Cummiskey supports Mecham's criticism on research priorities

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

PHOENIX — Associated Students President Chris Cummiskey told an Arizona Senate appropriations subcommittee panel Wednesday that he supports Gov. Evan Mecham's criticism of research priorities at the state's three universities.

Cummiskey said while he believes research is important, he would like university officials to place more emphasis on undergraduate education.

Mecham spoke out against emphasis placed on research last month and has announced plans to investigate how much time instructors spend teaching compared to time spent researching.

Cummiskey made his remarks while delivering a report on undergraduate education to the committee, which met Wednesday afternoon to discuss financing for construction at ASU West.

A committee of ASASU members spent about a month interviewing deans of the ASU colleges and students. The report then was presented to the Arizona Board of Regents.

Since then, the regents have decided to establish a task force to take a closer look at the problems facing Arizona's three universities.

"Although we found that students are generally satisfied with the quality of instruction, we discovered professors don't see instruction as the major emphasis on campus," Cummiskey said. "We're concerned about the balance between teaching and research."

"We think ASU should proceed with the mission statement of building a research institution, but we want to see more emphasis placed on instruction."

He said the students welcomed the governor's investigation of teaching and research.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson said the students' concern about the balance between teaching and research is legitimate.

"It's always a struggle to find the right balance between teaching and research," he said. "But an important element for being a good teacher is to be a good researcher."

Sen. Peter Kay, R-Phoenix, told Cummiskey he agrees with the students and the governor, but he supports research in scientific areas.

"It is essential to have research in the sciences more so than the established fields," he said. "For example, how much research can a professor do in an area like music of the 14th century?"

ASU student football ticket price will increase $7

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

The price of ASU student football tickets will increase by $7 to $28 next season, according to a new campus Intercollegiate Athletic Board policy.

But Associated Students President Chris Cummiskey charged Wednesday that Athletic Director Charles Harris and the IAC formulated the change without obtaining enough student input.

The policy raises the price of the 10,000 student season ticket prices to 25 percent of the cost of a general public season ticket.

In the future, student ticket prices will reflect the same formula.

The policy also increases the general public cost to $112 for 1987, up from last year's $100 ticket price.

Cummiskey said the IAC did not inform him or ASASU when hearings would be held on the matter, and it approved the measure without giving students a chance to argue against the proposal.

According to Cummiskey, the price-hike proposals were presented at an IAC meeting early this year, discussed and placed on the agenda.

"We were never contacted about participating in discussions, although (the IAC) said we would be, and as it got closer to the meeting time, I discovered the matter was suddenly an action item (ready for discussion and vote) on the agenda," he said.

Harris said the information was available to ASASU and added, "Mr. Cummiskey knows where I am, and I am always available to discuss matters with him."

An effort to table the measure until it could be discussed further failed, and the IAC ratified the policy in February at a meeting held without Cummiskey or Student Affairs Vice President Betty Turner Asher.

"We just didn't see the necessity of passing it right away," Cummiskey said. "Students are getting hit from every area of campus with fees, and I don't think this is the appropriate time to raise ticket prices."

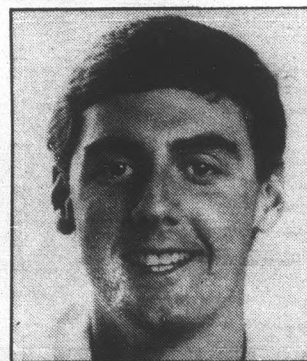

Harris agreed with Cummiskey that the price hike was unfortunate but pointed out that ASU has not raised ticket prices in six years.

"We are charged by the Board of Regents and the University with raising our own revenues, and we have to take adequate measures to do this," he said. "If you compare ticket prices across the league, we still have a lower than average ticket price."

The average per ticket price in the Pac-10 is $4.20. ASU student season tickets now cost $4 each.

Cummiskey also criticized Harris' proposal to require students, starting in 1988, to put down a deposit in April or May on tickets they plan to purchase the next fall.

'Students are getting hit from every area of campus with fees. I don't think this is the appropriate time to raise ticket prices.'
—Chris Cummiskey

"We have about a one-third campus turnover every year," he said. "Buying tickets in the spring, when nobody is thinking about football, just isn't practical for freshmen and transfer students."

Harris said that part of the proposal has not been officially adopted and will be considered at hearings with opportunities for student input.

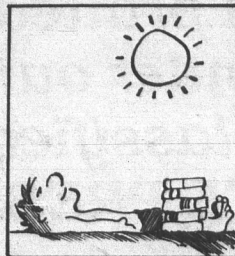

Harris defended linking student ticket prices with those of the general public through a percentage and said that 25 percent was chosen because "it sets a reasonable price."

ASU to host conference on language controversy

By AARYN KEMP
State Press

Arizona legislators, state officials, legal experts and language policy experts will meet at ASU this weekend to discuss a nationwide controversy concerning English as the official language.

ASU is hosting a two-day conference, "Official English and the Border States," Friday and Saturday to provide information on what now has become a debated issue in Arizona.

"The conference is being held at a very critical time," said Karen Adams, one of the conference organizers and an ASU assistant professor of English.

"There is a (resolution) on the floor of the Arizona Senate right now dealing with this issue."

Two previous bills to make English the official state language were defeated in the Arizona House of Representatives, but a similar resolution should go before the full Senate by next week.

The movement to make English the official language is spearheaded by U.S. English, a national organization that gained attention after its successful campaign in California.

Similar legislation also has been introduced in New Mexico and Texas.

But English as the official language is not a new idea, another conference organizer said.

Daniel Brink, also an ASU associate English professor, said: "This is an issue that has been discussed before but never resolved in this country."

"The conference will provide an opportunity to hear all sides of the issue — to get past the propaganda and down to the issues involved."

Brink and Adams said the purpose of the conference is to provide international and historical perspectives.

Adams said conference organizers hope to present both sides of the issue and turn out a reasonable resolution for legislating language.

"We hope that people who attend the conference will come away with an idea of the issues involved," she said.

The conference begins at 9 a.m. Friday in the MU Pima Room with the topic, "Patterns of Language Policy Outside the United States."

