ASU professor still 'in danger'; threats persist

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

ASU history professor Lewis Tambs continues to be threatened by Colombian drug dealers angry over the former ambassador's hard-line stand against drug trafficking, a University police official said.

Deputy Police Chief Doug Bartosh said ASU police are aware of the threats, but Tambs has not requested any additional security measures. Tambs returns to work Thursday.

Tambs' life has been threatened by Central American underworld figures since 1983.

Bartosh said no new threats have been made since Tambs' return to ASU one week ago, but police will meet with him Thursday to discuss security measures.

Ray Henkel, an ASU associate professor of geography and expert on Latin America's cocaine trade, said Tambs is still in danger.

"While he was ambassador, he had heavy security," Henkel said. "It's not going to be the same here."

"(Tambs) cracked down very heavily. He did a very good job and that was dangerous."

Henkel said the shooting last week of Parejo Gonzalez, a former Colombian justice minister, in Hungary is proof that Latin American drug dealers will not hesitate to enter another country to get at a target.

Henkel said if ASU does assign security, it would most likely consist of one or two plain-clothes bodyguards posing as students in Tambs' class.

Tambs returns to ASU after resigning his post as U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica in December. He left his post amid reports that he requested the use of a remote Costa Rican airstrip near the Nicaraguan border for a series of arms drops.

Tambs could not be reached for comment.

Daniel Sheehan, attorney for a Washington-based public interest organization, the Christic Institute, said a $1 million bounty was placed on Tambs during his 1983-85 term as ambassador to Colombia by Pablo Escobar, a suspected Colombian drug dealer.

Sheehan said Escobar apparently was angry over Tambs' attempt to obtain an extradition treaty between the United States and Colombia, which would allow the United States to file drug smuggling charges against Escobar and other smugglers.

Tambs' life was threatened again in early 1985, when plans to bomb the U.S. embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica, were uncovered.

Sheehan said the plot was devised by Nicaraguan Contra forces, who planned to blame the attack on Sandinista forces.

Sheehan said the Contras hoped the attack would set off a U.S. strike against Nicaragua. The U.S.-backed Contras have been fighting the Sandinistas, Nicaragua's government forces, since 1979.

Students scramble to mend altered schedules

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

Lines were long and tensions high as students, dropped from classes because of budget cuts, scrambled for overrides into alternate sections.

Academic Vice President Jack Kinsinger said some students might be able to register when additional sections are added this week, but many seniors will have to substitute classes to graduate.

Kinsinger said more than 3,000 students were affected when ASU eliminated 164 sections to meet statewide budget cuts.

Mecham has asked for an additional 7 percent cutback in University spending.

"We'll be able to add some additional sections of ENG 101 and 102 by the end of the week," Kinsinger said. "But we can't accommodate everyone."

He said the colleges hardest hit by the cuts include public programs, liberal arts, business and engineering. Each college lost between 20 and 25 sections.

Several deans said the cutbacks were worse than anticipated.

Myer Wolfe, acting dean of the College of Architecture and Environmental Design, said the budget cut has "reached the point of being ludicrous."

"I've thought about asking the staff to choose between toilet paper and Xerox paper," Wolfe said. "We can't afford both. We're penniless. We've cut to the bare bone."

Gary Krehenbuhl, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said more than 3,000 students could have taken classes in the college before the budget cut.

"We tried to cut everything else before classes, but we didn't have a choice," he said.

Krehenbuhl said the college has turned "hundreds of students away."

"There's just not enough sections to meet the demand," he said. "We've already filled 802 sections."

Lyndon Searfoss, associate dean of the College of Education, said: "We keep hoping someone will back up a big truck to ASU and drop off a shipment of money. Frankly, the cuts are bleaker than we thought."

Other colleges are trying to meet the needs of graduating majors but may be forced to turn graduating non-majors away.

Robert Goyer, communication department chairman, said, "We can guarantee that graduating seniors will be accommodated somehow, but non-majors and sophomores and junior majors might have a problem."

In addition to eliminating classes, the University reduced travel expenses and postponed hiring and implementing new programs.

Terri Hoffman, an Arizona Student Association member, said she and other students will meet with the Joint Legislative Budget Committee to discuss the effects of the budget cuts on students.

2 State Press employees earn awards in separate journalism competitions

The Hearst Foundation has recognized two State Press staff members with collegiate journalism awards in separate monthly contests.

Tom Blodgett, 22, State Press editor and a senior journalism major, placed second in the nationwide competition for editorial writing, the foundation announced Monday.

He was awarded a $1,000 scholarship. ASU's Walter Cronkite School of Journalism received a matching grant.

Blodgett's column, which was published in the Dec. 3 edition of the State Press, applied the findings of the Carnegie Report to ASU.

Reporter Tina Daunt, 21, a senior journalism major, won 12th place in the general reporting category, the foundation announced in December.

Daunt's story was about the accreditation problems in the College of Business and appeared in the Oct. 14 edition of the State Press.

"This shows that the quality of journalism being practiced at Arizona State University is as good as any place in the country," said Bruce Itule, Student Publications director at ASU. "I think it is also an indication that we will see more winners in the future."

King Week gets underway on Cady Mall

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

About 300 ASU students, faculty and staff gathered on Cady Mall Monday and sang and held hands during the opening ceremony for the week-long Martin Luther King Jr. celebration.

Phoenix Municipal Court Judge Jean Williams, who was an attorney for King in the '60s and keynote speaker for the ceremony, told the crowd King was "the prince of peace and the king of love."

Williams, who participated in an earlier march at the Capitol, told the crowd she had just returned from "one of the most glorious marches in my life."

"If I had a hypodermic needle and I could magically inject it into you, I would give you King's charisma," Williams said.

She said King changed the face of America and the world more than anyone in her lifetime.

Williams told the story of Rosa Parks, the black woman who refused to give her bus seat to a white passenger in Montgomery, Ala., which touched off the 1955 bus boycott headed by King.

"It may seem insignificant to you now but it was a monumental battle," she said.

Williams related other incidents, such as the 1965 march through Selma, Ala., when she and her white friends marched together.

"We were integrated," she said. "We even drank black and white scotch."

"We crossed that bridge . . . and it was one more milestone along the path to dignity."

Williams said King preached the immorality of hate. "Dr. King loved the world. Dr. King loved peace. He believed all men were created equal," she said.

Williams stressed that King did not advocate rights just for black people.

"He wanted to replace hate with love, . . . war with peace," she said.

Williams led the crowd in singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee" and urged everyone to join hands.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson stood on the speaker platform holding hands with Jacqueline Weatherby, director of ASU's Affirmative Action office, and a young black girl, who swayed and tugged at Nelson.

"Someday my little granddaughter . . . will not know racial discrimination," Williams said, her voice cracking with emotion.

Phoenix Municipal Court Judge Jean Williams reflects on her memories of Martin Luther King Jr. Williams spoke Monday on Cady Mall about her involvement with King.

Marchers unite in Tucson to petition for King state holiday

About 15,000 people braved a bitter 35 degrees Monday morning before embarking on a commemorative march to the Capitol to present the Legislature with petitions supporting a Martin Luther King Jr. state holiday.

Tucson City Council Member Charles Ford gave approximately 50,000 signatures to Speaker of the House Joe Lane, R-Wilcox, adding that the petitions were a "first installment."

The petition drive was sparked by Gov. Evan Mecham's move to rescind an order by former Gov. Bruce Babbitt declaring the third Monday of January a state holiday.

Mecham, relying on the legal opinion of State Attorney General Bob Corbin, said the order is illegal because it requires the appropriation of state funds, an act limited to the Legislature.

Ford said the petition drive was a statewide effort to "impress on the governor that we are going to have a holiday for Martin Luther King."

