

Weapons test incites Arizona protesters

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

An unannounced U.S. nuclear weapons test has spurred more Arizona protesters to travel today to the Nevada Test Site, a representative of a group opposed to nuclear weapons testing said.

Annette Marcus, director of the Arizona Center to Reverse the Arms Race, said the unannounced test sparked several new callers interested in protesting.

The original test was scheduled for 8 a.m. today, and protesters planned to demonstrate at the site, about 60 miles north of Las Vegas.

Instead, the United States exploded its first nuclear weapon this year on Tuesday, two days earlier than scheduled and without public notice.

"Some people were mad because it shows the government sort of flew in the face of what people want," Marcus said.

But Peter Greenberg, a spokesman for the American Peace Test, a national organization opposed to nuclear weapons testing, said, "(The early test) wasn't really a shock to us."

He said today's protest is expected to draw scientist Carl Sagan, at least three members of Congress and hundreds of others from around the country.

Greenberg said he expects some protesters to be arrested for acts of civil disobedience.

"We're in it for the long haul," Greenberg said.

Marcus said the early test indicates that the Department of Energy — the agency responsible for testing — is rescheduling its tests to avoid confrontations with protesters.

The Tuesday test is significant because the Soviet Union has vowed to end its 18-month test ban if the United States proceeded with the February test.

Soviet Chief Arms Negotiator Yuli Vorontsov told members of the Disarmament Conference in Geneva, just hours before the U.S. test, that Moscow would resume its own nuclear weapons testing if the United States continued.

Bill would make teacher reviews open for public

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — Student evaluations of professors' teaching abilities would become public record and available to anyone who wanted to read them if legislation filed in the Arizona House of Representatives is approved.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Peter Goudinoff, D-Tucson, calls for a standardized method of evaluating professors and would make students' comments public record.

Goudinoff, a UA professor, said the bill was drafted as consumer protection legislation because students are paying high prices for classes and not always getting proper instruction.

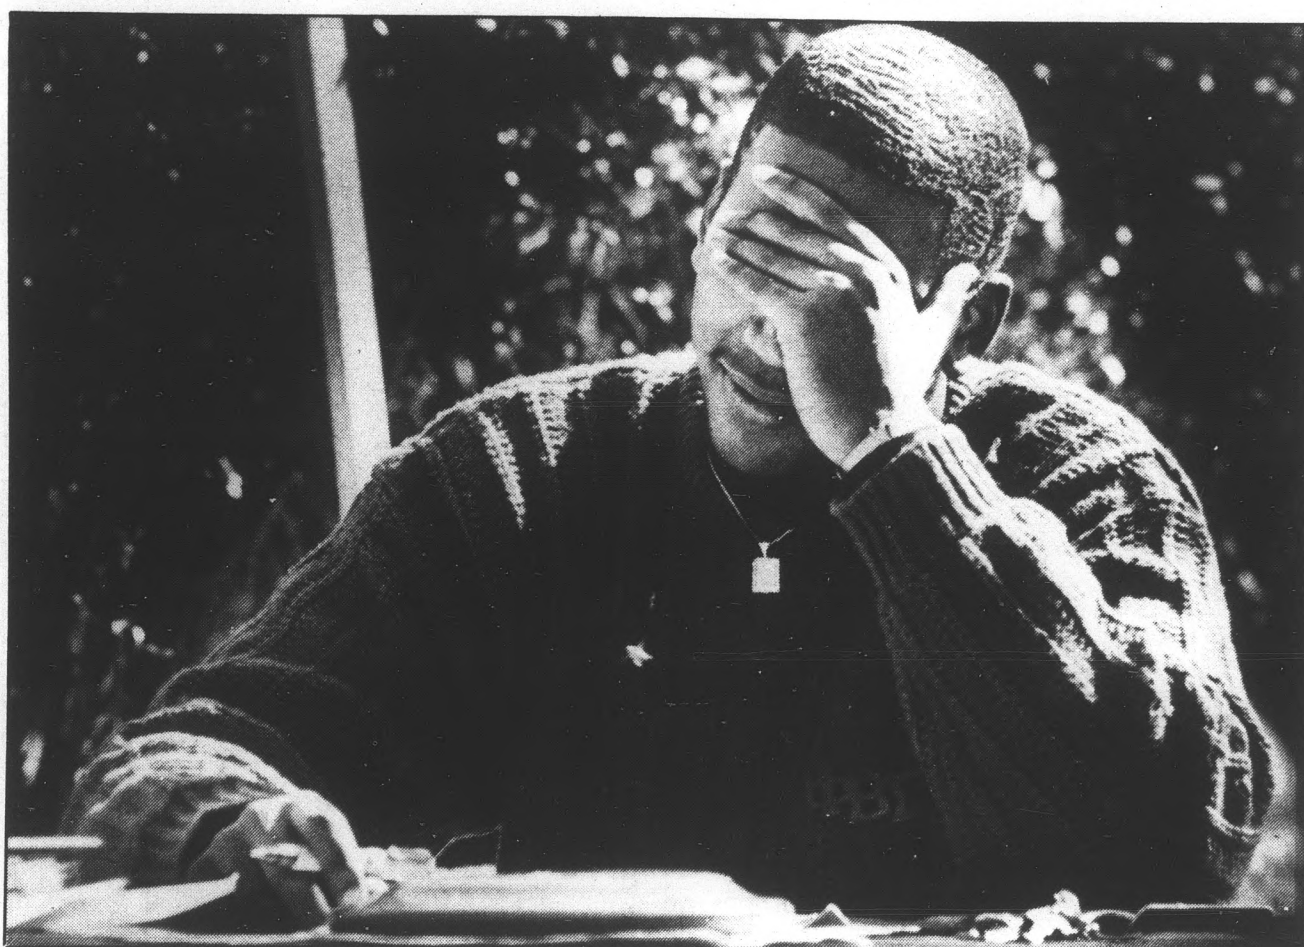

"Every student has a right to that information before signing up for that class," Goudinoff said. "They ought to have something beyond dorm gossip."

But the proposal has drawn criticism from Heinz Hink, a Scottsdale representative who also is an ASU political science professor.

He said the measure is an invasion of privacy. "I don't post students' grades because I think it's an invasion of privacy," Hink said. "I think a student's evaluation of an instructor is so (the professor) has the benefit of knowing what is positive and what is lacking."

But Goudinoff said while tuition continues to increase and classes and student services are canceled, students should have some way to decide which professors are the best teachers.

"At a time when we are raising fees and cutting services, it seems something that is most appropriate," he said.

Bargain Hawaii airfare requires 8-day hotel package

By MICHAEL ROWELL
State Press

Fliers advertising $29 round-trip airfare to Honolulu or Maui that have inundated ASU parking lots the last few days may not be offering quite such a bargain overall.

World Travel Vacation Brokers, Inc., the company responsible for the fliers, offers the bargain ticket prices with the stipulation that the buyer also book an eight-day/seven-night hotel package through their company.

A World Travel salesperson said the price of a moderate, off-the-beach hotel in Honolulu would be $500 to $700 plus the airfare and tax per person.

Certificates for the airfare must be purchased from the company, and hotel reservations must be made 45 days in advance.

World Travel is based in Illinois and has a branch at 625 W. Southern Ave., Mesa. The company has been in operation in Mesa since December.

Larry Quinn, supervisor at the Mesa branch, said the certificates are good until Dec. 1989.

According to the company's flier, the airfare savings are obtained by purchasing excess frequent flyer coupons from large corporations.

But Peggy Dickey, manager of Terra Travel in Mesa, said her company offers a week's stay in Hawaii in a comparable hotel for as little as $424 per person.

She said World Travel may be getting a good deal on airfare, but it's not getting as good a deal as other agencies on hotels.

"I don't think that they're doing anything wrong or illegal," Dickey said, though she questioned the legality of brokering frequent flyer coupons.

"I would be hesitant to do that," she said.

According to TravelAge West, a travel publication, the Department of Transportation and the Illinois state attorney general recently forced the company to change similar advertising tactics in that state.

Ruth Zemek of the Phoenix Better Business Bureau said 234 inquiries have been made since Jan. 1, but no one has filed a written complaint.

Quinn said he did not feel his advertising was misleading, and that all aspects of the deal are made clear by the salespeople.

"It's quite plain when you call up," he said.

Quinn challenged any better deal offered by travel agencies.

"If we can't meet or beat the price, we'll make up the difference three times in cash," he said.

Quinn said this guarantee is printed on the flight certificates.

Zemek said the Chicago BBB has reported numerous calls indicating considerable confusion over the cost of the airfare.

A spokeswoman for the Chicago BBB said the company still was operating in Illinois.

"As far as I know, they have responded to our complaints," she said.

Zemek said World Travel was "a matter of concern" to the BBB, and the bureau advises people to be cautious in dealing with the company because of their method of conducting business.

According to the TravelAge West article, the consumer fraud division of the Arizona state attorney general's office said they were aware of World Travel and are asking for documentation from the state of Illinois.