"The History of Language Policy in the United States" will be discussed at 10:30 a.m., followed by "Language Use in the American Southwest" at 1:30 p.m.

A presentation on "Language Policy Proposals for the Southwest" begins at 3:30 p.m.

Also on Friday, a discussion of "Individual Rights and Language Legislation" will be held at 4:30 p.m. in Room 112 of ASU's College of Law.

On Saturday, a round table discussion, "Official English and the Border States," will be moderated by ASU College of Law Dean Paul Bender at 10 a.m. in the law college's Pedrick Great Hall.

The discussion will involve Arizona legislators, state officials, legal experts, language policy experts and representatives of U.S. English and the Mexican American Legal Defense Education Fund.

Soviets want simple thing in Afghanistan: control

It is really too bad Ronald Reagan has been preoccupied with the whole Iran arms business. I keep waiting for the president to give it the ol' Gipper try and call up Mikhail Gorbachev and say, "Well, there you go again."

It seems the Soviets are talking peace (where now?) and are looking a for diplomatic resolution to the Afghanistan problem. The real problem is what the Soviets couldn't accomplish militarily, they are now trying to accomplish diplomatically. That is, gain control of Afghanistan. After all, Afghanistan is important because of its strategic location.

Leonid Brezhnev had stated in Prague in 1973, "We want to get control of the two treasure houses on which the West depends, the mineral regions of South Africa and the Persian Gulf."

Afghanistan is surrounded by Iran, Pakistan and the Soviet Union. It is situated only a few hundred miles from the Persian Gulf.

The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan took the world by surprise in 1979. Even then President Carter commented, "I learned more about the Soviets in one week, than I have ever known."

The Soviets went in to prop up a puppet regime that was installed in a coup the previous year. Their forces would be in for a big surprise, though.

The "Mujahideen" proved to be worthy opponents. The Soviets have run into the same problem many modern nations have faced this century: a big modern force versus a highly motivated guerrilla army. The cost of staying in is too high, but a defeat would be a great humiliation.

A. Marcus Brnovich

Besides being a humiliation, the Russians have run into other problems. Politics, world opinion and morale at home have also come into play. Once thought of to be unique problems to democratic nations, the Soviets are getting a taste of what American decision makers had to deal with during the Vietnam War. Of course, these restraints haven't affected the Soviets military effort as they did the Americans effort during Vietnam. Yes, at times Americans did get out of hand, but the Soviets atrocities don't compare. They have tried in every way (including chemical weapons) to resolve the war militarily, but have failed. The will of the Afghan people seems too great.

The Soviets claim that they desire to resolve the Afghan war. According to them, theirs is a new era of Soviet leadership and a new change of heart. It seems that Mikhail "inherited" the war and is looking for an honorable way out. I guess the mounting casualties, dissention on the home front and the increasing cost in rubles has nothing to do with their apparent change.

When the Soviets originally went into Afghanistan, it was to try to curb Moslem unrest. They themselves have a large Moslem population and they were worried about a possible spread of "liberation fever." In reality, their whole plan has backfired, as they have lost respect in the Moslem world.

Basically, it is tough to take this Soviet round of peace proposals seriously. As recently as a few months ago, the Soviets were conducting their harshest military offenses. They claim that outside sources (like the United States) are perpetuating the war for their own self-interest.

The reality of the situation is that the Afghans want a government of the people, not one that has been imposed on them. If the Soviets truly want to get out, why don't they? As one state department official said, "It took them a week to get in, and it will take them a week to get out."

With the Soviets gone, the present puppet government would find it tough to last a day. That is the problem. The Soviets won't leave until they have established another safe totalitarian state. As for their claim that the United States is perpetuating the conflict, it is not that we are opposed to reconciliation, just the kind that they are offering.

The latter choice

Editor:

I'm surprised there has been little comment on the "Excellence in Engineering" analysis the State Press ran on Jan. 29.

Maybe it's just that engineering students are too busy (read "apathetic") to write in.

Personally, I was anxious to read comments from a number of engineering professors or the dean of the engineering college.

Oops. I forgot; they are too busy doing research.

I did note one letter from one research professor aggressively challenging the article, yet I have seen no follow up articles or interviews in the State Press.

Did someone from "higher up" censor the State Press for stepping on toes or are you having as hard a time talking to them as students are having?

In response to the research professor, I must say, "It's hard to see the peasants over the palace walls, isn't it?" When past professors, current colleagues and students have all recognized a problem in the undergraduate program, why haven't you?

I am supportive of the efforts being made to make ASU a great engineering school, but am disappointed that it is being done at the expense of many good students.

Hopefully, the State Press can shed some more light on what problems the engineering school is having in time to help the many students yet to come to ASU for engineering, as well as those returning after this year.

It's too late for me. I graduate in May.

Doing devil's work

Editor:

I would like to congratulate Jed Smock in wanting to choose ASU as his home. He seems to have chosen the right place.

Let's put it this way, anyone who can turn people off to Christianity is more likely doing the devil's work than God's work.

And if Jed Smock wants to show us how to be a Christian, or a follower of God, he might enroll at ASU and become an example of his faith, by perhaps doing volunteer work, raise money for the street people, become a group leader in one of ASU's many clubs and live in love and understanding of others as himself and learn more about the social disease of human nature.

Or is it that Jed Smock has not read this portion of the Bible: "Peter looked round, and saw the disciple whom Jesus loved following the one who at supper had leaned back close to Him to ask the question, 'Lord who is it that will betray you?' Jesus said, 'If it should be my will that he wait until I come, what is it to you? Follow me'" (John 21:20).

Overwhelming sentiment

Editor:

I would like to respond to Broderick Mollere's absurd charge that it is the CISPES and Coalition Against the War in Central America who are providing disinformation about U.S. policies in Central America. Our goal is to help create free and open debate on these issues so as to prevent another Vietnam War before it happens.

The March 3 McNeil/Lehrer News hour showed results of a poll it took on Central America. Eighty percent of Democrats and 57 percent of Republicans said they are opposed to aid to the cutthroat mercenaries more commonly known as the contras. This is pretty overwhelming sentiment. If we are supposed to be a democracy where the elected representatives do what the people want, then contra aid would be cut off immediately.

