

Arches landlord locks out typing center tenants

By JUDIE GAILLARD
State Press

ASU students who tried to pick up completed papers and assignments from the ASU Typing Center Wednesday were met by a locked door and a sign from the landlord saying the tenants had been locked out.

The sign read: "Do Not Enter. This space has been locked out by landlord. Call 966-7788." The ASU Typing Center at 122 E. University Drive in the Arches is not affiliated with the University.

Karen Bauer, the center's owner since Feb. 16, filed a lawsuit Wednesday against Sid Joseph, the Arches' landlord and owner of Sid's Warehouse Deli, to reopen the center.

Shelita Cox, a 20-year-old liberal arts major, said her English mid-term that was due yesterday is locked in the center.

"It caused me a lot of inconvenience," she said. "It was part of my midterm grade. I was lucky. My teacher said to hand it in when the center opened again."

Bauer runs the center with her husband, Bruce. The closing of the center and subsequent lawsuit are the result of a month-long argument between landlord and tenant.

Bauer said she had been paying Joseph rent on a monthly basis since she and Joseph had not negotiated a lease since February.

Bauer said Joseph requested she and her husband negotiate a lease, but he also requested the couple's parents sign the lease.

Joseph did not return phone calls from the State Press Thursday.

Bauer said Joseph entered the center Feb. 27, "disrupting business," and told the Bauers he did not want them as tenants and the Arches was not a babysitting service.

Bauer has two daughters, a 10-month-old and a 2-year-old, who stay at the center due to the high costs of child care.

Bauer said Joseph told them to get off the premises and requested a security deposit of $600 and a rent check for $521.88.

She said she took Joseph the March rent check but she did not give him 30-days notice. She later sent the notice by certified mail.

Bauer said Joseph gave her written confirmation of their previous discussion March 2.

Bauer said her attorney, Russell Brown, said Joseph could not lock them out without 10-days notice before the due date of the rent.

Bauer's attorney was in court Thursday and not available for comment.

Bauer said that when an employee went to open the center on March 4, the locks were changed and the sign had been posted.

Police were called to the center when Bauer's husband tried to break into their business.

"My husband was removing the glass and molding above the door of the business in order to get in and get our equipment," she said. "Sid said not to do that. My husband said he had the right to be there."

But police told Bauer the conflict was a civil matter, and they could not settle it.

"The police said because we didn't have a written lease with Joseph, he had the right to lock us out," she said.

Bauer and her attorney have filed a forceable entry action against Joseph.

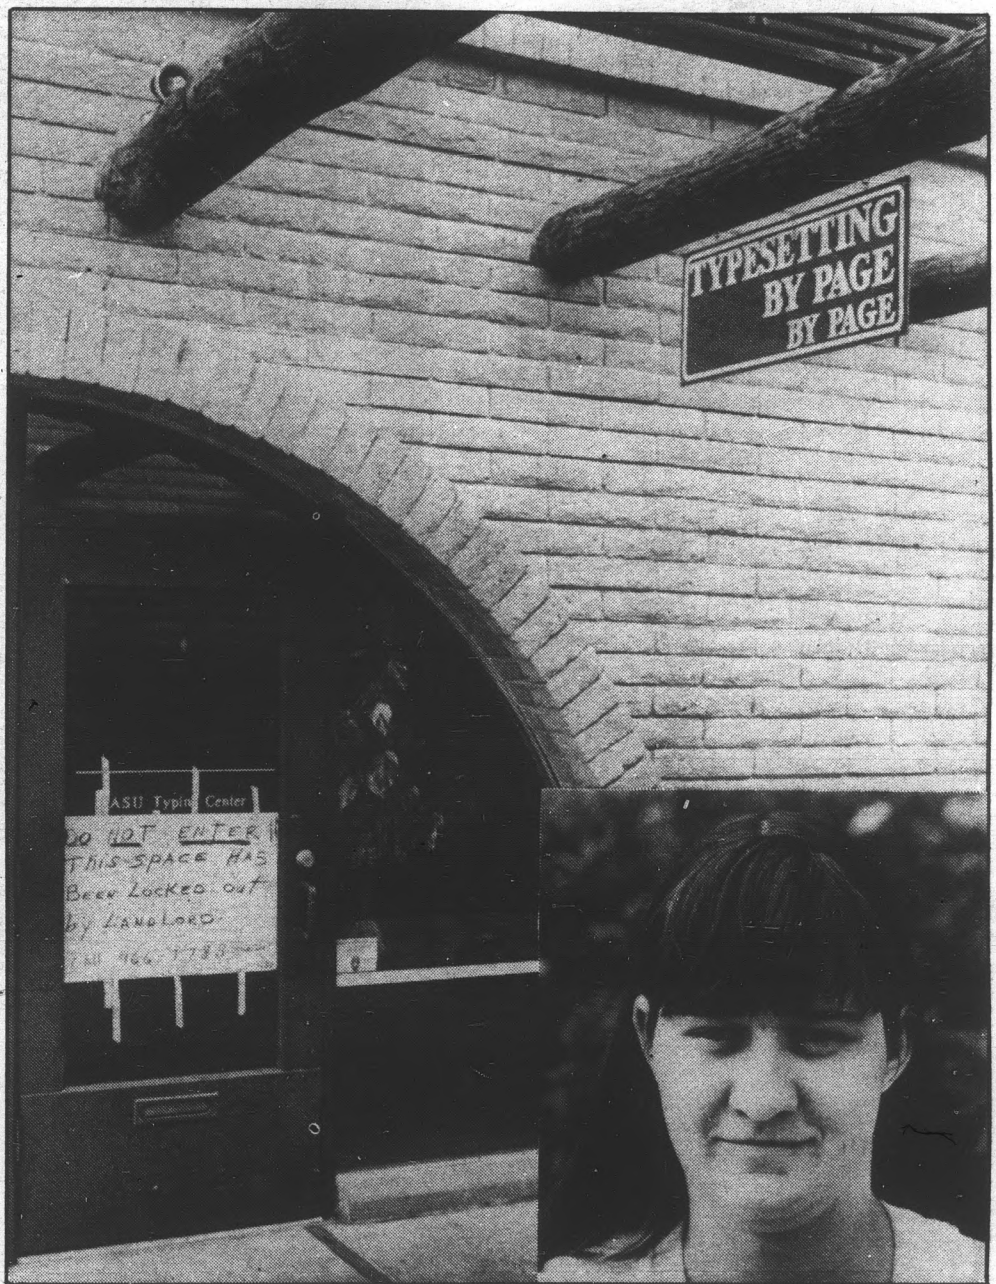

"The action will take at least three to six days until it's heard," she said. "Right now, it's the busiest time for business."

"We wanted to get the message to the students that their papers are there. When this whole thing is over, there will be no charge for their papers."

Bauer said her attorney will handle any problems students have with their professors for missing assignment deadlines.

Lenna Niebor-Erickson from the Office of Student Life said the Bauers asked ASU to notify students whose papers are locked in the center Wednesday.

"I told them that we would not do that, but if any faculty questioned the students' late papers, we would tell them the couple had been in, and we had seen a copy of the suit," Niebor-Erickson said.

Karen Bauer's business, The ASU Typing Center, was closed after a dispute between Bauer and the landlord, Sid Joseph.

Testimony begins in slaying case of ASU student

By LAUREN MILLETTE
State Press

The Sept. 6 slaying of ASU student Vincent Nieland began as an "average party with a group of rowdy college-aged men" at a Tempe apartment complex, prosecuting attorney Cleve Lynch said in his opening statement Thursday in the trial of Roy Young.

Young, 36, a Tempe resident, is charged with first-degree homicide in connection with the Nieland slaying.

Bradley Knutson, 23, 1620 W. Southern Ave., Mesa, also was stabbed twice during the fight. The late-night party resulted in the death of the 20-year-old sophomore criminal justice studies major.

Maricopa County Medical Examiner Dr. Heinz Karnitschnig said Nieland died from stab wounds to his chest and left rib cage. His alcohol blood level was .20.

The fight broke out at 3:45 a.m. in the pool area at Questa

Vida Town Houses, 850 S. River Drive, Tempe.

Lynch gave the following account to Judge Francis P. Koopman:

Nieland arrived at the pool area around 12:30 p.m. with Knutson and friends Jerry Tuzil and Rich Miller, both 20, and Jon Gibson, 24.

They drank beer and decided to visit a girl who lived in the same complex.

Nieland stayed at the pool and was joined by Stacy Kaplan. When his friends returned, Kaplan taunted them, "Did you have a lot of fun?"

The group argued for about 15 minutes, and Kaplan left with two friends. Kaplan said she had left her earring at the pool and returned by herself to get it.

Kaplan met Young's nephew, 15-year-old Glen Young, who had just returned from work and asked him to accompany her.

Kuzil and Nieland were at the pool when Glen Young and Kaplan arrived.

Kuzil called Glen Young a "nigger," and the boy left. He returned with his uncle, Roy Young, 36, who allegedly carried a wrapped butcher knife.

Kuzil and Nieland were joined by Knutson, Miller and Gibson.

When Nieland saw the Youngs approach, he backed away, saying, "We don't want to fight. . . I don't want any trouble." Kuzil then picked up a hockey stick that Miller left by the pool earlier.

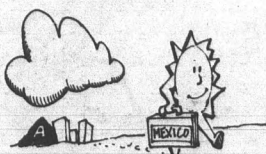

Knutson flicked a cigarette toward an ashtray, but it hit and burnt Glen Young's arm. Glen Young hit Knutson on the head.

Roy Young allegedly stabbed Knutson in the arm as the man fought with his nephew. Young also allegedly fatally stabbed Nieland.

