

Students to lobby board against fee hike

ASA to meet this month with individual regents

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

With less than a month before the Arizona Board of Regents votes on Gov. Evan Mecham's proposed $60 in-state tuition increase, members of the Arizona Students Association are campaigning against the increase by meeting with individual regents.

Associated Students of ASU President Chris Cummiskey said the students are unhappy with Mecham's justification for the increase and have set up meetings with regents to voice their concerns.

The regents planned to vote on Mecham's proposal at the Feb. 20 meeting in Tucson, but deferred the issue so board members would have more time to hear both sides of the issue.

"We've put together our strategy, and we're going to refute Mecham's proposal," Cummiskey said. "We're already agreed on a $60 tuition increase this fall . . . We want to keep tuition as low as possible."

Mecham told the regent's finance committee Feb. 20 that the students should "contribute a greater share toward their own education."

"Arizona is currently the 13th lowest state in the nation in terms of in-state tuition costs," he said. "The $120 increase, which I have included in my budget recommendation, would only make Arizona the 15th lowest state."

Mecham said his recommendation "still provides for approximately 79 percent of the cost of educating an Arizona student to be paid for by Arizona taxpayers."

"This objective is right in line with the historical target of 80 percent funding of the cost of in-state students."

Contrary to what some regents believed, Mecham did not recommend an out-of-state tuition increase.

"This board has already recommended an increase in excess of $300 per year for out-of-state students," he said.

"The amount proposed for ASU and UA exceeds the current nation average, as well as the average for public universities in the Pac-10."

Mecham said 22 percent of the cost of educating out-of-state students will be paid by Arizona taxpayers under his budget.

If Mecham's tuition proposal is approved, in-state tuition will be $1,256. Out-of-state tuition will be set at $4,628.

Last November, the regents voted to raise resident tuition by $60 and non-resident fees by $368.

Cummiskey said ASA members are meeting with Regent Ralph Watkins at ASU today to discuss the tuition issue.

"We want to find out where the regents stand," he said. "We think a lot of them are on our side."

Cummiskey said the students will testify before the regent's finance committee before the March 20 meeting.

"These are trying times for the students," he said. "We're back to the drawing board."

Regents appointee to support Mecham's policies

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — Arizona Board of Regents appointee Ralph Watkins pledged to stand behind Gov. Evan Mecham's university policies Monday, saying "the governor has a chore, and I am going to support him."

Watkins, who was initially confirmed unanimously by the Senate Education Committee, said he supports the governor's request for an additional $60 tuition increase. But he said there will be times when he and the governor disagree.

"I'm listening to all the sides," Watkins said. "The staff's side, the regents' side, the governor's side."

"I told him, 'You know there's going to be a time when you and I disagree,' and he said 'I know that.' But I'm not saying I'm disagreeing."

Watkins, a Buckeye and Phoenix car dealer, was nominated for the post in January as a replacement for the late William P. Reilly. Reilly died of bone cancer in November.

His nomination now will go to the full Senate for final confirmation. He is the first Mecham appointee to go through the confirmation process.

Watkins was Mecham's campaign finance director and raised about $800,000 for the race.

Watkins said he also supports Mecham's comments last week that the universities place too much emphasis on research and that undergraduate education is being neglected.

"He's getting everybody's attention, and I think it's good," he said. "Everybody is going to stop, look and listen, and that's what we are all there for."

Mecham promised to be a more active member of the regents and attend the meetings in his State of the State address. Former Gov. Bruce Babbitt attended three board meetings in his last three years in office.

"This is the first time (the regents) have had a governor present to express his viewpoint, take their questions and to answer their questions," Watkins said.

Watkins said he voted with the governor against a regents proposal to limit state budget cuts because the regents had a responsibility to the slate to cover the $160 million shortfall.

"We are not sacred cows," he said. "We have to take the hits like everybody else."

Student Regent Felicia Martinez, a NAU sociology senior, also was unanimously confirmed by the committee. Martinez, who has been serving in her post since July, has only four months left in her term.

Martinez will return to the Arizona Students Association next year as a graduate student, and she said she will work to gain a vote for the student regent.

She said after attending a conference of student regents from around the country last year, she decided to try for the vote. The student regent is the board's only non-voting member.

Martinez said she is interested in a Pennsylvania plan that allows student regents to serve for two years — the first year as a non-voting member, and the second year as a voting member.

Martinez said the vote would give the student regent more credibility.

"I am a regent with the full rights and responsibilities, except the vote," she said.

Some ASA members are concerned that if the student regent had the vote, the group would lose power to represent students. State laws mandate that all regents represent the wishes of the taxpayers.

Martinez said she opposes Mecham's proposed tuition increase. She said she has talked to the governor about student concerns, but added Mecham probably will not compromise on the issue.

"He's set on his agenda," Martinez said.

Profs, business college require funds, Nelson says

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — ASU President J. Russell Nelson told a House appropriations subcommittee Monday that professors' salaries and the College of Business are ASU's top funding priorities, but current budget proposals will not allow ASU to adequately fund them.

Nelson also warned that if Gov. Evan Mecham's proposed budget cuts are approved as many as 300 ASU employees could be laid off despite anticipated enrollment increases.

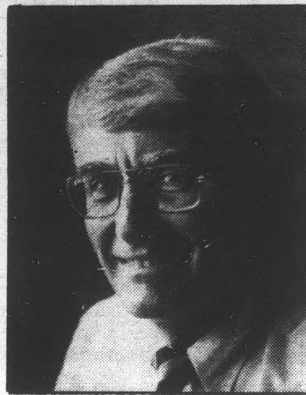

Nelson, appearing before the five-member subcommittee, said more money is needed for professors' salaries so ASU does not lose faculty members to the private sector. He said additional appropriations are needed for the College of Business to keep the school from losing its accreditation.

The business college's accreditation was deferred for one year because the student/faculty ratio is high. Nelson told the committee that because business professors demand higher salaries than other University instructors, additional funding is needed to lower the student/faculty ratio and ensure that the college receives its accreditation.

"If it were a trade-off, salaries are more important," Nelson said. "They help everybody in the University."

'I am concerned that making no salary increases would erode our competitive position.'

— J. Russell Nelson

Under the current Joint Legislative Budget Committee's plan, ASU's fiscal appropriations for 1987-88 does not provide for increases in faculty salaries.

"For us to be competitive in the market in faculty members and staff members, we must be able to pay competitive salaries," Nelson said. "I am concerned that making no salary increases would erode our competitive position."

Nelson said he was "happier" with the JLBC's recommendation than Gov. Evan Mecham's budget proposal, which slashed more than $19 million from salary requests.

But Nelson said the JLBC recommendation — which cuts about $8 million from those requests — still leaves "something to be desired."

"It would have been helpful to have it go a little further" in appropriations, he said.

Nelson said current budget cuts, mandated by the Legislature, have stopped growth in most University programs, and there could be serious damage to Engineering Excellence programs and the business college.

He said the University has trouble hiring professors for the business college because starting salaries are about $50,000. The Legislature allots $33,000 for each new instructor hired so the University must combine salaries to hire new business instructors.

Nelson said the College of Engineering and other science departments face similar staffing problems because they cannot compete with salaries in the private sector.

Mecham receives poor performance rating for first month

PHOENIX — Gov. Evan Mecham received the poorest job rating of Arizona's past four governors for his first month in office, according to a poll released Monday by the Phoenix-based Behavior Research Center.

Of the Maricopa county residents polled, 44 percent said Mecham is doing a poor job.

The poll said that 41 percent of the voters had negative opinions about Mecham even before he took office. Former Govs. Bruce Babbitt, Raul Castro and Jack Williams had negative ratings of 15 to 18 percent of county voters.

In the first poll, where Mecham was given a 41 percent negative rating, the respondents were people who actually voted in the gubernatorial race.

The second report is based on two surveys of the general public in Maricopa and Pima Counties. The first survey was conducted in

Results of poll indicate residents characterize governor as 'racial bigot'

January and the second in February.

Earl de Berge, research director for the center, said voters have not allowed Mecham the "honeymoon" period of at least a year that the other governors enjoyed.

About 21 percent of the voters rated Mecham's performance as excellent or good. Another 25 percent rated it fair.

De Berge said the public is most concerned about Mecham's appearance of being intolerant and prejudiced toward people with differing points of view.

Voters also were upset with the governor's rescission of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, some characterizing the new governor as a "racial bigot," a poll report said.