As for disinformation, it is the U.S. Government that claims it has the right to lie, not the anti-war activists. If the government can ignore the will of its citizens, if it can disregard both international and domestic law, as in the case of the World Court and the Boland Amendment, in pursuit of a fatally flawed policy, then Broderick, I submit to you that the "Amerika" you say you wish to prevent might just already be a reality.

The political spectrum

'True believers' defy traditional political categories

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

Anyone who relies on the traditional political spectrum as sketched above will likely have difficulty accounting for the following anomalies:

- Lyndon LaRouche, the Illinois based ultra-right extremist who claims, among other things, that the Holocaust never took place and that Britain's royal family is behind America's drug problem, started his political career as a militant Trotskyite of the extreme left.

- Jed Smock, who during the 1960s was a self-proclaimed hippie, drug dealer and revolutionary, met Jesus on the beach of Morocco in 1976. Today, he preaches a fundamentalist gospel which calls for the death penalty for homosexuals and adulterers.

- Prior to World War I, Benito Mussolini was in the forefront of Italy's revolutionary socialist movement. But with the advent of war, he did an abrupt about-face, joining and eventually leading the Italian fascist movement to power in 1922.

- In the lengthening shadows of Germany's Weimar Republic, as communists and Nazis battled in the streets, both groups actively recruited from the opposing side. Hitler himself praised the potential of the communists: "The petit bourgeois Social-Democrat and the trade union boss will never make a National Socialist, but a communist always will."

The political spectrum assumes a continuum of positions from the most radical on the left, seeking the most far reaching social or political change, to the most reactionary on the right, which seeks the most far reaching reversal of social change. The far left and far right are thus the antipodes; all intermediate positions line up neatly between them.

The political spectrum derives from the tidy world of British politics. The Liberal and Labour parties sit to the left of the Speaker of Parliament, the Conservatives to the right.

But with a Lyndon LaRouche, a Jed Smock or a Benito Mussolini, this tidy system begins to break down. The difficulty is not that individuals move from the far left to the far right, or vice versa. The difficulty occurs when individuals move from one extreme directly to the other, without metamorphosing through the political center, without passing "Go," without collecting $200.

They just don't seem to be playing the game. It's almost as though the two extremes of the political spectrum, burdened by their weight of fanatical ideologues, begin to slowly bend down, down . . . finally touching, wing-tip to wing-tip, directly below and opposite the political center.

Here, Trotskyites and fascists, Nazis and communists, anarchists and authoritarians of the left and right mingle freely with assorted Disney characters in a surreal political landscape.

More than 35 years ago, Eric Hoffer described the character of the political/religious extremist in "The True Believer." Interestingly, the profile is more psychological than political.

Hoffer describes the potential fanatic as one who sees his life as "irremediably spoiled." A misfit without self-esteem or support, he is ready to be transformed into: a Nazi, a communist, a Trotskyite . . . into any label, the very mention of which causes people to turn their heads and pick up their ears in the workplace or the classroom.

The fanatic now is a sort of Walter Mitty, living out his dream life as if it were real: giving the Nazi salute in the glow of a burning cross, planning his part in bringing about the collapse of capitalism, or creeping silently across the ASU campus at night, tacking anti-Semitic and racist pamphlets to our kiosks and bulletin boards.

Hoffer describes how the new, idealized cause of the formerly "worthless" extremist taps deep reserves of devotion and energy:

"The less justified a man is in claiming excellence for his own self, the more ready is he to claim all excellence for his nation, his religion, his race and his holy cause . . .

"There is no doubt that in exchanging a self-centered for a selfless life we gain enormously in self-esteem. The vanity of the selfless, even those who practice utmost humility, is boundless."

The catalyst in the transformation from a "nobody" into an extremist, Hoffer argues, is hatred: "(Hatred) pulls and whirls the individual away from his own self, makes him oblivious of his weal and future, frees him from jealousies and self-seeking."

The end result of all this, of course, is disaster. That the psychology of political extremism can be explained and its results predicted does not prevent the bloody drama from being reenacted again and again.

In examining the political spectrum, then, we should bear in mind that as we approach the outer perimeters of the left or the right, at some undefined point we quietly leave behind the realm of political science and enter the realm of abnormal psychology.

Fascism, communism not essentially different

By BOB HEILER
State Press

Imagine you are an alien creature, watching films of 20th century earth history. Scores of Nazi brownshirts and Panzer tanks proceed slowly by Der Fuhrer's reviewing stand.

Cut to Moscow, May 1, any year in the last 10. Scores of communist troops and T-72 tanks proceed slowly by the First Secretary's podium.

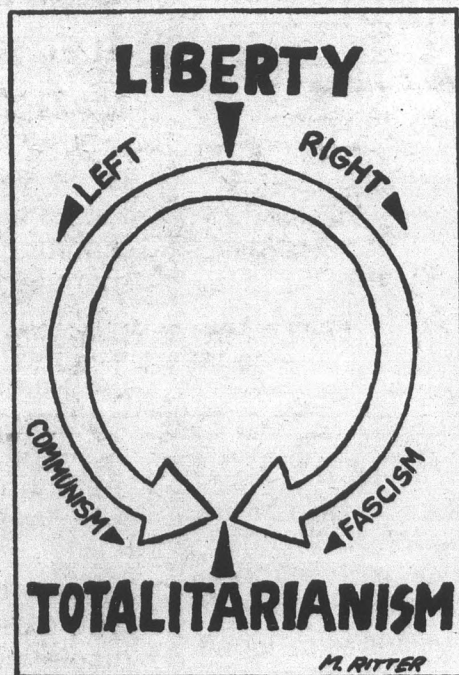

Stripped of preconceptions, as an alien intelligence would be, the notion that these two regimes were somehow opposite would certainly seem ridiculous. And the similarities scarcely end there.

Both governments spring from a Utopian ideal. Both implement these ideas through coercion, propaganda and control of resources and information. Both oppress their citizens. Both are guilty of heinous human rights offenses. Both attempt to expand through intimidation and conquest.

