and have alcohol in residence halls and fraternity houses, but the revision would allow ASU to sell alcohol with meals at the University Club and other designated areas on campus.

The club is a proposed meeting and entertainment center for ASU faculty and staff that would be housed in the 77-year-old Fine Arts Annex, east of Old Main.

The proposed revision also states "the presidents of the universities may authorize alcohol service in a limited number of areas for special events designated by the presidents."

The proposal does not specify what kind of special events, nor who may ask the presidents for permission to serve alcohol on campus.

"The language speaks for itself," Nelson said, adding that he would consider petitions for alcohol sales or service from administrators, faculty and students.

Nelson said the revision could lead to "broader meal and reception service" at campus events for University visitors.

Broad said a champagne reception for the opening of a new campus building would be possible under the revision.

The proposed revision of the alcohol policy was discussed at the regents' October meeting in Flagstaff with mixed reaction from the regents.

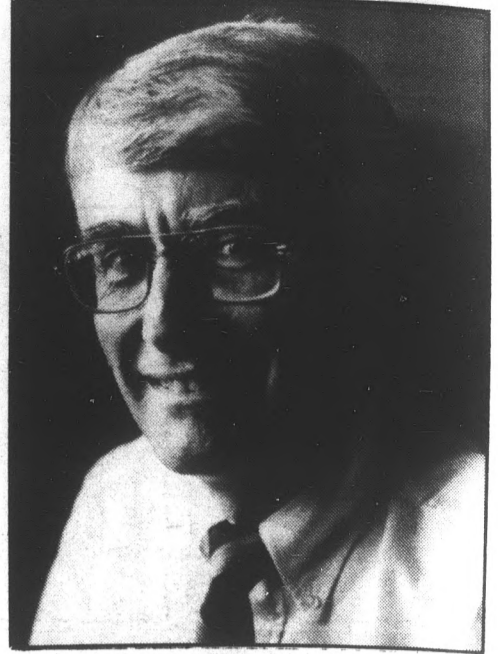

During that meeting, Regent Donald Pitt said the regents will have to enforce the legal drinking age and consider questions of liability, but "we can't and shouldn't install prohibition."

Broad said the council's proposal is in accordance with state alcohol laws, and the universities would be covered under State of Arizona Risk Management.

Risk Management is an insurance program that allows the universities to put away funds to cover personal injuries or property damage occurring on state property or involving state employees.

"We were assured that we would be covered with the revision of the policy as proposed," she said.

The presidents' liberalization also will allow NAU to sell alcoholic beverages in a university-operated restaurant and prepare wine and mixed drinks in its hotel and restaurant management program.

IF THERE'S LEADERSHIP IN YOU, OCS CAN BRING IT OUT.

OCS (Army Officer Candidate School) is a 14-week challenge to all that's in you... the mental, the physical, the spirit that are part of what makes a leader.

If OCS were easy, it couldn't do the job. It wouldn't bring out the leader in you, or help you discover what you have inside.

But when you finish and graduate as a commissioned officer in the Army, you'll know. You'll know you have what it takes to lead. And you'll be trim, alert, fit, and ready to exercise the leadership skills that civilian companies look for.

If you're about to get your degree and you want to develop your leadership ability, take the OCS challenge.

Call your local Army Recruiter, and ask about OCS.

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 6:45 a.m. Tuesday:

•Someone stole a balancing scale used for measuring chemicals from Agriculture Building Room 261, police said.

The employee who reported it missing said the room could have been unlocked between the time the scale was last seen and the time it was taken, police said.

Estimated value of the scale is $1,495.

•A student's car, parked on the second level of the ASU parking garage, caught fire, police said.

The fire was caused by carburetor problems and left $800 in damages, police said.

•University police arrested and charged a Tempe man with possession of marijuana at the Dash Inn, 701 E. Apache Blvd., police said.

Police said they had gone to the Dash Inn on a disturbance and assault call, but did not apprehend the suspects.

The responding officer saw a bag of marijuana in plain view in the man's van and arrested him on drug charges, impounding his van to search it because it was used in the commission of a narcotic crime, police said.

•Someone stole an IBM personal computer keyboard, valued at $100, from Farmer Education Building Room 213, police said.

The keyboard was taken from the unlocked room between 3:30 and 5:45 p.m., police said.

•A green Schwinn 10-speed bike, valued at $95, was stolen from the bicycle racks at Manzanita Residence Hall, where it was locked, police said.

•Someone stole $12 from a locked desk drawer in Hayden Library Room 430, police said. There were no signs of forced entry.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents for the period ending midnight Wednesday:

Police said a man robbed a SuperX Drugstore, 927 E. Broadway Road, at gunpoint Nov. 3.

