

ASA resists regents' plan raising educational costs

By AARYN KEMP
State Press

Student government leaders from Arizona's three universities will teleconference today to refute the Arizona Board of Regents' proposed five-year tuition formula.

Associated Students of ASU President Karrin Kunasek said the Arizona Students' Association opposes the formula because it does not provide the "predictability" it promises.

The regents' plan calls for student contributions to increase automatically one-half to one percentage point each year.

In-state students now pay 20 percent of their total education cost. Under the regents' plan, students would pay 25 percent of their total education cost by 1992.

"No one knows how much the cost of education is going to rise," Kunasek said. "We don't know what we're going to be paying 25 percent of in 1992."

But regents argue that eliminating the annual tuition adjustment while providing a base for future tuition hikes will add predictability.

U of A Associated Students' President Reuben Carranza drafted an ASA opposition proposal to be presented to a regents' finance committee meeting Thursday in Tucson.

ASA Director Mick Dalrymple said the proposal is a response to the regents' plan and represents what ASA does and does not like about it.

"Overall, it would be nice to have a five-year plan," he said. "But I don't think the universities are ready for such a long-range commitment."

Unpredictable economic changes might keep less financially able students from being able to attend Arizona's universities, he said.

Regent President Donald Shropshire said he will meet with ASA this week to discuss its proposal.

"I don't know what their proposal is right now," he said. "But I'm willing to hear their discussion."

He said he has not taken a position yet, but he hopes the regents will create a plan with some predictability.

"Frankly, whatever formula is decided upon will leave some reservations for change," he said. "But I'm anxious to stop the yo-yo effect of tuition increases."

One year the increases are small, and the next they're astronomical, he said.

Michael Konz, ASASU's State Relations director, said he would like to see the tuition formula packaged with a financial aid proposal.

"Any emphasis on tuition changes should include a plan for financial aid," he said. "I'd like to see something more comprehensive, instead of creating just a safety net."

The controversial tuition plan will be reviewed at the regents' Sept. 11 meeting.

New science building plans unveiled

By DANA LEONARD
State Press

PHOENIX — A new $23.8 million Life Sciences Building may be added to the $100 million in construction currently taking place on campus.

Plans for the Life Sciences Building were revealed at the Arizona Board of Regents' capital review committee meeting Thursday.

Samuel A. Kirkpatrick, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, presented the plan to the four-member committee for conceptual approval.

"Conceptual approval" grants the University the right to thoroughly investigate further expansion and improvements. The results of the investigation will be submitted to the regents' capital review committee for final project approval.

"This (life sciences) is an area where we have our largest classes," Kirkpatrick said. "We have 400 students in our classes."

While Kirkpatrick cited a recent "research and technological explosion" as the reason for the number of students, ASU President J. Russell Nelson denied that the facility would emphasize graduate research.

"This is an increasingly popular field," he said. "There's been a rapid growth in the number of undergraduates wanting to take biology."

Kirkpatrick said current undergraduate laboratories have reached capacity.

"ASU is reasonably far behind (other universities) in lab space," he said.

Statistics presented by Kirkpatrick showed ASU has 16 square feet of lab space per student, while the average for comparable universities is 28 square feet.

The 104,000-square-foot building will add lab, classroom and office space to the existing 127,000-square-foot life science facility.

Kirkpatrick said the new building will be built "as close as possible to the current facility."

"In the conceptual approval stage, there's no firm agreement about where it will be built," he said. "We have three or four possible places in mind."

One possibility is behind the present Life Sciences Building, which Kirkpatrick said may require tearing down Krause Hall.

He said the estimated cost of the project may be refined in the investigation before it is submitted for regent approval.

ASASU predicts problems with season ticket policy

By AARYN KEMP
State Press

Associated Students President Karrin Kunasek said she sees problems with a new plan for student season football tickets because approximately 42,000 ASU students will vie for 10,000 seats.

The proposed plan for students is to pre-pay for Sun Devil season football tickets by marking a box on class registration forms. The ticket cost then is added to a student's fees.

"All 42,000 students could conceivably sign up for tickets," she said. "It's possible that the registration forms will be processed on a date-received plan, much like housing requests are done now."

