Protesters ask Nelson to reverse resolution for weapons research

By TINA DAUNT and BEN McCONNELL
State Press

In a meeting that surprised ASU President J. Russell Nelson with its number of supporters, almost three dozen nuclear weapons protesters asked the president to reverse his rejection of a resolution prohibiting weapons research at ASU.

Nelson said he was expecting only two or three antinuclear representatives.

Steve Wolodkin, the president of United Campuses Against Nuclear Annihilation and senior liberal arts major, said the group told Nelson "the research and development of weapons for mass destruction is inconsistent with the mission of the University to enhance quality of life."

Last week, Nelson rejected a 3-year-old Faculty Senate resolution prohibiting research directed toward the development of nuclear, chemical or biological weapons at ASU. He said the resolution "would have limited academic freedom."

Nelson said the resolution would inhibit research inherent or remotely connected to the types of arms research the resolution sought to ban.

But during the closed-door meeting, the protesters, including faculty and students, argued that "the research of dangerous weapons . . . limits academic freedom."

Afterward, Wolodkin said, "Nelson did not adopt the resolution because he thought ASU would be pulled to one side. But by not accepting the resolution, ASU already is being polarized."

"Continuing to do research will only lead to nuclear war — the ultimate compromise of academic freedom."

Associated Students President Chris Cumiskey, who attended the meeting, said he agreed with Nelson.

"The University has to be in a position to act in all sides," he said.

Although Cumiskey did not agree with the protesters' views, he said "further discussions of this nature should take place because there are people on both sides who feel strongly."

Nelson has not completely closed the door on the resolution. In his address to the Faculty Senate last week, he said, "Nothing is ever finally resolved in a university. I have an open mind on it. It's a discussion I'm prepared to engage in."

But Nelson said the protesters were more concerned about research for Strategic Defense Initiative, or Star Wars, than the weapons research resolution.

Before the meeting, education professor Richard Wootton told an audience of about 35 people in the MU that the problem with President Reagan's Star Wars plan is the United States would provide the technology to the Soviet Union.

"Then it'll protect everyone and brotherhood will be brought to the world," Wootton said. "Gosh, what a guy."

But there are more missiles in the world than Star Wars can destroy, Wootton said, thus rendering the system useless.

Members of the Coalition for World Peace, a local group whose members include more than a dozen ASU professors and students, made up most of the audience.

The coalition's theme is "Nuclear destruction inhibits learning!"

According to the U.S. Congressional Office of Technology Assessment, Star Wars will cost $25 billion over the next five years and $1 trillion ultimately.

The federal deficit was $1 trillion when Reagan took office in 1980.

Star Wars proposes the use of land-based laser technology to destroy incoming Soviet Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles and their multiple warheads by reflecting lasers off stationed satellites in space.

"All this talk of strategy is horrible," Wootton said. "We ought to think, as (retired newscaster Walter) Cronkite does, that the best route is unilateral disarmament."

"If we implement Star Wars and reject disarmament, it would be the single most catastrophic decision ever made in history."

Wootton said Reagan has used the possibility of Star Wars to destroy SALT II, the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty. SALT II, established and negotiated by former President Jimmy Carter, was never ratified by Congress. The treaty expired in late 1986.

"(Times) are better in that the world has lived another forty years (since World War II)," Wootton said. "(Times) are better dramatically in that (Soviet leader Mikhail) Gorbachev says the (Soviet Union) will work for a 50 percent build-down in five years and total elimination of nuclear weapons in 10, with essential verifiability."

Student court to give funding to ASU groups

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

The Associated Students Supreme Court announced Monday that it will allow the funding of campus clubs and organizations to proceed despite protests from two groups denied funding.

The court decided in deliberations over the weekend to deny the request of the Lesbian and Gay Academic Union and Students Against Apartheid to uphold ASASU President Chris Cumiskey's veto of the spring appropriations bill.

Tom Stillwell, president of the Student Bar Association and counsel for the plaintiffs, got a temporary restraining order from the court Dec. 11, postponing the distribution of more than $10,000 to 52 campus groups.

The plaintiffs claimed that Executive Vice President Bridget Shelton, the defendant, made an error in parliamentary procedure during a special session of the senate Dec. 9.

Stillwell accused Shelton of "riding roughshod" over the senate and making a parliamentary error, resulting in the veto being overridden on a second override attempt.

The court said the question of parliamentary error is "moot in terms of legality" because the senate's first override attempt actually was legitimate.

The court, after consulting with an expert parliamentarian, decided that abstentions, which had been previously counted as ballots cast, did not count.

Deleting the abstentions from the first override vote lowered the number of votes needed to reach the required two-thirds.

Without the abstentions, the first override passed, and thus made any further considerations of Shelton's actions by the court unnecessary.

A meeting for groups funded by the bill will be 3:30 p.m. Thursday in the MU Arizona Room.

Shelton said she was "very pleased with the decision of the court."

"I think this is the reasonable and really only possible end to the dispute," she said.

Stillwell said he respects the decision of the court, but said the senate "did the wrong thing the right way."

"We wanted the senate to have a chance to reconsider," he said. "We regret it did what it did, but I agree with the statement of the court that (the override) must have passed (on the first attempt)."

Cumiskey originally vetoed Senate Bill 45, the measure appropriating funds to campus clubs, because he said he "could not be party to or condone an appropriations process riddled with inconsistencies."

The senate refused to fund the LGAU and Students Against Apartheid based on an ASASU bylaw that prohibits the funding of any groups deemed "political" or "controversial."

The LGAU has threatened to file a civil lawsuit against ASASU in order to obtain funding, and a spokesman for the group said further legal developments will be announced in February.

Shelton said the suit "was really a waste of everyone's time."

"I think it shows that some groups are self-centered, and they are willing to hold up the funding of many organizations in an effort to coerce the senate into funding them with a ridiculous suit based on technicalities," she said.

ASU clubs, services featured for students at Activities Fair

By AARYN KEMP
State Press

Students may learn about campus clubs at the Activities Fair Wednesday on West Lawn.

The fair, co-sponsored by Associated Students and REACH, will be held from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. It is an exhibition of clubs, organizations, departments and services available on campus.

John Fees, administrative assistant to the ASASU activities vice president, said at least 65 booths will be at the fair.

Paul Biwan, the program director for REACH, said this is the first time the fair is being offered in the spring semester.

"Because there are about 3,000 new students each semester at ASU, the fair is a way to help them know what's available on campus," he said.

Biwan said that the Activities Fair is an excellent opportunity for new, transfer and seasoned students to find out about clubs, organizations and services at ASU.

