Accident

Phoenix firefighters treat Mary Griffith of Phoenix after the Jeep she was driving was struck at Third Avenue and Willetta. After her vehicle was hit, it careened across Third Street, hit the curb, went up on two wheels and lodged between two trees. Griffith was transported to St. Josephs Hospital with minor injuries.

Alumni Association requests police to investigate forged check for $212

By LAUREN MILLETTE
State Press

The ASU Alumni Association told University police Tuesday someone used a forged $212 check to pay for two round-trip tickets on a bus to the Oct. 4 ASU-UCLA in California.

The trip was sponsored by the student chapter of the Alumni Association.

Jeff Abraham, assistant director for the ASU Alumni Association, said the check was lost by a Santa Barbara, Calif., student who was visiting ASU.

The person who used the tickets claimed to be an ASU student. The suspect also passed bad checks around the Valley until the Santa Barbara student ordered his bank to close the account, Abraham said.

The victim's name and the amount of money taken from the account were not disclosed.

"This has never happened to us before," Abraham said. "We didn't know quite what to think when the bank stopped payment on the check."

The bank sent the check back three weeks after the game, Abraham said, but the association did not notify police until they felt they could identify the suspects.

Police finish report about escort service

By BENNY MCCONNELL
State Press

A Tempe police report on the activities of Don Juan Escorts is completed and will be turned over to the Maricopa County Attorney's Office Friday or Monday for prosecution, a detective investigating the case said.

The report revolves around the ASU operators of the service, Griggs H. Wright, 21, an undeclared sophomore, and Bruce J. Weinstein, 21, a senior real estate major, according to Det. Bill "Buck" Rogers of the Tempe police.

The State Press reported last month that Wright and Weinstein have operated Don Juan Escorts for more than a year employing ASU coeds, one of whom offers clients sex for $80 an hour.

In mid-November, Wright was kicked out of his fraternity, Phi Gamma Delta, and was asked to move out of its, 406 Adelphi Drive.

Weinstein was placed on suspension by Phi Gamma Delta, or Fiji. He denies co-operating the service.

Rogers said: "The report will be turned over to the county attorney's office to see if there is enough desire to prosecute. We'll let them handle it from here."

Randy Wakefield, a prosecuting attorney in the organized crime division of the county attorney's office, said he was not familiar with the Don Juan escort case. But he said, prosecuting the cases "are difficult but not tough."

"Conceivably, the attorney general's office is an option (for prosecution)," Wakefield said. "But they only take certain cases."

University police officials, who delegated most of the investigation to Tempe police, have been fielding administration comment regarding the case.

Deputy Chief Doug Bartosh said a court conviction is not necessary for the University to take suspension action against the students involved.

"We want to find out if there was violation of University and housing policy," Bartosh said. "The facts of the police report will show that."

Student senate again denies funding for LGAU

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

Lesbian and Gay Academic Union co-chairwoman Denise Heap said the Associated Students Senate is "forcing her hand to seek a legal remedy" by denying her group funding again.

The senate approved a bill Dec. 2 appropriating funds to campus clubs and organizations for the spring semester. But the bill does not include funding for organizations considered "political or controversial" by senate members.

Heap told the senate Tuesday that by refusing to fund the LGAU and controversial groups, the senators are "creating a technical school."

"The reason anyone comes to a university is to learn and have their beliefs challenged," Heap said. "By denying funding you are not fulfilling your responsibilities as senators."

The LGAU and the ASASU Senate became embroiled in a battle over funding during the appropriations debate last fall, when Heap first threatened to take legal action.

Heap said she could not comment on any possible filing of a lawsuit, but the LGAU retained legal counsel when their funding request was turned down by senate "fundamentalists Christians."

The funding debate centers around the wording of the ASASU bylaws, which state the senate may not fund any activity which "aligns ASASU into biased sponsorship of a partisan political view point ... or controversial matter."

College of Law Sen. Phil Stanfield introduced several amendments to Senate Bill 45 that challenged the decision not to fund several groups. The amendments caused long, heated debate on the senate floor.

Stanfield's first proposal dealt with the decision of the appropriations committee not to allocate funds to the Israel Action Committee.

Stanfield read a list of items on which the IAC wished to spend the $419 requested in the amendment. The list requested funding for a Martin Luther King, Jr. memorial display, fliers, and an entry fee for a leadership training convention.

"I'm frankly very confused and outraged that (the IAC) have been completely denied funding," Stanfield said.

"How can we say that this is a political organization, and then turn around and fund the Japan Association? It's patently absurd."

Stanfield said the activities of the two organizations — to raise student's level of understanding about their respective nations — were "almost identical."

College of Liberal Arts Sen. Karl Karg said, "it's hard not to notice the glaring inconsistency" in the funding bill, adding that if "we fund an activity, it does not mean that the bylaws are violated."

Stanfield's amendment was opposed by a large block of senators and Activities Vice President Christine Roth and Campus Affairs Vice President Lee Anne Seall.

Seall said: "If you fund an activity, then you fund the group, that point must be made clear."

"Programs do not walk alone. If we wanted a Martin Luther King, Jr. memorial then we can pay for it."

College of Architecture Sen. Andrew Goodman said he heard the IAC had been involved in a physical altercation on Cady Mall recently.

He said he "would hate to read in the State Press that the senate had funded a group that potentially endangered the health of any student on campus."

The amendment failed by a vote of 11-6. Yousef Hashimi, co-chairman of the IAC, told the senate "just because my group sometimes does political things, does not mean it is a political body."

"I hope you can remove the contradictions that plague the appropriations process."

Stanfield also introduced an amendment that would provide $300 in funding for the Pan-African Research Committee, a new campus group denied by the appropriations process.

The committee was denied funding because it was deemed "political" by the appropriations committee.

The amendment was killed by the senate. The appropriations bill will be forwarded to Executive Vice President Bridget Shelton and President Chris Cumiskey for approval.

Attorney's office recovers $1 million in bad checks

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

The Maricopa County Attorney's Office "bad check program" is prosecuting more people than ever, including ASU students, the deputy attorney said Wednesday.

Paul Crum said the program, which began in 1984, crossed the $1 million mark Friday in terms of money recovered and paid to merchants from bad checks.

The program collected a $31,889 check Nov. 10, the biggest since it started.

Crum said his office received bad check reports from ASU last year but has not received many lately.

"Maybe one of the problems on campus is that campus officials don't require enough identification. All they ask for is an ASU identification card," he said.

"We can't prosecute on a lot of on-campus cases because of the lack of information."

Crum said he is not sure if there is a big problem at ASU with bad checks, but said there is a problem with local merchants, especially grocery stores and convenience markets.

But managers of two local book stores say they haven't had many problems with bad checks.

Val Ross, manager of the ASU Bookstore, said the bookstore keeps an updated list of bad check writers.

"It's really hard to tell if there is a problem," he said. "The University actually takes over and cashes the checks."

"We do our deposits and then it goes over to the University cashiering system."

Ross said bad checks are "simply a fact of life."

"I don't think it is a significant problem," he said. "I don't think most people write bad checks on purpose."

"It's mainly just problems with timing and bookkeeping."

Jim Manwarren, manager of the Student Book Center, agreed.

"We really don't have a problem," he said. "There's always a few (bad checks) but they are miniscule."

"The vast majority come in and straighten out any problems right away. Most people aren't here to try and write bad checks."

Crum also said there is a problem with prosecuting ASU students who do write bad checks.

"We have several warrants out because we don't know where to contact people," he said.

He said since ASU students often move out of campus residence halls into apartments or change schools, the offenders often are difficult to locate.

