

Mecham eludes press, stops 'game playing'

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — Gov. Evan Mecham refused to answer reporters' questions Thursday in a press conference he had hurriedly called to discuss education issues, later calling the incident an attempt to keep reporters from "playing games."

The governor's actions followed statements made that morning by Phoenix Newspapers' publisher Pat Murphy, who called Mecham's administration a "brutish, ideological juggernaut."

Mecham had called the 3:30 p.m. press conference unexpectedly to denounce newspaper reports and statements by university officials and students that he was slashing the state's education budget.

But after a short statement where the governor reiterated his State of the State address, which was originally delivered in January, Mecham opened the conference to questions from the approximately 20 reporters.

Phoenix Gazette columnist John Kolbe opened the questioning, asking the governor why he was making the statements now, but Mecham refused to acknowledge Kolbe's questions.

Mecham has been involved in a running feud with the conservative columnist and is refusing to acknowledge Kolbe's questions. Larry Lopez, an Associated Press reporter, repeated Kolbe's question and Mecham refused to acknowledge Lopez.

Two reporters from the Phoenix Gazette and Arizona Republic then asked Kolbe's question. At that point Mecham thanked reporters for attending the conference and walked out of the room.

"I just proved a point so the rest of you won't play the game," Mecham told reporters later Thursday evening at an ASU dinner for Arizona Board of Regents members.

"I don't have bad relations with anybody," Mecham said. "I have good relations with the press."

Kolbe later took Mecham's podium to answer questions about the incident.

"I think it's kind of childish," Kolbe said. "It's a sad day when the governor is afraid to talk to a reporter."

"This is a great power to give a guy. I can make him shut up and leave when I want to."

Murphy's comments about Mecham came during a speech Thursday to members of the Arizona Chamber of Commerce. Murphy said Mecham has "no firm sense of planning or vision," and that "policy is formed even as the governor speaks."

He added that the Mecham administration's hallmarks have been "the paranoia, the isolation from reality and the Art University Towers adds sculpture to beautify courtyard

By MICHAEL ROWELL
State Press

A 21-foot sculpture was installed in the courtyard of University Towers Thursday as part of the residence complex's beautification program.

University Towers General Manager Jeannie Buccola said the $25,000 sculpture meets the last requirements made of the complex's developers by the City of Tempe.

Buccola said a 100-foot crane was used to lower the sculpture into the courtyard at 525 S. Forest Ave., and the installation took nearly eight hours.

The 3,000-pound yellow sculpture is 12 inches in diameter. The color cannot be changed without the approval of the artist, Gary Slater of Mesa.

Slater, a 1973 ASU graduate, said the piece, titled "Sandia VII," is steel with a urethane enamel coating and took about six weeks to create.

"Sandia" is the name of a mountain range in New Mexico.

He said he has been doing private and commercial sculptures full-time since 1973 and has 35 on display in the Valley, including one between Hayden Library and the MU.

Slater, 39, said the sculpture does not represent anything in particular.

"It's just an abstract sculpture that's hopefully pleasing to behold," he said.

Slater said he competed with several other sculptures for the University Towers contract.

"I'm happy to have another piece in the metropolitan area," he said.

University Towers is made up of 173 apartments in two towers with 692 residents.

Welder Glen Nelson puts the finishing touches on the base welds of artist Gary Slater's sculpture Thursday in the University Towers courtyard.

Students protest election process in ASASU court

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

Another chapter in the Associated Students legal follies opened this week as two students declared they will challenge election procedures in the ASASU Supreme Court.

ASASU presidential hopeful Will Murphy filed papers Tuesday requesting that the court issue a writ directing ASASU Elections Director Patrick McWhortor to comply with the court's 1986 Murphy vs. ASASU decision.

That decision declared the sections of the ASASU bylaws that provide for campaign spending limits unconstitutional and ordered the association to delete the offending passages.

ASASU Executive Vice President Bridget Shelton said last September that the association would not abide by the decision because the student court does not have the authority to interpret the U.S. Constitution.

The bylaws limit candidates to spending $500 for executive races and $100 for senate contests.

McWhortor announced two weeks ago that he would enforce the guidelines, which are in the bylaw copies distributed to all candidates running in the April 8 and 9 elections.

If McWhortor fails to comply with the writ Murphy is seeking, the court could cite the elections director for contempt.

McWhortor said his position "is the same as its always been."

"The election code is the election code, and I am empowered to enforce it," he said. "And I will."

Murphy said, "It is to be hoped that ASASU won't offend the dignity and office of the court by remaining in contempt for any period of time."

The elections process also is under attack by Student Bar Association President Tom Stillwell, who filed a lawsuit with the court Tuesday.

Stillwell is acting on behalf of Lesbian Gay Academic Union co-chair Denise Heap, who said she was prevented

UA may receive further budget cuts, Senator says

By KIM MATTINGLY
State Press

State funding inequities between the three universities that favor UA by nearly $7 million will not mean more money for ASU and NAU in 1987-88, but could translate into additional budget cuts for the Tucson-based university, a Flagstaff senator said Thursday.

Sen. Tony Gabaldon, a Republican, said: "I doubt that anything will be done this year (for ASU and NAU), but UA may suffer somewhat. I think its funding will be cut back slightly."

The Arizona Board of Regents met at ASU Thursday to discuss the preliminary results of a joint regent-legislative budget study that showed state funding for Arizona universities may be favoring UA by nearly $7 million in operations and staff.

Although regent cost study members urged that their findings translate into a positive budget adjustment for ASU and NAU, Gabaldon said — in the current atmosphere of budget cutbacks — the findings provide a "good opportunity to cut down."

He added: "In a better economic year, I see ASU and NAU getting more money, and UA sitting still. But right now somebody's going to pick on the UA a little bit."

Proposed operating budgets by the universities, the Legislature and the governor's office range from about $179 million to $215 million for ASU, and from about $195 million to $236 million for UA. At NAU, the three proposed versions of the budget range from about $61 million to $74 million.

'It's a vicious circle, ASU and NAU deserve more money.'
— Bev Hermon

Cost study member and Regent Donald Pitt said Thursday the study's results are preliminary.

Cost study members have analyzed instructional costs but still must consider academic and institutional support, organized research, public service and student services.

But Jack Kinsinger, ASU vice president for academic affairs, said, "You can argue all you want; the numbers are there."

Kinsinger said he expects funding in other areas of the study to reflect similar inequities, adding, "I don't care how you slice it. If I have more money available for instruction, I'm going to be able to do a better job."

University budgets begin with a "continuing base" each year, which is derived from the previous year's total. UA's base has always been larger than ASU's or NAU's because the Tucson institution was the state's only university until 1959.

ASU's enrollment outgrew UA's around 1970, but the budgets have continued to be built on the continuing base.

UA administrators argue that their higher budget bases are valid, however, because many of their programs are more expensive to operate.

Ben Tuchi, UA senior vice president for finance and administration said: "It is difficult to simply compare on a numbers basis. Some types of things are simply more expensive to do than other types of things."

But Rep. Bev Hermon, D-Tempe and a cost study member, said UA has more expensive programs because their higher state funding has made more expensive programs affordable.

"It's a vicious circle," she said. "ASU and NAU deserve more money."

The cost study is examining these and other arguments to establish whether there are differences in state support for similar activities.

In its first evaluations, cost study members analyzed instructional costs in similar programs at the three universities, including costs per student credit hour, faculty, staff and operations.

For example, in comparable engineering programs at ASU and UA in 1985-86, the study found that each staff member at ASU supported about four more faculty members than staff

Regents to consider leasing ASU Research Park space

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

In hopes of improving the financial status of the ASU Research Park, the Arizona Board of Regents will vote today whether or not to lease park space to tenants for manufacturing high-technology merchandise.

Victor Zafra, ASU vice president for business affairs, said currently the park is one of the few in the nation that does not allow manufacturing.

"We're at a competitive disadvantage," Zafra said. "By allowing light manufacturing, we can compete with other research parks and speed up the number of tenants."

To help the park through a high-technology and real estate slump, the board voted in January to raise the park's debt limit to $600,000 from the previous $150,000 limit.

Zafra said about $120,000 of the limit has been used.

Currently the park only houses two major firms in its two existing buildings, he said.

Frost Construction Co., who contracted to build the third facility in the park, recently asked the park's board either to delay rental payments for one year or cancel its agreement and return the company's infrastructure payment of $193,000.

Park planners currently are negotiating with Frost to retain the infrastructure payment and encouraging the company to build its facility.

Other issues to go before the board at their 2:30 p.m. meeting in the MU Alumni Lounge, include Gov. Evan Mecham's proposed additional $60 in-state tuition increase.

Although the board will not vote on the proposal until the April meeting, students will voice their opinions during the regents' call to the audience.

Also during the meeting, Regent Donald Pitt said he will comment on Mecham's planned investigation of his property holdings.