The report said some residents are questioning Mecham's honesty, characterizing him as a "flim-flam car dealer." A common charge among those polled was that Mecham is brash, reckless and unprofessional in his speeches and treatment of people.

Gina Canzonetta, a Mecham press aide, said the governor had no comment on the poll.

Mecham was elected in November with 40 percent of the vote. Democratic candidate Carolyn Warner and Independent candidate

Bill Schulz split the remainder of the vote.

Mecham's greatest source of support came from Republicans, small business people, older voters and middle- and upper-income voters.

But de Berge said not all of the comments about Mecham were negative.

Some of his admirers characterized him as an honest man who stood up for his beliefs. Others said he would bring needed business experience to state government.

A third characterization was that Mecham is a "good and decent person, one who cares about the people and the future of Arizona."

Mecham's least negative scores were for his efforts to strengthen law enforcement in the state and efforts to cut waste from state government.

Impeachment, contra protest seem so American

Count me as one more ordinary American citizen who has finally lost patience with President Reagan's handling of the Iran/contra arms scandal.

Col. Oliver North continues to take the Fifth and former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane has attempted suicide.

CIA Director William Casey's brain has been conveniently erased.

The way I see it, either 1) Reagan knew what was going on, and is therefore culpable for the criminal activities of his subordinates, and should therefore be impeached or 2) Reagan did not know what was going on in his own White House and is, therefore, incompetent and should be impeached.

Of course, being impeached is not the same as being removed from office. As most of us know, for a president to be impeached means simply that he is tried by the U.S. Senate, with the chief justice of the Supreme Court presiding. To convict and remove a president from office, a two-thirds vote of all senators present is required.

In saying that Reagan should be impeached, I'm not saying that he necessarily should be removed from office. I'm only saying that his handling of the Iran affair (Irangate, Contragate, Iranamok, whichever you prefer) has earned him his day in court.

As a nation, we have a bad habit of defying our leaders. As a result, when it comes time to disciplining them — for the same sorts of infractions for which each of us would expect to be punished if we were to screw up — we hesitate, as if dealing with a higher order of being.

Ed Schubert
Analysis Editor

To a degree, the same attitude is present in the controversy over whether or not Arizona should recall our own Governor Evan Mecham. Though talk of recalling Mecham is much more in coin than talk of impeaching Reagan, we nevertheless consider the constitutional process of recall as a somehow "far out," last resort option.

I think Mecham should be recalled when it becomes legally possible this July. But I don't know that I'd actually vote to recall him when the measure comes around. A lot can happen in six months.

Recall is possibly in Mecham's own best interest. If the vote to remove him prevails, Arizona will have rid itself of an inept leader. But if he survives the recall initiative, a vindicated Mecham will have gained the clear democratic mandate that eluded him last November.

Were I an aide to Mecham, I'd advise him to co-opt the inevitable move for recall by spearheading it, but to label it as a "Mecham Referendum." After all, a man elected under the unusual circumstances of Mecham, who is affecting change as if his mandate was somehow Rooseveltian in scope, owes the people an opportunity to vote him in or out.

And the people of Arizona owe Mecham the opportunity to govern, or not govern, with a clear-cut democratic mandate.

But whether the issue is recall or impeachment, or "the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for the redress of grievances," what is important is that we exercise our right of self-government.

Like impeachment and recall, "demonstrations" are among those constitutionally mandated and protected freedoms that are nonetheless viewed as unusual or "extreme."

Though the founding fathers used the term "peaceably to assemble" rather than "legally to assemble" — suggesting that Madison, Washington, et al. would have countenanced peaceful civil disobedience — those who practice this freedom are sometimes viewed as disloyal.

The opposite is true.

Saturday, about 100 demonstrators marched around the periphery of ASU to protest the war in Central America. I really don't know how I feel about this issue, but I was impressed by their effort.

I was having lunch at the Fortune Cookie Chinese buffet on Apache Boulevard Saturday morning when the demonstrators came into view.

There was something about the orderly crowd marching peacefully down the street with their posters and a giant green and white banner reading "NO CONTRA AID" that somehow seemed so... so American.

All sports worth covering

Editor:

I try to avoid writing letters to newspapers at all costs, but in a Friday sports section of the State Press, the article, "Wish as they might, sports desks can't please all" was just a wee bit unforgivable. The title is reasonable but the article's argument is so weakened by faulty logic and insults that Bob Heiler had better hope that he's writing to, as he puts it, semi-literates.

Just because the sports editors have written about football and baseball doesn't mean that those are the only sports the public wants to read about. The idea that the attendance of so-called lesser sports doesn't merit coverage has two edges. One could just as well state that low coverage of these sports suppresses attendance. The latter is more easily demonstrated.

The attendance of the fencing team, for example, is high considering that there has been no fencing coverage. Last fall several hundred spectators attended a tournament sponsored by the fencing club. Thus there are at least 200 interested people who would like to read something about fencing. The interest in other sports groups should be a great deal higher than in fencing. However, the soccer club has an attendance of only 20 to 50 spectators for most games. They would have much higher attendance if people knew about the games. People have to call the president to hear about the games.

I'm not sure what Heiler thinks the public wants to read, but we certainly don't want to read a quarter page wasted on defensive drivel about why he wasn't able to write about one of these sports. Consider that he could have used that same space to write cover of those sports! I invite him to observe the sports events in action or reserve his comments to something he knows about. Sweet view from his beloved desk of all the comings and goings around the State Press.

Also, in his article, Heiler mentioned that Carrie Gerlach complained that her photo's caption made her sound like an airhead. It seems the State Press "accidentally" put "Delta Sig" at the head of the classified ad in which she posted her complaint. Heiler used that to insult her in his article which has nothing to do with her. I have to question the validity of an editor who uses a personal ad's heading that his own newspaper messed up to publicly call someone an airhead. As Heiler wrote, "Subtle, huh?" After reading his article, I am not surprised that people are always coming down to Heiler's office to give him "feedback."

Irangate players getting raw deal from lie detector

The dream of the Reagan Administration was to have everyone in the government take a lie detector test. The president felt the lie detector was the only way to keep public servants from leaking the government's secrets to the press. It also put the fear of God in those who weren't following the White House game plan.

Alas, the lie detector has fallen on hard times. Since Irangate, all the machines have been recalled because they are giving out false signals.

The retired detectors are being collected in a warehouse in Alexandria, Va., where they are guarded by Victor Veracity, who is the Deputy Director of the U.S. Department of Truth and Consequences.

"Why," I asked, "have you recalled so many of the detectors?"

Victor replied, "They reported everyone attached to Irangate is lying. We know for a fact that the people who were involved don't lie, so it must mean the machines are faulty."

Art Buchwald
Los Angeles Times
Syndicate

"How could the lie detectors have gone so far off?"

"Every time we strapped up one of the major players in the Iran affair, he blew out every fuse in the Senate hearing room. Since the president's men are all Boy Scouts, we had to assume the glitch was in the detector. Let me show you what is going on. I will ask this lie detector a question. 'When did you know we were selling arms and not Bibles to Iran?' Now I will respond to the question with an answer. 'Only after the Ayatollah Khomeini told me about it in a Tel Aviv discotheque.' Do you see where the needle went? Right off the board."

"And the machine wasn't even plugged in," I said.

"That's why we've recalled all the detectors. You can't trust them."

"What are you going to do now that you've brought the detectors back?"

"We've established a course in remedial truth. It helps people involved in Irangate to realize they have options. They can choose the boring way out by taking the Fifth Amendment."

"I didn't know with the budget cuts the government could afford a remedial truth course."

"We established it for people who are up to their hips in Iran and contra operations, but are also interested in protecting the president."

"Can the lie-detecting machines distinguish between those who are team players and those who are just interested in telling the truth to save the country?"

"We're very suspicious of people who use lie detectors to save the country.

"Even the CIA can't be trusted." Victor showed me a copy of The Washington Post. "Look at this. The CIA is re-examining whether the agency's covert operations in Nicaragua violated congressional bans against giving the contras military aid. This part may interest you. The first thing the new acting director of the CIA, Robert M. Gates, did was rule that since so many agents may have given questionable testimony regarding contra operations everyone can testify over again and change his testimony."

"Are we to assume that because of Irangate the lie detector is no longer held in as high a reputation as it was before?"

"The White House has only one goal in all these Iran-contra hearings."

"Which is?"

"To see that everyone involved in this dreadful mistake can once again look at himself in the mirror and not be ashamed."

