Candlelight vigil held to honor AIDS victim, ex-ASU athlete Smith

By BENNY McCONNELL
State Press

Punctuated by the too-familiar sounds of jumping skateboards, a solemn candlelight vigil was held Monday night by Cady Mall Fountain for Jerry Smith, a former ASU and Washington Redskins football player who died from AIDS-related complications.

About 20 people attended or stopped to listen to the vigil. Moderator Jerry Santek, a member of ASU's AIDS task force, called the turnout "very disappointing. There seems to be a general trend of avoidance of the issue."

Former Sun Devil football coach Frank Kush and Associated Students President Chris Cumiskey, scheduled to speak at the half-hour long service, failed to appear. Kush told organizers he had schedule conflicts, and Cumiskey gave a similar reason to the State Press.

In prepared remarks read by Santek, Kush said: "I always had great respect for Jerry Smith. He was one of those individuals who had a great desire to do things. He prepared himself — he was one who would take his coaching and improve himself."

"He was a great guy," Kush said in the statement.

Rose Weitz, an associate professor of sociology, who is studying the experiences of those who suffer from AIDS-related illnesses for the Arizona Department of Health Services, told the small crowd she never knew Smith but likened his life to the story of "81 Blows."

"The first 80 blows broke his body and the 81st broke his spirit," she said. "There's far too many people who die without support of their family."

'The first 80 blows broke his body and the 81st broke his spirit. There's far too many people who die without support of family.'

She quoted from her study subjects who said, "I've learned not to be afraid of death ... there's not a closet big enough to hide in because AIDS will always be there."

A father and son stood close by, holding lit candles at the end of the service. Three youngsters sat on a curb by the fountain, clutching lit candles and their skateboards.

Smith was the pass-receiving leader for ASU in 1963-64 and was a tight end for the Redskins for 13 seasons. It is believed that Smith was the first professional athlete to have died from an AIDS-related illness.

A former coach of Smith attended the ceremony along with former ASU teammate John Torok. About $35 was raised for the Holy Cross Hospice in Silver Spring, Md., where Smith died.

Rodney Johnson, a 23-year-old ASU student, said the service represented a step towards campus awareness of the killer disease for which there is no known cure.

"AIDS is very much real and it tends to get attention," he said. "I don't know what else to say."

Twins' slaying case closed but questions remain

By MICHAEL BURGESS
State Press

Imad Said and Rachad Said Aboughaida were inseparable. The 22-year-old identical twin brothers lived together, always walked side-by-side and even co-owned a sports car.

The twins left Beirut, Lebanon, in 1981 where they attended high school. They came to ASU to major in economics.

The twins planned to return home after graduating in December and start a sports car parts and accessories shop together.

But on Oct. 10, they each were brutally shot twice in the head.

The twins returned home in separate coffins. Scottsdale police said the theft of the twins' 1984 Porsche Carrera was the motive in the shootings.

Because the suspect in the killings, 21-year-old Kenneth Dale Crow, is also dead, authorities consider the "bizarre" case closed.

Police said Crow died in a Las Vegas, Nev., hospital from a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head after stealing the Porsche and taking police on a high-speed, 40-mile chase. Crow had no prior criminal record, police said.

But relatives and friends of the Aboughaidas and friends of Crow are still searching for answers to what happened that late rainy Saturday night at 8734 E. Belleview St.

Yasser Salha, the twins' uncle who lives in Whitestone, N.Y., said he doubts Scottsdale police conducted a thorough investigation of the shootings. Salha said he has written a letter to President Reagan about the investigation.

"A case like this should not have closed this quickly," Salha said. "There are still a lot of ifs and question marks."

"I know we will never get them back, but we want to know what happened. There should be further investigation." Scottsdale Police Detective Don Keenom, who investigated the slayings, said Crow had a "Porsche fetish."

"He told friends he would get one of those cars someday," Keenom said.

He said police believe the twins were lured to Crow's Scottsdale home after Crow expressed an interest in buying the car.

Keenom said the twins had placed an advertisement in the Auto Trader magazine a number of times and were "frustrated" because they had not sold the car.

"They probably jumped at (the idea of) someone saying they were going to buy the car," he said.

The twins had owned the car since 1984 and had previously owned a Porsche 944, a black Trans Am and a white Camaro during the past five years. Local auto dealers knew the twins as car enthusiasts.

The last Auto Trader advertisement was published the day the twins were killed.

Keenom said police went to the twins' home at Shadow Brook Apartments, 5122 E. Shea Blvd., the morning after the shootings, and found the television and stereo left on with food still in the oven.

Hesham Bazzi, an ASU junior and a close friend of the twins, said it was unlike the twins to leave their apartment in that condition, especially late at night and in rainy weather.

"Even if they said they needed a loaf of bread they would say 'we can manage until morning,'" Bazzi said.

Bazzi, who went to high school with the Aboughaidas in Lebanon, said the twins were cautious and would have asked an interested buyer to come to their apartment to look at the car.

But, Bazzi also said the twins were not serious about selling the car.

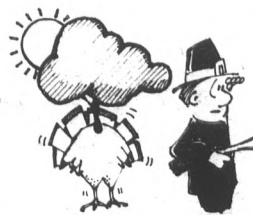

"They were checking to see if the car would sell for the price advertised."

Twins

Bazzi said he kept in close contact with the twins and spoke with them at least twice a day. He said he would have known if there was someone interested in the car.

Bazzi said he never heard the twins mention Crow's name. "We (the twins' friends) still talk about the mystery and why it happened to them."

One of Crow's roommates, an ASU junior education major, who asked not to be identified because he doesn't want coworkers to know the shootings occurred at his home, said he was shocked by the killings and is still trying to figure out what happened that night.

"I knew Ken for 11 years and this thing is off the wall and totally out of his character," he said. "He joked around a lot. He was a lot of fun. He was the one who always got the attention."

He and Crow graduated from Camelback High School in 1983, but the roommate said Crow dropped out of Phoenix College in the fall of 1985 and was working as a waiter at the Arizona Biltmore. Crow was accepted to ASU in February 1985 but never registered for classes.

Map: Jon Basalone/State Press

"(Crow) loved Porsches," he said. "When we would be driving down the road he would say, 'That's a nice car. I want one someday.'"

The roommate said Crow had talked about getting a promotion at the Biltmore and said he would be able to afford a Porsche.

"Things were going good for him," he said. "He was the kind of guy who made you feel good when you were around him."

Crow's roommate said he was in and out of the house the day the twins were killed, and Crow's other roommate, an ASU sophomore, was out of town.

A worker in the personnel department of the Arizona Biltmore said Crow was not scheduled to work that day.

Crow's roommate said the twins came to Crow's house on their own free will.

"As I was leaving, I saw the twins sitting on the couch, and Ken was standing up," he said.

He said everything seemed fine, and Crow did not appear nervous. He said he left the house around 10:30 p.m. and when he returned home, he found Rachad Aboughaida's body and blood-soaked cushions on the couch.

Scottsdale police said Imad Aboughaida's body was found by the back yard gate.

Crow's roommate does not believe the killings were premeditated.

"Ken was a smart kid," his roommate said. "If he planned to do this, he would not have done it in his own house. If he was going to do this, he would have taken them out to the desert."

Scottsdale police said the brothers were killed while sitting on the couch by a .22-caliber semiautomatic pistol.

Dr. Heinz Karnitschnig, Maricopa County medical examiner, said the twins each were shot in the left temple and through the top of the head. He said the time of death was 11:34 p.m.

Neither the autopsies performed on the twins in Phoenix nor one done on Crow in Las Vegas, Nev., showed drugs or alcohol were involved.

Keenom said Crow made a spur-of-the-moment decision to kill the twins and did an amateur job.

