

Mecham's cuts force ASU to reverse field

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

Trapped in a "Catch-22," ASU could be forced to increase enrollment while decreasing faculty by 10 percent if Gov. Evan Mecham's proposed 1987-88 state budget is approved, the academic vice president said Monday.

Jack Kinsinger said the University planned to cut enrollment, but because ASU's budget is based on full-time enrollment figures, the decrease would cost ASU even more funding.

"Under Mecham's budget, we must hold up student credit hours to receive the full amount of funding, which means we'll be serving an increased student population

Enrollment-based funding formula voids plans to cut student numbers with 4,500 positions that would not be filled," he said.

Kinsinger said the University could respond by increasing class size and cutting student services. But he said the decision would not be made until May when the budget is finalized.

Kinsinger said ASU administration will submit a report to the Arizona Legislature explaining problems that will be caused by Mecham's budget.

"If the budget is cut, we'll have to find a way to restrict classes without cutting overall enrollment," he said. "Classes might have to be cut."

More than 160 classes were cut this semester to offset a statewide budget deficit. The canceled or closed classes left 3,000 student juggling their schedules.

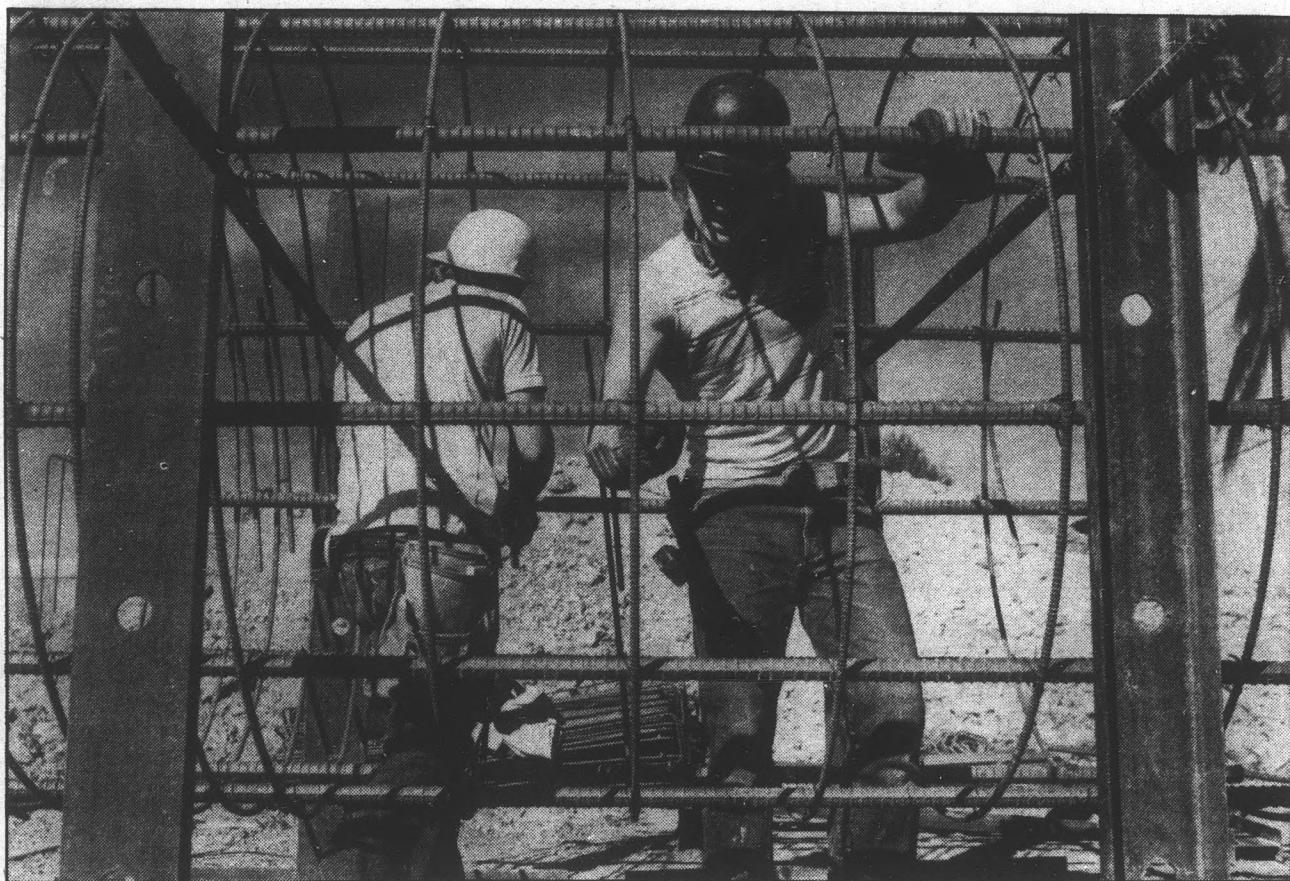

Mecham's new 1987-88 budget, which includes a $60 tuition increase, cuts ASU's budget by $42.6 million to $185,127,100.

Leonard Gordon, general studies director, said ASU's new general-studies curriculum could be delayed by Mecham's budget.

Under the new fall 1987 curriculum, classes required for graduation include college algebra, a sophomore-level writing course and two years of a foreign language.

Gordon said insufficient funding in Arizona high schools could cause ASU to delay the college algebra requirement until fall 1988.

"The students coming out of high school are not prepared to go straight into college algebra," he said. "There needs to be more of a transition period."

New bill would allow funding for 'controversial' campus groups

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

A bill will be put before the Associated Students Senate tonight that would enable "controversial" campus clubs and organizations to receive funding.

College of Public Programs Sen. Kate Lehman, author of the bill, said it would "free up the opportunity to fund groups that really did not have a chance before."

The bill would strike the section of the ASASU bylaws that prohibits funding groups classified as "controversial" by the senate.

Students Against Apartheid, the Israel Action Committee and an environmentalist club, The Greens, are groups that have been refused funding under the bylaw.

But the bill would not affect a companion section of the bylaws that forbids the senate to fund groups that "promote a sexual preference."

Lehman said she regrets not altering the sexual preference clause, but the deletion of "controversial" was a "first step" and "better than nothing."

"It hurts me not to be able to change the sexual preference thing, but I would feel much more unworthy of my senate seat if I had done nothing at all," she said.

"It's a compromise, and democracy works on compromise."

The senate has been embroiled in battle with the Lesbian and Gay Academic Union, which has been denied funding on the basis that the group promotes a sexual preference.

ASASU President Chris Cumiskey, a longtime opponent

'I would feel much more unworthy of my senate seat if I had done nothing at all.'
— Kate Lehman

of the sexual preference clause, said the bill "is the first of a number of incremental steps the senate must take in order to rectify the current situation."