Possibility exists for student vote on Sparky issue

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

The Associated Students Senate committees will consider a dozen bills and resolutions tonight, including a measure that would enable students to vote on the value of ASU's mascot in the spring elections.

College of Liberal Arts Sen. Mark Isenberg and College of Education Sen. Kym Leicht authored Senate Bill 69, which would ask students if they "believe Sparky is an appropriate mascot" for ASU.

The question would appear on the ballot, with "yes" or "no" choices, during the ASASU election April 8 and 9.

"This is a way of finding out whether there is just a very small group of students on campus who are against Sparky, or if it is a larger movement," Isenberg said.

"The issue has attracted a great deal of attention in the press lately, and while I would guess that only a very few students oppose Sparky, this is a way of putting the issue to rest."

Jack Thompson, a California born-again Christian battling "demonic" high school mascots in the Los Angeles area, has said Sparky will be his next target.

ASASU's Government Operations Committee will discuss the bill at 5:30 p.m. in the MU.

Other bills under consideration tonight include:

- A measure authorizing the purchase of an additional electric cart for Disabled Student Resources will be debated by the Finance Committee.

Senate Bill 67 would enable DSR to buy a fourth cart, at a cost of about $5,000, to transport permanent and temporarily disabled students to and from classes.

Isenberg, the bill's author, said cart service for temporarily disabled students may be cut off due to budget cuts if another cart is not purchased.

DSR's transportation department schedules 7,000 runs each year and serves one of the largest disabled student populations in the country.

Isenberg said DSR is using a 20-year-old cart and a 15-year old cart, which are in constant need of repairs.

"This is a very good service for temporarily disabled students, and would have a direct, obvious benefit for students," he said.

"Besides, the student government needs to do something more than debate about funding and homosexuals."

- The newly formed University Affairs Committee will consider a resolution that supports President J. Russell Nelson's decision not to ban weapons research at ASU.

College of Business Sen. John Colombo, a sponsor of the bill, said Senate Resolution 12 makes a statement in favor of "academic freedom."

Nelson decided in December to allow potential weapons research on campus, despite the efforts of members in the ASU Faculty Senate to ban such research.

"The senate should send a message that students are concerned and have a role to play in maintaining academic freedom at this University," Colombo said.

Phoenix wages relatively low, ASU study says

By BEN McCONNELL
State Press

Phoenix-metropolitan residents earn considerably less than people in other large cities across the nation, although living costs are comparable, according to an ASU study.

The Center for Business Research in the College of Business also found higher living costs in small Arizona towns, the communities some people migrate to in trying to escape the high cost of urban living.

Tom R. Rex, manager of the center, said Valley residents earn, on the average, 7 percent less than workers in other large U.S. cities. Throughout the rest of the state, living standards fall 15 percent to 25 percent short of comparable U.S. areas.

Additionally, the economic forecast for small Arizona towns is bleaker as rural growth continually dwindles in light of explosive urban growth, he said.

The standard of living index is a comparison of the cost of living to wage and income levels.

Although Arizonans earn less, Rex said, "the cost of living is about what you would expect for Phoenix."

Rex said incomes can lag behind living costs without adversely impacting the state's growth because Phoenix is an attractive area for new residents.

Dennis Ricardo, Tempe Chamber of Commerce executive director, attributes the high standard of living in metropolitan Phoenix to poor standards in air quality, which he said clearly affects people's dissatisfaction with Valley life.

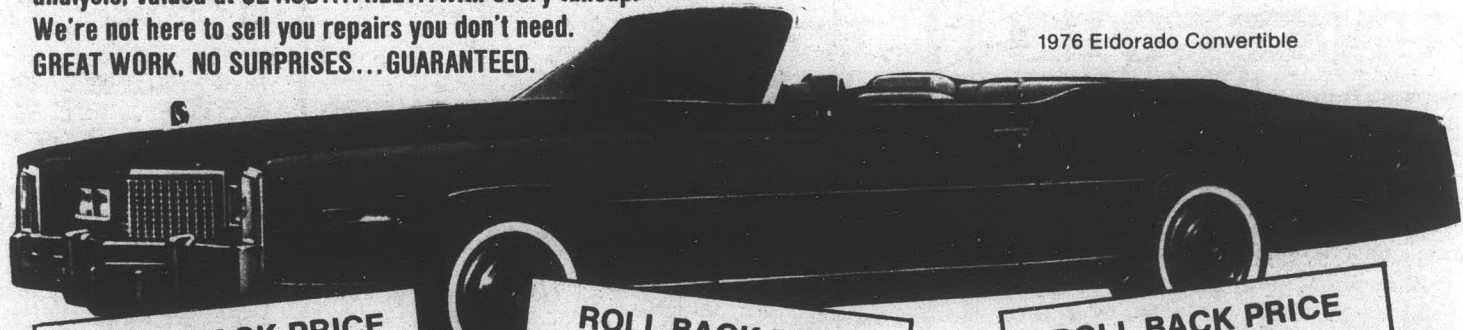

A previous Center for Business Research study said the No. 1 complaint of residents was air pollution. Fifty-nine percent of those polled said they would consider leaving Arizona if standards did not improve.

The West Coast and New England living areas are the most expensive in the United States, the study said. The standard of living is highest in the Great Lakes region and lowest in the Southeast.

REACH 45,000 READERS DAILY IN THE STATE PRESS!

ASU has launched an intensive campaign for federal funding of war-related research, and expects to become a major center for STAR WARS research and development.

SHOULD ASU BECOME A BRANCH OF THE PENTAGON?

We are ASU Students saying NO to the militarization of our university. PLEASE help us say NO. We urge you to read and endorse this resolution

AzCAM RESOLUTION ON WEAPONS RESEARCH

OUR UNIVERSITIES SHOULD NOT PARTICIPATE IN THE RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION: A resolution by Arizona Campuses for Responsible Research (AzCAM) addressed to the Arizona Board of Regents.

We believe that Arizona's state universities, and universities everywhere, should not participate in the research and development of weapons of mass destruction, whether they be nuclear, chemical, biological or otherwise. We reject such participation by universities first on moral grounds. To assist in perfecting the means by which millions of our fellow human beings may be destroyed is fundamentally inconsistent with the university's mission to enhance the quality of human life through education.

Secondly, it is clear that the vast sums of money presently allocated to research and development of such weapons subtract from the support given programs which aim to increase the knowledge, health, and well-being of all our citizens. We are acutely aware, as students, that the participation of our universities in the development of such weapons diminishes the quality and accessibility of education available to us in non-military areas. We are alarmed by the extent to which our university administrations appear to be driven by the short-term financial rewards of participation in weapons research, rather than by those long-term positive contributions to civilization which only universities can make.

From our conviction that universities should not participate in the research and development of weapons of mass destruction, we attach special significance to the U.S. government's "Star Wars" program (Strategic Defense Initiative). Despite initial efforts to portray "Star Wars" as a system which would give blanket protection to the U.S. population from nuclear attack, it is now clear that "Star Wars" could not achieve that objective, that it was, in fact, never designed to do so. Instead, "Star Wars" is more reasonably viewed as a system for the protection of U.S. missile bases, so as to maximize the likelihood that U.S. nuclear missiles will be able to strike enemy targets. "Star Wars" thus is correctly understood as a program supportive of the use of nuclear weapons of mass destruction, and for that reason "Star Wars" research should be as firmly rejected by universities as research which contributes directly to the development of nuclear weapons. We note that our view is widely shared by the nation's most distinguished scientists — at present, more than 6,500 professors of science and engineering, including 57 Nobel laureates and more than half the faculty of the 20 top-ranked physics departments in the nation, have pledged not to participate in "Star Wars" research.

As a consequence of these concerns, and with a sense of the greatest urgency, we request that the Arizona Board of Regents adopt the following resolution:

NO STATE UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA SHALL PARTICIPATE IN THE RESEARCH AND/OR DEVELOPMENT OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION, OR IN RESEARCH WHICH, ALTHOUGH NOT CONCERNED DIRECTLY WITH SUCH WEAPONS, IS NEVERTHELESS UNDERTAKEN FOR THE PURPOSE OF SUPPORTING THEIR DEVELOPMENT, E.G., THE "STAR WARS" PROGRAM (STRATEGIC DEFENSE INITIATIVE).

This prohibition applies equally to research and/or development concerning the separate components or processes of weapons of mass destruction, including but not limited to guidance systems, delivery mechanisms, and computer control.