No one disputes that all these charges are true of Nazi Germany. Few dispute that communist regimes have been guilty of the same excesses, if not today then certainly in the past.

Josef Stalin was responsible for the deaths of his own citizens — not just a few, but millions, including 20 million people who were starved during a deliberate, controlled Ukrainian famine in the 1930s. Today, there are communist troops in Afghanistan, supporting a government that the Afghans refuse to recognize.

The point of all this is not that the Soviet Union is and has been involved in things it shouldn't be, although it is and has. The point is that communism and fascism, at first glance, do not strike an unbiased mind as opposites.

The traditional political spectrum, represented at the top of the page, has communism on the left and fascism on the right, with all other political ideologies falling somewhere in between. Perfect government, then, is conceived as somewhere in the middle.

Now here is where this conception gets the thinker into trouble. The notion of perfect government is always out there, always beckoning to political theorists. Although the perfect government has never existed on the planet, the idea is too enticing for the big thinker to ignore.

And this is why the aforementioned unbiased mind is virtually non-existent. The belief that perfection can be achieved, if only people would listen, is a dangerous one. Indeed, it is the thought that led to both Hitler's Nazism and Stalin's communism. Each man was profoundly affected by political philosophers that lived and wrote long before either began to consider politics.

Before the respective regimes took control — indeed, before Hitler and Stalin ever thought about achieving power — other men planted the seeds of Utopianism that were to germinate in their brains.

Neitzsche's concept of the Superman led to Hitler's devotion to the creation of a Master Race, which in turn required him to exterminate the Jews. Marx's treatise on communism — the form of government that was to transport the governed into the "realm of freedom" — led to Stalin's transportation of millions of Russian citizens into the arms of the Grim Reaper.

In each case, ideas that promised perfection delivered totalitarianism. The quest for the government that produces perfect freedom repeatedly has led to the creation of governments that construct walls around their borders.

There is, of course, a simple enough reason for this.

"Government," and "perfect freedom," at least in this context, are mutually exclusive principles. When any government exists, citizens submit to it. If they fail to do so, the government either forces them to submit through coercion, or crumbles.

Every day, Americans living in a representative democracy — a form of government that has remained relatively stable for over 200 years — relinquish parts of their freedom to the government. They stop at red lights, go on green. They put in hours at a job to make money to support their families. They resist impulses to steal, injure or rape.

All of these things are infringements on the kind of radical freedom that Utopian plans promise. This is the freedom to act on impulse — to lose one's self and become a pleasure machine, whose sole purpose is to satisfy the desires of the instant. In Utopian views, men are not free until they are able to follow each impulse to its logical end, to satisfy each urge.

But this is not the most useful definition of the word "freedom." For, if every man were to exercise this sort of freedom, humans would wind up in exactly the state of strife and confusion that Hobbes called "solitary, poor, nasty, brutish and short." The war of all-against-all would be upon us, and each man would be free only to do whatever he could manage without getting clobbered.

The true meaning of freedom is quite different. It means freedom from acting on impulse. Freedom to consider, to reflect, to make conscious decisions about how to live one's life.

This is the kind of freedom that democracy protects, and that totalitarian regimes, whether fascist or communist, destroy.

Jury still in deliberation in kidnap-murder case

By The Associated Press

PHOENIX — The jury in the Frank Jarvis Atwood kidnap-murder trial completed its first full day of deliberations Wednesday without reaching a verdict.

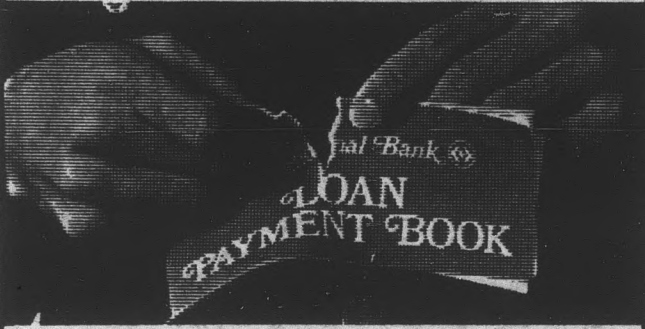

Before quitting for the day at 4:45 p.m., the jurors asked to be taken to Tucson, where Atwood is accused of kidnaping and murdering 8-year-old Vicki Lynne Hoskinson.

The jury sent a written request to Judge John G.

Hawkins of Pima County Superior Court, asking that it be allowed to visit several areas in Tucson "to fortify conclusions" several jurors have made.

But Hawkins rejected the request, telling the jury, "We are not in a position to transport you to Tucson. Please consider all of the exhibits that are in evidence together with your collective recollection of the testimony you have heard."

Gem case still unsolved; FBI to continue probe

By LAUREN MILLETTE
State Press

ASU police and the FBI have not had any luck tracking down suspects or victims involved in the recovery of precious gems appraised at $413,621, Sgt. Larry Angel said Wednesday.

"We have exhausted all leads in the case and have turned it over to the FBI because we cannot find who owns the gems," he said.

"We thought we had a lead in Tucson, but it turned out that the property was different than what we have."

Another FBI case in Los Angeles appeared to be similar to this case, Angel said, but that did not pan out either.

The gems now are in the possession of the police, but Angel said they will be turned over to the person who found them if the owner is not found.

No further information can be released until the investigation is complete, Angel said.

ONLY 60 SEMESTER CREDIT HOURS NEEDED FOR OCS.

If you have 60 accredited semester hours, and can achieve a high score in a special aptitude test, you could be just 22 weeks from earning the gold bars of a second lieutenant in the Army Reserve. And ready to take on your first Reserve leadership assignment.

Qualify, and you'll attend an 8-week Basic Training Course, then go on to a 14-week Officer Candidate School (OCS) which will challenge you both mentally and physically. When you graduate, you'll receive your commission as an officer in the Army Reserve, and continue training in a branch Officer Basic Course. Then you'll return home to serve in a nearby Reserve unit — usually one weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

It's a great opportunity to gain the skills and begin the practice of the kind of leadership and management prized so highly by civilian employers.

You need not have completed your degree, just have 60 semester hours and a lot of ability and confidence, to qualify.