"We want to enhance a more festive atmosphere at the fair, an aspect that is a change from the past, to try and attract more people," Biwan said.

The fair will include "The Mutts," a pop band from Los Angeles, and several artists from the Renaissance Fantasy Fair, including a fiddler, a troll and a tightrope-walker, Biwan said.

Free popcorn will be available.

Reduced funding hampers College of Education

By MICHAEL ROWELL
State Press

The College of Education is working hard to develop programs, but the pinch of budget cutbacks is holding it back, Gladys Johnston, the college's dean, said.

Johnston said student advisement and programs such as job placement have suffered this semester because of University-wide cuts. She said the diversity of classes the college can offer also will be limited.

The number of full-time faculty and field-experience supervisors is also "inadequate," Johnston said.

"We didn't cut classes, but we had to decrease our delivery of student services," she said.

Johnston said a commitment to offering students the courses they need to graduate has forced the college to make cuts in other areas.

Johnston, who has been dean since May, said the cuts are making it difficult for her to initiate a lot of the reforms she would like to see.

"It's coming at a time when colleges of education all across the country are being criticized and the expectation and the demands are being placed upon the colleges to improve," she said.

As part of this improvement effort, ASU recently became a charter member of the Holmes group, a consortium of over 90 research universities committed to educational reform.

The University community will also be considering recommendations from the Carnegie Commission, an organization advocating changes in teacher training.

"Most of the improvements that have been recommended are things that will cost money," Johnston said. "People are mandating and expecting us to do more with less."

"It places greater burden and responsibility on those people who are charged with bringing about reforms."

In a study released by Associated Students in October, the College of Education, along with the College of Business, was cited as having academic advisement problems.

Johnston said she has worked to improve advisement, but problems still exist due to lack of funds.

According to Johnston, waiting for more than an hour for advisement is not uncommon.

"(With the cutbacks) I'm not going to be able to improve those areas in which I have received some criticisms," she said. "I do need to hire more advisers."

Johnston said she would deal with any further cuts by providing students with required courses and activities. But she said class size, number of full-time faculty and student services would suffer.

"Our budget is much smaller than most colleges in the University and so whatever the cuts are, it hits the college pretty hard."

"I can do what I'm doing, but I can't do it as well as I would like to, and I can't move into the areas that I would like to see our students exposed to."

Johnston said despite funding difficulties, the college has made steps towards improvement.

Increased admissions standards are part of this effort to improve educational quality. Johnston said studies show that increased standards draw more and better educated people to education.

"We expect that by increasing and making our standards more rigorous, that will actually increase the numbers of people that are interested in teaching as a career," she said.

Another reform which Johnston stressed was the introduction of field placement of first-semester education students, "so they have three semesters of field experience prior to student teaching."

The college also has established 14 teaching centers in school districts around the state, the goal being to blend the goals and objectives of the College of Education with those of the districts.

Gladys Johnston

But due to budget reductions, Johnston said in a report that these centers "lack staff to properly monitor the integration of campus course work with field experiences."

In the future, Johnston said the college will be testing students both during and at the completion of their program of study.

Johnston said these tests would not prohibit any student from graduating, but would show where students are weak and help the college make further improvements.

Mecham signs final budget legislation; ASU loses millions

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — Gov. Evan Mecham, saying education in Arizona has not been affected by budget cuts, signed legislation Monday that slashes more than $157 million from state budgets.

Mecham's signature ends seven months of work on the budget that former Gov. Bruce Babbitt began to avoid a fiscal shortfall in 1986-87.

Under the final version, ASU must return more than $10.6 million to the state treasury.

Mecham praised Republican leadership in both the Arizona House and Senate for pushing the cuts through a five-day special session last week.

"I think they did a very, very good job," he said. "It's never an easy task, and it's never an easy exercise."

Mecham said education was not cut in the process, although more than $29.3 million will be axed from budgets at ASU, NAU and UA.

Alan McGuire, a Mecham staff member, said the governor only was referring to elementary and secondary education and not to the universities.

"There were no cuts to K-12," Mecham said. "Little children are demonstrating against me when there have been no cuts."

The cuts equal about 7 percent of ASU's budget. The Arizona Board of Regents voted Jan. 16 that cuts should be held to about 4.5 percent of the budget.

Regent President Jack Pfister said Monday the board was willing to deal with the Legislature's decision.

"I think we understand what the Legislature did and why they had to do it," he said. "It doesn't do much good to be upset about it."

Pfister said the board is concerned with the implications of the budget cuts on the University, which will include hiring freezes and purchasing delays.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson said the revenues that must be returned to the state will come mostly from canceled classes, unfilled faculty positions, reduced travel budgets and cuts in University purchases.

"It's naturally disappointing to have to give back $10 million that could be used to benefit students," Nelson said.

Mecham's 1987-88 budget is due out Wednesday. Members of both houses are expecting even deeper cuts in funding for the universities.

Contemplating eternal questions part of college

What do ASU students think about?

This is what happens when you're a sophomore in college. I become bored with the same old routine, and I find myself beginning to look at things in a slightly bizarre way.

The other day a characteristic of my daily routine made me start contemplating this idea of what people think about.

How do the gate arms of the campus parking lots know when to close after a car has passed through them?

Now, I know that I'm not the only one who has thought about this. In fact, I can't take the credit for thinking about it first. That honor goes to my buddy who was in the car with me. But I'd be willing to bet all of you have thought about it, too.

My first semester at this campus, I witnessed the funniest thing I think I will ever see. An older gentleman was having a bit of trouble getting his gate key to work. He tried it several times and finally ended up driving his car through the arm.

After demolishing the gate, he got out of his car, picked up the arm and announced he was taking it to J.R.'s (President Nelson's) office.

Many times upon arriving at my lot, I will discover that my gate key is nowhere in sight. Then I remember that it's sitting at home on my dresser. I really don't want to drive all the way home. You know it is such a pain!

On one particular day, I was late — very late. I drove up to the gate, there was no card and I became instantly distraught.

Then it hit me — a clever idea to save myself from yet another embarrassing glare from my English professor. I pulled out from the lot and waited for someone else to drive in. They pulled out their handy-dandy key, the arm went up, they drove through, and I was right behind them all the way!

Amy Frischknecht

I was concerned about the possibility of that arm crashing down on the back of my truck, but just like many other times in my life, I squeaked by without a scrape.

After remembering these events, I'm thinking these gates are really worthy of a spot in this column.

Why are some diseases named after countries and cities?

