ASU might lease stadium if offered 7-year contract

By MARISSA HALLARE
State Press

ASU officials say they would be willing to lease Sun Devil Stadium to an NFL franchise, provided the NFL accepts a minimum seven-year lease while a domed stadium is being built in downtown Phoenix.

But ASU Athletic Director Charles Harris said the University will not agree to lease the stadium to any professional football team unless a long-term lease is signed.

Pat Manion, assistant to Phoenix Mayor Terry Goddard, said the possibility of professional sports coming to the Valley could be jeopardized if ASU officials are uncooperative in lease negotiations.

"We simply want to protect the interest of our own program," Harris said. "If a professional team comes here and takes away our season ticket holders, the University's income goes down and puts our sports program at a risk, and we're not going to do that."

Harris said the condition of a seven-year lease would protect the financial interest of ASU's athletic department, and ASU probably would not have to go to the Arizona Legislature or Board of Regents for financial assistance if the athletic department begins losing money.

But Manion said, "The Board of Regents must explain to the public if they decide to deny the NFL access to lease the Sun Devil Stadium."

"The public would want to know why this is happening since Phoenix would be without an NFL team."

But in order for a privately owned NFL franchise to be successful in leasing Sun Devil Stadium, Manion said football and baseball must be combined, which the stadium would not be able to do.

"ASU's stadium doesn't have the field capacity to accommodate baseball," he said.

Another factor for the successful use of ASU's stadium is comfort, Manion said.

"Sun Devil Stadium does not have weather control like a domed stadium does. This could be a contributing factor to sports fans' comfort."

Manion said the Phoenix City Council has agreed to work with the Phoenix Stadium Development Group consisting of Martin Stone, owner of the Class AAA Phoenix Firebirds professional baseball team, and William Hatch, president of Metropolitan Structures West.

"If Phoenix agrees to initially pay $8 million for water and sewer lines and buy $40 to $60 million for the stadium's land, the joint venture of Stone and Hatch will agree to construct the domed stadium," Manion said.

The development group will eventually pay Phoenix back for the initial costs, "But the city will provide assistance contingent on Phoenix' chances on receiving an NFL franchise," Manion said.

"Professional sports should be elsewhere," he said. "Professional and college sports are not a good match."

Manion adds that the city does not want to disrupt ASU's athletic department in any way.

John Colbrunn, the executive vice president of the NFL Expansion Group, said the crowd's reaction at the NFL exhibition game played Sept. 15 at Sun Devil Stadium was positive.

Change in student season ticket sales slated for next year

By TWYLA PUMROY
State Press

Next time around, buying Sun Devil football season tickets should not be a 15-hour chore; it will be incorporated into the registration process, ASU officials said Thursday.

An estimated 5,000 students stood in line for up to 15 hours in stifling heat Wednesday to purchase season tickets for the 1987 Rose Bowl champions home games.

Bob Bontrager, ASU assistant registrar, said a new registration form is in the works that will allow students to pre-purchase season tickets just by checking a box on the form.

The form will also include a box to prepay for The Spark, ASU's yearbook.

Dianne Yeager, ASU athletic ticket manager, said she hopes to see the changes implemented by spring 1988.

"We've had a policy change in the works for about a year now," Yeager said. "You will still have to be a full-time student and you will have to pay at the time that you register."

But ticket buying this year was not that easy. For the first time in ASU history, Sun Devil tickets are likely to sell out before the first game, leaving none available for gate sales, Yeager said.

The ticket office handed out vouchers to students standing in line Wednesday and if all vouchers are redeemed, no tickets will be available for sale. Students holding vouchers must redeem them by 5 p.m. Friday Yeager said.

She added if all vouchers are not redeemed, leftover tickets will go on sale at 8 a.m. Monday.

From the 70,000 available stadium seats, a small percentage go to the visiting team. If the visiting team returns part of their allotment, those tickets become available to the public, Yeager said.

"Nebraska and U of A have already said they will be keeping theirs," Yeager said.

ASU settles dispute over Gammage

From staff and wire reports

ASU will receive a $70,000 settlement in a two-year dispute with the bonding company responsible for outdoor paneling repairs at Gammage Center.

The University settled with Statewide Insurance Co. of Illinois, insurer for the now-disbanded Empire I Machinery company of Phoenix, for slightly more than half of the original $135,558 contract.

ASU settled to avoid further legal costs, said ASU legal counsel Bruce Meyerson.

University officials claimed Empire used materials that did not match the building and applied the finish carelessly.

Empire signed the University contract in 1984 but filed for bankruptcy shortly after ASU terminated the contract in January 1986.

Statewide maintained ASU was at fault because it hired an architect that requested materials which caused the discoloration.

The cost to complete the job has been estimated at $200,000, but Jim O'Connell, executive director of ASU Public Events, said the University is contemplating a complete face-lift to repair damages.

ASU student falls 20 feet into library expansion pit

Anyone who has walked past the huge construction pit that used to be West Lawn probably has wondered when someone was going to fall in.

Grant Hamill no longer has to wonder.

He fell in Thursday morning.

Hamill, a 25-year-old senior construction management major, was working part time for Layton Southwest, Inc., when he tripped over the remains of a bike rack and fell 20 feet to the bottom of the Hayden hole.

"I was just cleaning up so students wouldn't hurt themselves," a weary Hamill said from his bed at Tempe St. Luke's Hospital.

Hamill suffered a broken ankle and vertebra.

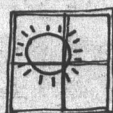

ASU police Sgt. Bob Jones said Hamill was working on a three-foot ledge in front of Hayden Library when the accident occurred at 9 a.m.

"You kind of figure someone is going to fall in sooner or later," he said. "But you never expect a construction worker."

Hamill, who built the footbridge that substitutes for Cady Mall, will spend the next three weeks in bed.

Troops attack presidential palace in attempted overthrow of Aquino

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Mutinous troops attacked the presidential palace compound early Friday in an attempt to overthrow the 18-month-old government of President Corazon Aquino. She was safe and appealed for calm.

Col. Honesto Isleta, an armed forces spokesman, said the rebels were led by Col. Gregorio Honasan, security chief to Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile, whom Mrs. Aquino fired as defense minister after another coup attempt last November.

At least nine people were killed and 94 wounded in the pre-dawn uprising by truckloads of soldiers near the palace and government broadcast center in suburban Quezon City, and fighting raged for hours in densely populated areas of the capital.

The attacks occurred one day after militant leftist unionists began the biggest strike of Mrs. Aquino's administration.

Honasan told reporters before he and some of his men managed to enter Armed Forces headquarters that the operation was aimed at "unification of the people, the concept of justice and true freedom" and claimed it was "not a military coup."

Gen. Fidel Ramos, the chief of staff, said about 300 men attacked at 1 a.m. and there were "propaganda" reports that the mutineers supported him and Enrile. Ramos, who has put down other coup attempts, said he remains loyal to Mrs. Aquino.

Former North aide tells investigators he helped shred Iran-Contra papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Earl, a former aide to Lt. Col. Oliver North, told congressional investigators he helped North destroy documents crucial to the Iran-Contra affair and that North told him as the affair unraveled that he had asked Attorney General Edwin Meese III to delay investigation, according to testimony released today.

Four days before the affair became public last Nov. 25, Earl said, he helped North sort through documents in their office next door to the White House, and that he himself ripped up or shredded papers.

He said it was "a little unclear to me what exactly to look for, so I erred on the side of destruction."

Earl testified that North told him on Friday, Nov. 21, that North had learned Justice Department officials wanted to come to their office to inquire about what was going on.

"He mentioned that he had asked . . . the attorney general 'Can I have' or 'Will I have 24 or 48 hours,'" Earl said.

"And he told me the attorney general had said something like he didn't know whether he could have that much time."

Reagan promises Contra leaders 'adequate funding' until cease-fire

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan told leaders of the Nicaraguan Contras Thursday that "we intend to see that you have adequate funding" until a cease-fire is achieved.

Reagan, seated with members of the directorate of the rebel force at a round table in the Century Plaza Hotel, said, "We have much to thank you for. The political and military pressure you've applied, I think, is showing results."