Phoenix Mayor Terry Goddard and Carolyn Warner, an unsuccessful 1986 gubernatorial candidate, were flanked by black leaders as they slowly walked down Washington Street for the hour-long march.

The primarily black crowd was peaceful and remained organized through efforts of a director with a megaphone.

The crowd marched by Woolco Drug Store, which refused to serve black patrons in the '60s.

The march ended at the Wesley Bolin Plaza, across from the Capitol, where a rally, featuring former Gov. Bruce Babbitt and other state leaders, took place.

Babbitt, who is seeking the 1988 Democratic Party presidential nomination, received a warm reception from a crowd chanting, "Bruce, Bruce."

Babbitt defended his executive order, saying he issued the order last year at the advice of Art Hamilton, D-Phoenix, after the Legislature defeated a similar measure by one vote.

Babbitt said the order was legitimate until Mecham "stood in front of the Legislature and said, 'I don't believe in honoring Martin Luther King.'"

Babbitt urged the crowd to keep marching until the state officially recognizes the national holiday honoring King.

He asked the crowd whether it agreed with accusations that black leaders are misleading the public on the holiday issue.

The question was answered with a resounding "no!"

Babbitt also refuted allegations that he is pandering to the black vote.

He said people should not stop crusading until adequate health care, education and job opportunities are afforded to each child in the state.

Goddard said the city was "keeping the spirit alive" by sponsoring the celebration, which is one of six festivals a year.

Warner, who received a rousing show of support when introduced, said, "King was a great man . . . and a great citizen who converted our conviction into action."

"We live in a sad time . . . in which leaders have made it fashionable to be a bigot," Warner said, riling the crowd. "We must turn that around."

Ted Honning, an ASU nuclear engineering student, said he was marching to show his support for the King holiday.

Honning, who said he was missing the first day of classes, said in a joking manner, "School doesn't start until the 20th."

Saving Sparky from fanatics

Causes come and go in this world. There are even some that are worth fighting for. Every once in a while, a movement comes along that just makes no sense at all.

Some of the very best causes are often derived from and built upon religious foundations. Most of these are nice.

However, one — in particular — that is gaining fame in this part of the country lends itself to a more demeaning label.

Bible-pushers who insist students are being corrupted because they attend a school with a devil for a mascot is idiotic.

In a related story in this edition of the State Press, it is reported that two California high schools have already lost their devil mascots due to applied pressure from Christian groups and concerned parent groups. A third high school is presently under fire and in jeopardy of losing its Sun Devil mascot.

According to the story, the leader of the drive to abolish the use of devil mascots said his next target will be ASU.

Yes, it's true. Our beloved Sparky is in trouble.

What makes this fanatical group think they will be able to persuade Valley residents to drop Sparky the Sun Devil is a mystery.

If anything, they picked a very bad time to try.

The ASU Sun Devils are world-renown for their victory in the Rose Bowl, and the pride meter has never been more positive.

And it's not just the students who will be fighting this battle. Because Arizona has no professional football team to root for, the Sun Devils have captured the hearts of many football fans in and throughout the Valley and state.

It has been said the pressure has already started here. At the end of last semester, the Devil's Pit, which was located downstairs in the MU, suddenly disappeared. There has also been speculation about the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, which spelled backwards is SATAN.

Who came up with this one? This is a nationwide organization. Just because there is a chapter located on this campus and the group's posters depict Sparky leaning against the logo NATAS, we should be worried about being corrupted?

A final statement we should all live by — SAVE SPARKY!

"IT'S A PRESSING CONTROVERSY WHICH MY STAFF IS ANALYZING WITH THE UTMOST DILIGENCE. I THINK IT'S WORTHY OF EXTENDED DISCUSSION WITH THOSE IN THE UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATIVE HIERARCHY."

Martin Luther King Jr.: His dream and his legacy

Fulfilling the true American dream

By Sandra Ann Abril

"I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.'" — Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

These words are still ringing in the ears of thousands of Americans who were present on Aug. 28, 1963, for Martin Luther King Jr.'s deliverance of his "I Have A Dream" speech.

Martin Luther King Jr. grasped hold of a nation at a time when we were in the "dark and desolate valley of segregation." A time in which freedom was simply a commodity that could only be sold to the white man. A time in which justice was not a reality, but a forlorn hope of the poor, the powerless and the racially disadvantaged.

In less than two decades, Martin Luther King Jr. stripped a nation down to its naked roots for all to examine and scrutinize. He moved a nation to new heights of observation and plummeted them to profound and intense self-analysis. He not only gave Rosa Parks "a dream" in the struggle for civil rights, but gave the poor, the powerless and the racially disadvantaged the chance to grasp that dream and create reality.

During his life, Martin Luther King Jr. led a crusade to guarantee to "all men" the unalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. On April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn., Martin Luther King Jr.'s crusade ended almost sacrificially with his assassination. Even in his death, we were left with the gift of his growing dream of equality and justice for all mankind. He left behind for humanity the dream of today "where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character."

Martin Luther King Jr. stripped a nation down to its naked roots for all to examine . . .

In essence, Martin Luther King Jr., the man, led a crusade for civil rights; the dreamer moved a nation; inevitably, he became the voice heard around the world. Sandra Ann Abril is a student at Phoenix Carl Hayden High School and won first prize in the ASU Martin Luther King Jr. essay contest.

Being white, being in the minority

By Mary K. Lucking

I guess I should consider myself lucky.

Growing up in the environment that I did, I learned at an early age what life would be like without minorities and then what it would be like to be one. I was born at Stanford University in California. In the eight years that we lived on campus, our family had next-door neighbors from Egypt, Japan, Ethiopia and Israel, and my friends ranged from Ming from Canton, China to Malissa, a native of Kenya. All the children living in this "mini-United Nations" grew up "colorblind." Whenever I hear Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have A Dream" speech, I remember Escondido Village at Stanford. I think that this community might have been Dr. King's dream come true.

After almost a decade of living on campus, our family moved to Douglas, a small border-town in southeastern Arizona. In this small town that mirrored the Mexican town of Agua Prieta, right "across the line," I was exposed to what was, unfortunately, the real world. Being adjacent to the Mexican border, Douglas was composed of about 80 percent Mexicans. A Protestant with a German family tree, I was suddenly a minority. Here, I found a kind of prejudice that nobody ever talks about. Being in the fourth grade, I did not see racial prejudice like the Ku Klux Klan or outbreaks of violence like in South Africa, but a plain, cold hate.

It may seem insignificant to you, the reader, but when somebody refuses to buy Girl Scout cookies because your last name is not Martinez or Aradondo, it really hits home. People in this town looked down at me because my skin was not dark enough.

At the beginning of my paper I said that I consider myself lucky. I say this because, now that I live in Phoenix, I find myself being one of the very few people who has not accepted prejudice as a fact of life. My friends get tired of me telling stories of Stanford and Douglas, but stories are the only way I have to fight racial hate. Martin Luther King Jr. did the same. He used his speeches as a way to make millions of people aware of this country's racial problem. I would like to thank Gov. Bruce Babbitt for making Dr. King's birthday a state holiday. I hope that this day off will give one person enough time to decide that prejudice is stupid.

Mary K. Lucking is a student at Phoenix Central High School and won second prize in the ASU Martin Luther King Jr. essay contest.

A real college marching band

Editor:

In response to the "Roses and Raspberries" opinion of Jan. 19.

Yes, I do agree that the University of Michigan band's show was entertaining.

Their energetic dancing was fun to watch, but the boring block formations and downfield marching could use improvement.

Obviously, the writer of the editorial is an imbecile who knows nothing about being in the Arizona State University

Sun Devil Marching Band.

You talk about a "real college band." ASUSDMB is an excellent college band!