We've all heard about the Asian Flu, the Chicago Cold, the dreaded Valley Fever and, the biggie that is gaining popularity in Arizona, the Taiwan Flu.

How did this Taiwan Flu get here in the first place?

Are these diseases imported here for our pleasure and enjoyment? They develop their own disease, stamp it with 'Made In Taiwan,' and send one of their representatives over here disguised as a tourist to spread it around.

Very clever stuff.

Kind of like a 'Cold' war.

Ooh. That one was bad!

I wonder, is there ever an outbreak of the Yankee Doodle Flu in China?

Will anyone be extremely distraught if Oral Roberts doesn't raise enough money for God's ransom? Gosh, I hope God never puts a $4.5 million price on my head. I don't think I've got that many friends. Actually, I don't think the friends I do have love me enough to shell out that kind of money.

Wouldn't it be terrible if the price was met and then the next day good ol' Oral died of a severe case of the Taiwan Flu. Stranger things have happened.

Somebody ought to tell those foreigners to keep those darn diseases to themselves!

It is my belief that anyone attending ASU can't honestly consider themselves a full-fledged college student until their parking ticket situation reaches the delinquent stage.

I'm a delinquent.

And proud of it.

But I wonder. Who are these people who spend their days writing out tickets and clamping boots to cars? And who are these spotters that hang out in the Tempe Center parking lot?

How does one become a spotter?

Do you need a degree for this kind of work? Spotters are probably students who got booted and couldn't afford to have it removed. It's the same principle as if you went to a fancy restaurant and couldn't afford to pay the bill.

Washing dishes. Clamping boots. Sounds similar to me.

Just what do ASU students think about?

I wonder, do they think at all?

In nuclear memorium . . .

Editor:

Today is the anniversary of the first nuclear explosion at the Nevada Test Site, an hour's drive north of Las Vegas. Without testing at the NTS, the development of the extremely accurate and massively destructive weapons which threaten life on Earth could not have been possible.

Weapons which are capable of initiating a first strike could not have been produced. Intercontinental ballistic missiles with multiple warheads could not have been developed. The nuclear arms race would have stagnated.

Why do we explode nuclear bombs on American soil every three weeks? The Reagan administration claims that testing is necessary to assure the reliability of the existing nuclear stockpile. But nuclear physicists and engineers tell us that we can test nuclear weapon reliability without the actual detonation of nuclear explosives. Besides, even if not testing would reduce our reliability in our nuclear weapons, it would act to our advantage because this would discourage the Soviets (and the United States, who would comply with a bilateral verifiable test ban as long as the U.S.S.R. would) from launching a first strike.

While the overkill we possess is overwhelming, we (as well as an aggressor) must be sure of our weapons' reliability or a first strike would be too risky.

Then the government told us that a comprehensive test ban would be impossible to verify because the Soviets refuse to allow monitoring stations on their soil to complement national technical means of verification (such as satellite surveillance). Every president since Eisenhower has sought CTB (except Reagan), but because of the U.S.S.R.'s unwillingness to cooperate, it has not been possible. Then, in 1986, in an unprecedented and unexpected move, the Soviets allowed monitoring stations to be set up at various places in their country which would render undetected cheating impossible. For the first time in history, it is possible and extremely easy to stop the insane escalation of the nuclear arms race forever, keep currently non-nuclear countries from going nuclear and fulfill our international treaty obligations via a CTB.

So what did the Reagan administration do? They decided that they don't really want to stop the arms race at all. They decided that the equivalent of 4.5 tons of TNT for every man, woman and child on Earth is not enough.

What about the Russians? If we stop testing, couldn't they surprise us with breakthroughs that might alter the strategic balance? No, they couldn't, because a CTB would be bilateral and verifiable. The development of a new nuclear weapon requires hundreds of tests. If the Soviets resumed testing, and there would be no way to hide such activity, we would resume testing and would remain ahead technologically as we are now.

A CTB would enhance our national security because it would keep the Soviets from any new developments. As even military leaders and Reagan administration officials will concede, we are ahead in every area of militarily significant technology. A CTB would maintain this situation.

The U.S.S.R. unilaterally ceased testing in August, 1985 and agreed to stop forever if we joined them. Even though both houses of Congress have passed bills in favor of a CTB, a majority of Americans polled consistently want one, and the U.S.S.R. has extended its moratorium four times, Reagan refuses to represent the legitimate interests of the American public. The U.S.S.R.'s unilateral action has expired as of Dec. 31, 1986, and they will resume testing after the United States explodes another bomb in Nevada on Feb. 5. The most significant opportunity in history to bring us back from the brink of nuclear holocaust is being ignored by the current administration. But the Soviets have let their offer stand. All we have to do is stop at any time, and they will do likewise. The nuclear arms race will grind to a halt.

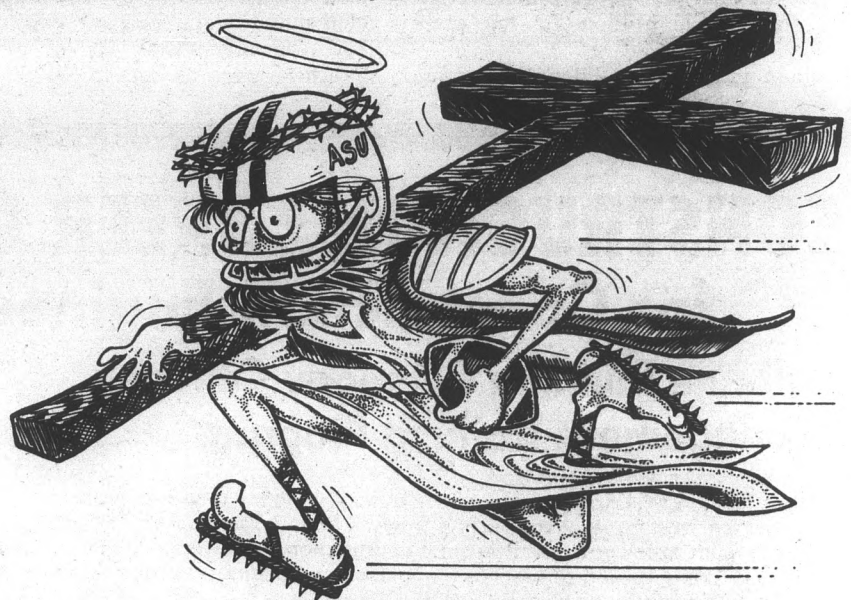

United Campuses to Prevent Nuclear War at ASU is sponsoring a rally today to commemorate the significance of this anniversary as well as of the test on Feb. 5. Deanna Kahn, a local activist and ASU graduate, and I will speak and answer questions in front of Hayden Library at noon. Your future (or lack of one) depends on our seizing this historic opportunity. Please stop by on your way to lunch. It may be the most important lunch break you ever take.