"The forms that are sent in early will have precedence over the others."

Kunasek is meeting today with ASU Athletic Director Charles Harris to discuss her concerns and the proposed plan.

"At this time, general admission tickets are sold out," she said. "I don't know what can be done this year, but the system definitely needs to be improved."

Boston gunman kills 3 randomly, shoots self with automatic weapon

BOSTON (AP) — A man armed with an automatic weapon fired random shots from a home Sunday, killing three people and injuring at least three others before taking his own life, authorities said.

"He just began firing shots in the street," said police spokeswoman Jane Sheehan. The gunman shot himself after police armed with rifles surrounded the house, officials said.

The body of one victim was removed from the house afterward, Sheehan said. Another person inside the apartment was injured, but his condition was not immediately available.

Two of the victims, including an 11-year-old girl, were pronounced dead at Boston City Hospital, the spokeswoman said.

Another man was listed in critical condition at City Hospital suffering from a gunshot wound, Sheehan said. A 3-year-old girl was reported in stable condition at New England Medical Center, where she was being treated for a gunshot wound, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Iraqi bombers hit Iranian oil terminal; U.S.-escorted ships sail toward area

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraqi fighter-bombers hit Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal for a second day Sunday in an escalating offensive in the Persian Gulf as a new convoy of U.S.-escorted Kuwaiti tankers sailed toward the battle zone.

Iraq said it resumed the attacks Saturday after a 45-day lull to keep Iran from using increased oil revenues to continue the 7-year-old war and force it to accept a United Nations cease-fire.

Iran vowed Saturday to retaliate with "a crushing response" if its oil exports were threatened and said no targets would be immune, including the reflagged Kuwaiti tankers and the U.S. warships escorting them. But there has been no Iranian retaliation so far.

The convoy of two tankers and at least six U.S. warships was about a third of the way along its 550-mile voyage to Kuwait.

Redesigned space shuttle booster test-fired successfully in Utah

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — A redesigned space shuttle booster rocket roared into life in its first full-scale test-firing Sunday, a crucial step before the planned renewal of shuttle missions next June.

The 126-foot-long solid fuel rocket blasted orange flame 500 feet and a thick cloud of smoke boiled 1,500 feet into the sky above Morton Thiokol Inc.'s desert test site 25 miles west of here.

The test of the solid fuel booster was originally scheduled Thursday, but was aborted three times by test equipment failures.

Before the boosters are certified and the shuttles are allowed to fly again, officials have decided that the redesigned booster must be test-fired at least four times on the ground.

Aquino claims mutinous troops aimed to assassinate her, family

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino said Sunday that mutinous troops tried not only to topple her government but aimed to kill her and her family.

Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile said he was not involved in Friday's coup attempt by up to 1,200 rebel troops led by his former aide. The daylong battle left at least 25 people dead and 275 wounded.

Mrs. Aquino laid a wreath Sunday at a Fort Bonifacio military cemetery on National Heroes' Day. Dozens of guards with Uzi submachine guns and M-16 rifles maintained tight security for her first public appearance since the rebellion.

"The aim of the rebels was clearly to kill the president and her family," she said in prepared remarks.

Her only son, Benigno Aquino III, was wounded and three of his bodyguards killed as they returned to the presidential palace early Friday. He later said the rebels fired on their car after he identified himself as the president's son.

Israel votes by narrow margin to halt warplane production

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet yielded to strong pressure from Washington and voted by the narrowest of margins Sunday to cancel production of the Lavi, a needle-nosed jet fighter designed as Israel's warplane of the future.

The vote, which followed months of acrimonious debate, was 12 to 11 with one abstention.

America had provided nearly all of the financing for the project, and U.S. officials were concerned about the huge cost over-runs.

Cancellation was also a blow for Israel's billion-dollar-a-year arms industry, already struggling from the loss of overseas markets, including South Africa and Iran, in recent years.

Lavi supporters said cancellation would produce layoffs of 5,000 of the 20,000 employees of Israel Aircraft Industries, or IAI, the state-owned company that developed the plane.