A clerk was stacking a wine display when she was confronted by the man, who told her to "get over to your register."

The man was holding a small handgun and a white plastic bag.

The clerk filled the bag with $300, and the man fled the scene on foot.

Police describe the gunman as Caucasian, 24 years old, 5-foot-9 inches, 160 pounds, with black collar-length hair and brown eyes.

He was wearing Levi's, a black blazer, a gray hooded shirt and white Nike tennis shoes.

•Unknown persons broke into Abby Medical Supply, 1718 W. Third St., by throwing a rock through a window Nov. 3, police said.

The thief entered through the broken window and removed $300 in cash.

There are no suspects in the case.

•Police said a woman robbed a Tempe man while he was taking a shower at his residence Nov. 1.

The victim had given the woman a ride to his apartment after she had offered to clean his residence in exchange for "a lift."

While the man was taking a shower, the thief removed $22 in cash and two silver-plated Colt pistols valued at $1000 from the apartment.

•A Tempe man returned home to find the rear door of his residence unlocked and a glass window in the door broken, police said.

The man entered his home Nov. 3 to discover a note on his table that said "I'll see you later."

No items were reported missing from the home.

Damage to the window is estimated at $40.

A Tax Advantage With A Fourth Floor View

Whether you're attending ASU, or putting someone through it, now is the time to look into a practical alternative to rising dorm costs. One that gives you both a tax advantage and a more advantageous way of life. Look into Hayden Square.

These elegant, one and two-bedroom condominiums are the perfect places to live while going to school. You're just a five minute walk from the ASU campus. And you're literally in the middle of the convenience and excitement of Old Town Tempe — with its many shops, entertainment centers and more.

Hayden Square even has covered parking — a real plus over trying to find parking around ASU's dorms.

Of course, the tax advantages to owning a Hayden Square Condominium, as opposed to living in a dorm or apartment, are quite obvious. And very beneficial. What's more, by the time you're ready to sell, the resale value's may have appreciated significantly.

So take advantage of Hayden Square. Condominiums that give both ASU students and their parents a clear advantage.

ASASU funding debate lingers after defeat of 2 bills

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

The defeat of two Associated Students funding bills will not settle the debate over which campus clubs should receive funding from the senate.

College of Law Sen. Phil Stanfield, who co-sponsored both bills, said, "I think it's a travesty that we've maintained the status quo."

Stanfield said many groups will "be blocked from funding because the senate became hysterical over the gay issue."

With the defeat of the bills, a referendum will not be put before the student body to decide whether homosexual groups should be funded.

And the criteria for funding clubs will remain the same for the spring semester.

The second bill would have deleted two bylaw articles which prevent funding any activity deemed controversial or representing a partisan political viewpoint.

The articles had been used to deny money to groups, such as the Lesbian Gay Academic Union and Amnesty International.

'People are falling back on their morals (to determine funding), and I don't think that should enter the political arena.'

— Andrew Goodman

Denise Heap, co-chair of the LGAU, said her group will request $604 at an Appropriations Committee hearing Nov. 14.

"From past experience, I expect us to be denied funding," she said.

A majority of the senators voted in favor of both bills, but they failed to get the two-thirds support necessary for bylaw revisions and referendum bills.

The senate voted 9-5 on the referendum bill and 10-6 on the controversial-political viewpoint bill.

During the meeting, the senate also voted 10-6 to add an article which prohibited funding activities that promote a sexual preference, a contradiction to the original intent of the bill.

Several authors of the bill, including Stanfield and College of Public Programs Sen. Kate Lehman, requested that their names be removed from it.

College of Business Sen. Scott Butera said, "With that amendment, it has become sort of a hypocrisy. Your purpose changes by the will of the moment."

College of Architecture Sen. Andrew Goodman, a co-sponsor of the original bill, said, "(Senators) are using controversial as an outlet so they don't have to state the moral issue."

"People are falling back on their morals (to determine funding), and I don't think that should enter the political arena."

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Pope John Paul II will visit eight Southern and Western cities, celebrate outdoor Masses, take part in an interfaith service and meet with Jewish leaders when he returns to the United States next year, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops said Wednesday.

The announcement of the pope's September 1987 visit comes after actions in recent months by Vatican officials who consider some American churchmen too liberal in their views on social and sexual issues.

Action against such men as Seattle Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen and Catholic University theology professor Charles Curran have upset some within the church in the United States.

But the pope is still considered very popular among the nation's 52 million Roman Catholics, and church officials believe he will receive a joyous welcome, much as he did on his first U.S. visit, to the East and Midwest, in 1979.