Catching welfare cheats keeping President busy

There have been recent reports that President Reagan's attention span is getting shorter, and he keeps wandering away from the subject at hand.

One article written by Martin Tolchin in the New York Times reported U.S. Rep. Robert Michel, the House Republican leader, urged the president to support a federal health insurance program for catastrophic illness.

Reagan responded to the request by telling a story about a welfare family living in a plush hotel in New York at enormous cost to the taxpayer.

When it was pointed out to the president that health insurance is not a welfare program, Reagan is said to have repeated the story again.

Before anyone comes to any conclusions that the president has changed since the Republicans lost the Senate and the United States lost the contra money in Switzerland, let me say the story of a welfare family living in a plush hotel in New York has been bugging Reagan for six years.

White House sources say the president is

Art Buchwald
Los Angeles Times
Syndicate

obsessed with finding this family and showing them up for what they are — liberal chiselers feeding at the government trough.

The problem Reagan has in producing the family is that he heard the story about them secondhand.

He can't remember who told it to him, and so he has been forced to instigate a search himself.

It's taken up a great deal of his time.

They say the president will sit in his Oval Office late at night studying a map of Manhattan.

Then he'll pick up the phone and speak to Federal Bureau of Investigations Director William Webster.

"Bill, did you find them yet?"

"No, Mr. President. But we're thinking of organizing a sting operation and offering free rooms in the Ritz Carlton to anyone now on welfare. We think that way we could smoke them out."

"What about the Plaza, Bill?"

"We've got every room wired and we're giving lie detector tests to anyone who gets on the elevator."

"They have to be somewhere," the president protests. "A welfare family can't just disappear among eight million people in a city like New York."

Mr. Webster says, "The FBI swat team is raiding Mrs. Helmsley's Palace tomorrow."

"Be careful, Bill. A welfare family who lives in a deluxe hotel can be very dangerous."

The president hangs up and buzzes the Air Force command center. "Any photos of the welfare family who are living off the fat of the land?"

"No, sir. Today's satellite pictures show nothing but a string of muggings and a dozen city commissioners being paid off by contractors."

Don Regan comes in, "Mr. President, do you want to check over this trillion-dollar budget?"

"Don, if you were a welfare cheat, what fancy hotel would you hole up in in New York?"

"How about the Hilton?"

"That's a thought. Why don't we stay there the next time we're in the city? Then when I'm taking a nap, Pat Buchanan can hold you up on his shoulders and you can peek over the transoms."

"I think you ought to read this latest Senate report which tells how badly you fouled up on the Iran business."

"What I'd like to do," says Reagan, "is drag the entire family on television and show the American people what kind of welfare bums are living in our best hotels these days."

"That's fine, sir. Now what do you want to do about the contras in Nicaragua?"

"Fly them up here and have them search the Waldorf Astoria room by room."

Former ASU student hospitalized following electric shock

By LAUREN MILLETTE
State Press

A former ASU liberal arts major suffered severe electrical burns after he broke into the Physical Science D-wing early Sunday morning and bumped his elbow on a 13,000 volt ventilator switch, police said.

ASU Police Chief C. Russell Duncan said John Lawrence Higbee, a 21-year-old Mesa man, entered the building through an outside grate at about 3:40 a.m. Higbee dropped down a 14-foot shaft into the basement.

Police said Higbee could not exit the building the same way he entered so he broke into an adjacent room, which controls the University power supply, looking for a way out.

The transformer room was dark, and Higbee apparently did not see the electrical equipment stored in the room, police said.

Officer Melissa Oracion said a jogger discovered him, yelling for help, at 8:11 a.m.

"It was really bizarre," Oracion said. "He was still conscious and talking when we arrived."

"He had burns all over him, but he was still coherent. It's amazing — it only takes 2,000 volts of electricity passing through an electrocution chair to put someone to death."

Higbee was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital emergency room and later was air-evacuated to the Maricopa County Hospital burn unit, where he remains in guarded condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Higbee received third-degree burns to 40 percent of his body, including his arms, legs, back, chest and pelvic area. He also sustained a cut on his head when he fell after being shocked.

Higbee went into surgery Sunday afternoon at the burn unit, but hospital staff would not reveal what type of surgery was performed.

Dawn Neve, head nurse at the burn unit, said the amount of electricity it takes to kill someone varies from person to person.

"It depends on the part of the body the electricity enters and path it follows through the body, the length of time the person is in contact with the electricity and the victim's state of health," she said.

"If a high amount of electricity flows through vital organs, like the heart, brains and lungs, chances of survival are greatly reduced."

Neve said there is no accurate way of medically tracing the path electricity follows in an electrically-shocked patient except for examining the burned parts of the body. But she said it is still not a precise measurement.

University police Lt. Craig Emanuel said ASU police did not arrest Higbee for breaking and entering because they were more concerned with getting him medical help.

"Our main concern was getting him to the hospital," Emanuel said. "By law, we have up to a year to file any charges. We wouldn't even consider interviewing him until we know he is in good condition."

Higbee last registered at ASU in December 1985. He enrolled in two classes at Mesa Community College this semester, but dropped one class last week and the second on Monday.

Local police arrest 2 men in connection with cocaine sales

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

More than $300,000 in cocaine was seized late last Thursday when two Phoenix men were arrested and charged with selling cocaine to undercover Tempe police officers.

Robert J. Harvill, 19, 3511 W. Baseline Road, and Ismal L. Holguin, 28, 1323 W. Dobbins Road, were arrested in a parking lot at 1606 W. Baseline Road. The men had $330,000 of cocaine wrapped in cellophane bags.

An 18-year-old woman was arrested but not charged in the case.

Sgt. John Blaisdell, Tempe police narcotics division, said the arrest came as a result of an on-going investigation.

Blaisdell said both men violated probations. Harvill was on probation for criminal trespassing, according to Maricopa County Jail records.

Holguin had been arrested for burglary in the past, Blaisdell said. County jail records showed only that he violated a hold in a probation but did not mention what Holguin was on probation for.

Blaisdell said this was the third "sizable" bust in the last three months.

On Nov. 4, Tempe police seized $750,000 of cocaine when a California man allegedly sold the drug to undercover officers at the La Quinta Inn, 911 S. 48th St.