Mecham said he is investigating the Tucson regent's land holdings because he questions Pitt's ethics.

Pitt has contractual rights to buy into a proposed Phoenix business park on land leased to developers by the regents. When the board voted on the lease in 1984, Pitt did not vote.

Although Attorney General Bob Corbin has cleared the regent of any wrong-doing, Mecham said he is still bothered by Pitt's connection.

The board also will vote whether to accept the claim of Douglan Dagleish, an ASU associate professor of political science who has filed a $750,000 claim against the regents that alleges ASU officials broke their word in conducting his promotion evaluation.

Heavy metal Christians: what's a Messiah to do?

It was just a simple trip to the Phoenix Tower Records at 40th Street and Thomas to find a copy of a David Bowie album I wanted on compact disc.

Before I knew it, I was surrounded by heavy metal rockers dressed in leather, sporting black and yellow makeup.

I panicked. Should I hide in the classical room, check out the new movies on video cassette or try to leave without making any comments about saddle soap?

Then, I was taken by surprise. Instead of hoarding Ozzy Osbourne, Black Sabbath or KISS albums, the heavy metal fans ran to grab an album called "To Hell With the Devil," by Stryper, a Christian heavy metal rock band that was to make an autograph appearance at that store.

I was even more surprised to see two heavy metalers sitting outside the store, reading from an open Bible and discussing the prophecies of Isaiah. They then turned around and began to witness for Jesus Christ to me. I explained I was already a Christian and we shook hands before parting.

Through my own rose-colored glasses, I would have sworn those rockers would never be Christians, but instead, I discovered that you shouldn't judge a book by its cover.

Unfortunately, many Christians and non-Christians are ready to condemn anything you can't waltz to because it is "has a rock beat."

And heavy metal fans, whether they be dressed in leather or not, are suspect because having long hair (yeah, like Jesus), wearing makeup or piercing one's ear is not what the status quo wants to see.

But from my brief discussion about Christianity with those fans of Stryper, I am convinced their belief in Christ is real and they plan on continuing their witnessing.

The band Stryper is different and unique, but like those at the record store, the members of the rock quartet are facing an uphill battle. Christian radio stations are reporting that listeners are calling the station complaining that they don't want Stryper on the air. When radio executives ask them what they know about the group, the callers say they "just heard about some evil heavy metal band" that convinced the religious broadcasters to air their "obscene material."

Patrick J. Kucera

So, now we know that most of us have pre-conceived notions of heavy metal rockers, and they — not a single one — is lucky enough to be saved or have any meaningful relationship with Jesus, God or the Holy Spirit.

Aren't we the cynics? Who are we, whether we be believers or not, who can determine what justifies a man's relationship with God?

The members of Stryper are Christians and have no apologies for being heavy metal rockers. Through their music they are bringing people to God — or at least to a sense of morality — and if they can do it by dressing in leather and makeup or standing on Cady Mall and shouting "Amen," then so be it.

But Stryper will always have to put up with cynics who will challenge their religious beliefs, even though the band's music is filled with praises for God and Christ.

*Long ago, there was a man who came,
came and died for you.
You say you don't want to know,
but I've got to tell you the truth.
God, I will follow you because you died for me,
gave to me your life to set me free.
Anyone who asks shall receive
Jesus in your heart.
It's time for you to start giving God all the glory.*

While heavy metal is certainly not my forte, the songs are enjoyable and the lyrics impressive. And this certainly is a lot better than old Ozzy biting the heads of fowl and singing songs about how great the devil is.

Still, those who are Christians, and even those who are not, have no legitimate claim to know whether the members and fans of Stryper are believers. After all, these rockers only have to answer to God.

An evangelist who happens to be a heavy metal fan is certainly preferable to a closet Christian who never does anything.

The problem stems from people who believe that to be a Christian one must adhere to a dress code. Yeah, you know, like the three-piece navy blue suit and red silk tie Jesus wore in Judea.

I still remember the time when I attended a church in which the pastor stated that if men weren't wearing a tie to Sunday services, their relationship with God was questionable. That was the first and last time I ever went to that church.

If there is some dress code for admission to heaven, I would like to know. If hi-top sneakers, Levi 501's, Oxford dress shirts and my "State Press: Arizona's Seventh Largest Daily" sweatshirt don't fit into said code, management and I are going to have to have a long talk.

And won't those who have a bias against Christian bands like Stryper feel foolish when, after they reach heaven, Jesus approaches them dressed in a concert t-shirt and sun glasses and says, "So, ready to go to the Stryper concert?"

But we should all leave Stryper, Petra, Amy Grant or any other Christian singers alone to use their gifts and talents bestowed upon them in the way that their heart tells them.

I don't want individuals telling me how I have to worship God and I don't think the members or fans of Stryper want that either.

Defining 'moral commitment'

Editor:

Ed Schubert has a suggestion for financially strapped students: the generous funding available through a hitch in the National Guard (State Press, Feb. 18). A National Guardsman himself, he speaks from experience.

However, there is "a certain tendency among the general public and liberals in particular, to view the military as synonymous with militarism." This is an unfortunate misconception which, he suspects, "runs most strongly at ASU among supporters of various peace and anti-nuke groups."

One reason the United States is reluctant to pursue nuclear disarmament is the superiority of the Soviet Union in conventional forces, says Schubert. So he wonders, "Is it not possible that he or she is making nuclear disarmament just a jot more possible, having made the West's conventional forces just a jot larger?"

Schubert also wonders, "Is it at least possible that American servicemen and women have made a moral commitment as great or greater than those who trespass and are arrested on Nevada nuclear test sites?"

Schubert's first contention is nonsense. Every dollar spent on nuclear weapons is one less dollar available for conventional forces. Worth noting in this regard is Sen. Proxmire's observation that funding Star Wars would mean a 50 percent reduction in conventional forces. Moreover, the armed forces are not hurting for manpower. Indeed, many individuals who would have been drafted during the Vietnam War are being turned down today.

Certainly someone who enlists for six years in the National Guard makes a greater commitment than someone who spends six days in jail for protesting nuclear testing, all those wonderful National Guard benefits notwithstanding. But a greater moral commitment?

Perhaps it has to do with one's notion of morality. Those of us who were arrested in Nevada chose to follow the dictates of our beliefs . . . and will have to pay the consequences of our choice.

After all, Schubert only has to follow orders.

Scott Miller
United Campuses to Prevent Nuclear War

Where credit is due

Editor:

Upon reading the opinion section of the Feb. 27 issue of the State Press, I came across "An open letter to Brother Jed and Sister Cindy" by Patrick J. Kucera, and it became painfully clear that a serious blow had been dealt to Cliff Knechtle, the evangelist who preached on the campus prior to the arrival of the aforementioned duo.

Not only is Cliff "a gentleman evangelist," as reported by Kucera, he is nothing short of phenomenal as a preacher. Here is a man who displayed an extensive knowledge of geo-political conditions, comparative religion, history and science. He displayed an unbelievable comprehension of the Christian gospel, addressing the tough, complicated issues that we college students face in our daily lives.

Cliff quoted both modern and historical philosophers, political figures, writers and theologians verbatim and was able to combine all of these facets into a meaningful search for Jesus Christ.

Of course, Jed and Cindy are pathetic, obnoxious and self-righteous. Why did the State Press go through so much effort to expose the obnoxious absurdities of Jed and Cindy's doctrines?