Who is there to support the team when no one else is? ASUSDMB!

Who is always relied upon to get the crowd going with a rowdy version of the Budweiser tune and (of course) the fight song? ASUSDMB!

And above all, who do you think spends as much time and effort to perform and entertain in front of 70,000 people nearly every week? ASUSDMB!

No other group on campus is as large or as involved in promoting school spirit. When you watched the halftime shows of both bands, you must have been drowning in a $2.50 cup of Coke because sound-wise, performance-wise and Sun Devil pride-wise, we kicked some ass!

Dozens of roses to the ASUSDMB!

'Other woman' conversation bad meal condiment

We had a lively discussion at the Harcourts' dinner table the other night. It concerned lovers and what makes them different from other people.

Barbara Tommalee started it. "Why do biographers always devote six chapters to the 'other woman' and two chapters to the wife? And why do all the great legends of love have to do with people who have to sneak around alleys to give their hearts to another? How come women devote 30 to 40 years of their lives to their husbands and everyone remarks how beautiful the mistresses were?"

"Are you having trouble at home?" Sally Trimble asked her.

Barbara turned red. "No, I'm not having trouble at home. I'm just mad because the other women get such a good press and we wives get such a lousy one. What do mistresses have that we don't?"

Herman Wooten said, "Time — which is the most essential ingredient in a love affair. The other woman is always ready to do anything you want to do. She'll either dress to go out, or not dress and stay in, whichever suits you. She will dance all night, or throw logs on your fire, whichever comes first. But most important of all, she always has a lovely lilt in her voice."

Art Buchwald
Los Angeles Times
Syndicate

Sally said, "Pigeon feathers. The reason the other woman is always ready to go out is that she doesn't have to get supper for the kids, feed the dog, put gas in the car or iron her dress at 7 o'clock at night."

"We must remember," Herman said, "when you put other women and wives together you are mixing apples and oranges."

Irma Wooten said, "I knew he would come up with something stupid like that." She smeared butter all over his hand.

Herman continued, "The wife has many roles to play in life, the mistress only one, maybe two, if she's a good listener. The reason the other woman is so honored in literature is she has a mystery about her which produces that mix of excitement and intrigue to keep the heart pounding and the blood boiling. People don't hold it against the wife that she comes in second in her zest for living. But let's face it, what is more romantic — two lovers having a bottle of wine in the park, or a wife and husband in bed watching Johnny Carson?"

"Why," asked Marta Uldane, "are we just discussing relationships between husbands and their mistresses and not wives and their lovers? It seems the lovers of wives are as interesting as mistresses of husbands."

"Not necessarily," said Elliot Gumbah. "A wife cannot devote as much attention to a passionate love affair because she is always worried that this could be the day the man will come to fix her dishwasher."

"A wife's time is not her own," I said. "It's worse," he said. "if she has the school car pool."

Herman Wooten said, "I'll tell you what else sets the other woman apart from everybody else. She always looks spiffy and never tells you how much things cost. And she has a song in her heart."

I tried to win some brownie points for myself. "I can't understand the fuss over the other woman. Everyone knows her role is exaggerated and blown up by historians to make more titillating reading for breathless schoolgirls."

I could see my wife putting her hand around her soup plate.

"Wait," I said, "I believe if you have a choice, and I'm not saying you do, that you should always pay homage to the wife, because a lot of the time she is the woman behind the man."

If I hadn't ducked, the soup plate would have hit me right between the eyes.

Babbitt 'pandering' to blacks, Mecham claims in TV debate

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Gov. Evan Mecham accused former Gov. Bruce Babbitt Monday of "pandering" to blacks when he created the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

In the governors' first nationwide debate over the rescission of the holiday, Babbitt responded by saying Mecham was naive about discrimination in Arizona.

He said Mecham lacked "appreciation for the effect of the civil rights movement and the symbols of the holiday."

The two governors squared off on the MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour in Mecham's second national appearance of the day. Earlier, he debated with the Rev. Jesse Jackson on NBC's "Today" show.

Mecham said he did not regret rescinding the holiday, which sparked statewide protests and a downtown Phoenix rally that attracted more than 15,000 to the Arizona Legislature.

"It isn't anything of my doing," he said. "I just came into a situation that was my responsibility to correct."

Mecham told the estimated 5.5 million viewers that Babbitt created the holiday illegally through an executive order, and only the Legislature had the power to create a holiday.

"I think (Babbitt) acted in a totally political manner," he said. "I think he could have read anything into (the law). I am sorry he started this great controversy.

"I am not willing to pander to make someone love me."

Babbitt said Mecham was "hiding behind lawyers" and rescinded the holiday last week because he does not believe that King deserves a holiday.

Babbitt said he thinks the holiday is the symbol of oppressed people achieving their goals.

"It's an American success story," he said. "It's one that my kids ought to understand and one that Evan Mecham ought to understand even though he refuses to do so."

He said King was "the greatest reformer of the 20th century and Evan Mecham doesn't understand that."

Babbitt denied creating the holiday for political purposes. He said he established the holiday because he appreciates the civil rights movement.

Later, Mecham told reporters at ASU's KAET-Channel 8 studios that he does not believe King deserves a holiday.

Mecham added that he does not believe Arizona blacks are discriminated against and noted his appointment of a black man to head Arizona's Department of Health Services.

"(Babbitt) has created a firestorm for political purposes, and I, through no fault of my own, have ended up in the middle of it," he said.

West Germans cautious of exchanging Lebanese prisoner

By The Associated Press

BONN, West Germany — Prominent politicians cautioned officials Monday against swapping a Lebanese suspect in the 1985 TWA hijacking for a West German abducted in Beirut. They said a trade would inspire more terrorist attacks.

Government spokesmen in Bonn played down reports that the kidnapping in Beirut of businessman Rudolf Cordes was aimed at forcing the release of Mohammed Ali Hamadi, accused of being one of the terrorists who seized the jetliner in June 1985.

A U.S. Navy diver on the plane was shot to death at Beirut airport after the jet was commandeered during a flight from Rome to Athens.

Hans Stercken, chairman of Parliament's foreign affairs committee, said in a radio interview: "Those who are aware of the tendency toward terrorist acts in the Middle East know that the acceptance of blackmail increases the chances of new acts."

The Justice Ministry said Hamadi's extradition to the United States would be accomplished quickly. It had been delayed pending a pledge from the Americans not to apply the death penalty if Hamadi is convicted. West Germany does not have a death penalty.

Foreign Ministry officials renewed a warning against traveling to Lebanon and urged the approximately 200 West Germans living there to leave.

Hamadi, 22, was arrested last Tuesday at the Frankfurt airport after arriving from Beirut. U.S. officials have asked that he be extradited to stand trial in an American court.

Authorities said he was identified by fingerprints as one of those who seized the TWA aircraft June 14, 1985, shot Navy diver Robert Stethem to death and held 39 American passengers hostage for 17 days.

Gunmen seized Cordes, 53-year-old Beirut manager of West Germany's Hoechst chemical company, after he arrived in the Lebanese capital Saturday from Frankfurt.

Friedhelm Ost, chief government spokesman, said the kidnappers had not identified themselves or made demands. He urged the media not to speculate about a possible link between the kidnapping and Hamadi's arrest.

Justice Ministry spokesman Juergen Schmid said the West German government awaited U.S. documents pledging that the defendant would not face a death sentence.

Such a promise is necessary in extradition cases under terms of a 1978 U.S.-West German treaty.

U.S. officials said Sunday they would provide the promise and speed up the paper work.

Schmid said the U.S. documents would be sent to a Frankfurt court for a ruling on whether the terms of the 1978 extradition treaty had been fulfilled.

"First we have to get the documents, then we have to wait for the court's decision," he told reporters. "Only then can we legally extradite him."

