

Corbin named as candidate for FBI top job

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Arizona Attorney General Bob Corbin is being considered for the post of FBI director and could be one of the five finalists.

Corbin, who has served as state attorney general since 1979, said Friday he was nominated for the post by Arizona Rep. George Weisz, R-Phoenix. Weisz said he received word that Corbin is one of five finalists.

"It would be quite an honor," Corbin said. "I love law enforcement."

Corbin said it probably will be June — when current FBI Director William Webster takes the helm of the CIA — before he hears if he has been chosen.

The White House could not confirm Corbin's candidacy. A White House spokesman said the selection process is a personnel matter and names of candidates cannot be released.

Corbin, 58, said he was "very surprised" he had been nominated for the post but would happily accept the job.

"It wasn't something that I asked for," he said. "I've even heard I was in the final five, but that's just hearsay."

"This isn't something I asked for. Some other people put me in."

Weisz said he nominated Corbin because "he's the best person for the job probably in the country."

"We are not sure about the others," he said. "We heard he's in the top five, but you never know what to believe out of Washington."

He said Corbin, a Republican, has a national reputation for cracking down on organized crime and strengthening laws that allow law enforcement to seize funds of convicted mobsters.

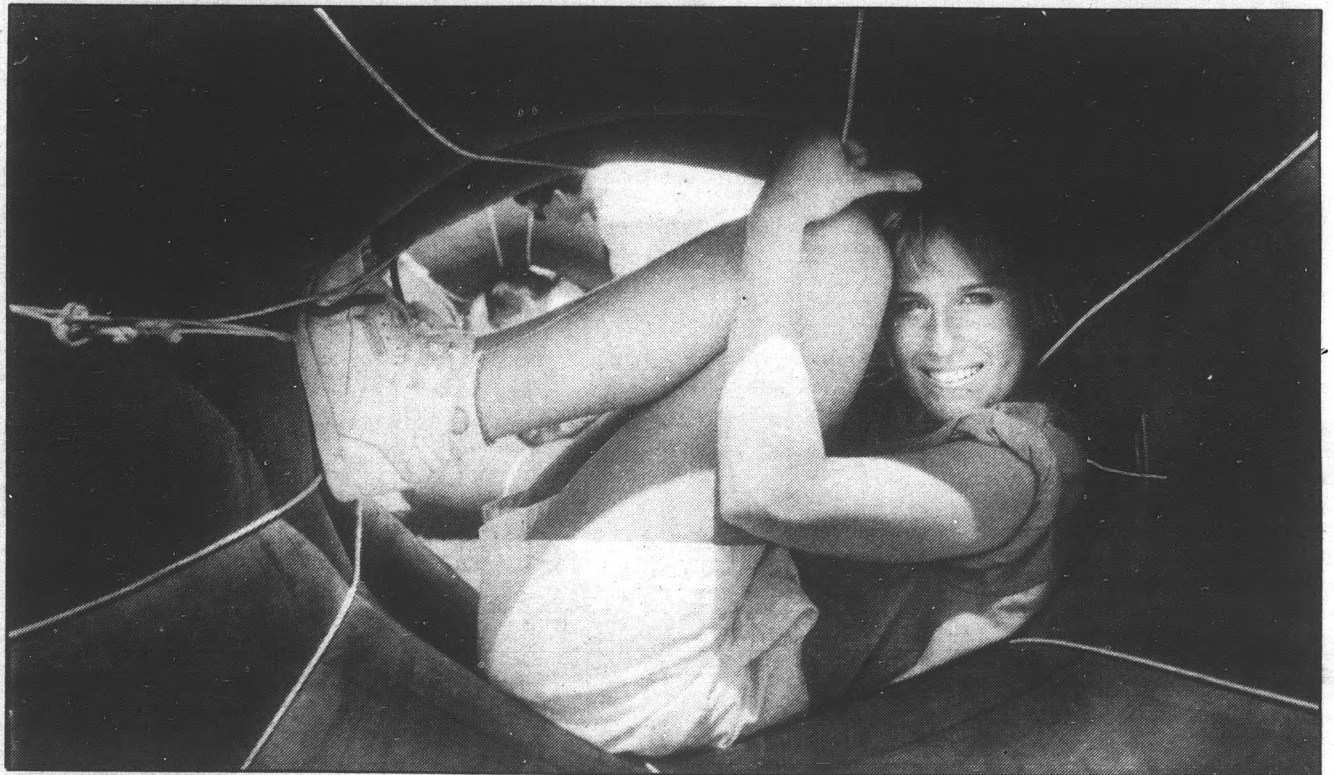

"He's probably one of the most honest elected officials in the United States today," Weisz said. "Both sides support him, Republicans and Democrats, and that's the kind of support you need."

Weisz, who worked as a special agent in the state attorney general's office with Corbin for 10 years, said Corbin also has received national attention for special investigations into hazardous waste dumping.

Corbin's participation in a national commission of attorney generals that acts as an advisory council for the U.S. Department of Justice also has gained him notice, Weisz said.

Arizona Sen. Dennis DeConcini, a Democrat, also had been considered as a possible candidate but was reportedly dropped from the list.

Jamie Ridge, assistant press secretary for DeConcini, said the senator's office received word that White House Chief of Staff James Baker still is considering DeConcini but has not received word on other candidates.

Regent calls for $5 registration fee to boost new financial aid program

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

In an attempt to raise money for a new financial aid program, all state university students could be forced to pay an additional $5 registration fee each semester, an Arizona Board of Regents member said.