"It is apparent the (controversial) language is borderline unconstitutional, and it is completely subjective. Standing by itself, the bill doesn't go the distance because it still singles out one kind of group."

"But it is mandatory the language be changed, and this is a start."

The bill is sponsored by five senators, Activities Vice President Christine Roth and Campus Affairs Vice President LeeAnne Seall.

Jackson to speak in Phoenix, breaks temporary boycott

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

The Rev. Jesse Jackson will break a temporary boycott of Arizona by speaking in the Phoenix College Auditorium, 1202 W. Thomas Road, tonight at 7:30.

Jackson was scheduled to speak at ASU Jan. 23 but canceled suddenly because he was honoring a boycott by the National Newspaper Publishers Association, a group representing black publishers across the country.

The association invited Jackson to speak at four-day workshop but decided after one day to cancel the workshop in light of Gov. Evan Mecham's rescission of a paid state holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr., slain civil rights leader.

Ann Oehmke, the coordinator of the Phoenix College event, said, "It's a coup to have Jackson in the state right now."

Ron and Carolyn Warner, the unsuccessful 1986 Democratic gubernatorial candidate, will host a reception at the Warner's home at 5 p.m.

Jackson promised to speak at ASU tonight, but Susan Taylor, Essence Magazine editor, previously had been scheduled for the same day.

Bernard Jackson, who coordinated the reverends visit, said ASU was the reverend's first choice but he could not be accommodated because of Taylor's visit.

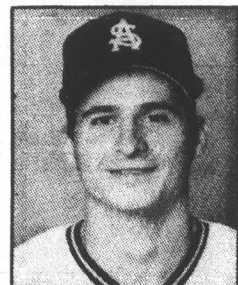

Taylor will speak at 7:30 tonight in the MU Arizona Room. Both Jackson and Taylor were invited to kick off Black Heritage Month.

Committee seeking student performers for Greek Sing show

By SHELLY SCHAFFER
State Press

The Greek Sing committee is searching for talented fraternity or sorority members to perform in between acts at the annual Greek entertainment production, Greek Sing.

Talent search chairman Dawn DiVitto said auditions for the April 9 show will be held today in the MU Pima room from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Callbacks will be on Feb. 9.

DiVitto said auditions also are open to Greek alumni. "We are looking for anything basically — singing, dancing, but not like opera," she said. "We want silly acts and upbeat songs; things that are interesting."

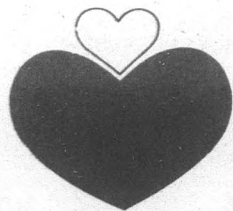

DiVitto said individuals chosen "must practice and refine the acts on their own."

"We are hoping it's going to be a really great show this year," she said.

Greek Sing, to be held at Gammage Center, is a main event of Greek Week, which will promote Greeks on campus April 3 through 11.

Committee refers student regent bill to attorney general

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — The Arizona Senate Education Committee referred a bill calling for a permanent student regent to the state attorney general's office Monday because the measure apparently violates gubernatorial powers.

The legislation, Senate Bill 1104, would eliminate legislative review of the student member of the Arizona Board of Regents every three years.

But members of the Education Committee were concerned that by creating a student regent, strict requirements would be placed on Gov. Evan Mecham's appointment duties.

The governor appoints one student regent each year — alternating between the three state universities — and the appointment is confirmed by the Senate.

Under the legislation, the governor would be required to appoint a student to the post. No other gubernatorial appointments have similar requirements.

Kathy Paul, deputy director for the legislative council, said the only way lawmakers could make the student regent a permanent part of the board without infringing on executive powers is through a constitutional amendment.

"If you told the governor he should appoint a graduate of ASU, or a graduate of NAU or a graduate of U of A I would express the same opinion," she said.

Sen. Doug Todd, R-Tempe and sponsor of the bill, said he was aware of the measure's problem but believes it is time for lawmakers to make the student regent a permanent post.

"The student regent program has been beneficial — not only to the regents' program but the students who have been involved themselves," Todd said.

Regent Herman Chanen said the entire board is supporting the bill and has asked that the regents' legal counsel be involved in the attorney general's decision.

"I think it's extremely important to have the viewpoint of the student for the regents to make proper recommendations to the Legislature," he said.

Diane Zipley, executive director of the Arizona Student Association, a student lobbying group, said she is confident the legislation will be approved by the committee after the attorney general's opinion is rendered.

"I think that is something more or less that they need just as an opinion," Zipley said. "We have had a student regent for eight years; I would highly doubt that it would be deemed unconstitutional at all."

The bill does not call for a vote for the student regent, and Zipley said her group will not be lobbying for the vote this year. The student regent is the only non-voting member of the board.

Legislation would lower taxes for University student workers

PHOENIX — Some ASU student employees will see their taxes lowered by as much as 23 percent under legislation that will be introduced in the Arizona House of Representatives today.

Rep. Chris Herstam, R-Phoenix and sponsor of the bill, said those earning less than $5,000 a year would see their taxes decrease by 23 percent. The average ASU student worker earns about $2,600 a year.

Those earning from $5,000 to $10,000 would see a 6 percent reduction in their taxes.

Herstam, who also is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said his plan coincides with the 1986 Federal Tax Reform Act, which eliminated taxes for some working poor and increased tax burdens for corporations.

If the bill is approved, taxes will be lowered for about 98 percent of Arizona taxpayers.

But those earning more than $1 million a year — about 2 percent of the state's population — would see their taxes rise by about 31 percent.

By lowering taxes, the state would be returning an estimated $40 million to $136 million in federal windfall tax dollars to taxpayers, he said.

"If we didn't make any changes in our rates at the state

"If we didn't make any changes in our rates at the state level, the state would be making more money from the federal income reform measure."
— Chris Herstam

level, the state would be making more money from the federal income reform measure," Herstam said. "By decreasing our rates, the windfall will go to the individual."

Arizona will receive the extra funds because the new federal tax law will lower payments for many taxpayers, which in turn lowers the federal tax deduction on state returns.

The loss of deductions gives Arizona taxpayers a higher adjusted gross income, from which state taxes are figured. That gives the state more money from income tax payments.

"We do not believe the state should get the windfall," Herstam said.

Hit-and-run accident injures ASU student

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

An ASU student who was involved in a hit-and-run accident Saturday said he is "doing fine" and looking forward to returning to classes.

Kenneth Girvan, a 20-year-old sophomore engineering science major, was hit by an unknown make of vehicle while he was biking to campus.

Tempe police said Girvan was riding his bike eastbound on Apache Boulevard when he was hit by a mid-sized vehicle traveling in the same lane. The vehicle fled the scene.

Girvan was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital where he was listed in serious condition, police said.

Girvan said he cannot remember anything about the accident.