"I think he made up his mind one way or another."

Keenom said Crow attempted to move the twins' bodies after shooting them but only moved one body outside.

Some of Crow's neighbors said the Porsche's alarm system sounded, and they went out to see what the noise was. None of the neighbors heard the gunshots.

Mark Summers, Crow's next-door neighbor, said he went outside when he heard the noise and asked Crow if the Porsche was doing all the honking.

"(Crow) said, 'Yeah, sorry about that,' and he went back inside," Summers said.

Another neighbor, who wished to remain anonymous, said the alarm woke him. He went outside and told Crow to "quit opening the door until you figure out the alarm."

The neighbor said Crow apologized and said it was a new alarm.

Neither neighbor said they sensed anything wrong with Crow.

Crow fled the scene and was spotted near Boulder City, Nev., by police around 8 a.m. Sunday, Scottsdale police said.

He was chased at speeds of up to 100 mph into Henderson, Nev., where officers opened fire on the Porsche.

Crow crashed through a fence surrounding a house, where a wood plank, wedged between the exhaust and the back tire, set the left side of the car on fire. Crow then crashed into the porch of the home.

Police said Crow shot himself in the head and died two hours later in a Las Vegas hospital. Police are unsure if Crow shot himself before the car crashed into the house.

Bill Childs, Henderson police identification technician, said he found four boxes of .22-caliber ammunition in the car. Each box contained 50 bullets.

Childs also found a .22-caliber semiautomatic pistol. Scottsdale police said they found a receipt for the gun among Crow's personal belongings but would not say if the gun was purchased the day of the shooting.

Police did say the weapon "was purchased around that time." Crow's roommate said Crow owned another gun and was familiar with firearms.

Henderson police also found ski pants, a parka, several sweaters and a black cummerbund and dress pants. A road atlas covered with Crow's fingerprints also was found in the car.

"If I was to take a guess, I would say the clothes were his," he said.

Childs said he found the Aboughaidas' driver's licenses and credit cards in the glove compartment.

The twins, who were the only children of Said and Basima Aboughaida, were buried more than a week later in Dubia, United Arab Emirates.

"The twins were not born to die this way," Salha said.

"We have problems in Lebanon and they came here to be educated, not to be killed," the twins' uncle said. "Life is very delicate."

More family films sought to promote 'togetherness'

Amy Frischknecht
Asst. Managing Editor

This past weekend, I had a houseful of angry State Press co-workers. We all were overwhelmed with a sense of depressing anger at ASU's loss to the Wildcats. (They'll always be scumcats in my mind.)

So, to relieve the tension, and hopefully save the party, we decided to revert to "the good ol' days." We reved up the video recorder and proceeded to watch "The Sound of Music."

Actually, there is more to this action than just a spontaneous reaction. For some unknown reason to us, "The Sound of Music" and Sun Devil football has gone hand in hand for most of the season.

We had been singing the most familiar songs from the movie throughout most of the games. (Some of the games were blow-outs, thereby being a little boring.)

We sat in a section directly to the left of Sun Angel geriatrics. At first we started singing the Golden Oldies so they could relate, but soon we realized the real reason we sang these tunes.

What has happened to all those fine family musicals — you know, a movie that every member of the family can go see together. Together — that seems to be a scary word these days when it refers to parents and siblings actually having to do something in each other's company.

The closest thing to a family film these days is all 25 versions of Friday the 13th.

That's a sad statement. Still it is a very true one.

I think our generation is a very lucky one. It seems that we are the last of the true blue musical lovers.

Of course, there are a few animated films being released here and there. But as far as them being labeled as family-oriented, some of these Saturday morning plots can't even manage to hold the attention of the kids.

By the time the movie is over, the parents walk out of the theater with their brains so mushed over, they trot like little ponies and talk like Tony Randall.

The kids walk out complaining about what a dumb movie that one was. "Mom, I told you we should have gone to see 'Rambo.'"

"Sound of Music" has everything.

I was amazed how well it held our attention. These are college journalists — who are intelligent — watching a musical. It's a scary thought.

Did we feel silly?

No way.

After the Von Trapp family had safely crossed the Austrian mountains to Switzerland and all were happy campers, we decided to make it a double feature.

By this time, Wildcats and Sun Devils seemed further away and almost unimportant.

It was like calming the wild beasts with soothing music.

"Mary Poppins" was next in the line of quality entertainment.

The Julie Andrews film festival was born.

Now here's some fine animation. When Mary, Bert, Jane and Michael jump into the chalk picture, your mind struggles with your imagination on whether to believe it.

When this film was made, Hollywood special effects were not nearly as sophisticated as they are now, yet in many of the scenes, you can barely notice.

If you ask any State Press staffer who was there that night, they will tell you that Julie Andrews flew as elegantly as Christopher Reeve does now.

No strings attached — no pun intended.

But, possibly the best feature of this film is the soundtrack. The songs are fun. I mean, "Supercalafrajalistickepealadocious" is a fun song.

There is one person, who shall remain nameless, who attended the party and who is under the impression that "Mary Poppins" has no plot.

He was still upset about the game. He wasn't in his right mind.

But what can you expect from those editor-in-chief types?

It would be a great day if all those wealthy producers and directors out in Hollywood held their own classic film festival.

Maybe they would be inspired to make some more magic.

Letters

Husband, wife both responsible

Editor:

This is with reference to Ben Høglund's column "Family Unit Can Survive Only If Sacrifices Made" (Nov. 13).

As stated by Høglund, it would be beautiful if both men and women could be equally responsible for all aspects of family life. There is no reason why it cannot be so; it would be the ideal situation.

All it needs is a desire and willingness on the part of both partners. However, Høglund feels that such a concept cannot work in practice.

If a couple wishes to raise children, they should both be willing to make career sacrifices. Høglund suggests that the wife make all the career sacrifices. It is grossly unfair to ask one spouse alone to make all the career sacrifices. After all, the family is as much the husband's as it is the wife's!

Move it, bucko

Editor:

In response to Mike McKay's letter about considerate cyclists wanted, I agree to an extent. Cyclists should be less reckless and drive at lower speeds. But, I have one question. Why are pedestrians compelled to walk on the bike paths? Are they gluttons for punishment? I believe that bike paths are reserved for bikers. Correct me if I am wrong. Also, why is it at the crosswalks pedestrians have to walk up the sloped curb where bikers and wheelchairs roll up on? If pedestrians were considerate, they would walk up the normal curb. The problem will always exist because a few brainless people will continue to walk in the way of bikers, at a crosswalk and then write a cry-baby letter to the editor saying how inconsiderate those bikers are. If the shoe fits, wear it. If your foot is on the bike path, be prepared to have it run over.

Lisa Witt

In this context, the faculty and students of Cleveland State University (who refused to allow the sculpture "The Door" on their campus) should be congratulated. "Little wifey waving goodbye while hubby goes off to work" is an archaic stereotype which should not be perpetuated. It is not the ideal family situation.

It seems to have become the fashion of the day to blame the working women for all the ills of the family. As a man, I am appalled at Høglund's assumptions and suggestions in this age of equality between the sexes. It is attitudes like that of Mr. Høglund, and not working women, that cause problems in the family unit today.

Statement denial

Editor:

The General Union of Palestine Students strongly denies the statement that appeared in the State Press on Nov. 20 by the so-called Israeli Action Committee co-chairperson that members of the G.U.P.S. accepted pieces of cake offered by Hashimi.

As members of the G.U.P.S., we all condemn Sadat's visit to Jerusalem, for it gave the murderous Zionists a green light to invade Lebanon and massacre our people in Sabra and Shatila refugee camps in Beirut.