Regent Donald Pitt said he intends to make a proposal at the April regents' meeting that would generate about $1 million a year for loans and grants by charging all spring, fall and summer students $5 on top of their tuition fees.

Pitt, who has been working on the plan since last semester, said he will ask the Arizona Legislature and private companies to match the student funds with their own donations.

"Over a period of years we will have a significant fund of money available to students who need financial aid," he said. "We'll be able to provide access for those who need help and do it in a painless way."

The loans and grants would be available for both in-state and out-of-state students and should offset increasing tuition, Pitt said.

At a 7 percent interest rate, he said the loans would generate about $60 million in 20 years for additional student aid.

Pitt said $10 a year is not much to ask, adding, "I can't think of any student who wouldn't want to help other students."

If the regents approve Pitt's proposal, students could be paying the additional $5 by spring 1988.

Currently, Arizona is one of the few states in the country that does not have a state-supported financial aid program.

But the state does match the funds of a federal grant program that produces about $2.5 million for more than 3,500 students.

"Pitt's program is a step in the right direction," said Paul Barberini, ASU director of student financial assistance. "Federal grants are small and getting smaller. We need a state program."

Associated Students President Chris Cummiskey said: "Students at this point all have a commitment to higher education. If it means $10 to help a needy student, I don't think the students will mind."

When Pitt first began work on his plan, he intended that the money only be used for loans instead of grants.

After meeting with members of the Arizona Students Association, Pitt expanded the plan to include grants.

"There are plenty of loans available for students," Cummiskey said. "What we really need are more grants."

"If we increase tuition we must have more financial aid," he said.

Mecham proposes more money for universities

PHOENIX — Gov. Evan Mecham has revised his 1988 budget plan and is recommending that Arizona's three universities get $18 million more than he originally suggested.

In a Friday press conference that abruptly ended when reporters refused to cooperate with Mecham's new rule that they raise their hands before being acknowledged, Mecham said he also is dropping plans to repeal the 1-cent temporary sales tax.

The tax brings in more than $250 million each year.

Mecham said the new approach is part of his compromise with legislators on his original $2.57 billion budget. Mecham's new plan provides an additional $25 million to state programs.

Lawmakers had proposed a $2.62 billion plan.

"Cooperation and negotiation always get more accomplished than confrontation," Mecham said. "That has always been my management style."

Mecham, joined with the four majority party leaders from the Legislature, also called on members of the Arizona Board of Regents and university officials to cease seeking bonding for constructions at ASU, NAU and UA.

ASU, which has issued $442.3 million in bonds, is requesting another $200 million from the Legislature this year.

The University also plans to finance $71.6 million in construction projects at ASU West by leasing the buildings and buying them back over several years.

Mecham said the universities still are faring better than most state agencies and will see an increase over the 1987 appropriation.

"We have never had a cut (in university budgets)," Mecham said. "We reduced their increases. We are giving them almost $20 million more than (1987)."

He said his revised budget plan does not compensate for disparities in funding between ASU and UA, and that the Legislature will have to make up for any funding inequities.

Mecham had suggested that ASU receive $178.6 million in funding and another $6.4 million for ASU West. UA would receive more than $235 million for the main campus and medical school and NAU would get $61 million.

ASU requested $214.8 million for 1988 and the Joint Legislative Budget Committee suggested the University receive $189.7 million.

Tempe police reported the following incidents ending noon Sunday:

•A 30-year-old Guadalupe man was arrested after leading Tempe police on a 50-mph chase that ended in Phoenix when the man smashed into a patrol car, police said.

Police said the pursuit began in the 2600 block of W. Fremont Drive when an officer tried to stop the man for driving his 1973 Chevrolet Chevelle without rear tail lights.

Police chased the man from the intersection of Fair Lane and Vineyard Road in Tempe to 4502 E. Nancy Lane in Phoenix.

The officer stopped behind the man's car and was getting out of his patrol car when the suspect put his car in reverse. The suspect smashed into the patrol car's door and rear end, police said.

The man then attempted to flee on foot but was caught. Police said the man was intoxicated.

Police said the man also was involved in a minor hit-and-run accident about 10 minutes prior to the chase.

The 34-year-old woman told police she was walking northbound in the 1400 block of S. Priest Drive when a man forced her into a four-door car with two other men.

She also told police one man removed some of her clothing and sat on her chest. She said an unknown aircraft flying overhead scared the men away.

Police said the woman swam across the river and walked to a convenience store where she called police.

Understanding among Jews, Arabs key to peace

It was a brisk spring evening in Jerusalem. I was walking around the Old City wall, not far from the Damascus Gate.

A Palestinian merchant was standing on a lonely street corner selling hot ears of corn. I asked how much they were.

"400 shekels," he replied.

Reasonable enough, but I only had 350 shekels on me.

"OK, so 350 shekels," he said.

I gave him the money; he gave an ear of corn. "Thank you," I said as I began to leave. "For nothing," he replied.

For nothing? As I walked away I wondered what he meant by that? Did he mean "thanks for nothing" — implying I was some sort of cheap Jew because I didn't have the 400 shekels?

But his tone of voice was not rude. I didn't think too much of the incident, other than to note how difficult it can be to communicate across cultures. How are we ever going to understand these people if an ordinary exchange like this causes so much confusion?