Tempe police spokesman Roger Clay said police do not have any suspects, and the case has been turned over to the hit-and-run division.

A constitutional mandate

Evan Mecham has some interesting perceptions of his job as governor of Arizona.

After rescinding Bruce Babbitt's executive order creating the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, Mecham went on national television and argued that as governor he was sworn to uphold the Arizona Constitution.

Babbitt's order was illegal, Mecham said, so he was duty-bound to rescind. He had "no choice."

The legality of Babbitt's order is in question, but we suggest the governor skim over the entire constitution before carrying on with his mandate.

Specifically, we ask the governor to take a good look at Article XI, Section 6.

In case the governor does not have the constitution framed in his office, or at least stashed away in his upper-right hand drawer, we quote from the first paragraph:

"... State educational institutions shall be open to students of both sexes, and the instruction furnished shall be nearly as free as possible."

We question whether the governor is upholding his constitutional mandate when he suggests to the Arizona Board of Regents that it raise tuition an additional $60 a year above the $60 raise it enacted in November.

When the regents voted to make the first raise, they were simultaneously rejecting a proposed $96 hike as too high. Obviously, if a $96 is too high, then $120 is out of the question.

Mecham told student protesters at the Capitol he had to ask for the additional $60 to show taxpayers — some of whom are students, we might add — that students were paying a fair share of their education. Otherwise, he feared a tax revolt.

We know of no brewing "tax revolt." This apparently is a product of Mecham's head.

Neither students nor former students nor their parents would suggest that students are not paying their fair share. Recent tuition raises are threatening to price many students out of an education.

Students have been "biting the bullet." Now we expect the state's leaders to uphold their constitutional mandate on cost of education.

Apprehension part of nuclear weapons

Editor:

There appears to be an intention to lead our campus away from reason. While the United States and the Soviet Union feverishly careen down tracks which converge at nuclear holocaust, some would seek to fuel the engines rather than take hold of the brake handle.

Witness the reaction to last Tuesday's rally on the West Lawn in support of a comprehensive test ban. Mark P. Barry stated that UCAM, the organizers of the rally, "asked students to sacrifice themselves to serve the organizer's interests, not the public interest." In part this is true. We sincerely hope that other students will work with us toward our interests. But divorcing our essential interest — reversing our course towards nuclear holocaust — from the public interest contradicts human reason.

Barry argues "the real nuclear issue... is that the United States has not redressed the military imbalance." If this military balance exists, it is in the United States' favor. According to the Center for Defense Information, the Soviets, though maintaining superior numbers of intercontinental ballistic missiles, trail behind the United States in both submarine launched ballistic missiles and strategic bombers, giving the United States an overall numerical superiority of approximately 2,000 nuclear weapons. In addition, the United States is widely recognized as maintaining technological superiority over the U.S.S.R. Ask yourself, given the choice, would you trade the United States' arsenal for the Soviets'?

Barry further contends "the United States unilaterally limited its nuclear programs over the last 20 years." Given this, how do we account for the B-1 bomber, the Trident 11 D-5 SLBM, the MX ICBM, the cruise missile, the development of the neutron bomb and now Strategic Defense Initiative? What might have been born of less limited nuclear programs?

Barry raises the specter of a Soviet "surprise attack which could eliminate a large part of our missile force and cripple our power to retaliate." If anything, the Soviets, bowing to the superiority of the American submarine fleet upon which over 50 percent of our country's nuclear arsenal is located, have as much, if not more, reason to fear surprise attack from an adversary whose intentions it does not trust. Of course, we know we would never do this, however, why should the Soviets feel secure about our intentions when the current nuclear war plan, Single Integrated Operational Plan provides for a first strike strategy. (Ford, The Button, p. 14-15). We do not aim to be Soviet apologists. We feel it is essential though to understand that both sides live in a world enshrouded in mortal danger and mistrust of one another. As such nuclear disarmament is fundamental to our survival. Instead of increasing the sizes of a horrifically redundant arsenal, we should focus our efforts towards halting this insane buildup. The basic first step to achieving this is through a comprehensive test ban. This was our message to the campus last Tuesday.

It is not our intent, as Barry stated, to create public confusion, but to his charge of creating apprehension about the goals of the United States national security policy, we freely plead guilty in the hopes that such apprehension will foster an awareness of and concern for the catastrophic collision which we may still avoid.

Condom research lacking

Editor:

Patrick J. Kucera brings up an important issue when he discusses the advertisement of condoms, but he leaves several questions unanswered.

Would it be commendable to rely on a product commercial for part of a child's sex education given the bias of such commercials?

Aside from one church's doubts about the spiritual implications of artificial birth control and, perhaps, some people's concerns over privacy in discussing condoms and such, aren't there other reasons to question these advertisements?

Who says condoms may prevent Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome? How do they know that?

What is the source, medical or otherwise, for Kucera's faith in condoms as protection against a disease presently in the early stages of research? To accept this information from a condom ad is overly optimistic. It is not, in fact, so easy to prevent contact with AIDS. Even the birth control protection a condom offers isn't as perfect as manufacturer's ads would make it sound.

It is presently assumed that condoms offer some protection because they've been pretty good at preventing other kinds of sexually transmitted diseases. This may or may not be a good assumption. AIDS is different in many ways and a condom is simply considered better protection for the sexually active than nothing. If the premise that condoms actually prevent AIDS has been researched, tested and proven, then Kucera's opinion piece should have told us about it. Apart from anyone's religious beliefs, condom manufacturers should have to do the research before they make the claim of preventing the disease and sell it to an AIDS-fearing public.

It is too bad Kucera's pre-Martin Luther King brand of prejudice against organized religion kept him from really exploring the issue. AIDS is a danger. Condoms and caution may help, but there is no certain preventative and no known cure until research progresses and condom companies should not be allowed to make anyone believe otherwise.

Repulsed and enlightened

Editor:

Interestingly, I was at once repulsed and enlightened by the "Jesus-Sparky" cartoon that appeared in the Jan. 27 State Press.

When I became a Christian several years ago, I did so upon the realization that Jesus' suffering, humiliation and death was not trivial. The cross and the crown of thorns represent the sacrificial love of a benevolent God for His often unworthy creation.

On the other hand, I must admit that the diligent campaign to rid ASU of its mascot is, at best, unwarranted. Many Christians — with all good intention — feel that it is their responsibility to clean up the world about them; this normally conjures hostility and resentment.

As a student of the Bible, particularly the New Testament, I am convinced that the Lord desires me to look at me first. In doing so, I have discovered that much is left to be done, both in my heart and in my mind.

I would suggest, however, that the staff of the State Press be a little more discriminating and sensitive in the selection of future cartoons. Such sophomoric (even freshmanic) material is just poor journalism. Fighting ignorance with ignorance is ignorant (trust me).