"The Sandinistas have now signed a peace agreement based on democracy in Nicaragua," he said. "Without the freedom fighters, they will have no incentives to implement the (reform) measures they have said they will implement."

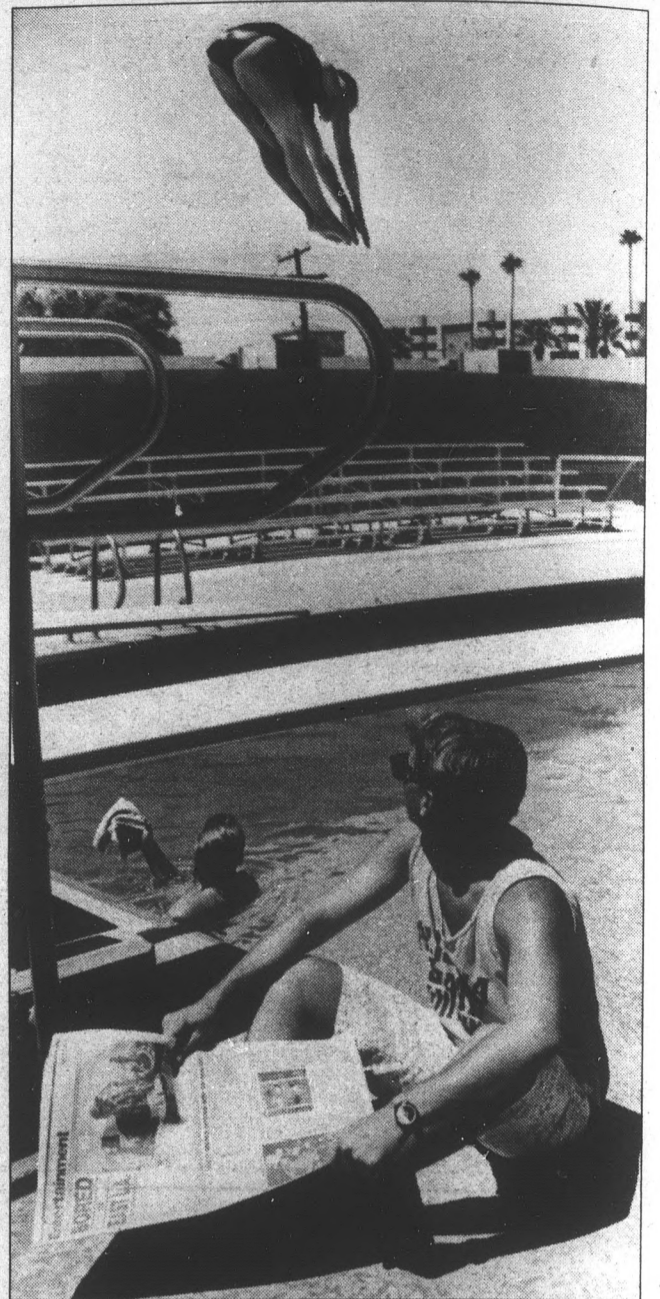

The six members of the civilian directorate governing the Nicaraguan Resistance organization traveled here to confer with Reagan, their most visible supporter, after signaling a willingness to see U.S. military aid suspended in the interest of peace.

South African mineworkers fired after voting to continue walkout

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The nation's largest mining company Thursday fired more than 18,000 striking black miners, including 3,000 who staged a sit-in a mile underground, after their union voted to continue an 18-day-old walkout.

The country's largest black labor federation, the Congress of South African Trade Unions, said it was considering a national strike and other "solidarity action" unless the mineworkers' wage demands were met.

The mass dismissals came after union members voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to reject an industry proposal that offered slight improvements in benefits but no additional pay. The union said it would accept a 27 percent pay raise, instead of its previous demand of 30 percent, but the Chamber of Mines refused to alter its already implemented increase of 15 to 23 percent.

Federal changes stiffen financial aid requirements

By TWYLA PUMROY
State Press

Recent changes in federal requirements for financial aid disbursement make more students ineligible while increasing the frustrations of those receiving aid, according to ASU's director of financial aid.

Students claiming independent status now must prove an income of at least $4,000 per year for the last two years and provide copies of their parents' income tax returns as proof of independent status, Paul Barberini said.

He said the new regulations and verification procedures may delay financial aid qualification and disbursement.

"Sometimes aid disbursement is held up by document requirements," Barberini said. "The federal government has expanded those requirements, in addition (to) requiring what they call 'verification.'"

Verification is a random checking of facts done on 30 to 50 percent of all financial aid applications. If the information on the original financial aid application does not match the information of the verification questionnaire, the difference must be resolved before aid can be awarded, Barberini said.

Failure to submit all the documentation also can delay an award.

"Even those who just want the loan have to fill out the financial aid application," Barberini said. "There are going to be some frustrations that students are going to be experiencing as they're trying to register because they didn't get all those things in on time."

"It's a complex process; we know that a lot of students and parents have difficulty with it."

Increasing financial aid requirements have students waiting in line at the Office of Student Financial Assistance in Matthews Center. Steve Mounter/State Press

FAA calls meeting to discuss improvement of cockpit discipline

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration called Thursday for a "hard look" at ways to improve cockpit discipline in the wake of a rash of flight crew mistakes and evidence that pilot errors caused a crash that killed 156 people in Detroit.

About 250 chief pilots from the nation's airlines and other officials gathered in an unusual meeting called by the FAA to discuss ways to develop better safeguards against pilot mistakes.

The session comes less than two weeks after the crash near Detroit of Northwest Airlines Flight 255.

Evidence from that accident is pointing increasingly toward an apparent failure by the veteran Northwest pilots to set the wing flaps for takeoff, keeping the jetliner from gaining adequate lift.

The Detroit crash and several other incidents this summer that nearly resulted in tragedies have put renewed focus on pilot performance, prompting the FAA to call Thursday's meeting.

FAA officials as well as the industry expressed doubt, however, that the session is likely to result in any immediate changes in pilot training or operating procedures.

"The most I would expect is creation of an industry-wide group to take a closer look at the issue," said one official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified by name.

Even before the meeting began, however, the Air Line Pilots Association questioned why there has not been a greater commitment from the federal government to improve pilot training and cockpit management.

The pilots union said there was widespread agreement between the industry and the FAA three years ago for a $9.4 million, three-year program aimed at looking for ways to solve human problems in the cockpit.

That program was laid out after a series of workshops conducted by the FAA on so-called "human factors" problems involving flight crews, the union said.

But to date, noted ALPA president Henry Duffy, less than $1 million of that money has been provided and the program has never gotten off the ground.

Concern about pilot errors has been expressed for years. Experts say about 40 percent of airline accidents are linked at least partly to flight crew mistakes.

Polyester Purgatory

Students condemned to dealing with campus bureaucracy

Greg Krzos
Arts Editor

There are three "Nevers" around ASU: Never expect to make friends with the folks at Parking Services; Never count on getting the right information from the right person at the right counter in the right line at the right time to get the right form completed on the right day; and no matter what, Never trust anyone wearing polyester operating a computer terminal with your academic and financial history logged into it.

I say this because I'm in my fourth year at Arizona's vogue campus under the palms, and I've experienced enough problems from the wrong people working in the wrong places with the wrong information.

It must have been that "Excedrin Headache" day I experienced over the summer.

I had wanted to add one class to my fall schedule. When I arrived at the registrar site, an employee there punched a computer button and informed me that I couldn't register because the "computer" said I had a delinquent account.

True, I had a delinquent account, but the folks at Delinquent Receivables had informed me that my financial aid in the fall would take care of everything. Unfortunately, the computer didn't tell them that.

The next step involved going to the Delinquent Receivables office for a clearance slip with a secret code for the computer. It still amazes me how a four-digit number — written down by somebody gathering information at another electronic terminal four buildings away — can save the life of an ASU student drowning in the depths of total frustration.

But you have to play the game, right?

Back at Delinquent Receivables, the woman who previously handled my account was "out," so another "friendly," generic co-worker — "dedicated" to serving students — came up to the counter and decided to charm the pants off of me with her "I've worked here 300 years attitude" and Geritol theatrics.