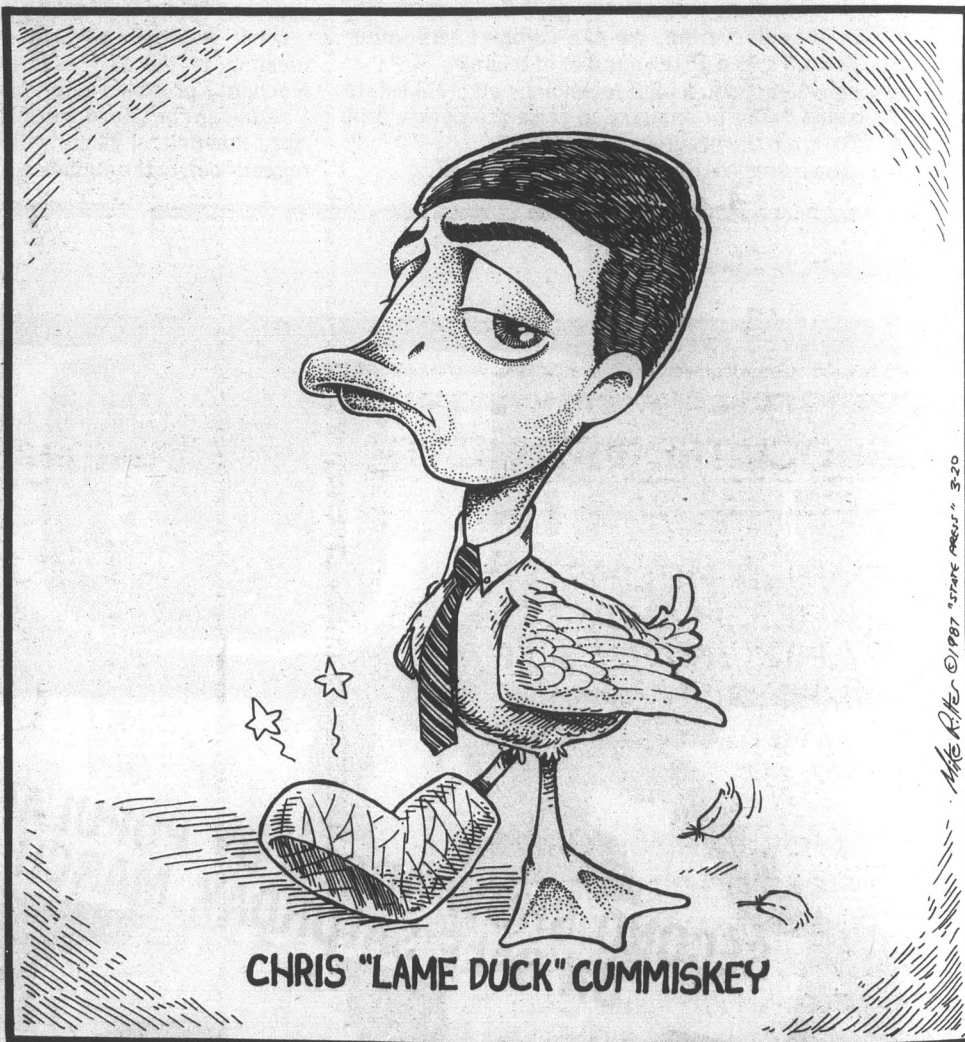

Was Cliff ignored because he forced us to take a painful look at ourselves and come to terms with what it really takes to be a follower of Christ in today's society?

Was the realization of our neatly hidden, rationalized shortcomings so overwhelming that we just wanted to pretend he had never come to ASU at all?

The pack of jackals that surrounded Jed and Cindy were nowhere to be found during Cliff's visit. Even his most ardent critics had the utmost respect for him.

In a world full of negative, how could such a positive force have been so inexcusably overlooked and underpublicized?

Corporation takeovers can pop up in strange places

Great buyouts of corporations don't just happen. They are plotted with care and executed with skill.

Here is the story of one.

Clyde went out one day to buy a TV set. On the Avenue of the Americas in front of the Black Rock Instant Replay Company, he met his lifelong friend Soupy, who asked him what he was doing. "I want to buy a TV," he said.

Soupy told him, "Why don't you buy a big one?"

Clyde replied, "I don't want a big one. I just want something for the bedroom."

As they talked, a vice president at Black Rock overheard the conversation and dashed into the building to tell Tom, the chairman, that there was a takeover attempt being concocted on the street.

Tom was aghast and immediately ordered a "poison pill" defense from his troops. They came up with a sure-fire one. All Tom had to do was borrow a billion dollars at 18 percent and buy his own company stock back. Then he could sell off all the profitable subsidiaries and use the cash to purchase new certificates which would be utilized to pay off the old bonds. And finally he could sell the Black Rock building itself and lease it back for 10 years. Tom was assured if he did all these things the company would be safe from Clyde for another six months.

Meanwhile, down on the Avenue of the Americas, Clyde was deciding whether he should buy a 19- or 25-inch TV set, while Soupy was trying to talk him into going for the big screen.

The two men were about to make a decision when the Black Rock vice president came out of the building with a large suitcase filled with money and started counting it out to Clyde.

"What are you doing?" Clyde asked.

"Here is your $40 million greenmail," the vice president said. "Stop your takeover tricks."

Clyde replied, "I don't want to take over Black Rock."

The vice president ran upstairs and told Tom, "He says it's not enough money."

"Then I have to find a 'white knight,'" Tom said. "I'm going to call up Larry and ask him to defend me against Clyde."

Larry agreed to do it and bought 25 percent of the stock to guarantee the company's independence.

With the new financial strength Tom sent $100 million down to Clyde who was still on the street.

Meanwhile, up on the 29th floor of Black

Rock, Tom was having a secret discussion with the Walla Cola Company about buying the network. When Larry got wind of it, he walked in and threw Tom out the window. Everyone who worked at the network cheered Larry's decisive action and dubbed him the Black Rock Designated Messiah.

The cheering lasted for several hours until Larry looked at the books and declared the network was spending too much money. So he rounded up the on-air talent and rank and file and asked them to come to his office. After giving them a friendly pat on the back, he said, "This hurts me more than it hurts you," and then he pushed each one out the window.

As they went sailing down, Larry yelled after them, "It's better for you that I do it now than later."

And that is the way it was at Black Rock. What of Clyde? He took his greenmail and rushed down to Crazy Eddie's where he bought the most beautiful 25-inch TV set.

Business Majors, Learn About

Global Business Experience Offered By U.S. Navy Supply Corps

You have used four critical years of your life preparing for a career in business. Now you must decide which career path you will follow.

If your career path is like that of most business students, you will go directly from campus to corporation. However, that path may not be best for you. Before making your decision, you should compare typical, entry-level corporate positions to becoming a business professional in the Navy Supply Corps.

Some of the most successful business and financial executives in the nation give credit to business experience in the Supply Corps as a major factor in their success. They include:

- James D. Robinson III, Chairman American Express
- Edward Carlson, former Chairman/CEO of UAL, Inc.
- William Marriott, Chairman of Marriott Corp.
- James Ketelson, CEO of Tenneco Inc.
- Robert I. Stewart, President Liberty National Life Ins. Co.
- John J. Pruis, Vice President corporate relations Ball Corp.

This is a small part of a list that could be extended to include other corporate executives, a U.S. cabinet officer, ambassadors, and other high-ranking government officials.

Supply Corps officers don't command ships or gun batteries.

Officers in the Navy Supply Corps operate one of the largest and most complex business operations on the globe. This elite group makes up the business professionals of the Navy.

Two Career Possibilities

If you are accepted for a commission in the Navy, career possibilities to you include:

1. The Supply Corps as a career.
2. Return to a civilian position after a tour of two to four years. This option means you would be trained for positions which otherwise would never be offered to you.

Benefits of Supply Corps experience include: learning to work with people, development of a global perspective, management techniques, postgraduate education in business comparable to an MBA, and competitive real income.

Business students may find out if they qualify to join the elite business professionals in the Supply Corps by attending a career-planning presentation entitled "The United States Navy Supply Corps. The Business Professionals of the Navy."

This presentation will be conducted by LCDR William Cording one time only this semester at 3:30 p.m. Thursday, March 26, in the Memorial Union.

CAMPUS RECREATION BOARD OF GOVERNORS AT ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY is now seeking members for 1987-88.

The Board establishes policies for the operation of the campus recreation program with special concern for the Student Recreation Center, currently in the planning stages.

Four student members are needed to serve on the Board. To fairly represent ASU's student populace, minority students, female students, graduate students, and commuter students are encouraged to apply.

Applications are available in the ASASU office (Memorial Union Room 208J).

from running for the ASASU Senate by the Liberal Arts College Council. Stillwell said he is trying to get Heap placed on this spring's ballot.

Heap was denied nomination by the council because she had not attended three consecutive meetings, which the council requires for membership and to be eligible for senate races.

Heap said she was a member of the council last semester but she could not attend sessions recently because the council changed the meeting times.

A bill that would have allowed students who had not attended the council meetings to run for office narrowly failed to pass during a council session two weeks ago.

Heap said, "This is an obvious attempt to deny me access to the elections process."

Heap said all members of a college, not just those nominated by the council, should be eligible to run for senate.

Stillwell said, "An important element of our argument is fairness of representation."

He said the college council system works against students who are considered "non-traditional."

"A large number of students in the Liberal Arts College are non-traditional students," he said. "They work and have different hours. Denise is one of those students."

Supreme Court Chief Justice John Matelski said the court hopes to deliberate Heap's case early next week.

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 7 a.m. Thursday:

•Police said computer equipment valued at $2,431 was stolen from campus:

An Apple MacIntosh personal computer, disk drive and printer were taken from Room 235 in the Music Building. There were no signs of forced entry, and the employee who reported the theft said he thought an ASU student stole the equipment.

Six mouse devices were taken from Room 219 in the English A-wing. One was taken from Room 331 in the Architecture Building.

•A student told police someone stole a Sony Walkman cassette player and a tape case with 36 cassettes from his room in a residence hall during spring break.

Estimated loss is $430.

•Someone entered a student's room at Palo Verde Main Residence Hall and took files of old ASU class tests, a push-button telephone and a thermos.