"When we do get the documents, then it can go very fast. It is in our interest to do it as fast as possible. We are under obligation to fulfill the terms of the treaty between the U.S. and the West German government as quickly as possible."

The day before Hamadi's arrest in Frankfurt, Italian authorities picked up Bashir al-Khodri, also Lebanese, at the Milan airport.

Sparky considered 'satanic,' target of concerned groups

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

"Sparky," ASU's impish mascot, may be the next target of Christian groups and concerned parents who consider the use of devils as school mascots "satanic."

Two California high schools already have been forced to abandon their devil mascots under pressure from parent groups, and a third high school is fighting to keep its mascot.

Jack Thompson, a born-again Christian and leader of the drive against devil mascots, said he will turn his attention to ASU after he wins in California.

Thompson said the devil mascot contributes to a permissive lifestyle among ASU students.

"We don't have a drug problem at ASU? We don't have kids living together? We don't have a booze problem? We have all of it!" he said.

But right now Thompson is fighting the devil mascot at Apple Valley High School, 80 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

The high school is facing a petition with more than 1,600 signatures to remove the school's mascot.

Tony Balfamo, the principal of Apple Valley High, said several parents protested the mascot during a school board meeting in December.

Balfamo said Thompson told him during the meeting that after they got rid of the Apple Valley Sun Devil, "We're going after Arizona State."

Thompson confirmed that Sparky would be his next target "after winning Apple Valley."

Thompson said his strategy would be to seek the support of prominent Arizona leaders to work toward changing the mascot.

He said the Full Gospel Businessman's Association, a Christian group that strongly opposes the use of devils as school mascots, has a chapter in Phoenix, and he expects their support.

"It may take years, but downstream someplace, someone will say 'We don't need this,'" Thompson said.

Chris Cumiskey, president of the Associated Students of ASU, said Thompson's chances of banning ASU's mascot are "limited."

"If these individuals believe that ASU suffers from moral decadence, it certainly isn't because of the logo of the University," Cumiskey said.

"If it's good enough for the Pope to hold mass here, it's good enough for the institution as well."

Pope John Paul II will hold a Mass in Sun Devil Stadium during his Sept. 14 visit to Phoenix.

Balfamo, an ASU graduate, said Apple Valley High has had its Sun Devil mascot for 20 years without a complaint.

But the Los Angeles Times reported that Donna Davis, a housewife from nearby Victorville, felt the presence of Satan at a 1983 basketball game between Apple Valley and Victorville High School.

"The kids went into a frenzy shouting 'Devils! Devils! Devils!'" Davis said. "I looked down at the floor and there was the face of a smirking devil. I began to pray."

Sun Devil opponents claim that Apple Valley High's mascot partly is responsible for the school's suicide, drug and alcohol problem.

Balfamo said Apple Valley has had some suicide attempts, but that the school's problems were no different than any other.

But Thompson said Apple Valley High has a high drop-out rate, and that once "200 dead rabbits were thrown into the gym, painted green — that's from the devil."

Hendricks said the dead rabbits were jack rabbits — the mascot of Victorville High — and they had actually been thrown onto the Victorville football field the night before a game as a football prank.

"Jack Thompson does not live here, and he doesn't know what goes on," she said.

Balfamo said the vast majority of petition signatures and letters demanding the removal of the mascot came from outside Apple Valley.

"That's probably the thing the kids are most upset about," he said. "It's giving a false impression about what's happening in our valley."

Nelson speaks on tuition, apathy, research, improvement

By BEN MCCONNELL
State Press

(Part two of a two-part interview with ASU President J. Russell Nelson).

Although it is nearly impossible to get him to reveal his private opinions, ASU President J. Russell Nelson let some emotion slip through his otherwise unruffled public relations persona.

A cool, icy grin accompanied his answer of political preferences. He lowered his head and voice when reminiscing about student protests during the Vietnam War.

His second floor Administration Building office reflects his public style: trim and impeccably neat. It resembles a lounge area. The reception area almost seems to be in the way of a hallway thoroughfare, though, as various students, faculty and staff wandered through.

Though Nelson says tuition increases are imminent to sustain future building prospects on campus, he shies away from getting locked into specific tuition jumps.

However, this interview took place last week, before Gov. Evan Mecham's recent call for a $60 fall semester tuition increase.

State Press: Tuition. It will rise to $1,196 a year this fall, a near 20 percent jump from two years ago. You have said tuition will have to rise again to cover future building costs. Currently, ASU has over $100 million in building projects in various stages. How much more building do you want and how will it translate in tuition hikes?

Nelson: The legislature used to appropriate money for building projects. Since 1980, it has not appropriated any money for construction. During the intervening years, enrollment has continued to increase.

In addition to the projects now approved and moving forward, we need a life science building. We need other

'The regents have talked about a policy for tuition, and they indicated they believe the proportion paid by students probably ought to rise.'

— J. Russell Nelson

instructional buildings on campus. The Language and Literature building needs to be enlarged, the Social Science building probably needs some enlargement, engineering has additional needs. . . .

State Press: What kind of tuition hikes can we expect in the next two years?

Nelson: The regents have talked about a policy for tuition, and they indicated they believe the proportion paid by students probably ought to rise.

State Press: So tuition increases can be based on what other universities are charging?

Nelson: We're certainly going to look at that as setting a floor or ceiling, but I think they're more related to Arizona variables, like measures of economic activity, inflation and cost of education.

State Press: On a related tuition note, if it weren't for some University of Arizona students, tuition probably would have risen $96 instead of $60. ASU student protests were minimal compared to U of A protests. This seems to fit in with a general campus apathy. What can be done to combat this?

Nelson: I guess I would have a different view of what accounts for that. I think we had very good discussions between University administration and students on this campus, particularly with student government about tuition charges and about needs of the University.

I believe that the more muted expressions of concern from Arizona State University people reflected an understanding of the needs of the University and a belief that the money raised by the increase in tuition will help deal with those problems.

State Press: So in your mind, you don't see a large amount of apathy toward issues and —

Nelson: Well, what do you see as evidence of apathy?

State Press: As evidence of apathy I saw when U of A had thousands of students protesting the $96 tuition increase whereas ASU had about 100 people. I saw the memorial service for Jerry Smith, a former ASU football player who died from AIDS, had about 15 people show up.

Nelson: Well, what can I say? People respond to issues they're concerned about. Remember that this is a commuter institution and only about 5,000 to 6,000 people live on campus and a few more close to campus. Those are the people I would expect to be most concerned about what's happening at the University. My impression is that those people tend to be involved in the things they're most interested in.

State Press: You were a teacher for many years, teaching finance. How can a teacher balance all of these demands and obligations of research and still be an effective teacher?

Nelson: Well, it's hard work, and it's also very fulfilling work. It's partly having a sense of what is important and then be organized to do it.

I don't think the answer is the same at any given point in an individual's career. There may be some years when you'd really like to spend all of your time teaching, and there may be another year when you'd like to spend a lot of time when you've learned something and you'd like to share it with Whatever the assignment, Pilot has the formula for writing comfort and precision. Pilot's Better Ball Point Pen, in medium and fine points, lets you breeze through long note-taking sessions. In fact, we've made writer's fatigue a thing of the past! This crystal barreled veteran of the campus has a ribbed finger grip for continuous comfort and is perfectly balanced for effortless writing. Best of all, you'll never throw it out because it's refillable.

The perfect teammate to the Better Ball Point Pen is Pilot's Pencilier 0.5mm mechanical pencil. It has a continuous lead feed system and a cushion tip that helps eliminate the frustration of lead breakage. The Pencilier's jumbo eraser does the job cleanly while the ribbed grip offers the same comfort as the Better Ball Point Pen.