For the purpose of this resolution, "participation" in research and/or development includes the acceptance of research grants and contracts as well as the conduct of projects supported in whole or part by state funding, and pertains equally to the campuses of the universities and to all associated research parks and other off-campus facilities owned, leased, or controlled by the universities or the Board of Regents, and to consortia and other cooperative arrangements with other organizations.

All current research and/or development projects prohibited by the terms of this resolution, including all "Star Wars" (Strategic Defense Initiative) projects, shall be terminated not later than July 1, 1988, or the end of the current grant or contract year, whichever comes first.

In order to ensure that the provisions of this resolution are fully and objectively carried out, the Board of Regents shall establish in each university a review committee which shall include, in addition to representatives of the administration, both student and faculty members who endorse the provisions of this resolution; such a review committee shall have the authority to: (1) screen all research and/or development proposals submitted to the university (2) recommend to the university and to the Board of Regents, disapproval of proposals deemed prohibited by this resolution, and (3) report the actions of the committee publicly at least once each year.

Until the adoption of the above resolution, we request that all current "Star Wars" (Strategic Defense Initiative) research being done at the state universities of Arizona, and any other research which would be prohibited by this resolution, be immediately identified publicly by the Board of Regents.

We further request that each of Arizona's state universities, until the Board of Regents has acted upon this resolution, independently come into accordance with the provisions of the proposed resolution.

November, 1986.

Foreign culture alien to U.S. students, director says

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

Students at ASU and similar institutions across the country are dangerously ignorant of foreign cultures and languages, the associate director of ASU's International Programs said Monday.

Speaking to about 25 people at a Coalition for World Peace meeting in the MU Santa Cruz Room, William Davey cited several examples of American "intercultural incompetence," including:

- A recent Gallup survey which showed that 20 percent of American high school students could not find the United States on a world map.

- A United Nations study of intercultural understanding among 13-year-old children from nine countries, in which the American children came in next to last in comprehending foreign cultures.

- About 10 million students in the Soviet Union study English, but only 28,000 American students study Russian.

- Only 3 percent of U.S. high school students have a meaningful comprehension of a foreign language, according to the 1983 report on American education, National Risk.

- Only 15 percent of all American universities have a foreign language requirement, up from 8 percent in 1982.

"The United States continues to be the only country in the world where a student can graduate from college without a single course in a foreign language," Davey said.

He said many ASU programs require a foreign language, but the University as a whole does not.

Davey said that even Harvard University, despite its excellent reputation for academics, allows students to "psyche out" of the school's foreign language requirement.

A Harvard counselor can excuse a student from foreign language requirements if an examination determines that the student would find it "extremely psychologically difficult" to learn a second language, Davey said.

Davey said ASU's overseas programs send only about 475 students — or about 1 percent of the student population — to foreign countries to study.

But he said that number is rising quickly and noted other grounds for optimism at the prospect of an improved intercultural curriculum at ASU.

A minimum of one course on global awareness now is required under ASU's revised undergraduate curriculum, Davey said.

He said although he'd like to see 12 to 15 hours of global studies required, one course "is a small but significant step in the right direction."

"Within two years we'll see multi-disciplinary courses on foreign cultures," he said. "ASU is one of the very few universities that has any global program at all."

Davey said when he first came into ASU's International Program two years ago, he talked to a student who wanted to study in Paris.

When he asked how well she spoke French, she said she didn't speak the language at all and asked, "You mean they don't speak English over there?"

"When this happened to me the second time, I was less shocked," Davey said. "When it happened to me the 25th time, last week, I was even less surprised."

Towns in New Orleans to keep barricades down

By The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Officials in a predominantly white suburb dropped their vow to rebuild barricades erected last week on two streets leading to a mostly black New Orleans neighborhood, as the two towns agreed Monday to work to reduce crime in the area.

"It's unfortunate that the racial aspect of it was interjected into the picture. It was never a consideration in Jefferson," said Robert Evans Jr., head of the Jefferson Parish Council, which ordered the barricades built.

He and New Orleans Mayor Sidney Barthelemy met briefly Monday and then told reporters that law enforcement officials from both parishes will work together to fight the robbery and drug traffic that Evans said were his only reasons for ordering the barricades up in the first place.

Barthelemy, who is black, earlier had said the construction of the wood-and-steel barricades was illegal as well as racially motivated. The barriers were torn down Saturday by New Orleans workers, two days after they were put up outside the city limits.

The barriers were dubbed "The Berlin Wall" by some blacks on the New Orleans side.

Air ambulance crashes; 2 die near Flagstaff

By The Associated Press

PHOENIX — The pilot of an air ambulance had reported instrument problems before the plane crashed during a snowstorm while approaching the Flagstaff airport, a federal official said Monday.

The pilot, Brian John Ehly, 27, and 32-year-old nurse Patricia Kroidart were killed in the crash Friday night about nine miles southeast of Flagstaff. Their bodies and the wreckage of the Phoenix-based Air-Evac plane were discovered Sunday.

"He reported he was having some kind of avionic difficulty — with the navigational aids, the radio frequencies or the flight instruments," said Gary Mucho, National Transportation Safety Board field office chief in Los Angeles.

The twin-engine Cessna Conquest 2 had been dispatched from Sky Harbor International Airport to pick up a pregnant woman at Flagstaff Medical Center, said Dan Green, vice president of communications for Samaritan Health Services, which owns Air-Evac.

Ehly worked for Sawyer Aviation, which contracts with Air-Evac, while Kroidart was a Samaritan employee.

Mucho said investigators also would look into whether pilot fatigue played a role in the crash. "Fatigue — that's an aspect we're looking into. Checking crew duty times is a normal procedure for us," Mucho said.

Angelo Melisi, Ehly's father-in-law, had said Saturday that Ehly may have been pushed beyond his endurance when he was asked to make the Friday evening flight to Flagstaff in bad weather. Ehly had been up since before 5 a.m. Saturday to make a 6 a.m. flight and he made another flight at 1 p.m., Melisi said.

New bill would allow skateboard ticketing

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — A bill that would give ASU police the power to ticket skateboarders and impound their wheels was introduced into the Senate Education Committee Monday.

The nine-member committee will vote on the bill next week, and is expected to send the measure to the full Senate for approval.

ASU Police Chief C. Russell Duncan said Senate Bill 1456 will give University police more control over skateboarders, roller skaters, bicyclists and horses on malls.

Duncan said the bill is aimed at juvenile skateboarders who use benches, stairways and fountains as a practice area. The University currently has no power to ticket or remove the skateboarders from campus.

"Arizona State has turned into a skateboard park and that is not the intent of ASU," he said.

The legislation also would allow the University to collect fines from people riding on the malls or parking their cars illegally by prosecuting through the Tempe Justice Court, Duncan said. Vehicles not registered at ASU could be tracked down by Tempe police.

In other action, the full Senate approved a measure that makes the student member of the Arizona Board of Regents a permanent post.

The bill will be sent to the House of Representatives for approval.

Suicide

Arizonans take own lives in n

By MICHAEL ROWELL
 State Press

The rate of suicide among teen-agers and college-age people in Arizona is one of the highest in the nation, an ASU educational psychology associate professor said, and the College of Education is co-sponsoring a conference to find ways to address the problem.

Conference co-director Arlene Metha, who has been studying the effects of stress, life changes and thoughts of suicide on adolescents, said according to a national study, the suicide rate for 15- to 19-year-olds in Arizona was 58 percent more than the national norm in 1985. She said suicides in the 20- to 24-year-old age bracket were 48 percent higher.

Metha said suicide is the second leading cause of death among these age brackets. The first cause is accidents.

But she said some of those accidents were probably suicides.

"If anything, these figures are conservative," Metha said.

ASU and Phoenix Camelback Hospital are co-sponsoring a Feb. 26 conference dealing with assessment and intervention of adolescent suicide.

The conference will include presentations by three experts on teen suicide: Dr. Barry Garfinkel of the University of Minnesota Medical School; Dr. Norman Farberow and Dr. Michael Peck, both of the Los Angeles Suicide Prevention Center.

All 525 openings at the conference, which will be at the Camelback Inn, Scottsdale, have been filled for more than a month, Metha said.

She said the interest shows there is a problem and a concern, adding that 75 to 100 people had to be turned away.

Rudolf Hahnloser, a senior psychologist at Phoenix Camelback Hospital and conference co-director, said he thinks Arizona's high suicide rate may be due to several factors.

"My theory is that a lot of people move here thinking everything will be a pot of gold," he said, adding that they are distressed when it isn't.