Tempe police seized $300,000 worth of cocaine on Nov. 14 when a ASU student allegedly offered police officers a kilogram of cocaine at the Cornerstone Shopping Center, 900 E. University Drive.

Blaisdell said none of the cases are connected. He said Tempe police are finding large quantities of cocaine in Tempe because of the high number of middle to upper class people who live in the city.

Use of false IDs widespread, according to MIT professor

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

"How many of you had false I.D.s to buy liquor when you were kids?"

About five of the 30 people in the MU Mohave Room raised their hands in affirmation when Professor Gary Marx asked this question Monday afternoon.

Marx, an MIT professor of urban studies, spoke on the topic of fraudulent identification, which he said is "a social issue waiting to happen."

"The use of fraudulent identities is increasing significantly in American society," and includes activities as diverse as ethnic and religious passing, welfare cheating, transvestism and immigrants with fake documents, he said.

Marx cited several examples of deception, including:

- A woman in California who owned a mansion and a Rolls Royce but bilked welfare of $18,000 by claiming 46 children;
- The staff of Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., who obtained a doctoral degree for Pepper from a fraudulent California university for $17,080 and four book reports;
- And a San Francisco man who posed as a state game warden, gave citations and confiscated fish.

"He said he loved fish and always wanted to be a game warden," Marx said.

The increase in the general willingness to deceive is rooted in the development of industrial society and the welfare state, he said.

Marx said bureaucracies often can be manipulated to render undeserved services by people who supply them with false information.

"If we looked into the records here, I'd bet we'd find some students listed as Arizona residents who aren't," he said.

Such dishonesty leads government agencies and private corporations to make extensive background checks on individuals, which works against individual freedom and privacy, he said.

Marx said apartment owners rely on firms which use computers to screen prospective renters who had been served eviction notices or had participated in rent strikes.

He told the story of a woman who refused to pay rent until her landlord repaired a ceiling that had collapsed on her.

Her name found its way into the computer data base of a private screening firm, and she later was unable to rent an apartment until she changed her name, he said.

Marx said people are forced to assume false identities in order to survive in many cases like this.

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 7 a.m. Monday:

•Officers were called to the Physical Science D-wing to check out a cloud of smoke and major power failure, police said.

An alarm in the wing malfunctioned and the alarm system at the ASU police dispatch office went down at the same time, police said.

An electrician repaired the overloaded system and reset the alarm board. Police said the alarm system failure may have been caused by a power shortage at the Physical Science D-wing, which occurred minutes earlier.

Police said alarms at the ASU Bookstore, Student Health Pharmacy and Business Administration Center also malfunctioned.

•A large water leak in the Physical Science D-wing could have damaged ventilators in the basement, but police said the water did not reach the equipment.

•A juvenile was roller skating down a tunnel ramp at Grady Gammage Auditorium, when she crashed into a concrete wall, police said.

The girl was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital, where she was treated for a sprained ankle and released, the hospital staff said.

•Someone broke the windshield of a 1987 Ford Mustang and put several scratches on the sides of the car, police said. Estimated damage is $500.

•Police stopped a Tempe man in front of Primo's restaurant, 735 E. University Drive, for having expired registration, police said.

•A men's red 5-speed bicycle, valued at $200, was stolen from bike racks at Manzanita Residence Hall, where it was locked, police said.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents ending noon Monday:

•A Tempe woman was arrested for stabbing her boyfriend in the arm with a large kitchen fork, police said.

The woman stabbed the man several times when he tried to open their apartment door.

Police said the woman did not want the man to come into their home because she thought he had been drinking and would beat her.

•A Tempe man stole a VCR from The Chapel of Faith Evangelical Free Church and traded it for a gram of cocaine, police said.

Police said the man was living at the church. He told the pastor he had stolen the VCR.

The pastor telephoned police and said he wanted to file a report but not prosecute.

•Tempe police said someone broke into an office complex at 4625 S. Wendler Drive, and caused about $7,000 in damage.

The person entered the complex by breaking a window and then broke into 15 business offices. Police said $40 was missing.

•An unknown person removed a roof vent and stole $3,000 in tools and equipment from Top Notch Upholstery, 2344 E. Broadway Road, police said.

•Someone stole $2,105 in jewelry from Paradise Jewelers, 105 E. Southern Ave., police said.

Police said the person threw rocks through a display window and took the jewelry.

•A Tempe man was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital for possible head injuries after being punched in the face, police said.

Police said the man could not remember what happened, but a witness said a Caucasian man, 30-to 40-years-old, 6 feet tall and 220 pounds assaulted him.

Women cagers win in Berkeley to split road trip

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

The ASU women's basketball team (3-5 in the Pac-10, 8-8 overall) left for the Bay area of California looking for their first conference road victory and a possible sweep of conference rivals Stanford and California-Berkeley.

The Sun Devils accomplished one but not the other, dropping their first match on to Stanford 92-77, but rebounding Saturday to defeat Berkeley 86-78.

The Sun Devils went into Thursday's game against the Cardinal (4-2 in the Pac-10 and 10-6 overall) with a two-game winning streak under their belts and the hope, according to assistant coach Peggy Hall, that their game would be as effective on the road as it was at home.

"We were concentrating on our strengths and looking for the most effective way to deal with the height advantages of the two teams," Hall said.

ASU appeared to stay even with Stanford during the first half, shooting 48 percent from the floor compared to 52 percent for the Cardinal.

However, the halftime score didn't reflect a close game; ASU got into foul problems and Stanford capitalized, going for 8 from the free-throw line to lead 42-32.

The second half held more of the same: foul trouble. ASU lost the services of leading scorer Sherry Poole, who fouled out with only three points and three rebounds.

"This really hurt us a lot, especially when our top scorer fouls out and you still have over five minutes to go in the game," Hall said.

"This was a key factor in why we lost."

Another factor in the loss was Stanford guard Jennifer Azzi, who led all scorers with 18 points.

"Every time she was in the game, she pumped up the team and they did really well," Hall said. "When she was out of the game, Stanford didn't play well and we did."

There were four Sun Devils who took up the slack and ended up in double figures.

All-America Robin Connolly went 6 for 15 from the floor, scoring 16 points. She also took down six rebounds.

Patti Pepler, who needed five points to move ahead of Cathy Aiken and into eighth on the ASU all-time scoring list, pumped in 16 points, had seven rebounds and three steals.

Devils ready for opener; Brock calls pitching key

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

As the Sun Devil baseball team nears Friday's regular season opener against San Francisco, ASU coach Jim Brock said he believes the key to success this season lies on the pitching mound.