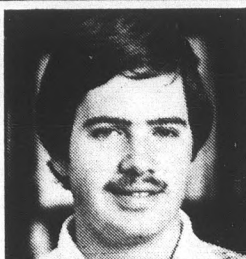

When asked to verify this, a spokeswoman for the consumer fraud division said she could not comment on any complaints or investigations pending.

Committee holds legislation on evolution, morality

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — The Arizona House Education Committee held two bills Wednesday that would change the way evolution and sex education are taught in public schools.

Committee Chairman Jim Green, R-Tucson, decided to table the bills until members of the committee can get more information on the measures.

The first bill would allow teachers to present creationism along with evolution as theories in classrooms.

The second bill would restrict teachers from placing students in "role playing" situations that deal with morality or from testing students on morality, such as sex education tests on birth control.

The bills, both sponsored by Rep. Gary Giordano, R-New River, have been approved by legislators last year but were both vetoed by former Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

Giordano said he introduced the bills to give parents some say in what their children are taught in public schools.

But some legislators are worried that the bills would leave school districts vulnerable to lawsuits against teachers who

'A number of parents have told me that their children were influenced away from religion by the way evolution was taught in the schools.'

— Jim Cooper

might not mention creationism when lecturing about the origins of man or who might ask questions on a test that would involve morality.

Jim Cooper, Gov. Evan Mecham's adviser on education and the former chairman of the House Education Committee, said he supports the measures because they also will enforce what children are learning at home.

He said a recent Phoenix Gazette poll indicated that about 65 percent of those asked would support teaching creationism along with theories of evolution.

"A number of parents have told me that their children were influenced away from religion by the way evolution was taught in the schools," Cooper said.

But Rep. Peter Goudinoff, D-Tucson, is concerned that the Legislature may be setting itself — and school districts — up for a series of lawsuits if the bills are approved.

"This is not the Maricopa County philosophy board," he said. "These are laws and they are going to be on the books."

He said if the bills are approved, it would force teachers to acknowledge parents' beliefs although those beliefs may be contradictory to facts.

"What are you going to do with the situation where the kid in class says 'My dad says the world is flat,'" Goudinoff asked.

Cooper, a Mesa Republican, said he is not opposed to laws placing those types of restrictions on teachers.

"If the student wants to say the earth is flat, the teacher doesn't have any right to tell him to believe otherwise," he said.

"There are lawsuits about everything in the world anyway."

The committee will vote on the bills Feb. 11.

ASASU elections director seeking increased voter turnout

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

The Associated Students elections director said Wednesday his main goal for the spring campaigns is to increase student voter turnout.

Patrick McWhortor, who was confirmed as elections director by the ASASU Senate Feb. 3, said "we want to increase student awareness of how easy it is to vote, and that they can vote."

"We want students to have an opportunity to see what is happening in the election, and how it can affect them."

Ease of voting, effects of outcomes essential knowledge for all students

McWhortor is responsible for overseeing all aspects of the ASASU election process, including determining the number and location of polling booths, setting deadline dates, and protecting the ballots.

McWhortor, a junior education/political science major, said the job of elections director is "right up my alley."

"I'm fascinated with the elections process, and I like to manage," he said.

"I've had some experience on the campaign side, and I wanted to see the other side of the coin."

College of Law Sen. Phil Stanfield, a member of the Elections Screening Committee that chose McWhortor, told the senate "we had some very qualified applicants, but he had good qualifications and was the best for the job."

McWhortor, 22, transferred to ASU from Mesa Community College this semester.

He has been involved in state politics for several years and worked on the campaign of Sen. Dennis Deconcini in 1982.

A graduate of McClintock High School in Tempe, McWhortor served as news director of radio station KATO in Safford in 1984 and 1985.

Flamboyant pianist dies; fans grieve for Liberace

By The Associated Press

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Liberace, the unequalled king of glitter who dazzled audiences for four decades with romantic piano flourishes and outrageous costumes, died Wednesday. He was 67.

The entertainer died at 2:05 p.m. PST, surrounded by family, his manager, housekeepers and friends, said Denise Collier, his spokeswoman in New York.

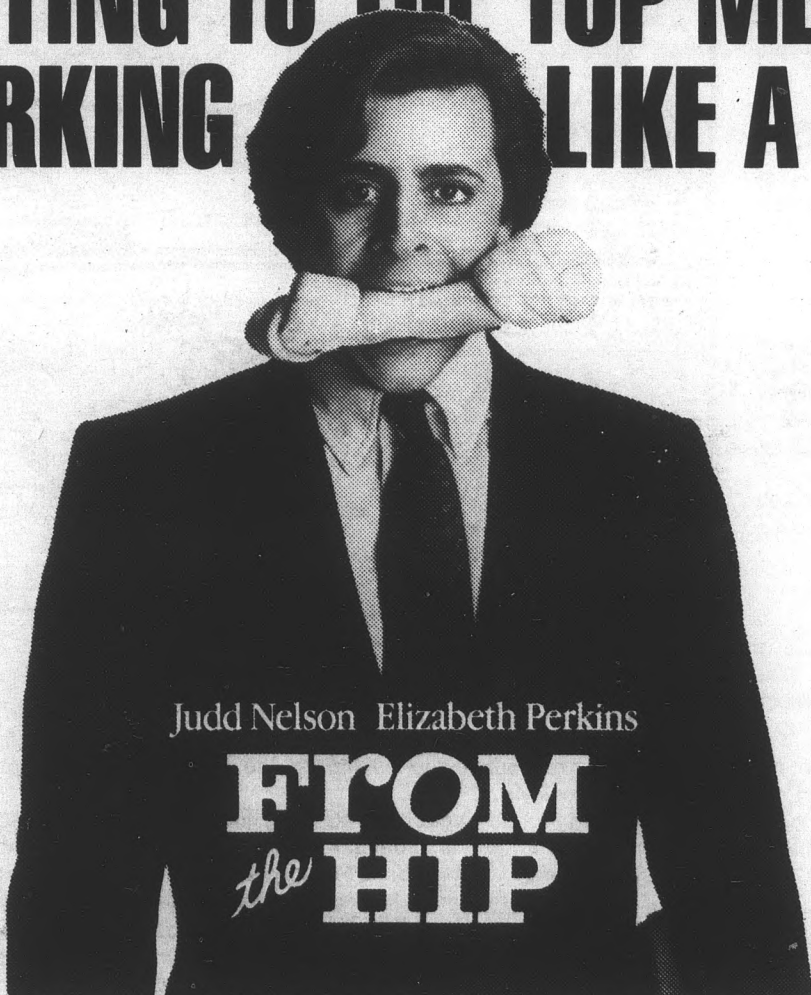

Liberace had been gravely ill for weeks with what aides said was anemia, emphysema and heart disease, and he had lapsed into a coma Tuesday. Spokesmen denied a published report that he had AIDS.

The cause of death was cardiac arrest due to congestive heart failure brought on by subacute encephalopathy, a general term for a degenerative disease of the brain, said Dr. Ronald Daniels.

On Monday, when word spread that death was imminent, friends and relatives gathered at his home, Casa de Liberace. Dozens of fans and reporters stood vigil outside.

Allowing school prayer protects students' rights

"One nation under God," or so the Pledge of Allegiance tells us. Lately though, it seems as if this country has alienated itself from its strong religious heritage. People have misconstrued our founding fathers' intentions. These errors in judgment have led to school prayer being taken out of our public schools.

Many uninformed people would disagree with me. There are those who would state, unjustly, "People can pray in school if they want to," but the fact is they cannot. Documented cases throughout the United States have shown how our government is no longer taking a neutral stance on religion; in fact, it is actually discouraging it.

The countless cases can best be exemplified by the following examples:

- A blind Catholic girl was forbidden from praying on a school bus in New Jersey.
- A high school football team from Tennessee was forbidden from saying a voluntary prayer before their games.
- Another high school couple in California was told that they could not pray in their car while it was on school property.
- A school principal in Florida ripped out pages of the high school yearbook that contained photos of the Bible Club.

A. Marcus Brnovich
Columnist

Nationwide, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that it is illegal to hang up copies of the Ten Commandments in public schools. The cases are endless of religious groups being barred from campuses and public buildings.

It seems strange that local communist organizations can meet at these public buildings, but local Bible clubs cannot.

The First Amendment states, "Congress shall make no laws respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." In the past 20 years, the government has not had a neutral stance when it comes to religion. It seems contradictory that a nation that is proud of its religious heritage (check your history books) would kick God out of a child's life for 12 years.

Still others feel that a public school is not the place for God or religion. Once again, look to your history books for the answer. The main reason why schools were set up was to teach children about God, morality and ethics. As John Ruskin once said, "Let us reform our schools and we shall find little reform needed in our prisons."

The final argument brought up by opponents of school prayer is the issue of a "national theocracy." For 175 years, children prayed in public schools. I know of no one's life that was changed for the worse because he or she prayed in schools.

An amendment returning the right to pray to our schools is necessary to protect everyone's rights. No person should be denied his or her right to practice religion freely and that includes being able to pray where they want.

Do not get me wrong. I am not saying that we should have some pre-written, specific national prayer. Because of various religious beliefs, not all people believe in Jesus Christ or Buddha, and a specific prayer would create problems. What I am saying is let us protect everyone's right to practice their religion freely.