Pick up the Pilot Team at your campus bookstore today... The Better Ball Point Pen and The Pencilier.

people in the community.

There may be other times when you're hot on the trail of a discovery when you'd like to spend a disproportionate amount of time doing research.

State Press: Where does the 6 percent budget reversion to the state stand right now?

Nelson: My hope is that some accommodation will be found that makes it possible to recoup the money necessary across the state budget that does not require the University to contribute a disproportionate share or seriously impair the ability to serve.

State Press: Have any reversionments been made thus far?

Nelson: No. The plan Gov. (Bruce) Babbitt announced called for the reversionments to be made in the fourth quarter. The legislature may very well adopt legislation demanding what we have to do. Obviously, we'll do what we have to do, but I need to know what the legislature is going to do first. Then we'll have some opportunity to decide what we're going to do.

State Press: At the Board of Regents' meeting where tuition was raised, you received an $8,600 raise, a 9.2 percent increase. You've considered a job at the University of Wisconsin. Are you happy at ASU?

Nelson: Yes.

State Press: Plan to stay here for years to come?

Nelson: I have no plans to leave.

State Press: It's been rumored you quit for a day over the summer.

Nelson: Rumored I quit for a day?

State Press: But then the next day you changed your mind.

Nelson: (laughing) That's the first time I ever heard that.

State Press: Do you want to make ASU the largest campus in the U.S.?

Nelson: That's never been one of my goals. No. What I'd like to see it do is become one of the best. If you go back to what the regents have said in the mission statement... they said they want to become a major research university, that they wanted it programmed to meet the needs of the state's major metropolitan areas, that they wanted to be a multi-campus university and that they wanted it to become competitive with the best.

State Press: The Harvard of the West?

Nelson: That is not a phrase that I would use because I believe that the mission of a university ought to take into account the circumstances of time and place and situation. And I would like to do in our own way an excellent job. I'd like to see it meet the needs of Arizona and be done in a way that's most appropriate to Arizona State University. That may not be the same as what's appropriate for Harvard, given its situation, its history and its clientele.

State Press: Associated Students seems to thrive on controversy. The student senate will not fund groups like Amnesty International, the Muslim Student Association and the Lesbian Gay Academic Union. Does this seem to smack of discrimination to you, going against the traditional liberal policies of universities?

Nelson: University administration has deliberately elected to take a laissez faire attitude toward the actions of student government. I see student government as an opportunity for people to learn: to learn something about politics, to learn something about management, to learn something about leadership, and to learn about compromise and about working with people.

State Press: Are they learning, in your opinion?

Nelson: In my opinion, yes, they are. That does not mean everybody will be happy with their decisions. I have not always agreed with them, on a lot of things... but (student government) is a very worthwhile activity.

State Press: Where did the University fail in 1986?

Nelson: I thought 1986 was a very good year, and it culminated in a very handsome way in a display something other than apathy — in the Rose Bowl. I know it was on January 1, but it was the culmination of 1986. I thought it was a very good year.

(1987) is the year in which I'll receive the report on the freshman experience. I think that will point the way to improvements in the circumstances of lower-division students, particularly freshman, as we get those recommendations and we get them implemented.

This also is a year in which we'll reach an annual expenditure level of $30 million in research dollars, and that will, I believe, move us in the listing of the major research universities.

State Press: Have any resolutions for the new year?

Nelson: (laughing) None that I'm going to talk about.

State Press: Is there the possibility of an ASU East in Apache Junction or east Mesa?

Nelson: It's always possible there may be other satellite campuses in the future. Right now we're fully occupied with developing ASU West.

State Press: Describe your staff-support system and how they assist you in your decision-making.

Nelson: That's a very broad question. Well, I have several vice presidents, each of whom has an assignment in a

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 6:45 a.m. Monday:

•Police said they found 22 traffic cones in a tool shed behind 717 Alpha Drive. The cones, valued at $154, were reported stolen Jan. 1.

No arrests have been made and the case has been turned over to the Dean of Students.

•Someone broke the window of a 1980 Mazda in Lot 51 and took a Pioneer stereoequalizer, valued at $95, police said.

The thief also destroyed the dash panel and glove box, police said. Damage is estimated at $185.

•A student was stuck in an elevator for a half-hour on the second floor of the Physical Science C-wing until a repairman could be reached.

•Someone broke into a locked car in Lot 51 and stole a blue and white wallet containing $25, a bankcard, checkbook, ASU

ID and an Iowa state driver's license, police said. Loss is estimated at $65.

•The front windshield of a 1980 Pontiac was shattered while parked in Lot 17, police said. Damage is estimated at $90.

•Police questioned a man matching the description of a suspect wanted for causing a disturbance at the Tempe Mission Palms Hotel. He was turned over to Tempe Police for further questioning.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents ending noon Monday:

•Fifteen-hundred dollars worth of video equipment was stolen from Video Time, 2165 E. University Drive, early Sunday morning, police said.

Police said the glass front door of the store had been broken, and witnesses reported hearing the glass break before seeing a blue Oldsmobile drive from the scene.

About one hour after the burglary, Mesa police reported a one-car accident, involving a blue Ford, east of Tempe's border.

Witnesses at the scene of the accident said the driver of the vehicle fled carrying VCRs and a video camera, police said.

•A 1985 Chevrolet Camaro, valued at $12,000, was stolen from an apartment at 1032 E. Curry Road by a man the car owner met at a bar, police said.

Police said the owner, (a woman), met the man, described as an "on-and-off acquaintance," at a bar on Apache Boulevard, and the couple went to the woman's apartment.

She told police the man was intoxicated and disappeared with her car keys while she was in the bathroom.

•Two Caucasian men stole a bottle of whiskey from Walgreen Drug Store, 1719 E. Southern Ave., and threatened to kill a clerk, police said.

The suspects ran from the store with the bottle, but a clerk caught one suspect in front of the store.

Police said the second suspect returned and threatened to kill the clerk with a knife.

Interview

particular area in the University. My expectation is that they will be in charge of that area and that they will bring to me those issues that they think I need to be involved in.

In the office I have three assistants: Larry Mankin, who manages the office and helps to organize the staff-work that flows to me in the form of paperwork and the visitors that come to the office to see me.

Jackie Weatherby is assistant for Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Employment and that's a short-cut to different kinds of legally mandated responsibilities of the University in the area of proper employment practices. She receives complaints or grievances from employees growing out of any kind of discrimination and investigates those complaints and tries to resolve them.

Ann Bergin has recently been appointed assistant to the president to work on a variety of more general assignments dealing in the assistance of speech-making that I do and keeping me in touch with what's going on in the community and on campus.

State Press: What do you do to stay in touch with the needs, the opinions and concerns of students, other than your liaison?

Nelson: Well, Betty Asher is Vice President for Student Affairs. She does quite a bit to keep me in touch with the needs of students, but I also meet regularly with (ASASU President) Chris Cumiskey.

From time to time, I meet with other students, either at their initiative or mine. At least once a month, I run an ad in the State Press, as a matter of fact, and invite students to lunch and take the first 19 who sign up. I know I can't talk to 40,000 students, but I can talk to 19 at a time and spend an hour and a half with those students over lunch or breakfast or some other setting to try to find out what other concerns they may have and what their feelings, attitudes and views of the University are.

Sometimes I will appear in a class at the request of an instructor and talk with students that way. I see them in social situations. So, I wouldn't say I see large numbers of students every day, but in the course of a month I see a significant number of students, and I have not found them shy in telling me their feelings of the University.

State Press: Are you consumed by your job, meaning, do you have to know the many technical points of an issue to make an informed decision or do you rely on your staff?