Fuse explosion zaps power from fraternity houses, 5 ASU buildings

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

An early evening explosion of high voltage fuses outside the Sigma Nu fraternity house Thursday left five campus buildings without power for more than two hours.

The explosion also caused a minor fire at the fraternity house at 601 Alpha Drive, but a member quickly put out the fire with a wet T-shirt.

"I saw the explosion and ran over and saw flames at the bottom of the tree," Kurt Penn, sophomore liberal arts major, said. "I then dipped the shirt into the pool, ran over and beat the fire out."

Fraternity member Bill Cusick said the incident lasted only seconds.

"It looked like a big rocket that exploded," he said. "It was loud. Our dog went crazy. I've been here four years, and I never saw anything like this."

Fraternity house manager Aaron DeVault, who contacted the ASU Physical Plant, said he thought the explosion was a firework.

"It was the brightest light," he said. "It was scary though because everyone was outside."

Power was out in all 10 fraternity houses on Alpha Drive as hundreds of people, mostly fraternity members from various houses, watched as police and Physical Plant electricians assessed damages.

Several fraternity members said the explosion was an inconvenience because they had exams today, but more importantly, they missed "The Cosby Show."

The power outage caused high school basketball playoffs in the University Activity Center to be delayed.

Mecham to choose from 3 UA students for regent liaison job

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — Three UA students have been selected as finalists for the student liaison to the Arizona Board of Regents, a spokesman for Gov. Evan Mecham said Thursday.

Ron Bellus said Karen Kaizer, Joseph Mikitish and Michael Proctor were selected by the student governments at the three universities as candidates for the student regent post.

Mecham will appoint one of the three to serve in 1987-88. The appointment is subject to confirmation by the Arizona Senate.

Bellus said he did not know when the governor would make his decision, adding, "There is no hurry."

Mick Dalrymple, Arizona Students Association director for UA, said 17 people applied for the post.

Kaizer is a political science senior and former president of the Residence Hall Association at UA. She also is an intern for the Pima County Board of Supervisors and a former intern for the British Parliament.

Mikitish, an senior economics major, is an ASA researcher and past governor for the Youth in Government Program, a legislative training seminar.

Proctor is a UA law student, who also is working towards a master's degree in water resources. He is a former Associated Students of UA president.

The candidates were selected by a panel made up of three UA student government officials, and two members each from ASU and NAU.

Diane Zibley, ASA's executive director, and current Student Regent Felicia Martinez also were members of the selection committee.

"We are mostly looking for ability and some knowledge of the issues," Dalrymple said. "We weren't looking for specific viewpoints."

"Most of the selection process was based on their ability to pick up information quickly, their ability to think on their feet and their communication skills."

The student regent serves for one year as the only non-voting member of the board. Martinez will vacate the post June 30.

The post rotates each year between the three universities. Last year, Martinez did not receive Senate confirmation because her appointment was delayed and the appointment was not sent to the Senate in time. But Bellus said Mecham will have enough time to send the appointment to the Senate.

Conference to study computers in schools

By MICHAEL ROWELL
State Press

While most of ASU is lounging around on Mexican beaches, more than 700 teachers and administrators from across the United States will descend upon campus during spring break to brush up on the role of microcomputers in education.

The College of Education is co-sponsoring a three-day conference March 11-13, titled "Computers in the Schools: Who's in Charge?" The conference will be the seventh annual microcomputers in education conference held at ASU.

Maurene Miller, one of the co-directors of the conference, said between 70 and 80 representatives from electronic and software firms will be exhibiting their products, and more than 133 speakers will be conducting sessions dealing with both practical and futuristic applications of computers in the schools.

Miller said she expects everyone from kindergarten teachers through college professors at the conference.

"One thing we have noticed is kindergarten kids coming in already computer literate," she said. "That's why it's very important that (all) teachers be aware of computer potential."

Miller, who is earning her doctorate with an emphasis in computer-based education, said "the biggest job we have now is to train the teachers. They're still a little bit hesitant in using the technology."

Undergraduates in the College of Education currently are required to take a computer literacy course.

Miller said the computer's role in the classroom has developed in recent years. Students have progressed from "drill and practice" software to learning word processing and how to use data bases.

"For the kids it's incredible," she said. "They're like ducks taking to water. The teachers are the ones who are hesitant."

Miller said the teachers need in-service training and workshops to learn more about the possibilities of computers in the classroom.

"The way money is in the districts right now they can't necessarily do what they want to," she said.

Miller said the districts have several reasons to be cautious.

"They need to decide what they want to do with computers," she said. "They need to find software that fits their needs, then hardware to match the software."

Group's first study tour Mexico-bound

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

Fifteen ASU students leave for Mexico City today for the first study tour of a foreign country organized by any campus chapter of AIESEC, the International Association of Students in Economics and Business Management.

Rodolfo Sulit, a tour coordinator, said the ASU chapter of AIESEC is the first among more than 60 chapters across the country to study and prepare a report about the economic climate of a foreign country.

Sulit said he hopes the week-long study of U.S. Direct Investment Company in Mexico will serve as a model for other college chapters.

The 15 members of AIESEC, who were chosen from a group of about 23 applicants, prepared for the visit by attending talks by experts in South American affairs, including former U.S. Ambassador to Costa Rica Lewis Tambo.

He said the group will attend seminars on Mexico's debt, economic policies and trade relations with the United States. AIESEC members also will examine Mexico's membership in General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT, and U.S. investment in Mexico.

Sulit said the group will prepare a 30-page report on its findings and distribute it to organizations such as the Mexican AIESEC and Junior Achievement, who helped organize the trip. The report is expected to cost $1,000.

He said the estimated cost of the tour for each student fell from $300 to $270 because the Mexican peso continues to drop in value.

"Unfortunately, the report won't be printed down there," he said.

Sulit said he borrowed the idea for the tour from the AIESEC group in Japan, after studying there last summer and asking the Japanese coordinator how he organized the excursion.

Sulit said he was met with a lot of enthusiasm when he told his plan to AIESEC officers.

"But they were skeptical too," he said. "So the idea was on the back burner for awhile."

Sulit said the hardest part of planning the tour was coordinating the divisions within AIESEC to solicit funds and promote the trip.

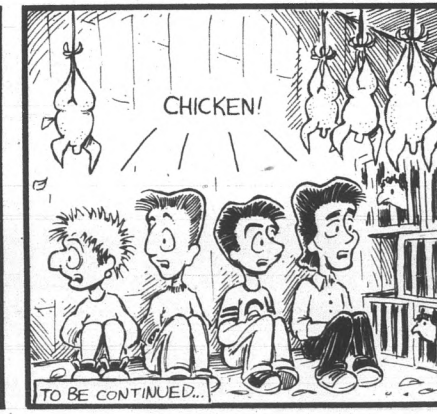

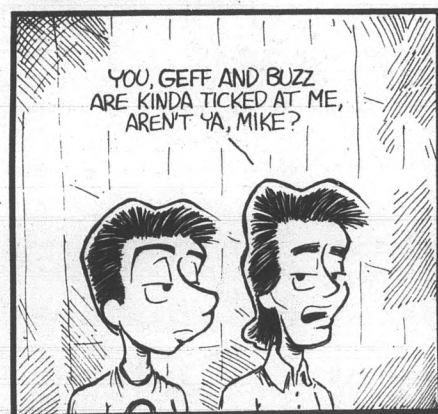

He said five of the students included in the tour group are new AIESEC members.

Non-governor makes nonsense

Gov. Evan Mecham says the media has treated him unfairly in his first two months in office, but one only has to look at Mecham's actions to know that it is he who is providing ammunition for negative reports and editorials on his administration.

Now, Mecham claims that Phoenix Gazette columnist John Kolbe is a "non-person" and has banned him from all press conferences because of columns that have portrayed the governor in a bad light.

This, like most of what Mecham has done since he took office in January, is what gives the media and the citizens of Arizona a chance to thrash the governor over his actions.

Mecham is blatantly tossing aside the First Amendment by not allowing Kolbe at any news conferences. In essence, Mecham is telling the state, "I won't allow anyone to say bad things about me — even though they may be true — because I don't like that."

What Mecham fails to understand, however, is that Kolbe is paid to give his opinion on page two of the Phoenix Gazette and he has done just that. Kolbe, being a member of the press corps, also has the right to attend open press conferences held by the governor just as reporters and columnists from any other newspapers have.

One has to wonder just what Mecham has planned in declaring Kolbe a "non-person." May we suggest that Mecham is actually a "non-governor" and Carolyn Warner will wake up, walk into the bathroom and Bill Schulz will step out of the shower. Then the state can breathe a sigh of relief and say, "It was only a dream, thank goodness."

Unfortunately, that won't happen and we will still have to put up with Mecham's "I'm too good to be criticized by any of you" attitude.

What Mecham has failed to realize is that he would be held up for public scrutiny if he won the governor's race. This should not have been a surprise to him.

But if the governor still contends that the media is unfair to him and his administration, we have a few words of advice.

If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen.

Like Christmas, spring break has overt meaning

Have you ever noticed how people get so apathetic during the month of February? That month is a slow one because it is conveniently placed between two months with outstanding holidays — Christmas and spring break.

February does have Valentine's Day, but this is a bogus holiday if you're not involved with someone.

Possibly the only thing that saves that month from being a total loss is Arizona's birthday. It even falls on the same day as Valentine's Day.

If you don't have a main squeeze, you can always kiss up to your state.

But given the current situation in Arizona, this is the furthest thing from most people's minds.

During the Christmas season, the media always finds the space to accommodate promos on the "True Meaning of Christmas."

I don't know why Christmas should get all the attention. Many people don't realize just how important spring break is.

Thank goodness it's finally March!