Crum said there are two major groups of bad check writers:

- A large portion of people that are negligent in handling finances; and
- People who intentionally write bad checks.

"Some people just don't realize how fast their checks can clear," he said. "They deposit a paycheck or a check from their parents and assume the money will automatically be there to cover the checks they write."

"Then there are the students who write bad checks mainly because they want to live a lifestyle they can't afford."

Crum warned bad check writers that a warrant for their arrest will be issued if the problem is not cleared up.

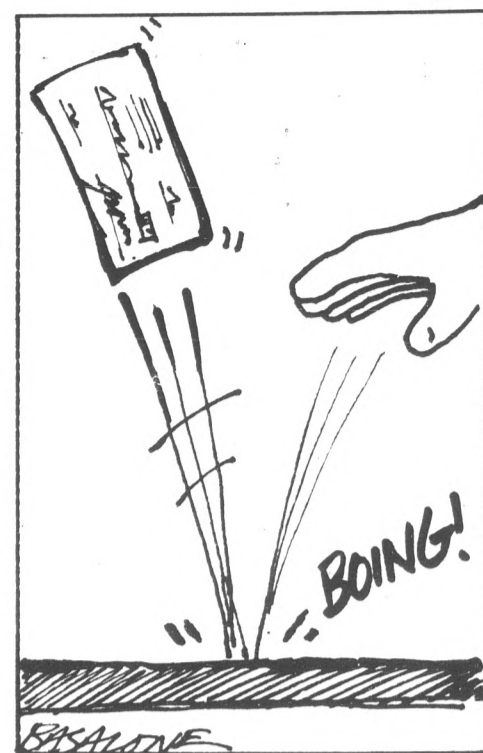

Crum said the program's success rate in prosecuting cases has grown considerably since a new procedure was begun in September.

"In a normal month we could only handle 65 to 80 cases," he said. "Since Sept. 2, we have filed more than 600 cases."

In October, the total recovered for 153 merchants was $49,962 — 770 bad checks. During the first two weeks of November, $56,691 was recovered.

"Our goal is to get to a 40 percent recovery rate," Crum said. "We're not there yet, but we're getting close."

He said the busiest time of the year for the program is beginning now.

"We always get a lot of bad checks during the holiday season," Crum said.

ASU to honor civil rights leader in week-long celebration

By MICHAEL ROWELL
State Press

A week of activities honoring civil rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr. is scheduled for the first week of the spring 1987 semester.

Activities planned include a film series, a student essay contest, special faculty and staff seminars and a dinner honoring King. Competitions in the creative arts, residence hall activities and intramural games also will be held.

The celebration is the work of a committee appointed in October by ASU President J. Russell Nelson. The committee is made up of faculty, staff and student representatives from a variety of ethnic backgrounds, said committee member Marvalene Hughes.

Hughes, who is ASU's associate vice president for student development, said the celebration was established because "King's cause was a cause for all people, not just a cause for black people."

She said the week will be one to "transcend the boundaries of ethnic differences."

John Edwards, chairman of the organizing committee, said the films to be shown will deal not only with King, but civil rights in general.

"These films should depict the struggle for equal rights and equal opportunity for all ethnic groups and minorities," he said.

Edwards said Pennsylvania Congressman William Gray is scheduled as the keynote speaker at a dinner opening the celebration Jan. 19.

Jacqueline Weatherby, who is assistant to the president for equal employment opportunity and affirmative action and vice chairperson of the committee, said she was impressed with the committee's efforts to honor King on campus.

"We plan to involve people throughout the state and make this a real human rights issue," she added.

On Tuesday ASASU passed a resolution honoring King and joined the University in the week-long celebration. The ASU Faculty Senate will consider a similar resolution at its next meeting on Jan. 19.

Human beings important — despite physical failings

Earlier this year, a woman who had been in a coma for six weeks regained consciousness, much to the surprise of her family and doctors. Six days prior to the minor miracle, a judge had ruled against her family in their attempt to remove her life-support systems.

In an interview held months later, the woman's three teenage children expressed their belief that they had done the right thing in attempting to pull the plug. Their justification was based on the fact that she wasn't like she used to be. "Mom just isn't her same old self."

The way poor old mom was described, one would expect to find her in some carrot-like state, but as she appeared on the screen she looked normal. Outside of some minor paralysis in her left side and slight memory loss, she was recovering remarkably, glad to be alive, and exhibited a stamina and will to live that was inspiring. She invited her interviewers to come back in a year to see her at 100 percent.

The story is somewhat shocking, but hardly surprising. Euthanasia is becoming a familiar friend in our society that attributes the value of a life to physical well-being. We have become an incredibly weak people who have lost our ability to triumph over misfortune and overcome at the door of death.

This is largely because we have lost all conception of the human spirit, traded in the sanctity of human life and subscribed, instead, to a quality of life ethic which has blurred any sense of what it means to be human. As the value of life becomes weighed increasingly in terms of quality and utility, the way in which we treat those who have little of either is becoming ever more appalling, and ominously similar to the way we treat animals.

If it's in pain, put it to sleep. While animal rights activists protest medical experimentation on dogs, cows, bunnies and rats, there are not many protests being raised against experimentation being done on aborted fetuses kept alive artificially outside of the womb. The tragedy and the absurdity of abortion is mostly swept under the carpet because most people can't bear to conceptualize what is actually taking place.

Ben Hoglund
Columnist

The quality of life ethic has given rise to a broad range of anomalies in our society that are a grim statement on what we have become. Doctors struggle to save the life of a fetus by performing an operation while it is still in the womb, while another doctor in a clinic down the street yanks a healthy baby of the same maturity out of the womb and drops it into a pail.

Parents wait years to adopt a child while 1.5 million mostly healthy fetuses are aborted each year. An official within the Center for Disease Control estimate that as many as 400 to 500 fetuses are aborted still alive each year. There are numerous accounts of nurses attempting to care for babies surviving abortions while doctors refuse treatment, and other accounts of doctors suffocating the ones that refuse to die.

Infanticide is certainly a logical conclusion to all of this. Babies born with Down's Syndrome and other defects are often denied simple life-saving procedures and allowed to die. Often a decision not to treat is based on the parents' economic status, as health practitioners look into their crystal balls to see what likelihood of a quality life the baby has. These screening procedures are, at times, done without the knowledge of the parents. They are simply told that it would be in the best interest of the child not to operate.

So human life is valued on its usefulness to itself and others — similar to horses. When it's no longer cost effective, we make glue out of it. A lot of women ought to start looking at the ingredients of their cosmetics and skin creams to find out whether or not it's human. It's a well known fact that fetuses are bought and sold like cord wood by European cosmetics manufacturers so ladies can pat them on their faces to look younger.

The Ethiopians are fortunate that Americans don't treat them as we treat our own. If we did, we would have put them out of their misery a long time ago by letting them starve. After all, what kind of quality can there be for a people who are chronically poor, uneducated and unproductive?

But we do send them food, and we grieve when they waste away before our eyes on the evening news. And if we have a motive for sending them aid other than as a placebo for our own guilt of excess, perhaps it is that we recognize a glimmer of what is human in the people who have so little of the trappings that we associate with it. Where are the news cameras showing the millions of deaths right here at home in sterile clinics across the country?

What we must recognize is that each death of an infant, and invalid or an unborn by an agent of mercy, best interest or free choice, is a death to the humanity of each one of us. And yet, we race on to become more like beasts. Never let it be forgotten that Adolph Hitler was first and foremost a eugenicist. World war was only a means to his end. If the 20th century is to have an epitaph, it ought to read: "Here lies the era in which Western civilization renounced the sanctity and reverence of its humanity and chose instead to live and die as a pathetic shadow of its former self in a brave new world."