Nelson: That'll depend on the decision. I'm sure the more you know, the better you feel about your ability to make a decision. I like to know as much as I can about an issue but you can never know everything, partly because time won't permit it and partly because information that might be useful is simply not available or not readily available, and I have to act in a more limited time period.

So, you try to get as much information as you can, organize it in a way that helps form a decision and consult with the people about what you plan to do.

When I make a decision that is going to affect a lot of students, I'd probably talk to some students and certainly consult with members of my staff.

I would say the bulk of the decisions, the operating decisions, are made by other people who are closer — my view is: decisions ought to be made close to the scene of the action as possible because those people know best the people who are going to be affected and the factors that are going to be entering into making decisions.

State Press: In talking about politics, do you have any interest in politics for yourself?

Nelson: Do you mean as in running for political office? No.

State Press: Are you a Republican?

Nelson: I have never felt it necessary to discuss my political leanings in public. (Records in the Maricopa County Recorder's Office show Nelson has been a registered Democrat since September 22, 1981, shortly after becoming president of the University.)

State Press: You were at the University of Minnesota during times of protest nearly two decades ago when ROTC buildings were being burned, campuses were shut down and students assembled in the tens of thousands. What's the difference between students, then and now?

Nelson: They were very difficult times because there were sharply divergent views about a war that was unpopular. That was in the late '60's and early '70's.

My impression is that students have shifted the focus of their education somewhat. They are much more concerned about their personal success, I believe, and about financial success. I think, in general, they are more conservative in their attitudes.

Men swimmers coming off 5 straight wins

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

The fifth-ranked ASU men's swimming team (5-2) is coming off five straight wins, while the women moved to seventh in the national polls despite a fourth-place finish in the Texas collegiate meet last weekend.

"Quickness and speed are more of a factor for us right now than our endurance level," said Ron Johnson, ASU men's swimming coach.

ASU will take on Stanford, the defending national champions, at noon, Saturday in the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center. Johnson said the team must continue to use its speed and quickness to win.

"We need to keep that up when we take on Stanford this weekend, but we also need to work on adjusting our starts and turns," Johnson said.

The Sun Devils are coming off earlier victories against Air Force, Southern Methodist University and New Mexico State.

ASU also competed in the U.S. Open Dec. 5-7 in Orlando, Florida, and qualified ten swimmers for the NCAA Championships while placing fourth overall.

"We qualified in all the relays and this is a definite bonus considering how difficult it is to do this," Johnson said.

The only other team that qualified more swimmers was Florida, with nine.

Johnson attributes much of the team's success this season to good strategy and in how the team trains.

"We are in a tremendous position right now as well as having some of the finest swimmers in the country," he said.

ASU has two swimmers in the top-seeded position, junior Peter Boden, ranked No. 1 in the nation in the 100-meter breaststroke, and senior Andy Jameson, No. 1 in the 100-meter butterfly.

As the team looks ahead to Stanford, Coach Johnson anticipates a very good swim meet.

"We are definitely going to give them a good battle and possibly even upset them," he said.

"Remember, we beat Texas when they were ranked No. 1 in the country."

The ASU women's swimming team left the cold of the Aquatic Center this past weekend for the warmth of Austin, Texas, but found the competition there a little too hot.

The Sun Devils, ranked seventh in the country, participated in the Texas Longhorn Intercollegiate meet this weekend, capturing fourth place in a field of six with a total point score of 478.

"Overall I think we had a good weekend, however I feel that we could have finished in third place," said ASU women's swimming coach Tim Hill.

The Sun Devils narrowly missed third place in the meet due to a disqualification in the 200-meter freestyle relay.

"The judges say that our lead-off swimmer jumped the gun, but from what the videotapes show, that was not the case," Hill said.

The Sun Devils went into the swim meet with three straight victories over NAU, Southern Methodist University and New ASU swimmer Andy Jameson is No. 1 in the nation in the 100-meter butterfly.

Ron Kuczek Jr./State Press

Mexico State and touted a record of 4-1-1.

However, those facts did not seem to hold much water as the Sun Devils fell to No. 1 ranked Texas with 825 points, No. 7 Georgia with 683.5 points and No. 5 UCLA with 513 points.

"Considering that Texas is the best team in the country, we swam pretty well against them," Hill said.

"As far as UCLA goes, they were more solid and had more depth," he added.

Though the Sun Devils, as a team, may not have finished where Coach Hill would have liked, there were a number of individual swimmers who finished first in their respective events.

Women's captain Beda Leirvaag captured first place in the 400-meter individual medley relay, setting a personal best time and breaking her previous school record. Leirvaag's 4:17.21 finish also qualified her for the NCAA Championships in April.

Leirvaag also captured first place and qualified for the NCAA Championships in the 200-meter individual medley relay with a time of 2:05.05.

All-American Terri Baxter captured a first place finish in the 100-meter breaststroke with an NCAA qualifying time of 1:05.33.

Baxter also had an NCAA qualifying time of 2:20.57 in the 200-meter breaststroke.

Coach Hill said the team needs to work on consistency, relay strength and individual problems.

"The USC and UCLA meets definitely gave us a boost and we are gaining momentum," Hill said. "However, we need to stay solid through the whole meet."

Hill and the Sun Devils face yet another challenge this Saturday at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center when they take on No. 2 ranked Stanford at noon.

"Stanford has quite a bit more depth than we do and are a bit more solid," Hill said.

"I wouldn't expect any major upset by us (ASU), but it will be a good measuring stick to see how we match up to the other teams in the conference and the NCAA," he said.

Time to wake up and smell the cagers burning

Steve Patterson

Ron Kuczek Jr./State Press

Sports fans around here are still pretty delirious about the Rose Bowl victory. Unfortunately, football season is over.

And with the passing of the football season, it is time for each and every Sun Devil fan to turn his attention to the basketball program.

But attention is not the only thing that will turn. The fan's stomach is next on the list.

Until Sunday, the Devils were oh-for-'87. With an 80-64 win over the Washington State Cougars, the team is on the board — but still firmly implanted in the cellar of the Pac-10, with a 1-5 conference record.

Some teams aspire to mediocrity, while others have it thrust upon them. The troubles of the basketball team stem from a multitude of unfortunate realities.

First of all, the team lacks a strong inside game. In the Washington State game, there were three guys who scored in double figures: Steve Beck, Arthur Thomas and Bobby Thompson, all guards.

Ironically, this problem does not stem from a lack of competent inside players. The forwards and center Tarre Isiah are in there banging, as the balanced rebounding stats show. Isiah pulled down seven, Mark Carlino grabbed six, Mark Becker had five and Alex Austin chipped in four. No, the problem is not entirely on the big men's shoulders.

When a team's inside players are getting rebounds and not points, it can only mean one thing: the offense is not getting the ball inside. Anyone who is a good enough athlete to rebound is a good enough athlete to score — if he gets the ball when he ought to have it.

Bob Heiler
Sports Editor

So why aren't they getting the rock? There are only two possible answers to that question. Either the guards are not doing what they should be or the offense is poorly designed. A good offense gets the big men open to receive a pass — and good guards pass the ball to them.

So who's screwing up?

Well, the reverse of the previous reasoning is just as true. Anyone who is a good enough athlete to score a lot of points in major college ball — as all of ASU's guards have proven to be — has played the game enough to see and execute good passes. The passes just are not there to be thrown.

So we're back to the poorly designed offense, which brings us inexorably to the conclusion that the team is poorly coached.

Now believe me, I tried to avoid this conclusion. Personally, I like Steve Patterson. He's a nice guy, extremely articulate and very concerned about the welfare of his players. But I really don't see how to avoid the conclusion.

Especially when I go to a game. Against

Young women netters ready for '86 season

By STEVE BRENNAN
State Press

Despite a difficult conference schedule and a relatively young squad, the ASU women's tennis team is enthusiastic and ready to start its 1987 season, coach Sheila McInerney said.