It is akin to the following proposition. Since ASU is experiencing a fiscal crisis, why not eliminate the entire sports program? It's expensive. It doesn't really help the school academically. Most of the advocates are either old, fat, drunk alumni or people who live vicariously. The players are coddled. The coach gets rich making commercials for shrink tanks. Who needs it?

Now, would I suggest any such thing? May it never be.

Neither should the State Press minimize something I find just as important, or more.

The Bible tells us that, in the end, Satan is destroyed. Isn't it ironic that a winning school would choose a loser as its mascot?

Ban the fundamentalists

Editor:

The height of idiocy has been reached by those who want to dump our Sparky. Jack Thompson seems to think that having a devil for a logo is dangerous: "We don't need the Devil involved with our children."

With this line of "reasoning," he may soon start a crusade to ban devil's food cake. After all, we certainly don't need the devil involved with our digestive tract.

Should Thompson win his battle (Heaven forbid), I don't believe we would notice any significant reduction in immorality on our campus. Besides, I think Sparky is kind of a cute little guy.

I vote we keep Sparky and ban the fundamentalists.

Last year, administrators adorned the ASU campus with banners proudly proclaiming this University's pursuit of excellence. Blizzard, pudding culprits in Cabin Fever epidemic

Last week the Northwest was locked in by two snowstorms in a row. It was so bad that in the Washington area alone there were 347,987 reported cases of Cabin Fever.

This was a typical case. The Porter family was stuck in their house for three days as the wind blew back and forth.

Mr. Porter stationed himself in the living room where he maintained he could monitor weather bulletins much better. As we move in on him, the newscaster has just announced, "Only those with essential jobs are required to report to their government offices today."

Mrs. Porter said, "Thank God you're not one of them."

Mr. Porter blew up. "Are you trying to say I don't have an essential job?"

"No, I did not say that at all. I just meant it's good that you don't have to go in to work."

Art Buchwald
Los Angeles Times
Syndicate

Porter was now shaking. "I have a good mind to go in and show them whether I'm essential or not." "Suppose they send you home?" Mrs. Porter asked. "You'd like that. You would like to see me humiliated at work." "Here, have some more vanilla pudding." "I don't want any more vanilla pudding. I've been eating pudding for two days. Why do you keep giving me pudding all the time?" "You told me to make it."

"I think I'll shovel the walk." "You keep saying that." "I want to watch Phil Donahue. I never get to see Phil Donahue when I go to the office."

"You always say that, too." "There are a lot of things to do when you're snowbound, and it's not easy to decide which one should get priority."

Veronica Porter, the 15-year-old, came downstairs. "Daddy, Daddy, Harriet says she's going to kill Robert if he plays Bruce Springsteen on his tape machine one more time."

Mr. Porter smiled. "Well, don't interfere. Harriet is old enough to know what she is doing."

Mrs. Porter said, "How can you give permission for your daughter to kill your son?"

"You have any better ideas of how to make him stop playing Springsteen? I don't like those drapes."

"You never looked at those drapes before."

"You would think with the money I give you I could have a say in the kind of drapes we have in this house."

"Do you want some pudding?" "No, I don't want pudding. Did Harriet kill Robert yet?"

Veronica said, "Not yet. I think it was a joke."

"I'm going to take a snow shovel and break his tape player. Then, I think I'll get out all my photographs and catalog them by subject matter and file them by date in albums."

Mrs. Porter said, "That's interesting. Scientists have found that the most severe cases of Cabin Fever develop when a snowbound person talks about putting all his photographs in order."

February fuzzy: Furry forecasters fight over future

By The Associated Press

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. — A plump, pampered groundhog named Punxsutawney Phil predicted at least six more weeks of winter Monday when he was pulled out of an electrically heated and lighted burrow and reportedly saw his shadow.

Despite an overcast sky at sunrise, Phil's handlers from the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club claimed that he glimpsed a faint shadow.

Groundhog Day folklore has it that if a groundhog, also known as a woodchuck, sees its shadow, six weeks of winter follow. If it doesn't, spring is just around the corner.

"The only reliable weather forecaster, Punxsutawney Phil ... stood proud for a moment and then saw his shadow at precisely 7:29 a.m.," a top-hatted James Means, president of the Groundhog Club, told about 1,000 spectators.

Phil's forecasts don't always hold up, but if his handlers are to be believed, he's never wrong.

The cuddly woodchuck predicted an early spring last year, and "we played golf the first week of February," said William Null, a member of the Groundhog Club and director of the Chamber of Commerce in this western Pennsylvania town of 7,700 people.

The word is that his handlers, 14 tuxedoed members of the club, come up with the forecast beforehand.

Groundhog Day enthusiasm has also given rise to other furry forecasters: Melvin of Greensboro, N.C.; Octorara Orphie of Quarryville, Pa.; French Creek Freddie and Concord Charley from W. Va.; Jimmy of Sun Prairie, Wis.; Dave from Dunkirk, N.Y.; Tilly from Tacoma, Wash.; an albino groundhog from Warton, Ontario, called Willie; and the late Millie from West Orange, N.J., being replaced by Woodrow K. Woodchuck.

Dunkirk Dave and the Indianapolis Zoo's Henrietta disagreed with Phil, as did General Lee in Lilburn, Ga., and Buckeye Chuck from Marion, Ohio.

Groundhogs usually hibernate until March. Chance, a groundhog at the Philadelphia Zoo, had to be coaxed out of her burrow with Girl Scout cookies to see her shadow, said zoo spokesperson Arlene Kut. French Creek Freddie didn't show at all.

Phil has failed to see his shadow only eight times in the last 100 or 101 years. Groundhog Club members differ on how many years have passed since the first Groundhog Day.

For the record, the National Weather Service 30-day outlook calls for above normal temperatures and precipitation in the Plains and Northwest and below normal temperatures and above normal precipitation in New England and the southern Atlantic states. The rest of the country should see normal temperatures and precipitation.

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 7 a.m. Monday:

•An ASU student was arrested and charged with driving with fictitious license plates and a suspended license, police said.

Police said they discovered the plates were fictitious while checking the car's registration because it was parked on the bicycle pathway at 500 E. Orange St.

The student was released on his own recognizance.

•Police said someone broke into a locker in the Physical Education West gymnasium and stole a wallet, several charge cards, a check guarantee card, a Florida driver's license, an ASU student ID and an ASU staff ID.

The owner of the belongings said his locker was locked before his workout, but afterward he found it open with his pants on the floor and wallet gone, police said.

Police said the lock was not broken, and there were no signs of forced entry.

Estimated loss is $100.

•Police said they found two people not affiliated with the University sleeping in their car in Lot 49.

Police said the two told an investigating officer they were resting on the way to Palm Springs. Police warned them of trespassing and advised them to leave.