It is about time we restored some common sense to our laws.

A. Marcus Brnovich is a junior majoring in political science.

Priorities at ASU

Editor:
The Arizona Legislature should take note of the recent actions of the ASU administration. Gov. Evan Mecham and the Legislature requested ASU to reduce the University's budget. In turn, the ASU administration cut classes and raised salaries of the administrators. Can anyone guess where the administration's priorities lie?

Meaning misconstrued

Editor:
I commend the State Press on the large front page coverage last Tuesday, and on the generally accurate reporting of the campus meetings about "Star Wars" research.

When the reporters used direct quotes from the printed notes of my talk which I gave them, they were precisely correct. However, when they interpreted an offhand remark I made as a response in the question period, they misconstrued my meaning. I am a little pained by the way it came out. And by the editor's choice of the sideline remark as if were the tenor of my talk, which it was not!

I was reported to have said, "All this talk of strategy is horrible. We ought to think as (Walter) Cronkite does, that the best route is unilateral disarmament."

I do not — repeat, do not — favor unilateral disarmament. Nothing in the printed notes, which are available for anyone to have, implied my approval of anything except negotiated multilateral nuclear build-down.

Here is the context. In the question period, Dr. Golden said that all the talk (my talk) about strategy was horrible. And I responded, "I can see how it might seem horrible. Perhaps we ought to think as Cronkite does, that the best route is unilateral disarmament."

I presented pros and cons of "Star Wars." I tried to make some fun of President Reagan's early talk of helping the U.S.S.R. get "Star Wars" along with us. I emphasized the good use of "Star Wars" research to help bring the Soviets to mutual disarmament. And I noted the use of U.S. "Star Wars" plans by Reagan to stop disarmament talks at Reykjavik.

Finally, I objected to any likely deployment of "Star Wars" which would 1) destroy nuclear disarmament negotiation, 2) threaten the balance of power and encourage Soviet hawks to consider a first strike and 3) give the chance, if deployed, of a first strike by the U.S. radical right, if they had power, at a cost of unknowable scores of millions of American lives and, throughout the world, heretofore unimaginable destruction and suffering.

If the Soviets will agree to eliminate nuclear weapons, with appropriate verification, as they now say they would, we must do likewise. The arms race must stop. I am convinced that it must not proceed into "Star Wars." Sanity and humanity require that we move back from the present brink of worldwide catastrophe.

What's the point?

Editor:
This is addressed to A. Marcus Brnovich. I have but one question for you. What is the purpose or value of your column on the Lesbian and Gay Academic Union? In other words, what particular point are you trying to make?

Your homophobia is so unimpressive and your ignorance is much more pitifully amusing than the dance at the MU. I do realize the limits in funding at this University and I am also very familiar with the Associated Students of ASU bylaws and yet, I fail to see the humor that you do in seeing two men dancing together. The warmth and security you get from your sock drawer, some of us get from human beings.

Perhaps many "straight" people were not at that dance, but I, for one, was. and I am sure that I am speaking for everyone, straight or gay, when I say I am thankful you were at home in your frat house with your socks.

'Double Dealer' policy making U.S. seem two-faced

The new foreign policy of the United States is to feed disinformation to both countries engaged in a war so that neither one can win. It's called the "No-Win Good Neighbor Fairness Doctrine."

The need for such a policy came to light when the Iraqis and Iranians started shooting at each other six years ago and the United States decided it would be a disaster if one of them won.

A special working group called "Double Dealer" was set up in a safe house on North Pindexter Street to see it did not happen.

Luke Booney, recently retired from the CIA, the National Security Council, Southern Airways, Singlaub's Raiders and the Iranian-American Friendship Society, is in charge of Double Dealer. He said the program is one of the most complicated projects the United States has ever been involved with.

Booney told me, "It's one thing to see that one side defeats another in war. It's much

Art Buchwald
Los Angeles Times
Syndicate

more difficult to make sure both lose."

I said, "No one said being even-handed in war was a picnic."

"The only thing that keeps us going is that we hate the people running Iran — and we can't stomach those running Iraq."

"Recently you gave Iran arms to beat up on Iraq. Aren't you tilting towards the Ayatollah?"

"No, because at the same time we gave Iraq top secret satellite photos showing where the Iranian arms were. This is a perfect example of double dealing. It's called playing both sides against the Middle East. The Iraqis got arms to kill Iraqis, the Iraqis received intelligence photos to destroy the Iranians, and we got money for the contras."

"What else does Double Dealer do to keep the war stalemated?"

"We provide misinformation to both sides. Recently Iraq was expecting an attack on its border by the Iranians. We misinformed the Iraqis where the Iranians were going to come. The Iraqis prepared their defense in one place and the Iranians attacked in another."

"How did you guarantee that the Iraqis wouldn't gain the upper hand?"

"We sold them faulty arms so when they attacked, their missiles would fail. Because of our reliable disinformation no one got anywhere. Excuse me, I have to send a telex to Tehran informing them that Baghdad is going to overrun Qof (Qom)."

"That's not true, is it?" I asked.

"Of course not, but it might slow down the fighting in Basra. We don't want the Iraqis to win in Basra because it will only encourage them to keep fighting. The Fairness Doctrine requires that both sides get so exhausted they ask us to be the peacemakers."

"Is this the first war the United States ever got involved with in which we didn't want anyone to win?"

"There have been others, but this is the first one which we've taken such an active role in. The reason why is because we have both Iran and Iraq's best interests at heart."

"I read the other day that Iraq claims the disinformation you gave them produced a disastrous defeat for them at the Iraqi seaport of Fao. They're pretty darned mad about it."

"They have nothing to be upset about. Double Dealers are scrupulous about seeing that everyone gets a fair shake."

"How can they be sure they're getting equal amounts of disinformation?"

Booney said, "They just have to trust us."

Brnovich has boring social life

Editor:

A. Marcus Brnovich alleges in his column of Jan. 29 that the purpose of the dance being held by the Lesbian and Gay Academic Union is "to attract sympathy and to milk funds from (Associated Students of ASU)." This is not actually the case. There are many purposes for such an event. One purpose is to continue the education of homophobic people like Brnovich and remind him that gay people have legitimate needs. This dance also helps provide for the social needs of gay and lesbian people. There is no place near this campus or in Tempe for gay, lesbian or bi-sexual people to socialize or dance together without fear of people like Brnovich laughing at them. Or yelling at them. Or throwing rocks or bottles at them. Or even beating them with baseball bats, whipping them with chains or cutting them with knives. These are precisely the well-documented types of violence that gay and lesbian people can expect as punishment for being themselves in this society.

Trivial pursuits

Editor:

Last semester some very weighty issues were debated in this forum: the human rights of custodians, the ethics of puppy raffling and the great question of whether the world's Moslems are by nature murderous or pacific. Already this semester, lively exchanges have developed over the spirit and quality of the ASU Sun Devil Marching Band and Martin Luther King's proper place in history. In this letter, I propose to raise two issues that — while perhaps not of great moment — directly affect students here on a daily basis.

Firstly, the clocks on campus are notoriously inaccurate. It is not a clock here and a clock there, but what seems a significant minority of them. My impression of the dimensions of this problem has been corroborated by every student I've discussed it with. Clocks here behave so oddly and display such a variety of times that I sometimes feel like a fugitive from an old episode of "The Twilight Zone," with the very fabric of space-time shattering around me. I've witnessed all manner of chronological perversity: in just the Language and Literature Building, I've seen a clock that faithfully registered the passage of a single minute each day, and one that was usually three hours slow, but would periodically make a valiant attempt to catch up, ticking away furiously at a pace of two minutes forward and one back, but never quite make it back to real time. It was truly a pathetic sight. At times it has been hard for me to resist hanging cards bearing the names of foreign capitals beneath errant clocks as a protest against their unreliability. I would like to buy a watch, but the recent tuition increases and the ever-rising price of the exotic cherimoya fruit — a staple of Ev Mecham for President!

Editor:

Tom Blodgett's editorial of Jan. 30, "Mecham unworthy bearer of Arizona political torch," was, to say the least, unconvincing and shallow.

Mr. Blodgett's claim that Evan Mecham "served only one term in the state legislature 20 years ago" and his profession (Pontiac dealer) do not qualify him for the governorship. Blodgett fails to understand, as do many of his journalist colleagues, that the only things that "qualify" anyone to run for public office are: one's age, residence, a desire to become a servant of the public and most importantly, a thorough understanding of, and commitment to, the Constitution of the United States — all of which Evan Mecham has and is.

The only thing "shocking" (and refreshingly so) about Mecham is his commitment in enacting governmental policies under the principles and guidelines of our state and U.S. Constitutions (unlike Blodgett "torchbearers" Babbitt, McCain and Udall).

So, you see, it is important for gays and lesbians to have social events where it is safe for two women or two men to dance together without derisive laughter or other forms of abuse. And for members of the larger gay and lesbian community of Phoenix to show their support by coming to such an event. Even though Brnovich won't believe it, it is also a chance for supportive straight people to show their support for the LGAU.