Hahnloser said moving is particularly traumatic for teen-agers because they need peer support in high school, and friends are often hard to make in the urban high school environment.

Parents are more likely to divorce once they move away from family and friends, he said, and this puts additional stress on their children.

"Kids have not only lost peer support, but also parental support," Hahnloser said.

He said the prevalence of guns in Arizona also may play a part.

On the evening before the conference, psychiatric experts will conduct informational sessions at eight Valley high schools, including McClintock High School in Tempe.

Both Hahnloser and Metha said females attempt suicide more often, but males have a higher success rate.

Both said males use more lethal methods of suicide, such as guns or hanging, while girls use less violent methods like slitting wrists or overdosing.

In a 1985 random survey of ASU students commissioned by the University, 9 percent of the students surveyed said they had thought of ending their lives in the previous 12 months, and 2 percent said they considered thoughts of suicide a major problem.

These percentages correspond to 3,500 of the 1985 fall enrollment of 40,000 considering suicide in a 12-month period, with 800 students calling it a major problem.

Dean of Student Life Leon Shell said ASU averages between two and three student suicides a year.

"We could be missing one a year," he said.

Hahnloser said college students who have suicidal thoughts are reluctant to speak to a counselor in person.

"I think it is very important that each university have some kind of crisis hotline," he said.

ASU police

University police reported the following incidents in the 29-hour period ending 7 a.m. Monday:

•ASU police arrested, charged and released two men not affiliated with the University for possession of narcotics.

Todd C. Campbell and Lee L. Lewis were stopped near Lot 3 when an officer noticed a Mossberg 500 shotgun and a roll of pink cord for high explosives in the car, police said.

The officer said he radioed for help because he was unsure whether it was legal for a civilian to have that type of gun, police said.

After officers stopped the men and searched their 1984 red Chevrolet car, they found a small, round tin can with a vial of a "white, powdery substance, two marijuana pipes and a green, leafy vegetable substance," police said.

Neither men had outstanding warrants.

•Police reported the theft of the following computer equipment:

Someone took an Apple Macintosh computer, monitor, keyboard, hard disk drive and wiring harnesses from Room F-76 in the Physical Sciences Building, police said.

Estimated loss is $2,000.

A lab spokesman told police five ASU staff members and about 15 students have keys to the room, which was locked at the time of the theft.

The thief did not take the key disk, which starts the system, and other computer equipment behind.

•A chair was used to break a large rectangular window in the 12th-floor lounge of Manzanita Residence Hall, police said.

Estimated damage is $260.

•A student complaining of severe abdominal pains was taken to Tempe St. Luke's hospital for treatment, police said. He was later released.

•Officers found the bottom half of a gumball dispenser in the bushes on the northwest side of the Agriculture Building.

Tempe police

Tempe police reported the following incidents ending noon Monday:

•A 19-year-old Tempe man was arrested for burglarizing and damaging his ex-roommates' cars, police said.

Police said the man broke the windows and damaged the tires of the cars, in addition to taking the stereos from both cars.

Both stereos, valued at $400, were recovered.

•An unknown man displayed a handgun and threatened to kill a Tempe woman at 1231 W. 23rd St., police said.

Police said the man threatened to kill the woman if she drove her car near his bicycle again.

•An unknown person stole a 1986 Chrysler Reliant from 1600 S. 52nd St. The car is valued at $8,500.

•An unknown person stole a 1979 Chevrolet Camaro from 429 E. Cornell Drive. The car is valued at $2,500.

Hitting problems continue as Devils lose again

ASU pitcher Tony Harris fires a pitch against Cal State-Northridge. The Sun Devils lost, 3-2.

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

Opposing pitchers continue to puzzle ASU hitters.

Dan Penner's six-hit pitching powered Cal State-Northridge to a 3-2 victory over the Sun Devils, Monday at Packard Stadium.

The 5-foot-11 senior stifled Devil batters with his "junk" pitches, striking out 10 while walking only five.

"He (Penner) didn't hurt himself today," ASU coach Jim Brock said. "We knew he strikes out a lot, but he usually walks a lot too."

"Today he didn't."

The loss — ASU's fourth in its last five games — also marked the return of first baseman Ted Dyson.

Although his return was not a smashing success — he struck out twice in two at bats — it was eagerly awaited.

Dyson, a preseason all-America by Collegiate Baseball magazine, is expected to create a deadly 1-2 punch in the middle of the Devil lineup. He led the Devils with a .379 average and had 15 homers and 56 runs batted in 1986.

"We just have to keep him (Dyson) from getting discouraged," Brock said. "He's getting better on each swing."

Brock said he was impressed with ASU's pitchers.

Scott Hutson started for ASU, and after giving up a first inning homer to Lenny Gilmore, allowed only one more hit, striking out seven and walking two before he tired during the sixth.

"His slider was very good today," Brock said. "This has got to be a giant plus for him and our pitching staff."

Brock said he would not hesitate to use

Brown pleased with '87 Devil volleyball recruits

By STEVE BRENNAN
State Press

In the world of collegiate athletics, there is one thing that is tried and true: success breeds success.

The ASU volleyball team finished the 1986 season with a 27-7 overall record and reached the second round of the NCAA tournament, coach Debbie Brown's best finish with the Sun Devils so far.

Last Friday, Brown announced that she had received national letters of intent from three high school players who will add even more depth to the 1987 squad than last year's team had.

The Sun Devils signed Mindy Gowell, a first team high school All-America from Portage, Mich., Tina Berg, an Arizona junior club player from Moon Valley High School, and Kelly Plaisted, an all-conference player and all-state nominee from Bellevue, Wash.

"With these recruits we can really progress going into the fall," Brown said. "We are going to have better depth than last year, which was one of our strengths."

The Sun Devils lost three players to graduation: middle blocker Tammy Webb, outside hitter Valentina Vega and middle blocker Rhonda Fletcher. Webb and Vega left big holes in the ASU lineup, but Brown said the additions and returning players should fill them.

"We needed an outside hitter, a middle blocker and a utility player," she said. "That is what I was looking for with recruiting. We won't be able to replace Tammy and Val right away because of experience, but I think we should do pretty well."

"All three of the recruits are strong at blocking, which is a good thing because it is something that is difficult to teach. They are all hard workers and should fit in really well."

Gowell was a teammate of current Devil middle blocker Sue Nord at Portage Northern High School and was voted All-America by Volleyball Monthly in 1985 and 1986.

Brown said that she had seen Gowell play a number of times before last season, including a trip to see Nord play, but her coming to ASU was uncertain until two days before the signing deadline.

"I went to watch Sue and got a chance to watch Mindy also," Brown said. "She came and visited in October but it was tough and go right up to the end. She could have gone just about anywhere she wanted."

Gowell is 5-foot-11 and was considered among the top 10 high school players in the nation. She also led her team to two state championships.

"Mindy's skills are excellent and she has strong shot selection," Brown said. "She will be pushing for the starting spot."

Berg, who was selected as a first team Class AAA Division 1 player, had been in Brown's sights for some time, but was not easy to recruit.

"She is probably the best high school player in the state," Brown said.

"Even though she is from Phoenix, she had not seen the ASU campus very much and was looking to go out of state," Brown said. "I had seen her play with the Arizona juniors and liked her size and agility (Berg is 6-foot-3)."

"She is a hard worker and she is getting a lot of experience with the junior team. She is going to fit in great."

Plaisted, Brown said, is a utility-type player. She currently attends Interlake High School in Bellevue, which placed second in the state championships for the past two years.