ASU, which finished 21-7 overall and 1-6 in the Pac-10 southern division last season, is ranked 13th nationally in preseason polls but must compete with Stanford and USC, who finished No. 1 and 2 respectively, and with UCLA and Cal-Berkeley, both of whom finished in the Top Ten last year.

McInerney said that though the competition is tough in the conference, it is a good situation for ASU.

"Women's collegiate tennis is California-dominated right now," she said. "But it is good for us to play against the best teams, even though it may hurt our record."

"We've done better every year, and everyone has improved from last season. We know what we're up against. What we want to do is go out to play hard and compete hard, and hope to break through like last year when we defeated UCLA."

Among the returning players, Laura Glitz and Kristi McCormick are playing exceptionally well, and freshman Lisa Haldas is a promising addition to the team, McInerney said.

"Overall, I think the team is playing well," she said. "For their capabilities, Laura and Kristi are playing very well up to this point."

"Lisa is our top recruit this season, and I think she will have a good year. She is really aggressive, and once she has some more matches against tough opponents she will be really solid."

The Sun Devils had three individuals qualify for the NCAA tournament last season, and one of them, senior Carol Coparanis, returns this season.

Overall, there are five seniors on the team; Therese Arildsen, Coparanis, Elise

ASU tennis player Carol Coparanis in practice. Coparanis is one of five returning seniors for the Sun Devils this season.

Richman, Beth Smigel, and McCormick.

McInerney said she is pleased with this season's schedule.

"We have a well-rounded schedule this year," she said. "Our first few matches should be fairly easy, which is good because it will give us confidence going into our conference matches, as opposed to having already lost and having to face Stanford or USC the next week."

ASU will compete on an individual basis next week at the Riviera Invitational in Los Angeles, giving players a chance to play some of the top players in the Pac-10 and PCAA before the regular season.

"The individual tournaments are good for us because the players get more matches against tough players before we play our dual matches," McInerney said.

The Sun Devils play their first three dual matches on the road, beginning at Grand Canyon College on Jan 29. ASU then faces New Mexico State and NAU before coming home to play Colorado University at the Whiteman Tennis Center Feb 9.

Hawkeyes bump UNLV out of AP's No. 1 spot

By The Associated Press

Iowa replaced Nevada-Las Vegas, one-point losers at Oklahoma this weekend, as the No. 1 team in The Associated Press' college basketball poll, ending the Runnin' Rebels' six-week run as the top-ranked team.

Iowa, 16-0, took the No. 1 ranking for the first time in its history as the Hawkeyes received 34 first-place votes and 1,263 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

The Hawkeyes edged North Carolina for the No. 1 spot as the Tar Heels, 15-1, received 28 first-place votes and 1,252 points. Indiana, 14-1, was third with 1,133 points, while Nevada-Las Vegas, which got three first-place votes, had 1,088 points.

Iowa's only game last week was its impressive 91-88 overtime victory at then-No. 8 Illinois in which the Hawkeyes erased a 22-point second-half deficit.

The Runnin' Rebels' first loss of the year came at Norman, Okla. as the Sooners prevailed 89-88 in the nationally televised game. Nevada-Las Vegas had a chance at pulling out the road victory but two shots in the final seconds wouldn't fall and Oklahoma avenged an early-season loss in Las Vegas.

Purdue, 14-1, was fifth giving the Big Ten Conference three of the top five teams. Iowa and Indiana are also members of the Big Ten, which also had No. 9 Illinois, 13-3, in the Top Ten.

DePaul, 14-0, was sixth with 974 points, 200 more than Syracuse, which lost for the first time this weekend, a three-point defeat at Michigan. Temple, 16-2, was eighth with 696 points, 16 more than Illinois.

Clemson, 16-0, the third undefeated major-college team, rounded out the Top Ten with 670 points.

Oklahoma, 12-3, led the Second Ten with 655 points followed by Duke, Alabama, St. John's, Georgetown, Pittsburgh, Auburn, Navy, Texas Christian and North Carolina State.

Last week's Second Ten was Temple, Clemson, St. John's, Duke, Alabama, Oklahoma, North Carolina State, Pittsburgh, Navy and Kansas.

Georgetown, 12-2, fell from ninth to 15th after losing — for the second time this season — to fellow Big East member Seton Hall. The Hoyas, who lost by 21 at home earlier in the season, lost 66-65 to the Pirates last Saturday at The Meadowlands.

Auburn dropped from 10th to 17th after losing to Vanderbilt 91-75. Vanderbilt handed Indiana its only loss of the season.

Texas Christian makes its first appearance ever in the AP's poll.

Wrestlers journey to Midwest, hope to rebound against Big 8

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

The Sun Devil wrestlers will take to the road again this weekend to wrestle three tough Big Eight opponents in dual action. ASU will open up against Oklahoma in Norman, before stopping in Stillwater to wrestle a double dual with third-ranked Oklahoma State and the Nebraska Cornhuskers.

During the Christmas break Coach Bobby Douglas saw his squad fall in the rankings after a road trip to the Midwest. The Devils competed with the nation's elite wrestlers and learned what the competition would be like in March at the NCAA tournament.

The first stop at the Midlands Tournament in Chicago proved to be tough for the Devils. ASU's highest finish was heavyweight Rod Severn, who recorded a fifth place honor. In the 54-team field the Maroon and Gold finished 12th behind such teams as North Carolina, Iowa, Wisconsin and Northwestern.

Severn was wrestling to see who would wrestle for third place against Tom Reese of Maryland and lost 9-8. The ASU heavyweight accepted a forfeit to claim the fifth place honor.

Three wrestlers aided the Sun Devil cause by placing sixth. They were Mike Davies (190 pounds), Travis Fagen (167 pounds) and Chip Park (126 pounds).

"I was pleased with the opportunity to meet people we would see later. We still have a positive attitude," Douglas said.

Injuries have not helped the Devils make it through Christmas break successfully. Four wrestlers have been hampered with injuries.

Don Frye (177 pounds) has suffered a shoulder injury. Glenn McMinn (134 pounds) received a cut to the eye which required stitches at the Virginia Duals; he then received a second cut on the same eye during the Cal State-Fullerton match. Chip Park (126 pounds) and John Ginther (177 pounds) has been ailed with nerve problems.

Ginther, the Sun Devils first-ever freshman all-American, has been out of action since the Sun Devil duals. The 177-pound sophomore will try to participate against Oklahoma and Oklahoma State this weekend.

The Sun Devils made a stop in Iowa City, Iowa to wrestle the fourth-ranked Hawkeyes, but came up empty-handed. ASU was defeated 34-13. Holding the best record on the team (21-5), freshman Zeke Jones (118 pounds) defeated Steve Martin 15-2. At 134 pounds, Glenn McMinn defeated Bubba Strauss 10-4. Junior Rod Severn (HWT) beat Brooks Simpson 4-1.

"Zeke is farther along than anyone on the team as far as goals are concerned," Douglas added.

The Virginia Duals was ASU's last stop before its first home meet in a month. The Sun Devils finished eighth in the 16-team tournament.

"I am disappointed in our overall performance at the Virginia Duals," Douglas said. "We were down both mentally and physically."

ASU opened up the Virginia meet by pummeling Indiana 29-9. Jones went 5-0 in Virginia and picked up his inaugural win over Chip Elderkin. The 118-pound redshirt freshman technical took his Indiana opponent down in 5:57.

In the 134- and 142-pound weight classes Glenn McMinn and Dan St. John notched two wins, respectively. Freshman Tom Ortiz (150 pounds) drew with Scott Duncan 7-7 to aid the Sun Devil cause. Wayne Sharp continued the winning ways by decisioning John Pearson, 2-0 in the 158-pound class.