Us is sorry

Editor:

Ellen M. Young's column "Twelve Virtues of Semester Break Just Barely Fattening" (Nov. 24) illustrates the most common flaw found in supposedly educated individuals. As one of "the writers of (her) family," she should know better than to say, "The Christmas season unites Bill and I with our brother Terry" and "that is, if you can imagine Tom and I having something in common." This is a violation of the correct usage of a personal pronoun in the objective case.

Even if Miss Young can't tell what is grammatically correct, the copy editors of the State Press should be able to do so, as they are supposedly educated people, too. It is no wonder that freshman English instructors are fighting such a battle since freshmen may be influenced by what they read — in the State Press.

Parking services fiasco

Editor:

I have lost my patience with ASU parking services! On Sept. 3, I went to appeal a parking citation that was issued to me by mistake. The license plate number of the car that received the citation was not my car's license number. After 2½ long hours of trying to appeal the citation, I found out that the car that was cited was listed on my parking decal of last year, but not this year's. As a result, when parking services issued the citation to this person, I was the closest one to be held accountable. Finally, after a few weeks, my appeals went through and the citation was dismissed.

But was the nightmare over with? No! On Nov. 8, I received a bill from the cashier's office, which was the same amount as the citation that I had appealed. I am holding the copy of the letter of appeal that shows that it was to be dropped. I've called parking and I've called Accounts Receivable. They keep shuffling me around. Their tactic is for a person to go crazy and give up and pay the fine, regardless.

I do admit, I have gone crazy. But to pay them anything; that is where they are wrong. I would appreciate it if in the future, the parking services can get their act together. Honestly, for all of the time that I have spent being frustrated, I should be charging them.

So, how was Tokyo?

Editor:

Hey, U of A, eat your heart out. Yes, ASU lost to you and, yes, we are still going to the Rose Bowl.

I am sick and tired of hearing that the Wildcats deserve to go to the Rose Bowl more than the ASU Sun Devils.

The Devils won all the other crucial

Pacific-10 games that the lowly Wildcats lost.

So, Wildcats, say "aloha" to Magnum while ASU smells the roses in the "granddaddy" of the bowls.

State Press

Editors review controversies of past and present

On Nov. 26, the current State Press editor, Tom Blodgett, sat down for a talk with Len Munsil and Steve Waterstrat, the paper's editors for the 1984-1985 and 1985-1986 academic years, respectively. The topic was the State Press: great issues and controversies of past and present. The discussion was moderated by Ed Schubert, State Press analysis editor.

Schubert: I suppose this year if you were to poll ASU students and asked them, "Who is the editor of the State Press?" very few would be able to say "Tom Blodgett." The same last year — very few would be able to tell you that Steve Waterstrat was the editor. But go back the year before and ask "Who is the editor of the State Press?" and every one knew it was Len Munsil. (To Munsil) Why were you a celebrity?

Munsil: I really didn't have that much to do with it. The news people would come here. Reporters would call up, and I told them at the time, "I really don't think this is a story. I don't understand what your interest is in the campus newspaper."

My philosophy was that with the opinion page you wanted to provoke as much interest as possible. The time between (ages) 18 and 23 or 24 is a time when people are deciding what their philosophical viewpoints are going to be, and the things they are interested in talking about are things like defense policy, abortion and the Israel-Palestinian conflict. That is what people want to know about.

My concern was to provoke controversy by having controversial opinions printed (on the opinion page) from all perspectives, and hopefully to get the campus talking about what was going on on page four.

It provoked enough controversy that on a few occasions various other media outlets came out and covered the story locally, so that's probably how that coverage happened.

Schubert: Let's talk about the gay-lesbian issue. That's an area where the State Press has swung around quite a bit. Now, when Len was editor, the State Press had a policy of not allowing the Lesbian-Gay Academic Union access to Collage (a section for meeting announcements that has been incorporated into "Today"). Now this year, I recall an unsigned editorial, reflecting the official position of the State

'Hunter S. Thompson came to campus and gave a speech that was just riddled with obscenity. I didn't allow that in the newspaper. That's censorship. I don't deny it.'

— Len Munsil

Press editorial board, that was in favor of the LGAU being funded by the Associated Students. So that's pretty drastic.

Waterstrat: That is almost a perfect change.

Blodgett: I don't think we're taking up the banner of the LGAU.

Waterstrat: The main history from Len to me was on Collage. I think we came out against funding the LGAU. As far as Collage, we ran them in that because, the way I saw it, there was a meeting, and it was an ASU club, so I ran it.

That was the one criticism people had against Len. You could say that the opinion page is controversial but the news is legitimate, but (critics) could say that (the Collage) was on a news page and they were keeping the LGAU out because of a philosophical qualm.

Munsil: That's not really true, though. The editor is always faced with decisions as to what constitutes news that should be covered and what validly deserves to be covered. I just draw the line in a different place than some people do.

I think that if the KKK had founded an organization on campus to promote racism, I would also have denied them access to Collage, because I don't think that's a valid viewpoint. Every decision an editor makes is inherently subjective on these issues. And I didn't think that a group that was formed on the basis of sexual preference was deserving of any kind of coverage at all.

Schubert: Is that your decision to make when we consider that the State Press is not a newspaper on the free market. We're the representative of the University. Is it therefore more urgent that we're open?

Munsil: No. There's no requirement along those lines. The newspaper is primarily self-supporting. Court cases have held again and again that editors of college newspapers have to make those decisions.

Blodgett: Some people even think (the State Press) is a mouthpiece for the University. Well, it isn't. We have to function as a newspaper.

Schubert: (To Waterstrat) Well, you have obviously drawn the line differently. What is your criterion for deciding that the LGAU is newsworthy?

Waterstrat: Well, I would have run the Ku Klux Klan right away, so all my friends could picket them.

Munsil: So the Child Molester's Association, you would run their ads, too?

Waterstrat: I probably would, yeah. I mean, that would rile people up.

Munsil: You're darn right it would.

Waterstrat: (To Munsil) If you're talking about giving (the LGAU) attention, you ran them on the front page, you ran them on the opinion page with a bold (headline). They had the attention already.

The way I see it is that the Collage is a service to the students and the community at large, rather than to those clubs. I don't think I'm necessarily doing those clubs a real big favor by running their meeting announcements.

I'm more worried about the perspective of the students who want to know what meetings are going on, and they can decide on the validity of the LGAU or the Ku Klux Klan or the Child Molester's Association.

Schubert: (To Blodgett) What's your position?

Blodgett: It would be hard for me to put a Child Molester's Association ad in (Collage).

Waterstrat: It would. It would.

Blodgett: In fact, I probably wouldn't, unless it was some sort of "parents anonymous" group. If somebody wanted, for example, to ask people to their riot, that's something I wouldn't allow — something that's advocating violence.

Munsil: I appreciate the sincerity of Steve and his philosophical consistency. But you can see from Tom that there is a line that most people, I think, would draw.

'I would have run the Ku Klux Klan right away, so all my friends could picket them.'

— Steve Waterstrat

Hunter S. Thompson came to campus and gave a speech that was just riddled with obscenity. I didn't allow that in the newspaper. That's censorship. I don't deny it.

Waterstrat: That's editing.

Munsil: Well, I edited out every LGAU (Collage) form that was submitted.

Schubert: What's the biggest story we've done this semester?

Blodgett: The escort service.