This is my attempt to define the "true meaning of spring break."

First of all, it must be understood spring break is a holiday created just for students.

Whoever came up with the idea to turn kids loose for a week really was a wise man. For parents who have to deal with their younger kids being out of school, I can understand their belief that this holiday holds no credibility whatsoever.

But for the college-age kids — well, let's just say spring

Amy Frischknecht

break comes at a time when most of us are near the end of our ropes.

After sitting back and observing the behavior patterns of students during these last two weeks preceding the break, I know why this holiday is so necessary.

Students have a way of getting lost on the way to class. It's got to be the most pathetic thing in the world to see a student wandering around in the beautiful sunshine, wondering if he should ditch class for the umpteenth time.

I begin to wonder if the sun does more than just gives us sunburns — it gives us brainburns.

By the way, we're working on documenting this as a fact. Put simply, spring break rescues students from destroying themselves.

The spring semester is not all that shorter than the fall, but it sure seems like it. And although you would think this is an advantage, when we're talking college, it's really not.

Apathy among students is a serious problem. It's like falling into a black hole and not being able to get out. Students who have so much ambition at the beginning of the semester are suddenly brought to their knees by spring fever.

So what do you do?

How do you save yourself from this horrible reality?

Fill the car up with a full tank of gas, grab a six-pack of whatever you drink and get the heck out of town!

Nothing in the world gives greater satisfaction than draining your savings account in order to totally blow off the professors and books for an entire week.

Many older folks, you know the ones who visit our Valley from various places, look upon the students of ASU as they whiz by on their way to Mazatlan and frown because of our despicable attitudes.

"Look Ma, there goes another one of those college-type people. Those little hellions just have no concept of hard work."

In my opinion, college is a necessary evil. These days if you don't go to college, you're classified as a bum and you certainly won't go anywhere in life.

But you can only take so much before you start to experience third-degree brain meltdown. A week away in the spring relieves the pressure and allows us the chance to re-evaluate ourselves.

A week spent either basking in the sun or buried in the snow allows us the time to remember why we are punishing ourselves with this everyday school stuff.

Hopefully, when we get back, we'll be completely rejuvenated and motivated to go on with whatever we've started here.

That's what spring break is all about.

Purim: Esther's rule as queen cause for celebration

As Jewish holidays go, the upcoming festival of Purim is one of the more interesting and unusual. A few years ago, my attempted observance of its religious traditions resulted in my being locked up for drunk and disorderly conduct.

Allow me to explain.

'Purim' literally means 'lots,' and refers to the lots that the evil Persian vizier Haman cast to determine which day he would annihilate the Jews of the Persian Empire. As the Book of Esther explains, Haman's plan depended on the complicity of the Emperor Ahasuerus, or Xerxes.

Now in the story, Ahasuerus is not very bright and is easily manipulated by the likes of Haman. But he's also deeply in love with his queen, Esther, who happens to be a Jew (though Ahasuerus doesn't know this just yet).

To foil Haman's plot, Esther invites both Ahasuerus and Haman to a banquet, during which she reveals her Jewish identity and begs the king to spare her people. Ahasuerus, apparently unaware of the scope of Haman's plans, is livid and storms from the banquet room in a rage.

Haman, dumbfounded, throws himself

Ed Schubert
Analysis Editor

upon Esther to beg for mercy. Thereupon Ahasuerus, with Laurel and Hardy timing, returns and exclaims in amazement, "Will you even assault the queen here in my presence?"

To make a long story short, the Jews are saved and Haman is hung from the very gallows he had prepared for Mordecai, Esther's righteous uncle.

It's a great story, and the holiday of Purim reflects the romance, humor and joy of the events it commemorates.

On the evening of March 15, Jewish communities around the world will gather in synagogues to hear the Book of Esther read aloud. Every time the name of the evil Haman is read, the congregation will yell, boo, and shout to symbolically erase it. On Purim, costumes, noise, charity and general good spirits are all in order.

And good spirits are in order in more ways than one. Although Jewish tradition normally requires an abstemious attitude toward drinking, on Purim we break loose and have a party. The Talmud instructs that on Purim, we are to get so drunk that we can't tell the difference between "Blessed be Mordecai" and "Cursed be Haman."

Now, the idea is not just to get drunk; there is a subtle theological point to be made. Alcohol is used to achieve the proper sense of ecstasy and gratitude to God for his miraculous intervention in the days of Ahasuerus.

It is a point whose subtlety is sometimes lost on the neophyte student of Judaism. I only vaguely remember leaving the Hillel Union of Jewish Students on Purim about five years ago.

But I do remember coming slowly to consciousness in a place of painfully bright light, unable for some reason to move my arms from behind my back. As I discerned the bars in front of me, I finally, dimly realized that I was handcuffed and in jail — in the University Police Station, no less.

Late the following morning, after I'd been freed and was reasonably coherent, I was filled in on the previous night's events by Rabbi Barton Lee, the Hillel director.

It seems that as I was walking back to my house on the other side of campus (give me credit, at least, for not driving), I decided to take a nap in a building near the northeast corner of ASU. I was roused by a custodian, got belligerent, then started off again — not in the direction of my house, but toward the river bottom and who-knows-what new adventures.

The custodian, Jon Whitehurst, did the reasonable thing and called the University Police. (Jon and I met again later on and relived that memorable night — memorable for Jon, anyway).

It must have been 3 or 4 a.m. when Rabbi Lee and his wife, Marcy, arrived at the station to bail me out — having been roused from a no doubt peaceful slumber by a phone call and a plea from the police to come down and take me off their hands.

That was Purim, five years ago, and I want to say I really appreciated the forbearance of everyone involved.

And — hey! — in a week we can all get together and do it again.

'Rat factor' certain to bring guilty parties to justice

I hate to go over to Morton's house because he's always yelling at this TV set.

This is what he was doing the other night when one of the Wall Street wiseguys was being sentenced for making a killing on inside stock tips.

"Do you have anything to say before sentencing?" the judge asked the defendant.

"Tell him the devil made you do it," Morton yelled at the screen.

"Your honor," the defendant began, "I am ashamed of what I did. I should have never gotten involved with insider information."

"That's not what you're ashamed of," shouted Morton. "What you're sorry about is that you had to give back $6 million."

The defendant wiped a tear from his eye. "Most of all I am full of remorse because I brought disgrace on my parents and my friends who had no idea what I was doing."

"So why did you make your mother buy 1,000 shares of Shepherd's Pudding at 34 1/2%?" Morton yelled.

Art Buchwald
Los Angeles Times
Syndicate

"Morton," I begged, "let the man have his day in court."

"He deserves the gas chamber. Instead he'll get two months as the tennis pro at Allenwood."

The defendant said, "I have discovered that when you betray the people you work for and the country you love, there is a lot of pain."

Morton yelled, "Tell us about it, dirty fingers."

I said, "He's just a child. Everyone makes mistakes."

"What was his mistake?" Morton asked.

"He had the same barber as Ivan Boesky. You must remember the stock market is a jungle — it's dog eat dog, and you can't blame a young man for wanting to make more money than Merrill Lynch Fenner and Smith. If this guy didn't feed inside information to Boesky somebody else would have. The traders have a saying on Wall Street, 'If a man does something illegal and they put his picture on the front page of the New York Post he has suffered enough.'"

The defendant continued, "I ask all the people I have hurt to forgive me for what I've done. I'm going to devote the next 60 years of my life to giving poor people good stock tips."

"I don't believe him," Morton said. "I'll bet he's made a deal to rat on everyone in the World Trade Center."

"Morton, it's not for you to decide what a man should get for cheating in the stock market," I said. "The important thing is to make sure he will not do it again."

"How can you be sure he won't do it again?" he asked.

"Because of the rat factor. The guy turned in a lot of other guys including Boesky. Now Boesky is turning in others and they will rat on still others until every crooked person on Wall Street will be brought to the bar of justice and punished according to the law. This is what makes America great, the willingness for citizens to rat on each other after they're caught."

"I'm not greedy," said Morton. "If they hang him by his thumbs, I'll be satisfied."

When we turned back to the set the judge was reading to the defendant, "You are a disgrace to your profession, your loved ones and the Dow Jones averages. I have spoken to the attorney general and I concur with the plea bargain he worked out with your lawyer."

"For stealing $60 million and endangering the entire financial system of the United States, I sentence you to 10 days in traffic school, with three days off for good behavior."

ASASU attempting to relieve overburdened advising staff

By BEN McCONNELL
State Press

Associated Students is working on a plan to pacify student complaints of inadequate or non-existent academic advising, thus relieving an overburdened advising staff, ASASU's president said Thursday.

Chris Cummiskey said ASASU is creating the "Road Map" plan in response to Gov. Evan Mecham's proposed budget cuts and student complaints about academic advising shortages.

"These (actions) have propelled us to seek innovative ways to utilize the resources we do have," he said.

Cummiskey said each ASU undergraduate would receive a computer printout from the Office of the Registrar, which would list classes the student has taken, explain what classes are required for the student's major and offer a choice of classes for the next semester.

"It would be a list of, say, nine classes and the list would say 'choose four,'" he said.

Although ASASU still is calculating logistics for the plan, Cummiskey said he hopes to present it to administrators soon, using one of ASU's 11 colleges as a "pilot" college.

The Road Map's budget and staff requirements still are being explored, Cummiskey said.

Reactions from academic advisers and administrators were mixed.

Barbara Colby, academic adviser for the College of Architecture, said, "I don't think the college (of Architecture) would go for it."

She said the college already has an intensive advising program for architecture undergraduates. She also chastised the media for not making students aware of current resources.

"Why don't you just publicize what resources are already available for students," she said.

But Jo Hennington, assistant dean for the College of Business, praised the plan as "very worthwhile."