Pope day business uncertain for Tempe merchants

By TRACY SCOTT
State Press

Merchants in downtown Tempe do not know if business will boom or bust Sept. 14, when crowds of more than 250,000 are expected to flock to Tempe while Pope John Paul II celebrates Mass in Sun Devil Stadium.

Some area merchants are capitalizing on the buying power of pope followers.

Retailers and restaurants are selling pontiff paraphernalia ranging from T-shirts, coffee mugs and pope masks to pope drink specials.

"Since it is the first time (for a papal visit), no one knows what to expect," said Art DeMar, owner of Duck Soup in Hayden Square.

DeMar is selling pope memorabilia including pins, coffee mugs and posters.

DeMar expects crowds to visit Tempe shops two or three hours before and after the 6:30 p.m. Mass at Sun Devil Stadium.

Tempe officials are expecting the greatest influx of traffic to come before 4 p.m., and University officials expect campus parking lots to reach capacity by 3 p.m.

Shops offering papal memorabilia

Denise Teichert, Esprit store manager at Hayden Square, said pedestrian traffic for sales is difficult to estimate.

"Business will go one way or the other," she said. "Business will be exceptional or bad when he is speaking here."

But Ben Wood, owner of East Side Records, said he anticipates the pope's Tempe visit will detour business and he is considering whether to remain open. His Pope-Alope T-shirts are selling well, he added.

"Football games kill business because traffic is a nightmare," he said.

Beamers, at the corner of Mill Avenue and University Drive, will extend hours until 1 a.m. to show the tape-delay of the first Monday night NFL football game between the Chicago Bears and the New York Giants.

The football game has been a sore spot for fans who have to wait until 10:30 p.m. to watch a tape-delay broadcast of the contest. KTVK-TV (Channel 3) Program Coordinator Randee Mossburg said the station still plans to carry live coverage of the pope because "the station is building a news image. The pope is big and we want to be a part of it."

But Mossburg said the station is considering relinquishing the broadcast rights to a local independent.

Back in Tempe, Marsha Maguire, owner of Circus at 501 S. Mill Ave., said there will be large crowds in downtown Tempe, making her add staff for that day.

"We will have extra staff to prevent shoplifting," she said. "If there are 200,000 people coming to Tempe they have to do something."

Circus is selling pope T-shirts, baseball caps, posters and $7 disposable cameras.

"Maybe sales won't be high that day but I expect repeat business," she said.

Martin Katz, the owner of Sub Stop at 222 E. University Drive, said he expects business to be good for restaurants but "the retailers will get hurt."

"From figures that I hear it is going to be crazy," he said.

Sub Stop is selling Pope 1880 beer imported from England.

A hot dog vendor at the corner of University Drive and College Avenue, Casey O'Hara, said he too, is pressed to predict business.

"I don't think I will be busy, busy, but then again I might be swamped," he said.

But O'Hara, who is a parishioner at All Saints Catholic Newman Center, said he hopes to attend the Mass rather than sell hot dogs from his roadside stand.

In addition, Mill Avenue T-Shirt Co. at 11 E. Fifth St. selling pope T-shirts, pennants and bumper stickers.

Campus Drug on College Avenue is marketing scroll calendars, pope portraits, buttons, bumper stickers and pennants of the pontiff.

Pacific Eye's and T's in The Cornerstone is selling sweatshirts and T-shirts depicting the pope.

Mill Landing in Hayden Square will have food and drink specials during the papal visit.

ASU workers given temporary leave for papal Mass

University officials have switched gears and decided to give ASU employees temporary leave beginning noon Sept. 14 when Pope John Paul II will deliver Mass at Sun Devil Stadium.

Previously, administrators were considering the day a regular business day but encouraging employees to use vacation or compensatory time off.

More than 250,000 people are expected in Tempe to see the pontiff, and anticipated traffic congestion and limited campus parking spaces pushed University officials to cut the day short.

Susan Malaga, director of personnel, said ASU employees only will work a half day to alleviate parking and traffic problems.

"The (former) plan was working, but we wouldn't know how many people were going to take that day off until the actual day," Malaga said.