(Last month, the State Press reported that an ASU student was running Don Juan's Escort Service).

Schubert: How did that story unfold?

Blodgett: I think this is an example of the really good journalism that can be done on a college newspaper. A young, aggressive reporter (Benny McConnell) saw an ad for an escort service and, knowing that kind of business is sometimes not totally above the board, he checked it out. He had another reporter help him with it for a little while. He got Bruce's advice on it (Bruce Itule, director of student publications, is a former night city editor for the Chicago Tribune). I won't make any judgment here about whether (the escort service) was above the board or not.

There was a problem. One of these escorts told the reporter he could have sex for the $80 he paid her, and that's obviously a story. Whether the escort operator knew that or not, who's to say?

But in the meantime, Bruce was in on (the story) and

'Some people even think the State Press is a mouthpiece for the University. Well, it isn't.'

— Tom Blodgett

advised us on how to go about it. He told Benny to give Bill Recktenwald of the Chicago Tribune — a top investigative reporter — a call and ask him about investigative work. He also had him give a call to another reporter who took a different approach in investigative work, just to get some perspective. The editors looked over the story carefully. It was looked over by one of our (mass) communications law professors in the journalism department. It was also looked over by lawyers.

Bruce ended up going to Atlanta for a convention the week the story ran. We even called up Bruce in Atlanta and read him the story before it ran as a matter of courtesy. That was as thorough checking as you could do for a story that was as explosive as that one was.

We ruffled some feathers.

Schubert: Let's talk about the future. (To Blodgett) Who do you see as emerging talents who'll be moving into the editor's position?

Blodgett: You know what, I can see potential candidates for two or three years down the road, but I think next year is a great mystery. The qualifications are so rigid that they exclude almost everyone.

Schubert: Do you think they're excluding good leadership by being to rigid?

Blodgett: Yeah. I don't know if they'll find someone qualified or not.

Munsil: In which case I'll just have to come back.

Schubert: Is that a possibility? Might you apply for editor again?

Munsil: Oh yeah, I'll be back next year.

(Silence, followed by a burst of laughter)

Blodgett: (To Munsil) That was a great deadpan!

ASU Career Fiesta to expose students to future employers

By MICHAEL BURGESS
State Press

It may not be your typical ASU party, but Career Service's Career Fiesta will provide ASU students an opportunity to mingle with potential employers from across the nation.

This will be Career Service's second Career Fiesta. It will take place on Cady Mall during the first week of classes (Jan. 19-23) this spring.

Diana Regner, Career Services assistant director, said the Career Fiesta was created to involve all students and will not be limited to any particular major.

"We are inviting employers to visit the campus and interact with students, but not directly to a specific major," Regner said. "We are trying to involve all students in the option for different employment environments."

She said Career Services is hoping to attract more than the 90 employers who visited ASU last year and if the turnout is good, Career Fiesta may become an annual event.

Regner said Career Services wants students to broaden their career outlooks.

"There are many, many job descriptions," she said. "For instance, an accountant can work for many organizations beside an accounting firm."

Regner said the Career Fiesta idea probably is new to employers.

"Companies come to campus for what is in short supply," she said.

In addition to providing students with jobs, Regner said the Career Fiesta gives students a chance to ask questions, make choices and possibly attain summer employment.

"Out of last year's Career Fiesta, good contacts were made and many summer jobs developed," she said.

Regner said each day during the Career Fiesta will be conducted in a "work environment."

Mornings will be spent visiting tables on Cady Mall and afternoons will be spent visiting different departments.

"There will be something for everyone," she said. "You just have to look for it."

The event will be co-sponsored by the Associated Students special events department.

Decals for ASU's second parking structure, scheduled to open Jan. 15, are now on sale for $45, the assistant director of parking services said Wednesday.

Richard Landreth said 827 spaces will be available in the new structure, located at McAllister Drive and Tyler Street.

"Students can purchase a decal right now or be put on a waiting list," he said. "I would recommend being put on a waiting list."

"As soon as the structure is open we'll notify those on the waiting list, and they can pay us at that time."

Landreth said more than 100 students are already on the waiting list.

Students who currently have a parking decal in another lot can trade it in to receive a discount on a stall in the structure.

Landreth said he believes the decals will sell out quickly.

Cocaine anesthetic relieves woman's continual sneezing

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — A squirt of anesthetic can cure continual sneezing, even for a young woman who went "achoo!" 300 times an hour, a doctor says.

The odd case was recounted by Dr. James T. Sturm of the St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center in Minnesota in a letter in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

A 23-year-old woman went out to dinner with a group of people. During dessert, a drunk pushed ice cream covered with chocolate sauce into her mouth and nose. Unfortunately, the woman was allergic to chocolate.

Immediately she wiped away the chocolate, but to no avail. She couldn't stop sneezing.

By the time doctors saw her, she had been sneezing 300 times an hour for two hours. Sturm reasoned that the sneezing was caused by irritation of the nasal lining and the transmission of nervous signals over the trigeminal nerve to the brain.

His solution: a squirt of cocaine hydrochloride, a topical anesthetic. It worked.

"The sneezing began to abate three minutes after the nasal epithelium was anesthetized and came to a complete stop five minutes later," Sturm wrote. "The patient was observed for 20 minutes, and no further sneezing occurred."

Poll indicates county trusts Mecham's skill

By The Associated Press

PHOENIX — A newspaper survey shows that Maricopa County residents have confidence in Gov.-elect Evan Mecham's ability to govern, but they don't necessarily agree with all of his proposals.

Less than half of those surveyed by the Phoenix Gazette said they supported Mecham's proposal to rescind a Martin Luther King holiday for state employees. And they generally opposed the Republican's plan to cut the state Department of Public Safety by 300 officers to beef up local drug-enforcement programs.

More than half said they backed voluntary drug testing for state employees, even though almost three fourths of those surveyed said they thought it would have little impact on drug use.

Most people said they supported Mecham's proposal to cut the state sales tax by 1 cent. And they were evenly divided on whether there should be a change in state law governing liability lawsuits, following voter rejection in November of Proposition 103, which would have allowed limits on non-economic damage awards.

The newspaper surveyed 403 adults by telephone between Nov. 13 and 17.

Those surveyed were asked to rate their confidence in Mecham on a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 representing the least confidence and 5 the most. Mecham was given a 3.4 median rating, which means half rated him higher than that and half rated him lower.

His plan to rescind the King holiday for state employees was supported by only 45 percent of those polled, while 43 percent said the January holiday should remain in place and 12 percent said they had no opinion. The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 4.9 percent.

Mecham has contended that the holiday, created by executive order by outgoing Democratic Gov. Bruce Babbitt, is illegal and that King does not deserve a holiday in his name.

Sixty-five percent of those polled said they opposed Mecham's plan to shift DPS officers to local police departments.

Educators: students lack skills to communicate, think critically

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Most American students can write at a minimal level, but they lack the communication and critical thinking skills needed in an advanced society, educators said Wednesday in releasing a "Writing Report Card."

"Most students at grades four, eight and 11 can do minimal-level work. This is an accomplishment," said Archie Lapointe, executive director of the National Assessment of Educational Progress.

But he said the needs of an increasingly technological society have outpaced improvement in student performance over the last several years.

"Our youngsters are simply not doing well enough... Very few of our students can write well," Lapointe said at a news conference. He said society can accommodate adequate writing, but "is that were we want to be? Some new goals, some new standards need to be set."

The status report was based on a national survey of writing samples from 55,000 public and private school students in the fourth, eighth and 11th grades. Their written responses to 15 tasks were categorized as unsatisfactory, minimal, adequate or elaborated.