"Anything that can help students self-advise and be instantaneous is good," she said. "I believe students are adults, and they want to be in charge. Other universities, like (Brigham Young University) already have systems like this."

University, 170 countries to recognize world prayer day

By ALISA WABNIK
State Press

For 100 years, people around the world have prayed simultaneously to recognize World Day of Prayer. Today at noon, ASU will join them for the first time.

The worship service, held in Danforth Chapel, commemorates the centennial anniversary of the ceremony. It was written by the executive board of the International Committee for World Day of Prayer, a group of elected women from participating countries. Church Women United, an international organization of Christian women, helped design the program.

People in 170 countries will take part today in identical services throughout the world that revolve around this year's theme, "Come and Rejoice."

ASU's service will be led by Rona Johnson, leader of the Lutheran Campus Center. The Rev. Jane Tews, director of the Wesley Foundation, will deliver a meditation. ASU students and faculty, as well as members of off-campus religious organizations, will fill the rest of the program.

Dr. Ann Hardt, the ASU program's organizer and a member of the Campus Interfaith Council, said that although the service incorporates all sectors of Christianity, it is an ecumenical rather than an interfaith service.

"Anyone is welcome but it is a Christian service," she said. Hardt, who also is an associate professor of education, said she expects representatives from at least 10 campus religious organizations to attend.

Mary Peters, secretary of Danforth Chapel and secretary/treasurer of the Campus Interfaith Council, said she cannot estimate how many students will appear since today is the last school day before spring break.

"That didn't hold us back from celebrating it," she said. "We really tried to reach the students, and we really hope some of them will be there."

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents ending noon Thursday:

- A man not affiliated with the University tried to file a false police report to defraud his insurance company, police said. Police said the man reported March 3 that an unknown person placed metal shards under the rear tires of his vehicle in Lot 63. The man told police he had his vehicle towed and replaced the tires. Police investigation revealed that the tires were not damaged, and the man had them replaced because they were worn out.

- The Tempe fire department responded to a brush fire in a parking island in Lot 42, police said. Tempe police contacted ASU police, and officers found a lighter near the bush. Police said they have no leads or witnesses.
- Three men were arrested at Manzanita residence hall for trespassing and theft of $158, police said. Police said the men were not affiliated with the University.
- An ASU student was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital after becoming ill in Hayden Library.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents ending noon Thursday:

- A 29-year-old Tempe man was arrested for molesting two Tempe youths at 1021 S. Vela Circle, No. 8, police said. Police went to 1701 E. Don Carlos Ave. in reference to a possible child molestation. Police said they discovered that the man had molested an 8-year-old boy and a 6-year-old boy. Police said the man had molested the boys four times before December 1986.
- An 18-year-old Mesa woman was sexually assaulted in Papago Park, 715 N. College Ave., early Thursday morning, police said. Police said the woman had been sitting in the park after arguing with her boyfriend. She told police a man approached her, carrying a 12-pack of beer and asked her if she wanted to "party." After drinking half a can of beer, police said the woman felt dizzy and passed out.

Police said when the woman woke up, two men were sexually assaulting her and two other men stood by laughing.

- A 29-year-old Tempe man was stabbed in the arm by an unknown assailant after leaving the Vine Tavern, 801 E. Apache Road, with a friend, police said. Police said the two men were leaving the bar when a man approached them and spoke to them in Spanish. Police said the Spanish-speaking man pulled a knife from his coat pocket and stabbed one of the men in the arm. The man was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital where he received 46 stitches, police said.
- A Tempe man was shot in the left cheek with a pellet gun while driving eastbound at the intersection of Southern Avenue and Los Feliz Drive, police said. The man told police he saw a youth driving a red scooter point his finger at him. He said he heard a "click," but did not see any weapon.

Lethal

Actors play to kill with action film

Mel Gibson

Danny Glover

Gary Busey

BURBANK, Calif. — Opening at Valley theaters today, Warner Bros./Silver Pictures' "Lethal Weapon" is quite a step beyond Thunderdome for Mad Maxist Mel Gibson and his screen cohorts Danny Glover and Gary Busey.

The dramatic action film plugs Gibson as Martin Riggs, a literal killing machine. A former CIA Special Forces agent during the Vietnam War, Riggs is a registered lethal weapon with the Los Angeles Police Department. Having recently lost his wife of 11 years, rumor in the squadroom has it that his penchant for risk taking is a maniacal death wish.

Riggs is paired with Glover ("The Color Purple") as Roger Murtaugh, a 50-year-old homicide detective with a solid reputation and an unblemished record. The odd couple joins forces to unravel a heroine ring with roots in the Vietnam War. Their unlikely partnership develops into a friendship and a key to survival.

Their cool, silver-haired nemesis Joshua, played by Busey ("The Buddy Holly Story"), is an urban mercenary whose Special Forces training has turned into a lucrative international drug smuggling operation.

The threesome were on hand Friday, Feb. 27, at Warner Bros. Burbank studios to answer questions:

Q: How do you become the character you are playing?

Mel Gibson: "It's important to go onto it expecting nothing and everything from yourself. In order to do something truthful you must remain without a boundary or a goal to reach.

"The only thing you can do is say, 'I can only fail.' Say, 'I'm just burning celluloid. Go.' And just relax, open up. That way you're accessible, you can express anything. It's like Mr. Potato Head — if he's already got a nose on his face it's hard to put another nose on top of it. You've got to go from a neutral."

Q: You've experienced most of your success from action films such as the "Road Warrior" series, is the action what attracted you to "Lethal Weapon"?

Gibson: "When I read this I didn't think it was a predominantly action picture. That wasn't the way it struck me. I knew it was there, but I saw it as a story about these characters, these people. And these people that hopefully, if we did our job well enough, the audience would care about. The action is just a vehicle that propels these people through extraordinary circumstances.

"The last thing I wanted to do was an action picture. I think this is very different from the 'Road Warrior' pictures."

Q: How do you feel about your role as a 50-year-old cop?

Danny Glover: "It gave me a chance to explore a little bit of humor especially after the last one (Mister in 'The Color Purple') It was easier, a bit more lighter. It's the first action film outside of 'Silverado' — contemporary action film — that I've been in.

"I liked the character. I didn't mind playing older — initially I did. My agent said, 'Don't play 50. The only thing I don't like about the script is that you're 50.'

"They want you to be younger. Shit I'm gonna get older hopefully. God willing, I'm gonna be 50 one day and I want to enjoy it. I like Roger at 50, you know, I like his sensibility and the way he comes to grips with that. There's a little bit of trauma in it, but there's trauma in getting close to 40, which I am."

Q: You've always played good guys in your previous films ("The Buddy Holly Story" and "Insignificance") why did you want to play a villain?

Gary Busey: "I had just lost 60 pounds and I had been playing fat guys and I was tired of playing fat guys — all they do is sweat. There was a chance when the ('Lethal Weapon') script came to me and I read it. I had never played the bad guy before someone wicked and detestable, ice cold and professional and egotistical.

"So it was a stretch for me. But when I came to the picture they already had Joshua set and it wasn't me and I asked to be seen. And they said, 'Well, OK, we haven't ever seen you play this part and we don't know what you look like, would you mind reading.' I hadn't read in 12 years but I said yes, of course.

"This is like the third stage of my career: first, it was the juvenile with Buddy Holly and then it was the big guys with 'Insignificance' and we'll start a new one right here.

"This is the first time that I've played a villain. And since I haven't killed anyone or done anything like that in combat, what really helped was that the hair was silver and the high-fashion suit and the dialogue. I just played it as straight as I could and he turned out ice cold."

Q: With all the action scenes in the movie, did you encounter any difficulties?

Busey: "It was the most fun I've ever had, but the work was most difficult. We had chiropractors coming in and we were going to the doctor every other week."

Comedian-actor rebounds from SNL slip with 'Twisted' role

Charles Rocket stars in "Down Twisted."

By DAVID MILLER
State Press

Actor Charles Rocket lives up to his reputation.

At least over the phone, that is. The star of Cannon Film's "Down Twisted," which opened nationally last weekend, is known for his verbal bite and candor, which serve him well in most cases. That is MOST cases.

"It was a bogus event," Rocket said of the 1980 incident which cast him out of favor with the "Saturday Night Live" upper echelon, his former employers.

"I accidentally said it at the very end of the show, and a few people called up. Actually it was about 10 people out of 40 million viewers who noticed I said it," he said.

What he said can't be printed here either. But you can tell he found it a minor offense, and one whose punishment hardly fit the crime.

"It was about the time that Reagan was elected, and people wanted to be very conservative," he said. "NBC wanted to become heroes and jumped on the bandwagon."

Perhaps, though, things happen for a reason. They certainly did in the case of Charles Rocket. There were better things in store for him than reading "Weekend Update."

"It's been a lot of hard work," Rocket said of his just now coming-of-age career. "It was a six-year struggle to bounce back from 'Saturday Night Live.' I mean, I wasn't on the skids or anything, but things are just now coming around.

"It's a pretty good little film," he said of "Down Twisted," in which he plays Reno, a character similar to both James Bond and Bill Murray's twisted "Caddyshack" greenskeeper. Reno's a leading man who makes the right moves and gets the girl and spills his martini all over his tux.

"A little improv is par for the course," Rocket said. "And it was a pretty strong script from the start. Albert (Pyun, director of 'Down Twisted') let me do what I want."

The secret of success then, would seem to be not to cower in the face of inhibition.

"You run the risk of being an asshole," he said. "You have to be willing to make a fool of yourself. I got a good taste of that in L.A., at the Comic Strip, where I hung out for awhile. It's really hard for the guys who have to do standup. I wouldn't want to have to do that."