Estimated loss is $135.

•Police arrested Tempe resident David C. Weigle for disorderly conduct after he followed a female ASU student around Tempe Center. Police said he made sexual remarks to her.

•Police escorted four ASU students out of Manzanita Residence Hall after they ignored the resident assistant's request that they stop serenading the tenants on the fifth and 13th floors.

The resident assistant asked the fraternity members to leave twice before she called for police assistance, police said.

Tempe police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents ending noon Thursday:

•A 33-year-old Tempe man suffered a broken arm and possible broken jaw after he was beaten with a steel pipe and robbed of $120 in his apartment Wednesday night, police said.

Police said the man was sleeping on a sofa when a man entered his apartment in the 600 block of S. Roosevelt Street through his unlocked front door.

The suspect then knocked the man unconscious by beating him with a piece of blue-colored pipe, police said.

The man told police there also was a second suspect.

Police said the suspects were last seen running northbound on Roosevelt Street.

•A 29-year-old Tempe man was assaulted by his girlfriend after they argued about dog feces on their living room floor, police said.

Police said the girlfriend threatened to kill him, took a knife from the kitchen drawer and lunged at him.

The man grabbed her by the neck and struggled for the knife.

Police said the man let her go, and she left the residence.

The man did not want to prosecute, police said.

•An unknown person stole $2,335 in property from an ASU Health Center employee who was robbed of $900 in property at her home in the 1600 block of W. Village Way, police said.

Regents dish up costly MU meal

Bypassing the MU's Pizza Place special and Union Greens' cheeseburgers, 75 guests of Gov. Evan Mecham and the Arizona Board of Regents dined on shrimp cocktails, Chateaubriand and baked Alaska for more than $2,300 in the Maricopa Room Thursday night.

Spritzer cocktails, or fake wine, replaced real cocktails as members and guests of Associated Students, the press and University officials joined the regents in munching on servings of Belgian endive salad, potato baskets and haricot.

More than $200 was spent on table centerpieces.

A source in the MU said, "This was an expensive dig."

Corbin: drug agency outside Mecham's authority

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

The state attorney general said Thursday that Gov. Evan Mecham abandoned his plan to create a state drug enforcement agency because it was not within his right as governor.

Bob Corbin, a Republican, told a group of ASU students that creating an agency involved appropriating state funds, a task reserved for the Legislature.

He said Mecham's plan was analogous to former Gov. Bruce Babbitt's executive order to create a paid state Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, an order which Mecham rescinded because it was an illegal gubernatorial act.

Corbin said if Mecham had not rescinded Babbitt's order, the state attorney general would have been forced to sue the governor on behalf of the citizens.

"(Babbitt) had no authority to create a paid holiday," he said, adding the holiday would have cost Arizonans about $3 million.

Corbin said he told the three gubernatorial candidates last December that if they were elected and failed to rescind Babbitt's order, "they probably would have been personally liable."

At the invitation of Delta Sigma Pi, a business fraternity, Corbin spoke to about 50 students for more than 90 minutes about business law, career opportunities for business graduates and answered general questions.

He urged students to consider careers in law, especially specialized areas of litigation such as environmental and anti-trust law.

"There is always a market for lawyers . . . and the state of Arizona will not stop growing," he said. "You are needed. Believe me, you are needed."

Corbin described the United States as "the most litigious society in the history of the world."

"The days for general practitioners are over."

Corbin said in the past, one in every 25 legal complaints was pursued by litigation.

"Now it's just the opposite," he said. "One in every 25 doesn't get in the hands of lawyers."

The state attorney general's office investigates 10,000 "legitimate" consumer fraud cases every year, he said.

For example, Corbin's office is investigating the case against Nautilus Health Spa which sold lifetime memberships and then went out of business, defaulting on contracts with an estimated 100,000 people.

Corbin seemed to delight in describing how one of his investigators posed as an average motorist to uncover a gas station that charged more than $300 to repair a car which was not broken.

"I love this job," he said repeatedly, adding the work excites him.

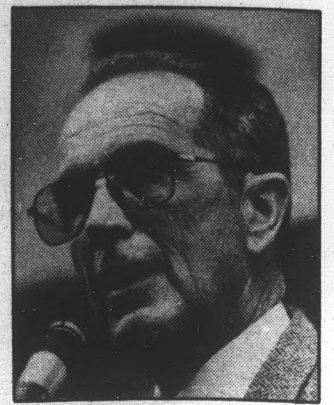

Corbin said he objects to the increase in the number of professions which require licensing because it restricts the supply of practitioners and raises the prices for services.

Similarly, he said he is "perturbed" with the increased number of state regulatory agencies over the last few decades.

"We could do away with about one-third of the agencies," Corbin said.

He said he employs 210 lawyers and still is understaffed to investigate all the anti-trust and consumer fraud cases while enforcing the criminal code and civil divisions.

Corbin said he does not know whether he will fire his assistant state attorney general, Richard Alcorn, who was sentenced Monday to one year of probation for stealing $385 worth of shirts from Dillard's department store.

Company test markets mail-order condoms

By JUDIE GAILLARD
State Press

Try this one on for size — condoms by mail.

The Medical Supply Corporation of America, based in Oklahoma City, is test marketing Trojan condoms by mail.

Sara Lytle, a spokesperson for MedAmerica, said the company has marketed the idea in Austin, Texas, San Francisco and college areas, including ASU.

"The brand is one of the more established brands on the market," she said.

Lytle said people can either call a toll-free number and order the condoms or send in an order form.

She said the condoms are sent to the customer in plain packaging within a few working days.

Lytle said the condoms are exactly like the ones available in stores. There is no difference except for the way they are purchased.

"The condoms are not second-rate," she said. "The bonus is that you don't have to go to the store."

Lytle said the mail-away condoms could help shy people who are too embarrassed to buy condoms over-the-counter.

"It is like women who go to the store to buy feminine hygiene products, and they end up throwing a package of chicken or something in the basket to hide the items," she said.

Lytle said there is a national concern for controlling sexually transmitted diseases. "The time is definitely right for the mail-order industry," she said. "The response has been great."

The mail-order focus is on products that consumers may prefer to purchase confidentially instead of over-the-counter.

MedAmerica plans to price the Trojan products, manufactured by Carter-Wallace Inc., below standard retail prices.

Test market plans call for a two-month flight of print advertising, including Playboy magazine, newspapers, and a homosexual publication.

The prime population segment for the test market is men and women between the ages of 18 and 40 due to the concern for the prevention of sexually transmitted diseases, including AIDS, herpes, syphilis, gonorrhea and other venereal diseases.

Speed limit bill passes Senate; president's approval necessary

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — The Arizona Legislature will act quickly to implement the new 65 mph speed limit on rural highways as soon as the legislation is approved by President Reagan, a Tempe senator said Thursday.

Sen. Doug Todd, a Republican and a member of the National Conference of State Legislatures' Transportation Committee, said the Arizona House and Senate are prepared to approve legislation raising Arizona speed limits within the next few weeks.

The U.S. Senate passed the bill on a 79-17 vote Thursday. But President Reagan has threatened to veto the measure, which provides $88 million in federal highway funds to the states.

The House approved similar legislation Wednesday on a 217-206 vote.

Todd, also vice-chairman of the Senate's Transportation Committee, said he expects the bill to attract support from both parties in the House and Senate.

"I think discretion says we need to wait until the president signs the bill," he said.

Todd said the bill would allow Arizona to raise speed limits on the entire length of Interstate 40, on Interstate 8 between Tucson and Yuma and on Interstate 10 between Phoenix and Tucson and between Tucson and Nogales.

"I plan to be there with (Department of Transportation Director Charles Miller) when he puts up that first 65 mph sign," Todd said.

He said he did not know if the speed limit increase will be extended on Highways 89 and 87 in northern Arizona because they are winding roads.

"There probably is some rationale to hold the speed limit on those roads," he said.

Todd said he is concerned that Reagan may decide to veto the legislation, despite urging from Republican leadership in Washington to approve the measure.