"Most students, majority and minority alike, are unable to write adequately except in response to the simplest of tasks," the report said. "American students can write at a minimal level but cannot express themselves well enough to ensure that their writing will accomplish the intended purpose."

The results further indicate that "students at all grade levels are deficient in higher-order thinking skills," said the report card, written by the review group's associate director, Ina Mullis, and Stanford University professors Arthur Applebee and Judith Langer.

The report card did not grade U.S. performance. But Greg Anrig, president of the Educational Testing Service and a former teacher, told reporters he would give it "a D — and a low D at that."

ASU police

University police reported the following incidents in the 30-hour period ending 6:55 a.m. Wednesday:

•An ASU student told police someone threw an aerosol can from the second story balcony of 620 Alpha Drive and hit his truck while he was driving through Lot 57, police said.

The can broke the front window of the truck and a fight between the truck's driver and men believed to be members of the Pi Kappa Alpha and Theta Delta Chi fraternities broke out shortly thereafter, police said.

The driver of the truck told police he was assaulted by a man that he believed lived at the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity house, police said.

Estimated damage to the truck is $75. The driver of the truck received minor injuries.

Police said they have a suspect in the case.

•University police said they stopped a Phoenix man between Sixth Street and Stadium Drive for driving with an expired license.

After running a routine warrant check on the man, police said they found he was wanted for an outstanding Phoenix warrant for driving on a suspended license and several unpaid civil citations.

Police impounded the man's car and released him on his own recognizance.

•University police said they stopped a Kansas man at 200 E. First Street for "strange driving behavior."

Upon questioning him, they found he was giving false information about himself and was wanted by the Kansas State Reception and Mental Diagnostic Center in Topeka for parole violations.

University police said they turned the man over to Tempe police for extradition.

•Someone stole a color television, valued at $300, from the lounge on the 10th floor of Manzanita Residence Hall, police said.

•Someone stole $15 from a museum donation box in front of the Anthropology Building, police said.

•Someone stole a brown leather wallet and its contents, valued at $45, from an unlocked room in the Social Sciences Building, police said.

•All three of the elevators in Hayden Library were stuck on the first floor for most of the day, police said.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following events during the period ending midnight Tuesday:

•An officer was dispatched to investigate an indecent exposure Dec. 1 at an apartment complex, 330 S. Beck Ave., police said.

A resident of the complex told police she had been sleeping in a lounge chair by the pool, when she was awakened by the sound of someone groaning and breathing heavily.

Police said the woman opened her eyes and saw a man standing outside the fenced pool area, exposing himself and masturbating.

The woman yelled at the man to "get out" because she was going to call police.

She said he ran to an older white Chevrolet coupe and fled the scene.

Police describe the man as Caucasian, 30 years old, 6-foot-1, 175 pounds, with a small mustache.

He was wearing red shorts and tennis shoes.

•Unknown persons entered a Tempe man's residence at the 2500 block of Fairfield Drive on Dec. 1 by forcing open a side window, police said.

The thief stole a gold chain, a gold krugerand, a brown agate pendant, and various coins and cash worth $2,000 from the home.

There are no suspects in the case.

•An officer was dispatched Nov. 30 to investigate a reported assault at the Devilhouse, 430 N. Scottsdale Road, police said.

The nightclub's bouncers threw two men out of the establishment after they began arguing over a girl.

One of the men told police he was punched and kicked in the head by a bouncer in the parking lot following the incident.

Police said the case is under investigation.

•Unknown persons entered a Tempe woman's residence Dec. 1 and stole $438, police said.

There were no signs of forced entry, and police said whoever took the money must have used a key.

10 ASU students to compete at forensics meet on campus

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

The ASU forensics team will host a national speech tournament featuring 30 schools from at least 12 states Dec. 6-7 in the Language and Literature Building, the team director said.

Clark Olson, the director of forensics, said about 10 students from the 40-member ASU team will compete in the tournament, while the remaining members assist in running the event.

Two national debate questions will be argued during the competition Saturday and Sunday, and students also will compete in individual events such as oral interpretation.

Olson said the first type of debate, known as National Debate Tournament or NDT, involves the question: "Should restrictions placed on the First Amendment be removed?"

He said prohibiting the publication of how to build a hydrogen bomb is an example of a First Amendment restriction.

Olson said the other type of debate, Cross-Examination Debate Association or CEDA, involves students arguing whether improved relations with the Soviet Union are a more important objective for the United States than increased military preparedness.

Joel Sannes and Mark Hanson placed third out of 23 NDT teams at the most recent tournament at Wichita State University. Janalee Jordan-Meldrand and Brandt Baker, a CEDA debate team, placed ninth out of 56 teams.

Clay Cousins won first place in the informative speaking category.

Olson said eight of the 11 students who competed in the Wichita tournament qualified for final rounds of competition.

"That's a really high percentage," Olson said. "We were really pleased."

He said Stanford University, North Dakota State and Moorehead State University were some of the 43 schools which competed at the Wichita tournament.

David Jordan, a CEDA debater who ranked ninth out of 50 teams in his most recent tournament at Emory State University in Atlanta, said he is looking forward to the new CEDA topic, which will be announced Dec. 10.

"I want to start researching for next semester," Jordan said.

He said the team is preparing for the biggest tournament of the year — outside of the national tournament — in January at the University of Utah.

Jordan said three sweepstakes trophies (which are given for overall excellence) will be awarded at the January tournament, adding "we want to win all three — that's our goal."

Olson said ASU won sweepstakes awards in the three types of forensic competition at Colorado College and the University of Utah. About 45 schools participated in Colorado and about 35 schools competed in Utah.

"Everyone is concentrating on the national tournaments," Olson said.

He said six major tournaments will take place in early spring.

Changes in college athletics stir controversy

By JAY TAYLOR
State Press

There can no longer be any doubt that college athletics are undergoing major changes, both on and off the field.

The on-the-field changes are causing some turmoil — the new three-point shot in basketball, for instance, has stirred quite a bit of controversy — but the things that are going on in the board rooms are having a lot more impact than anything going on under the backboard.

A year ago, a bill called Proposition 48 came before the NCAA. Sponsored by a group called the American Council on Education (ACE), it soon became NCAA bylaw 5-1-(j), the most important legislation to hit college athletics in years.

It states that a high school student must have both a 2.0 grade point average and a minimum combined score of 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT in order to be eligible to participate in athletics during his or her freshman year.

The rule had a devastating effect on some schools. Oklahoma's football team lost eight recruits to the rule this year. ASU's football team lost three. The Michigan basketball team is currently without the services of six of its recruits.

In the wake of all this, there is more legislation brewing: At the Sept. 30-Oct. 1 meeting of the NCAA Presidents Commission, the ACE proposed legislation designed to cut the cost of running intercollegiate athletic programs and keep student-athletes in class more and on the practice field less.

The proposal would do several things: reduce scholarships in football from 95 to 80 and basketball from 15 to 12, both over a three-year period; eliminate an as yet unspecified number of assistant coaches from both football and basketball; make high-school all-star games illegal; eliminate spring football, fall baseball and hold the start of the basketball season until after Jan. 1, and cut the length of the baseball season from 80 to 60 games, and the basketball season to 28 games. Basketball schedules currently vary depending upon how many tournaments a team plays in and how far it advances in post-season tournament play because of loopholes in the scheduling rules.

According to Sheldon Steinbach, general counsel for the ACE, his group put together a committee headed by UCLA Chancellor Charles Young to study ways to further improve academics and, more importantly, cut costs. Steinbach said he feels the ACE is qualified to develop such a proposal.