"The pope will listen to the story of the Catholic experience in the United States, and, it is hoped, the nation and the world will hear it in a way that is only possible with the attention his pastoral visit will attract," said the president of the bishop's national conference, Bishop James Malone of Youngstown, Ohio.

The cities the pope will visit, announced officially for the first time, are Miami; Columbia, S.C.; New Orleans; San Antonio, Texas; Phoenix, Ariz.; Los Angeles; Monterey, Calif., and San Francisco.

Besides open-air Roman Catholic Masses and meetings with Catholic groups, he also is to meet with Jewish leaders in Miami.

are to spice 4th day of Homecoming

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

The largest crowd of Homecoming Week assembled Wednesday for Athletic Day — a tribute to ASU's coaches and athletes.

More than 1,000 enthusiastic people attended the midday event on the West Hall Lawn.

Today is International Day. International cuisine from many different countries will be provided at no charge to students and faculty.

The highlight of the day will be a cultural fashion show featuring native dress from all over the world. The show begins at 11:30 a.m. on the West Hall Lawn of Cady Mall.

Master of ceremonies for Wednesday's event was Bill Mosely, KTVK-TV Channel 3 reporter.

Mosely said enthusiasm and support for the teams are the key to success.

"With this week's (football) game, California is no pushover," he said. "We have to rally and get behind the team."

"I've already ordered a lot of roses, though," Mosely said.

After introducing all of ASU's athletic coaches, speeches were made by ASU assistant basketball coach Herb Livsey and head football coach John Cooper.

Livsey said the basketball will be "exciting" this year and urged everyone to come out and support the team.

"We have the greatest football fans in the country," Cooper said. "But we have to support the other sports also."

"I'd like to see us get 14,000 people at basketball games and get big crowds for all the other sports. I'll be there, I hope you are too."

Cooper did not say too much about the Rose Bowl but rather set the team's goals a little higher.

"We're not just trying to get to the Rose Bowl," he said. "We're shooting for the national championship!"

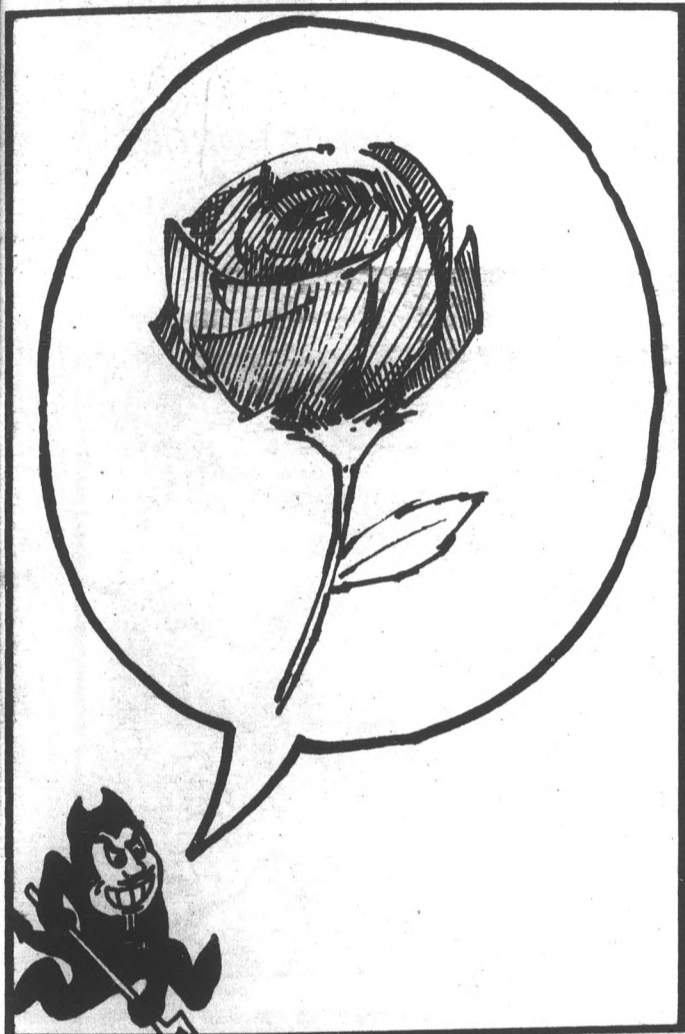

Providing entertainment at Wednesday's festivities were the Bare Cover skateboarding trick team and the ASU gymnastics team.

In fall 1984, the NCAA mandated that freshmen and sophomores pass 24 credit hours a semester that apply to some degree. Athletes also must declare a major by their fifth semester and pass 24 hours a year in that major.

Ferguson said poor academic statistics for 1985-86 may have resulted from senior ASU athletes who followed the old rules and now must take harder courses in a specific major.