So for Rocket, the occasional dry quip is plenty.

"I'm definitely a comedian, but I'm also an actor. I'm a comedian-actor," he surmised.

But this is one comedian-actor who knows when to be serious, particularly when discussing the making of the film.

"God the money goes quick," he said. "You know, everything costs. And you get people who waste money. They say 'I want a Rolls to pick me up.'"

"The idea is not to waste money on periphery. You want to get the most you can up there. Otherwise the audience wonders who was on drugs. With $100,000 I could make a pretty good film," he said.

Is that what he wants to do?
"What I want is to get to a place where they'll say 'Charlie, what would you like to do?' That would be just fine with me."

Rich Little uncorks cast full of characters in comedy act

By GREGORY ROBERT KRZOS
State Press

Hello... is Rich Little in there?
That's a good question for a man who's impersonated almost everyone from President Reagan to Dr. Ruth to Miss Piggy and back again. Not surprisingly, the comedian sometimes has trouble answering it himself.

"There is no Rich Little, he's a whole lot of people," Little said in a telephone interview from his home in Malibu, Calif. "If you put all the people (I imitate) together, you would find him — he's under all of them and he is quite normal like everyone else."

Little brings his side-splitting comedy act of impersonations to the Valley at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 14 in the ASU Sundome Center for the Performing Arts. But it's the somewhat "abnormal" side of Little that people are attracted to.

"I've always tried to keep my act fresh, doing new people because there's not much television to do anymore," he said. "If you can change and do new things, plus the things you are known for, it's a help."

Indeed, it's Little's superb comedy timing that's helped him perfect every nuance of intonation and phrasing. Over the past two decades he has garnered a list of 200 character impersonations, and the list keeps growing.

Born and raised in Ottawa, Canada, it didn't take long before Richard Carruthers Little became popular. During his early school years, he eventually discovered how to gain attention — by imitating his teachers.

"The teachers would be afraid of me because I would answer questions in their voice, giving them the wrong answer," he said. "And, if you gave them the wrong answer in their own voice it was really humiliating. So, they kind of ignored me, but it was a great way to become popular in school."

"I knew the power I had and how much fun I could have with it, and, how putting down the teacher was great enjoyment — if you poke fun at anyone in authority, whether it's a teacher or a politician, it always invokes laughter because we like to see people that we think are wise brought down to a common level."

The class clown eventually went on to become one of Ottawa's most successful disc jockeys and talk show hosts. In 1964, his friend, singer Mel Torme, introduced him to Judy Garland whom he went on to guest-star with on several variety shows for CBS-TV. He has since cruised the nightclub circuit, playing to full houses in Las Vegas and Atlantic City. He has also crossed over into the recording industry, where his album, "The First Family Rides Again," (spoofing the Reagan family) became a top seller on the charts.

Impersonating political figures seems to be one of his specialties. Mention the subject of Ronald Reagan, and Little has a field day.

"It's great (imitating the president) right now," he said. "I mean, he's writing his own material. Nothing I could write could be funnier. I remember sitting down one day and writing a joke on Iran and my wife said, 'Yeah, but what he said this morning on the radio is funnier.'"

"I'm just recycling old Watergate jokes is what I'm doing."

There's a slight pause and Little breaks into a classic rendition of Reagan. "I have not done anything wrong and I promise never to do it again."

"I used that for Nixon 10 years ago," he said. "Don't throw anything out — I'll keep the arms jokes around. Who knows, the next president may have something happen and I'll be using them again."

Little admits that it is not that hard for him to imitate people.

"It depends on who you are doing," he said. "You can have actors with masculine voices like Robert Redford — a fine actor, but the voice doesn't really register that much. If I asked you what Harrison Ford sounded like you'd probably say, 'Well, I don't really know,' but if you say Clark Gable, you can hear it in your head. Gary Cooper, Humphrey Bogart, Richie Robinson — I mean, those voices jump right out at you."

One of his many favorites is Jimmy Stewart.

"I've always liked to do Jimmy Stewart," he said and quickly dug up a Stewart accent. "Now Jim is the first voice I've ever did and I'm still doing him."

His real voice came back and he was off talking about the upcoming weekend.

"I'm working with Jimmy on Sunday," he said. "I'm doing a cocktail party for cystic fibrosis to raise money for the local chapter here. Jimmy's going to be on and we're going to do a little routine where I'll show Jim how to imitate himself."

Although he's appeared on television in the past, Little admits that he has no plans to cross over onto the small screen again in the immediate future.

"I think the exposure would be good, but I don't think people think of me in those terms," he said. "Then the producers ask, 'Can he act?' — I love that line."

"No, he can't," Little said sarcastically. "He just sits there and blinks."

'Stand By Me' actor follows dreams to Disney, video stores

By MARTY WEISS
State Press

Wil Wheaton, the young actor who portrayed Gordie Lachance in "Stand By Me," has reason to celebrate this month.

Not only is he starring in another film project, "Young Harry Houdini," Sunday, March 15 on ABC-TV, but the Oscar-nominated (for Best Screenplay) "Stand By Me" will be released in video stores in the Valley on March 19.

"It's about Erich Weiss (Houdini)," Wheaton said. "As a boy, he ran away from home for one year. This show is about what happens during that year."

"I got to work with some great people, I made some great contacts and I'm part of the Disney family now. I've wanted to work for Disney all my life."

Wheaton had other reasons for enjoying this project.

"I'm a Harry Houdini fan," he said. "I've stayed up till 12:30 or 1 a.m. sometimes reading this book I have on Houdini's life. My first-period history teacher was real thrilled with that."

The acting bug bit Wheaton when he was 2 years old.

"I was in my grandmother's kitchen bored to death," he said. "She came in and we acted out little skits, sang songs and did lots of crazy things. I owe my entire career to my grandmother and the 'Gong Show.'"

Wheaton didn't start acting professionally until five years later.

"I went in with my mom to her agent," he said. "The commercial agent for children (in that office) said, 'Wow! You have a really good commercial face. Would you like to do commercials?' When I said no, she said, 'OK, Come back when you're ready.'"

"One week later, I don't know what happened," he said. "I don't know whether I had an experience with God or a visit from the Mafia or some other influencing factor brought me to the decision that that's what I wanted to do with my life."

Wheaton is now best known for his role in "Stand By Me." On and off the set, he enjoyed being with his costars and the director.

"I get along with everybody," Wheaton said. "I can get along with mass murderers. Rob (Reiner) is great. River (Phoenix) and I... my God, we're like brothers. On and off the set, everybody was great."

"We did a lot of crazy things that Jerry

'I owe my entire career to my grandmother and the "Gong Show."

— Wil Wheaton

(O'Connell) and I instigated — smoke bombs in exhaust pipes, paper airplanes off the mezzanine levels, patio furniture in the pool, jamming the video games to get free games."

Wheaton described his favorite scenes in the film:

"My favorite scene to shoot was the entire junkyard sequence just because it was loads of fun," he said. "It was hell because it was so hot, but it was fun."

"My favorite scene to watch was the 'Lard Ass Hogan/Barfarama' scene. With that, there was a special note to wardrobe — 'Barfarama to be shot next week. Scotchguard all the extras' clothing.'"

Wheaton vividly remembers another on-set occurrence that will last in the minds of the filmmakers forever.

"One thing that we weren't really expecting (was) the train-dodge scene when River ran up to grab Corey (Feldman), he slipped and the train missed him by three feet," he said. "It was a very real train dodge. It stopped everyone's heart."

Wheaton now spends most of his time promoting anti-drug messages to young people.

"I want to tell all kids to stay away from drugs," he said. "Don't smoke and don't drink. It doesn't matter what your friends say. And, always follow your dreams. I followed my dreams of becoming an actor and this is where I am today."

Valley DJ launches plan to get condoms to teens

by CAROLYN NELSON
State Press

Dave Pratt, Valley radio station KUPD's morning disc jockey, launched a campaign Tuesday to send complimentary condoms to interested listeners.

Pratt initiated the "Protection Connection" in response to the Arizona House Judicial Committee's approval of a bill that would make the distribution of contraceptives through the state's high schools illegal.

"I think the decision is stupid," Pratt said. "I think (condoms) are one very good way to prevent AIDS, venereal disease and unwanted pregnancies."

Pratt said critics of contraception called in to his show to say that distributing birth control to teen-agers is giving them a license to have sex.

"It's actually a license to prevent disease," he said.

Pratt, whose audience consists largely of high school aged listeners, announced on the air Tuesday morning that anyone who needed a condom should write to Dave Pratt, I Need a Condom, in care of KUPD. He said the radio station had received about 50 hand-delivered letters by Tuesday afternoon.

Although Pratt made jokes about the subject later in his show, he is serious about fulfilling each request for a condom. He said he is also serious about the contraception issue.

"I think it is really serious," he said. "I think the judgment and teaching should be left in the home. But if the kids are going to (have sex), let's have them do it right, not die of it."

According to Daphne Atkeson, a spokeswoman for Planned Parenthood of Arizona, an average of 11,000 pregnancies among teen-agers are reported each year in the state. Furthermore, in 1985, 2,137 cases of venereal disease were reported among 15- to 19-year-olds in Arizona.

She added that the use of condoms in combination with the spermicide Nonoxinol 9, a substance found in many contraceptive foams, would reduce significantly the instances of sexually transmitted diseases.

"These condoms are real nice," Pratt said. "They're red, and I want to get KUPD's logo printed on the side."

"If you don't use them, you can use them as party balloons."