One wonders how Brnovich knows the event could be "a charade of a dance." Did he have more information he was not sharing with us? It seems silly to follow the lead of a man whose idea of a fun Friday night is to stay home and play with his socks. While he is at it, perhaps Brnovich should check into his collection of white sheets and pointed hoods. I, for one, had a good time at the dance.

my diet — have conspired to place even the most inferior timepiece beyond my means. I see no reason why the clocks here cannot be better maintained.

Which brings me to pencil sharpeners — or rather, to the grave deficit of them which exists on campus. In my elementary school there was a pencil sharpener in every room — even the bathrooms (I haven't a clue why). I don't have to tell any student how scarce this fundamental amenity of education is here. I refuse to buy one of those little football helmets or Smurfs purporting to be pencil sharpeners, which in my experience are as likely to massacre a pencil as hone it.

Requiring a student to carry a pencil sharpener on his person seems to me every bit as absurd as requiring that he bring his own chair to school and drag it from class to class. With plans afoot to build an underground city beneath Cady Mall to house the overflow of books from Hayden Library, I don't see why some money cannot be found for pencil sharpeners. I am aware, though, that ASU is currently experiencing a funding crisis. It is my considered opinion that if we were to defenestrate the entire Art History department and use the monies thus freed to purchase several hundred state-of-the-art pencil sharpeners, the University would receive not only a financial net gain, but a practical one as well.

I thank you for the opportunity to present my concerns — trivial though they may well be — to the university community.

Mecham's resistance against becoming a pawn of the establishment is an inspiration to all of those dedicated to principle. It has been so long since Arizona has had a governor who is not afraid to step on misguided political toes, that some have forgotten what a governor is.

Whether one likes or dislikes Ev Mecham, it is interesting to note that his office at the Capitol has been receiving phone calls from across the nation urging him to run for President of the United States.

The American people want strong, unwavering leaders who are not afraid to speak their minds.

How rewarding it would be (for the restoration of this nation) to have a President who not only talked the right line — but who also acted upon it.

Ev Mecham for President! But only after he has served two full terms as governor of Arizona.

State Press is left-wing

Editor:

Kudos to A. Marcus Brnovich for his "opinion" regarding the CBS anti-nuclear film presentation. Based on my experience both as a student and as a guest lecturer here at ASU, I was amazed that the State Press would run such a sensible piece of journalism. Much of what is usually printed in the State Press is as leftist as many of the professors here at the University. I have no problem with that except that alternative "rightist" opinions are usually not expressed or even tolerated.

CBS is often referred to as the Communist Broadcasting System. If it is left up to CBS and most of the other major media affiliates, we will never hear the truth about Soviet expansionism, disinformation or the true objectives of the Soviet and other communist nations. It is time that the truth be presented and that college students and Americans in general stop being journalistically bludgeoned into guilt reflexes about identifying out enemies. It is OK to call communists, both foreign and domestic, our enemies and treat them as such.

The future of freedom is America's responsibility. To meet our historical mandate as the guardian of liberty, we cannot accomplish it through appeasement, accommodation or negotiation with the sworn mortal enemies of liberty. Our future and the future of as yet unborn generations is being decided right now. Strength — conventional, unconventional and nuclear — are the only things that deter communist aggression.

Servicing fewer students

Editor:

The article by Tina Daunt clearly conveyed the message that the budget proposed by Gov. Evan Mecham will force trade-offs that may be difficult for all. I would, however, like to correct the numbers which missed by a factor of ten.

The College of Business' decision package of $1.8 million would allow the college to have a full faculty of 210 and to serve approximately 84,000 student credit hours each semester (28,000 students each semester) and remain in compliance with out an accrediting agency.

There are two alternatives. If the college would receive no budget increase, we would have 170 faculty and service 66,000 student credit hours each semester (22,000 students each semester). Or, with our current full-time faculty of 192, we could service 75,000 student credit hours each semester (25,000 students each semester). However, with the latter alternatives, the college would require approximately $700,000 to meet the minimum resources under our accrediting guidelines.

Under any of these plans, we will be servicing fewer students than in the past. In the fall of 1984, the college offered classes for 31,000 students.

Hey, Mikey; they like it

Editor:

Here is a good word for Mike Ritter's editorial cartoons: TERRIFIC.

That word especially applies to the "Let them drive Pontiacs" and "The ASU Messiahs."

Unlike Steve Redd in his Jan. 29 letter to the editor, I am able to distinguish a satire from a slam.

Jesus had a sense of humor; too bad so few Christians who write letters to the editor have one.

Budget cuts backed by regent candidate

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

Gov. Evan Mecham's nominee to the Arizona Board of Regents said he plans to investigate the problems at the ASU Research Park and strive to balance research and teaching at the University.

Although Ralph Watkins' nomination still is pending the approval of the Arizona Legislature, he attended the Jan. 16 regents meeting in Phoenix. He voted against the regents' proposal to return 4.5 percent of the 1986-87 budget to the state. Mecham had requested the universities to return 7 percent of their budgets.

Although Watkins voted against the proposal, he contends he wants "to make the university system stronger than it is now."

"I had to make a judgment call," he said. "The bigger problem is the state problem."

Mecham requested the 1986-87 cut to help offset a state budget shortfall of about $160 million.

Watkins, who replaces the late William P. Reilly, was appointed in the midst of controversy.

Former Gov. Bruce Babbitt originally had appointed then-Senate President Stan Turley, who had criticized Mecham during his campaign.

Shortly after Mecham took office, Attorney General Bob Corbin said Turley had been appointed illegally.

In Corbin's opinion lawmakers cannot be appointed to state boards, including the regents panel, until their legislative terms expire. Turley's term expired a month after he was appointed.

Turley did not attempt to refute Corbin's opinion.

Watkins, who worked as Mecham's finance chairman during his campaign, said his appointment came as a surprise.

"When I went to work for the governor I never expected anything in return," he said. "I told him I would take the position only if he thought I was truly the best person for the job."

Watkins said the regent position, which is unpaid, is the only job he would have taken.

"A position on the Board of Regents is the most prestigious appointment a governor can make," he said. "It's one of those jobs that you don't need to get paid for — you do it out of love."

"Besides, I've done everything else."

Watkins graduated from ASU in 1951, when it was still Arizona State College. He has served on the Sun Angel Foundation Board and the University Club. Watkins was awarded the ASU Most Distinguished Alumni Award in 1970 and the ASU Alumni Achievement Award in 1982.

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 7 a.m. Wednesday:

- An ASU student was involved in a two-car collision behind 620 Alpha Drive, police said. The student's 1986 gold Pontiac sustained $840 in damage.
- Police said someone used a sharp object to scratch the paint on the passenger's side of a student's 1973 Chevrolet Camaro. Estimated damage is $300.

•Police said a man not affiliated with the University was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital after fighting on Orange Street in front of a Tempe Post Office.

- He was treated for possible neck injuries and released.
- Two ASU students playing basketball on opposite teams broke into a fight during a game in the Physical Education West gymnasium, police said.

One student elbowed the other in the left eye, which left him with a cut eyelid, bruises and scratches on his chin and back, police said.

Both students refused to prosecute or accept medical treatment, police said.

•Students reported bicycle thefts:

A men's black Schwinn beach cruiser bicycle, valued at $110, was stolen from bike racks at the Psychology Building, where it was locked.

A men's red Schwinn Varsity 10-speed bike, valued at $100, was stolen from the east side of 410 Adelphi Drive, where it was locked.

A men's blue Makaha Cruiser, valued at $100, was stolen from the east side of 410 Adelphi Drive, where it was left unlocked.

A men's blue Sear's 12-speed bicycle, valued at $100, was stolen from bike racks east of Palo Verde West Residence Hall, where it was locked.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents ending noon Wednesday:

•A 13-year-old Tempe girl found a razor blade in a submarine sandwich left over from a birthday party, police said.

Police said the girl took a bite from the sandwich and found the razor blade when she lifted the top half of the sandwich to remove the tomatoes and lettuce.

The sandwich had been delivered to the girl's home, 2110 E.

Ellis Drive, by Appetito's Restaurant, 1852 E. Baseline Road, police said.

Police said four feet of the six-foot submarine sandwich had been eaten and the rest had been put into the refrigerator.

•A Tempe man was arrested for allegedly robbing a Circle K at gunpoint, police said.

Police said the man entered the store, at 1910 S. Priest

Drive, pointed a gun at the clerk and told him to open the cash register.

The man asked the clerk to go into the store's back room while he removed $56.25 and ran to his vehicle.

The man was arrested as he tried to get into his vehicle, police said.

Proposal to require AIDS test raises ethical questions

By The Associated Press

PHOENIX — A federal agency's proposal to require AIDS testing of all hospital patients and marriage-license applicants raises serious ethical questions and probably would be of little benefit, a state health official said Wednesday.

"Testing people because they are admitted to a hospital doesn't make a lot of sense," said Dr. Stephen Engler, an epidemiologist for the state Department of Health Services' division of disease control. "What's to be learned from it?"