The Egyptian people know that Sadat's visit to Jerusalem was a clear treason to the Palestinian and Egyptian cause. Peace will never be accomplished in the Middle East as long as Palestine is occupied and the Palestinians are homeless.

General Union of Palestine Students

Students deserve better

Editor:

Why shouldn't the ones that make up ASU have the greatest opportunity to attend the biggest game ASU football has ever played? Instead, the die-hard Sun Devil student fans have to fight over 6,000 golden tickets. If it were not for the 42,000 students attending ASU, the U of A would be the only Arizona school in the PAC-10 because ASU would not exist.

Haven't Sun Devil students been put through enough? Only a selected few were able to attend the ASU-UA game, the rest of us had to settle for the "boob tube," thanks to CBS. The remaining tickets were available to the Sun Angel foundation, (non-student) season-ticket holders and our beloved alumni — the ones known for leaving the games early in order to "beat the traffic." Do you think these tickets were used as admission to the battle down in Tucson? Some were, but a large percent of them were used as an investment. These fortunate ticket holders know they could get at least $50 for each ticket and probably ended getting more for them. Of course, the same thing will happen with the Rose Bowl tickets, but to a much costlier degree.

How many alumni, Sun Angels and whomever else holds the rose-scented dream do you think are going to go through the hassle of airports, turnstiles and 102,000 screaming fans just to go to a game they are probably going to leave early anyway? They are going to sell those gold valued slips of paper they were so generously offered to by the University for at least 10 times the amount they paid for them.

I think it would be a lot more fair and logical to offer the tickets to those who will use them and deserve them — the students. I don't know about the "older" season-ticket holders, but I know there are thousands of students who would fly, drive or walk, if necessary, to attend the "granddaddy of them all" on Jan. 1 to their Sun Devils crush their Big-10 opponents.

Virgos logical enough to know horoscopes phony

(Note: Mike Royko is on vacation for one week. While he is gone, we are reprinting some of his favorite columns from the past. This first appeared in print on Jan. 8, 1970. —Ed.)

I sat down in a restaurant to have lunch, and there it was again. On the place mat were printed those generalized horoscopes, the kind that reveal your personality and character traits.

I tried to avoid looking at them, because I knew what mine would say. They're always the same. Finally, I looked.

"You have a logical, analytical and precise mind, which causes you to hate disorder. You must guard against being cold, unemotional and fault-finding."

That's the burden of being born between Aug. 24 and Sept. 23, a Virgo. Even if you are muddled, sloppy, sweet-tempered, compassionate, gentle and kind — as I am — you are constantly told by the horoscopes that you are a cold-eyed, precise, logical nitpicker.

Not that I believe this nonsense. Logic tells me it's meaningless. But it is irritating to be followed through life by it.

Mike Royko

Services

Had I been born a few week earlier, my horoscope on that place mat would have said I was a born leader, bold, energetic, proud and ambitious."

A few weeks' delay in birth and I would have read: "Your shrewd business capacity will guide you to the very pinnacle of success. The magnetic personality which you possess has great glamour for the opposite sex."

All of it is silly, of course, but at least it would have been more flattering. And accurate.

While sitting in the restaurant, I decided to conduct an experiment. I would ask the busboy, waitress and manager for their birth dates. We'd see how accurate the horoscope was.

The busboy came to the table, but before I could ask him his birth date, I noticed a speck on my fork, so I sent him off for a clean one, warning him against such slovenliness. He mumbled something about the dishwasher, but I pointed out that he, as the bearer of the fork, bore the final responsibility for its condition. That had hardly been said when he put down the water glass hard, splashing the tablecloth, which I asked to be replaced.

The waitress came for my order. I had to repeat it twice. Then I had to send my drink back, because it had an olive instead of a twist of lemon. I decided not to ask for her birth date because she probably wouldn't remember it. Besides, she was busy returning my food to the kitchen. It was underdone.

The owner, a woman, came out and asked what was wrong. Nothing was wrong, I told her, except the entire meal had been miserably bungled. She began to weep and talk about her problems as a widow trying to run a business. I told her there was no reason to get emotional about it. As an adult, she should be able to discuss her inadequacies rationally.

An example, I pointed out, was the salt shaker. Four of its 11 tiny holes were clogged. The ashtray contained an ash from a previous customer's cigar. And the salad had been placed on the wrong side. I suggested that she study the methods used by other, more efficient restaurants and adapt them when applicable.

Finally, I suggested she get rid of those place mats. She asked why, and I told her that I had come there to eat, not to be told I was unemotional, cold, fault-finding and so on. That was an insult, I added, and therefore my tip would be precisely 10 percent, rather than the normal 15 percent, or the more generous 20 percent.

With that, I departed. I never did get her birth date. She seemed to be upset, and was taking a tranquilizer. My final words were a warning to avoid getting emotional. And to turn down the music. It was much too loud.

ASU to net increased fund raising, exposure at Rose Bowl

By BENNY MCCONNELL
State Press

Handsome payoffs and extended fund raising from ASU's first berth in the Rose Bowl will have the school blossom in January smelling like a . . . whatever.

Each team in the bowl is expected to receive $6 million, President J. Russell Nelson said. Game expenses are taken off the top and the remainder is divided among the Pacific 10 members, on each year's hope of landing their team in the prestigious game, he said.

ASU's expenses for the New Year's Day game must be approved by the conference and an expense budget won't be available for two or three weeks, Nelson said.

This year, ASU and each PAC-10 school is expected to net $500,000 to $600,000, he said.

At Monday's Faculty Senate meeting, Nelson said he would take advantage of the expected nationwide and international exposure to "use this time for development. We will do some fund-raising activities with the Rose Bowl."

Those activities will take Nelson and fellow fund raisers to Pasadena, Calif.

"We have a considerable number of friends and alumni in California, and we're calling them in hopes of opening doors for donations," he said.

"I don't know whether we'll come home with 30 new donors, but we'll be extending our fund-raising efforts into California," Nelson said.

Mike Lude, athletic director at the University of Washington, which won the bowl against Iowa in 1982, said the tangible and intangible rewards of being featured in front of an international audience are difficult, if not impossible, to measure.

"Unless people were to mark on donation cards 'this is for being in the Rose Bowl,' it's impossible to tell if people are donating specifically for being in the game," Lude said.

As far as recruiting, he said the only time his school landed an athlete as a result of the game was a Pennsylvania student.

"He said he wanted to come to Washington after watching the team play in the game on TV," Lude said.

Steve Salm, assistant athletic director at UCLA and this year's Rose Bowl victor who defeated Iowa, said short- and long-term recruiting has been the most tangible benefit of being in the game.

"It happens all the time," Salm said. UCLA has been in the bowl 10 times since the game started in 1902.

"It's appealing to millions of potential little players who someday want to play for UCLA," he said.

Salm said the best benefit to the school financially has been the exposure in front of network executives.

"The exposure helps get future games on television, and it helps build a national reputation," Salm said. "So when the networks are deciding who they're going to feature regionally or nationally each week, that exposure you've had being in the Rose Bowl helps tremendously.

"Even if you lose big, it's better than not being there at all," he said.

Tempe police reveal gunman's real name

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

Tempe police released the official account of Friday's hostage standoff Monday, and revealed that the gunman was Wesley O'Neal Sellers, 50, of Houston.

Police had previously said the man's name was Bruce Sunshine, 47, of New Orleans. That name was an alias, Tempe Public Information Officer Steve Crooks said.

Crooks also said conflicting news accounts of the hostage situation and the shooting spree that followed is due to the confusing atmosphere at the scene.

"We gave the first information out before the bullets stopped flying. We did our best to get accurate information out," he said.