About once every semester, someone produces an excellent book on the Israel/Arab conflict which truly contributes to Arab and Jewish mutual understanding. Two recent books worth reading are "Arab and Jew" by David Shipler and "The Seed of Abraham" by Raphael Patai.

Shipler draws on his experience from 1979 to 1984 as Jerusalem bureau chief for the New York Times to describe Jewish-Arab relations within Israel and the West Bank. Patai, one of Israel's foremost scholars, draws from his broad knowledge of Jewish, Muslim and Arab history to present a panorama of Jewish-Arab relations from the time of Mohammed.

"Arab and Jew" was first recommended to me by my friend Mohammed Darawshe, a Palestinian peace activist. Darawshe, who has testified on the Palestinian issue before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is an expert on the Middle East in his own right, and he was impressed by Shipler's grasp of the subject.

"I couldn't believe it," he said. "I was reading this book on the Middle East by an American journalist, and the guy actually knew what he was talking about."

Writing with a deep empathy for both sides, but ignoring the failings of neither, Shipler captures the pain of the conflict. He understands the fear and anger of Jews living in the shadow of Palestinian terror; he also understands the frustration and anger of Palestinians living under occupation or as second-class citizens within Israel.

His thesis is that if Arabs and Jews can learn to understand the pain, anger, fear and frustration of the other, peace between the two peoples could be possible.

Shipler's hope for peace may seem facile, given the region's legacy of bloodshed. But his cautious optimism is supported by Patai's historical account of Jewish-Arab relations.

"The Seed of Abraham" recounts wonderful chapters of peace and friendship between the two peoples, as well as periods of Muslim intolerance. But overall, the history of Jews in Muslim lands contrasts happily with the grim history of Jews living in the shadow of European Christianity.

This should not be surprising. Jews and Arabs share much of the same language, history, religion and culture. Over the course of 14 centuries of co-existence, the two peoples for the most part have learned to live together peacefully. It's surprising, but true.

Not long ago, I was talking to an Israeli Jew who knows some Arabic. I told her about my encounter with the Palestinian.

She laughed and explained that in Arabic, the phrase "for nothing" means simply "you're welcome" — like we would say "it's nothing" in English.

I had thought I'd been insulted, when the Arab had only returned a simple courtesy.

I didn't know whether to be encouraged or discouraged by the incident. It seemed to suggest how very easy it could be for Arabs and Jews to overcome our mutual misunderstandings — and how very difficult.

Murphy confused on issues

Editor:

This letter is in response to the controversies surrounding Will Murphy and his candidacy for ASASU president.

I find it quite a contradiction that a person who wants to be in charge of ASASU is breaking all the rules. This all began a few weeks ago when Murphy came to campaign early. This clearly went against the election code and Murphy knew it.

In fact, he was quite proud of it.

Two weeks ago, he was bragging about how he intended to break the election spending limit set in the bylaws of ASASU. Anyone involved in campus politics knows there is good reason for the limit. Without such a limit, some candidates might spend thousands of dollars getting elected. The campaigns would be a race between pocketbooks rather than about campaign issues.

Commendations go out to fellow presidential candidate Ed Sullivan for filing a complaint against Murphy. In doing this, Sullivan has represented not only the other candidates, but also ASASU. I guess he understands a little about fairness, policy and the ASASU bylaws.

By causing so much controversy, Murphy has shifted the emphasis in the campaign away from the issues and onto the Murphy show. What do you stand for, Murphy? Breaking the rules? Anarchy? I hope that Murphy realizes that he has set a double standard for himself. He wants to break all the rules and then be president of the governing body that makes those rules. Do we students want him to be in charge of the order on this campus? A man who breaks fair, established policies for his own benefit? Thanks, Murphy, for giving us a look at what an administration headed by you would be like.

Thank you, Sullivan, for helping the student body realize just what an egomaniac Murphy is. Good luck, and if you're policies stand for fairness and following policy, I'll vote for you!

"#?!★! campaign signs

Editor:

This letter concerns the proliferation of election-related signs on campus. I am unsure as to what purpose these signs serve other than to indicate that the candidates have some extra money in their pockets and they like to see their names plastered all over campus.

I am especially intrigued by the signs that feature only a name and a title. I may be out of line here, but I thought that the use of a title was reserved to those who have already been elected to an office. The failure to use the preposition "for" is an indication of arrogance or perhaps overzealousness on the part of the candidates.

ASU is an institution of higher learning and one would hope that the potential electorate would not be swayed by such simplistic attempts at vote getting.

I can assure the candidates that I am concerned with what your qualifications are, what your goals are, and what plans you have to implement your goals. I will review your positions on the issue before I vote. I urge the candidates to concentrate on developing and communicating realistic and intelligent platforms, rather than spending their money on pretty signs that are, in reality, eyesores.

Apology wanted

Editor:

Your April Fool's Day edition, as many readers are aware, is a spoof. There is nothing wrong with that. However, some things are not appropriate for a spoof. I would list tragic suicides among these things. The "article" about the suicide of the former treasurer of Pennsylvania was tasteless. It was insensitive for the editorial staff to allow this piece to run. I believe an apology is in order.

Bakker knows a massage can rub one wrong way

Years ago, there was a movie called "Miss Sadie Thompson." By today's standards, it would be considered tame. But in its time, it was quite spicy.

It was about a pious preacher and his efforts to persuade a rather loose young woman to reform her wicked ways.

She didn't want to be reformed, since she thought she was having a good time. And the looser she got, the angrier the preacher became.