Needless to say, I wasn't impressed. I had often watched reruns of "Maude" when I was younger and somehow I always knew "God would get me for that." If you haven't figured it out by now, the computer told the woman that there had been no arrangements made for the account, so she couldn't give me a clearance slip until it was paid off.

"But," I spit out. "These arrangements had already been made, an employee here assured me everything would be taken care of."

BLAH BLAH BLAH.

It was no use. For 20 minutes we argued over many things — her attitude, my attitude, the employees that work there, why the people in that department wear dated clothes that don't match, etc . . . etc . . .

Since she couldn't help me register, I thought I could take care of another matter that Student Employment wanted me to clear up. The only thing I needed from Delinquent Receivables was a note informing Student Employment that my tuition was paid for and that arrangements had been made with my account.

Out pops the script to "I'm Tired of this Job, Leave me Alone and Die" — a comedy — and the next thing I know I've committed a felony. She went to the computer in huff, came back in a hurry and told me the terminals were down.

We kissed each other goodbye, promised to write and I sent her great grandchildren my "very best."

I decided to never take out another loan, deal with people who show sheer disgust for students or depend on ASU's flashy and advanced computer systems.

I wrote down the event in my journal, called Paramount Pictures and told them to start working on "Maude II" and headed to First Interstate Bank's automatic teller (a.k.a. "the ugly teller") for some extra cash.

I plopped my pretty little card in, punched in a $20 amount and got a notice of "insufficient funds." There was more than enough money in my account, so I knew there was a mistake.

I proceeded to punch into the computer a request for information on my account balance. When I looked at the computer print out, my account balance read negative $99,999.74.

I should have known — Maude had probably used the terminal before me.

Just for Mr. Ritter

Editor:

The cartoon by (Mike) Ritter in the Aug. 25 issue of the State Press and the accompanying editorial is so ludicrous it's almost laughable. It certainly is an excellent example of the tenacity of mind which typifies the far right/anti-choice movement. Their ignorance appears to be matched only by their hypocrisy.

As indicated by the cartoon, Ritter seems intent on trying to perpetuate the tired old stereotype of a pro-choice female and/or NOW member as a dumpy, masculine, selfish ogre-type. He depicts the surgeon as a money-driven automaton, devoid of ethics (not at all like your average Republican business person), and apparently the small child is supposed to represent a teenage female.

Just to set the record straight for Mr. Ritter, NOW members consist of women and men nationwide who are committed to bringing about social and political equality. They believe that women and their partners, not the government, should make their birth control decisions. The majority are married and have families, and sincerely wish to create a more equitable and progressive society in which their children will have more opportunities to live a life based on their individuality; not one limited by pre-programmed, gender-based roles.

The women tend to be highly educated and have no interest in emulating men and supposedly "male" behavior. What they seek is the same social and political stature previously accorded only to men.

Obviously, this is a very threatening concept for some people. They misrepresent the issues at every opportunity, using religious ideology and anything else they can twist in attempts to cloud their real motivations. Their so-called concern for "life" apparently ends at birth, as evidenced by the social policies of the current administration.

The majority of people opposed to teenaged women independently seeking abortions (and other women, for that matter) are also curiously opposed to increased birth control availability and education for teenagers. This type of spurious logic is partly responsible for why the U.S. has the highest teen pregnancy rate in the developed western hemisphere. Teenagers will continue to have sex in the absence of adequate birth control and/or information. This is not likely to change in the future. Further limiting the options of teenaged women only compounds the problems, and unfairly penalizes the female.

A term pregnancy can virtually eradicate her options in the future, while the teenaged male usually proceeds unhampered with his life's plans. It is highly conceivable (no pun intended) that a pregnant minor, out of fear of abusive or punitive parental reaction, would delay informing the parent until abortion would be out of the question. It is certain that many parents would deny consent, which of course is what the proponents of this law were hoping for. Many teenagers lack the family "support system" the State Press editorial board imagines.

What we desperately need is to educate both male and female teenagers as to the ramifications of their personal decisions, and to the selection of effective birth control if and when they choose to be intimate.

80 YWCA representatives hold meeting in Phoenix

By TWYLA PUMROY
State Press

Delegates representing 80 countries are visiting Phoenix this week during the quadrennial World YWCA Council meeting, marking the first time in the group's 125-year history it has met in the United States.

The meeting takes place every four years in different countries of the world. Greece was the last stop for the group of 500 women.

Topics of discussion are human rights in South Africa, Brazil, India and Asia.

An announcement of the group's discussions is expected early next week.

The Phoenix conference delegates are reviewing YWCA's four-year agenda, devising ways to promote health, energy, environment, work with refugees migrants, and peace education, according to World YWCA director, Lydia Breen.

"We are more than swimming pools and hostels," Breen said. "We have been influenced by the women's movement and we have influenced the women's movement."

This quadrennial's theme is "Development with Justice," and the group hopes to establish a "closer partnership with those most seriously affected by the world's economic disorder," Breen said.

Although the Maricopa County YWCA director, Carol Nyholm, said local YWCA's are involved with the conference that runs through Sept. 5, no local officials are U.S. delegates.

Boy accidentally hangs self

A 12-year-old Tempe boy accidentally hanged himself from a rope swing late Wednesday, police said.

Gregory T. Huff, 2349 E. Manhattan Drive, was found hanging from a tree by a friend in the front yard of the friend's home in the 2300 block of East La Jolla Drive.

"He was just goofing around," said Tempe police spokesman Roger Clay. "It was purely accidental, there's nothing to indicate suicide."

Clay said Huff had been playing at the friend's house until 6:45 p.m. when the friend left with his grandmother.

"He waited at the house until they got home and was just playing in the front yard," he said. "They got home about 7:45 and found him by the tree with a rope around his neck."

Huff died at Desert Samaritan Hospital an hour later.

Mother offers baby for scientific study

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Six-month-old Ian Barnes is available for scientific research and observation. But no weird stuff, please. June Barnes of Glendale is offering her son to ASU child development researchers for first-hand observation of a "healthy, happy" baby free of charge. "It's not that June Barnes wants her son to be some scientific wonder," Barnes said of herself, "She just figures it's one way to find first-rate babysitting. "I was watching TV and there were some scientists who were letting babies cry themselves to sleep and they said that's the best way," she said. "Basically this guy gets paid a lot of money to let this baby cry itself to sleep. "If they want to, they can watch my kid sleep or something. They've got to watch somebody's baby." An ad placed in Thursday's State Press read, "Healthy, happy 6-month-old baby available for research/observation or possibly thesis," and Barnes' Glendale home phone number. She said she hasn't had any calls from potential B.F. Skinners or Dr. Spocks yet. "I would rather have somebody competent sit there and stare at him rather than hiring a babysitter to do that," she said.

Study indicates relationship between lotteries, crime

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — A study by two Indiana University researchers has produced data that suggest there is a relationship between state lotteries and the crime rate in those states.

Associate Dean John L. Mikesell and Assistant Professor Maureen A. Pirog-Good of the IU School of Public and Environmental Affairs examined crime statistics for all 50 states and the District of Columbia between 1976 and 1984.

In the 22 lottery states and Washington, D.C., the researchers found the number of crimes against property offenses per 100,000 population jumped an average of 112.7 every year that a lottery was operated in the states. The increase was 3 percent greater than in non-lottery states.

"This effect is significant and confirms suspicions that lotteries in some way create environments more conducive to property crime," the researchers said.

They defined property crimes as burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft. Statistics were compiled for the national Uniform Crime Report.

"Whether lotteries attract organized criminals, create feelings of relative deprivation and/or foster a 'something for nothing' atmosphere is not addressed by this research," Mikesell and Pirog-Good said.

"Our results simply indicate that societal costs of lotteries exceed the obvious administrative costs borne by states."

Mikesell has done extensive research on state lotteries. His writing about the lottery as a "fiscal savior or fiscal fraud," raises questions about the merits of the games as a source of revenue.

In November, Hoosiers will get the chance to vote on a statewide referendum that could lead to the adoption of a state lottery in Indiana.

Lottery revenues will not alter the fiscal balance in a state, the researchers said. However, they said the games are remarkably popular because the funds are raised without opposition and provide prizes for a few and entertainment for many.