A heavily armed Sellers held 6-year-old Robert Hughes hostage at 1254 E. Malibu Drive for four hours before he was killed in a gunbattle with Tempe police.

The boy escaped unharmed from the incident.

Police had previously identified the gunman as Sunshine because Sellers was in possession of a fake Louisiana drivers license with that name on it when he died from a shotgun blast to the chest.

A check through the FBI fingerprint files determined that Sellers, 50, was in fact the gunman.

The FBI files revealed Sellers had been found guilty of killing a Houston police officer in 1969 during a robbery. The files also showed he had a criminal record dating back to 1957, including several incidents of vehicular theft.

Sellers' murder conviction had been overturned twice before, and at the time of his death he was being sought under a fugitive warrant for failing to appear for a third trial.

According to the report, after nearly four hours of negotiations between the gunman and officers, police shot Sellers after determining that he was not going to release his hostage or give himself up without a fight.

At approximately 6:40 p.m., Sellers stepped out of the house to check on a fire he had started in a coffee pot in the back yard where he was burning unidentified materials.

Because the young hostage was not in view, Sgt. Ralph Tranter fired a shot at Sellers with a 12-gauge shotgun from about 25 feet.

Tranter missed, and Sellers retreated back into the kitchen of the house.

Tranter then moved up into a screened in porch adjacent to the kitchen area, where Sellers shot him in the face, chest and arm.

Tranter backed out of the house shooting. He heard the boy scream and then grabbed Hughes and pulled him out of the line of fire.

Tranter is listed in good condition at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital.

While Tranter confronted Sellers, three members of the SWAT team stormed the front of the house.

Officer Les Grey entered the home and was wounded by Sellers in the hand, but managed to fire his shotgun and strike the suspect fatally in the chest.

Police said Friday the suspect had stormed out of the house with the hostage under one arm, "waving an automatic weapon around in a threatening way," and that he had fired a shot in the air to trigger the gunbattle.

Faculty club gains 'overwhelming' initial reaction

By KIM MATTINGLY
State Press

Between 60 and 70 ASU faculty and staff members have written their checks for membership at the proposed University Club, but the chairman of the planning committee said it is too soon to tell if the club will have adequate support.

Dick Jacob, also an ASU physics professor, said planners of the club — a meeting and dining center for faculty and staff — hope to attract at least 1,000 initial members.

Charter members must pay an initial fee of $25 along with a minimum $300 donation to the ASU Foundation to help develop the club.

Faculty and staff that choose to join the club later will pay $100 more, he said.

"If we don't get a strong showing of support, the thing won't go," Jacob said.

But he said the initial response has been "rather overwhelming."

"It's like predicting an election with only 1 percent of the precincts in," he said. "I'm optimistic. The response so far is encouraging."

About 4,600 letters were sent to full-time faculty, administrative staff, academic professionals, classified staff and professors emeriti last week, inviting them to become members of the club.

The letters ask them to send a $100 pledge, which is placed in an interest-bearing account by the ASU Foundation.

"Anything they pay will be returned to them with interest if the club does not materialize," Jacob said.

He said club planners also have begun seeking private gifts and donations for the additional $900,000 that will be needed to renovate the club's proposed site, the Fine Arts Annex east of Old Main.

Jacob said planners will take a formal petition for establishing the club to the Arizona Board of Regents in December.

But political science professor Bruce Mason, president of the Faculty Association, said several faculty members still have doubts about the club.

Some feel it will separate faculty and students, he said, while others "simply don't have the money" to offer their support.

Jacob said students will not be allowed at the club unless invited by a member.

But Associated Students may use the facility for special meetings or luncheons with regents or administrators, he said.

Jacob said the average ASU student probably will not want to use the club.

But Jacob said charter members, unlike those who might join the club later, will have the option to sell their memberships.

As a member of the club planning committee, Mason said he is "very intrigued" with the club's concept but has not yet decided whether he will become a member.

Other questions have risen concerning the club's alcohol policy.

The regents approved the sale of alcohol with meals, but Mason said some faculty members have asked, "What if it's not meal time?"

Jacob said the facility may offer an "on-going buffet," at which members could order drinks.

The club's food service has not yet been hired, and Jacob said, "We won't hire one unless we're convinced ourselves that it can provide a high quality food service at a reasonable price."

He said SAGA is being considered for the service.

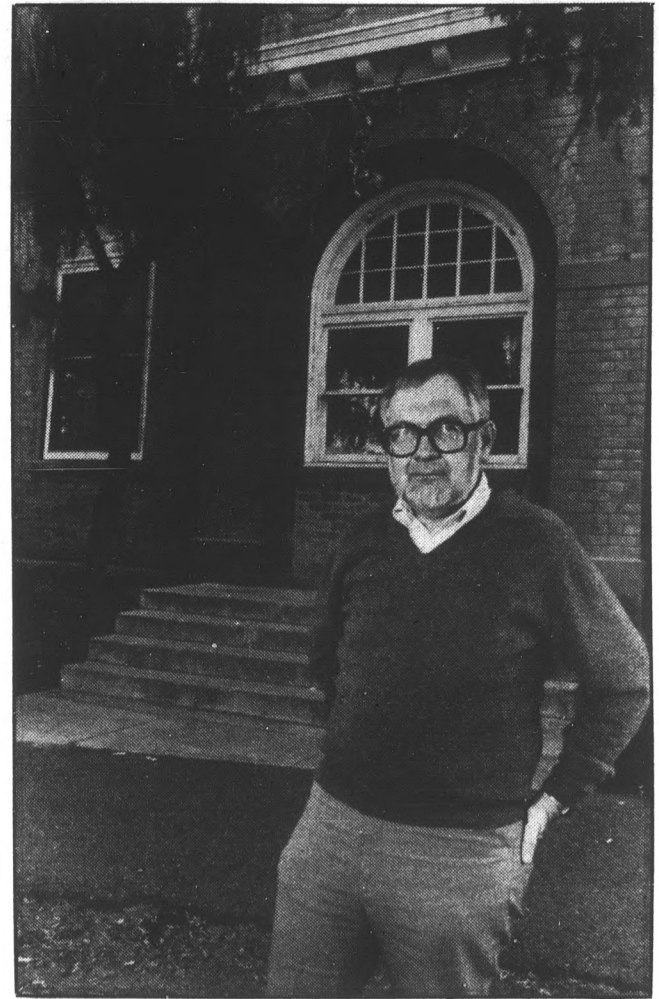

Jacob, who has researched and reviewed faculty clubs in California, said these clubs have "almost a complete lack of alcohol abuse."

He said successful clubs, such as the one at UCLA, have strict alcohol consumption rules but "almost never" have to enforce them.

"If they do, it's usually because of a guest at a reception," he said.

Jacob said ASU's club, which will have full dining and reception facilities, also will have strict alcohol rules based on the bartender's discretion.

"If someone appears to be abusing the privilege, then they will be shut off from it; the bar will be closed to them," he said.

Regents recall late member as advocate of students' rights

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Funeral services will be held Wednesday for Arizona Regent William P. Reilly who died Sunday from bone cancer at the age of 78.

Reilly, also a founder of the Phoenix 40 and a former president and general manager of the Arizona Public Service Co., had been suffering from the illness for more than two years.

Monday, members of the Arizona Board of Regents remembered Reilly as a civil rights leader and a advocate of student interests.

"The thing I will always remember about Bill Reilly is his support of students," Regent Edith Auslander said. "He was constantly keeping the student in the forefront."

"He had a great appreciation for education and the positive effect it could have on life."

Reilly, who never graduated from high school, was appointed to the board in 1980. He was an adviser to governors Wesley Bolin and Bruce Babbitt. Reilly had also been president of the board of directors for Phoenix's Ronald McDonald House.