"In light of our involvement in college athletics over the past five or six years, we felt we were qualified to do this," Steinbach said. "We felt we had a pretty fair idea of the range of problems facing college athletics and a pretty fair idea of the range of solutions."

The ACE proposal was made to the Presidents Commission Sept. 30 and was taken under advisement along with "three to four dozen other various proposals," said Ted Tow, NCAA assistant executive director. Nearly all of the proposals dealt with cutting costs, Tow said.

The Presidents Commission then set up a subcommittee, headed by Chancellor Ira Heyman of the University of California-Berkeley, to study the proposals and report back to the entire committee at the NCAA meeting Jan. 7 in San Diego. At that time it will be decided if a special convention is needed to draft one of the proposals.

Steinbach is confident that if the ACE's proposal is not adopted, a similar one will be.

"I have every reason to take them at their word that they will put forward a proposal that is similar to the one we made earlier," he said.

If that happens, there will be a lot of unhappy people across the land of intercollegiate athletics.

Coaches have been vocal in their opposition to the proposal, particularly the reduction of coaching staffs.

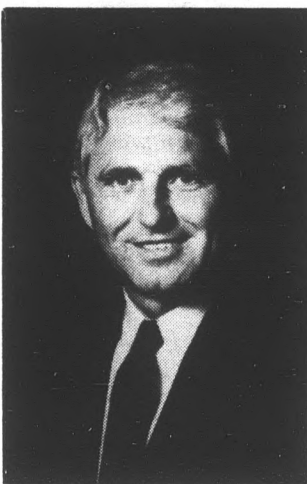

"I think it's the most asinine recommendation I've ever seen," Arizona basketball coach Lute Olson said. "It's asinine because they haven't checked with coaches about any of it. From an economic standpoint, even if we only got rid of the part-time assistant, it would only save them about the amount of one full scholarship."

"If they remove the part-time assistant, it would be disaster. There are times during recruiting when he is almost like the head coach on campus. I'm gone, the two full-time assistants are gone, and from the first day of classes until Oct. 10 (letter-of-intent signing day), he is running the show. He supervises the study skills sessions, weight program, conditioning program and just the normal adjustments the kids have to being away from home for the first time."

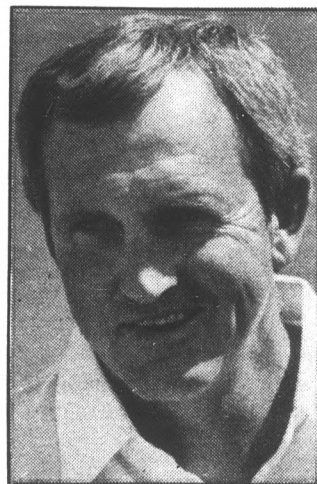

"This recommendation comes at a time when everyone is concerned about athletics and academics, about the drug scene, and I think they have made a proposal that would make things about 100 times worse than they are now because there would be less supervision of the athletes."

Although all coaches are not as vehement as Olson, most are opposed to cutting the coaching staffs, because they feel it will diminish their capacity to supervise the academic progress of their athletes.

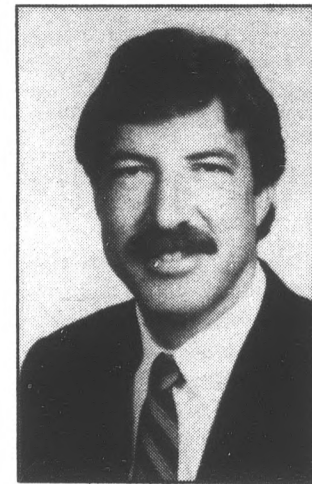

"If our staff is cut, it will have a major impact on our ability to do our job," ASU basketball coach Steve Patterson said. "We have one assistant coach whose primary responsibility is academics. We want to be responsible for having high-caliber people in our program and the only way we can do that is with manpower.

Lute Olson

John Cooper

"You don't just wave a magic wand over a kid's head and achieve that. We are obligated to support these kids because of the demands that are put on them because of practice time and travel."

Patterson said there are two specific areas that would suffer if the coaching staffs of basketball programs are cut: evaluation (both athletically and academically) of recruits and progress toward graduation or achievement in athletic endeavors.

"These are some cold, callous rules," Patterson said. "They put in rules before for academic progress, like having to be on a program of study toward graduation and minimum grade point averages, then they turn around and want to cut scholarships and coaching staffs. It's a contradiction, and they can't have it both ways. It will greatly change the game as we know it if they change things now."

Steinbach disagrees with the assessments of Olson and Patterson about the possible effects of the proposal.

"It's a cost element involved more than anything else," he said. "It would limit the intensity of competition. We need to put college sports in a more appropriate perspective, in line with the fact that we are, first and foremost, educational institutions."

It is true that the elimination of 15 football scholarships, two football assistant coaches, three basketball scholarships and a basketball assistant coach will save money and lots of it.

Athletic administrators are split on the issues. Some, particularly those from schools that don't generate a lot of income, favor it. Others are opposed to the cutbacks.

According to Oregon Athletic Director Bill Byrne, his school would save approximately $110,000 to $120,000 a year if three full-time assistant coaching spots were eliminated. Oregon would also save $135,000 annually if the total of 18 scholarships were eliminated.

"I am in favor of anything that will reduce expenses in college athletics," Byrne said. "We need to reduce the amount of money going into athletics. We need to reduce expenses and give the student-athletes more time in the classroom. We need to gain more control of athletics from an administrative standpoint."

But there are athletic directors who do not like the proposed legislation.

"I'm not in favor of it at all," Washington Athletic Director Mike Lude said. "In football and basketball, you have the two sports it is essential for us to keep at a premier level in order to keep our cash flow high enough to run a broad-based program like we want to."

"If we have to cut costs, that's my job. We don't want a situation where people are spending money without accountability. But we also don't need someone to make a blanket statement like, 'You guys are hard up, you need help financially.' I don't need someone to make a national rule to tell me how to do my job."

Olson agreed with Lude. "Who do they think is funding the other 16 or 18 programs a university runs? This is 'panic legislation.' You have people who are not accustomed to being criticized placed under public criticism, and they are panicking."

"I'm less concerned with the quality of play than I am with the quality of education my players get. There is no question that this will affect the quality of education the players get."

Coaches also are afraid they will be unable to do their jobs if scholarships are cut and spring football and fall baseball are eliminated.

Timing comes through for ASU sports journalists

In sports, timing is everything. And in sports journalism, timing is everything, too.

So you need the State Press sports section . . . no, no — that's ESPN's line.

But timing has been awfully important this semester. The people who gave me the job of sports editor this fall really had good timing as far as I'm concerned. Not everybody gets to cover the Pac-10 Rose Bowl representative all season long.

And although the loss to UA was heart-wrenching, it was the only loss all year long. The Devils did beat five out of six Top 20 teams this year, which is more than can be said for anyone in the nation, including the much-revered Miami Hurricanes.

And speaking of Miami, the timing there is pretty sweet, too. The Fiesta Bowl is the seat of the national championship game this year; and better yet, Sun Devil fans will have time to hop a flight back from the Rose Bowl and catch the game on Jan. 2.

Sometimes you just can't write a script any better than reality; but I'll go ahead and try.

ACT I

The scene opens at the Rose Bowl, Pasadena, Calif. The Michigan Wolverines enter stage left.

The ASU Sun Devils, complete with cast of thousands of rich Sun Angels and a few students, take the field to face the Michigananders.