Total lottery sales in 1986 of $12.5 billion represented only 7.5 percent of the $166.5 billion legal wagering industry, which includes pari-mutuel betting, casinos, legal bookmaking, card rooms, bingo and charitable games.

"Lotteries were, however, the undisputed growth leader in the gaming arena, showing better than 30 percent sales growth from 1985 to 1986, and 205 percent from 1982 through 1986," the researchers said.

"With more states planning to add lotteries in the near future, the growth promises to continue for some time."

Stadium

"The people of Arizona have responded in a magnificent manner by filling two-thirds of the stadium and making up their own minds that NFL support is needed," Colbrunn said. "Everyone should be involved in getting a franchise. That is our main objective."

If an NFL franchise comes to the Valley, they are expected to spend $55 to $75 million to build the domed stadium, and $25 million if they decide to lease ASU's stadium, Colbrunn said.

"The downtown protagonists show no unanimity in bringing a franchise here," Colbrunn said.

He added that some Phoenix officials have shown very little support to establish an NFL franchise unless it decides to play only at the domed stadium.

At the same time, those Phoenix officials stress constructing a multi-purpose stadium to accommodate both baseball and football. But Colbrunn said the NFL dislikes that idea.

"The NFL says we don't want you (the franchise) to be in a multi-purpose domed stadium with artificial turf but only in an open stadium with grass turf," he said.

But "downtown protagonists" told Colbrunn that if the city does get a franchise, the football franchise will be responsible for keeping major league baseball in Phoenix.

Colbrunn said the NFL wants a separate stadium for football. "We're disinterested in baseball and will not accept responsibility in giving up a football stadium to accommodate a baseball team," he said. "We don't think that's fair to the fans or to us."

The three leading locations fighting for an NFL franchise are Jacksonville, Fla., Memphis, Tenn. and Phoenix.

Hospital housing Cecelia receives bomb threat call

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A bomb threat was telephoned into the hospital where the young survivor of the crash of Northwest Airlines Flight 255 was recovering, authorities said Thursday.

The threat was received late Wednesday at the Burn Center of the University of Michigan Medical Center where Cecelia Cichan was listed in fair condition Thursday, recovering from injuries suffered in the Aug. 16 crash, hospital spokesman John Turck said.

"The area was checked thoroughly, and no bomb was found," Turck said.

Ann Arbor police had identified a suspect, but the man had not been arrested by late Thursday, Lt. Gary Kistka said.

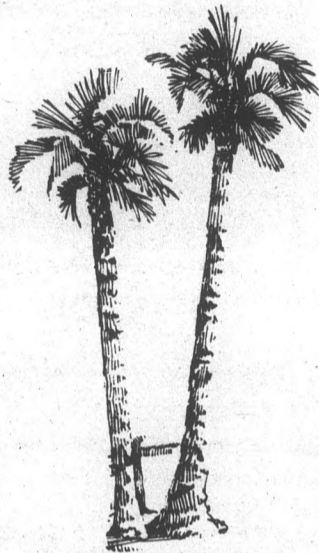

"There is a suspect... an ex-employee (of the hospital) who has been fired and is on probation for making prior bomb threats," Kistka said. He would not identify the male suspect, and Turck declined comment.

An arrest, if any, would be made either by city or campus police, Kistka said. He referred further questions to the detective bureau of the campus police, but calls there were not returned late Thursday.

There are 16 beds in the Burn Center, Turck said. One was occupied by Cecelia, 4, of Tempe, the only person aboard Flight 255 to survive the crash; another was occupied by Lawrence Favio, 30, of Lincoln Park, who suffered severe burns when flying wreckage from the aircraft hit the car he was driving, the spokesman said.

Doctors examined Cecelia earlier Thursday and said they would decide soon whether to perform a second skin graft on her badly burned right hand, Turck said. The girl underwent an initial series of skin grafts Aug. 21.

Family members were expected later Thursday or Friday at the hospital after returning from suburban Philadelphia, where they attended services for Cecelia's parents and brother, who were among the 156 people killed in the crash, spokeswoman Sandy Lincoln said.

New leadership of math department trying to provide necessary changes

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

Mathematics Department Chairman William T. Trotter, recruited spring semester to address department complaints and provide "strong leadership," said problems slowly are being solved.

In the past year, the math department has faced budget problems, faculty discontent and overcrowding in classrooms.

Now, Trotter said department officials are fighting the complaints with change.

"I see that we are making progress and that there are good times ahead," he said. "We want to move forward."

The Mathematics Learning Center has been converted from a dominantly underclassmen program to a dominantly upperclassmen program to prevent overcrowding.

"The (learning center) became so large that it was dwarfing all other aspects of the program," Trotter said.

Budget cuts last year also hurt the department's progress by reducing new faculty positions and limiting pay hikes. But Trotter said the problems are being resolved with well-developed planning and careful spending.

"We're dealing with a delicate pool of money and very delicate decisions have to be made by every University officer on how to effectively do things," he said.

Trotter claimed his policies have been effective, but time is needed to see more results.

College of Liberal Arts Dean Samuel Kirpatrick said no major changes have occurred because plans for improvement are intended to be a slow process.

"(The department) is being phased in a fairly lengthy process of change," he said.

Kirpatrick said the budget has been increased since last semester, and department officials are "actively recruiting faculty" to overcome past understaffing.

Alvin Swimmer, associate professor of mathematics, said it is too soon to expect improvements, but "more support from the higher administrative offices" would help.

Last year, 26 math professors petitioned that the department be removed from the College of Liberal Arts, claiming they were "starved from the lack of resources."

Administration officials denied the request.

"I tend to think that was the type of squabbles that go on in the world all of the time," Trotter said. "People are always angry at one thing or another. I see (confrontations) as healthy signs."

Kirpatrick said hiring a new chairman "settled down" the petitioners.

'Understaffed' office offers diverse health programs

Work study jobs cut center costs

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

The coordinator for a broad, new ASU health education program said he is not letting his understaffed office discourage him.

Last semester, the Student Health Center utilized students from Student Work Study to work in the educational Health Dimensions program, but the number of eligible students is limited, Charles T. McDuffie said.

Work study is a financially-based program for students who qualify according to need. They hold campus jobs to help pay their way through college.

If non-work study students are hired, the health center must pay 100 percent of their salary, opposed to 20 percent for work study students. The other 80 percent is paid by an ASU general fund, McDuffie said.

The program is trying to hire office personnel and people interested in educating students about stress and exercise.

Twenty-five orientation presentations were conducted last week with only three permanent employees to present them, McDuffie said.

"Last week was a very busy week, but the staff here worked well together," said Health Educator Danae Brownell.

McDuffie would like to continue hiring students to fill positions. They provide a constant source of feedback and McDuffie described them as "a sounding board." They know what the students want and their opinions are "critical," he added.

Students in other study programs, while working at the Student Health center, have become interested in health education because of the experience, McDuffie said.

Students experiencing stress due to overwork ignore recreation, fun and exercise, he said. McDuffie is one of the few administrators on campus who says, "cut out some studying." He said students need an outlet to release tension, and recreation is important.

Employees working for Health Dimensions this semester present programs on stress management, nutrition, sexuality, AIDS, exercise-fitness and a student wellness program, McDuffie said.

In August, the center held numerous orientation sessions, in which organizers found most students are not aware of programs like Health Dimensions, and think the programs cost money.

Students don't realize it is a part of their tuition," McDuffie said.

Other programs for the semester include bi-weekly CPR classes and AIDS education programs at fraternities, sororities and residence halls.

Programs are "brief but interesting" seminars in which students watch a film and ask questions, McDuffie said.

Alcohol Awareness Week is scheduled for the third week in October. "Prominent campus people" will get intoxicated under police supervision for an impairment demonstration. McDuffie said entertaining events make people more aware of alcohol impairment.

A weight management seminar and a stress management program are scheduled for September and a computerized health risk analysis and diet program are available at an upcoming health fairs.