Before the NCAA rule changes, Ferguson said, "Too many student athletes played four years of eligibility and weren't any closer to getting a degree."

Marianne Jennings, faculty athletic representative, said there were some potential ASU athletes who were not eligible to play this fall under the new rules.

But Cooper said any impact these requirements have on recruiting student athletes is "relative" to all universities.

"It's going to hurt everyone the same," he said. "Everyone's got to follow the same rules, and we're in strict agreement."

Ferguson said the requirements may eliminate some athletes but also may eliminate some academic problems.

He said high school students will realize they must be good students to play college sports.

"It's not a matter of kids not being bright enough, it's a matter of never having to do the work before," he said. "A few more really quality athletes are probably going to have to go to junior college."

Unlike academic probation, which grants students one semester to improve their grades if they fall below good standing, there is no probation period for athletes.

Iran hints at deal to help free hostages in Lebanon

By The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Two Iranian officials said Wednesday that Tehran is willing to work for the release of American and French hostages in Lebanon in return for weapons, unfreezing of Iranian assets in the United States and freedom for political prisoners.

A third official, Prime Minister Hussein Musavi, said in a report broadcast by Tehran radio that there was no possibility of negotiating with the United States.

But although Musavi seemed to rule out direct talks, his comments did not appear to contradict declarations by the other Iranian officials that a deal could be made. The difference in emphasis was seen as part of a growing internal struggle within the Iranian leadership.

Parliament speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani ridiculed what he said was a mission to Tehran by former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane and four other Americans to try to mend U.S.-Iranian relations. U.S. officials have not confirmed the mission.

But Rafsanjani signaled that rejection of the purported mission does not mean Iran won't help.

"If you want us to help you, provided others like you do not interfere with our job, we will help — if our friends in Lebanon accept," he was quoted as saying by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency monitored in Nicosia.

Rafsanjani is one of the most powerful figures in Iran's clergy-led government.

"Of course, our friends in Lebanon are free," he was quoted as saying, referring to Islamic Jihad, the pro-Iranian group that released American hostage David Jacobsen on Sunday. It claims to hold two other Americans and three Frenchmen.

Islamic Jihad has said it killed another American and another French hostage, but their bodies have not been found.

In London, Iranian charge d'affaires Seyed Jalal Sadatian said no deals had been struck with Washington. But in an interview with The Associated Press he said if the United States ended its hostility toward Iran and released Iranian assets, "out of humanitarian grounds we are prepared to do whatever assistance we are able to do."

In a BBC radio interview, he noted that Iran had been dealing with American companies to buy arms despite the U.S.

arms embargo. Iran needs weapons and spare parts to continue its 6-year-old war against Iraq.

Musavi said that because of American "crimes against the Islamic revolution," there could be no talks with the United States other than in the framework of accords reached after Iran's 1979 revolution to settle financial disputes.

According to the Iranian news agency, Rafsanjani's list of conditions for helping with the hostages included release of unspecified Iranian assets seized after the 1979 revolution, recognition of the rights of Lebanese Moslems, freedom for political prisoners in Israel and elsewhere and shipment of weapons purchased by the government of ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi but never delivered.

Golden Bears dismiss Kapp for '87 season

Joe Kapp

By JAY TAYLOR
State Press

California football coach Joe Kapp will be merely playing out the string when he brings his Golden Bear football team to Sun Devil Stadium Saturday night.

According to a press release from the Cal-Berkeley athletic department, "University of California Athletic Director Dave Maggard announced that football coach Joe Kapp would not return as coach in 1987. He will finish this season."

No reason for Kapp's termination was given in the release.

Maggard said the search for Kapp's successor would begin immediately, but could not comment further on the situation.

The news of Kapp's firing did not come as a surprise to many. He and Maggard had met earlier in the week to discuss Kapp's future, but after the meeting Maggard said there was "no timetable," for a decision on Kapp's future at Cal.

However, the week has brought speculation that Kapp would lose his job. The Cal athletic department had refused to comment on his status prior to the announcement at Wednesday's press conference.

Cal has struggled to a 1-7 record this year, 1-5 in the Pac-10. After losing to Boston College, 21-15 in the season opener, the Bears beat Washington State, 31-21. But it has been all downhill since, as the Bears have lost their last six games, and have not scored more than 18 points in any of the six.

Kapp has been the Golden Bears' head football coach since 1982, compiling a record of 19-32-1, and was Pac-10 Coach-of-the-Year in 1982, when he led the Bears to a 7-4 record. The Bears had been 2-9 the previous year.

The 48-year-old Kapp was widely criticized for an incident at a press conference earlier this year. Kapp didn't like one of the questions asked by a reporter following Cal's 50-18 loss to Washington, and subsequently unzipped his pants in front of the press corps.