Co-captains Mike Davies and Rod Severn added to the team points in the 190 and Heavyweight classes. Don Frye picked up an injury default in the 177-pound class for a victory.

ASU added one more victory before the weekend drew to a close, scoring a 23-13 victory over the West Virginia Mountaineers. The Maroon and Gold recorded four wins in the lower weight divisions which paced them to the win column. Jones, Park, McMinn, St. John all decided their opponent.

Sharp (158 pounds), Davies, and Severn also chalked up wins.

ASU had their share of defeats to go along with the wins. The Devils lost to sixth-ranked Northern Iowa, 26-10; Bloomsburg, 24-13; and Minnesota, 24-10.

"January is not the time to be ready," Douglas said. "It is in March. We are going to start zeroing in on the conference. This will give us an idea to see how far we have come and how far we have to go."

Douglas and the Devils were able to wrestle in front of the home crowd last Friday. ASU was in a double dual with Cal St. Fullerton and New Mexico, the two victories enabled the Devils to better their record to 8-6.

In the two meets ASU won big, 34-12 over New Mexico and 27-15 against Cal St. Fullerton. Notching two wins were Jones, St. John, Ortiz, Davies, and Severn.

Following the home meet Douglas commented, "We are wrestling better than we did a week ago. We still have a lot of work to do."

When Douglas and the Devil grapplers take to the road the 13th-year coach knows what has to be done in order to defeat the Big Eight opponents. "We will work like we did earlier this week (preparing for New Mexico and Cal State), concentrating on conditioning and the basics."

The Sun Devils will be on the road until Feb. 17 when they will grapple with the Lumberjacks of NAU.

Devil Connolly named Pac-10 player of the week

Staff and Wire Reports

ASU All-America forward Robin Connolly was named the Pac-10 women's basketball Player of the Week.

The 6-foot senior from Cottonwood, Ariz., scored a career-high of 30 points in a 95-83 victory over Washington State on Thursday, then recorded her school's first "triple-double" against Washington in a 78-64 upset victory on Saturday. Connolly scored 16 points, had 15 assists and grabbed 10 rebounds against the Huskies.

Connolly's career-high 30 points against the Cougars gave the Sun Devils their first Pac-10 victory.

Connolly has now earned the No. 5 spot for the most points scored by an ASU women's player with 1072 and the No. 6 spot for the most rebounds with 479.

In her fourth season at ASU, Connolly has averaged 14.3 points per game (second on the team behind forward Sherry Poole), is shooting 45.6 percent from the floor, averaging 5.8 rebounds per game and has 37 assists.

Currently, she is the third leading scorer on the team and is tied with Poole for the top spot in average rebounds per game.

In her career, Connolly has averaged 11.2 points per game, has shot 46.7 from the field along with 81.1 percent from the free-throw line, and has averaged 5.0 rebounds per game.

UA guard Craig McMillan was named the Pac-10 Conference men's basketball Player of the Week.

McMillan, a 6-foot-6 junior from Cloverdale, Calif., scored 21 points with four assists and four steals in Arizona's 96-69 victory at Washington State last Thursday.

He scored a career high 25 points with four assists in the Wildcats' 73-72 victory at Washington on Saturday.

Giants' Phil McConkey enjoys Superbowl hype

By The Associated Press

COSTA MESA, Calif. — Phil McConkey is not letting Super Bowl XXI pass him by, especially not all the hoopla.

"McConkey has moved up to the No. 1 self-promoter on the team," said New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells. "He's passed (Jim) Burt, (Leonard) Marshall and, of course, (Sean) Landeta."

In Parcells' mind, McConkey is getting more attention than even punter Dave Jennings got in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

"You have to take advantage of what's put before you," said McConkey, who for $1,500 is writing a first-person column on his Super Bowl experience for a New York newspaper, has appeared on numerous radio interviews and is always available for talks with the media.

"You have to have fun doing it and you have to keep it in perspective," said the 29-year-old. "It would be foolish not to take advantage of the opportunity while we're here."

McConkey's presence here for next week's NFL championship in Pasadena against the Denver Broncos tends to defy all odds. A graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, McConkey flew helicopters for four years before being allowed to leave the service because he suffered from seasickness.

In 1983, he tried out with the Giants, but the Navy called him back to complete his five-year commitment and the team put him on a military reserve list. The 5-foot-10, 170-pound wide receiver and kick returner was back again in 1984 — this time making the team with an average amount of talent and a lot of hustle.

"I have wanted to play football since I was a 6-year-old," said McConkey, who set several football records at Navy and was the most valuable player in the 1978 Holiday Bowl. "I enjoyed it. There's no secret to my success. Hard work is no secret and neither are dedication and belief in yourself."

After catching 33 passes in his first two seasons with the Giants, McConkey was released on the final cut this season and signed by the Green Bay Packers. However, when Lionel Manuel went down with an injury and New York's punt return game floundered early on, the Giants acquired McConkey from the Packers for an undisclosed draft pick.

"Green Bay is a good organization and I have a lot of respect for them, but New York is where I always wanted to play," said McConkey, who grew up in Buffalo and was a diehard Bills fan.

Since coming back, McConkey again has become a fan favorite. Wearing his emotions on his sleeve, he sprints the length of the field, throwing his fist in the air to stir up the crowd before each home game.

Quarterback Phil Simms has ribbed McConkey about his new-found attention and tackle Brad Benson says jokingly that McConkey has been difficult to be around.

Heiler

USC, I watched a tired Carlino, left in the game with three fouls and 1:42 to play in the first half, pick up number four on an over-the-back call. In the second half I watched Carlino and Isiah, with four fouls apiece, play for minutes on end while Austin and Tyrone Mitchell, a guard, spelled each other at forward and Uvonte Reed warmed the bench. The Trojans scored at least five baskets because Isiah and Carlino were too careful on defense, trying to avoid the fifth foul.

At the end of the game I watched a team with three timeouts fail to take one when they were down two points with less than a minute to play. The ball was turned over.

In short, I watched a team with a lot of talent and a 14-point lead at halftime lose a game to the Trojans, one of the worst teams in this cosmos.

Now it always amazes me how little interest there is in Sun Devil basketball. We sell 6,000 tickets on a great day, the Wildcats outnumber us in our own gym every year, and the only section that ever cheers is the one where the band sits. It's really kind of sad.

But when a team has a conference record of 1-5, it can hardly expect people to turn out in droves for the games. If we ever had a game on Tuesday night, I might stay home and watch "Moonlighting" myself.

If the team wants to draw crowds, it has to win some games. And if it wants to win games, it has to get the ball inside. Isiah needs to be a major scoring threat, and Becker needs to lose the freshman jitters.

With the Wildcats coming to town on Jan. 29, I sure hope they get what they need quickly.

Wednesday, January 28

HOUSE ACTIVITIES

Thursday, January 29

HOUSE ACTIVITIES

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday are activities days. Each house will have activities between 4 p.m. and 12 a.m. These may include such activities as ice skating, barbecues, dances, or a band party at a local resort. The individual house activity schedules can be obtained at the houses or by contacting their individual rush chairmen.

Friday, January 30

IFC RUSH ENDS AT 12:00 NOON

RUSH RULES and INFORMATION

Rush Registration

You must be registered through the Interfraternity Council to be eligible to participate in Rush. This includes your completed Rush registration form and a check made payable to Interfraternity Council for $5.00. You may register at the Greek Life office in Palo Verde Main by Monday, January 26.

Alcohol Policy

The Interfraternity Council has implemented a dry Rush format which prohibits fraternities from offering alcohol throughout the week. If during this period from January 26 to 30 you are offered an alcoholic drink, DO NOT accept it. Accepting the drink may cause problems for you, as well as the fraternity.