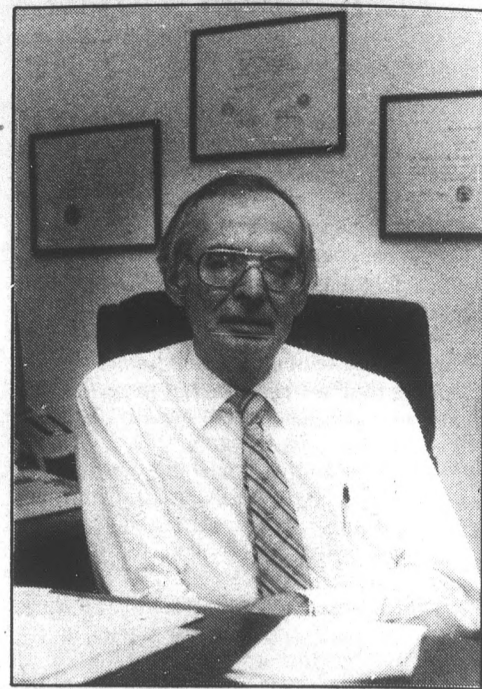

Students enter information on dietary habits and receive printouts on how to improve their health. These three-minute "attention getters" can lead to more extensive programs, McDuffie said.

Computers in residence hall cafeterias are in the planning. They will show students what entrees are nutritious.

McDuffie said campus food services must compete in nutrition. It pressures services to offer nutritious foods.

McDonalds, the only fast food franchise on campus, has made changes in its frying grease. Vegetable oil now is used instead of animal fats and the government is pushing for changes in all fast food restaurants, McDuffie said.

All of this health consciousness impresses Director of Student Health Monty Roth.

Monty Roth

"He (McDuffie) really brings a lot of experience and background to his position," Roth said.

Students interested in Health Dimensions and health education should contact Charles McDuffie at 965-4721.

Hey dude

Popular matinee idols cough up another hit

By GREGORY ROBERT KRZOS
State Press

PHOENIX — The Valley skyline looms in the background from a panoramic view in the Hyatt Regency Hotel's mezzanine area. Out of the corner, a vibrant head of thick, jet-black hair parades toward one of the couches around the area, plops his relatively skimpy body down, smiles and starts to hiccup.

"Damm — ya know, a spoonful of sugar works for me," he says with a sigh and quickly motions to a New Century/Vista Films exec named Ziggy.

"Ziggy, is there any place I can get . . . remember I told you a spoonful of sugar helps everytime? I have the hiccups something (hic) terrible and if there's anyone that can get me a little packet — not Sweet n' Low, just SUGAR."

Meet Jon Cryer.

Moments later, a small, petite woman with incredibly striking blue eyes strolls elegantly toward Cryer.

"Cathy baby!" he beams.

"Ahhh!" she responds, meeting her hands with Cryer's. Carefully positioning herself next to him, she offers a broad Pepsodent smile and the room suddenly brightens up.

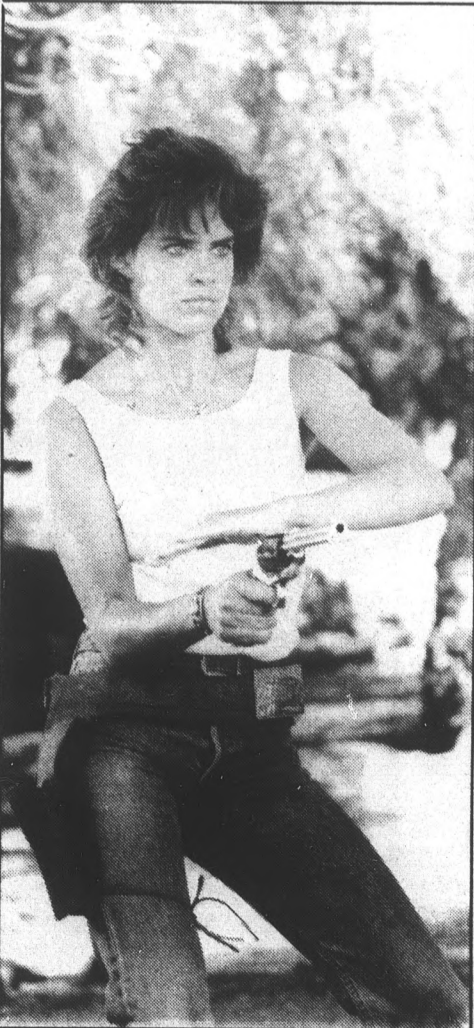

Meet Catherine Mary Stewart.

Cryer and Stewart are the "Dude" and "Dudette" in Vista Films' "Dudes," opening Valleywide today.

The film is a unique, action-filled story about the adventures and misadventures of three city-born kids locked into a rock culture who decide to leave the big city to find a simpler life in California. On the road, though, they run into some trouble.

Cryer, who's best known for his role as Duckie in "Pretty in Pink," headlines the film as a punk-rocker-type named Grant who's friend is murdered by a gang of roughnecks about mid-film. As a result he and his cohort Bisquit (Daniel Roebuck) find themselves fighting for a cause. Stewart plays a jilted housewife who befriends the two and eventually plays Cryer's romantic interest.

Cryer and Stewart were in town recently to promote the film and although the title

Catherine Mary Stewart

and subsequent storyline may prove to be a bit "interesting" for theatergoers, the duo insist it's probably the most original motion picture they've had the opportunity to star in.

"(When) I first read the script, I loved it, just because it was so rampagingly original," Cryer said. "It was so strange and I've never seen anything like it before."

"I've been offered a lot of the same teenage-type things — you know, the 'Pretty in Pink's II' again — and I got sick of that. It was time to do something really interesting."

"It was off-beat and fast, definitely," Stewart added. "And it was fun for us to make — that was important to me."

The fun off-screen was evident as the two joked about working with each other.

"It was a living hell," Cryer laughed. "We had a great time. A lot of times there's one person in a movie that's ultra serious and that's always kind of annoying."

"That never happened in our movie," Stewart added with a smirk.

"Yeah," Cryer agreed. "It wasn't like that, there wasn't anyone (who'd say) 'Guys, I'm trying to work here.' In 'Pretty in Pink' there was Andrew (McCarthy) who was really quiet and serious, and that just sort of dampened everyone's spirits — not that he was a bad guy, that was the way he worked."

Work is something these two stars have become best friends with actually.

Cryer began his craft when he was nine years old. Among his training, probably the most impressive are the four summers he spent at Stagedoor Manor Center for the Performing Arts and a role at the renowned Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London, England. Broadway was no stranger to the 22-year-old Cryer either. He made his stage debut in the Tony Award-winning "Torch Song Trilogy" and went on to star in Neil Simon's "Brighton Beach Memoirs" and such critically-acclaimed others as "Equus" and "Runaways."

On the big screen, he appeared with Demi Moore in "No Small Affair" and starred in last year's hit, "Pretty in Pink," with matinee star Molly Ringwald. Over the summer he appeared in "Superman IV," a flick which he says "is not the same movie I filmed."

28-year-old Stewart has an impressive track record. While in her teens, she performed in the Middle East with the Synergy Dance Company, entertaining many of the United Nations' peace-keeping troupes there.

After finishing high school back in Canada, she left home again to study dance and theater at the Studio Centre in London.

Not long after, she landed a bit part in "Nighthawks" with Sylvester Stallone. A move to Hollywood followed and a role in NBC's "Days of Our Lives" materialized. In between, she managed to star in "The Last Starfighter" as well as headlining the film, "Night of the Comet," now a cult classic.

Although they both have gone far in their perspective careers, they agreed that in order to make it in show business, you must have the right attitude.

"You just have to get into it and do it, and not apologize for anything or compromise for anything you do," Stewart said.

"And not worry if you're making something a little off-beat or off the path," Cryer added. "Because regardless of whether the film's the best movie made or not, it's different."

Cryer and Stewart turn to each other, smile and laugh — obviously, "Dudes" has been "different" enough.

Cheech's L.A. journey a bad trip for viewers

By DAVE MILLER
State Press

In East L.A. they know how to hoot at girls.

There's definitely an art to it. One has to know what to wear when hooting, and who to hoot with, and just what to say during a hoot. Failure to heed certain guidelines can result in scorn and embarrassment at the hands of smartly dressed professional girls.

Richard "Cheech" Marin knows all about hooting. He should. He was "Born in East L.A."

But what he doesn't know so much about is making movies.