Engler also questioned the wisdom of testing couples who apply for marriage licenses, as proposed by the Centers for Disease Control. It would be extremely costly and would be of little or no use in preventing the spread of AIDS, Engler said.

"Are you going to deny them a marriage license?" he asked. "Are you going to deny them the right to have children?"

But Dr. Eskild A. Peterson, associate professor of internal medicine at the University of Arizona in Tucson, said testing for AIDS on such a broad scale could be beneficial.

"I can see it in a marriage situation," Peterson said. "Whether one's partner has AIDS is certainly something one ought to know. In a hospital situation, shouldn't the surgeon or the lab technician who handles the blood know if the patient does represent a risk?"

But Engler and Robert Hegyi, director of the Arizona AIDS Information Line, said the risk of contracting acquired immune deficiency syndrome in the hospital is not great.

"I think there's been about two cases in this country where people have contracted AIDS through accidental needle punctures or by handling patients," Hegyi said. "And in those cases it generally was an accident caused by carelessness."

Dr. Ernest Feigenbaum, Maricopa County public health director, compared the proposal to test marriage-license applicants to syphilis tests formerly administered to couples seeking marriage licenses.

Engler agreed with that analogy, saying those blood tests "were finding two or three per 1,000 who tested positive, and we already knew about most of them."

Hegyi said he is concerned about what would happen to the individual who tested positive for the AIDS virus.

"I know some doctors just inform the patient that the test was positive, then walk away," he said. "That person then goes home and blows his brains out without even knowing if they have the disease."

Astronaut team launches p

By The Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Three of the astronauts who will fly the first space shuttle mission since the Challenger exploded began training as a team Wednesday, practicing launches and landings in a simulator.

Pilot Richard Covey and mission specialists John M. Lounge and David C. Hilmers entered a computer-driven cockpit simulator at the Johnson Space Center for four hours of practicing the intricate procedures required to launch and land the space shuttle.

Mission commander Frederick H. "Rick" Hauck and mission specialist George D. Nelson were out of town Wednesday, but all five crew members are scheduled to start joint training next week.

They are scheduled to be launched from the Kennedy Space Center on the space shuttle Discovery on Feb. 18, 1988, although that date is expected to be pushed back. It will be the first shuttle flight since the Challenger exploded on Jan. 28, 1986, killing its seven crew members. The shuttle fleet is grounded until engineers correct flaws that caused the Challenger accident.

The mission is planned as a four-day flight, with the astronauts placing a satellite in orbit and operating a package of scientific instruments. Landing is to be at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Training coordinator Frank Hughes said Wednesday's exercise was routine.

He said Covey sat in the pilot's seat of the simulator, with Hilmers in the commander's couch on the left side of the cockpit. Lounge was behind Covey for support duties, similar to those of a flight engineer on an airliner. Only Covey was in the role he will assume on the actual mission.

The simulator is a duplicate of the shuttle flight deck. Computers simulate signals from actual shuttle equipment and make the cockpit instruments respond as if in real flight. Television screens in place of the cockpit windows give views similar to what the crewmen would see during an actual mission.

Hughes said Wednesday's training was designed to keep the astronauts tuned up for training problems that will be specifically designed for their mission.

"This will be just a routine training session," said Hughes. "We've got months before it really matters."

The principle payload of the Discovery mission is a Tracking and Data Relay Satellite that NASA will use to relay signals from orbiting spacecraft.

ASU Public Affairs Professor Frank J. Sackton is featured in Channel 8's encore presentation of American Caesar on Valley Showcase. This 5-part series tells the life story of one of history's most enigmatic military leaders — General Douglas MacArthur.

Professor Sackton, now Special Advisor to President Nelson, served as Personal Aide to General MacArthur during the U.S. occupation of Japan. His special insights close each episode of American Caesar, a sweeping panorama of 20th-century wars and politics.

English education system stresses understanding

By SHELLY SCHAFFER
State Press

A London exchange student, teaching elementary schoolchildren part-time, says the American education system is "much more structured" than the English system.

Symone Foster said the teachers in England "have a lot more say. (Education) is not district, state or nationally planned. It's more up to the school's headmistress. Different teachers do things different ways."

Foster said students in England are not tested like children in America.

"Students are just monitored to see how they are progressing, and they just move with age unless they have a learning development problem," she said.

Andy Mrozinski/State Press

Exchange student Symone Foster, 22, talks with first grade students at Carminat Elementary School in Tempe. Foster, who is from Birmingham, England, attends class one day a week at ASU while teaching at the school four days a week.

Foster said the English education system stresses making children understand subjects, rather than just telling them what they should know.

"If we, in England, wanted to learn about the beach and the sea, we would take the kids to the beach for the day or to the city if that was the topic," she said. "But here, students have their set of books, and they must do their math and reading."

"It is important to learn through experience, rather than what is put down in a workbook."

Foster said it was difficult to explain the difference between the two education systems because they are so diverse.

"It is very difficult," she said. "We love it here, and there are really good teachers. It's just much more structured, but both systems work."

Dr. Gary Undersan, coordinating director of the ASU exchange program, said the 10-year-old program is "simply a swap of students."

"Seventeen ASU students pay for tuition, dorm and meal fees for the semester, and the London students do the same," he said. "Then they swap beds. That way no monetary exchange is involved."

The 17 English exchange students are living in P.V. East and teach in one of four Tempe elementary schools Monday to Thursday.

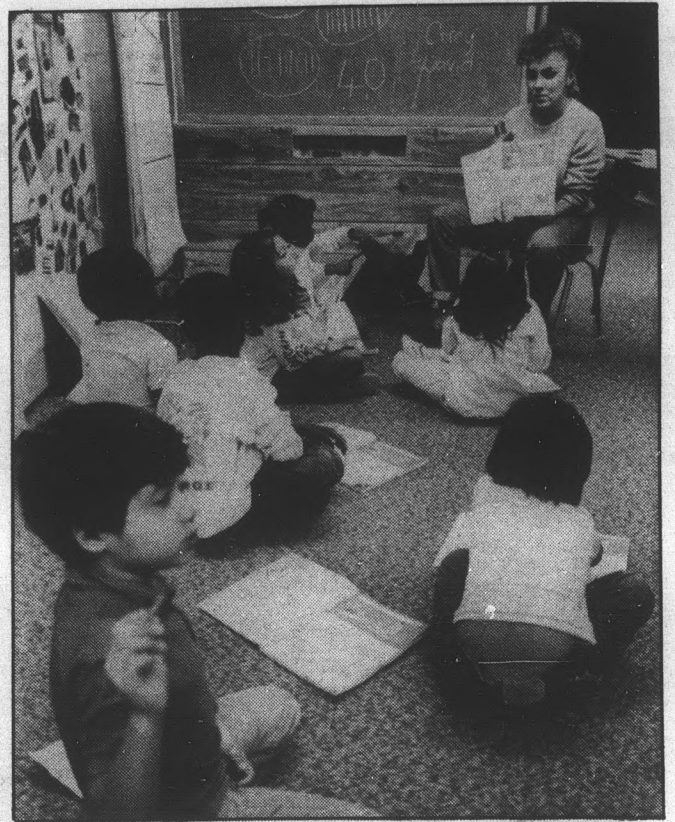

The students come to ASU Fridays for lectures and seminars taught by Bill Crocker, a visiting lecturer of New South Wales, Australia. Topics discussed include foreign policy and standardized testing.

Foster, who works with the first grade at Carminat Elementary School, said, "Student teaching is a real challenge. We spent the first week observing the American system and classroom methods."

"The students seem quite happy, and they are bright."

Crocker said he is "in a good position to compare education systems" because he has taught in Canada, England, America and Australia.

"I'm a great believer in improving international understanding and visits of this kind contribute to this understanding," Crocker said.

Andy Mrozinski/State Press

Symone Foster takes advantage of the small group to talk with Julia Wood, 7, personally and help her understand a few hard to read words.

"Most students think it's a wonderful, wonderful opportunity to visit a country long term, not as a tourist."

Undersan said students have enjoyed the program so much he is exploring other exchange program outside the College of Education.

Trial of Tempe man slated for March in slaying case

By LAUREN MILLETTE
State Press

The trial for a Tempe man charged with first-degree homicide and aggravated assault in connection with the slaying of an ASU student has been set for 11 a.m. March 4.

Roy Young, 850 S. River Drive, is charged in the Sept. 7, 1986 stabbing of sophomore justice studies major Vincent Neiland, also of 850 S. River Drive.

Judge Lyndsay Budzyn told Young's lawyer, Marc

Budoff, that due to "the extraordinary circumstances surrounding the case," the defender would have until Feb. 12 to file any motions for an evidentiary hearing.

Budoff said an evidentiary hearing is filed if the defense wants to present an oral argument justifying the exclusion of certain evidence or the permission to bring new evidence to the case.

Young lived in the same town house as Neiland who was fatally stabbed in the chest and left rib cage during a fight at about 3:51 a.m. Sept. 7, 1986.