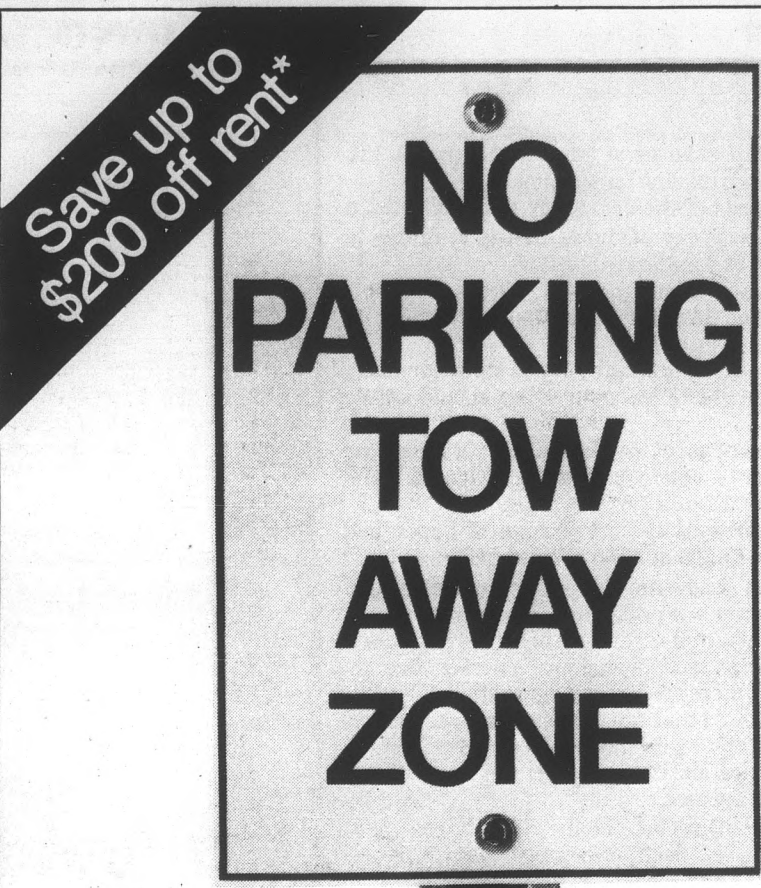

But Todd said he doubts Reagan will veto the bill because the Democratic-controlled Congress has threatened to override his veto.

Gov. Evan Mecham, who will not say how he will respond to the Legislature's bill, won support from the nation's governors on the increased speed limits two weeks ago.

The measure was unanimously supported by Arizona's congressional delegation.

Todd said he has been lobbying for the higher speed limit through the NCSL for at least four years and was pleased that the measure is finally reaching the president's desk.

"I've been poking at the feds to let us raise the speed limit," he said. "The country desperately needs the highway funding bill passed into law."

Budget

members at UA.

Based on annual staff salaries of $20,000, this means UA had almost $897,000 more funding for staffing.

A preliminary analysis of the cost study data reflected a total UA-favored discrepancy of more than $1.2 million in operations and almost $2.4 million in staffing.

Also using UA as the benchmark, NAU's budget reflects more than $1.3 million less for operations and about $2 million less for staff.

But Sen. Bill De Long, R-Tucson and a cost study member, said funding levels for the three universities should not be equal.

"I hope that we are not going to clone our universities," he said. "It's important to retain individual character, and therefore there's going to be differences in funding."

The study also addressed the percentage of upper and lower division courses taught at ASU, NAU and UA.

The state university budgeting formula provides equal funding for teaching lower and upper division courses.

But Hermon said junior and senior level courses cost more to teach than freshman and sophomore courses due to smaller class sizes and more specialized instruction.

The budget study showed that ASU teaches the most upper division courses in the state with more than 44 percent of its load falling at the junior and senior level; UA teaches the least with just under 33 percent.

Regents Executive Director Molly Broad said the "missions," or goals, of each university also must be considered to determine appropriate levels of funding.

According to mission statements, UA's charge is to maintain itself as a major research university, and ASU wants to "continue development" as a major research university. NAU plans to maintain excellence as a teaching institution.

Jay Underwood

Actor's down-to-earth style keeps him flying

By MARTY WEISS
State Press

Jay Underwood may be known to many people as "The Boy Who Could Fly," but his feet are planted firmly on the ground.

Recently, this 18-year-old native of Hayward, Calif., completed filming in the Scottsdale/Tempe area for "Not Quite Human," scheduled to air May 29 on the Disney Channel.

"Not Quite Human" is a story about a scientist/inventor (of toys) who builds Chip, an android in the form of a 17-year-old human.

"He's very literally minded, so the things that people say to him, he'll come back with some weird retort," Underwood said of his character in an interview on the movie's set. "He's a fun character."

The film also stars Alan Thicke ("Growing Pains") as Chip's creator and Robin Lively ("Wildcats") as Thicke's daughter.

This is Underwood's second film shot in Arizona. His first, "Desert Bloom" was filmed in Tucson in 1985.

As the final day of filming "Not Quite Human" approached, Underwood learned about the recent release of the videotape and soundtrack album of "The Boy Who Could Fly." He has many fond memories of his first starring role.

Unlike his costar Lucy Deakins, Underwood especially enjoyed the flying sequences.

"We'd be on wires 30 feet up," he said. "We were held by a harness with two wires connected to our hips so we could do forward and back flips. Lucy was not too thrilled about it at all. I'd be having a great time juggling on the wires."

Underwood said Deakins first acquired her acrophobia while watching him "fly."

"I was up four feet doing a flip when my right wire broke," he explained. "The left one caught me, and Lucy about turned green. I thought she was going to faint because she hadn't gone up at all and she was next."

On the set of "The Boy Who Could Fly" Deakins instigated the reprisal of a practical joke that once left an actor stranded 30 feet above ground as personnel left for lunch. Underwood was the unwitting victim.

"Unfortunately, the guys had told me the secret (the first victim used to escape)," he said. "All you have to say is, 'I'm unbuckling my harness now and I'm going to plummet 30 feet to the ground.'"

Laughing hysterically, Underwood described other favorite pranks: the effects crew fixed assistant director Brian Frankish's rental car so it would "splash water into his crotch when he hit the brakes" and put it on the roof of a school using a crane.

Underwood delighted in watching "The Boy Who Could Fly" as much as shooting it.

"The first time I saw the movie was with Lucy at a test screening at 20th Century Fox studios in L.A.," he said. "I kept looking at Lucy and going, 'No way. No way.' She's going, 'I know. I know.'"

"When it got to the part where we jump off the roof, I just held my breath. And when we took off, everyone in the audience including me started screaming and applauding. Nick did an awesome job of capturing the flying and the feeling of it."

Underwood said he has dreams of flying in real life.

"I want to parachute only once," he said. "It's very scary because they say, after you do it once, you're hooked. I'd like to hang glide and do that more than once."

Whether he flies or films, Underwood said he can always count on the support of his family.

"I owe a lot to the support of my parents,"

he said. "How many parents let their son go to acting school 1,400 miles away when he's 14?"

Besides allowing him to attend an acting school in Minneapolis, Underwood's parents are always ready to give him advice. His father once asked him to "Come on home if you ever need a piece of humble pie."

The portrayal of "The Boy Who Could Fly" has never needed to follow this advice. As an actor, he has been able to keep his head out of the clouds.

He prefers roles in fantastic, non-propaganda motion pictures and hopes there won't be any politically-laden films like "Desert Bloom" in his future.

"The purpose of films is escape; it has to be," he said. "I don't want to go into a movie theater and watch something that's not going to allow me to get away from my everyday life."

"People can go into this dark room, let themselves go and be lost in a fantasy by a boy flying or wrapped up into this life of an android and his family. That's an incredible thing and I think that's what movies were always intended for."

His latest projects follow that premise. He recently filmed a pilot for TV called "J.J. Starbuck" about a Texas billionaire (Dale Robertson) who gets involved in a murder mystery with a hotel owner (Bill Bixby) and his wife (Patty Duke Astin).

Underwood will also appear in a Robert Redford-executive produced feature entitled "Promised Land," starring Kiefer Sutherland ("Stand By Me"), Jason Gedrick ("Iron Eagle") and Tracy Pollard ("Family Ties").

Underwood, who now lives in Los Angeles, is currently portraying the lead in Elysian Pictures' "The Invisible Kid," co-starring Karen Black and directed by Avery Crouns.

High anxiety, outlandish banter steal show in 'Burglar'

By GREGORY ROBERT KRZOS
State Press

The cornrows are back. You've got to hand it to Whoopi Goldberg. She certainly has gusto when it comes to comedy. And when it comes to "Burglar," Goldberg's latest film, her gusto's the one thing that will help her in the box office.

In Warner Bros.' action-packed comedy, the fun never seems to stop. Neither does Whoopi — from making you laugh that is. "Burglar" is a splashy, whimsical film that combines a little bit of "The Bedroom Window" with "Jumpin' Jack Flash" for a high-speed trip to funland. The comedy is good, fresh and wild, and dear old Whoopi is strutting her comic stuff to unpredictable ends.

Goldberg is Bernice (Bernie) Rhodenbarr, a loud-mouthed, smart-and-sassy San Francisco Haight Street bookseller who moonlights as a cat burglar. Although she's trying to go straight, Bernie's being forced to pull one more heist by a down-on-your-luck-type policeman named Ray Kirschman (G.W. Bailey). Kirschman has some dirt over Bernie and if she doesn't obtain $25,000 for him, he'll put her back in jail.