Kapp was the starting quarterback for Cal for three seasons, and led the Bears to one of the most dramatic turnarounds in history in 1958 when he guided the Golden Bears to a 7-3 record and a Rose Bowl bid after they had been 1-9 the year before.

Kapp also guided the Minnesota Vikings to the Super Bowl, and played in the Canadian Football League, where he took his team to the Grey Cup, that league's championship game. Kapp is the only man ever to take teams to the Rose Bowl, Super Bowl and Grey Cup.

Kapp will complete this year with the Bears, beginning with a game against ASU in Sun Devil Stadium to kick off at 5:08 p.m. Saturday.

Swimmers prepare for tough California road trip

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

The ASU men's and women's swimming and diving teams open up their 1986-1987 season in California this weekend with matches against USC and defending NCAA champion UCLA.

These opening matches will be important not only to prove how well ASU matches up to UCLA and USC, but also to gauge how well ASU is prepared to compete against the rest of the competition in the Pac-10.

"We are extremely eager for the season to start," said Ron Johnson, men's swimming coach.

"The team is tired of swimming against each other. We have everything to gain and nothing to lose," he said.

As far as this weekend's dual match is concerned, Johnson is confident that his team will do well, but he does not by any means take UCLA and USC lightly.

Johnson feels that UCLA is a very balanced squad with strength in diving, while USC has an outstanding distance freestyle group but is weak in diving and backstroke.

"USC probably has the best group of distance freestylers ever assembled on a collegiate team," Johnson said.

The Sun Devils' strong areas will be in the sprint freestyle, backstroke and the individual medley as well as the relays.

"We are real deep in the sprint freestyle, with Andy Jameson, John Laderer, Scott Hoffer and Eric Fuchs giving us four outstanding swimmers," Johnson said.

"This is the first time we have had this type of depth, and it will be difficult to select our relay team from the eight solid swimmers."

Johnson is confident that the relays will be outstanding and that Neil Cochran, Peter Boden and several of the freshman swimmers will fight for national prominence.

The women's team has a number of outstanding swimmers returning this season, which gives the Sun Devils an optimistic outlook for this weekend's dual matches as well as for the season.

"We have the personnel to be in the top 10 at the NCAAs, but we need to be healthy and concentrate on ourselves and not worry about the other teams," said Tim Hill, women's swimming coach.

Hill is very confident that the women will be ready for the competition against UCLA and USC and that they will be right in the thick of things.

"We need to concentrate on our swimming and how we are doing because that is the name of the game," Hill said.

There are a number of swimmers that Hill feels will play a key role in the Sun Devils' success this weekend.

Terri Baxter, Freshman Susie Mortenson and Myra Shaw are expected to give the women some added strength in the breaststroke.

Carolyn Mills, Brandi Suttle, Kristin Brown and Julie Heiberger will be adding their expertise to the swimming team, displaying their strength in the sprint freestyle.

Hill is very impressed with Captain Beda Leirvaag, who appears to be at her best after a strong summer at the European Championships.