If you're interested in OCS, call:

ASU police report

University police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending 7 a.m. Wednesday:

•Police said someone took an estimated $1,760 in change from 48 parking meters in Lots 10 and 11 between 3:30 p.m. Monday and 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Police dusted the meters for prints but have no suspects.

There were no signs of forced entry, and police said the thief probably had a key.

•Police said someone painted graffiti on the walls and balcony of the ASU Art Building between March 20 and 24, causing $900 in damage.

•Five personal checks were stolen from a room at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity house, 706 Alpha Drive, while the student who owns the checks was vacationing on spring break, police said.

The student told police he was unaware of the theft until he started receiving bank notices of insufficient funds.

Police said the thief withdrew $368.86 from the checking account.

•Police said an ASU student and a University employee were treated by paramedics in unrelated incidents and taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital.

The student became nauseated in the Physical Science A-wing, and the employee suffered from chest pains and dizziness in the Community Services Building, police said.

Hospital staff said the student was treated and released, and the employee was taken to her family doctor for further treatment.

•A student told police his keys were stolen from his unlocked room in Cholla Apartments.

There are no suspects, and police said they do not know if the theft was a prank.

Nobel laureate scientist to give chemistry lecture

Nobel prize-winning scientist Yuan T. Lee will address budding chemists (and the simply curious) at 3:40 p.m. Friday in Room 123 of the Physical Sciences F-wing building.

Lee won the prestigious award in 1986 for studying the dynamics of chemical reactions. He shared the honor with two other scientists, who collectively pioneered state-of-the-art chemistry using infrared light.

S. H. Lin, a professor of chemistry, said Lee is often called "an astonishing experimental genius."

"Indeed, Lee's group has developed the best molecular beam instrumentation in the world," Lin said.

Lee's lecture will focus on "Chemical Reactions in Crossed Molecular Beams," as part of the ASU chemistry department's "Frontiers in Chemistry" series. It is free and open to the public.

Bloodhound puts nose to grindstone to sniff out crime for Tempe police

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

McGruff the Crime Dog's motto is "Take a bite out of crime," but Buford, an 18-week-old bloodhound, has a different approach.

Buford takes a nap — and then licks crime. Buford, Tempe police's newest addition to the K-9 unit, lives a dog's life. A typical day for Buford goes like this:

"He wakes up at about 7 a.m. and has breakfast and goes back and takes his morning nap," said Lt. Marty Vance, head of Tempe police K-9 unit.

"He gets up around noon, has lunch, takes his afternoon nap and gets up around five, has dinner and takes his evening walk and goes to bed.

Vance said officers sometimes station Buford on guard duty outside his temporary handler's house.

But he said the "only way he could be much of a guard is if the burgler tripped over him on the way in the front door."

Buford, who is Arizona's first bloodhound to be used on a municipal police force K-9 unit, will be trained as a tracking dog. His training will be complete in about a year.

The Arizona Department of Corrections and the Gila County Sheriff's Department are the only other agencies using bloodhounds in the state, Vance said.

Buford will perform like a police canine, but his main purpose will be to trace suspects, find lost children and search buildings.

"We want to enhance our program by adding the tracking capability that the bloodhound brings to it," Vance said. "This dog can track an older scent than our German shepherds."

He said German shepherds only can follow relatively new scents whereas bloodhounds can follow smells that are more than eight hours old.

Tempe currently has two German shepherds — Shultz and Madi. Madi replaced Murph, a German shepherd who was shot and killed Nov. 22.

Vance said Buford will not be used like the German shepherds because bloodhounds do not have "aggressive tendencies."

Todd Green/State Press
Buford, an 18-week-old bloodhound, is the Tempe police department's latest addition to its K-9 force.

"He won't go in and bite the suspect like the German Shepherds do," he said. "He'll just go in and bark at the guy. Then they decide if they should send officers in or take Buford out and send in the German shepherds."

Vance also said lost children will not be afraid of Buford's droopy face unlike the fiercer German shepherds.

Although he doesn't begin work for another year, Buford will be training for his new job.

Vance said once Tempe police find a permanent dog handler, Buford will be sent to Kansas City, which is a national training center for bloodhounds.

Meanwhile, his current handlers will teach him basic obedience.

"Basically, it's done by interesting the dog in something like a ball and keeping him interested in the item," he said. "You go from there and just introduce them to people and teach them it's fun to find people."

Vance said bloodhounds have been used for "eons" by law enforcement agents, especially to find escaped convicts, because there is "basically no limit" to where bloodhounds can find people.

And what does Buford think about his new job? "Ruff!"

International student help, advice offered

By ROBERT KOSCHEKA
State Press

ASU's International Student office offers a wide range of programs for international students, including a host-family program and a speakers bureau, that allow the students to meet Americans and become accustomed to new surroundings.

Suzanne Steadman, ASU coordinator for international student programs, said some programs allow international students the chance to experience American ways of life, while others enable them to meet American students on a one-to-one basis.

Steadman said one of the most popular programs at ASU is the host-family program.

"The host-family program matches international students with American families," she said. "It gives the foreign student a chance to get to know an American family and allows the student to feel welcome in this country."

Steadman said the program is most popular around the holiday season because it offers international students a place to spend the holidays and a chance to experience American traditions.

She said another ASU program, the speakers bureau, brings international and American students together to discuss their native countries.

"The speakers bureau allows international students to speak to Americans about their native countries, their political beliefs, or any other topic they wish to discuss," Steadman said.

"This program gives international students a chance to be ambassadors — a chance to share their cultures with us."

The "Pen Pals in Person" program allows international and American students to work together to learn each other's language.

Marylee Carter, an ASU assistant international student adviser, said the program provides an opportunity for ASU students studying a foreign language to meet with an international student who speaks that language.

"The international student will meet with the American student at a convenient time and place, and the two will carry on conversations in their new languages, helping both to master the languages," Carter said.

"This is a great way for Americans to get to know someone from another country. Many of these students realize that there are more similarities than differences between them."

Students interested in these programs can contact the International Students office in the MU.

Women gymnasts prepare for conference meet

The ASU women's gymnastics team will make history this weekend.