That's too bad. It was for me. I paid to see it.

Cheech should've quit when he was ahead, when "Born in East L.A." was just a semi-successful send-up of a Bruce Springsteen tune. That was before it was a predictable two-hour bandana-fest played over and over again off a single joke.

Cheech plays Rudy Robles, a man without a country. Rudy had the unfortunate luck to have been mistaken for an illegal alien in a teddy bear factory and been carted off to see the sights south of the border.

Rudy gets the business end of an immigration raid and before he can say "I'm an American citizen" more than 2,000 times he's pounding the pavement in search of work in sunny Tijuana. It's more than a celebrity should have to endure.

It's clear what Cheech wanted to do. He begins the film by poking fun at traditional Hispanic upbringings and eventually eases into a sentimental journey through an impoverished world. The idea is there, and his empathy is in the right spot but it's as though he doesn't trust himself. He seems compelled to bog his movie down with one cliché after another.

He also can't decide if he wants to make a comedy or the Chicano version of "Casablanca."

So anyway Rudy, who by this time has had his fill of dog-filled tacos and bugging cell-mates, has begun a serious search for a "coyote," who he can pay to take him back to America. But that's easier said than done.

For one thing he doesn't have any cash. And coyotes want lots of cash to take people across the border. Apparently they have large Visa bills to pay off.

So Rudy has to take a series of demeaning jobs. He entices tourists to attend peep-shows. He administers tattoos. He agrees to run General Motors, but just for the day.

Predictably, as Rudy nears the end of his Mexican vacation, he finds a reason to postpone his trip. She wears a white dress. She looks good in it, as Rudy notices.

But not even love and a hearty breakfast can sway Rudy's ultimate intentions. Besides, he has to be back at work on Monday.

So he makes the border hop. Or he attempts to. I won't say whether or not he makes it but as predictable as this movie is it's not hard to figure out. What is hard to figure out is how this kind of movie could have been made.

Apparently when it came time to add originality and humor to the script Cheech Marin took his own extended vacation.

This 'Hill' is far from being blueberry

By TOD McCOY
State Press

From the unpleasant mind of director John Irvin comes a documentary of the bloodiest battle of the Vietnam conflict and the story of the men who died there.

But there is no story and no plot save for the conquest of a remote hill in faraway Vietnam.

The movie is "Hamburger Hill," the latest of Paramount's additions to a long, collective history of war tales.

The nickname of "Hamburger Hill" was given to Operation Apache Snow, one of the longest and bloodiest conflicts of the Vietnam war.

The battle, which started on May 10, 1969, took 10 days and 11 bloody assaults, at a 70 percent casualty rate, to finish.

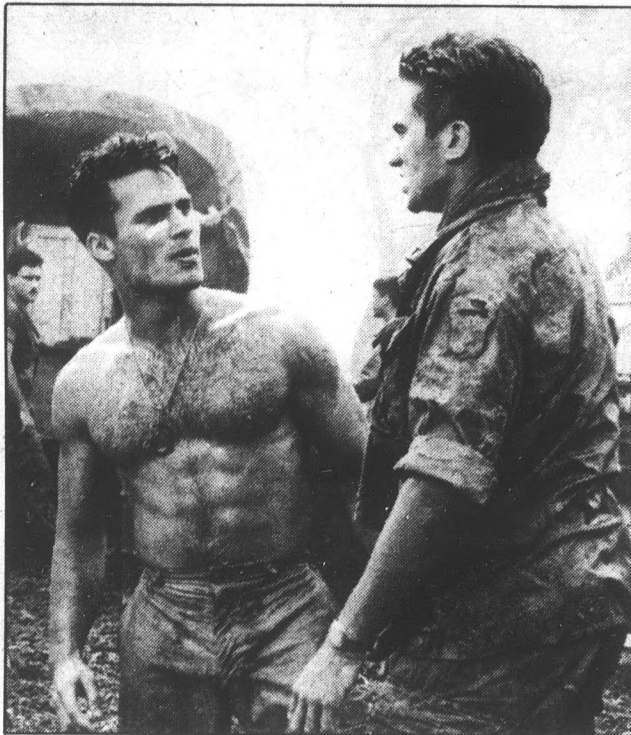

Filmed on location in the Philippines, the producers strove to create a war scenario in a slightly different manner: by pulling the drama straight off the battlefield and giving a "grunt's" eye view of the bonds formed between soldiers — and the ways they are shattered.

"Hamburger Hill"

A Paramount Pictures release starring Anthony Barrile, Michael Patrick Boatman and Steven Weber. Produced by Marica Nasatir and Jim Carabatsos. Written by Jim Carabatsos. Directed by John Irvin.

Rated R

M.A. Nickles and Anthony Barile portray soldiers in "Hamburger Hill."

"Hamburger Hill" attempts to do what every other war movie out now is trying to do—break the barrier between Hollywood glamorization and the real thing.

Each of the soldiers and the actors who portray them deserve equal billing. There is no one character who is focused on or who stands out from the rest, partly because of the film's pace. It gives no time to study the characters and barely enough to identify them.

Among the fourteen men in the 101st Airborne Division, some of the most memorable are Linguilli (Anthony Barrile), Motown (Michael Patrick Boatman) and Doc (Courtney Vance).

At first glance, one may not appreciate the depth to which Irvin attempts to take the audience because, for all practical purposes, this could be just another war movie.

Even at the end the viewer is left with an empty feeling, as if there should be more than just a troupe of guys blasting their way up a hill and losing most of their comrades, only to vacate the premises with a disillusioned sense of glory.

And that's what Irvin is trying to do: to get across the sense of futility which every Vietnam soldier felt.

This is a man's world. The soldiers are separated from the comfort of their wives and girlfriends who often become treacherous and backstabbing. War separates and peace does not always reunite.

The message Irvin is trying to get across is an old one: war is hell: a cold, cruel, bloody place devoid of all morals and civil decency.

Filmed almost entirely in a documentary style, this film serves as little more than a catharsis for Irvin, who served in Vietnam and has been making war movies since leaving active duty.

In "Hamburger Hill" Irvin shows just how inhumane war is.

But then so did every other war movie ever made.

Stahl to guide Devils toward national title

By JOAN McKENNA
State Press

ASU volleyball is seeing a changing of the guard, or rather a changing of the setter.

Senior Regina Stahl, in her fourth year as setter, will have the dual role of pushing the Sun Devils towards an NCAA championship and stepping out of the limelight to let her successors gain some experience at the position.

ASU head coach Debbie Brown said the transition should be smooth. "Obviously when you lose a four-year starter, you're going to feel it, but Bobbi (Bloom) and Noelle (Fridrich) are quality setters with good experience.

"The problem is that with someone like Reg, you don't always get to see them," she said.

Bloom, a 5-8 junior transfer from Northern Arizona, is redshirting this year, which places the job squarely on the shoulders of Fridrich.

Fridrich, a 5-7 sophomore, showed she is ready for the task by leading the southern team to the gold medal at the 1987 Olympic Festival as starting setter.

Brown said the situation is good for the Sun Devils. "Noelle definitely is pushing Regina."

Stahl's statistics show little need of pushing. She holds ASU's record in career assists with 3,925, a 3,128-assist lead over second place. In 1986, she posted 1,413 assists in 2,972 attempts, a .475 assist percentage.

Stahl also led last year's team with 50 service aces. She needs only 10 aces this year for the career record.

Stahl's 1986 awards include second team All-America, second team all-conference and first team all-region.

Brown said playing time will be divided between the two, "but it mainly will depend on Regina."

A setter's position is like a basketball point-guard in that Stahl controls the pace and direction of the offense. Recruiting four new freshman and losing two key seniors has Stahl rethinking last year's strategy.