The battle is joined, and the Devils are stopped on the ground in the first half, scoring only a field goal and trailing 10-3 at the gun.

Bob Heiler Sports Editor

In the second half, Jeff Van Raaphorst — who, for some reason, was deemed the third-best quarterback in the Pac-10 even though he led the conference in passing efficiency — comes out throwing, and goes through the Big-10 defense, just as a good passing attack does every year in the Rose Bowl. The Devils win 31-20, and the Sun Angels and students head back to Tempe, high as a kite.

ACT II

This is where it really gets sweet. The timing comes into play here.

After watching the Rose Bowl, I get to come back to Sun Devil Stadium and watch Penn State take on Miami.

Enter Vinny Testaverde, the best collegiate quarterback in the nation this year. Enter Joe Paterno, the best collegiate football coach in any year.

Exit Vinny, stage left, perhaps riding a motor-scooter.

The Nittany Lions are going to pummel the Hurricanes about the head and shoulderpads. Miami gained 68 yards on the ground against perennial powerhouse East Carolina. And that was while Vinny was still nursing road burns.

Joe Paterno is going to have his team ready to stop the pass. The blitzes will be frequent, effective, and come from about eight different places on the field. Every time Vinny plants to throw, he'll have 1-3 Nittany Lions in his thigh pads.

Penn State will win by a touchdown, and Miami will not remain No. 1 in the nation, which is really quite fair considering that the only good team they will have beaten is Oklahoma.

ACT III

The action is complete. This is the act where either everybody dies or they all get jobs in cities on opposite sides of the planet.

Or, in this case, it's where we all start looking forward to the draft to find out who's going where to do what to whom.

Another college football season draws to a close.

Sadness.
Depression.
Suicidal despair.
Al McGuire.

What? Al McGuire? What does he have to do with college football?

Absolutely nothing. But college basketball is the reason to continue living now. That's what you have to like about sports journalism. There's always another season to usher in.

Go N.C. State.

Women's hoop team goes down to Cal State-Long Beach

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

The ASU women's basketball team started a three-game road trip against seventh-ranked California State-Long Beach on the wrong foot, suffering a resounding defeat, 106-69.

"We played an extremely talented team," said head coach Juliene Simpson.

The Sun Devils went into the game carrying a 2-0 record and boasted a shooting percentage of more than 50 percent from the floor.

However, California State-Long Beach showed that they too could shoot the ball from the field, as they outscored the Devils by 37 points.

"The margin of victory wasn't surprising if you were at the game," Simpson said. "It would be surprising to those people who obviously didn't attend, considering how well we played last weekend in the Dial Classic."

California State-Long Beach, 2-1, started out the game by making their first 11 shots.

By halftime they were shooting 60 percent from the floor, and when the game was over, they had shot 57 percent from the floor, compared to 40 percent for the Sun Devils.

"They just had an outstanding game," Simpson said.

"Shooting the percentage they did from the floor is really incredible," she said.

The poor shooting for the Sun Devils could be attributed to the fact that, All-America forward Sherry Poole left the game with an injured finger after only eight minutes.

Junior forward Stephanie Osburn, came in for Poole and played approximately 25 minutes and shot four for five from the floor.

"Stephanie came through for us and played some really good ball," Simpson said.

Poole is expected to return to action Friday when the Sun Devils play at University of New Orleans.

Simpson said senior guards Patti Peppler and Mona Lomeli continued their consistent play, scoring 18 and 10 points, respectively.

As for the overall game performance of the Sun Devils, Simpson said the team used the same game plan as always.

"We played this game the exact way we played in the Dial Classic and exactly as we have been practicing," Simpson said.

"They just beat us at everything and set a great tempo for themselves in the game."

Simpson said she believes the key to winning the next two road games is to put the game against California State-Long Beach behind them and use it as a learning experience.

"Even if we had changed our game plan to try and match up with Cal State, it probably wouldn't have mattered," she said.

"We have handled the loss with as much class as possible and now look ahead to New Orleans and Tulane."

Simpson is looking ahead to the game with 1-0 UNO as a whole new challenge.

"New Orleans is not as talented or as disciplined as Cal State and I am very confident that we can beat them," Simpson said.

The Sun Devils beat UNO in their first matchup last year. On Sunday, the Devils will travel on down the road to take on a winless Tulane.

"These two games are going to be quite different from the Cal State game because we are playing a much different caliber of team," Simpson said.

"We are just going to continue to work on our defense and our man-to-man coverage."

The rest of the season before the Christmas break has Simpson looking ahead to a successful sweep down in Louisiana as well as more continued success until the break.

"It is a good possibility that not only can we sweep the two games this weekend, but that we can win the rest of the games before the break and boast a 7-1 record," Simpson said.

The next home game for the Sun Devils is Tuesday, Dec. 9, when they play New Mexico State at 5 p.m. in the University Activity Center.

Texas Tech coach rumored to take over for Longhorns

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Texas Tech football coach David McWilliams may be named as the new head coach at the University of Texas as soon as Thursday, the Austin-American Statesman reported Wednesday.

Also, Texas Tech Athletic Director T. Jones told reporters, "I would say yes, they probably will (offer McWilliams the job)."

The newspaper said sources indicated that Arizona State coach John Cooper also has been interviewed for the job which became vacant on Saturday when UT fired 10-year coach Fred Akers.

But the newspaper said "UT officials and alumni say it's becoming more and more obvious that Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds will make an offer to McWilliams perhaps as soon as today (Wednesday)."

Dodds, in an interview Tuesday night, said no offers had been made yet. He declined to say how many candidates he has spoken with.

The American-Statesman said Akers' successor would be introduced at a press conference, maybe as early as Thursday, because Dodds said he wanted to "get it done by the end of the week."

Dodds said he discusses the situation with university president Bill Cunningham daily and will make a recommendation to him before offering the job to any candidate.

Asked about speculation that McWilliams, a former UT player and assistant coach, is the front-runner, Dodds replied: "I can't control what people have on TV and radio. Sometimes they speculate right, sometimes they speculate wrong."

McWilliams said he talked with Dodds on Sunday. "There was no job offer," McWilliams said. "He indicated he had some other people he would visit with."

McWilliams moved to Texas Tech this season and led the Red Raiders to a 7-4 record and an Independence Bowl bid.

Dodds said he has discussed the job with "more than one" candidate. He would not identify the others.

Tech's Jones told reporters Tuesday he didn't know whether McWilliams would accept the job if offered. He predicted it would be a tough decision.

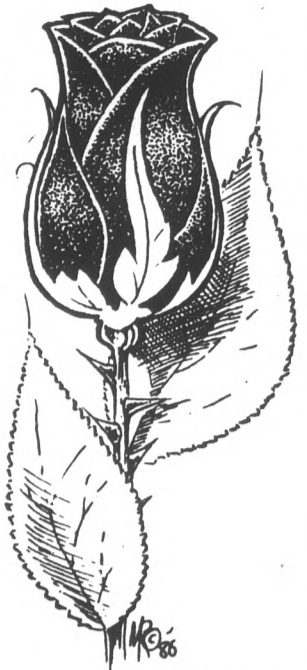

"His family is involved. His friends are involved. He'll have to look at his profession, his age, what he wants out of his career," Jones said.

Jones said he would make no attempt to counter a UT offer should one be made.

Lions' Ferguson finds football more important than money

By The Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Joe Ferguson is a throwback to an era when football was played for something more than money.

Ferguson, 36, is in his 14th season. He'll be 37 before he starts his 15th campaign, but he still has things he wants to do in this increasingly rough sport. Things young quarterbacks, with their briefcases and stock portfolios, might not understand.