He was an avid opponent of tuition increases at Arizona's three universities, speaking spoke out against fee hikes during the six years he was a regent, board secretary Virginia Bengé said.

Regent Tio Tachias, who was appointed to the board with Reilly, said Reilly was particularly concerned about students' well-being.

"I don't want to minimize the other regents' concern for students, but Mr. Reilly was always very apparent in his concern."

Thomas Reilly, William Reilly's son, said his father was a member of the Industrial Opportunities Commission — which provides job training for underprivileged people — at a time when "it was not a popular board to serve on."

"I think it goes back to his roots," Thomas Reilly said. "Dad was 78, I think he could remember when being an Irish Catholic was not the easiest avenue for advancement."

"Dad just wanted to see everybody get a fair shake."

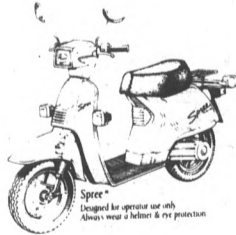

Regent Donald Pitt said Reilly's compassion extended beyond students to all people.

"He was a self-made man," Pitt said. "Bill did not have a university education. He read the dictionary from cover to cover."

"I think it is his sense of humor and the twinkle in his eye that I will remember."

ASU to net $20,000 in plan to lease lot

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

ASU will be profiting $20,000 a year from parking revenues generated by a restaurant/nightclub that will be built in The Cornerstone, 725 S. Rural Road, a University official said Monday.

Richard Landreth, assistant director of parking services, said the University has agreed to lease out Lot 59E to The Cornerstone to accommodate customers at the nightclub. The agreement is pending approval by the Arizona Board of Regents.

The Tempe Planning and Zoning Commission had originally rejected plans for the nightclub, but the developers, Birtcher Properties and the American Athletic Club, appealed the decision.

The planned establishment would cover 8,213 square feet, which is slightly larger than Flakey Jake's.

The commission's major concern was whether there would be adequate parking available for the new business when parking areas at The Cornerstone are already over-crowded during the evening.

The Cornerstone is required to have 867 parking spaces, but has a variance to provide only 769.

The planning and zoning commission said the on-site parking is not adequate to accommodate the club.

Lot 59E is located in front of the Sun Devil Marching Band field.

The Board of Regents discussed the request on Nov. 7 and said the University would be willing to enter such a lease once the city council made a decision.

Landreth said he believes the lease agreement will be the first of its kind for the University.

"The main reason we even discussed it is because it involves an area that does not have very high usage," Landreth said.

The lot would be available for The Cornerstone's use between 5 p.m. and 5 a.m. The lease does not include special events such as concerts in the University Activity Center or football games.

Landreth said the first year's fee would be used toward paving and striping the lot.

"If the lease is approved, it will allow us to improve the lot at no cost to the University," he said.

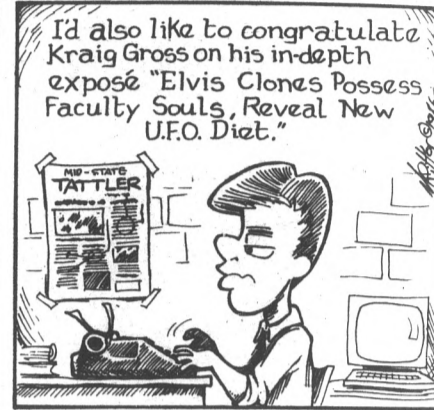

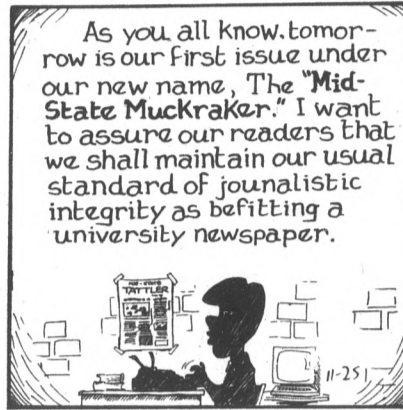

Grady Gammage Jr., attorney for Birtcher Properties, said The Cornerstone will continue to maintain and enforce the 36 30-minute parking spaces and the seven 15-minute spaces in The Cornerstone parking lot.

Group to study students' training for foreign jobs

Lobbyists name regent to national commission

By KIM MATTINGLY
State Press

A commission to study national challenges in higher education will determine whether U.S. institutions are adequately educating students for international competition, a member of the group said Monday.

Molly Broad, Arizona Board of Regents executive director, was appointed to the commission in October by the American Council of Education, a group in Washington that lobbies for higher education.

"We will try to identify the responsibility of higher education in meeting the challenges of the economy in international competition," said Broad, who met with commission members in Washington two weeks ago.

"We will make recommendations in the context of national challenges and national problems and try to identify where higher education sits."

Particularly in high-technology areas such as engineering and the sciences, Broad said the commission will look at how U.S. students are being trained to compete in the international marketplace and will make recommendations to improve that training.

The commission — composed of about 20 respected higher education authorities from selected universities and governing bodies — will meet again in January and schedule several other meetings to complete a report by next summer.

Its recommendations will be distributed through the ACE and will be presented to Congress members, state governors and corporate leaders, Broad said.

The group, which is chaired by William C. Friday, president emeritus of the University of North Carolina, also will develop a report to inform 1988 presidential candidates of the national debate on the role of government in higher education to assist them in developing party platforms.

In addition, Broad said they will discuss the financial roles and responsibilities of those who finance higher education: federal and state governments, educational institutions, students, parents and the private sector.

"The result of this commission will be to better define future higher education financial responsibilities of state and federal governments as well as other higher education constituencies," she said.

Broad said the commission will make specific recommendations to define the state and federal governments' financial obligations in higher education.

"The recommendations will have implications for Arizona and for all the states," Broad said.

"This information will be an asset for the Arizona Board of Regents with respect to its current strategic planning efforts and its work in the area of student financial aid."

Arizona regents are examining the state's financial support of higher education and are hoping to make recommendations for establishing a state student aid program.

Secretary of Education William J. Bennett has criticized the commission for being preoccupied with money issues rather than educational quality.

But Broad said: "The secretary's criticisms are uninformed. The commission includes individuals who have not only studied the undergraduate curriculum but have instituted major qualitative improvements."

Commission members include Ernest Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation, who authored the foundation's recent widely publicized report, "College: The Undergraduate Experience in America," and Derek Bok, president of Harvard, who is widely acknowledged as leading the effort at reforming the core curriculum.

Broad said, "The effort sponsored by the American Council on Education deserves the opportunity to complete its work and have its recommendations evaluated on their merits."

She said the commission's influence remains to be seen.

"It depends on how good our recommendations are and how convincing (they are)," Broad said, adding that the quality of commission members indicates a good deal of "strength at the outset."

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 7 a.m. Monday:

•A student returned to her locked Manzanita Residence Hall room after being gone for the weekend and found personal property valued at $1,000 missing, police said.

Items reported missing include a pink wallet with a VISA charge card, drivers license, First Interstate bank card, a personal check for $200 and another $200 in cash.

She also reported her gold chain link necklace with six diamonds stolen, police said.

The room was still locked when she returned, and police have no suspects, police said.

•An ASU student told police someone damaged the hood and front grill of his car while it was parked in front of 410 Adelphi Drive, police said.

Estimated value of the damage is $400. •Someone used a blunt object to break the rear window out of a car parked behind 414 Adelphi Drive, police said.

Estimated value of the damage is $150. •Police said they found the goal post that was taken from the Sun Devil Stadium Nov.

15 in the hedges east of 701 Alpha Drive. Police have no suspects or witnesses.

•The signs for Danforth Chapel and the Physical Education Building West were painted with UA graffiti, police said.