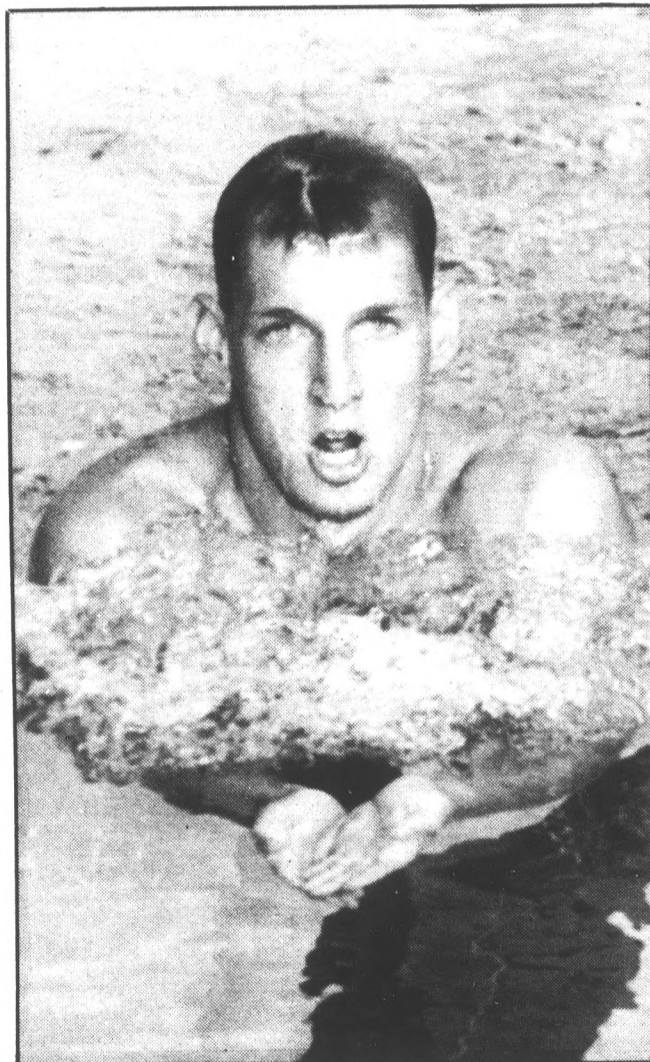

Leirvaag gives ASU the versatile swimmer it needs to stand strong in the Pac-10 and in the NCAA championships.

The diving team has all-American diver Tracy Cox returning for her final year.

Cox is trying to better her top-eight finish of 1985 and is expected to give the women's team a strong edge in the diving competition.

Ward O'Connell, diving coach, is very optimistic about this weekend's match.

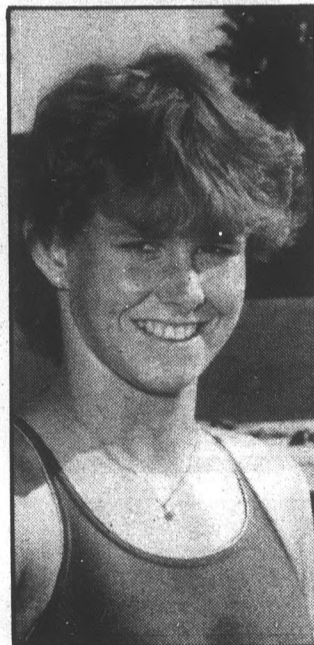

"All the teams we are competing against are good, but

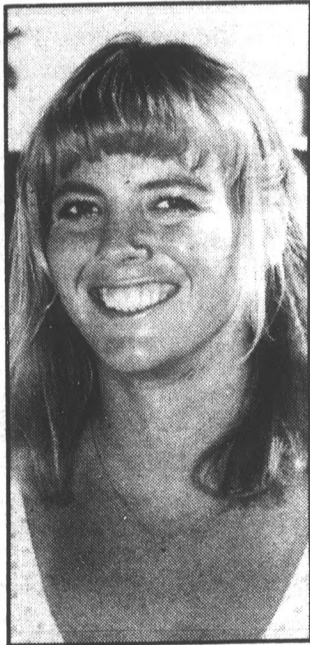

Peter Boden

UCLA is definitely the best," O'Connell said. "They are the defending NCAA champions."

The Sun Devils open up their home schedule with a dual meet against Nevada-Las Vegas next Saturday, Nov. 15.

Smell of roses causes reminiscence of Titanic, Hindenburg

JINX

I hate predictions. They remind me of when people used to talk about the "unsinkable" Titanic — and it sank. Or the Hindenburg; it was supposed to be the new means of transport, but after its first voyage carrying regular passengers, it couldn't carry wheat, much less people.

So when I heard that UP picked the Sun Devils to go to the Rose Bowl, I saw nothing but thorns.

I mean, I like the idea of the Sun Devils going to the Rose Bowl against third-ranked Michigan, but I've seen this scenario before. And, if I see someone selling roses in front of the stadium this weekend, I'm going to send a black cat across their path.

I guess it would have been worse if they hadn't picked the Sun Devils to go to the Rose Bowl, and you can't avoid talking about car accidents just because you might have one. But the Sun Devils are again in a position to win the Pac-10 if they can beat

Carol Boos
Asst. Sports Editor

UA, and they don't stumble over the hapless Bears. But we've seen this before.

If you don't remember, just ask Max Zendejas.

NOT EVERYBODY CAN BE A SUN DEVIL

This isn't going to be the year of the Sun Devils — at least not at Palm Desert High School in California. The student body voted to change the name of their mascot after some people complained that it was satanic.

I wonder what all those 70,000-plus Sun Devils are doing at Sun Devil Stadium every Saturday night. From what those California people say they aren't just cheering on the leaders of the Pac-10.

Maybe we can ask Led Zeppelin to do a song or two at halftime during the next home game.

I'm sure a lot of people don't like artichokes, but I don't think that Scottsdale Community College is going to change the name of its mascot.

And what about all those Saints out there? If this controversy starts a trend there might be a lot more Artichokes and a lot fewer Sun Devils. Maybe everybody will start naming their sports teams after vegetables, just to play it safe.

No new mascot has been chosen. The new nominees include Lancers, Diamond Backs, Aztecs, Suns, Pharaohs and Rebels.