•A red Murray Cruiser bicycle, valued at $96, was stolen from bike racks west of Manzanita Residence Hall, where it was locked, police said.

•Three ASU students broke a window in the Law School lobby while playing football, police said. Estimated loss is $75.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents ending noon Monday:

•A Mesa woman was arrested for throwing a piece of glass at a man, police said.

Police said the woman went to the man's residence at 1701 E. Don Carlos Ave. and forced her way into his apartment.

The man threw her out of the apartment, and the woman broke his window. She then threw a piece of glass that hit him in the hand.

•An unknown man exposed his penis to a Tempe woman while she was jogging, police said.

The woman told police she stopped jogging when a car came up behind her because she thought the driver needed directions.

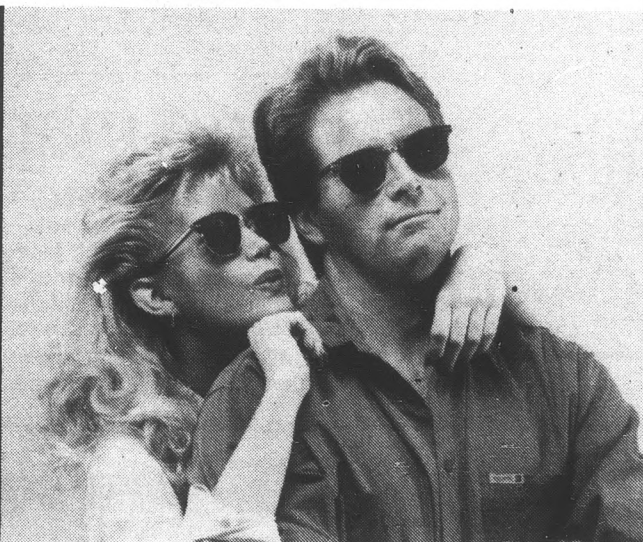

But when she went to the driver's side of the car, a male driver opened his pants and exposed his penis

The woman started to jog away, and the man asked her if she wanted another look.

Library to go underground, expansion to begin in June

By AARYN KEMP
State Press

Hayden Library is going underground with its two-story, $11.5 million expansion slated to begin in June, the acting assistant University librarian said.

Jane Conrow said construction of the 97,000-square-foot addition should be completed under West Lawn by 1989.

"Building underground provides a more acceptable future," Conrow said. "We will have the option to reconstruct West Residence Hall into phase two of the expansion when we need more room."

She said phase two has not yet been approved or funded.

But campus planner Kim Apel said the second expansion will be about 200,000 square feet and may require the demolition of Dixie Gammage, West Hall and McClintock Residence Hall — all central campus buildings.

Conrow said Hayden Library was built in 1966 for 20,000 students with plans to build two more stories when needed.

"But building codes since that time have changed," she said. "It would have cost too much money to remodel the library to fit the codes."

She said building underground will be more cost-effective and will preserve green space on campus. West Lawn is an important campus focal point, both socially and aesthetically, she said.

Conrow said Cady Mall will be closed during the construction, and pedestrian traffic will be rerouted around Hayden. The library may close at some time during the expansion, she said.

The only elements of the addition that will be visible above ground are the new entrance and a 14-foot rotunda in the middle of West Lawn, Conrow said.

She said the entrance will face south toward the business buildings so that sunlight can illuminate the addition's first floor.

Conrow said the rotunda will be surrounded by steps for students to sit on and will allow light to enter into the underground building.

"People may think that the addition is going to be dark and gloomy," she said. "But with skylights, the entrance and the rotunda, the underground building will be more lit by natural light than the third floor of Hayden is now."

Conrow's personal goal is to develop space so attractive that all of her staff will want their departments located in the expansion.

Additional staff should not be necessary because planners will "economize" by placing all the department work areas adjacent to one another, she said.

The addition will house all of the microforms, current and bound periodicals that are now located on the second floor of Hayden.

Con man 'murdered' by club leader

By The Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — The leader of the Billionaire Boys Club, a group of rich young men determined to make it big, bragged that he committed the perfect crime by killing a con man, but the victim had the last laugh, a prosecutor told jurors Monday.

Deputy District Attorney Fred Wapner said he would prove that Joe Hunt, 27, in a compulsive quest for money and revenge, murdered Ron Levin, a sometime journalist con man.

Wapner said Levin, 42, whose body has helped solve his own murder by the complicity in which he trapped Hunt and other members investment club.

"The last laugh was Levin's," said Wapner. Hunt demanded that Levin sign over $1.5 million Conrow said placing all of the materials in one area should make research easier for students.

"The biggest complaint we get at Hayden is that it is too noisy," she said. "I want to develop a variety of quiet and noisy study areas in the new building to try and eliminate this problem."

Conrow said the addition will free 30,000 square feet in Hayden.

bank account before he was killed. "He (Levin) was the kind of person who liked to talk about having a Swiss bank account. But there was $40 in that account. The check could never be cashed," Wapner said. Wapner said Hunt left at the alleged murder scene a handwritten blueprint for murder, a seven-page list entitled "To Do At Levin's" that said "close blinds ... tape mouth, handcuff ... kill dog."

Election process change would repeal $20 deposit

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

The Associated Students Senate will consider a bill tonight that would alter the election process by eliminating a mandatory $20 refundable deposit for senate candidates.

During past senate elections, candidates were allowed to accumulate up to $20 in fines for various campaign violations before being disqualified from the election.

College of Liberal Arts Sen. Mark Isenberg, a member of ASASU's Government Operations Committee, said the bill would replace the deposit with a point system.

Candidates still would be penalized for violations, such as distributing campaign material within 50 feet of polling places and interfering with the duties of the elections director and staff, but the penalties would take the form of demerits instead of dollars.

Isenberg said candidates would be penalized up to 20 points before forfeiting the election.

"I felt there was no need to require dollars when there was an adequate alternative," Isenberg said.

"The deposit was something I felt wasn't as necessary as the spending limit on campaigns because that limit creates equal opportunities for all candidates."

The ASASU Supreme Court declared the article in the bylaws requiring the deposit and two articles limiting campaign spending to $100 for senatorial candidates and $500 for executive office candidates "unconstitutional" last year.