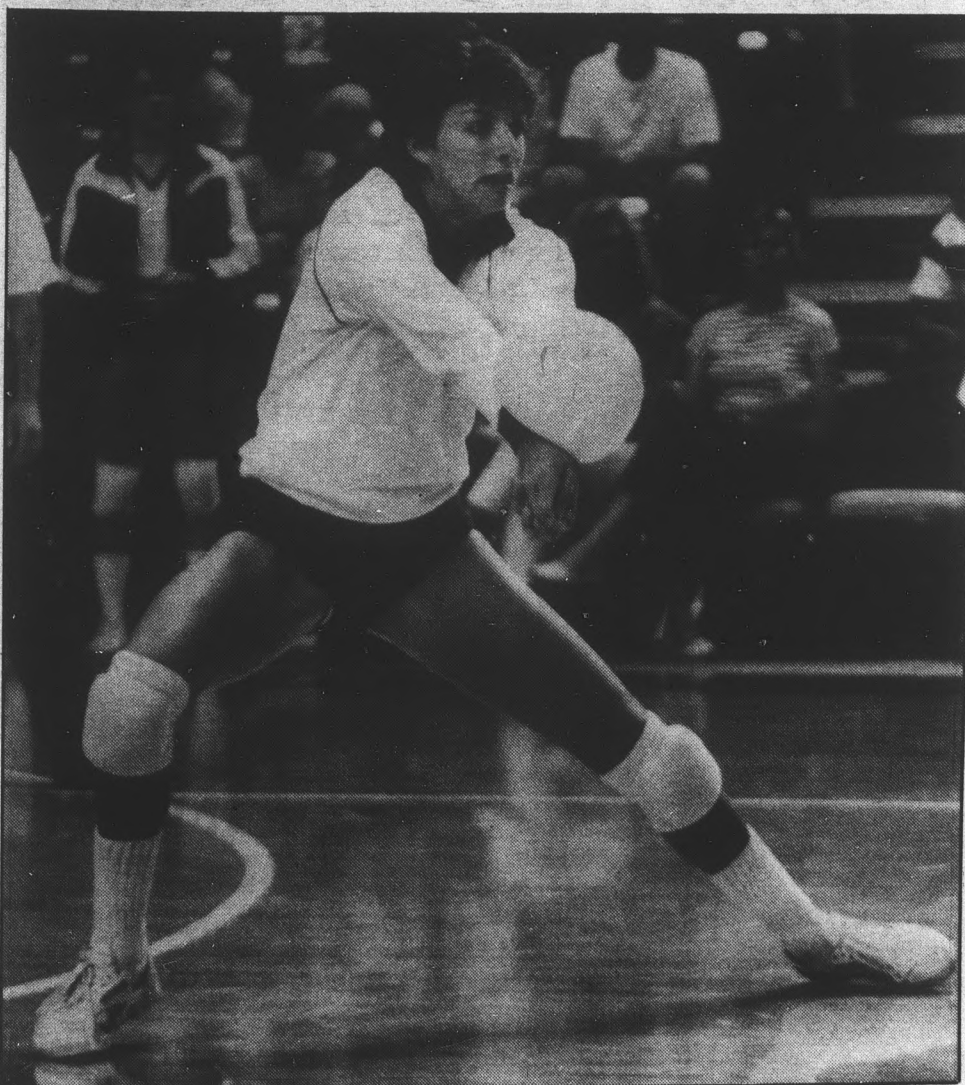

"Kelly has good all-around skills," Brown said. "She is strongest at blocking and has a really good team attitude."

"I had a chance to see her play with her club team, against other quality players, and she was very good. She was the easiest player to recruit."

"I think she wanted to come where it is warm."

Last weekend, the Sun Devils won a USVBA tournament in Thatcher, beating a number of open teams along with the UA, NAU, and New Mexico State. ASU will be competing in such events throughout the spring.

"It was good for us because we were able to rotate everyone around and everyone got experience," Brown said.

Ron Kuczek Jr./State Press

All-America Tammy Webb will be missed, despite a quality crop of recruits for next season.

Women cagers lose; players' attitude key

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

The women's basketball team's steady slide into the Pac-10 cellar is a result of a poor attitude when it counts, according to coach Juliene Simpson.

"We went into these games, as with all games, with a relaxed and positive attitude," Simpson said. "However, when the situation is there to play a strong game, we get frustrated and have a negative attitude instead of a positive one."

The team collected its sixth and seventh straight losses, bowing to Washington, 85-63, and Washington State, 75-62, last weekend.

"We had a good game plan (against Washington)," Simpson said. "We tried to have them doubt themselves and their 39-game winning streak and give us some sort of edge."

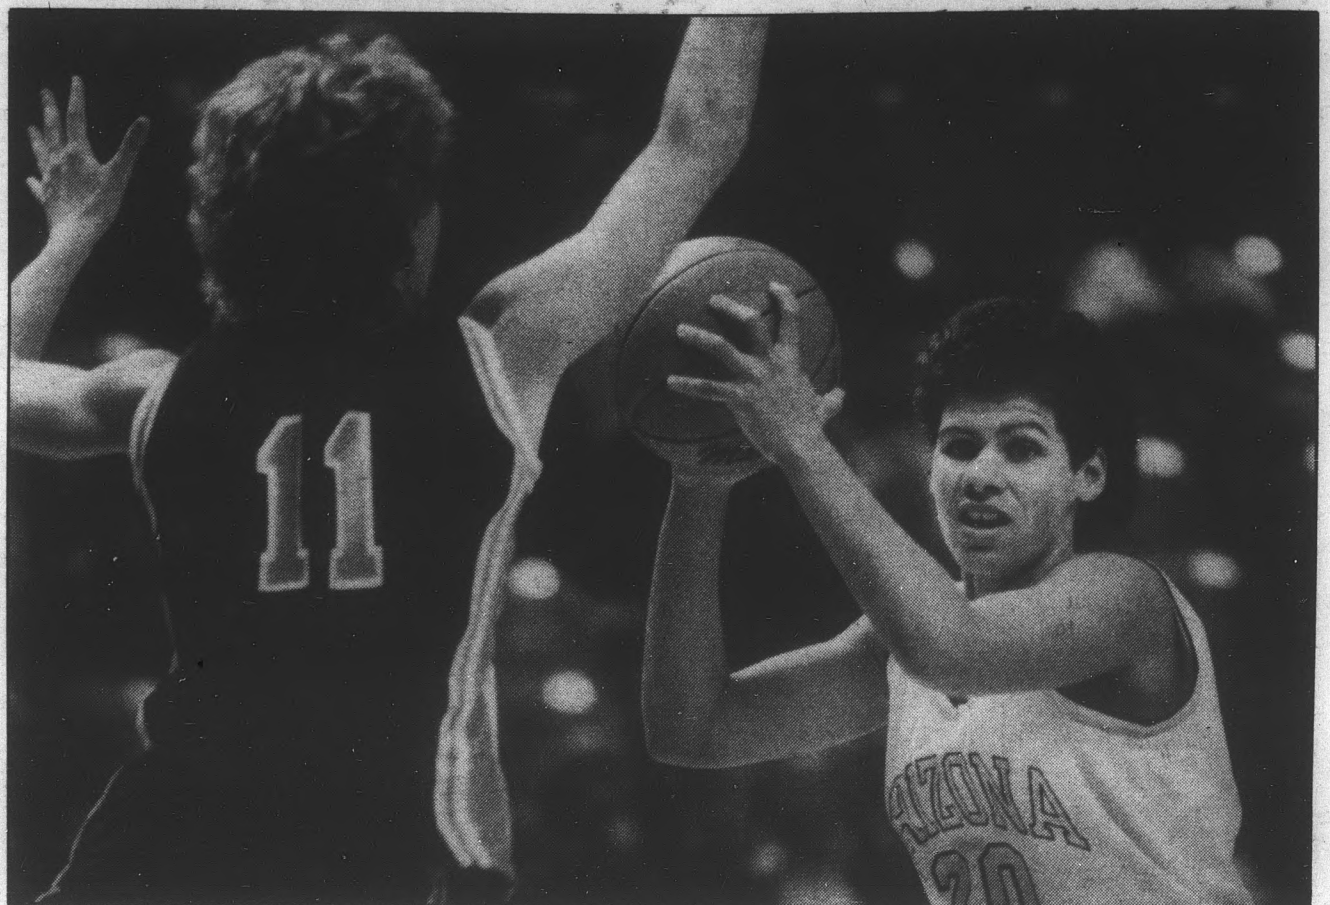

Simpson's strategy seemed to work, as the Sun Devils were able to get the offense going and went into the half down by only three points at 33-30.

However, that lead soon grew into a winning margin of 22 points, as the Huskies outscored the Devils, 52-33 in the second half, shooting 53 percent from the floor compared to ASU's 46 percent.

"We have too many times where we have three or four minutes of inconsistency, and this gets us in a hole that we can't get out of," Simpson said.

The Devils only made 28 of 61 shots compared to the Huskies, who cashed in on 39 of 74 shots.

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 17.

Ron Kuczek Jr./State Press

Guard Mona Lomell provided a spark for the Devils, but the squad sank to the bottom of the Pac-10 with two losses.

University of New Orleans reaches Top 20 for first time ever

By The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — In just his second season at the University of New Orleans, Coach Benny Dees has combined a giddy-up offense with a gimme-that defense to produce the school's first-ever appearance in college basketball's Top 20.