The Sun Devils, (11-7) travel to Pullman, Wash., Saturday for the first-ever Pac-10 Championships.

Eight teams from the Pac-10 will be in Pullman competing for the Pac-10 title (Oregon and USC do not field teams).

Among the teams in the Pac-10, five are ranked in the top-twenty: No. 1-ranked UCLA, No. 5 UA, No. 6 ASU and 12th-ranked Oregon State.

"UCLA is strong on paper — but they can be beat if they have problems," head coach John Spini

The undefeated Bruins are lead by the three top all-rounders in the conference — Tanya Service (38.60), Birgit Schier (38.25) and Jill Andrews (38.20).

Intrastate rival UA, who beat ASU two weeks ago, are lead by top all-rounders Mary Kay Brown (38.05) and Jodie Leekwai (37.55).

"UA is a strong team and they are even ranked a notch higher than us," Spini said. "That match-up will be top competition in itself."

ASU's Suzy Baldock leads the conference on uneven bars with a personal best of 9.75. Baldock is also tied for the fifth best all-around score with a 37.95.

As a team, the Sun Devils have the second-best team score in the Pac-10 with a 188.75. UCLA has the best score at 190.10.

The Sun Devils are coming off a loss to Alabama but it wasn't a disappointing loss. The Devils scored a 188.40, their best away score of the season.

"I think we have a chance to win if we compete like we have been competing," Spini said. "The key is to hit the most routines and put pressure on the other teams to make mistakes."

The team is healthy mentally and physically, Spini said.

"The team is very confident right now," he said. "I don't think they (gymnasts) are tired, I think they are more excited than tired."

Although the Pac-10 Conference Championships will bring many bragging rights to the winner, to ASU it will be an opportunity to improve their five-meet average score.

"This (Pac-10 Championships) will just count as an away meet score, Regionals is what is important," Spini said.

The NCAA Midwest Regional will be held in the University Activity Center on Saturday, April 11 where the Devils will likely host Arizona, Utah State, Oklahoma, Nebraska and six-time defending national champion Utah.

Juliene Simpson resigns

ASU athletic director Charles Harris announced the resignation of women's basketball coach Juliene Simpson Wednesday.

Simpson, who has coached the team since the season of 1979-80, compiled a record of 134-92 for a win percentage of .593 for the Devils.

Simpson took the team to the National Women's Invitational Tournament in 1981, and to the women's NCAA Tournament in 1982 and '83.

The Sun Devils' record this season was 10-17, 44 in the Pac-10. The team tied for eighth in the conference.

"We are very appreciative of Juliene's service and loyalty to ASU and of the fine job she performed for the past eight seasons," Harris said. "We wish her well with future endeavors."

Simpson's resignation, which was "to pursue other opportunities," according to the athletic department's release, is effective July 1. The search for a replacement will begin immediately, Harris said.

ASU baseball team riding momentum of sweep

They did it. The ASU baseball team went down there and beat the Cats three times.

Until last week, it was looking as though the season wasn't going to live up to the expectations Jim Brock beamed before it began.

But in case nobody had noticed, by the time you read this, the Devils will have won nine games in a row. And I reiterate, three of them were against the Wildcats.

Last year, the Devils could manage to only win two of three in Packard Stadium against UA, and were pummeled in Tucson. That memory, combined with the fact that the Cats won the College World Series, should be cause for a huge smile on the faces of all of those who care at all about ASU sports.

I was smiling all weekend.

After struggling through their early Six-Pac schedule, it looks as though the team has tightened its ranks and started playing baseball—ASU-style.

Against the Cats on Monday, the Devils smacked a record seven home runs. Yes, seven. It looks as though the Devils are beginning to like this hitting thing. Certainly the Cats' outfielders were getting to know the wall at Sancet field on an intimate basis all weekend. I think maybe they had forgotten it was there.

Steve Brennan

And to make ASU fans even happier, the next time around is at the corner of First and Rural.

Can you imagine the Devils winning both series this year? I can.

Caps off to Mike Benjamin, certainly one of the best college shortstops in the nation. He hit three home runs out of Sancet field.

And to Mike Burrola and Dan Rumsey, who also hit three apiece.

It's hard not to love the way Tony Mattia swings the bat. He has been sending outfielders and pitchers home with bags on their heads all season. And 11 times they never found the ball.

The nice thing about all of this is that the Devils are on a legitimate roll, which is something that a Six-Pac team can ride all the way to the College World Series.

An interesting note to the Devils' speeding momentum is that they have been on the verge for some time. They played a tough series against Texas, who at the time was ranked No. 1, and played pretty even with all of their Six-Pac foes so far.

That is what makes this so sweet. Of all the teams to run over while on a win streak, the UA has no equal. On top of that, the Devils have moved in front of the 11th-ranked Wildcats in the conference standings for the first time this season.

Jim Brock said after the third victory that college baseball is an emotional and momentum-oriented sport. It certainly seems that way, and if anyone should know about such things, Both Brock and UA's Jerry Kindall should.

Let's hope that the Devils can continue to intimidate teams like they did this weekend. Who knows, maybe the national championship isn't completely out of the question.

Confidence. It looks as though the Devils are beginning to play with it. They came back from Tucson and put the Nebraska

Jim Brock

Cornhuskers into the dirt, which is certainly no small feat.

I don't know about anyone else, but I'm going to be working on my tan in Packard Stadium for the next month and a half. I can't think of a better place to do it, really.

ASU hitting, pitching key to team's streak

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

ASU's baseball team has hit 15 home runs in its last four games, but it was the Sun Devil pitching that took center stage Tuesday night.

Scott Hutson and Tony Harris combined on a six-hitter to boost the red-hot Sun Devils past 21st-ranked Nebraska, 6-3, Tuesday at Packard Stadium.

The victory — in the first of a two-game series with the Cornhuskers — was the eighth in a row for 25th-ranked ASU (17-13).

The Devils and Cornhuskers concluded the series Wednesday night at Packard Stadium; score unavailable at press time.

Hutson, (2-3) pitched eight-plus innings for the Devils, allowing only six hits, while walking three and striking out 10.

Entering the game, Hutson — who played ball at Mesa Mountain View High School and Mesa Community College before transferring in the fall — had an ERA of 5.57 in 21 innings pitched.