Scenic highs, lows of Arizona boast own brand of good times

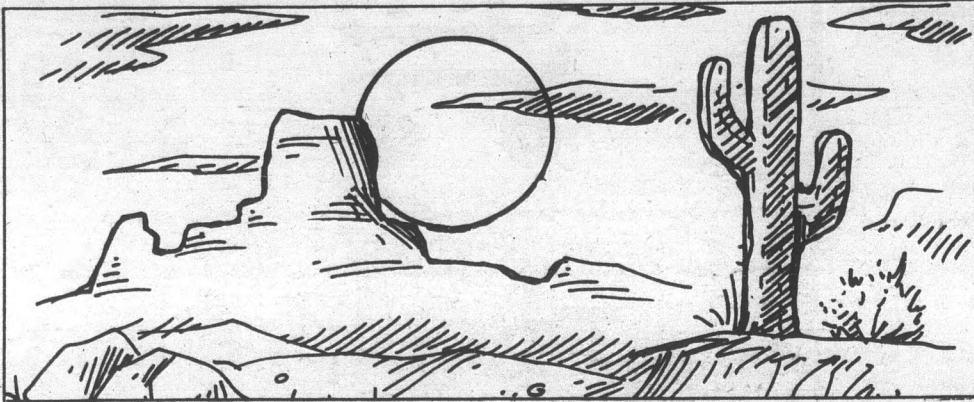

By DAVID MILLER
State Press

"Oh no," you say. "I don't have any money and I have to stay in Arizona for spring break, unlike all my friends. What a disaster."

Well just wait one darn second. While it's probably true that the Grand Canyon State isn't exactly the all-around Mardi Gras party place, it still has a WHOLE lot more to offer than Montana.

For starters, just consider the better half of the upper half of Arizona, the Sedona/Oak Creek Canyon area. Situated a little under two hour's drive north of Phoenix, this garden spot is made of the stuff of travel commercials and afternoon daydreams. Touched sporadically by the hand of industry, there is little to indicate that anybody knows Oak Creek is there at all.

Or, some parts of it. Actually, quite a few people know about Slide Rock. Aptly named, the scenic naturally-made slide attracts the multitudes. People come, break out the sodas, hit the slide a few times and look for a place to sit and bake in the sun. It's almost like being at the beach, except there are trees and squirrels and things.

And if "vegging" by the stream doesn't quite tickle you, then how about heading farther north into the land of cool pines and country spirit known as Flagstaff.

In direct contrast to most of Arizona, Flagstaff weather is decidedly cool most of the time. In fact, this time of year it's downright cold there, so bring your winter woolies. But that doesn't mean you can't have a good time. In Flagstaff, they say, "everybody has a good time."

The city is a short hop from the Snow Bowl ski area and so ski-buffs will probably want to drop off their bags in town and head up to do some downhill during the day. The Snow Bowl is a fine resort — its ski runs cater evenly to great, good and beginning skiers and the powder is deep and in content. So grab your poles and experience what's right in the world. You won't be sorry.

After the last run is done, it's back down the mountain to "Flag." So hit the hotel, get spruced up and go out on that quest for good chow and something social to do. And Flagstaff has both in abundance.

The home of Northern Arizona University, "Flag" has as many students looking for a good time as does Tempe — well, almost as many — but they know what they're doing.

Drop in at O'Shanigan's to drink cheaply and have your feet stick to the floor. Or if you had something classier in mind, stop off at Senor Frog's, in north Flagstaff. Tell them I said "Hi" and they'll set you up. Oh no, wait. Don't do that. I still owe those guys money.

Devils hope to change things with UCLA series

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

ASU will attempt to turn its disappointing season around as the slumping Sun Devils open an important conference series with UCLA at 7 tonight at Packard Stadium.

The three-game series continues Friday and Saturday at 1 p.m.

ASU is trying to pull out of a two-week slide, as the Sun Devils (8-10, 0-3 in the Pacific-10 Conference southern division) have lost five straight and seven of its last eight.

And the competition will not be easy. UCLA (11-7-1, 4-2) is ranked 10th in the nation.

ASU coach Jim Brock used Wednesday's exhibition game with the Chicago Cubs to experiment with new offensive and defensive strategies.

Brock moved sophomore John Finn from center field to second base and switched sophomore Mike Burrola from left to center. Also, Ted Dyson, the Devils' usual first baseman, played left while designated hitter Tony Mattia played first base.

Finn and Mattia played well at their positions, both making some excellent defensive plays. Dyson and Burrola, on the other hand, had some trouble in the outfield as they could not catch up to the Cubs' outfield shots.

But Burrola atoned for his defense in the batter's box. Despite being forced to use wooden bats, Burrola had three hits, including a home run to left.

Brock said the wooden bats did not seem to bother the Devils too much, and may have even helped them regain some punch in the offensive attack.

"Actually, we probably swung the bats better (Wednesday) than we have in five or six games," he said.

Another change for ASU had Brock in the third base coaching box.

Brock said he wants to change the offensive philosophy of the ballclub, but needs to be closer to the action to do that.

"There's just not enough time to send special plays in from the dugout," he said. "We will score some runs we otherwise would not have, but we'll also have more outs if I coach third base."

Brock also invited fans to come out and see the team play, even if it means yelling at him.

"This is a great opportunity for the fans," he said. "It's their chance to come out and have a visible target to yell at."

ASU shortstop Mike Benjamin attempts to turn a double play. The Devils have turned 27 so far this season. ASU meets UCLA for three games this weekend at Packard Stadium, beginning today at 7 p.m.

The Devils' offensive woes have caused the team batting average to drop more than 100 points, down to .304.

"We are facing one of the few times in my 16 years of coaching where there is some discussion on our hitting philosophy," Brock said. "We have to better utilize the personnel that we have, and to their limits."

UCLA has a team ERA of 4.85, but has a balanced staff.

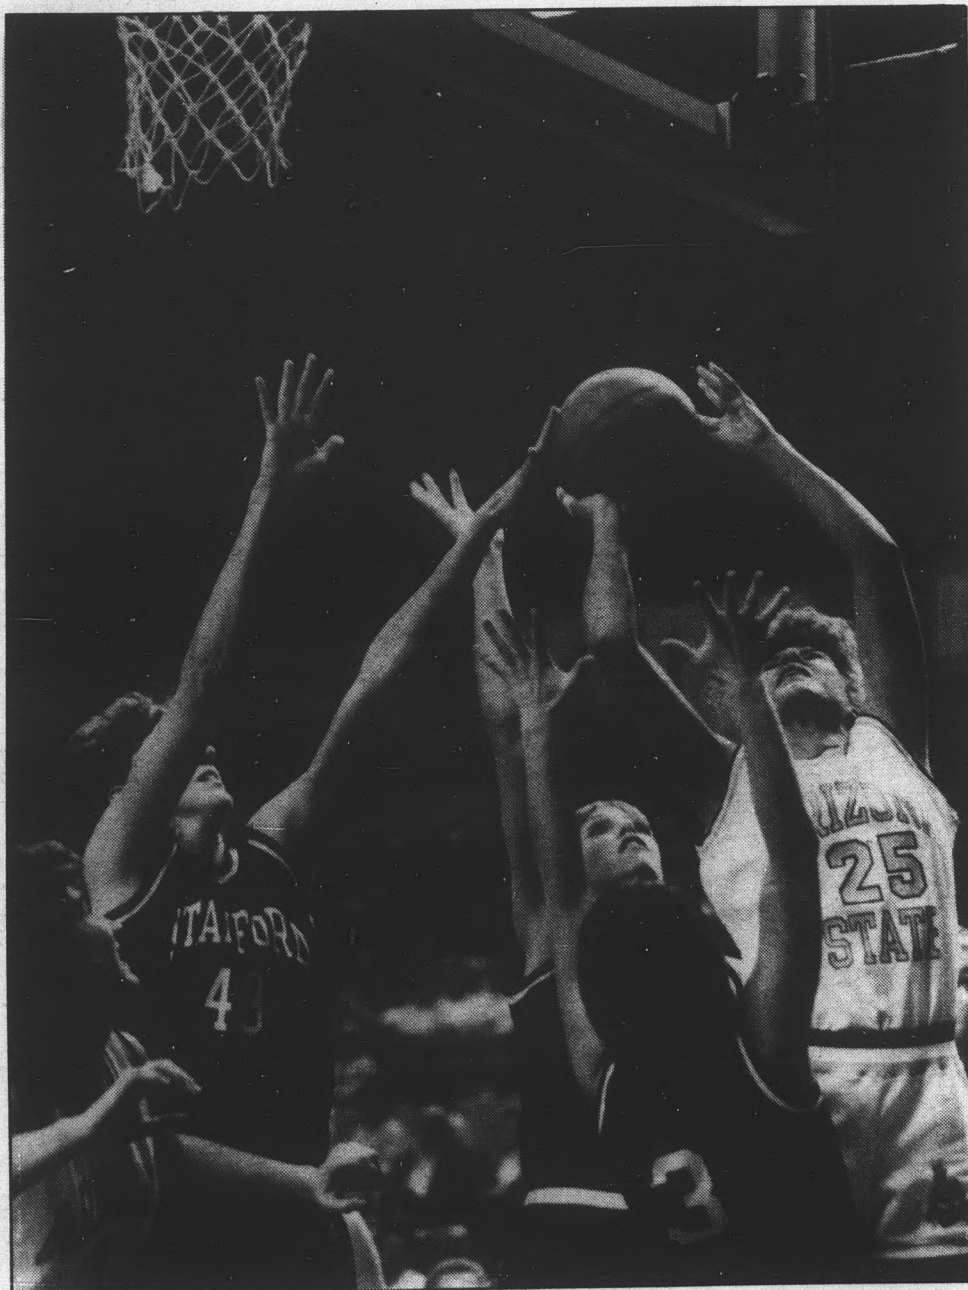

Reliever Bill Wenrick leads the team with a 3.62 ERA in 22 innings.