The quest for bucks leads her to Dr. Cynthia Sheldrake (Lesley Ann Warren), a shady dentist who'll pay Bernie if she can reclaim stolen jewelry from her ex-husband. That's when the chaos begins.

While snooping around in the ex-Sheldrake's apartment, Bernie hides in the hall closet after two people enter the flat. Cooped-up and frustrated, Bernie is forced to listen to 30 minutes of loud love-making and eventually the murder of the infamous former husband while he's arguing with another houseguest afterward.

Two bumbling detectives, Todras and Nyswander (Anne DeSalvo and John Goodman) pick up on what's going on, only to complicate matters further with their unbelievably funny keystone cop shenanigans.

'Burglar'
Warner Bros.

DeSalvo and Goodman give to "Burglar" the same type of foolish flavor seen by the forever crime-stopping goons in "Beverly Hills Cop." This boy/girl team are impeccably outrageous as they unsuccessfully try breaking doors down or catching Goldberg on the streets of San Francisco in a no-holds-barred car chase.

Pinned for a murder she didn't commit (sound familiar?), Bernie tries unraveling the mystery herself. She gets some help from a neurotic friend, Carl (Bob Goldthwait), a man at odds with himself, humanity and the planet. Goldthwait, who is fast becoming America's overnight comedy sensation, steals the show in "Burglar" with his perpetual nervousness and off-the-wall banter.

James Handy rounds out the cast as Kirschman's snotty lawyer. He plays an interesting character who gets quickly blended into the crooked storyline by film's end.

Mark my word, "Burglar" doesn't let you down as far as comedy and laughs are concerned — there's plenty for everyone. In fact, you'll probably wind up sneaking a few priceless chuckles on your way out of the theater.

Rated R, "Burglar" opens today at AMC Lakes, Baseline and Rural roads.

Collection traces artist's history, unveils fresh face

Frank Tovey — The Fad Gadget Singles ★ ★ ★ ★

In the liner notes of The Fad Gadget Singles, Frank Tovey deems Fad Gadget "a man of 1,000 faces," an apt description of this multifaceted retrospective LP.

The Fad Gadget was Tovey's perennially different character for the better part of the last 10 years. Evidently, Tovey believes his musical mission is accomplished and has released this album, on Sire Records, as a farewell gesture to his former stage personality.

Dating back to September 1979, the songs span several styles, each representing a musical avenue that Tovey/Fad Gadget wandered and window-shopped.

The album also attests to Fad Gadget's unswerving — and successful — bid to "decentralize" pop music, the various forms he combined and encompassed while taking the ego out of pop.

Chronologically organized, The Fad Gadget Singles opens with "Back To Nature," an atonal and sparse electronic piece, followed by "The Box," originally the B-side to "Back To Nature."

"Ricky's Hand" illustrates Tovey's brush with industrialism — it features a Black and Decker V.8 double-speed electric drill.

Rounding off the first side, "Fireside Favourite" and "Lady Shave" demonstrate the flip-side of the distanced artist: his insidious and very black sense of humor.

Side 2 maintains the mood with "Saturday Night Special" then launches into the full-winged dance tune, "King Of The Flies."

"Life On The Line" is more melodious but no less dynamic, and it features Alison Moyet as a chorus voice.

Fad Gadget explores rhythm in "For Whom Bells Toll," on which Moyet also contributes backing vocals. "I Discover Love" features a Las Vegas-style brass section that is somehow reminiscent of "Mack The Knife," as much for its Brechtian social comment as for its sound.

The album concludes with "Collapsing New People," a 1984 release and a highly listenable mixture of all Tovey has learned and achieved.

Indeed, The Fad Gadget Singles attests to Tovey's artistic success. In the liner notes, Tovey discusses Fad Gadget's visual presentation; however, the importance and innovation of Tovey's music can not be ignored.

While this album may celebrate Frank Tovey's unveiling, it also serves as testimony to what pop music could be — real art instead of egoistic pretext.

Single signals success for Prince's new album

Prince — "Sign o' the Times" ★ ★ ★ ★

Prince was trying to go somewhere with Around The World In A Day, and his latest effort will easily bring him through the home stretch.

With the title track of his forthcoming double album, Minneapolis' purple-clad prime minister, Prince, wails through a bleak and powerful look at what this age is really all about. And yet it's still strangely danceable, as per the Prince tradition.

The B-side, "La, La, La, He, He, Hee," is a funny/funky tale of love gone literally to the dogs.

The man behind such dance hall classics as "Little Red Corvette" and "Let's Go Crazy" has begun to treat his voice as an instrument — and a finely tuned one, at that. The beat and the energy so typically Prince are also quite alive.

Prince may have been groping for words with his last album, but his statement comes through clearly on his new efforts. If the advance single is any indication, the four album sides of Sign o' the Times, on Prince's Paisley Park label and Warner Bros., may not be enough.

Artist combines reality, illusion in campus show

Artist Linda Robbennolt is walking the fine line between reality and illusion with her startling blend of photography and painting on display at the ASU's Northlight Gallery through April 9.

"There's a really fine line between reality and illusion; and that's a line I like to walk," said 31-year-old Robbennolt who was on hand this week doing demonstrations in the gallery.

This particular mixed media has been garnering popularity.

"People are dealing with photography as an art medium and they're trying to push it to its limits," said this White Plains, N.Y., native. "People are looking for ways to change photography from its traditional limits."

Robbennolt's work — flat paintings juxtaposed with human bodies or inanimate objects in a photograph — started as "a natural evolution."

"I started painting on the models and then photographing them," she explained. "I liked the illusion that followed and went from there."

Robbennolt's photographs themselves are not so radical — it is what has been done to and around them that is unusual. "The prints are very traditional," she said. "I alter the reality."

The works are sometimes whimsical, sometimes disturbing, but all are a departure from today's paradigm in altered photography.

Northlight Gallery, located in Matthews Hall is open Monday through Friday 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Men gymnasts want revenge in last home meet

Ron Kuczek Jr./State Press

ASU gymnast Mike Zerrillo flips in front of the UAC stars and stripes during a high bar performance earlier this season. Zerrillo will be competing in the final home meet of his ASU career as the Devils face New Mexico Saturday at 7:30 in the UAC.

By CAROL BOOS
State Press

The ASU men's gymnastics team hopes to end the regular season on a better foot than it started, as the Sun Devils host New Mexico Saturday in the University Activity Center at 7:30 p.m.

After falling to the Lobos early in the season 275.70-273.45, the Sun Devils (13-14), particularly the seniors, are looking for revenge against the Lobos.

This will be the last home meet for seniors Jerry Burrell, Mike Zerrillo, Chuck Rekiere and Bob Wolf.

"It's important because it is the last meet," Zerrillo said. "But it is more important to get a good score and go to nationals. I don't think I will remember it any more than any other meet unless I do exceptionally great — but that's what I'm striving for."

The meet may be the most important for Zerrillo though, who hasn't been able to compete in the all-around competition for the last two meets due to an ankle injury.

Zerrillo must compete in the all-around competition to qualify for the nationals.

"I want Mike to compete," head coach Don Robinson said. "But I can't put him in unless he is competing at the level he was when he got hurt."

Burrell, who tied for last year's NCAA floor exercise championship and was the 1985 Pac-10 vault and floor exercise titleist, said he had "butterflies" at practice Wednesday.

"I'm going at it with the same attitude as every other meet — to do my best," he said.

Wolf said he has the same attitude as always too, but the fact that it is the last meet for the seniors will help get the team up for the meet — something they have been unable to do in the last five meets.

As part of getting the team attitude up and trying to focus on what is important, Robinson has placed a good score bulletin board in the workout room.

One quote: "It's not how you fall, it's how you pick yourself up". And scribbled underneath it were the words: "It's not how you fall it's when you fall, it's on what part of your body you fall on."

The second quote isn't so humorous when one looks at the scar on Paul Linne's forehead or the tape on Zerrillo's ankle. "To be a top athlete hurts," Robinson said.

The Sun Devils had last week off, and the break gave Robinson time to work on the team's mental preparation.

"I gave them my 'glad' speech," he said. "The only technique that works is caring — that's the important technique."

For most gymnasts, being home is great. But for the men's gymnastics team there is no such thing as the home court advantage.

"The crowd is the one who will help us, but other newspapers can't even spell gymnastics," Robinson said.

Linne and Burrell highlighted the season with their perfect scores. Linne earned a composite 10.0 on the high bar and Burrell earned a 9.90 composite on the floor exercise. But Robinson said the highlights are going to get better.

"I'm looking for three 10's. One from Moses (Dungca), one from Jerry and one from Paul — that would be the biggest plus and we could do it," he said.

This year's Sun Devils have been a sharp contrast to last year's national championship team. After graduating Mark Bowers, John Sweeney and Kevin McColm, and then losing Dan and Dennis Hayden to the Olympics, Robinson has had to rebuild.