She said concern about building and equipment security also played a role in closing down campus for the Mass.

The decision was made by ASU President J. Russell

Nelson last week after consulting with the Arizona Board of Regents.

Work schedules for ASU West and Downtown Center have not been decided yet, but traffic will affect the Montebello campus when the pope visits St. Simon and St. Jude Cathedral, 6351 N. 27th Ave. He will make a short 12:30 p.m. address at the church before an expected crowd of 1,200.

Classes on that Monday at ASU and ASU West have been rescheduled for Reading Day, Dec. 11, which is traditionally set aside for study.

With sincere apologies to Thomas Jefferson . . .

When, in the course of collegiate events, it becomes necessary for one People to dissolve the athletic bands that have connected them with another, and to assume among the Powers of the NCAA the separate and equal station to which the laws of Competition and Competition's God entitle them, a decent Respect to the Opinions of Sports Fans requires that they should declare the causes that impel them to Separation.

We hold these Truths to be self-evident: that all sports fans are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are Football Tickets, Alcohol in the Stadium and the Pursuit of an NFL Franchise; that to secure these Rights, Athletic Departments are instituted among Fans, deriving their powers from the consent of the Fans; that when any Athletic Department becomes destructive to these ends, it is the Right of the Fans to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new Athletic Department, laying its foundations on such principles, and organizing its Powers in such Form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.

Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Athletic Departments long-established should not be changed for light and transient Causes; and according to all Experience hath shown, Fans are more disposed to suffer, while Evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long Train of Abuses and Usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a Design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their Right, it is their Duty, to throw off such an Athletic Department, and to provide new Guards for their Future Security.

Such has been the patient Sufferings of these Students; and such is now the Necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Athletic Administration. The History of the present Director of the Athletic Department is a history of repeated Injuries and Usurpations, all having in direct Object the Establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these Students.

He has refused to allot more than 10,000 tickets for a student body of 42,000.

He has refused to allow alcohol in the stadium, but only enforced such refusal in the section of the stadium containing students.

He has posed an obstacle to the arrival of an NFL franchise in Phoenix by demanding that any prospective team lease Sun Devil Stadium for a period of at least seven years.

He has allotted Rose Bowl tickets for the school's first appearance in Pasadena in a manner favoring distribution to rich old Sun Angels that scream at Students to sit down when they try to cheer.

He has refused to allow Bruce Springsteen to play a concert in Sun Devil Stadium, on the grounds that it would destroy the field.

He has inflicted the dreaded Mud Bog on Sun Devil

Stadium on several occasions, causing the campus and surrounding town to be overrun by rednecks and ugly women in polyester haltertops.

In every stage of these Oppressions we have Petitioned for Redress in the most Humble terms: our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated Injury. An Administrator, whose character is thus marked with every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be Director of a free Athletic Department.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the UNITED STUDENTS OF ASU, in General Congress, Assembled, Appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the Rectitude of our Actions, do, in the Name and by Authority of the good Students of this University, solemnly Publish and Declare, that These United Students are, and of Right ought to be, Free and Independent Students; that they are Absolved from Allegiance to the ASU Athletic Department, and that all athletic connection between them and the ASU Athletic Department is and ought to be totally Dissolved, and as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Scalping, and to do all other Acts and Things which independent Students may of Right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm Reliance on the Protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our Financial Aid checks, and our sacred Honor.

No rush for Heiler?

Editor:

In regards to (Bob Heiler's) editorial entitled "Weak Greek," (Aug.27) I have a few comments.

First of all, how can you think that the Greek Review ("a rival publication?") competes with the State Press? They are in no way related. The State Press, "Arizona State University's Morning Daily," is a news-related publication which tries to be informative and unbiased, though anti-Greek undertones are everpresent.

Obviously, the Greek Review is an entirely different type of publication, aimed at entirely different readers, written for an entirely different purpose. The very fact that you feel threatened by a monthly publication read only by Greeks demonstrates your feelings of incompetence. The fact that you have to knock a newspaper of no concern to you only shows your immaturity.