Finally, instead of reforming her, the preacher was overwhelmed by his own lusts and they... well, you can imagine what happened next, tsk, tsk.

The preacher was so overwhelmed by feelings of guilt that he walked slowly into the ocean, and that was the end of him.

At the time, it seemed like a logical way to end the movie. But now I can see that the movie preacher was a real square.

If he had been around today, he could have found a much less final solution to his problems.

For example, we have Jimmy Bakker, the TV preaching star, who recently confessed to having a romp with a young church secretary. But there's no walk in the ocean for him. At last report, he was resting in his home in luxurious Palm Springs, Calif. If he wanted to drown himself, he'd have to dive into a swimming pool or a golf course water hole.

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

But obviously he doesn't want to do something like that. If anything, he seems to be looking for a way to blame his now famous "encounter" on those who introduced him to the young woman, or on the woman herself.

A writer for a Pentacostal magazine recently spent a few days with Bakker and they discussed Bakker's sexual adventure. And the way the writer tells it, Bakker comes off like a naive, innocent, wide-eyed kid.

The writer says Bakker was "very surprised that this gal was able to perform the way she did. He described her as very professional for 21 years of age, (that) she knew all the tricks of the trade."

Well, for $250,000 in hush money, one would expect more than a routine performance. For that kind of dough, I would think that she should know tricks that Linda Lovelace hasn't thought of.

The sympathetic writer went on to say: "She just got hold of a Pentacostal preacher who didn't know how to handle it and it just devastated him. He felt terrible guilt. He was frightened and confused and ran back to Charlotte."

Charlotte, of course, is the city. Not some other church secretary.

I have some difficulty understanding why Bakker would have been so flustered by his experience. He was, after all, 40 years old at the time, and apparently he was knowledgeable enough about "the tricks of the trade" to recognize the tricks when the trickery was rattling the hotel furniture.

And it must have occurred to him that something might happen when a friend introduced him to the young woman, brought them together in a Florida hotel room and suggested that the young woman give Bakker — who was clad only in terry-cloth shorts — a back rub so he would be relaxed for a prayer meeting.

I put this question to any 40-year-old man who are reading this column:

If you were away from your wife and home, and a pal brought a good-looking young woman to your room and you were wearing only your skivvies, and she hopped up on your bed and started rubbing your back, would you think that she was there to hear you recite the Psalms?

A likely story. And I would also ask any 40-year-old man this question:

If you rushed home, brimming with guilt, and told your wife that you were surprised at what an innocent little back rub could lead to, do you think she would buy it?

Anyway, that seems to be Bakker's current version of how he was taken advantage of, the poor lamb. Maybe as more comes out, we'll find that she bound his hands and legs and stuck a gag in his mouth, so his cries for help couldn't be heard.

And if he should return to active preaching, I suggest that if he wants to relax before a prayer meeting, he should take a warm bath.

Skip that back rub.

Lead singer Paul "Bono" Hewson takes Saturday night's crowd at the University Activity Center back to 1981 with "Gloria" from U2's October LP.

Resilient

U2 bounces back with postponed concert

Back with a vengeance, Dublin's U2 rocked the University Activity Center Saturday night.

Lead singer Paul "Bono" Hewson's vocal problems during the opening show of U2's world tour Thursday night at the UAC prompted the group to postpone its Fri-Cay concert until Saturday.

"You're gonna have to help me out singing tonight," Bono told Thursday's crowd.

Although the Irish rocker could scarcely sing from what was later diagnosed as a swollen larynx, he more than made up for it with his relentless enthusiasm. And the near capacity crowd helped the singer through the rough spots of such classic U2 anthems as "Sunday Bloody Sunday" and "New Year's Day."

A little "R and R" seemed to have made all the difference Saturday for Bono, whose hoarseness was replaced by the passion and angst so exploited in U2's 1983 LP War.

The crowd sat on edge awaiting the much-talked-about concert and were relieved to hear the strength and conviction of Bono's mended strains in "Where the Streets Have No Name" and "I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For" from U2's latest album release The Joshua Tree on Island Records.

The spirit of the new were juxtaposed with a blast from the past: "Gloria," U2's second UK chart single from the 1981 October LP, and "I Will Follow" from 1980's Boy.

Returning to The Joshua Tree, U2's flare for drama played off the hypnotic "Bullet in the Blue Sky," wandering spotlights bathing the musicians in a sea of red.

Having last performed in the United States in 1985, the group commemorated its return with a reverent version of "A Sort of Homecoming" from The Unforgettable Fire.

With "Sunday Bloody Sunday's" driving anthemic lyrics, the collective voice of the UAC crowd could be heard distinctly behind Bono's heroic crooning and Larry Mullen's powerful drums. A tradition in recent U2 concert history, the band played Bob Dylan's "Maggie's Farm," quite a playful departure from U2's own moody lyrics.

Another standard, "Bad," followed, featuring rehearsed ad-lib of the Rolling

Todd Green/State Press

David "The Edge" Evans play a careening guitar in the opening number, "Where the Streets Have No Name," Saturday at the University Activity Center.

Stones' "Ruby Tuesday" and "Sympathy For the Devil" and Lou Reed's "Walk On the Wild Side." Bono's voice showed first signs of cracking on the song's aggressive chorus.

The Edge's roaring electric piano solo introduced a resounding "New Year's Day," U2's first top 10 hit in Britain.