"I'm very happy with the progress of the team," he said. "I just hope the new guys can fill the spots and I think they can."

ASU travels to Los Angeles for the Pac-10 Championships April 3-4.

Van Raaphorst recovering in wake of condo fire

By SHELLY SCHAFFER
State Press

Graduating ASU quarterback Jeff Van Raaphorst was just passing time until the NFL draft in April when a fire gutted his home March 4, leaving him with numerous charred mementoes and no place to live.

"You definitely have to kick into survival-mode," said Van Raaphorst, who is temporarily staying with a friend in North Scottsdale. "Right now, I'm just trying to get a roof over my head."

Tempe fire officials said the condominium at 2035 S. Elm St., owned by Jeff's father Dick Van Raaphorst was a total loss with $90,000 estimated in damage. The condominium was gutted in a kitchen fire when Van Raaphorst's roommate was cooking tacos on the stove.

Van Raaphorst, a real estate major, said he lost all of his football trophies, plaques and Rose Bowl souvenirs, but is trying to get particular items replaced.

"It will just take a long time, but I'll only be able to get back about two-thirds of my stuff," he said. "I'll just lose one-third of my things like big game pictures and actual game balls I won for setting records."

Van Raaphorst said he is determined to play professional football.

"Playing professional football is my dream, and I've got to chase that first."

"I'm gonna wait until the draft and take it from there. I enjoy Arizona, but there's nothing keeping me here — I'm just gonna go ahead and move (where I play)," he said.

"If I had to choose a team to go with today, I'd say Atlanta Falcons or San Diego Chargers; and I like Kansas City also."

said replacing some items is going to be tough because they were ordered special.

"Jeff has given me some samples of what was burnt, and we'll go through a process to see what we can do and if we can do anything," he said. "But we hate to have somebody go without them (Rose Bowl watch, jersey and warm-up) because their house burned down."

Van Raaphorst said the Springtree condominium will be rebuilt to sell by Farmer Insurance Company.

Gary Bonds, who is working on the case, said once reconstruction is started, "it could take anywhere between two to three months to complete."

No date has been set to begin the construction.

Roommate Perry Vettraino, a junior architecture major, escaped with only light burns in the fire.

"He had turned in a big project right before it happened, and his portfolio didn't get burned," Van Raaphorst said.

Van Raaphorst said: "My family is really good in a crises situation — we've been through a lot. It was an accident, we have to go on from here."

He said he will be getting another place with Vettraino.

"There were no hard feelings, and we've heard every burnt taco and fire joke ever possible," Van Raaphorst said.

He said his sudden situation "really puts everything into perspective."

"You think you have a lot of good friends, but a lot of them are just dead weight. Living day-to-day has been tough — I just go to school and work-out, but I guess that's part of the deal."

Devils travel to Tucson for diamond rivalry

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

The rivalry continues tonight. For the 290th time, Arizona and Arizona State will battle on the baseball diamond. The latest war begins at 7 p.m. at Tucson's Sancet Field in the first game of a crucial three-game conference series.

The series continues at 7 p.m. Saturday and at 1 p.m. Sunday.

This weekend's games have more on the line than just pride. ASU, (13-13) reached the .500 mark Wednesday for the first time since Feb. 27. The Devils — 1-5 in the Pacific-10 Conference southern division — will also be trying to escape the Six-Pac cellar.

But the competition may be too tough to allow that. UA — the defending NCAA College World Series Champions — is presently ranked 11th nationally and boasts a 19-9 record, 6-6 in the Six-Pac.

Under 15th-year head coach Jerry

Kindall, the Wildcats have been playing tough baseball recently, including winning two of three games against second-place USC.

UA has also been playing well at Sancet Field. The Wildcats are 15-1 in the Old Pueblo, not counting a 5-2 exhibition loss to the Cleveland Indians Wednesday.

All of this appears to spell trouble for ASU, who lost four of six games to the 'Cats last year.

But the Devils have been steadily improving the past week, winning four in a row. The offensive firepower, missing throughout the past few weeks, seems to have returned recently as the Devils compiled 31 runs in the last five games.

ASU coach Jim Brock said he expects a well-played series.

"Arizona looks to have another really good postseason-contending team that does everything quite well," Brock said. "Coach Kindall has done a magnificent job of filling in the holes left by graduation.

"I think it could be a dynamite series."

The Wildcats are led offensively by catcher Steve Strong and third baseman Chip Hale. Strong is batting .387 with seven home runs and 27 runs batted in. Hale, a lefthanded hitter, sports a .383 mark with seven homers and 32 RBI.

For ASU, Tim Spehr leads the team with a .408 batting average, (20-for-49). Tony Mattia supplies the power for the Devils, with 10 homers and 31 RBI.

The Wildcats are expected to start ace Gilbert Heredia, (5-1, 3.43 ERA) tonight. Frank Halcovich, (2-2, 5.86) will pitch for the 'Cats Saturday and Gary Alexander, (1-1, 3.00) will get the nod Sunday.

For ASU, Linty Ingram, (2-3, 3.62) will be the starting pitcher tonight. Mike Schwabe, (3-4, 3.04), who missed a start last weekend at Hawaii, will pitch Saturday. Brock has not yet decided on a starter for the series finale.

"Schwabe will start the Saturday game in Tucson," Brock said. "We could have used him in Hawaii and if it was a league series we would have."

"But I think the rest will make a world of difference in his recovery (from a sore shoulder)."

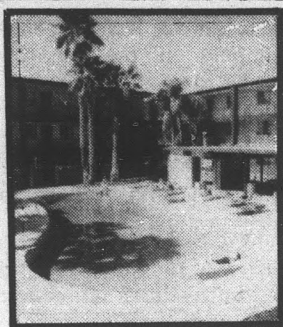

Brock also plans to use Tony Harris as a short reliever.

"We would like to see him pitch two innings three times each weekend," Brock said.

Harris, although somewhat sluggish in his 1 $\frac{2}{3}$ -innings stint Wednesday, has allowed only two earned runs — both on Wednesday — in 14 $\frac{2}{3}$ innings pitched.

KTAR (620 AM) will broadcast reports during tonight's and Saturday's games, and will broadcast the entire game Sunday.

The Devils return to Packard Stadium March 24 for a two-game series with Nebraska.

ASU wrestlers in 8th place through part of NCAA tourney

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

Two rounds of the NCAA wrestling championships have already been completed at College Park, Md., and the Sun Devils were in eighth place at the time of State Press deadlines.

Two wrestlers have already been knocked out of the tournament. Glenn McMinn (134 pounds) and Dan St. John (142 pounds) were beaten in the first round and have completed their season. McMinn was decided in his match by Jeff Gibbons of Iowa State, 14-3. St. John won his preliminary match over Fred Hunsinger from Fresno State, 10-2, but he would go no further following a loss to seventh-seed Sean Oday of Edinburgh.

Coach Bobby Douglas saw three of his ASU grapplers earn first-round wins. Chip Park (126 pounds) was seeded ninth going into his match with Timothy Hackel of Central Iowa. He showed why, pummeling Hackel 13-5.

In second-round action, Park kept his winning ways alive, defeating T.J. Sewell of Oklahoma 12-2.

The holder of the second best record of the team is Rod Severn (HWT) with a 25-6-1 mark. Severn, seeded sixth, faced Todd Harrison of Clarion State in preliminary action and won, 8-1. In the first round, Pat McBade went down to Severn 6-0. Severn then defeated Mark Hatch of Liberty, 4-2.

He will face Jim Neilson of BYU today.

Junior Mike Davies entered the tournament as a contender for the national title at 190 pounds and is on track so far. First-round action saw him technical fall Jay Surak of Cleveland State in 6:51. Davies trounced Doug Baker of Kent State, 9-2, and will advance to wrestle third-seeded Scot Kelly of Navy.

Still in the tournament but competing in the consolation bracket is Zeke Jones (118 pounds), Tommy Ortiz (150 pounds), John Ginther (177 pounds), and Wayne Sharp (158 pounds).

Jones, a freshman and has the best record on the team 28-4-2 was beat by Paul Kapper of Cleveland State, 13-4. He will wrestle Iowa's fifth-seeded John Reagen today.

Ortiz was snuffed by the second seed of the tournament, Jim Heffernan from Iowa, 9-4. The freshman will face Carlos Leveixier from San Francisco State in the consolation round.

The only freshman All-America, Ginther, was injured most of the season. He lost to Steve Metzger of Iowa State, 4-2, after winning his preliminary round 9-4 over Craig Bogard of BYU.

The only wrestler ASU will lose this season is Wayne Sharp. Sharp was defeated in the preliminary round to Glen Lanham of Oklahoma State, 17-7. The senior's next foe will be Pete Bibenedetto of Boston University.