And who who you think you are to call brotherhood, social life, intramural banners, test files, sorority girls and little sisters "fraternity hype?" It seems to me that you wouldn't have the slightest idea what being Greek is all about. After all, you are what we "Weak Greeks" refer to as a GDI. And personally, I think we'd like to keep it that way.

Please excuse the misspelled words, the writers of the Greek Review work on a volunteer basis and do not have the funding to hire editors like you do. I'm sure if we read some of your unedited material there would be plenty of misspells.

The Greek Review caters to the Greek System. You obviously cannot appreciate the humor contained in the Greek Review, so why are you reading it?

By the way, was it a bad rush for you?

Mecham is proud

Editor:

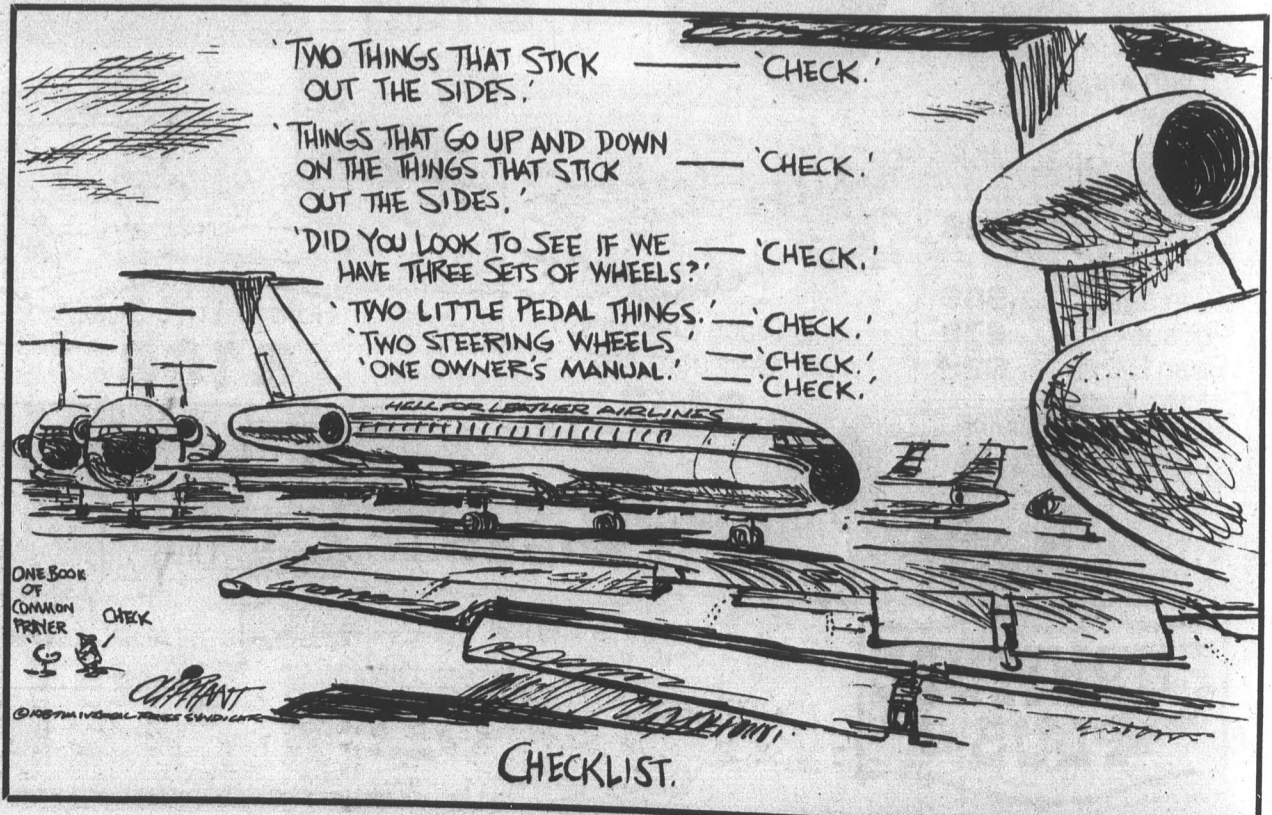

I would like to congratulate ASU on their establishment of a new method of management of student activities during Wednesday's sales of season football passes. The event was meticulously planned to insure that the sales would be organized and strict regulations of sales were set forth in order to provide a fair distribution of tickets.