The anniversary of the tragic death of Martin Luther King Jr., Saturday's show included a special dedication of "Pride (In the Name of Love)" to the slain civil rights leader. The band's political and religious orientation has become more than obvious to its Arizona fans. U2 donated a reported $5,000 to the Mecham Watchdog Committee for the recall of Gov. Evan Mecham, who rescinded the King holiday in Arizona.

Some fans also rallied around the cause with banners reading "Save Arizona, Recall Mecham" and "Bono For Governor."

The band slipped into its only encore with a moving follow-up, "M.L.K." Absent from Thursday's playlist, "With Or Without You" met with unparalleled excitement as the group's current popular single.

"People Get Ready" ended the honest concert, void of pomp and circumstance. The crowd sang and a fan played Bono's guitar as the band posed for the cover of Time magazine. "Now that we're a big band," Bono said, "they want us on the cover of Time."

Ain't it the truth.

Series shows musical genius ripens with age, director says

By CAROLYN NELSON
State Press

Like a fine wine, musical creativity improves with age, according to the director of ASU's aging studies program.

Robert Kastenbaum, a psychologist and gerontologist at ASU, has based a four-part series that will air on National Public Radio in the fall on musical genius throughout the aging process.

"I wanted to know why some people are creative their whole lives through (and) how other people manage to respark their creativity later in life," Kastenbaum said.

Kastenbaum said he spent more than a year studying letters and other accounts of classical composers as well as reviewing material he had accumulated in the course of his gerontology work. With technical advice from ASU music faculty members Robert Oldani and Chuck Marohnic, he was able to draw several parallels.

For instance, the last of the half-hour programs focuses on composers' final creative efforts, which are often the artists' greatest works.

Kastenbaum said many musicians compose a fugue to punctuate their lives.

"It's going to be a farewell to life," Kastenbaum said. "It's going to summarize what life means to them, it's going to be a gift to God if that's what the composer believes, and it's going to be a very significant work to the people that come after the composer."

Many artists try to catalog everything they know about music with their final works, Kastenbaum said. He also noted that composers tend to create their farewell pieces in a style drastically different than their previous compositions.

"In their old age, they did something they hadn't quite done before," he said. "It was an expression of themselves and their talent."

"In spite of everything they had suffered and all their doubts about the world, they found a kind of love in creativity and just had to express themselves."

Kastenbaum also investigated the settings in which musicians composed their works — traumatic experiences and social conditions.

He said he believes the most important factors of creativity in a composer's later years is a history of creative expression and someone to encourage the creativity.

"One of the things that comes out in the series is how important it is to have at least one person who is sort of an intimate companion who appreciates and supports (composers)," Kastenbaum said.

Although the series ties in directly with Kastenbaum's aging studies, he said he never had put together his information on creativity in later years.

He said he originally proposed the idea of the series during a conference on creativity. The conference stemmed from the efforts of Connie Goldman, who would become a producer for National Public Radio.

"One of the stipulations of the series' $80,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities was that the programs be educational and informative.

However, Kastenbaum said, he made the series as entertaining as possible.

"It's not a lecture," he said. "I used a lot of anecdotes in the scripts."

The programs also involve some dramatization and clearly imaginary situations, he said.

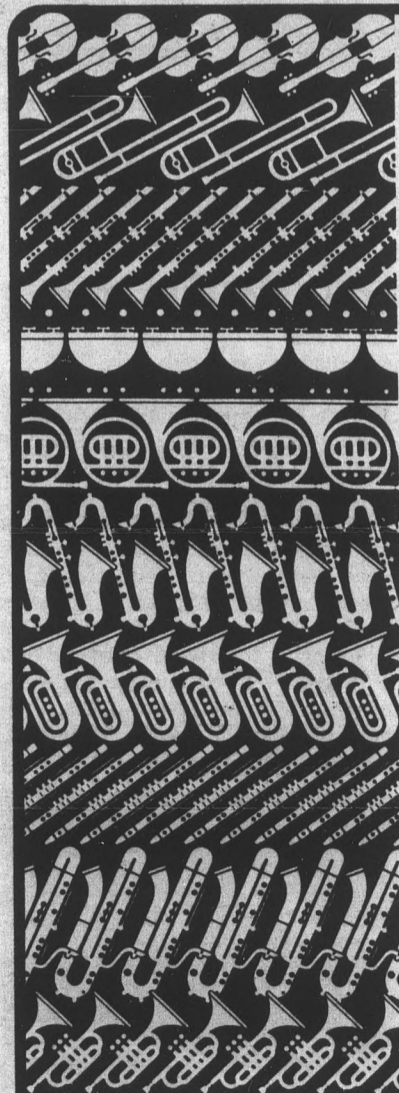

"One thing that I scrapped was a scene where I had (Giuseppe) Verdi on an old, creaky bus with some black jazz musicians. They were talking about leading a hard, arduous life.

"It was one of the funnier scenes and the head of the Verdi institute thought it was great, but I wanted to get the series funded, so I scrapped it," he said.

Kastenbaum originally had intended to include jazz performers in the series and had conducted some research on jazz.

He said he decided to narrow the series to classical composers, but he holds the door open for a possible follow-up series on jazz and perhaps even rock 'n' roll musicians.

"With some of the rock performers getting on in their lives, it would be interesting to study their creativity," he said.

Osmond dedicates cabin to cemetery

By The Associated Press
OMAHA, Neb. — Marie Osmond helped dedicate a replica log cabin at a Mormon Cemetery, saying she felt she represented a part of the heritage of Mormons who settled there.