Women gymnasts travel for final meet of season

By CAROL BOOS
State Press

The ASU women's gymnastics team travels to Tuscaloosa, Ala. this weekend to take on Alabama in the last regular season meet of the 1987 season.

The two teams, both ranked in the top ten, are the only two teams to beat No. 1-ranked Utah.

Head coach John Spini said that beating Alabama would be a great way to end the season but getting a good score is what is important.

"We want to score 186 or better, that way we can go into regional meet seeded No. 2," Spini said.

The Sun Devils, (11-6) play host to the NCAA Midwest Regional Meet on April 11 in the University Activity Center. If the Sun Devils were to go into the meet seeded No. 2, they wouldn't have to start on beam — an event where the Devils are particularly weak.

Alabama, (9-5), who finished third behind ASU in the 1986 NCAA Championships, are also expected to reach the regionals.

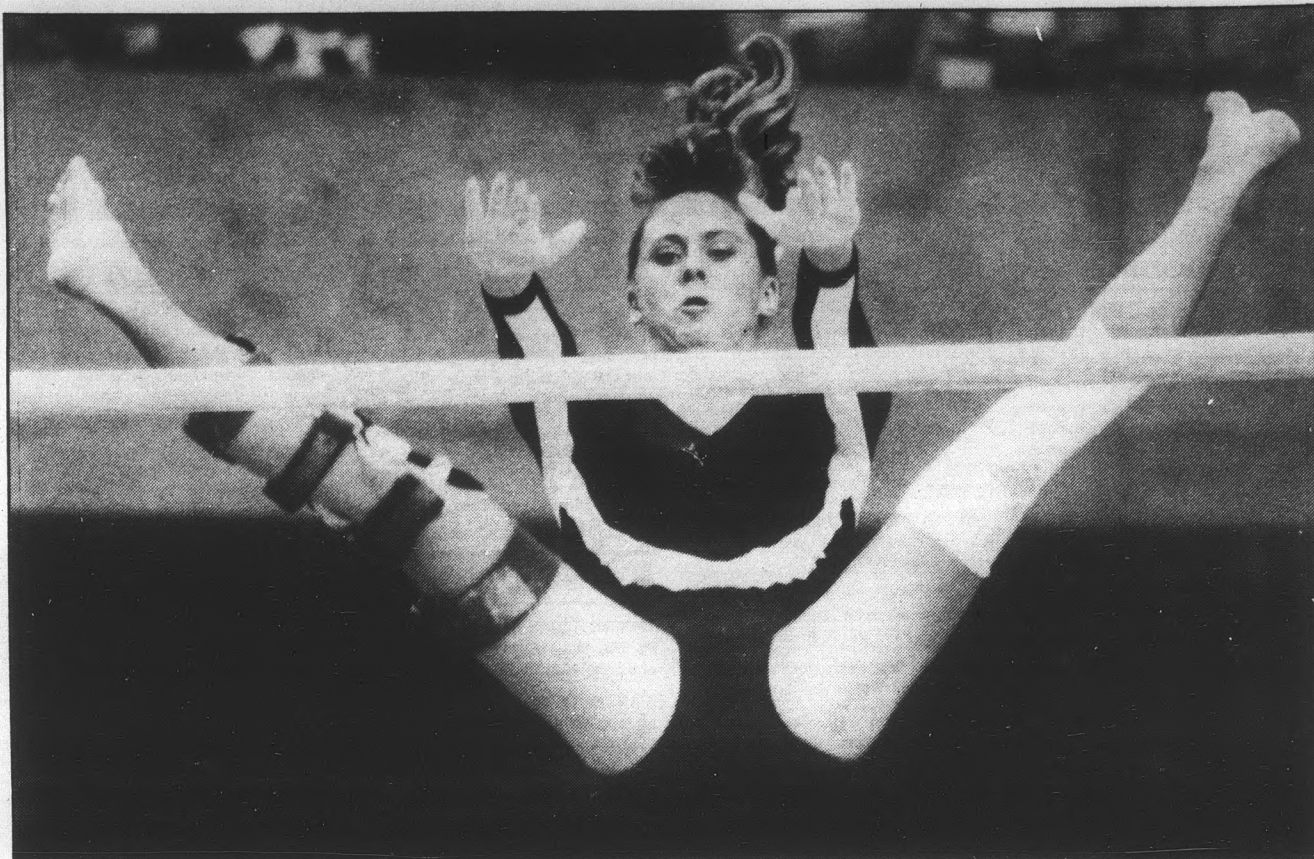

The top seven teams from this region, along with seven individuals who are not on the qualifying team, will qualify for the NCAA Championship in Salt Lake City, Utah, April 24-25.

The Sun Devils are coming off a disappointing 186.50-186.00 loss to rival UA last week. It was the first loss to the Wildcats in 15 previous meetings.

However, freshman Suzy Baldock finished second in the all-around with a career/season high 37.65. UA's Mary Kay Brown lead the all-around competition with a 37.85.

Senior Shari Mann leads the Devils in the all-around with a season high of 37.70, short of her career high of 37.90.

Marika Le Sieur, a freshman from Salt Lake City, finished first on the floor exercise with a 9.55.

Freshman Heather Carter, who has been competing on beam and floor for the Sun Devils, will stay home this weekend and work on vault in preparation for the regional meet.

"We are taking a small risk taking her out of the meet," Spini said. "But when you weigh the pros and the cons, we have a greater need for her on vault."

UNLV Rebels optimistic over Friday's game

By The Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Wyoming Cowboys are good, but Nevada-Las Vegas forward Jarvis Basnight wanted to put things in perspective.

"Everybody's talking about Wyoming this and Wyoming that," he said. "But we're the No. 1 team coming in here. They have two great players and we have 10, so the ratio is in our favor."

The Runnin' Rebels, 35-1, arrived Thursday in Seattle, where they'll meet the surprising Cowboys, 24-9, Friday night in the West Regional semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament.

The two Wyoming players Basnight mentioned are hot-shooting forward Fennis Dembo, who scored 41 points in his team's tournament victory over UCLA, and 6-foot-11, 265-pound center Eric Leckner.

"Dembo's a great player, but we can match up with Dembo," UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "We don't match up with Leckner. That's why I talk about him so much."

Tarkanian, who has won 82 percent of his games in 19 seasons as a major college coach, said he will start 6-9 Armon Gilliam on Leckner.

When reserves David Willard, who is 6-11, and Richard Robinson, at 6-10, come into the game, they will guard the Wyoming big man.

"We've played against one center that's better than Leckner and that's the kid from Navy (David Robinson)," Tarkanian said. "But he didn't have the supporting cast Wyoming has."

The Cowboys advanced to the round of 16 for the first time since they won the national title 44 years ago. Last week in Salt Lake City, Coach Jim Brandenburg's team beat Virginia before dumping 15th-ranked UCLA by 10 points in the second round.

Women netters win two over UTEP, New Mexico

By STEVE ADAMS
State Press

The 16th-ranked ASU women's tennis team is riding the momentum of two convincing 9-0 victories over the University of Texas-El Paso and the University of New Mexico.

"These games weren't too tough," coach Sheila McInerney said. "These matches, in fact, were a little bit of a breather compared to what we had faced the past couple weeks."

Before this week, the Sun Devils, (9-7 overall and 1-3 in the Pac-6) were coming off five straight matches against top 20 teams. ASU was able to pull off victories in two of those matches, upsetting No. 3 USC, (5-4) for the first time in 10 years, and beating powerhouse Pepperdine for the second time this year.

"We have gone through a period in which we have played 16 matches against teams that have been ranked in the top 20," McInerney said. "The victory against USC was a real boost for our team especially since that is the school I graduated from."

"As we play the weaker teams, we have the ability to work out some of our problems at the same time," McInerney said. "Right now we are solid all the way down the line, even the fifth and sixth players are doing extremely well."

Sophomore Laura Glitz continues to be a strong force on the team, according to McInerney, as she defeated Marijke Nel of UTEP, 6-3, 6-3 and defeated her New Mexico opponent, 6-2, 6-4.

"She is doing a real good job for the team right now," McInerney said.

Two other players that have added a winning dimension to the team are Carol Coparanis and Therese Arildsen.

"They are playing really well and in fact the whole team is doing well," McInerney. "We need to play up to our potential at all times due to the competition within our own division and our tough non-conference schedule."

"The matches we have lost have by no means been blow-outs," McInerney said. "They have all come down to the last match and we were in the unfortunate position of coming out losers by the score of 5-4 in each contest."

McInerney was referring to the losses to No. 8 Trinity, No. 12 BYU, and No. 13 Clemson.

"Right now, I think the girls have got it all together and are really enjoying the competition," she said. "We just have to continue to play well."

ASU will face intra-state rival UA next Wednesday down in Tucson.

"They are playing very well this year," McInerney said. "It should be interesting."