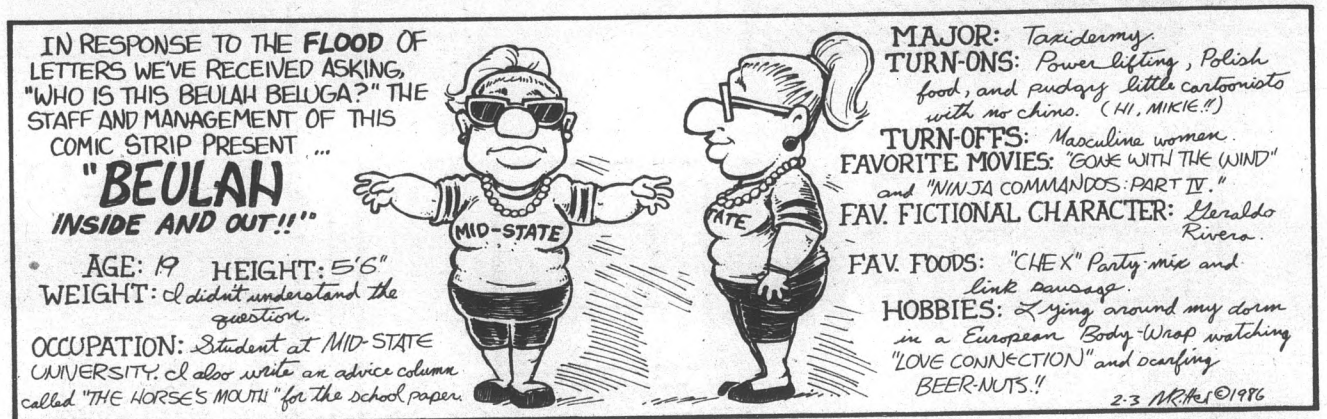

The Government Operations Committee, which unanimously approved the bill, will present it to the senate at 5:30 p.m. in the MU Mohave Room.

Program pools drivers; commuters share rides

ASU's commuter population can link up with other students near their home to share daily driving chores through the Associated Students Rideshare Program.

David Schwartz, ASASU's Commuter Coordinator, said students all over the Valley have been placed in small car pools in their area for daily drives to campus.

Students need to fill out applications at the Commuter Services office in the MU to enter the program.

"We match up students on the basis of their schedules and class times as well as their proximity to one another," Schwartz said.

Shutout

Tough pitching leads Sun Devils past Pomona

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

Pitching has been a lost quantity for ASU baseball in recent years, but if the first two games of the season are any indication, the Devils' new pitching coach appears to have turned things around.

Matt Shiflett and Linty Ingram combined to throw a four-hitter as the Sun Devils shut out Cal Poly-Pomona 7-0 Monday at Packard Stadium.

The game was the first of a two-game series that winds up today at 2:30 p.m. at Packard Stadium.

New pitching coach Dub Kilgo, who came to ASU after a successful career at McLennan Community College in Waco, Texas, said he likes what he has seen so far.

The Devils (2-0) have won their games 20-1 and 7-0, giving up only six hits and one unearned run.

"I have no complaints," Kilgo said. "You can't ask for any better pitching than we've gotten."

Shiflett — who pitched under Kilgo for two years at McLennan and transferred to ASU from Oral Roberts in 1985 — tossed seven-plus innings of four-hit baseball, striking out five batters while walking only two, before giving way to Ingram.

"I felt pretty good out there," Shiflett said. "The ball was moving pretty well."

Ingram, who has made appearances in both Devil games, squelched a mild Pomona rally by getting Bronco lead-off man Tom Lorenz to ground into a double play during the eighth inning. He then retired the side in order during the ninth inning, striking out the final two batters.

The Sun Devils jumped out on top during the first inning. With one out, Tim Esmay walked and stole second base. After Mike Burrola struck out, Tony Mattia walked to put men at first and second.

Dan Rumsey then drilled a single to center field, driving in Esmay and moving Mattia to second. Martin Peralta, who was four-for-five and drove in three runs, lined a 3-2 pitch past the third baseman and into left field, scoring Mattia.

The Broncos threatened in the top of the third inning. With one out, shortstop Mike Gorman singled past the glove of Bob Dombrowski and stole second. Lorenz then blooped a single into shallow center field. But the Devils then forced second baseman Jim Chapman to ground into another double play, ending the inning.

The Devils put the game away during their half of the third. Burrola led off the inning by beating out a bunt for a single and stole second. Mattia then grounded out to second, advancing Burrola to third. Dan Rumsey followed by crushing a triple off the center field wall, driving in Burrola.

Peralta then singled sharply to left-center to drive in Rumsey to make the score 4-0 ASU.

"We're off to a good start," Kilgo said. "Hopefully we'll give the defense some confidence."

"We made two errors today, but we also came up with the big plays and catches when we needed them."

Martin Peralta, center fielder and designated hitter (21), takes a crack at the ball during the Sun Devils trouncing of the Cal-Poly Broncos.

Sparky on his way out at ASU? Some ideas for a new nickname

It's time to talk about Sparky.

There are a few people out there trying to get rid of him. They say that Sparky is satanic, and that aligning our University with Satan is a bad idea.

First of all, if the athletic mascot were the closest tie between Satan and this University, we would all be a whole lot better off. I've sat in classes at this school taught by men who reminded me a lot more of Satan than Sparky ever has. They certainly subscribed to the philosophy of hell more than Sparky probably does.

So people who start talking about getting rid of Sparky in order to sever the connection between ASU and hell are a little off the deep end. Anyone who has ever taken a class in summer session knows that ASU and hell bear a certain similarity.

Now don't get me wrong. I don't really like Sparky. As a matter of fact, as a mascot, I think he's pretty weak. I mean, he can do a lot of pushups, which I respect; but on the other hand, I watched him go one-for-six on slam dunks during a timeout at the U of A game — with a mini-tramp.

And I don't mean the short U of A cheerleader was giving him a leg up.

All in all, I'm sure ASU could find a better mascot, if push came to shove. But to get rid of him because some lunatic thinks he's evil is pretty ridiculous.

However, if it really might happen, then I've got a few suggestions for backup mascots:

- The ASU Wheatshockers: I hear you can pick up a suit real cheap from the Wichita State athletic department. Wichita State, which just won a national cheerleading championship by beating ASU narrowly, is without a football team to encourage. They still cheer for the basketball team, but they'll probably disband that after another losing season too.
- The ASU Saguaro Cacti: This could be a great one for the ASU athletic department. Not only would it be great to see a seven-foot walking cactus, but we might even draw more snowbirds to the game. We've got two basketball players who graduated from Saguaro High (Uvonte Reed and Mark Carlino) that might feel at home that way.

Bob Heiler
Sports Editor

•The ASU Carpetbaggers: This is a really great word. I'd really like to see it make a comeback into everyday language, and this may be its last shot.

•The ASU Spiders: Spiders get a really bum wrap. But they're really pretty amiable little creatures. And it could really make sense when it comes time to lure hot recruiting prospects into our lair.

•The ASU Neptunes: This is a really weak nickname, but ASU could save some bucks. They could just repaint the trident blue, cut the horns off the helmet and lose the tail. Of course, people would still complain because the University would be aligning its athletic program with a symbol of paganism.