Osmond, a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, on Thursday cut the ribbon to the cabin, a replica of the more than 1,000 Mormon cabins that lined the Missouri River from 1846 to 1848, including those that made up the Winter Quarters here.

"I remember visiting the Winter Quarters with my family when I was about 15," said Osmond, in Omaha for a series of performances. "It makes you think about the people, their hardships, frustrations and sacrifices to seek a place to worship the Heavenly Father in peace and freedom."

Osmond said her ancestors did not come through the Omaha Winter Quarters area.

"They went up and through Wyoming and Idaho, but I know many people whose ancestors did come through here," she said. "I'm here because I think I represent a part of the heritage of the Mormons who settled here."

Our Constitution was born out of a cacophony of competing voices.

But today the freedom of speech that remains the hallmark of our Constitution may be threatened.

The NAAAF Essay Contest is designed to emphasize the importance of free speech and open debate in a vital area.

In his best-selling book, They Dare to Speak Out: People and Institutions Confront Israel's Lobby, former Congressman Paul Findley sounds an alarm: "It is clear that many Americans do not feel they can speak freely on one of the most complicated and challenging current issues: The Arab-Israeli dispute."

Is he right? What do you think?

Full time college and university students are invited to submit a critical essay of 2,500 words or less on the subject "The Development of American Middle East Policy: Is Free Speech Threatened?"

There will be 200 regional winners of $1,000 each and 10 national winners of an additional $4,000 each.

The contest is sponsored by the NAAA Foundation, a charitable organization which carries out educational programs on Middle East subjects.

Television commentator Tom Braden serves as Honorary Chairman of the Selection Committee. Distinguished columnist Carl Rowan is Awards Chairman.

As the weather begins to warm up in Tempe, so does ASU first baseman Ted Dyson.

Dyson's three-run home run in the sixth inning and the yeoman effort of reliever Tony Harris powered ASU to a 10-7 victory over California Sunday at Packard Stadium, giving the Devils a three-game sweep of the Pacific-10 Conference foes.

ASU won Saturday's contest, 8-1, and Friday's game, 7-1.

With the series sweep, ASU (21-18, 7-8 in the Six-Pac) moved ahead of Arizona into fourth place in the Six-Pac standings.

California, mired in the Six-Pac cellar, dropped to 22-18 and 2-11 in Six-Pac competition.

Harris (2-0) was brought on during the fifth inning to relieve Matt Shiflett and David Cassidy. After ending a fifth inning rally with a fielder's choice, Harris retired 13 of the 14 batters he faced.

"You could tell right from the very first that he (Harris) was going to throw well today," ASU head coach Jim Brock said. "We got the runs and he was just in total command."

Harris struck out the side in the sixth and, with the Devils trailing 7-6, Brock said the event changed the momentum and woke up the team, not to mention the 1,462 that enjoyed the Sunday matinee.

"At that point, we knew if we could get the runs — we could win," Brock said, "It picked up the team."

With two out in the bottom of the sixth, Mike Benjamin and Steve Marriucci walked, and Dyson followed with his homer onto Scottsdale Road, giving ASU a 9-7 lead and the eventual victory.

Dyson, who is recovering from a broken hand he suffered earlier this season, hit his third homer in four games Sunday. Dyson hit grand slam homers on Thursday against U.S. International, and in Friday's opener with the Golden Bears.

"(Dyson) is swinging awfully well now," Brock said.

"You can't swing the bat any better than he did today."

Dyson attributed his recent success to the other hitters in the lineup.

"I'm getting good pitches to hit with Mattia and Rumsey following me," Dyson said. "The doctor said it would take six to eight weeks for my hand to heal. It's been eight weeks now so he was right in there."

Mike Benjamin scored four times and he and Dan Rumsey smashed homers for ASU.

Linty Ingram pitched a complete game Saturday as the Devils tamed the Bears, 8-1.

Ingram (5-4) allowed only five hits and three walks, while striking out eight.

On Friday, Mike Schwabe pitched his third complete game in a 7-1 Sun Devil victory. Schwabe (4-4) scattered eight hits and struck out five.

ASU is off until Tuesday when the team travels to Phoenix to take on Grand Canyon College at 7 p.m. at Brazell Field.

11-year-old record snapped by Parker

Staff and Wire Reports

ASU hurdler Andrew Parker broke an 11-year-old school record with a time of 13.51 seconds in the men's 110-meter high hurdles to highlight Saturday night's eighth annual Sun Angel Track and Field Classic.

Parker, a junior, bettered Carl Burl's school record by .06 and also set a record for his native Jamaica while topping his previous personal best by sixteen-hundredths of a second.

"My first time here two years ago, I should have won the race but I choked," Parker said. "Last year, I came in third place. So this year, I really wanted to win."