The Bruins have a powerful offense, batting .295 with a league-leading 29 homers.

Second baseman Torey Lovullo leads the Six-Pac with nine homers and 28 runs batted in.

Women's hoop squad to play final game against Wildcats

Ron Kuczek Jr./State Press

ASU cager Sherry Poole shoots for two against Stanford. Poole is the second leading scorer on the team, averaging 15.9 points a game this season. The Sun Devils will finish their season Saturday with the rival UA Wildcats in Tucson. ASU recently broke an eight-game losing streak with an 81-71 victory over the Cardinals at home.

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

It was to be a season of high expectations for the ASU women's basketball team: three of the top scorers in the Pac-10 were returning, they had finished second in the now defunct Pacific West Conference last year and were picked sixth in the preseason coaches poll.

However, it was not to be for the Sun Devils this season.

The last game of the year is now fast approaching for ASU and the outcome will be that of a team which will finish the year with one of the worst records under coach Juliene Simpson.

ASU (4-13 in the Pac-10 and 10-16 overall) will travel to Tucson this Saturday to close out the 1986-87 season against intrastate rival UA.

The Wildcats (3-14 in the Pac-10 and 10-18 overall) have also struggled this year, losing their last two games at home to Stanford, 62-57, and to California in overtime, 84-77.

These losses, coupled with ASU's victory over Stanford, dropped UA into sole possession of ninth place in the conference, one game behind ASU, who now occupies the eighth spot.

The last time these two teams met, the Wildcats speared the Sun Devils in the University Activity Center, 72-55.

It was the first time under Simpson that UA had defeated ASU, tarnishing her perfect 14-0 record against them. It was also the worst defeat in over 10 years that the Sun Devils had been handed by the Wildcats.

ASU currently has some momentum going into the UA game, coming off a victory against Stanford, 81-71 and breaking an eight-game losing streak. UA has a four-game losing streak going into Saturday's game.

Momentum may not be enough for the Sun Devils as the Wildcats boast two of the top scorers in the Pac-10.

UA center Dana Patterson is currently ranked seventh in the conference in scoring, pumping in an average of 16.5 points per game. She also moved up to No. 4 on field goal percentages, shooting 54 percent from the line.

UA also has the strength of guard Miroslava Acosta who is averaging 15.9 points per game, the No. 8 spot in the conference in scoring. Acosta also ranks No. 1 in steals, averaging 3.15 per game.

As a team though, the stats on paper show a team that is weak in many areas.

UA ranks last in scoring, averaging only 63.1 points per game and pulls up that same spot in five other categories including turnover margin, assists, and blocked shots.

The Wildcats rank no higher than fifth in any other category, except for rebound margin in which they pull up at the No. 5 spot.

The Devils will be showing some muscle of their own, as they have three of their own top scorers in the Pac-10.

Guard Patti Pepler has moved into the No. 1 spot on the team in scoring, averaging 16.2 points per game, moving ahead of Sherry Poole for the honor. Pepler also pulls up at No. 3 in assists in the conference, dishing out an average of 6.4 per game.

Pepler recently moved into second place on the ASU career assists list, recording 379 and moving ahead of Cassandra Lander.

Forward Sherry Poole pulls up at No. 2 in scoring on the team, averaging 15.9 points per game and shooting her into the No. 10 spot in the conference. Poole also ranks at the No. 4 position in free throw percentage, averaging 81 percent from the line.

Rounding out the top three scorers for ASU is forward Robin Connolly, who is averaging 14.9 points per game, good enough to place her No. 14 in the conference.

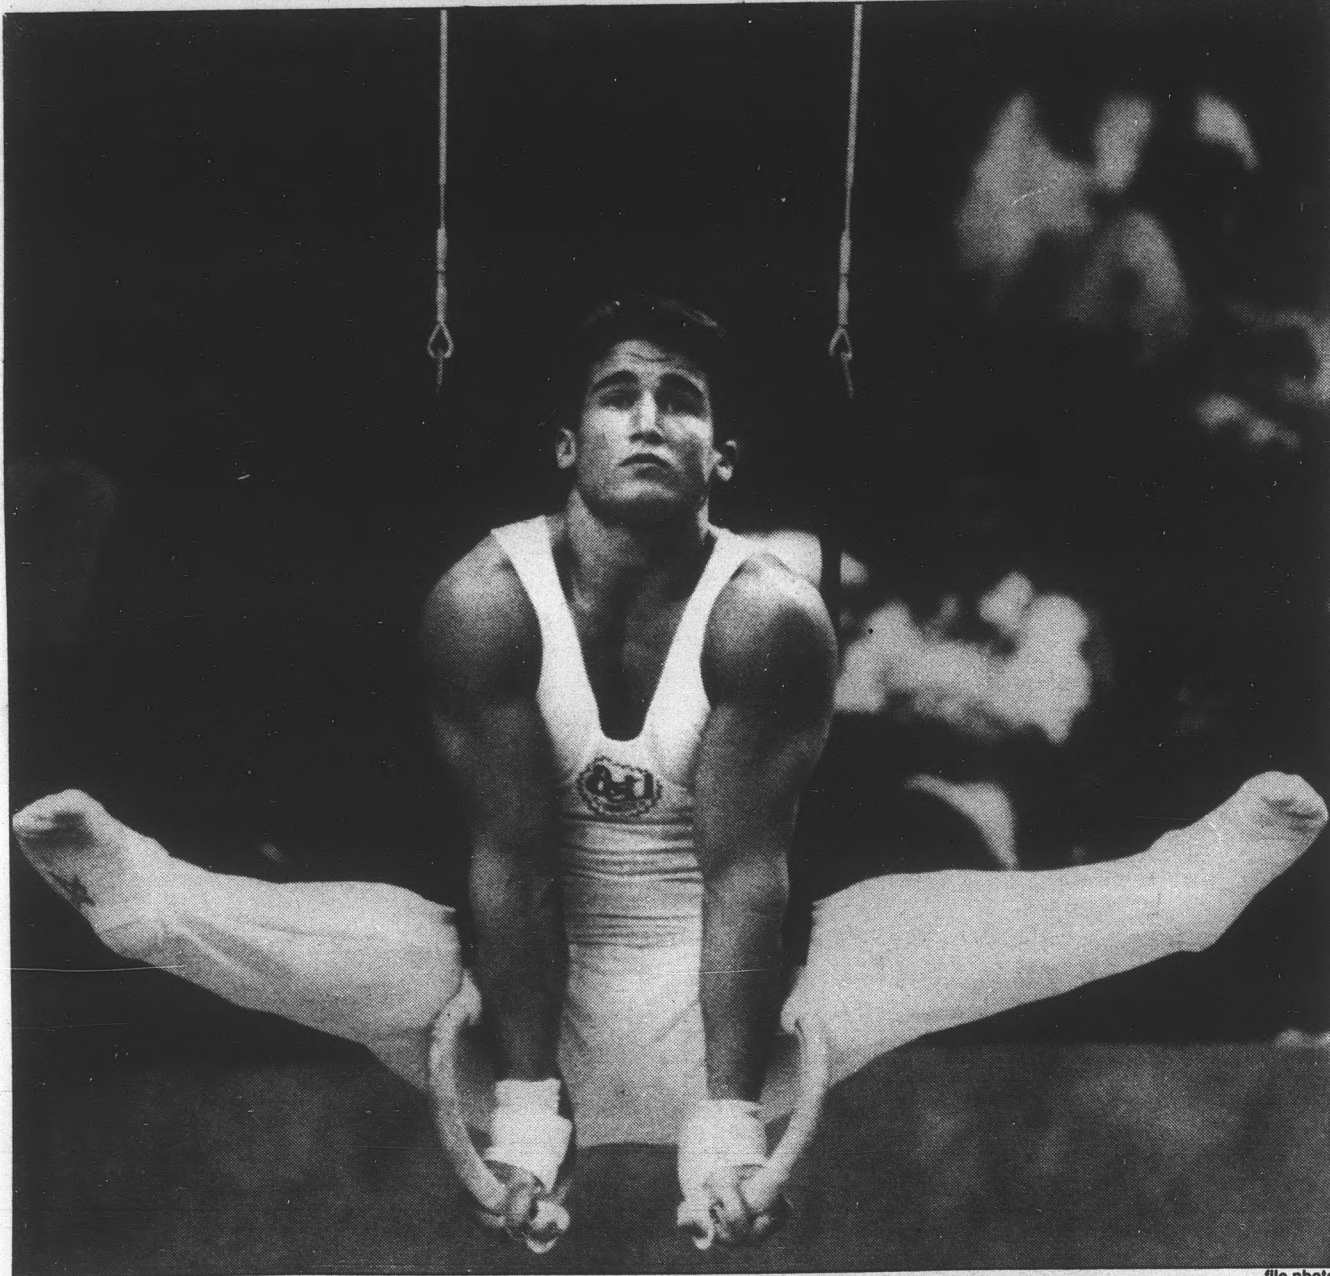

ASU fares much better as a team than UA and has fewer weaknesses, according to the Pac-10 statistics, with the Devils pulling up the No. 5 spot in scoring, averaging 72.3 points per game.

ASU ranks last only in scoring defense, averaging 82.4 points per game, and ranks no lower than eighth in any other category.

Though this game is the last of the season for both teams and the outcome will have no bearing for the Devils or the Wildcats, the rivalry is still very strong and intense.

"The UA/ASU rivalry is always a big thing and very competitive," UA coach Wendy Larry said. "We will be playing our best to end the season on a good note."