I bet Moses thought Pharaohs were more evil than Sun Devils.

And what exactly is a Lancer? Are they scary? If the mascot name is supposed to serve as a role model, I'm afraid none of these will do. Who wants their kid to grow up to be a Diamond Back?

You'd think on their second try at a mascot name they'd come up with something a little more original.

I guess they just couldn't handle being Sun Devils. I think I will write them a recommendation.

How does Wildcats grab ya?
OVER EXPOSED?

It seems as if lots of closets are getting cleaned out this week. First, Don Coryell resigns as coach for the San Diego Chargers. And, he doesn't want to talk about it.

Then Joe Kapp finds out he doesn't have a job next year. And he doesn't want to talk about it either. What happened Joe — you used to like a lot of exposure.

I guess the Bears will be looking for a new coach for the 1987 season. I hear that Darryl Rogers is looking to get back into college coaching. But I wouldn't wish that on the Bears — maybe UA — but not the Bears.

Rookie Astros skipper named NL Manager of Year

HOUSTON (AP) — Hal Lanier, who in his first year as a major league manager gave the Houston Astros an aggressive, free-running style that carried them to the National League West title, Wednesday became the first rookie to be named National League Manager of the Year.

Lanier received 19 of a possible 24 first-place votes in balloting by a Baseball Writers Association of America panel and won handily. Davey Johnson, who managed the New York Mets to a victory over the Astros in the NL playoffs, was runner-up with three first-place votes.

Roger Craig of the San Francisco Giants got the two other first-place votes.

The balloting by two writers in each league city was completed before the postseason games.

Lanier finished with 108 points to 62 for Johnson, 42 for Craig, three for John Felske of the Philadelphia Phillies and one for Jim Leyland of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Five points were awarded for a first-place vote, three points for second and one point for third.

The Astros said that Lanier was preparing to leave on a belated honeymoon to Fiji with his wife, Mary, and was not available Wednesday for comment. The Laniers were married last spring.

Lanier, a former infielder, spent five years as a coach with the St. Louis Cardinals before taking the Astros' job.

He took over a Houston team that in 1985 finished tied for third in the West, 12 games behind the champion Los Angeles Dodgers with an 83-79 record and led them to a 96-66 mark, 10 games better than second-place Cincinnati. He directed an aggressive game, building the team around pitching and turning his players loose on the bases in the manner of the 1985 Cardinals.

"My philosophy always has been to be aggressive, to manufacture runs that way," he said during the season.

He said that was why he had been hired as coach by Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog.

"It was his style, and I learned a lot more about it in my five years in St. Louis."

The Astros pushed the Mets to six tight games in the playoffs, losing in 16 innings in the sixth game after holding a 3-0 lead entering the ninth inning.

Lanier earlier was named Associated Press Manager of the Year in nationwide balloting by sportswriters and broadcasters.

WSU Cougar football program struggling to attract audience

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Washington State University is practically giving away some tickets to its football game Saturday with 17th-ranked Arizona, but the norm calls for 40,000-seat Martin Stadium to be little more than half-full.

Poor game attendance this year has puzzled school officials, and the consequences are especially dire because minimum guarantees to visiting Pac teams have jumped $50,000 to $125,000 a game.

Coach Jim Walden used to gripe that the region's fickle fans didn't show up to watch the Cougars, they came to see the USCs and UCLAs.

"We've solved that," said Walden. "Now they not only won't come to see us, they won't come to USC, either. They've quit coming at all."

But fans have not quit going to see the ASU Sun Devils play. Sun Devil Stadium has an average attendance this season of more than 500 more people than its 70,021 seating capacity.

Cougar Athletic Director Dick Young says WSU must sell 30,000 seats just to break even on a fall afternoon of Pac-10 football.

So far the Cougars have attracted 25,200 for Oregon State and just 800 more fans the next Saturday when the Cougars trounced then-No. 9 Southern California.

"I'm here nine years, and if you graded me on crowds, you'd have to let me go," Walden said. "We've drawn better when we were losing."

This Saturday is being promoted as "Family Day," with general admission seats in one end zone selling for $1.

Reserve family tickets costing $10 will admit four children and two adults or five children and one adult to two end zone sections.

Game-day sales have been next to nothing this year, Young said. "USC was almost zero," he said. Ticket manager Janet Johnson had expected walk-up sales of $4,000.

Young says that not only is WSU dead last in financing its teams, but it is $1.5 million behind ninth-place Oregon State.

Theories on the poor attendance abound, from a bad farm economy to overexposure on television.

Young said ticket prices have not risen much, but an increase in donations required to get a good reserved seat this year drove off 1,000 of Washington State's 7,000 1985 season-ticket buyers.