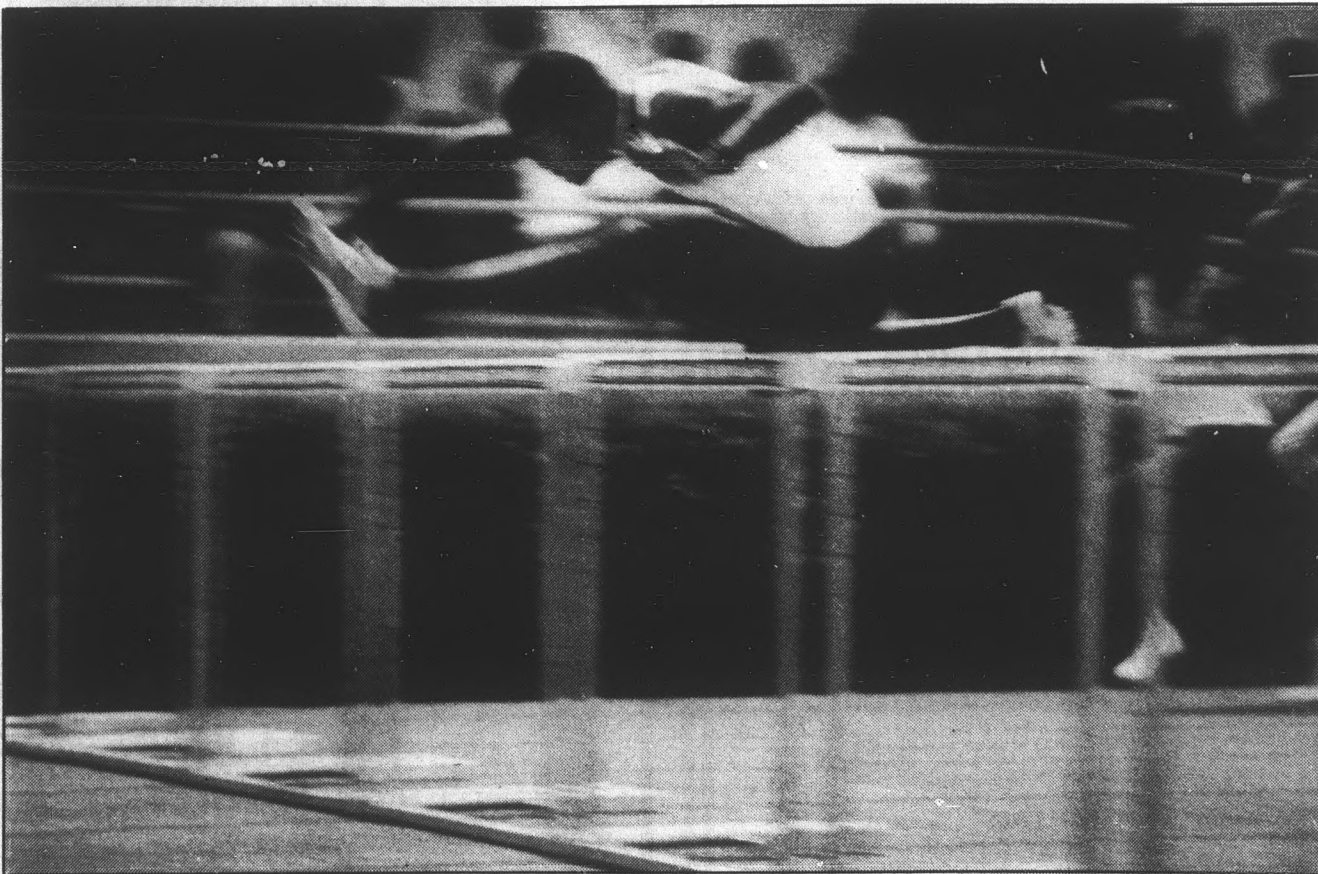

Parker's time was shy of Sam Turner's meet record of 13.41 seconds, but he easily surpassed the NCAA qualifying mark of 13.88 in only his second outdoor performance of the season.

Meanwhile, three Sun Angel Stadium and meet records were equaled or broken in Saturday night's event.

Sylvia Mosqueda of Cal State-Los Angeles broke the women's 5,000-meter mark held by ASU's Lynn Nelson (16:25.05) with a time of 16:04.26.

NAU's Angela Chambers, the NCAA cross country champion, won the women's 1,500-meters in a meet and stadium record of 4:16.81.

University of California's John Morris and Lee Balkin, who were competing unattached, both equaled the meet and stadium record in the men's high jump at 7-feet-4½-inches.

Ron Kuczek Jr./State Press

ASU All-America Andrew Parker was only a blur while breaking the 110-meter hurdles record Saturday night during a windy Sun Angel Classic at Sun Angel Stadium. Parker broke the 11-year-old school record and with a time of 13.51.

Sugar Ray

The eyes have it: The snail darter is definitely extinct

The world of professional boxing is perhaps the most confusing sphere of sports.

Tonight in Las Vegas, a fight will occur that should have occurred years ago. It will pit a man who once had hands faster than a snail darter against the champion of the world, a man I would vote most likely to drop a pachyderm with a right cross.

But then, snail darters are almost extinct and you don't run into too many pachyderms that have much of a right cross.

Anyway, there are several fascinating questions and apparent anomalies that characterize this bout. First of all, if Marvin Hagler is the world champion, which he is, then why doesn't Ray Leonard become the champion if he pummels him? The World Boxing Federation, or Association, or whatever it is, has proclaimed that should Leonard win, they would declare the title vacant.

Now if they didn't want to give Leonard a shot at the title, they shouldn't be sanctioning the fight. But boxing fans have become used to the absurdities of the sports "governing bodies," so they figure they can get away with just about anything.

Perhaps (dare I say it?) the world of sports is needlessly encumbered by the existence of such "governing bodies." Maybe a good Republican boxing fan should run for president of the "body," pledging to limit government interference in the everyday lives of boxers and fans.

Or maybe not.

But wait — that's not all. There are still more burning questions to be answered about this bout.