•The ASU Rhino Boots: This could be really good. Football offensive linemen and basketball centers could have bright gold jerseys emblazoned with "DO NOT ATTEMPT TO MOVE THIS ATHLETE." Opposing teams would, of course, be required to pay an impoundment fee of $50 to get Tarre Isiah out of the paint. Maybe Richard Landreth could be made an assistant basketball coach.

•The ASU Pontiacs: Ev Mecham would really be liking the publicity out of this one. Maybe we can cut him a deal: we name the team the Pontiacs, run a few free promotionals, and he keeps it so the students can pay their tuition without

UNLV Runnin' Rebels return to top of hoop polls

By The Associated Press

Nevada-Las Vegas, which had been No. 1 for six weeks earlier in the season, returned to the top of The Associated Press' college basketball poll Monday after a two-week hiatus.

The Runnin' Rebels, 21-1, received 48 first-place votes and 1,243 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters, easily outdistancing Indiana, which jumped from fourth to second with 10 first-place votes and 1,181 points.

North Carolina, which had returned to the No. 1 spot for one week, was knocked from the perch after suffering a 60-58 defeat at Notre Dame. The Tar Heels, 18-2, received four first-place votes and 1,148 points and will play the next two weeks without senior scoring leader Kenny Smith, who underwent arthroscopic knee surgery last weekend. Smith scored a career-high 41 points in his last game before the surgery, a 108-99 victory over then-No. 14 Clemson last Wednesday.

Nevada-Las Vegas broke the 100-point mark in each of its three victories last week. The Runnin' Rebels won two Pacific Coast Athletic Association games, 106-58 over Fresno State and 114-103 over Cal-Irvine, before beating then-No. 18 Auburn on the road, 104-85.

Indiana, 17-2, registered two Big Ten Conference victories last week. The Hoosiers beat then-No. 12 Illinois 69-66 and then-No. 4 Purdue 88-77.

Iowa, the only team other than Nevada-Las Vegas and North Carolina to be ranked No. 1 this season, fell from second to fourth with 999 points and one first-place vote. The Hawkeyes, 19-2, lost at Michigan State Saturday, 100-92.

DePaul, the only Division I team besides Nevada-Las Vegas to have just one loss, jumped from eighth to fifth with 935 points, six more than Temple, which moved one spot from last week.

The Blue Demons, 18-1, beat Weber State and La Salle last week, while Temple, 20-2, earned Atlantic 10 Conference victories over Rutgers and Duquesne.

Purdue, Oklahoma, Alabama and Georgetown completed the Top 10.

Purdue is 16-3, with its losses at the hands of North Carolina, Iowa and the Hoosiers. The Boilermakers received 858 points, 27 more than Oklahoma, 17-3, which won games last week over Colorado, Iowa State and North Carolina State.

Alabama, 16-3, remained ninth with 665 points after splitting two overtime conference games — a 90-80 loss to Florida and an 83-74 decision over Georgia — while the Hoyas, 15-3, improved one place with 626 points after losing to Providence and beating Syracuse.

Syracuse, 17-3, leads the Second Ten with 556 points followed by Clemson, Pittsburgh, Illinois, Texas Christian, Duke, Providence, Kansas, St. John's and Auburn.

Last week's Second Ten was Georgetown, Illinois, Duke, Clemson, St. John's, Texas Christian, Pittsburgh, Auburn, Florida and Kansas.

Providence enters the Top Twenty for the first time this season after posting two Big East Conference victories over ranked teams. The Friars, 16-3, beat Georgetown 82-79 and followed with a 93-81 overtime victory over St. John's.

Providence is one of five Big East teams in the Top Twenty, all in the Second Ten.

Florida was the only team to fall from the rankings. The Gators, 16-5, split two Southeastern Conference games against ranked teams, losing to Alabama and then 81-68 to then-No. 18 Auburn.

Stars & Stripes cruises to third Cup win; Conner confident

By The Associated Press

FREMANTLE, Australia — Stars & Stripes moved to within one race of bringing the America's Cup home, pulling away to a 3-0 lead over Kookaburra III Monday by beating the Australian boat easily in the moderate winds the Aussies had wanted.

The end of the best-of-seven series could come Wednesday. U.S. skipper Dennis Conner, expecting stronger winds than Tuesday, called a lay day, which also gave Aussie skipper Iain Murray a chance to fine-tune his golden-hulled boat and his crew's gray spirits.

It was a move that only seemed to delay the inevitable — a return of the silver trophy to its homeland of 132 years.

Stars & Stripes' one-minute, 46-second victory was so easy that the American boat's crew members, acted as if they were on a pleasure cruise rather than on a chapter in yachting history. They joked and took snapshots of each other and at one point, Conner gave tactician Tom Whidden a chance to steer the boat.

But nothing they did kept them from controlling the race for the third straight day. Not even moderate winds of 12 to 18 knots — the speed Murray sought — stood in their way.

"We do seem to be peaking now," Whidden said.

Few obstacles remained in Conner's path toward vindication for his 1983 loss to Australia II, the only time America didn't win the America's Cup.

On the last leg, the beaten Aussies got another jolt. A Kookaburra chase boat sped alongside the 12-meter yacht to tell the crew a bomb threat had been received by Sydney police.

Syndicate chief Kevin Parry said the crew was given the option of evacuating the boat, even though he was told the call almost certainly was a hoax.

Pac-10 names Huskies' Welp player of week

By The Associated Press

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. — Chris Welp, who had 20 points and 15 rebounds in leading Washington to a victory over UCLA, was named Pacific-10 basketball men's Player of the Week on Monday.

The women's Pac-10 award was shared by Washington's Lisa Oriard and Oregon's Kris Glidden. Oriard had a 21-point game against Southern Cal and Glidden had a career-high 20 points against California.

Welp also scored 17 points to help the Huskies down USC.

Other men nominated for the week included Sean Elliott of Arizona, Steve Beck of Arizona State, Jesse Nash of Oregon and Gary Payton of Oregon State. The other women nominees were Dana Patterson of Arizona, Anja Hellman of Cal, Monica Raspberry of Oregon State and Dora Dome of UCLA.

Divers keep perfect record intact, beat No. 1 Stanford

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

Coming off a victory over No. 1 Stanford and non-conference rival Brigham Young University, the ASU men's and women's diving team moved into first place in total points in the Pac-10 conference, according to coach Ward O'Connell.

"This is the best year ever for the diving team up to this point and I am very delighted with their performance," O'Connell said.

So far this season, the Sun Devils have won every dual meet they have participated in, including upsetting No. 1 ranked Texas and Pac-10 rivals USC and UCLA. The Devils also have been undefeated in the 3-meter board competition.