Such thinking angers Walden.

"Those people are prehistoric in their understanding of what it takes to keep a program going," he says. "They're complaining about a $100 contribution when other schools have waiting lists of people to contribute $1,500 for the right to buy season tickets."

"Compare a true Cougar to a true Texan or a true Nittany Lion. We've finished a game away from the Rose Bowl twice since 1981. There are people at other places — Texas Tech, Rice, Purdue, Wisconsin, Mississippi State — who'd pay more just in hopes of having a couple of years like we've had. You call up a Nebraskan and tell him how much it costs for the average person to buy seats to Washington State football, and he'd laugh at you."

UA quarterback Alfred Jenkins may not start this week against Washington State, according to coach Larry Smith.

UA's Smith fretting over whether to start Jenkins

TUCSON (AP) — Arizona coach Larry Smith says his major concern this week is who will start at quarterback when the Wildcats face an inconsistent Washington State team in Pacific-10 college football Saturday in Pullman, Wash.

"The gate is wide open for someone to step in," Smith said Tuesday in his weekly news conference. "We have to back to the drawing board. Alfred (Jenkins) is afraid to pull the trigger. His confidence level is extremely low. I brought Andy (Crouch) because we needed a spark and he came in and did a good job for us."

After Arizona's offense kept bogging down deep in enemy territory during the first three quarters of its 20-13 loss to Southern Cal here last week, Smith replaced senior quarterback Alfred Jenkins with Andy Crouch. Crouch led Arizona on a five-play touchdown drive that pulled the Wildcats within seven points, 20-13.

Jenkins' weak performance and Crouch's success have made the starting quarterback slot an open position, Smith said, adding that freshman redshirt Craig Bergman will also be competing for the job.

Smith said the decision on the starting slot for the Washington State game will be made soon but not disclosed to anyone except team members until game day.

"I know Washington State, in the worst way, wants to know who our starting quarterback is," Smith said. "Why should I tell them? I know who it's going to be and the players are going to know."

Jenkins, who completed five of 13 passes for 57 yards and one interception in Saturday's game, has started 30 consecutive games for the Wildcats. Crouch, a senior, has never started a game in his career at Arizona.

Personal

LION LADY: Happy 14th month anniversary. Love, Bruski. P.S. I can read my own menu now!!

MANDATORY SIGMA Nu little sister meeting tonight, 6:30.

MR. PUMPKINHEAD desperately seeking stunning blonde who was wearing a red devil's outfit at the Ramada on Halloween. She is petite, gorgeous, and the sweetest thing to ever walk the face of the Earth. She was kind enough to guide me to a bartender, which I really appreciate, and nice enough to laugh at my jokes. I was wearing a long, flowing black cape and a 40 lb. pumpkin on my head. Please call 968-1810 before November 7 or after November 14. Keep-trying... that's the ticket. P.S. I know she told me her name, but take my word for it, it's hard to hear when you have a 40 lb. vegetable on your head.

MUFFIN HEAD, thank for everything. Especially residence, typing, and keeping me clean. Buck man.

PHI SIGMA Kappa rush dinner - all rushees welcome. Call 784-0433 for more information.

PREGNANT? CONSIDER adoption. We may be able to help with housing and medical expenses. For pressure free counseling at no charge, call Southwest Adoption Center, Inc. (602) 234-2229 or 1-800-423-2229.

PRINCESS- HAPPY belated birthday Diane. Welcome to ASU. I will love you always. Ray.

RUSH INFORMATION- 784-0433.

SAPPY AND LPB, prepare yourselves for Friday night. Hope you both have plenty of tissue. The limo will be blaring Smuggler's Blues the entire night. Snowman.

SIGMA CHI Dan, good luck on your pledge test! Guess who? Hint- KD.

SIGMA NU little sisters- A 6:30 meeting tonight. Be there, cuz group picture will be taken.

SIGMA NU little sisters: I don't stutter! Be at the meeting or we'll kill you! Love, Keith and Erik.

SIGMA NU little sister mandatory meeting tonight, 6:30.

SIGMA PI Rick Ridenaur: To the man with the supple breasts. Love ya, Deb.

SIGMA PI big bro Dave Humble- You are the best! I wuv u. Deb.

SLEEZER, GREG from Edina, MN: You sparked an interest! Hope you respond. The Sun Devil.

STACEY HARVEY #57, your bio lab partner and Brownie Cook thinks you're great. Keep in touch. 784-8347, Marnie.

TO MY drinking buddies Alpha Phi Lorri and Shannon, I can't stop thinking roses. Thanks, I love you guys! Mike.

TO THE patron saint of favors: Thank you St. Jude for prayers answered.