ASU coach Jim Brock said he was pleased with the success Hutson had with a good Cornhusker team.

"We've made some massive mechanical changes with him (Hutson)," Brock said. "At this point, it appears they're a success."

After Ron Crowe walked and Jeff Taylor doubled to lead off the ninth inning, Brock brought in Harris to nail down the game.

Harris — who has been the Devils best short-reliever the past few weeks — retired the three men he faced, striking out two, to earn his first save.

ASU continued its home run barrage, hitting two on the evening.

On Monday, the Devils crushed a school-record seven homers in a 15-4 rout of archrival Arizona in Tucson.

Trailing 1-0 in the bottom of the second with two out, Tim Spehr — who has now reached base in nine consecutive trips to the plate — was hit by a pitch.

Then 5-foot-6 second baseman Tim Esmay muscled a two-run homer over the left-field fence to give the Devils a 2-1 lead. The dinger was Esmay's first of the year, and the second of his Sun Devil career.

After Tim Pettengill's double tied the game during the top of the fourth, the Devils came back and scored four runs in the bottom of the inning.

Ted Dyson — who had two homers in the weekend series against the Cats — led off the inning with his fifth homer of the season.

Sluggo Tony Mattia then doubled to right field and Martin Peralta followed by reaching first on an infield single, moving Mattia to third.

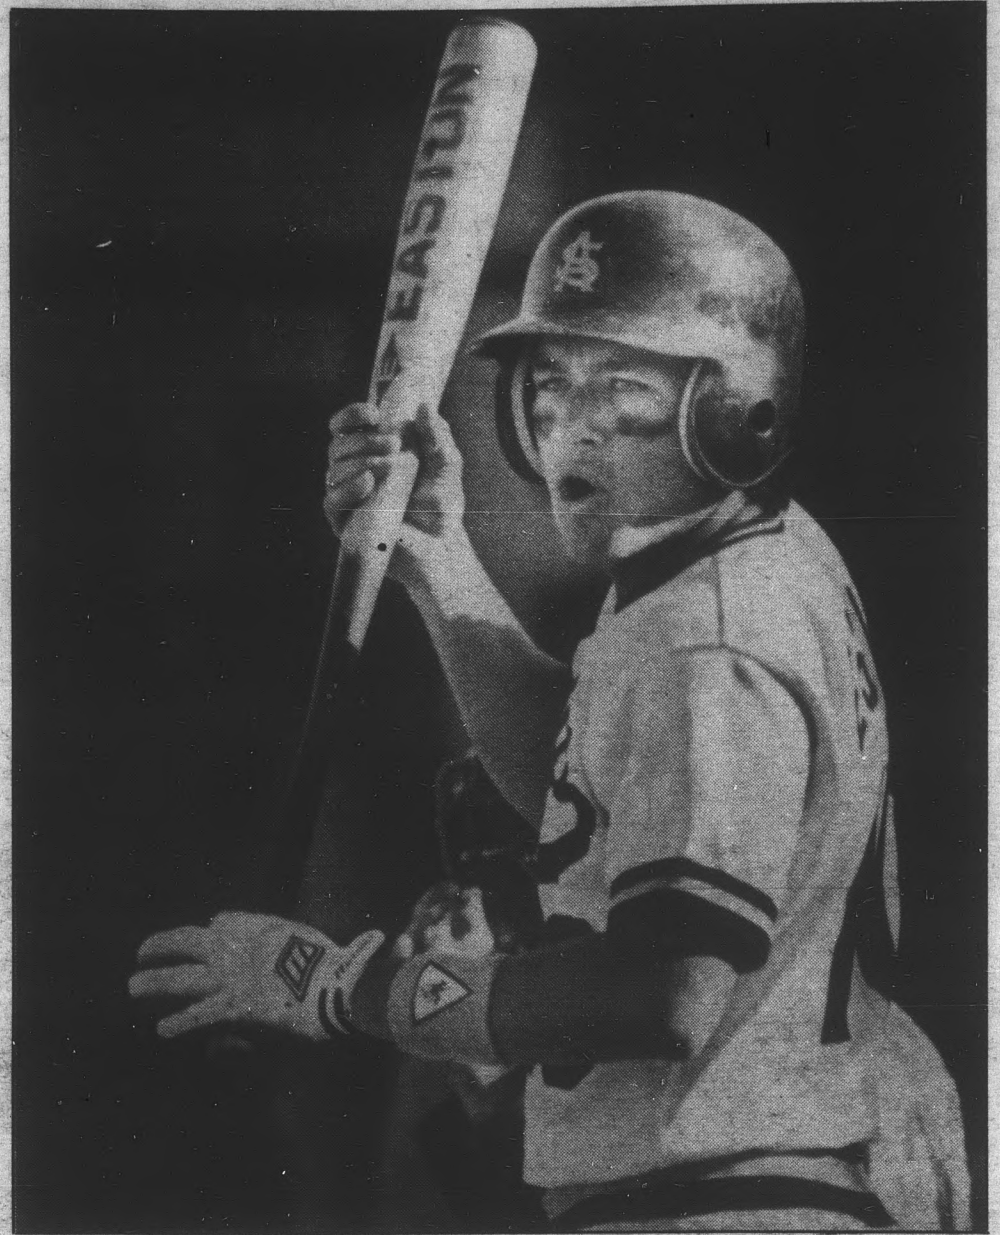

Then Tim Spehr's ground ball went right through second baseman Bruce Wobken's legs, scoring Mattia and sending Peralta to second.

The Devils scored two more runs during the inning on singles by Bob Dombrowski, John Finn and Dan Rumsey.

The Devils resume Pacific-10 Conference Southern Division (Six-Pac) play Friday as ASU travels to Palo Alto, Calif. for a weekend series against the Stanford Cardinal.

In Six-Pac play Tuesday, Arizona swept two games of a doubleheader, defeating Linfield College, 4-1, and Utah, 12-1.

UCLA remains in first place in the Six-Pac with an 11-4 record. The Cardinal occupies the second spot at 5-2, followed by USC (6-6), ASU (4-5), Arizona (6-9) and California (2-8).