Brock said with the addition of seven junior college pitching transfers and the hiring of pitching coach Dub Kilgo, he likes the chances this team has of emerging from the darkness that has shrouded the baseball program the past two years and returning ASU to the NCAA tournament.

"The main emphasis of our off-season program was to improve the pitching staff," he said. "We spent a great deal of time recruiting solid pitchers, and I believe we'll be a far more effective staff."

But with the numbers ASU pitchers posted last year, it would be difficult to get much worse.

The Sun Devils compiled an ERA of 6.61 during 1986. But that figure jumped to 8.35 against Pac-10 Southern Division teams.

Although ASU opponents actually had a worse (6.68) ERA against the Devils overall, Six-Pac teams generated a 4.87 ERA.

Last year's Sun Devils had some embarrassing games. They were blown out by California, 29-6, and lost to Arizona in the final two games of the season, 18-2 and 22-11.

"If the pitching does not improve over last year, we do not have the offense to overcome it," Brock said.

But this year the Sun Devils near the end of NCAA probation, which has troubled the team in the past. In 1987 and in 1988 the Devils are limited to offering eight scholarships and 11 in 1989 and 1990.

During the 1986 fall season, the Sun Devils compiled a 16-4 record. ASU's ERA dropped to 4.44, and the Devils batted .361. Although the competition was not as tough as the Six-Pac, ASU was 3-2 against Grand Canyon and swept the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, 3-0.

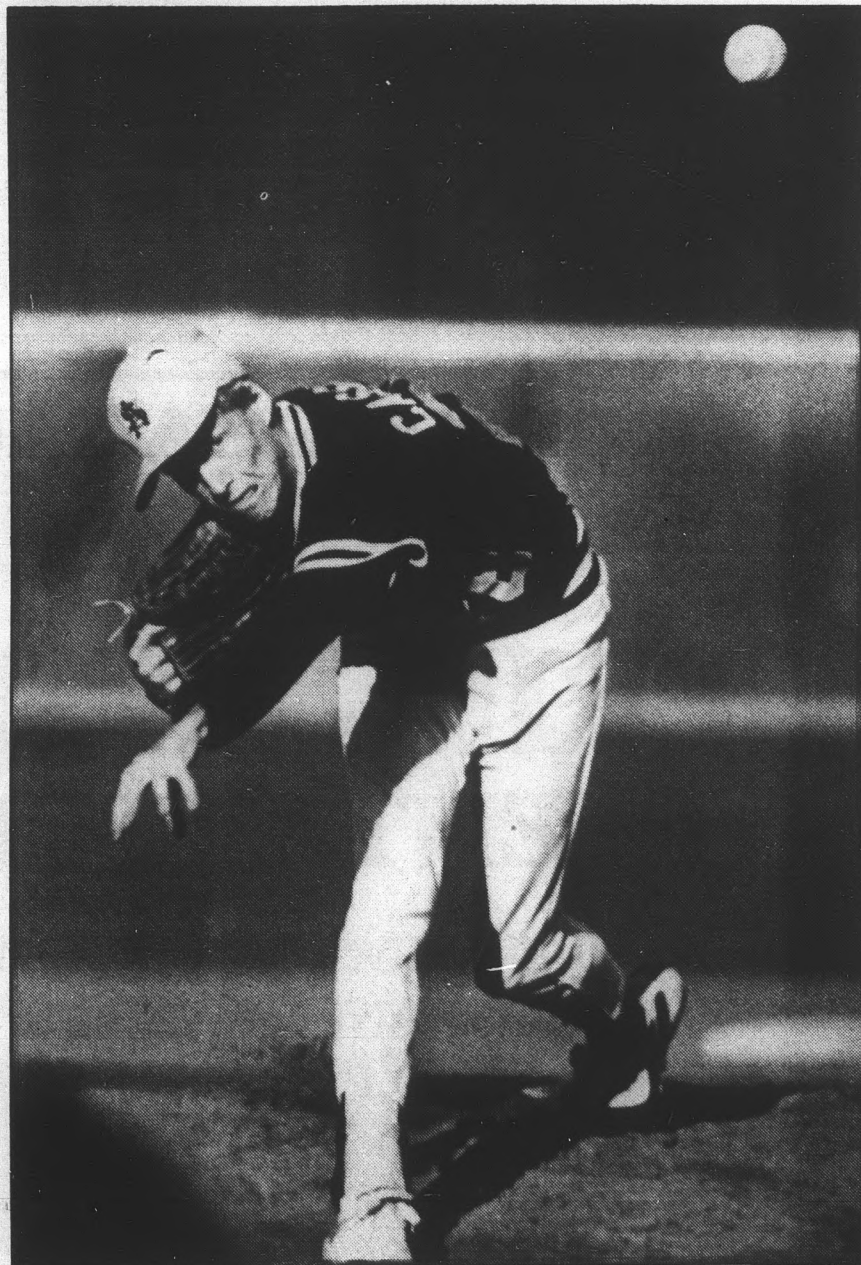

The fall squad was led by junior right-handed pitcher Mike Schwabe. Schwabe, a 6-foot-4, 202-pound transfer from Santa Ana (Calif.) Junior College, led his 1986 team to the California junior college championship.

With a record of 3-0 during fall ball, Schwabe had a 2.03 ERA and walked just four in 31 innings while striking out 22 with a brutal sidearm fastball.

"Schwabe should be the top starter," Brock said. "We think he can dominate any game for us."

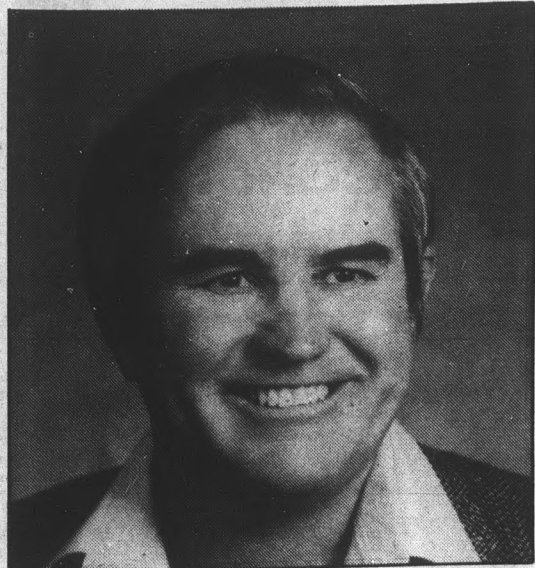

But Schwabe is just one of the seven pitching transfers ASU inherits this season.

added 12 points to the losing cause.