Sun Devils hope for upset win over Oregon State

By STEVE BRENNAN
State Press

With two disappointing losses to Arizona last week behind it, the Sun Devil basketball team returns to the University Activity center tonight at 7:30 in hopes of returning to the win column against Pac-10 leader Oregon State.

ASU, despite strong performances from its backcourt combination of Arthur Thomas and Steve Beck, was unable to overcome a tall Wildcat squad last week, dropping its record to 2-8 in the Pac-10 and 6-12 overall.

Oregon State (8-3 and 15-4), has won four games in a row. The Beavers have relied on a smothering, aggressive defense, which has held opponents to a .457 shooting average on the season.

At the same time, OSU has forced an average of 16.6 turnovers a game and picked up 8.4 steals in its 19 outings.

But ASU coach Steve Patterson is optimistic.

"I think we definitely can play competitively with the Oregon schools (ASU plays Oregon Saturday)," Patterson said. "We played both of them tough up there."

The Sun Devils met OSU earlier in the season, with the result an 81-75 Beaver victory.

Patterson said the crowd should be an advantage and has him excited.

"Our crowd was very vocal for the Arizona game last Thursday," he said. "That kind of support has me eagerly looking forward to the games at home this week."

During the last few weeks, ASU has been a backcourt-run team, with Beck and Thomas generating almost all of the Sun Devils' offense.

Beck has been the bright spot for the Sun Devils throughout the season, averaging 20.3 points a game. Beck led the Devils in the two games against Arizona, scoring 26 points in Tempe and 17 in Tucson.

Thomas has averaged 14.7 points a game and has hit 82 percent from the free-throw line.

"Steve Beck and Arthur Thomas are playing great basketball," Patterson said. "Steve has done everything for us but walk on water."

OSU coach Ralph Miller said the Beavers are in a must-win situation.

"It is at the point in the season where the win is very important," he said.

Despite playing solid basketball, inconsistency between halves is something Miller said his team will have to work on to stay at the top of the Pac-10.

"I would like to see a little more consistency between the first and second half," he said. "We play pretty well in the second half, certainly better than we do in the first half."

The Beavers will be led by 6-foot-10 center Jose Ortiz, who is averaging 23.2 points a game, and by guards Gary Payton and Eric Knox, who average 11.9 and 11.5 respectively.

Earlier in the season, the last-place Sun Devils managed to upset a first-place team, California, in the UAC to pick up their second conference victory.

Saturday ASU will take on the Oregon Ducks, currently in sixth place in the Pac-10 with a 6-5 record and 12-8 overall.

The game will be played at 7:30 p.m. in the UAC.

Sun Devil leading scorer Steve Beck is averaging 20.3 points per game.

Some call my roommate a murderer; I call him Mike

My roommate is a hero.
He is a sports hero.
Remnants of past victories fill his house.
Trophy after trophy grace the walls.
Animal skin after animal fur covers the floors.

Do you know what it is like watching TV with a deer head trophy looking you in the face?

Have you ever noticed that deer-head eyes kind of follow you around a room like a portrait of Mona Lisa?

My roommate, you see, is a serious hunter.

Some might call him a murderer.
Others might call him a sportsman.
I just call him Mike.

Hunting has always been a sport that I have never really understood.

Why do men venture into the most rugged of territory, brave the toughest of elements in order to shoot and hopefully kill one of nature's creatures?

Is it hunger?

Not for the most part.
Is it for target practice?

No, there are plenty of indoor and outdoor target ranges for marksmanship.

What is it?

Mike tells me that hunting is a lot like backpacking, but it is a little bit more violent. He just really enjoys venturing into the wilderness. It's exciting.

A little bit more violent than backpacking, Mike?

Hunting is definitely the sport of people of a different breed.

Hunters find it a challenge to stalk down an animal, confront it, so to speak, in a man versus nature manner, and then conquer (kill) it.

Dean Obenauer Sports Analysis Editor

Personally, I do not see a lot of sport in using a high-powered rifle to shoot a deer. Perhaps if deer were able to defend themselves with weapons of their own, I would think it would be more fair.

Using a crossbow against a deer's speed seems much more fair to me. The range of a bow is less than a high-powered rifle and more skill would be involved in actually killing a deer.

Nonetheless, a record-size white-tail deer is mounted in the living room of my roommate's house.

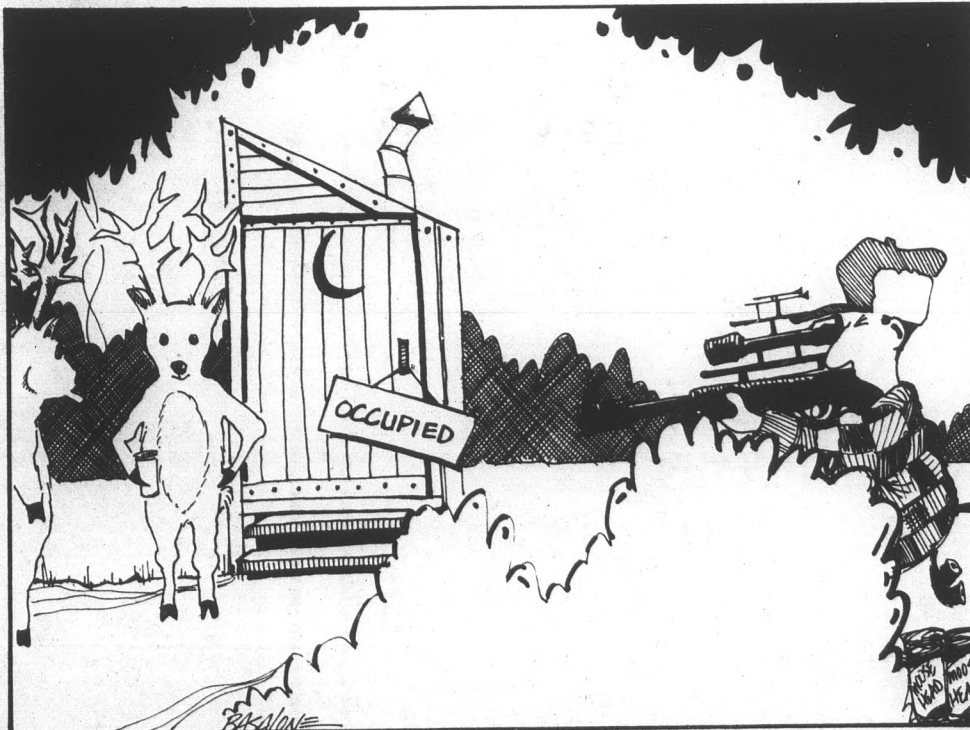

Mike shot it with a very powerful rifle. It was a good shot. The deer never really had a chance.

Being a good hunter, he carried the deer through the forest and back to camp. When he got back home he brought the deer to a butcher and had the meat ground. Mike kept most of the meat and gave the rest away.

There was a sense of purpose to the kill.

Mike and I ate the meat and now everyone who comes to our house can see what a white-tail deer looks like, up close and in person.

On the opposite wall there rests a very healthy looking antelope. He is very healthy, except for the fact that he's dead.

I don't give my roommate as much credit for shooting this one. Mike shot it while it was using the restroom.

Fair game?

Well, despite popular belief, there are no rules involved in a hunt. There is no code of ethics to maintain the rights of all deer.