New Orleans was ranked No. 19 in this week's major college basketball poll, well off the pace set by top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas but still a heady experience for a group of newcomers who were still learning each others' first names when the season began.

Dees has been with ranked teams before, as an assistant to Wimp Sanderson at Alabama.

"This feels, probably, better than ever before, because of what we are and where we've come from," Dees said. "I particularly like being in the Top 20 in the last weeks of the season. If we can stay there, it's a great way to finish."

It could help produce the school's first appearance in NCAA tournament play as a major college. New Orleans lost the Division II championship to two points in

Lakers' guard, Suns' forward out for tonight

Staff and wire reports

The Phoenix Suns may lack the services of center-forward Alvan Adams tonight against the Los Angeles Lakers, but the Lakers may have to do without point guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson.

Adams suffered a deep cut over his right eye in practice Monday and may miss tonight's NBA game here against the Los Angeles Lakers.

Suns officials said the 6-foot-9 Adams was injured after tripping over 7-foot-1 rookie center William Bedford during a practice session at the Jewish Community Center.

Adams is one point shy of the 13,000 plateau in his 11-year NBA career. He needed 13 points to reach the mark but scored just 12 in Saturday night's 115-107 loss here to the Milwaukee Bucks.

Johnson has been listed as questionable for the game tonight against the Phoenix Suns because of recurring Achilles tendon problem, the Lakers announced Monday.

Johnson, the Lakers' leading scorer and the NBA's leader in assists, has been bothered by tendinitis in his left Achilles tendon since the beginning of the season, but has yet to miss a game.

His condition will be re-evaluated at game time Tuesday night and his status will be updated on a day-to-day basis.

Johnson, who has averaged 24.4 points and 11.6 assists in 54 games this year, said after the Lakers' 112-110 overtime victory Sunday over the Philadelphia 76ers that he needed a rest.

"I'm going to have to (take some time off) this week," Johnson said. "I'll probably play the Phoenix game (Tuesday night) and take the next one off, although right now I might need to take both off."

Wednesday night, the Lakers play the Suns at the Forum.

"I've been talking to Gary (Lakers tainer Gary Vitti) and he's been wanting me to take off all along, but I thought I had to play," Johnson said.

Johnson scored 16 points and passed off for 18 assists while playing 44 minutes against the 76ers.

When told of Johnson's remarks, Laker Coach Pat Riley said he'd go along with whatever Johnson felt he ought to do.

"If he's hurting that much and feels that's what he needs, then I'm inclined to go along with him," Riley said.

Johnson, who has been averaging 37.2 minutes per game this season, has yet to play all 82 regular-season games during his eight-year pro career.

So You're Going to Graduate, Congratulations . . .

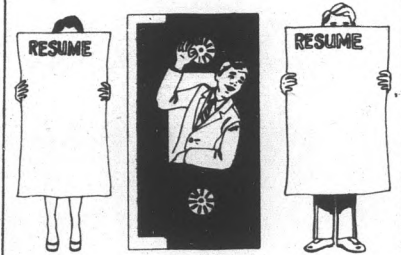

So you're going to graduate. Congratulations! After years of study, it's time to leave college, get a job, and start your career. That's a big change in your life. Are you prepared for it? How will you find a job? Use Want Ads? Send resumes. Use Placement Services? Send resumes. Use Referrals? Send resumes. Send a lot of resumes.

Each semester millions of students graduate from thousands of colleges and enter the job market. How will they find jobs? By sending resumes. Resumes a lot like yours. Because they're a lot like you. About the same age. About the same education. About the same qualifications. All applying for the same jobs. You have a lot of competition.

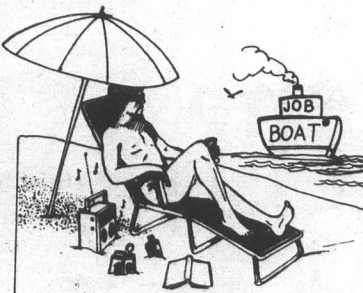

Consider the employer. All those piles of resumes to plow through. Your resume is in there . . . somewhere. How is an employer to distinguish your resume from the hundreds of similar resumes he receives? If only he had a chance to get to know you before he decided who to interview. What a difference that would make! After all, employers don't hire qualifications. Employers hire people with qualifications. But your written resume can only present your qualifications, not you.

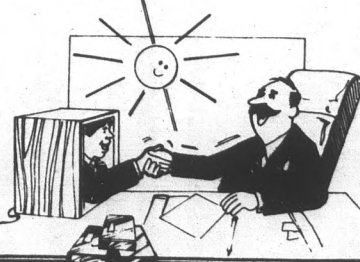

Consider: The Video Resume. A pre-interview discussion with you on standard 1/2 inch VHS tape. The Video Resume presents you with your qualifications to get you that job interview. The Video Resume. Today's Resume. The Human Resume. The Living Resume. Now an employer can get to know you before he decides who to interview. And you can interview with employers who really want to interview you.

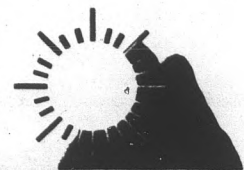

Now consider: The Video Resume Library. A database of Video Resumes used by employers. Why would employers use the library? Because interviewing is expensive and time consuming. Knowing more about the person, in addition to the qualifications, lets them make better interviewing decisions. And that saves them time and money. The Video Resume Library can introduce an employer to hundreds of qualified graduates. It can introduce you to hundreds of potential employers.

Stop! Sounds like a good idea. You'll think about it when you graduate. But you need your Video Resume now. Why? Because employers are interviewing now. They need your Video Resume now . . . in the Video Resume Library. So don't miss the boat. If you don't have the time for them now, they may not have the time for you later. By then they'll have made their hiring decisions.

What's it cost for a Video Resume? The first 200 students pay only $49.95. That's almost a 40% savings off the regular $79.95 price. What's it cost to join the Video Resume Library? Nothing! It's free. The library is wholly supported by subscribing employers. So why wait? Your first job is the most important job in your career. Because your career isn't just a way of making a living - it's a way to make a life. Call RKO Today. Do it now!

Poll

1975, the school's last season in the smaller division.

Dees replaced Don Smith as head coach last season, kept three of Smith's players, signed four from Tulane after that school abandoned men's basketball, and added a couple of his own recruits to go 16-12.

This year, he signed the nation's No. 1 junior college prospect, Ledell Eackles, and added center Damon Vance, a transfer from Louisiana State University. New Orleans was 22-3 after a 73-72 victory at Pan American Saturday.

Dees turns Eackles loose off the running game, and he's averaging 24 points a game.

The man-to-man defense comes up with an average of 22 turnovers a game, and an average of just under 17 of those are steals.

"We run a lot of people at you, substitute a lot," Dees said. "These kids have really come to believe in that part of the ball game."

Nevada-Las Vegas, 28-1, polled 49 first-place votes in balloting by sportswriters and broadcasters, totaling 1,258 points. The Running Rebels stayed atop the poll for a fourth consecutive week by overcoming a 19-point deficit to beat New Mexico State over the weekend.

North Carolina, 25-2, moved ahead of Indiana, 23-2, into second place this week.

him during conference play, which begins Friday at USC.

"He'll be seeing some innings fairly early," he said.

Northridge (8-4) extended its lead to 3-0 during the sixth inning. With two out, John Balfanz walked and Chris Pinsak doubled.

Both men scored when right fielder Dan Rumsey could not handle a sinking line

ASU (8-7) rallied in the ninth, but fell short. Rumsey doubled and pinch hitter Dwight Thomas reached first on error to lead off the inning. After Martin Peralta walked to load the bases, Tim Esmay grounded into a double play, driving in Rumsey.

Thomas scored on a bloop double by Bob Dombrowski and went to third on an infield single by John Finn.

With the tying run on third base, Brock had speedy Mike Benjamin bunt. The ball was hit close to the pitcher's mound, and Penner threw him out to end the game.

"I thought we could score the run with it," Brock said. "If it had been a perfect bunt, Finn might have made it to third and Dombrowski would have scored. But he hit it too close to the mound."

Brock said the Devils are struggling at the plate now.

"Right now we are not swinging the bat well at all," he said.

"Hitting comes and goes. I don't fault the ballclub with our effort.

ASU concludes the two-game series with Northridge today at 2:30 p.m. at Packard Stadium. Mike Schwabe (3-2) will start for ASU.

Basketball

"We put no pressure on them defensively and the balls were just not falling in for us," Simpson said.

Patti Pepler continued to show her consistency on the court by leading the Sun Devils in scoring, with 17, and assists, with seven. Pepler has been the leading scorer in the last four games.