At Berkeley, a lineup change helped the Sun Devils to beat the Golden Bears (2-4 in the Pac-10, 10-6 overall) 86-78.

ASU left Poole out of the starting lineup, letting her rest and hoping that this move would confuse Berkeley coach Gooch Foster.

Midway through the first half, ASU head coach Juliene Simpson decided to bring Poole into the game.

"We definitely confused the Berkeley coach because she didn't know what we were doing," Hall said. "After California had adjusted for Libby Ripp and Woolery, she couldn't adjust her players fast enough to Poole coming in the game."

Poole hit her first seven shots en route to leading all scorers with 28 points and pulling down 11 rebounds.

"Sherry played an excellent game and did just what we had hoped for," Hall said. "Libby played an outstanding game also and did a good job on the boards."

Ripp scored 18 points and had nine rebounds and five blocked shots.

The game was more of a contest for ASU than the score would indicate; both teams shot less than 50 percent and the game tied at halftime, 35-35.

"We came into this game fired up after the loss to Stanford and ready to do business," Hall said.

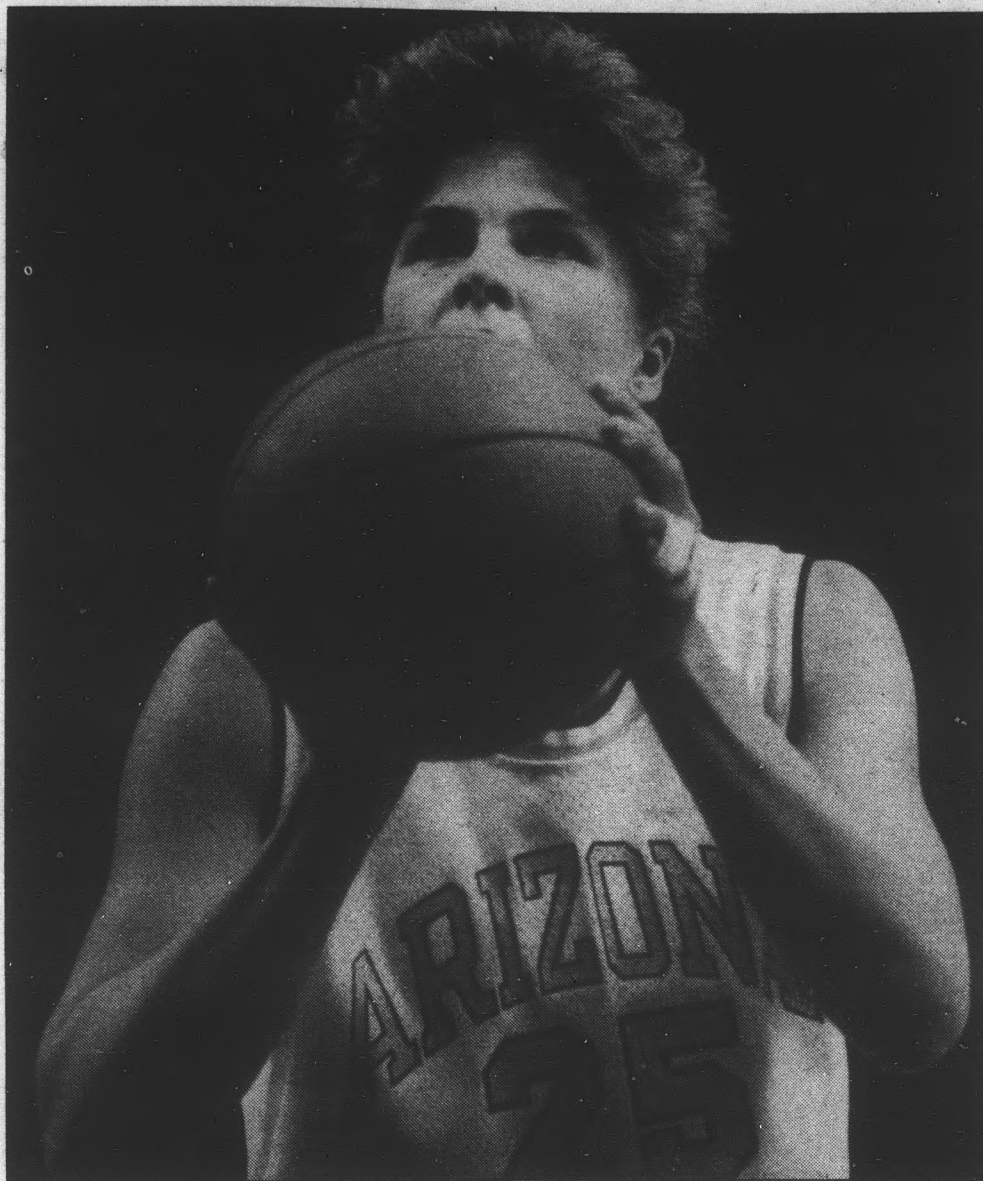

The game remained close down to the final minutes until California got into foul trouble and ASU was in the bonus.

The Sun Devils took the opportunity and shot 15 of 21 from the line to ice the game.

"This was a good victory because it showed we can win one on the road against a good Pac-10 team," Hall said.

Guard Mona Lomeli scored 10 points and had six rebounds for the Sun Devils, while Connolly added 11 points and seven rebounds.

"Now we need to bring the momentum home and prepare ourselves for inter-state rivals NAU on Wednesday and UA on Saturday," Hall said.

North Carolina returns to No. 1 in polls

By The Associated Press

Despite winning 15 games in a row, many in dominating fashion, North Carolina Coach Dean Smith still isn't convinced his top-ranked team could beat any other team in the nation.

The Tar Heels, now 17-1 after an early season loss at UCLA, returned to the top of The Associated Press's college basketball poll Monday, replacing Iowa, which held the position for one week.

"People shoot at you more when you're ranked No. 1, but because of the parity, that doesn't mean you're really any better than the team ranked 18th," Smith said.

North Carolina received 59 first-place votes and 1,236 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters to easily outdistance the Hawkeyes, who suffered their first loss Saturday to snap a school-record 18-game winning streak.

North Carolina, ranked second last week, was No. 1 in the preseason poll and the Tar Heels held on for the first week of the regular season. But they fell from the top spot when they lost 89-84 at UCLA on the way home from two games in Hawaii. Their two games last week were Atlantic Coast Conference blowouts — 79-53 over Wake Forest and 92-55 over Georgia Tech.