"Even though the diving and swimming results are figured together in dual competitions, the diving points are kept separately and we have compiled the most of any conference school," O'Connell said. "We are trying to complement a good swimming team by pulling our share of the load."

In the dual meet against BYU, Joe Slezak won the 3-meter diving competition, tallying 514 points for 11 dives, good enough to qualify Slezak for the NCAA championship preliminary round.

"Joe has really come through for us this year and has upset some of the top divers in the country," O'Connell said. "He has been doing fantastic and we are very proud."

Slezak also contributed to the upset over Stanford by taking both the 1- and 3-meter competition, and kept his undefeated record intact in the 3-meter.

All-America Tracy Cox has continued her dominance on the women's side, capturing first in the 1- and 3-meter events against Stanford and winning the 1-meter over BYU.

In the meet against BYU, Cox posted 535.27 points for the 1-meter dive, giving her the highest point total for any college diver this season. Cox also set a new school and pool record.

"Tracy has maintained her consistency all year and is one of the premier divers in the country," O'Connell.

Academic All-America Robyn Benincasa has also been coming through for the Sun Devils, even though she has a tough act to follow in Cox.

"She is right where she should be at in the season and is doing just what we had hoped of her," O'Connell said. "She is a definite force for our team."

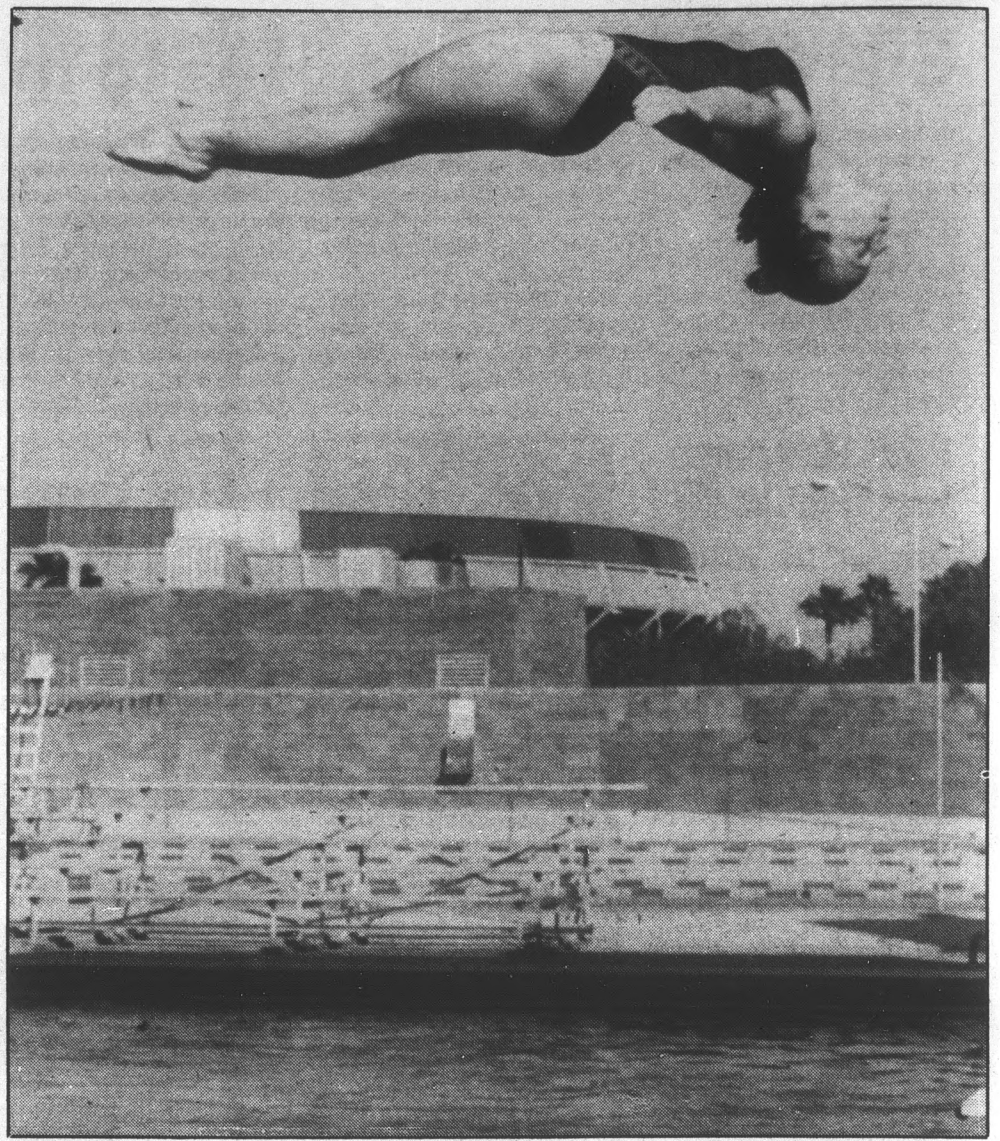

The next meet for the diving team will be for the women only, as they take on intrastate rival UA in Tucson Saturday.

"This is going to be a very difficult meet for the ladies and a very competitive contest," O'Connell said.

UA touts three of the best divers in the conference, according to O'Connell, while the Sun Devils have the best diver in Cox and a strong back-up in Benincasa.

"Tracy should win the competition, but you never can tell what will happen in the diving contests," O'Connell said.

"UA is a big rivalry, so it would be really nice if we could defeat them."

Johnny Miller's 'terminal' touch wins at Pebble

By The Associated Press
PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Johnny Miller proved himself wrong.

"I thought the Johnny Miller years were over," said the 39-year-old veteran who once was known as golf's Golden Boy.

Despite what he calls "a terminal putting stroke," Miller rolled back the years last weekend and scored the 23rd victory of his PGA Tour career in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

And it was the success of some of golf's older players — Jack Nicklaus in the Masters, Ray Floyd in the U.S. Open and Lee Trevino in the 1984 PGA — that kept alive his hopes that "the Johnny Miller years" had not ended.

But he'd gone through four seasons without a victory before he came from six shots off the pace with a last-round 66 at Pebble Beach.

"You know, I've been playing competitive golf since I was 8 years old. I'm 39 but my nerves are like 46 or 47," Miller said.

"The last few years, I've played as good tee to green as I ever have. But my putting stroke is terminal.

"I kind of thought maybe the Johnny Miller years were over," he said. But there was another thought, too.

"I look at Jack winning the Masters and Floyd winning the (U.S.) Open, and Trevino (in the 1984 PGA).

"Trevino winning was great, very special. And there's only one Jack. And there aren't many Ray Floyds around.

"It'll do a lot for me," he said, and ticked off things like exemptions to the Masters and Tournament of Champions.

"But the most important thing is that the other players out here won't look at me like I'm a dead horse," he said.