"Patti has been playing outstanding both offensively and defensively," Simpson said. "She is very valuable to the team and this is evident when she is on the court."

Robin Connolly also scored in double figures for ASU, scoring 16 points and pulling down nine rebounds to lead all players in the game.

"Robin played very well against Washington and it showed in her sharpness both mentally and physically," Simpson said.

The Huskies had five players in double figures with Lisa Oriard leading the way with 23 points.

The Devils traveled to the Washington State Cougars' gym in Pullman on Saturday, where they went up against a team that had just come off its first conference win Thursday against UA.

WSU's momentum seemed apparent as they forged past the slumping Devils, 75-62.

"We had a lot of frustration in this game and there were a lot of other factors that contributed to our loss," Simpson said. "Turnovers was one of them."

Shot percentage was another. The Devils made only 26 of 72 shots from the field for a 36 percent average.

The Cougars didn't fare much better, as they put up 60 shots and had only 26 drop for a 43 percent shooting average.

"Teams do not normally win when they shoot less than 50 percent," Simpson said. "Washington State just got more balls in the hoop then we did."

The Cougars' Jonni Gray was the game's leading scorer, putting in seven of 17 shots for 21 points. WSU also had three other players in double figures.

Pepler was once again the leading scorer for ASU, shooting six of 14 from the floor for 15 points. She also led all players with assists, dishing off nine.

Guard Mona Lomeli added some much-needed spark to the team, according to Simpson, as she came off the bench to pump in 11 points.

One player that did not fare well for the Sun Devils was leading scorer Sherry Poole. Poole, averaging 17.1 points per game, accumulated only 16 points between the two games, shooting eight of 26 from the field.

"Sherry did just not have a good weekend, production-wise," Simpson said. "She is taking 16 or 18 shots instead of going for 10 shots and making the baskets."

Connolly also had a bad game, according to Simpson, as she fouled out with twelve minutes to go in the second half.

"She just didn't have the kind of sharpness that she did against Washington," she said.

With three games remaining in the season for the Sun Devils, Simpson is hoping for more wins but is realistically looking more towards giving the seniors some of the best possible performances.

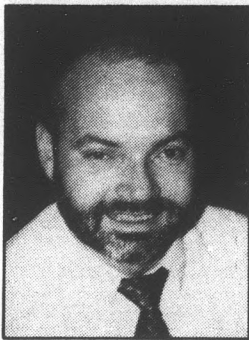

"A lot of the seniors are looking towards the end coming," Simpson said.

"We need to have all the players work for some intensity and consistency," she said.

"We are by no means in a defeatist attitude and are working towards continuing to build up the program at ASU."

LEGAL NOTES

IF YOU ARE INJURED IN AN ACCIDENT CAUSED BY SOMEONE'S NEGLIGENCE, WHAT ARE YOU ENTITLED TO RECOVER?

In general, you are entitled to recover for such items as property damage, reasonable and necessary medical bills and lost wages or income caused by the accident. More importantly, the law permits you to recover for non-economic losses such as pain, suffering, distress and disability. The value of these non-economic losses should not be underestimated. In some situations, punitive damages may also be awarded. The total evaluation of a personal injury case is a complex matter.

These Legal Notes are only intended to provide general information. The best advice to anyone who has been injured in an accident is to see a personal injury lawyer.

Your Reason For Joining The Center For Body Awareness May Be 3-Fold.

Or 2-fold, or 1-fold for that matter. Because at the Center for Body Awareness, we're in the business of ironing out those folds. The new Center for Body Awareness has over 60 classes to offer in such diverse areas as dance, martial arts and yoga. Over 50% of our classes concentrate on exercise/movement including aerobics, stretch and tone, body sculpture, and a bun and tummy class. We also offer a complete weight training program featuring the CYBEX EAGLE™ weight system.

As you can see, we offer a lot more than the others. But what may surprise you is that we offer all of this for less. A lot less.

For what works out to be $17.00* a month, you can take all the exercise/movement classes your heart desires. And for an additional $8.00* a month, you can build your biceps as big as you like.

Our location is just a hop, skip and a jump away in the new Hayden Square in Tempe. So stop by and give your body a workout while your wallet takes a break—there's no reason not to. Within walking distance from ASU

Texas tops baseball poll

By The Associated Press

TUCSON — The University of Texas baseball team, off to a 10-1 start, has been ranked No. 1 for the second week in a row in the Collegiate Baseball/ESPN Division I poll.

The Longhorns (10-1), who beat ASU in two of three games over the weekend, have five batters hitting over .400 and a team batting average of .361. They have 11 home runs in 11 games and are averaging just under 10 runs per game.

The poll ranks Florida St. (9-1) second. The Seminoles, ranked third last week, are hitting .313, and their pitchers have given up an earned run average of 1.57 with 86 strikeouts in 86 innings. Third-ranked Loyola Marymount, ranked sixth last week, held a four-game winning streak and a 12-2 record.

Track and field teams meet goals, Duncan says

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

The goals have all been met for the ASU track and field team, according to coach Clyde Duncan, as the team journeyed home from the Peabody Invitational Indoor Track Meet with another athlete in the NCAA championships.

"I am very pleased with the performance of all the athletes and especially with Shirley Walker's," Duncan said. "She really helped to spark the meet."

Walker qualified for the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 7.92, making her the third athlete on the team to be going to Oklahoma City in March to compete in the NCAA.

Walker had actually qualified for the NCAA in the first heat, crossing the line at 7.24 according to the Acu-Trak time. But since the judges couldn't see who finished in fifth and sixth place, Walker could not be given that time.

"It really is unfair, but I guess that's life," Duncan said.

"I was hoping that she would qualify and help round out an already-talented pair, so I guess that is what really matters," Duncan said.

Duncan referred to the pair of Andrew Parker and Lynda

Tolbert, who have both already qualified for the NCAA indoor championships in the 55-meter high hurdles.

Besides Walker, Duncan said there were many athletes who had impressive performances and times, starting with Mark Senior. Senior captured first place in the 300-meter run with a time of 32.97.

Tim Woods came through strong for the Sun Devils, posting a time of 1:01.68 in the 500-meter run, just above an NCAA-qualifying time.

"I was very pleased with his performance," Duncan said. "It is unfortunate that he did not make the qualifying standard time," Duncan said.

Freshman Robert Rucker also showed some impressive speed, capturing second place in the 55-meter high hurdles with a time of 7.71.

Toniette Holmes finished third for the women in the 500-meter run, clocking in at 1:12.98 and just missing the NCAA qualifying standard time.

"We had some of the best overall performances on our team and showed that we can compete against some of the top teams in the country," Duncan said.

ASU was competing against perennial powerhouses: University of Texas at El Paso, NAU, New Mexico, Stanford, Florida State and UA.

Tolbert also continued to display her ability, this time in the long jump, where she grabbed second place with a jump of 19-foot-2-inches.

"She keeps showing everybody that she can do well in all the events that she competes in," Duncan said.

The indoor season for the team is over, but there are three players who still have a season left.

Parker, Tolbert and Walker will all be traveling to New York to compete in the TAC National Indoor Meet.

This meet will be televised nationally on ESPN, followed by a tape-delayed broadcast on NBC's SportsWorld.

Once this meet is over, the three will travel to the NCAA Indoor Championships, which take place March 13-14.

"This is the place where the national and Olympic teams are picked from," Duncan said. "I have been giving them pep talks every day at practice and tell them to just go out and do the best they can."

Cats' forward named Pac-10 player of week

By The Associated Press

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (AP) — Sean Elliott of Arizona was named men's Pacific-10 basketball Player of the Week on Monday, and Oregon's Gabi Neumann won the women's award.

Elliott, a sophomore, helped the Wildcats win three games to remain in title contention. In his top effort, against Washington, he scored 22 points and added nine assists and seven rebounds.

Neumann, who is from West Germany, led the Ducks to victories over Southern Cal and UCLA. She scored 31 points against USC.

Other men nominated were Steve Beck of ASU, Kevin Johnson of Cal, Todd Lichti of Stanford, Charles Rochelin of UCLA, Derrick Dowell of USC and Chris Welp of Washington.

Beck scored 37 total points in the Devils' last two home wins over Washington and Washington State. ASU has won its last 4 games.

Other women nominated were Seina Leino of Cal, Dora Dome of UCLA, Cherie Nelson of USC, Yvette Cole of Washington and Penny Bowden of Washington State.