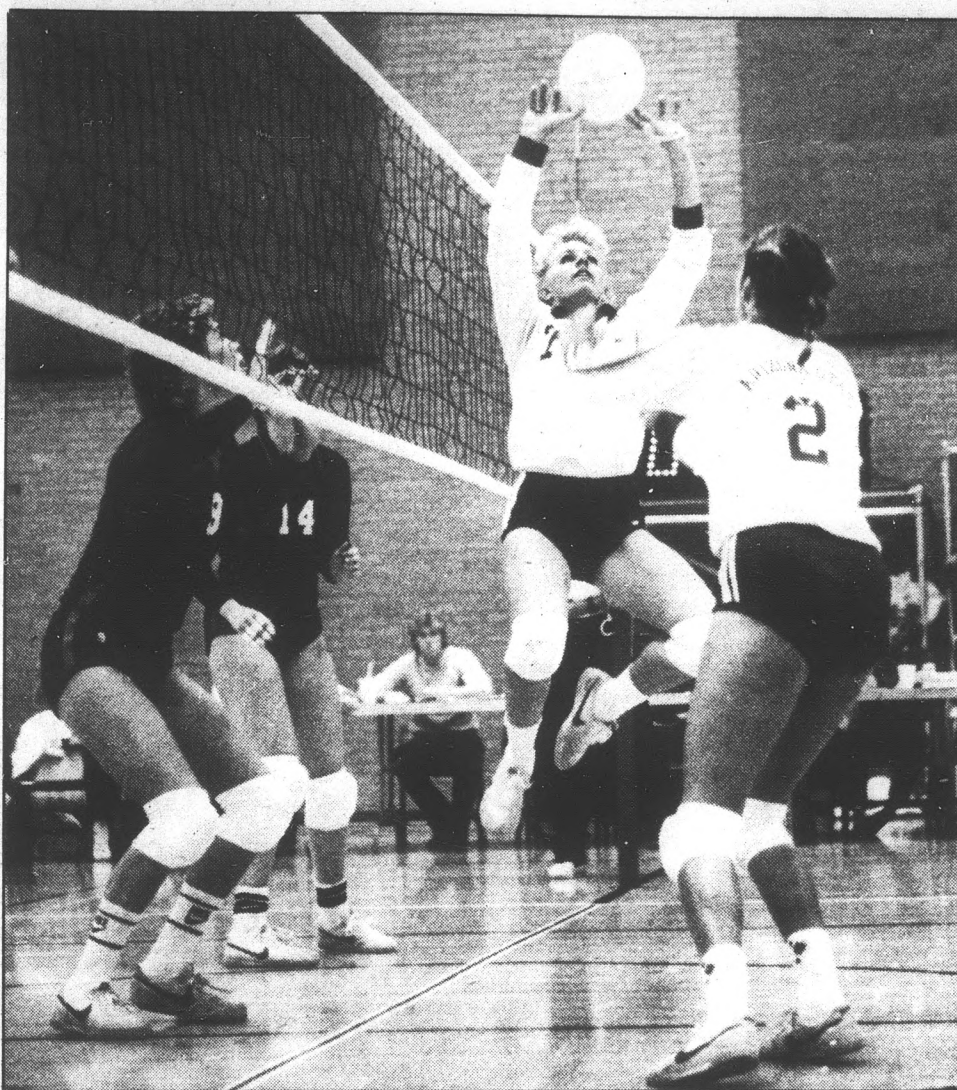

She depended a lot last season on Tammy Webb, a middle blocker now playing with the Olympic team. "When Tammy was playing in the middle, I worked the middle a lot," Stahl said. "Now I'll work different combinations to get the outside open more often."

Stahl said the left and right sides are stronger this year due to improvement and the freshman recruits.

"I don't see a dominant starting six," she said. "What we have is a lot of depth. Being able to put people in and out of games will give us the ability to make it through a long year."

Both Stahl and Brown expect the Sun Devils to be contenders for the national championship. A winning season could help Stahl's chance at playing professional volleyball, a current goal.

Meanwhile, Fridrich knows her turn is coming.

ASU volleyball player Regina Stahl (7) sets the ball last season. Because Stahl is playing in her final season as a Sun Devil, ASU coach Debbie Brown is hoping to work younger players into her position as much as possible this season.

Low profile

Sun Devil Darryl Harris pays attention to reality, not hype

ASU tailback Darryl Harris breaks free last season. Harris is hoping for another 1,000-yard rushing season in 1987, and another Pac-10 championship.

By CHARLIE DIAZ
State Press

Hype and reality are the yin and yang of sports, and keeping one in proper perspective with the other is essential.

If ASU tailback Darryl Harris accomplishes nothing else in his senior season, at least he will have accomplished reality.

"I don't pay any attention to the hype," Harris said. "It comes and goes. I concentrate on school to keep the pressure and hype off. I know we still have a lot to do as a team and that keeps my mind off the hoopla, too."

Harris, a 6-foot, 190-pound health science major, rushed for 1,042 yards and nine touchdowns last season, including 109 in ASU's Rose Bowl victory over Michigan. In addition, he earned All-Pac-10 second team honors and was selected honorable mention All-American by the Associated Press.

Like hits from opposing linebackers, Harris takes last year's success in stride, saying last season's rushing yardage means little now.

To improve on last year, though, Harris added 20 pounds to his bench press and 10 pounds to his frame.

ASU running back coach Frank Falk said he was pleased with Harris' work over the summer.

"I think this summer Darryl did a good job for the first time in his career at lifting," Falk said.

"I'm ahead of last year at this time," Harris said. "I feel better about myself as a player. I worked a lot harder in the summer and I feel that will pay off later this year."

Harris' tangible skills; rushing, receiving and blocking, complement the intangibles that he contributes, Falk said.

The most important of those intangibles is leadership.

"It's very, very important," Falk said of Harris' leadership abilities. "You're talking about guys who have gone through the hard knocks. People like Darryl, they've done it, putting in the time and effort.

"He's not by nature a vocal person. When he's in practice, he's going full speed. It's catchy."

Harris said maturity makes him lead by example, having had his share of highs and lows.

"When you're younger you see the older guys provide the leadership," he said. "I lead by example. I say things but I'm not too outspoken. I'm not cocky or self-centered."

"I just try to let the whole team know it's going to take the whole team to be successful," he said.

So, despite a Rose Bowl championship and a 1,000-yard season, Harris retains a firm sense of self. He prefers blending into the rest of ASU's city-sized student body.

"That's how I like it," he said. "I don't like a lot of attention put on myself. I'm a typical college student, not too visible."

Harris did not redshirt his freshman year and will use his eligibility at the end of this season. His goals are another 1,000-yard effort, a repeat as Pac-10 champions and possibly a national championship.

Falk said Harris has legitimate 4.5-second quickness over 40 yards. He caught 19 passes for 149 yards last season and could potentially exceed that total as ASU utilizes its running backs more as receivers this year.

Quickness, maturity and pass-catching ability attract professional scouts, but if a career in the NFL doesn't happen, Harris said he won't be disappointed.

"I've had a nice career at ASU," he said. "I wouldn't call it a failure if I don't make the pros. I've met a lot of people here."

"I'd come back and finish my degree. I'll only be a semester behind. Whatever happens in the pros, I'll take it in stride."

Harris said he intends to pursue a sports-oriented career in health science when football is over. Falk, however, thinks Harris may have to wait a while before he begins that career.

"I think he has the ability to play more," Falk said. "He could easily be a 195- or 200-pound back."

ASU kickers bulking up for '87 season

By CAROL BOOS
State Press

ASU head football coach John Cooper said the reason why the Sun Devils went to the Rose Bowl last year instead of the Holiday Bowl was the kicking game.

But the kickers were rarely in the spotlight. This year, they are getting more attention — at least from the coaching staff.

Place-kicker Kent Bostrom, punter Mike Schuh and freshman place-kicker Alan Zendejas are preparing for the season by doing more than just kicking the football.

"They (kickers) have been given a program to optimize their kicking ability," head strength coach Tim McClellan said. "This summer we worked on building leg strength and all three improved their vertical jump, stretch and reach."

Volunteer assistant coach Rick Sang has also been working with the trio.

"I can see a definite change in leg strength," Sang said. "They have been doing more things in practice and feel as if they are utilizing their time more."

Before Cooper began coaching at ASU, the kickers were left at home while the rest of the team traveled to Camp Tontozona. Practices in Tempe for kickers were basically laps around the track and kicking.

"The past two years we were doing the wrong kind of conditioning and our legs got worn out," Bostrom said. "I feel more a part of the team now."

Cooper said that type of feeling is important. "I think it is important for them to go to Tontozona. They're part of the team and going to camp gives the team a sense of togetherness."