Iowa received two first-place votes and 1,141 points after a week of drastic up and downs.

The Hawkeyes beat then-No. 5 Purdue on the road 70-67 and followed that with another Big Ten Conference victory, 101-88 over Indiana, the first time a Hoosier team coached by Bob Knight allowed more than 100 points. They couldn't hold the homecourt momentum, however, as Ohio State beat the Hawkeyes 80-76 at Iowa City.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 18-1, received the remaining first-place vote and 1,127 points to take third. The Runnin' Rebels, who were fourth last week, won all three of their Pacific Coast Athletic Association games last week.

Two Big Ten teams, Indiana and Purdue, tied for fourth with 968 points.

Indiana, 15-2, had been third last week and followed the loss at Iowa with a 77-53 victory over Minnesota.

Purdue, 15-2, followed its loss to Iowa with an 87-86 overtime victory over Illinois.

Syracuse improved one spot from last week's rankings as the Orangemen, 17-1, received 902 points after their two Big East victories, 70-58 over Villanova and 64-63 over then-No. 14 St. John's.

Temple, 18-2, also improved one place after receiving 788 points, 17 more than DePaul, which lost its first game of the season after 16 victories.

The Owls' two victories last week were over Massachusetts and Alabama-Birmingham. The Blue Demons, who were sixth last week, won their first two games last week before falling to then-No. 15 Georgetown 74-71 on Sunday.

Alabama, 15-2, jumped from 13th to ninth with 666 points, just one more than Oklahoma, 14-3, which improved one place from last week.

Baseball

"We have several pitchers who have had success, but we still wonder whether they'll make the adjustment to major college baseball," Brock said. "I'm happy as far as the prospects are concerned for pitching improvement."

Other top prospects for the ASU pitching staff include sophomore right-hander Eric Patterson and junior right-handers Scott Hutson (Mesa Community College), Linty Ingram (McLennan C.C., Waco, Texas), and Blas Minor (Merced C.C., Merced, Calif.).

Brock said the top relievers for the team are David Cassidy and Tony Harris. Cassidy, a 6-foot, 140-pound left-hander, was 7-4 last year with a 6.26 ERA. He reduced that figure to 3.93 with a 2-0 record during fall ball.

Harris, a 6-foot, 200-pound right-hander, was 8-2 with three saves and a 5.62 ERA in 1986.

Dub Kilgo will begin his first season as pitching coach at ASU, replacing Tom Pratt, who took the top assistant position at Nebraska early last summer.

Kilgo, 33, was pitching coach and third base coach for the past nine seasons at McLennan Community College in Waco, Texas. During that stint, McLennan won nine consecutive Texas Junior College Athletic Conference championships and won the national championship in 1983.

'We will have a far more effective pitching staff than we did a year ago. We've got more depth than we did a year ago at all positions.'

— Jim Brock

Kilgo coached Atlanta Braves pitcher Craig McMurtry and four current Sun Devils: Ingram, pitcher Matt Shiflett, catcher Tim Spehr and outfielder Jason Bridges.

"Dub is a tough taskmaster," Brock said. "He's an outstanding teacher, and he demands a lot from his pitchers and from himself."

"He's a no-nonsense type of person. He feels good about all 10 of his pitchers on this staff."

The Six-Pac has some of the tougher pitchers around. Stanford's Jack McDowell, UCLA's Alex Sanchez and Arizona's Gilbert Heredia are among the finest pitchers in the nation.

"We will have a far more effective pitching staff than we did a year ago," Brock said. "We've got more depth than we did a year ago at all positions."

Wrestlers split road trip; Devils impress Douglas

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

The Sun Devils wrestlers completed one of their best road trips ever this past weekend, coach Bobby Douglas said, by defeating Oklahoma Friday night, 28-6, and finishing second in the first Cowboy Duals at Oklahoma State Saturday.

"That was one of the greatest road trips in Sun Devil history as far as I am concerned," Douglas said. "(Individually) we beat a national champ, a second-ranked man, and (John) Ginther had three great matches."

The Devils as a team notched several big wins over the weekend. At the Cowboy Duals, ASU came from behind to beat seventh-ranked Bloomsburg University, 20-18, which had defeated ASU earlier in the season, 24-13. The victory over Bloomsburg put ASU into the finals against second-ranked Oklahoma State.

In the Bloomsburg match, ASU pulled out to a quick lead after freshman Zeke Jones decisioned John Supsic, 15-11. The biggest win of the night for the Sun Devils came when 126-pounder Chip Park defeated No. 1-ranked and two-time NCAA champ Ricky Bonomo, 7-6.

Dan St. John (142 pounds) earned a win over Bloomsburg wrestler Marty King, 9-4, and in the HWT match Rod Severn decisioned Ron Ippolite, 7-5.

All-America grappler John Ginther (177 pounds), returning after a two month injury, came back in fine fashion to pin Tim Holter in 2:57.

"We are wrestling much better," Douglas said. "We worked on troubled areas. I feel we are coming together as a team."

The tournament championship match paired Oklahoma State against ASU, ranked 11th. The Devils were looking to avenge an earlier loss to Oklahoma State (Dec. 4), but this was not to be the night, as the Cowboys slipped past ASU, 25-15.

Eddie Woodburn of OSU tied Jones in the 118-pound match 11-11, but the Devils notched their first win when Park decisioned Kendall Cross in the 126-pound match, 11-7.

Glenn McMinn suffered a loss at the hands of nationally top-ranked wrestler, John Smith. Smith pinned the 134-pound co-captain in 1:53. Oklahoma State earned another win at 142 pounds, as Angelo Cuzalina defeated Dan St. John, 4-3.

Tommy Ortiz (150 pounds) broke the ice and tried to give momentum back to ASU with a major decision over Jeff McAllister 11-2.

The Maroon and Gold earned two more victories at 177 pounds and 190 pounds. Ginther continued to impress his opponents with a 3-1 victory over Mike Farrell.

On Friday, the Devils scored their first big victory of the road trip as they knocked off tenth-ranked Oklahoma. ASU led throughout the meet, and held on for an impressive 28-6 pummeling of the Sooners.

Jones came from behind in the 118-pound match to beat Oklahoma's Lambert. Park, ranked 11th in the latest polls, decisioned Bollin, 12-8.

McMinn, led in his match until :50 remained in the match before losing, 7-6.

St. John recorded a major decision over the second-ranked wrestler in the nation. The 142-pound freshman scored a 9-0 win and gave ASU a 10-3 lead.