"Money doesn't have that much to do with it," Ferguson said, gently rubbing a red gash across the bridge of his nose, a Thanksgiving Day gift from the Green Bay Packers. "I enjoy it. I enjoy the fact that I'm still able to do it."

Ferguson, who has never been to the Super Bowl, labored his first 12 years in the NFL for the Buffalo Bills. The past two seasons, he's been a backup for the Detroit Lions. It's not a role he cherishes, but he's not complaining about it, either.

"A couple of years ago, at Buffalo, I kind of knew that sooner or later it was going to happen, that I wasn't going to be playing so I kind of mentally got myself ready for it," Ferguson said. "I figured if it did happen, I wasn't going to stand in the corner and pout because it happens."

With the Lions, Ferguson played well enough in 1985 and '86 preseason exhibition games to be considered for the starting job, but on each occasion Coach Darryl Rogers played a younger Eric Hipple.

Both seasons, however, Hipple has been injured and Ferguson has filled in admirably.

Ferguson, who is likely to start his fourth straight game

Sunday against the Pittsburgh Steelers, has thrown six touchdown passes, and the Lions have won two of the three games he's started. In the only defeat, to the Packers, Ferguson produced 40 points, but his receivers dropped two passes in the end zone and the Lions' special teams allowed a last-minute punt return for the winning score.

Ferguson, one of the highest paid Lions, has become almost a playing coach for the Detroit, even coaching the coach at times.

"There were some aspects of the NFL that were foreign to me," said Rogers, who came to the Lions last season after a 10-year collegiate coaching career. Having Joe around was a big plus. He brought veteran stability, experience and quite a bit of ability to this team."

Celtics break at-home win streak

by The Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. — The Celtics spared Boston by ending their 48-game home winning streak in Hartford, their home away from home.

"It's too bad," the Celtics' Kevin McHale said Tuesday night after the team's 117-109 loss to the Washington Bullets before more than 15,000 stunned observers at the Hartford Civic Center. "But if it's going to end, it might as well be in Hartford."

The streak also began in the civic center, 110 miles from the Boston Garden, its old parquet floor and all of those championship banners. The Celtics play three regular-season games in Hartford each year.

The Celtics had not lost a home game since Dec. 6, 1985, when they were beaten by the Portland Trail Blazers at the Boston Garden. The winning streak started four days later when they defeated the Atlanta Hawks in Hartford.

The Celtics last season broke the previous record for consecutive home victories, 36 games, set by the Philadelphia 76ers in 1966 and '67.

"This ended our streak even though we weren't at the Garden. We were the team in white, so it was a home game for us," Celtics coach K.C. Jones said.

Jones had never lost a game in Hartford as head coach.

"I used to say that I didn't like streaks, but now I realize that I do like them," he said. "They don't start talking about them until they reach about 10 games and they're only broken by one loss."

Said Moses Malone of the Bullets, "It isn't the Boston Garden, but we beat them."

Trailing 86-81 going into the fourth quarter, Washington brought Darwin Cook off the bench to ignite a 12-point run and help turn the game around. Jeff Malone scored 36 points, including 30 in the first three quarters, for the Bullets.

Boston's misfortune was Washington's salvation as the team recorded its first win after seven losses on the road this season.

"It feels great for us to win a ballgame on the road. We had to have an unreal fourth quarter to beat this team, and we got it," Bullets coach Kevin Loughery said.

"I'm not for anything that will reduce the number of players who will be able to play college football," ASU football coach John Cooper said. "I got into this business to help people, and if this passes I won't be able to do that as well as I can now."

"As far as spring football goes, that is when we do a lot of our teaching. If we can't do that in the spring, then they are going to have to leave more time in the fall so we can teach these guys how to block and tackle."

ASU baseball coach Jim Brock agreed with Cooper.

"We try to get them to learn as much as possible about baseball as well as what they learn in class, because in almost all cases here, these guys want to play professionally," he said.

Brock said that because of the circumstances of the program, he tries to get his players to take 10-12 hours of class in the summer, then play baseball in the spring and fall. By doing so, they not only make academic progress but have the best chance at a pro career in baseball.

Brock added that fall baseball puts virtually no demands on in-class time and the emotional involvement that is present in the spring is not there in the fall, so the athlete can concentrate fully on classes.

"I'm proud of the academic progress that has been made in my 16 years here," Brock said. "Things are hundreds of times better than they used to be. I think the academic regulations we have now are fine, and I don't see any need for anything more."

Steinbach said that the intention of the rules is to "try to keep the athletes on the field for only one semester and spend more time in the classroom."

"What we are trying to do is put things in proper perspective. We need to set a reasonable limit as to how far athletics can go. We need this legislation because no one institution can go it alone. It would be like unilaterally disarming and would put any school that tried it on its own at a huge disadvantage. We must achieve mutual disarmament."

But according to coaches, in-class time doesn't suffer in the off-seasons. Patterson said that his team this year will not miss any class time in the fall. Cooper said the same of spring football.

Groups like the ACE are trying to do what they think is best for college sports — putting athletics in proper perspective and getting back to the notion of the true student-athlete.

Then there are the coaches who run the programs, who think things are fine the way they are, and that by trying to cut costs things only will get worse. Their main concern is the effect legislation like the ACE's proposal will have on the academic progress of the athletes.

On Jan. 7, the Presidents Commission will decide on the legislation that could, from the sound of things, make Proposition 48 seem trivial by comparison.

ACE

"I'm not for anything that will reduce the number of players who will be able to play college football," ASU football coach John Cooper said. "I got into this business to help people, and if this passes I won't be able to do that as well as I can now."

"As far as spring football goes, that is when we do a lot of our teaching. If we can't do that in the spring, then they are going to have to leave more time in the fall so we can teach these guys how to block and tackle."

ASU baseball coach Jim Brock agreed with Cooper.

"We try to get them to learn as much as possible about baseball as well as what they learn in class, because in almost all cases here, these guys want to play professionally," he said.

Brock said that because of the circumstances of the program, he tries to get his players to take 10-12 hours of class in the summer, then play baseball in the spring and fall. By doing so, they not only make academic progress but have the best chance at a pro career in baseball.

Brock added that fall baseball puts virtually no demands on in-class time and the emotional involvement that is present in the spring is not there in the fall, so the athlete can concentrate fully on classes.

"I'm proud of the academic progress that has been made in my 16 years here," Brock said. "Things are hundreds of times better than they used to be. I think the academic regulations we have now are fine, and I don't see any need for anything more."

Steinbach said that the intention of the rules is to "try to keep the athletes on the field for only one semester and spend more time in the classroom."

"What we are trying to do is put things in proper perspective. We need to set a reasonable limit as to how far athletics can go. We need this legislation because no one institution can go it alone. It would be like unilaterally disarming and would put any school that tried it on its own at a huge disadvantage. We must achieve mutual disarmament."

But according to coaches, in-class time doesn't suffer in the off-seasons. Patterson said that his team this year will not miss any class time in the fall. Cooper said the same of spring football.

Groups like the ACE are trying to do what they think is best for college sports — putting athletics in proper perspective and getting back to the notion of the true student-athlete.

Then there are the coaches who run the programs, who think things are fine the way they are, and that by trying to cut costs things only will get worse. Their main concern is the effect legislation like the ACE's proposal will have on the academic progress of the athletes.

On Jan. 7, the Presidents Commission will decide on the legislation that could, from the sound of things, make Proposition 48 seem trivial by comparison.