Leonard has fought twice in the last 64 months. His ocular difficulties are well-documented, and a significant percentage of people dying to see this fight are probably secretly hoping to see a Terminator-like vitreous humor scene. But the doctors say that a retina re-attached with laser surgery is "stronger than new," and that Sugar Ray has nothing to lay awake staring at the ceiling over.

However, if they're wrong, he may soon have nothing to lay awake staring at the ceiling with.

So why does a guy who has only fought twice in over five years take a shot at becoming Stevie Wonder just to come back and fight a champion who will probably snuff him and who, even if he wins, will not have to relinquish the title to him?

Two reasons: vanity and bucks.

We've seen this all before. Leonard is just the latest in a long line of guys who make big mistakes in the pursuit of glory. He's going into the ring with a man who would have given him trouble in his prime, before the snail darter was endangered. And he's probably going to come out horizontally.

But even if he doesn't, what has he gained? Even if he gives Hagler a good fight, even if he would pull off an upset, what would he have that he didn't have before?

There was a time when Leonard was America's sweetheart. He made a really bad movie with Jayne Kennedy because his fans couldn't get enough of him.

When he stepped out of the ring the first time, those fans respected him for it. Each time he tries to return, he squanders some more of that respect and admiration. Far from making his mark on history, which is presumably what he believes he is doing, he is dissipating the legend that already exists.

Of course, he's going to make at least $11 million for that operation, which is enough to make anyone think twice. But it's hard to believe that Leonard could possibly need the money.

On the other hand, it's easy to believe that he needs the ego boost. Unfortunately, most men's egos don't thrive when they're flat on their backs.

Maybe when Leonard is waking up to the acrid smell of ammonia, he'll know what mistake he's made.

Baseball year starts outside US for 1st time

By The Associated Press

Toronto's Jimmy Key is scheduled to throw the first pitch of the 1987 baseball season Monday, the first time Opening Day has started outside the United States.

Tim Raines, Bob Horner, Rich Gedman and Ron Guidry, all of them unsigned free agents, are among the missing as the season begins. There still was a question of whether major-league umpires would work or go on strike as contract talks continued Sunday.

Rain and temperature in the mid-40s are forecast at Exhibition Stadium, where the Blue Jays entertain the Cleveland Indians and Tom Candiotti at 12:35 p.m. EDT. A crowd of more than 30,000 is expected to watch the two American League East challengers.

About 90 minutes later, the traditional National League opener at Cincinnati will feature the Montreal Expos and Floyd Youmans against the Reds and Tom Browning.

The Reds game used to be the first game to start, leading a Cincinnati councilman who was so upset about Toronto's opener that he wrote a letter of complaint to Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and Secretary of State George Schultz.

In other AL openers Monday, New York, with Dennis Rasmussen, will be at Detroit, with Jack Morris; Texas, with Charlie Hough, will play at Baltimore, with Mike Boddicker; Chicago, with Rich Dotson, will be at Kansas City, with Danny Jackson, and Boston, with Bob Stanley, will play at Milwaukee, with Teddy Higuera.

In the NL, San Diego, with Eric Show, will play at San Francisco, with Mike Krukow, and Los Angeles, with Orel Hershiser, will face Houston and Mike Scott.

Reliever-turned-starter Stanley will pitch for Boston in place of Roger Clemens. Clemens, the 1986 AL Most Valuable Player and Cy Young Award winner, ended a 29-day holdout Saturday.

At the Astrodome, NL Cy Young winner Scott will be trying to repeat last season's performance, when he went 18-10 and led the majors with a 2.22 earned run average and 306 strikeouts.

Hershiser, coming off a 14-14 season in which he got little run support, and the Dodgers are hoping that Pedro Guerrero, Mike Marshall, Bill Madlock and Mike Scioscia have recovered from injuries.

Gymnasts finish 2nd in Pac-10; 3 probable qualifiers for NCAAs

By CAROL BOOS
State Press

After placing all its chips on the table, the ASU men's gymnastics team found that a few aces can't make you rich.

Top performances from senior Jerry Burrell, sophomore Paul Linne and sophomore Moses Dungca at this weekend's Pac-10 championship was good enough to likely advance the three to the NCAA Championships, but the team will probably stay home.

NCAA rules allow the top 10 teams in the nation to advance to the finals as well as the top three individuals from schools that have not qualified.

Championship qualifiers will be officially announced next week.

Out of 11 teams, the Sun Devils tied with No. 1-ranked UCLA for fourth place in the championship with a 279.80, behind first place finisher New Mexico with a 282.4, Cal State-Fullerton with a 282.05 and University of California-Berkeley with a 280.0. Stanford was next with a 278.30.

They wanted the jackpot: They wanted to go to the NCAA championships as a team. They won't.

However, the score gives the Sun Devils a second place finish in the conference, a hard finish for the defending national champions. But a finish that they are content with.

"I think we are real happy with the way things turned out," assistant coach Scott Barclay said. "To finish off with a meet like this is real exciting."

"It was our best meet ever," he added. "They finally put it together. If we had done this well all year, we would have qualified easily."

But they weren't consistent this season. It was a rollercoaster year for the inexperienced team.

Burrell tied for first place on the floor exercise with New Mexico's Chad Fox at 9.80, and Dungca tied for third with Brad Johnson of Cal State-Fullerton and Cal-Berkeley's Bob Sundstrom at 9.70.

And as expected, Linne captured first place on the high bar with a 9.8.

In the vaulting competition, Sundstrom finished first with a