•Police recovered a stolen ladies green 10-speed bike, valued at $150, in the bushes east of the MU, police said.

Police blame vandalism on campus skateboarders

By LAUREN MILLETTE
State Press

Juveniles on wheels and ASU police are skating on opposite sidewalks over skateboarders using campus as a "thrasher's" heaven.

ASU Police Chief C. Russell Duncan said: "I think there are probably some people who skateboard between classes that cause no problems, but 10 percent of the skateboarders on this campus are unsupervised juveniles that are malicious and cost the University thousands of dollars every year.

"We can't give an actual figure of the damage they cause on this campus because we can't prove what we don't catch people in the act of doing."

There is no University law prohibiting skating and skateboarding on campus.

Although police do not always catch skateboarders in the act of vandalizing campus, Duncan said, telltale signs of their "good times" are usually a part of weekend police reports.

Police say they attribute most of the broken windows, chipped and cracked concrete stairways, benches and ash trays, bent lamp posts and demolished flowerbeds to inconsiderate skateboarders.

But the juveniles who call themselves "thrashers" say they are not responsible for the damage police accuse them, and "thrashing" is simply a term for excelling at skateboard stunts.

A 16-year-old, self-proclaimed thrasher nicknamed T-Bone, said: "I've been skateboarding at ASU on the weekends for about four years. I come here to practice being good, that's what thrashing is all about.

"I may have left paint marks from the bottom of my skateboard, but in all the time I've been thrashing at ASU, I never broke or destroyed anything, and most of the thrashers I know haven't either."

Duncan said skateboarders continually move benches around, set fires in trash cans in the breezeways between buildings, and jump from loading ramps, fountains and stairways with their skateboards, thrashing University property and endangering the safety of passers-by.

Some skateboarders on campus use their boards for transportation and are considerate of others, Duncan said, but there is also a great number who use them to have fun and do not care what damage they cause or who they hurt in the process.

"There are malicious skateboarders out there who are not the slightest bit concerned about hurting people," he said.

Duncan said he believes the skateboarder's heaven problem on campus could be diminished if the owner of CheapSkates, a skate and skateboard rental outlet on 130 E. University Drive, "would work with police to put an end to the problem."

"We have tried to get her to cooperate with us but have got nowhere," he said.

Adrienne Felicioni, owner of CheapSkates for the past two years, said she went to police before they came to her, concerned with the way they were treating her clients.

Felicioni said: "I first went to the ASU police because I thought they were acting way out of line in the way they were treating the people I rent to.

"They have thrown church groups of children off campus for skating and have told the kids that I know are getting ready for competition they can't skate on campus."

Felicioni said police are not pressuring her as much about controlling her clients, but the dissension still exists.

"We've got a problem here," she said. "I want to cooperate with the police, and I want the University to work with me.

Felicioni said ASU administrators have tried to make it illegal for skaters and skateboarders to enjoy their sport on campus for several years but have not succeeded.

Duncan said ASU administrators are waiting on the results of a proposal the UA submitted to the Arizona Board of Regents banning skating and skateboarding on Arizona university campuses.

In the meantime, Duncan says officers have the right to cite skateboarders for interfering with the educational process or trespassing on state property.

Duncan said officers particularly cite skateboarders who practice in parking structures because they obstruct the flow of traffic.

Neil Schwartzfarb, a CheapSkates employee and 23-year-old ASU student and skateboarder, said he organized a petition last year to stop administrators from banning skating on campus.

Schwartzfarb said: "I gathered about 200 names on the petition and then the wave to end skateboarding on campus just seemed to disappear.

"From what I hear, the issue seems to pop up every year. I know most of these kids, and they are not as criminal as the police make them out to be."

Felicioni said she and her crew take great measures in instructing clients to be safe and careful not to damage University property.

"But they blame us (skateboarders and skaters) for most of the damage on campus, even though we act responsibly," she said.

"If skateboarders are tearing the campus up, they (police) ought to look at which skateboarders are causing the trouble and penalize them, not all of us."

Felicioni said she believes the skateboarders who wreak havoc on campus are not her "clients or the people who hang out in my shop."

"They are the young kids who come all the way from Mesa, Scottsdale and Phoenix looking for a good place to skate and practice tricks," she said.

Many of the skateboarders say they come to practice their tricks and "thrash" campus because ASU has wide open spaces to skate through and "lots of concrete things to practice tricks on."

Bob Bezold, a 13-year-old thrasher from a Tempe junior high school, said he comes to ASU to "go out and be good — that's what thrashing is all about. I don't destroy anything over there, I just practice."

Schwartzfarb said: "I ask a lot of the skateboarders where they come from and why they choose ASU. Most of them say they come because no place else in the Valley offers such a good place to practice.

"I've never had anyone complain to me about skateboarders except the police. As far as the skaters are concerned, ASU is a skateboarder's heaven."

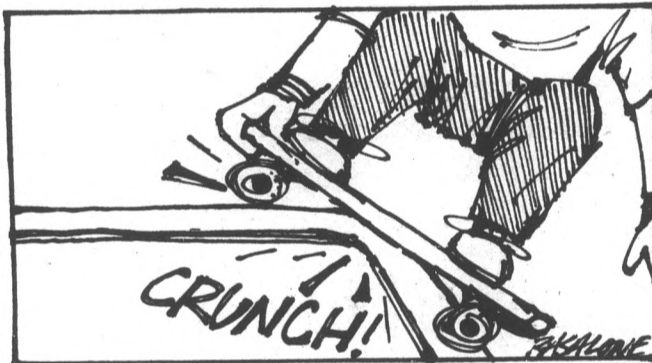

Joe Haver, an 18-year old ASU student and skateboarder, said thrashing means "getting crazy" on a skateboard, not damaging property.

"We come here because the benches, ramps and stairs are good for practicing tricks," Haver said. "A lot of the kids that come here have nowhere else to go."

Felicioni said she feels the juveniles that skate on campus would be getting into mischief if skating is banned.

"I think the police are picking on these kids. I'm sure more damage is done on campus by fraternity pranks than what the skateboarders do," she said.

"If they take skateboarding away from them, many of them will have nothing else to do and will probably end up getting themselves in trouble."

Men's swimming and diving teams beat Texas

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

The sixth-ranked ASU men's swimming and diving teams had one of their most important meets of the season Saturday, upsetting the No. 2 Texas Longhorns, 58-55, at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

"This was one of the biggest wins in the dual meet season," said Ron Johnson, men's swimming coach.

"It was just last week that Texas defeated No. 1 ranked Stanford by 15 points, and now we beat them," Johnson said. "It was quite a win."

The Sun Devils (2-2) had a number of swimmers who not only exceeded NCAA qualifying standards, but posted some of the fastest times in the country.

Eric Fuchs and John Laderer finished first and second in the 50-meter freestyle, respectively, which qualified them for the NCAA.

"It is very unusual to see two swimmers from the same team not only come in 1 and 2 in the same event, but also to qualify for the NCAA standards," Johnson said.

"Fuchs had a really big win, and Laderer had an impressive win, considering he was coming off an illness," Johnson said.

The performance of these two swimmers, according to Johnson, seemed to surprise Texas and really give ASU the boost they needed to win.

Neil Cochran also had a good performance, placing first in the 200 individual medley relay and also qualifying him for the NCAA standards.

The team of Cochran, Andy Jameson, Peter Boden and Scott Hoffer qualified for the NCAA in the 400-meter medley relay and also set the fastest time in the country, thus far this year in this event, clocking in at 3:53.01.

Cochran also qualified for the NCAA and set a record time in the 200 individual medley relay, coming in at 2:07.18.

Lastly, Jameson turned in the fastest time this season in the 100-meter freestyle with a 52.44.