Devil men gymnasts to face California-Berkeley

By CAROL BOOS
State Press

The ASU men's gymnastics team (13-13) hopes to bounce back from a disappointing last place finish in last week's Southwest Cup as they play host to California (11-4) Sunday at 2 p.m. in the University Activity Center.

"I'm real happy with the performance of the team except for last week," head coach Don Robinson said. "We would have finished much better if we had gotten our normal score."

The Sun Devils currently have the seventh best five-score average in the nation with 276.08. Last week they finished with 274.25.

The Golden Bears have the ninth best five-score average in the nation with a 274.98.

"It will be a good meet," Robinson said. "They are a better team than I had once thought."

The Sun Devils are relying on the talents of sophomore Paul Linne to capture the all-around title. To do so he will have to take it away from California's Bob Sundstrom who is the 11th best all-arounder in the nation. Linne is 28th.

Linne produced a perfect score on the high bar last week, the first in Sun Devil history.

Senior Jerry Burrell is currently tied with New Mexico's Brad Fox for the first place spot in the nation for the floor exercise competition with a season high score of 9.90.

However, Burrell is tied with Wisconsin's Jay Wanek and Keith Pettit of Michigan State for the seventh best spot in the nation in the vault, and will face the No. 1 vaulter in the nation in Sundstrom.

An ankle injury is still keeping Mike Zerrillo out of the all-around competition, but he will perform in specific events.

Robinson will use Bob Wolf to fill Zerrillo's shoes on the floor exercise and Joe Espinoza on the vault.

"Mike (Zerrillo) is real consistent for us, but Joe is doing a pretty good job and Bob is carrying it all right," Robinson said.

Robinson said the Sun Devils hope to improve their score more than they hope to beat the Bears.

"It is important for us to score well when we compete against the other top teams in the nation, but a good score is what we need," he said.

The Sun Devils play host to New Mexico March 21, where they hope to get revenge after a 275.70-270.20 loss earlier in the season.

COLLEGE STUDENT INCOME.

A good part-time job that doesn't interfere with class schedules, student activities and study time is pretty tough to find in most college towns. That's why the nearby Army Reserve makes so much sense to students.

After completing Basic Training and Advanced Individual Training, you serve one weekend a month (usually two 8-hour days, so Saturday and Sunday evenings are yours). And you earn over $75 a weekend to start. You go to two weeks of annual training at full Army pay.

If a part-time income could help, stop by or call:

Devil wrestlers in Pac-10 meet

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

With the regular season over, ASU wrestling coach Bobby Douglas and his squad will be in action this weekend in the long-awaited Pac-10 tournament in Corvallis, Ore.

The seventh-ranked Sun Devils will carry a 12-7 record into Corvallis. ASU will look to capture their third consecutive title as the action begins Saturday.

"We have been working hard," Douglas said. "Physically and mentally we are ready."

Although the Sun Devils boast three 1985 champions that red-shirted last season; Chip Park (126 pounds), Mike Davies (190 pounds), and Rod Severn (HWT), no starters from last year's championship team will be competing this time around.

Adding support to their teammates are John Ginther (177 pounds) and Zeke Jones (118 pounds). Ginther, a sophomore, placed eighth in last year's nationals while earning the runner-up honor in the Pac-10. The best record on the team this season is held by Jones, a freshman. The 118-pounder taunts a 24-5-2 mark and is shooting for a national title.

"The guys are in a positive mood," Douglas said. "Our spirits are where I would like to see them."

Also in the hunt for the conference crown will be newcomers Utah State and Fresno State. Utah State is ranked 19th in the country, while Fresno State won the PCAA last year.

Due to Washington State dropping their program last year, the Pac-10 was left with four original teams this season. They are ASU, Stanford, Oregon and Oregon State. The acquisition of Fresno State, Cal-State Fullerton, San Jose State, Utah State, and Cal Poly San Luis Obispo makes the new Pac-10.

Referring to the new wrestling conference, OSU head coach Dale Thomas said, "This is the best conference west of the Big Ten."

"This is the best conditioned ASU team we have had," Douglas said. "They are in excellent physical shape. Technically, we still have a way to go, but in wrestling you always have a way to go. You always keep learning."

Oregon State, who have had a successful record in the event in past years, will play host to the annual tournament. The Beavers have won or shared 17 titles in the 27 years of wrestling in the conference, but have been runners-up to the Sun Devils for the last two seasons.

Douglas said he was pleased with the team's outlook. "The attitude is real good, even after tough losses they held up mentally," he said.

The Pac-10 tournament will allow wrestlers to qualify for the NCAA tournament, with the top three finishers in each weight class able to advance to College Park, Maryland March 19. Eight wildcard wrestlers will also receive bids. This is decided by the coaches following the tournament.

The lineup for ASU remains the same except for one addition. Travis Fagen will not compete in the Pac-10 meet at 167 pounds, instead Anthony Wilhelm will participate.

At 118 pounds will be Jones, Park (126 pounds) is 13-10-1, and Glenn McMinn (134 pounds) takes a 12-12-1 mark into the meet.

Freshman Dan St. John has not received much recognition this year at 142 pounds, but will look to win the conference with a 17-10-1 record. Tommy Ortiz (150 pounds) is 13-13-2, while Wayne Sharp, the only man ASU will lose at the end of this season, is 14-10-3.

Ginther, ASU's first-ever all-America freshman, was injured most of the season and has one loss in nine matches. Davies is 20-7-1 and Severn rounds out the squad with a 23-6-1 mark.

"We had a good season," Douglas said. "But we were slowed down early with injuries."

ASU's Tony Mattia is second with eight dingers and 24 RBI.

UCLA — the Six-Pac coaches' preseason pick to win the conference — is 4-2 in the league, taking two out of three from both Arizona and Stanford.

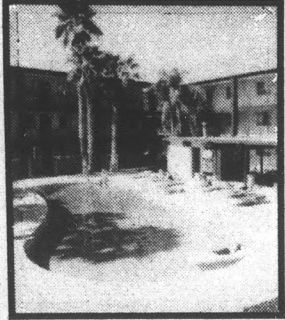

"This probably isn't a good time to be playing UCLA," Brock said. "They have the best bats in the league and are capable of scoring five and six runs at a time."

UCLA will start Alex Sanchez (1-1, 4.90) tonight, Randy Hennis (2-1, 6.66) Saturday and Steve Stowell (3-2, 5.59) Sunday.

Webb, Brown selected for USA volleyball team against Chinese nationals

By STEVE BRENNAN
State Press

The USA volleyball team will compete against the Chinese national team in the University Activity Center on Tuesday, March 10, and fans will get a chance to see two hometown favorites participate, ASU coach Debbie Brown and middle blocker Tammy Webb.

Both Brown and Webb were selected due to outstanding performances for the Sun Devils. Brown will serve on the coaching staff as an assistant and Webb will compete for the U.S. team as a middle blocker/outside hitter.

Brown, who was named Pac-10 Coach of the Year for 1986 after leading the Sun Devils to their third NCAA playoff appearance, competed for the U.S. team when she was in college at USC. Brown also participated with the boycotted 1980 Olympic team.

Webb, a 5-foot-11 senior at ASU, joined the team in January. According to U.S. head coach Terry Liskevych, she should bring help and add quality depth in the back row. Webb was a two-time All-America selection for the Sun Devils.

Before joining the USA team, Webb competed in the World Student University Games, held in Kobe, Japan for the U.S. team in the summer of 1985.

Tuesday's match is the final of a four match series between the U.S. and China, which opened in February. The Chinese defeated the U.S. earlier in the 1984 Olympic games in Los Angeles, and then went on to win the 1985 World Cup in Tokyo.

Webb worked out with the team last summer, but a broken wrist cut the tryout short. The USA coaching staff was impressed by Webb's talent and later asked her to try out again.

The other Pac-10 player selected is Kim Oden from Stanford. Oden was the NCAA player of the Year in 1985.

The match will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Quality hoops: ACC tourney begins today

By The Associated Press

Postseason tournament time begins Friday for basketball powers from the Big East and Atlantic Coast conferences, which have six of the nation's top-ranked teams.

Also getting under way Friday are the Metro, Big Eight and Southwest conference tourneys.

The winner of Thursday night's Atlantic-10 tourney title between No. 8 Temple and West Virginia joins previous NCAA tournament qualifiers Alabama-Birmingham, Xavier (Ohio), Penn, Wichita State, Fairfield, Navy and Marshall in the 64-team field. Twenty-nine berths go to tourney winners.

The Western Athletic, Mid-American, Pacific Coast Athletic and Southeastern were among the conference tourneys beginning Thursday.

No. 7 Georgetown, the top seed in the Big East tourney at New York's Madison Square Garden, will play the winner of Thursday night's first-round game between Boston College and Connecticut.

In Friday's other Big East games, No. 10 Syracuse faces Villanova, No. 11 Pittsburgh meets Seton Hall and St. John's opposes Providence.

"We can beat any team in this league and we can lose to any team in this league," said Georgetown coach John Thompson, whose young team shared the regular-season title with Pitt and Syracuse. "I don't think anybody can predict this tournament. It's tight."

The Hoyas, 23-4, are led by Reggie Williams, the only senior on the squad.

In first round ACC competition at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md., second-ranked North Carolina, which swept through the ACC regular season with a 14-0 record, faces Maryland, 0-14, No. 13 Clemson meets Wake Forest, No. 14 Duke plays North Carolina State and Virginia faces Georgia Tech.

"Our seniors have not won the ACC tournament," Tar Heels coach Dean Smith, whose team is 27-2 overall, "so I'm sure they'll be ready and have our team ready."

North Carolina's top seniors are guard Kenny Smith and forward Joe Wolf, both all-ACC players.

Duke is the defending champion, but no team has won consecutive postseason ACC titles since North Carolina in 1981 and 1982.