Ron Kuczek Jr./State Press
Senior second baseman Tim Esmay, taking batting signals from the third-base coach, hit his first home run of the season and second of his ASU career Tuesday night against Nebraska. ASU beat Nebraska.

Greg Norman prepares for Tournament Players

By The Associated Press

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. — Since Jan. 1, Greg Norman has won the Australia Masters and played in four PGA Tour events in the United States.

Norman, however, said the $1 million Tournament Players Championship "is the real start of my American schedule."

"The rest of it was just a lot of running around," the current British Open champion said Wednesday before a practice session for the touring players own championship.

"I had a nice little break last week. The first time since before Christmas I've been at home for four days in a row."

"Now I'm ready to get back to it. I'll play as much as I can between now and September, get my concentration back in focus, get my game back in tournament shape."

Norman, who led both the American and Australia tours in money-winnings and took 10 international titles last season, has a third and a fifth place finish as his best performances in the United States this year.

He compared the Tournament Players Club course at Sawgrass with historic St. Andrews in Scotland.

"The first time I played St. Andrews, I didn't like it. The more I played it, the better I liked it. This course is the same."

Norman, who acquired more than $1.2 million in worldwide earnings last year, is part of a 144-man field that ranks as the strongest of the season.

The only figure of any consequence who is missing is Mac O'Grady, winner of the Tournament of Champions earlier this season. O'Grady withdrew because of the illness of his wife.

Among the major challengers for the $180,000 first prize are U.S. Open winner Ray Floyd, PGA titleholder Bob Tway, defending champion John Mahaffey and Jack Nicklaus, who made a last-minute decision to add this event to his reduced playing schedule.

Other leading players include Payne Stewart, Ben Crenshaw, Fuzzy Zoeller, Tom Kite, Lanny Wadkins, Lee Trevino, Ben Crenshaw and Corey Pavin, already the winner of two 1987 titles.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain, who received a special invitation as the leading player on the European tour, heads a foreign field that also includes Bernhard Langer of West Germany, Sandy Lyle of Scotland and Tommy Nakajima of Japan.

Clark hopes to land job with Cleveland Indians

By The Associated Press

TUCSON — Outfielder Dave Clark figures he has one big advantage in his fight for a spot on the Cleveland Indians' roster: He hits left-handed.

"The only left-handed power hitter they have here is Mel Hall," Clark said. "Sometimes late in the game, that's what you might need, and I think I can generate a little power."

Clark, 24, made a brief trip to the major leagues with Cleveland late last season, appearing in 18 games and hitting three home runs in 58 at bats. He also hit safely in 13 of the 18 games, finishing with a .276 average.

At Class AAA Maine, he hit .279 with 19 homers and 58 RBI in 106 games last season. In 1985 at Class AA Waterbury, he hit .302 with 12 homers and 64 RBI.

Clark's chances of going north with the Indians depend largely on whether Manager Pat Corrales decides to keep an extra outfielder or a utility infielder.

Corrales appears to be leaning toward using versatile right fielder Cory Snyder as his backup infielder, which would open a spot for Clark on the roster.

Clark says he has been a regular throughout most of his career, so sitting on the bench and waiting to be called upon as a pinch-hitter would require some adjustment.

"All the years I've been playing, I've been a starter," he said. "Last year, I got hurt a little and so for a while I was a designated hitter. DH'ing is not that bad as long as you're doing it the whole game. If I'm playing or DH'ing the whole game, I'm into the game."

"Pinch-hitting would be kind of hard, getting ready for maybe one at bat a game."

Clark, who was the Indians' No. 1 selection in the June 1983 draft, admits that his bat, and not his glove, will earn him a job in the major leagues. But he thinks he can handle the outfield adequately.

"I know I still need to work on it, because in the past I think that has slowed me down a little bit," he said. "But I get to the ball that's routine and sometimes I can make the good play. I try not to worry about it, because it's never really been a problem."

Southern Mississippi, 22-11, will face La Salle, 20-12, in tonight's title game while Arkansas-Little Rock, 26-10 after losing 92-73 to La Salle in Tuesday's other semifinal, meets Nebraska, 20-12, for third place.

Nebraska led 60-58 before White started the decisive spurt with a 3-point goal that gave Southern Mississippi the lead for good with 7:17 remaining. Keys followed with a rebound basket and free throw with 6:06 left and went on to score seven points in the run that gave the Golden Eagles a 73-62 lead with 2:58 remaining.

Derrick Vic paced Nebraska with 19 while Bernard Day and Anthony Bailous had 14 each.

RENEWALS. If you wish to renew your current parking assignments, (e.g., if you are currently parking in Structure #1 and wish to remain in Structure #1 during 1987-88), please submit a completed application form during the renewal period. For your convenience, you may come in person either to the Parking Services Office at the Campus Inn or Room 212 at the MU, or you may mail your completed application to Parking and Transit. IN ORDER TO RETAIN YOUR CURRENT ASSIGNMENT, YOU MUST RENEW YOUR DECALS BY 4:30 P.M., MARCH 27, 1987.

A separate application period for this purpose will begin at 8:30 a.m. on April 6, 1987, and end at 4:30 p.m. on April 17, 1987. It will be held at the Parking Services Office, Campus Inn, Center Building, Room A101. Changes in current parking assignments will be made on a space available basis after all renewals have been processed, but before any new decal applications are taken. If you wish to change your current parking assignment, you CANNOT be guaranteed reassignment to your current lot even though you may list it as a 2nd or 3rd parking preference.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION. Before completing your application form, please review Attachments 1, 2, 3 and 4 for information concerning the 1987-88 parking decal fees, application processes, decal payment, and parking options.

Attachment 3, PARKING OPTIONS, contains important information for individuals who hold current decals for Lot 1, 9, 46 or 65.

As a reminder, if your department has or will have individuals who will not be on campus during the renewal period, please contact Parking and Transit at 965-6124, to discuss how they may obtain a decal for the next year.

Departments paying for decals by IDR (Interdepartmental Requisition) must present all associated paper work for processing at the Parking and Transit Office, Campus Inn, Center Building, Room A101.