"It is very impressive not only to beat Texas, but to have our swimmers qualifying for the NCAA so early and against such a high-caliber team," Johnson said.

Johnson had gone into the match expecting the swimmers to do the best they could do and to start the tapers for the U.S. Open meet in Orlando, Fla.

"We were partially getting into the taper for the competition in Orlando," Johnson said. "Our sprinting team of Jameson, Laderer and Hoffer had good times in the clip (partially shaven) and this made a nice difference for us," he said.

The victory was very emotional for the team and Johnson.

"This is one of the best meets I have ever seen or been involved in since I started coaching over 14 years ago," Johnson said.

"Our guys were really up for this meet, and it shows by the results," he said.

The win could have been a lot bigger for the Sun Devils had they won some of the Devils live by turnovers, die by turnovers

Jay Taylor
Sports Analysis Editor

The members of the ASU football team had said all last week that all they had to do to beat UA was do what they had done all year long, namely dominate the line of scrimmage and not turn the ball over.

For the first time in 11 games they didn't do that and it cost them dearly.

Darryl Harris chose the first drive of the game to cough up his first fumble of the year. The Cats recovered and drove 97 yards for a touchdown to go up 7-0. Then Jeff Van Raaphorst threw the first of three interceptions on the day which led to another UA score, making the score 14-0 Wildcats.

Unfortunately no one in Arizona, except those at the stadium, got to see any of that live, as we were subjected to the end of the Ohio State-Michigan game. But to anyone who watched the game and heard announcers repeatedly call ASU the "Arizona State Wildcats," that bit of bad judgment (incompetence?) should not be a surprise.

Once we were able to see the game, it didn't get much better. The Devils were not able to control the line of scrimmage on either side of the ball and were forced to throw on virtually every down.

It was the only game of the year where the Sun Devils did not have the game's leading rusher. In fact, the Devils had almost no running game at all.

But despite all that, the Devils were in the game almost the whole way. Two crucial series ended any hope the Devils had of coming back.

In the middle of the third quarter with ASU trailing 21-10, the Devils mounted a drive from their own 20 to a first and goal on the UA 4-yard-line. But Coach John Cooper abandoned the pass and went to the ground game, and it cost him dearly.

Channing Williams ran the ball three consecutive times and got the ball only to the 1-yard-line, and Cooper elected to go for the field goal, which Kent Bostrom drilled from 18 yards. But wait, there was a flag on the play. UA had made its first key mistake of the game, and it looked like it would cost them.

Cooper went against one of the cardinal rules of football — he took the three points off the board to go for the touchdown. For that I applaud him, and I agree with the decision. It took a lot of guts to do that, and perhaps that is why Cooper has already been named Coach-of-the-Year by three different services.

But the call he made on fourth and one was not the best in my book. They had run the ball three times in a row without success. Why not run a play-action pass, giving Van Raaphorst the option to run or throw?

But he didn't, and Williams was stopped short of the goal line, and a considerable amount of wind was taken out of the Devils' sails.

The Cats then went on their second length-of-the-field march to score a field goal, putting them up by two touchdowns, 24-10, just into the fourth quarter.

But it still didn't look like the Devils were through. They

Sun Devils choose Arkansas mentor as new golf coach

From staff and wire reports

Steve Loy, the men's golf coach at the University of Arkansas, resigned and was named as the new men's head golf coach at ASU, Sun Devil Athletic Director Charles Harris said Monday.

"He represents a combination of experience and working knowledge that fitted the needs of ASU," Harris said.

Loy, 34, officially takes the position at ASU Jan. 1 and said that he would recommend that assistant coach Jim Morris be named interim coach.

"I'm leaving because of the opportunity to upgrade my situation and the opportunity to go home (Loy was head golf coach at Scottsdale Community College in 1982 and 1983)," Loy said. "On behalf of my family and myself, it was with regrets and sadness that I'm leaving the University of Arkansas."

"Everything good that has ever happened to me has happened at Arkansas. I'd like to thank a very special group of players and Coach Frank Broyles, the greatest man in the world."

Broyles is the athletic director at Arkansas.

"If it wasn't for Coach Broyles, I wouldn't be here and if it wasn't for Coach Broyles, I wouldn't have had the opportunity to leave," Loy said. "There's something special about Arkansas that you can't put into words, but it's there."

"I know Coach Broyles will not sit on this situation. He knows where our program is and the direction it needs to take."

Loy said he would be the golf coach at ASU and that one possibility is that he will manage a course being built on the campus. The course is about two years from completion, he said.

Loy led the Razorbacks to a second place finish three consecutive years in the Southwest Conference Championships. Prior to his arrival in 1984, the Razorbacks had never finished among the Top 20. In 1984 they finished 19th, sixth in 1985 and 16th in 1986 at the NCAA's.

"I'd like to say a special thanks to the people here," Loy said. "Whenever you're down, they bring you up."

He singled out Associate Athletic Director Fred Vescolani and the football coaching staff.

"I met with our team and urged each of them to stay," Loy said. "This group has not been the team that it can be yet."

The Razorbacks finish the fall season in South Carolina this weekend and in Las Vegas the following week. Arkansas is ranked in the top 10 in the most recent poll.

George Boutell resigned in August saying he was not happy in his position as head coach at ASU.

He had six top-10 NCAA finishes, nine top-20 NCAA finishes, two Pac-10 championship finishes and coached 19 all-American golfers.

Newcomers to the program have shown mixed reactions to the resignation.

"I kind of wish he (Boutell) was still here," Jack Bendetti, a graduate of Phoenix Brophy Prep, said. "My brother played under him, and I got to know him pretty well. He was a great guy and a great coach."

Jamie Hidalgo, a Tempe Corona del Sol graduate, said, "I'm just happy to be here and be a Sun Devil."

Bill Mann, who served as head coach for 15 seasons (1961-1976), filled the position after Boutell's resignation but the tenure ended Oct. 15.

Swim

matches that were only decided by hundredths of a second.

"We lost several close touches," Johnson said. "In fact we were touched out in four of the five close ones."

In the 400 freestyle relay, for example, Texas touched at 3:31.76 and ASU touched at 3:31.77.

"If we had won that one, we would have had seven more points and Texas would have had seven less points," Johnson said.

A deciding factor of the meet came in the breaststroke, when Justin Farabde and Boden won this second to last event to put ASU over the top.

"This was a big break for us and inevitably decided the meet," Johnson said.

Another contributing factor to the Sun Devil's victory, was the performance of Joe Slezak in the 3-meter diving competition.

Slezak, who has scored major upsets in the 3-meter diving competition all year, once again showed his form by defeating the Longhorns' Keith Harris and U.S. National Diving champion Curt Bubniss, both of whom qualified for the finals of the NCAA last year.

"This is the second time this year that Joe has upset a National Collegiate Diving champion," said Ward O'Connell, diving coach.

Slezak's performance, according to O'Connell, was what made the difference in ASU defeating Texas.

"Slezak was much more consistent than the other Texas divers," O'Connell said.

"It was his performance that won the match for us.

"Joe has definitely become a force to be contended with," O'Connell said.

The men's swim team is off until the weekend of Dec. 5, when they compete in the U.S. International meet in Orlando.

"I think we will be one of the top three teams in the competition," Johnson said.

"In fact, if we stay healthy and keep the same high-spirited attitude we had against Texas, we very possibly could win it all."

"We will just do what we have always done, and see what happens," he said.

Cards' Worrell wins NL rookie-of-the-year

NEW YORK (AP) — It didn't take St. Louis Cardinals' reliever Todd Worrell long to react Monday to the good news that he was the National League's Rookie of the Year — with a piece of bad news for the league's hitters.