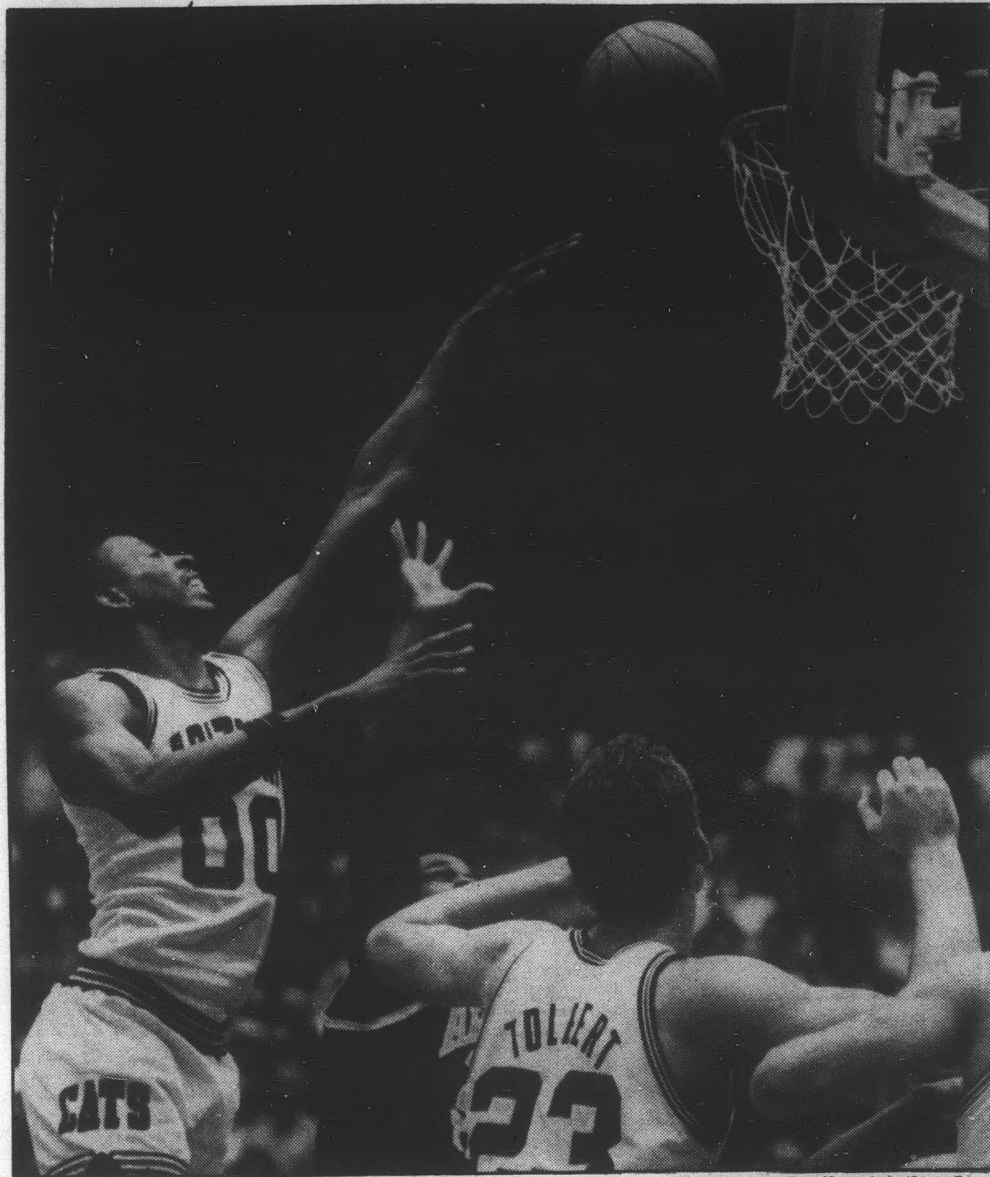

Simply put, during deer season, deer are fair game all season long.

There are no injury time-outs for deer.

There are no time-outs to use the restroom for deer.

I better stop before my head ends up in a living room someplace. I sure would hate to have it be Dean season. Could you imagine going to the bathroom and . . .

Oregon game 'key' for Arizona

By The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — No. 4 Iowa, Lute Olson's old team, comes to town Saturday, but the Arizona basketball coach says a Thursday night conference match-up against Oregon is "the key for us."

Arizona, the defending Pacific-10 Conference champion, is tied for second place with UCLA, a half-game behind 8-3 Oregon State, and is 12-7 overall.

Oregon, 12-8 for the season, and California share fifth in the Pac-10, at 6-5. The Ducks won four straight at home, including two 13-point victories last week over Cal and Stanford.

They also beat Arizona last month in Eugene, 55-54, on a three-point basket by 5-foot-10 guard David Girley with 10 seconds remaining.

"For a midget runt he's been doing a very outstanding job and much better than we really had planned on," Oregon Coach Don Monson said Tuesday in a telephone conference call with reporters.

Girley has hit on 39 of 74 three-point attempts, averaging nearly 53 percent.

"Thursday's what it's all about," said Olson. "This league race is such that if you stub your toe somewhere where you shouldn't stub it, you're probably going to take yourself right out of contention for the title."

Olson said his Wildcats have the same record, with eight regular-season league games left, as a year ago, when they strung together seven straight wins to clinch their first Pac-10 basketball title before a final-game loss to Arizona State.

"Now it just becomes a case of whether we can get that winning streak started like we did last year," Olson said.

Monson hopes to postpone that with continued improved play from 6-11 center Sven Meyer, a senior from West Germany; 6-5 Jesse Nash and 6-7 Keith Balderston, two junior forwards, and 6-4 guard Anthony Taylor joining Girley.

But he's all too aware that "we haven't won a thing" on the road. The Ducks are 0-5 in league away games and 1-6 for the year.

Monson said that when playing Arizona he is as or even more concerned with his own team's offensive performance as in preparing it defensively, because the Wildcats pose so many problems when they play both zone and man-to-man defense.

He also said 6-8 sophomore forward Sean Elliott, Arizona's leading scorer with an 18.6 average, is undoubtedly a key to the Wildcats' play, though "we did a very good job on him last time." Other players Monson is concerned about include junior 6-8 center Tom Tolbert, 6-6 junior guard Craig McMillan and 5-11 guard Ken Lofton.

Monson, who coached McMillan last summer as a member of a Pac-10 team that toured Scandinavia, called him "a great kid with a great attitude" and very good in shooting without having to dribble. He said that can be critical in getting the three-point shot off.

Oregon plays Arizona State on Saturday in Tempe.

Olson said of the nationally televised game against Iowa, "Saturday will take care of itself." The intersectional contest will be fun for the players, he said, but "nothing more than an opportunity to see how far our program's come against a top-rated team in a top-rated conference."

He said his program should benefit by showing that "the type of fan involvement and enthusiasm here is comparable to anywhere in the country."

Stars & Stripes recaptures America's Cup championship

By The Associated Press

FREMANTLE, Australia — The America's Cup is America's again, and Dennis Conner now can be remembered as the first man to regain the Cup instead of the first to lose it.

"It's a great moment for America, a great moment for the Stars & Stripes team," Conner said after guiding the 12-meter yacht Stars & Stripes past Kookaburra III Wednesday and completing a 4-0 sweep for sailing's most prized trophy.

"And a great moment for Dennis Conner."

His blue-hulled boat with the red and white lettering won the final race easily, by one minute, 59 seconds. The gunshot signifying that Stars & Stripes had crossed the finish line, its huge American flag waving, was the opening signal for the victory celebration.

A solid mass of jubilant spectators lined the shore, shouting and smiling as the returning conquerors weaved through a flotilla of boats that flooded the harbor.

More than three years ago, Conner made a similar but very different trip.

It was early evening on Sept. 26, 1983 when he stood aboard Liberty in the darkness of the Newport, R.I., waterfront as his beaten boat came back from the course, the American flag flying at half-staff from his mast.

Australia II had just ended sport's longest winning streak — the 132-year American monopoly on the symbol of sailing supremacy. Conner became the first U.S. skipper to lose the Cup, and it filled him with determination to make the trophy's stay Down Under a short one.

He undertook a $20 million, 2½ year campaign to bring the Cup back, this time sailing for the San Diego Yacht Club rather than the New York Yacht Club, which had held the Cup for those 132 years.

Three new boats were built. Planning and practice consumed thousands of hours. Conner survived more than three months of trials among 13 challenging boats from six nations. He and Stars & Stripes beat New Zealand 4-1 in the January semifinal, which the Kiwi boat entered with a 37-1 record.

Kookaburra III, meanwhile, eliminated Australia IV, owned by an Alan Bond syndicate. A Bond boat defeated Conner in Newport.

At 44 and in his fourth Cup final, Conner had an edge in experience over Kookaburra III skipper Iain Murray, in his first final at age 28.

Now, after 1,227 days as an Australian possession, the Cup is going back to the United States.

Murray, who would like to be design coordinator in his syndicate's next challenge, hopes to return the favor.

"What goes up," he said, "must come down."

Conner, winning Cup skipper aboard Freedom in 1980, knows the feeling.

"I have a great feeling of empathy for the job he's in and the way he's feeling right now," Conner said.

At a news conference the day he lost the Cup, Conner fought unsuccessfully to hold back tears. At Wednesday's news conference, he smiled frequently.

"It'll probably all sink in tomorrow or the next day or the week after," he said. "Right now we're savoring it. I'm thrilled it all worked out for us."

And it worked out so easily. The final four-race match was a mismatch.

It was the 18th American sweep in the 26 Cup competitions, and the first since Ted Turner won with Courageous in 1977.

Stars & Stripes won in light, moderate and heavy winds during the final series. It won 14 of the 16 upwind legs; it won five of the eight downwind legs in which Kookaburra III was thought to be strong; it led after every leg of the eight-leg, 24.1-mile races on the Indian Ocean.

In 12 hours, 50 minutes and 43 seconds of sailing, Kookaburra III led for about 30 minutes and never after the first leg.

Stars & Stripes won the first three races by 1:41, 1:10 and 1:46. Its clinching victory, in moderate to heavy southwest winds of 16 to 20 knots, had the biggest margin.

Schwabe, Sun Devils take on Cal State-LA

Stephen Mouteer/State Press

Pitcher Mike Schwabe has his second start today against Cal State-Los Angeles. In his first outing, Schwabe threw seven innings of one-hit ball en route to a 20-1 victory over San Francisco.

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

Mike Schwabe will attempt to gain his second victory of the season as the ASU baseball team takes on Cal State-Los Angeles at 2:30 p.m. today at Packard Stadium.

Schwabe (1-0) pitched seven innings of one-hit ball in the Devils' 20-1 victory over the University of San Francisco Jan. 30.

Today's game is the first of a three-game series. Friday's game will begin at 2:30 p.m. and Saturday's contest will start at 11:30 a.m.