Bostrom is the leading candidate for starting place-kicker. The junior from Wheaton, Ill. kicked three field goals against Michigan, tying a Rose Bowl record. He has been successful on 75 percent of his field goal attempts (33 for 44) and his 33 career three-pointers are second in ASU history behind NCAA all-time leading scorer Luis Zendejas.

"My main concern is improving and I've done that," Bostrom said. "I made more strides during spring ball than I ever have."

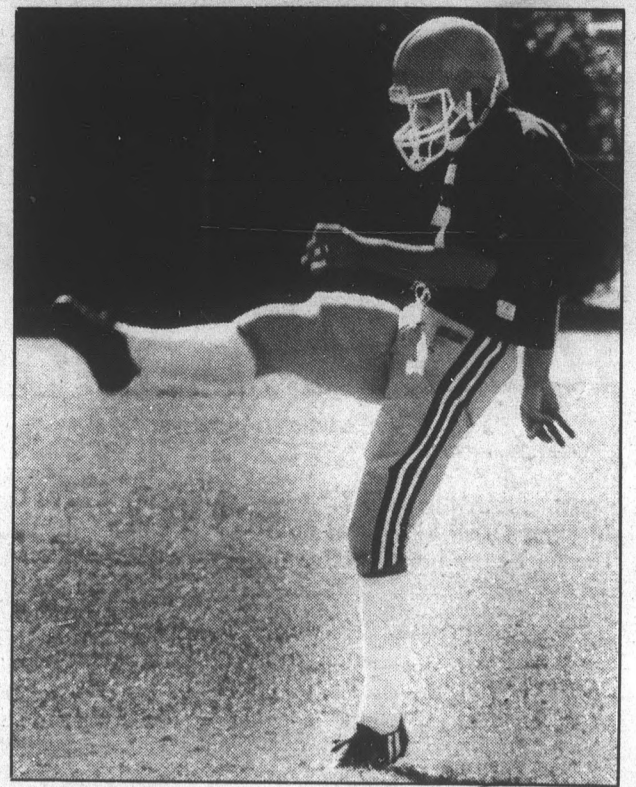

Bostrom was the recipient of the 1986 Toyota Leadership award for his performance on and off the field, and is a candidate for academic All-American recognition.

Schuh will be responsible for punting duties this year. He has not had a punt blocked in 100 attempts.

He earned first-team All-Pac-10 and honorable mention Associated Press All-American recognition in 1985. The junior from Mountain View High School in Mesa said the new workout program has helped his game too.

"I've improved on my hang time a lot," he said. "My legs didn't die out as much at Tontozona as they did in the past."

Last season, Schuh averaged 39 yards in 44 punts. His ASU punter Mike Schuh punts the football during practice.

Plan created to give tracksters test for drug use

ROME (AP) — A new program to fight drug use among track-and-field athletes, including a two-tiered penalty system and plans for year-round random tests at meets and practice sites, was adopted by the sport's worldwide governing body today.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation, at its annual meeting, accepted the recommendations of its medical commission in the latest crackdown on the use of steroids, stimulants and other performance-enhancing substances.

The new system of penalties is based on a model code adopted earlier this year by the International Olympic Committee.

It sets up two levels of drug use — one involving medication that might incidentally affect performance as it treats a legitimate ailment, the other for substances such as steroids that would be taken solely to gain an illegal edge.

For athletes who test positive for the first group of drugs, a first offense would bring a six-month suspension from competition, with penalties becoming more severe for repeated violations.

If an athlete tested positive for drugs in the second, performance enhancing-only category, a first offense would bring a two-year suspension.

Kickers

longest is 59 yards.

Zendejas is beginning his first year and will have to battle with Bostrom for a starting position as a place-kicker. But Cooper said he will handle kickoffs.

The redshirt freshman from Chino, Calif., sat out last season to concentrate on academics. Now he wants his chance.

"All I want is a fair chance," Zendejas said. "I want to be out here — I never want to go home early. I just want to play football.

"Kent (Bostrom) still has two years left. So, it's not like I can sit back. I have to go after it now, or I'm out for two years.

"I found it hard to be just a student," he said. "It feels excellent to be out here. I was in the stands last year."

Zendejas said the most pressure he feels right now is carrying on the traditions of excellence his relatives have established.

The name is well-known. His brother Luis played for ASU from 1981-84 and his other brother Max played four years at UA and in the NFL in 1986. His cousins Tony and Joaquin also played in the NFL.

But it isn't all bad.

"Everything I learned, I learned from them (his brothers)," he said. "Everything I do here is for my brothers and family."

Zendejas missed one of 29 extra-point conversions in two seasons at Don Lugo High School in Chino. His longest field goal there was 61 yards.

Defendant in drug case allowed freedom on bail

PHOENIX (AP) — Declining to overrule a decision by a fellow Maricopa County Superior Court judge, the main judge in a drug-conspiracy case involving past and current members of the Phoenix Suns agreed to let a defendant in the case remain free on bail despite alleged threats against a co-defendant.

There is no new evidence "which would necessitate" overturning Judge Francis Koopman's decision freeing Avanti restaurant waiter Terrence Patrick Kelly on bond of $68,500 pending trial on separate drug-related and obstruction charges, Judge Michael Ryan ruled Wednesday.

Kelly was indicted Aug. 13 on charges he threatened Avanti manager and waiter Kevin Anolink. Kelly denied making any threats, and Koopman set bail at $68,500 four days later.

Kelly was indicted on three counts of obstructing a criminal investigation for allegedly warning Anolink not to talk about Kelly's cocaine dealing, according to the indictment. He already faced six drug-related charges.

When Koopman signed the warrant for Kelly's arrest, he specified he should not be released on bail because of prosecutor Mike Keppel's claim that Kelly was an immediate danger to Anolink, his wife and child.

Cross country career winds down for LaMena

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

Anything can be achieved if a little hard work is asserted. Just ask Laura LaMena.

The senior cross country runner believes in putting a lot of time into both cross country and the classroom.

"To do the best you can do, a person must work to their full potential," LaMena said.

And LaMena does. She was the first person to cross the finish line in the inaugural Pac-10 meet in the 10,000-meter run. On top of that, the justice studies major earned a 3.81 grade point average during the spring.

But ASU was not her original destination. LaMena was enrolled at the University of Houston until her junior year, when she ventured to reunite with one-time mentor Ken Lehman.

Lehman was the cross country coach at Houston before moving west to assist Clyde Duncan with coaching the Sun Devil track team.

"I didn't like Houston or the way I was running," LaMena said. "I wanted to go some place where I could run well and get a good education."

Everything has since fallen into place.

LaMena, finished ninth in the nation last season in the 10,000-meter outdoor run, which qualified her for the All-America honor.

She has also excelled in the classroom. LaMena, juggling schedules of academics, track and cross country practice, has a cumulative GPA is 3.23.

The daily workouts Lehman has assigned could make most people cringe at the thought of trying it. LaMena is now running 10 miles a day along with her teammates. During the summer she was running 50 miles a week while the other girls were up to 60 miles. This was due to her running at nationals.

LaMena said long distance running builds strength and endurance and tells her teammates so when they complain about the long runs.

"She is a very hard worker," Lehman said. "I have never coached a girl that is as dedicated. She does whatever it takes to better herself."

The 1987 cross country season will start Sept. 19 at Riverside, Calif., where she will begin her strive for a national championship. But LaMena is uncertain about the fate of the team.

"We lost our number two and four girls," she said. "It will be tough. It will help if we can find someone to fill the spots."

LaMena was the top runner for Lehman's cross country team last year. While in Houston, she captured two consecutive Southwest Conference titles. But the hard work and practice began back in seventh grade.

"When I was in seventh and eighth grade I was involved in everything," she said. "For my first season in high school I felt I was better in cross country, so I went with it."

"With Laura being a good runner and her leadership, the girls look up to her," Lehman said.

The years of running are beginning to pay off. Her goal this year is to run 3.1 miles under 17 minutes, preferably between 16.4 and 16.5.

"I definitely want to make nationals," LaMena said. "I would like to be in the top five in districts and the Pac-10 in order to qualify."