Worrell, who fell one vote short of being a unanimous selection in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America, announced that his blazing fastball and hard slider would be augmented next season . . . hopefully by a baffling changeup.

"When I get to spring training, I can concentrate on a changeup," Worrell said by conference call from Temple City, Calif. "I'm going to be talking to (pitching coach) Mike Roarke about throwing a changeup to left-handed hitters."

That can't be good news for the hitters, considering that Worrell led the league in saves with 36, while fashioning a tidy 2.08 earned run average.

"A good hitter will hit it (an offspeed pitch)," Worrell conceded. "But, if I did have any problems (last season), they were against left-handed hitters."

Worrell, a 27-year-old right-hander, got 23 of 24 first-place votes in easily outdistancing San Francisco Giants second baseman Rob Thompson. Worrell, 9-10, collected 118 points in balloting by two writers from each of the league's 12 cities.

Thompson got 46 points on a 5-3-1 basis, while utility man Kevin Mitchell of the New York Mets was third with 22, including the other first-place vote.

Worrell said that winning the award was due in part to having "the right people in my life at the right time."

He credited Chicago White Sox Manager Jim Fregosi for easing him through the transition from starter to reliever when Fregosi piloted the Cardinals' American Association team at Louisville in 1985.

"I think that's when things all came together," Worrell said. "I think I would have gotten to the major leagues as a starter, but I don't think I would have been at my best in that role."

Worrell, who appeared only three times in relief in three seasons prior to the transition in July 1985, made an instant impression on the Cardinals. By the end of August 1985, he was in St. Louis. He then posted a 3-0 record with five saves and a 2.91 ERA in 17 games.

In October, he was the winning pitcher when Jack Clark homered off Tom Niedenfuer of the Los Angeles Dodgers, giving St. Louis the NL pennant. And he was the losing pitcher when umpire Don Denkinger's disputed call at first base helped the Kansas City Royals win Game 6 of the World Series. The Royals then won the Series the following night.

But Worrell compiled neither the number of regular-season appearances nor the longevity necessary in 1985 to lose his rookie status.

In 1986, Worrell appeared in 74 games, posting a 9-10 record. He pitched 103 2-3 innings, gave up 86 hits, struck out 73 and walked 41.

Worrell was the fifth Cardinals' player, and second in a row, to win the award, since it was established in 1947. St. Louis outfielder Vince Coleman was the 1985 winner.

Bears' McMahon could be out for rest of season

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Jim McMahon could be out for the remainder of the NFL season after his shoulder injury was aggravated when a Green Bay lineman slammed him to the turf, Chicago Bears Coach Mike Ditka said Monday.

"I doubt if we will have his services the rest of the year," Ditka said. "He has shoulder discomfort. It's all up to the doctors in Los Angeles."

McMahon was scheduled to leave for Los Angeles on Tuesday to see Dr. Frank Jobe, an orthopedist who specializes in elbows and shoulders.

In the second quarter of Sunday's 12-10 home victory, McMahon was tossed to the ground by Green Bay nose tackle Charles Martin, who was ejected from the game for the personal foul by referee Jerry Markbreit.

"The ball had been thrown, the quarterback was at rest and he (Martin) came in and took the quarterback, picked him up and stuffed him," Markbreit said.

McMahon, making his first start in nearly a month because of a rotator cuff tear in his right throwing shoulder, landed on the injured shoulder.

"I'm sure the flagrant foul affected him," Ditka said of the play, "but he was having problems before that."

Unavailable for comment Monday, McMahon had said after the game that the Martin foul "didn't help" the injury.

NFL official Dick Maxwell said Sunday night the league automatically reviews plays involving ejections, and Martin faces a possible fine or suspension.

"But we will await review," he said.

"I did the wrong thing, true enough, and they took me out of the game for it," Martin said Sunday. "I think I got a little too rough."

"I just took him down," Martin said. "I wasn't thinking of shoulder injury or knee injury or anything."

Ditka said backup quarterback Mike Tomczak would start Sunday against Pittsburgh, adding, "We've got to get Doug Flutie ready to play in the next two weeks."

Flutie was acquired by the Bears from the Los Angeles Rams last month and has been learning the system.

McMahon originally suffered the shoulder injury in the first game of the season against Cleveland. He has been in and out of action since, starting in six of the Bears' 12 games.

took the kickoff and with Van Raaphorst completing four of five passes, moved to the Wildcat five with 9:15 remaining. Then disaster struck.

Van Raaphorst rolled to his right and threw back across the field into the arms of UA's Chuck Cecil in the end zone. I remember saying to myself, "Why is he running that ball out of the end zone with a 14-point lead?"

My question was immediately answered as Cecil went 108 yards for the touchdown that put the game away.

It was a devastating blow. Instead of being down 24-17 with plenty of time remaining to try to get a touchdown and a two-point conversion to win, the Devils were down 31-10, and it was all over but the shouting (and the rioting).

Van Raaphorst was spectacular throughout the game. But when any quarterback is forced to throw the ball 55 times, there are going to be mistakes.

Speaking of mistakes, just who do these idiots from UA think they are, saying they should be going to the Rose Bowl instead of ASU? Where were they all year long when ASU was going unbeaten through its first 10 games?

I'll tell you where they were. They were blowing an 18-0 halftime lead over UCLA and getting trampled by USC on their own turf, that's where they were. The Devils were a better team all year, and one day doesn't take that away. The Cats, who have never been known to be overly gracious winners, once again proved that their lack of class knows no bounds.

And while we're on the subject of lack of class, how about what one of the people who works in UA sports information did during the game. When the quickie stats came out at the end of one of the quarters, he changed the team name from Sun Devils to "Scum Devils."

Now there's a class act for you. His actions were later apologized for by one of his superiors, but that doesn't alter the fact that it was about as crappy a thing as I have heard of. But then again, it probably gave the national media a good glimpse of what the people at UA are really like.

Swine is a word that comes to mind immediately. Vermin. Pond scum. But I'm not telling anyone anything they don't already know.

So we lost to the Cats. At least we did it with a little class. And I'd still rather be in Pasadena Jan. 1 than in Honolulu whenever that game is played. Aloha Cats.

Van Raaphorst breaks record, looks to Jan. 1

By CAROL BOOS
State Press

Sometimes, no matter how hard you try, things just don't go your way.

Just ask Jeff Van Raaphorst.

Van Raaphorst completed 38 passes for 437 yards against UA. It was enough to break All-American Danny White's ASU career passing record (5,932) but not enough to beat the Wildcats.

He was also the nations top passer for the day.

"From a personal standpoint I feel really good to break a record set by such a talented athlete," Van Raaphorst said. "But somebody will come along and break it."

The game and the records are in the past. The Rose Bowl isn't.

And from the way the 6-foot-1½, 204-pound senior from EL Cajon, Calif., talked, it was apparent the 34-17 defeat was in the past.

"I just take things day by day," Van Raaphorst said.

The Rose Bowl is the last on the list of things to accomplish while at ASU. Van Raaphorst promised his father he would go to the Rose Bowl and he is on his way.

The next list of goals begins Jan. 11, the day after the East-West All-Star game, for Van Raaphorst.

"When I first came here I just wanted to start, then breaking the records just came," he said.

Don't compete with a Kaplan student — be one.

Why? Consider this: More students increase their scores after taking a Kaplan prep course than after taking anything else.

Why? Kaplan's test-taking techniques and educational programs have 50 years of experience behind them. We know students. And we know what helps boost their confidence and scoring potential.

So if you need preparation for the: LSAT, GMAT, MCAT, GRE, DAT, ADVANCED MEDICAL BOARDS, TOEFL, NURSING BOARDS, NTE, CPA, INTRO. TO LAW, SPEED READING, or others, call us.