ASU coach Jim Brock said he is pleased with the job the Devils (3-0) have been doing so far, especially first baseman Martin Peralta, left fielder Dan Rumsey and designated hitter Tony Mattia.

Peralta, playing first base because all-America candidate Ted Dyson is out with a stress fracture of his right hand, has seven hits in his first 13 at bats, including six runs batted in.

Rumsey, one of the Devils' three sophomore outfielders, took advantage of an off-season weight-training program and has increased power. He is 5-for-10, including a double and a triple.

Mattia, a transfer from defending NAIA champion Grand Canyon College, has a single, double, and home run in 11 at bats.

"I never thought I'd say this," Brock said. "But we are benefitting from Ted's injury by being able to play some people."

"When Ted comes back, we will have three quality left-handed bats in the middle of the lineup."

Although Dyson will still be out for two to three more weeks, ASU will get center fielder John Finn back. Finn, who has yet to play this year, had been in Oakland, Calif., for personal reasons. Brock said he is expected to play today.

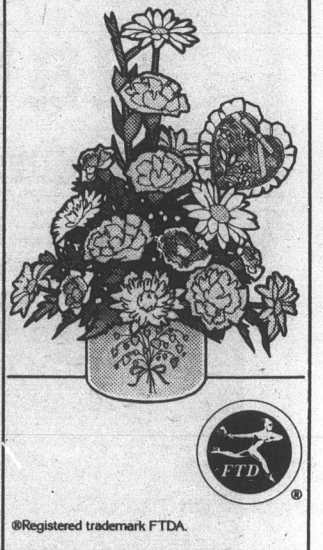

Cal State-LA (2-1-1) is led by right fielder Shaun Doyle.

Professor discovers perfect love potion

After 23 years of research, Dr. Rufus T. Valentine, noted romanceologist, has discovered the perfect love potion.

Said Dr. Valentine, "The FTD® Sweet-heart™ Bouquet is a perfect combination of flowers and a heart-shaped potpourri in a ceramic powder jar. Lab studies have shown it to have a powerful, romantic effect on both sender and recipient."

"However," Dr. Valentine warns, "the effect seems to peak around February 14. And you must make sure to go to an FTD Florist. Otherwise," he added, "you may find yourself spending Valentine's Day alone in a most unromantic place—the library."

Women hoopsters hope to upset Oregon, OSU

Sun Devil Robin Connolly is fourth on the all-time ASU women's scoring list.

Ron Kuczek Jr./State Press

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

ASU women's basketball coach Juliene Simpson is looking for a more aggressive attitude as the Sun Devils take on Oregon State Thursday and Oregon Saturday in the University Activity Center.

Both games start at 5 p.m.
The Beavers (6-3 Pac-10, 15-4 overall) are currently tied for third place in the conference with Oregon and are coming off a sweep of victories last week. The latest came Saturday when the Beavers nipped California by a basket, 69-67.

Coach Aki Hill, in her eighth season at OSU, has three starters returning to a team that is forcing 24.7 turnovers a game.

"They have an excellent defensive game and we will have to adjust our strategy accordingly," Simpson said.

The last time these two teams met was in Gill Coliseum where the Beavers defeated the Sun Devils, 90-72.

The Devils lead the series 2-1 and will be playing the Beavers for the first time this season tonight in the UAC.

Junior guard Monica Raspberry is the leading scorer on the Beavers, averaging 17.3 points per game, which also ranks her fifth in the Pac-10. Raspberry also is No. 3 in steals averaging 2.63 per game.

Returning starter, guard Chelle Flamoe, is averaging 15.4 points per game. Flamoe is also No. 5 in the Pac-10 in field goal percentage shooting 54 percent.

Junior forward Brenda Arbuckle is leading OSU in blocked shots, averaging 2.11 per game, and rebounds, pulling down 7.8 each contest.

The Beavers currently lead the conference in turnover margin with 24.7 per game, and steals, averaging 11.8 a game.

"If we are to beat OSU we have to have a better shooting percentage and free-throw percentage," Simpson said.

OSU received eight votes in the AP Top Twenty poll this week, placing the team in the top 40 nationally.

On Saturday, the Devils host the Ducks of Oregon (6-3 in the Pac-10 and 14-5 overall), who are tied with OSU for third place in the Pac-10.

Coach Elwin Heiny is starting his 11th season at Oregon, with five returning starters and 10 returning letterwinners from last season.

"They have a very experienced team and a very tall team," Simpson said.

The Ducks are coming off a sweep this past weekend at home, defeating California 92-70 and then easing by Stanford, 65-51.

The Ducks defeated the Sun Devils in their last meeting in Eugene, downing ASU 84-70. In the series, Oregon holds a 3-2 edge but are 0-1 against ASU at the UAC.

"We are going to have a different strategy against Oregon then we will have against OSU," Simpson said. "Oregon has much taller players and we will have to adjust to that."

Senior guard Lauri Landerholm leads all scorers on the Ducks averaging 17.9 points per game, good enough to place her at the No. 3 position in the conference. Landerholm is also No. 5 in assists, averaging 5.3 per game, and No. 4 in steals, averaging 2.47.

Senior center Gabi Neumann pulls up right behind Landerholm in scoring, averaging 15.5 points per game and placing her at No. 10 in the Pac-10.

Besides the strength of these two players, ASU has to also contend with the Ducks' height. Oregon has six players over six feet tall, the tallest measuring up at 6 feet 7 inches.

"We need the team as a whole to do an outstanding job and work with the height situation," Simpson said.

Oregon currently leads the Pac-10 in rebounds, blocked shots, rebound margin and field goal percentage.

The Sun Devils (3-6 in the Pac-10 and 9-9 overall) are coming off a loss at the hands of intrastate rival UA and currently are tied for fifth place with California, five games out of first.

"The loss against UA was disappointing, but we have had conversations with the team and we are changing our thinking a little but not completely," Simpson said.

"We are allowing ourselves to make some mistakes but we are still going to concentrate on our basic game," she said.

Forward Sherry Poole is the leading Sun Devil scorer, averaging 17.7 points per game, pushing her to No. 4 in the Pac-10 as well as on the all-time ASU women's scoring list.

Poole is also 12th in the nation in free throws, shooting 83 percent from the line and good for the No. 1 spot in the conference.

Forward Robin Connolly is the second-leading scorer on the team, averaging 15.1 points per game.

Guard Patti Pepler rounds out the top three scorers, averaging 14.7 points per game as well as shooting 88 percent from the line and dishing out six assists per game.

"We need to have a team effort in both games if we are to have a chance of defeating both Oregon teams," Simpson said.

"If we can get our shooting going again, unlike against UA, we will have a big possibility of upsetting both teams," she said.

Capitol Hill recognizes 'Women in Sports Day'

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Martina Navratilova and other female athletic stars celebrated National Women in Sports Day on Capitol Hill Wednesday with an emphasis on the progress women have made in sports.

During a ceremony organized by the Women's Sports Foundation, Navratilova, winner of 53 Grand Slam tennis titles, received the first Flo Hyman Memorial Award.

The award, named for the late member of the 1984 U.S. Olympic Volleyball team, will be presented each year to the person who most captures Hyman's "dignity, spirit and commitment to excellence," according to the foundation.

Navratilova, brushing away tears, told the audience, "This means more to me than any award I've ever gotten because of the type of person Flo was. I hope I can live up to her reputation."

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., who played college basketball at Princeton and pro ball with the New York Knicks, also gave Navratilova the American flag that flew above the Capitol on the morning of the first national day designed to recognize the role of women in sports.

The event was arranged by Carol Mann, president of the Women's Sports Foundation, and attended by several senators and famous women athletes, including Olympic gymnast Mary Lou Retton, former tennis great Billie Jean King, 1984 Olympic basketball captain Lynette Woodard and race car driver Lyn St. James.

Rep. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, who teamed with Bradley and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore. last year to present a joint congressional resolution to create National Women in Sports Day, said she hoped Wednesday's ceremony would "be a stepping stone in our fight against sex discrimination in sports."

STUDENT LIFESTYLE.

COME SEE THE NEW WAY AMERICA'S GOING TO COLLEGE

Worthington Place Has It All

Eliminate hassles, yearly moving, cramped substandard living and 3:00 A.M. tuba players. At new Worthington Place, you'll choose your own roommate, meet interesting people, join in our year-round social activities and parties, make lifetime friendships. New Worthington Place is designed for students - for living, relaxing and studying. Close to campus and all of Tempe's activities.

There's More Of Everything

We offer more activities and amenities than anyone else in Tempe. Swimming pool, jacuzzi, lush courtyards, lighted sand volleyball court, barbecue and party area. Clubhouse with large screen television, weight training and exercise equipment.

Even studying is a pleasure. Worthington Place is designed with individual study centers in each residence so that even with a full house you have privacy and a place to hit the books effectively.

Save A Fortune On College Expenses

Worthington Place is a fabulous deal for you and your parents. You'll be in the best place in Tempe and your parents can benefit from incredible savings. In fact, there may be more benefits in owning a student condominium residence than there are in owning their own home. It may even be possible to substantially reduce the costs of your college lodging expenses through our Worthington Place program.