But this unique idea, used in ticket sales, should not stop here.

I suggest that next year ASU integrate this procedure into their student registration process. Registration could be made much easier by allowing unlimited student enrollment by any individual, provided, of course, that they have a driver's license for every student. This would make registration so much easier for me, personally, as I find that arriving in Tempe a week before classes begin and waiting in lines is a real burden. I would much rather spend another week in California while my Arizona friends are registering me.

Once again, a job well done, ASU. I'll bet Mecham is proud.

Inquisitive press corps gets to the Hart of the matter

Mike Royko
Tribune Media
Services

Gary Hart's former campaign director insists that Hart will soon leap back into the presidential race.

The former aide, William Dixon, says that while Hart knows he can't win, he will run to bring forth significant issues that other candidates shy away from.

I think that's a fine idea. There are many significant matters that candidates hesitate to discuss frankly for fear of losing a few votes. But as a noncandidate-candidate, Hart could speak his mind.

And I can imagine what the stimulating dialogue will be like when he makes his first appearance on one of the Sunday morning news shows such as "Face the Universe."

"Our guest today is former Sen. Gary Hart, who withdrew from the Democratic race earlier this year, but has recently returned as a candidate. Our first question will be asked by Jack Keyhole from the Washington Post. Jack?"

"Senator Hart, you are in your early 50s. I believe that millions of American males who are in the same age bracket would like to know if you take vitamin pills. And, if so, what kind and in what quantities."

"Jack, it has been my policy to take only a standard multivitamin pill in the morning. I have never been a believer in megavitamin doses, although I do not rule that out as a possible option should the need arise."

"I'll be darned. Well, then, what are your views on ginseng, the Korean root which is said to have certain, well, certain powers of stimulation? My wife has been urging me to try it."

"Yes, I do believe that ginseng can have invigoratory value and I have used it as a dietary supplement."

"The next question is from Bill Transom of The Wall Street Journal. Bill?"

"Senator, throughout history, candlelight and wine have been a recommended prelude to significant events, but there are experts who argue that wine, or any alcoholic beverage, can have debilitating effects, especially on men in their middle years, causing drowsiness at crucial moments in these events. Would you comment on that?"

"Yes. I am an advocate of both candlelight and wine, but with certain limitations. One or two glasses at the most, although you might allow, or even encourage, the person with whom you are engaged in what we might call sensitive negotiations to indulge in a bit more, so long as this person is not rendered incapable of bringing the matter under consideration to a satisfactory conclusion."

"We now move on to Ronald Lewd, of the New York Post. Ronald?"

"Senator, it's been said that there are basically two kinds of male Americans — those who wear the traditional jockey shorts and those who wear the more contemporary tight briefs. What is your choice and why?"

"I believe it is a matter of personal choice and one's anatomy. I prefer briefs. But I don't believe that they are appropriate for everyone. For example, Sen. Paul Simon would probably feel more comfortable in jockey shorts."

"The next question is from commentator George Won't. George?"

"Senator, I would like to know if you believe, as Rogers and Hammerstein wrote in their immortal 'South Pacific,' that there is potential for a meaningful relationship in seeing a stranger across a crowded room and becoming aware that you will see this individual again and again? In other words, sir, is there such a thing as one enchanted evening?"

"Yes, I believe that with resolve and a clear approach to one's goals, that from a crowded room and a stranger there can evolve an enchanted evening. Or even several enchanted evenings, if you are prudent."

"Our final question is from Velma Prude, of the Christian Science Monitor. Velma?"

"Senator, other than bringing these issues before the voters, did you have any other motive for re-entering this campaign?"

"Yes, Velma. It was the only way I could get out of the house."

"Thank you, Senator."

"Thank you Velma. And do you have any dinner plans?"

Public Programs dean to tackle accreditation

J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

The new acting dean of the College of Public Programs, Louis F. Weschler, begins his post today with a goal to tackle accreditation problems in the journalism school.

Weschler, who comes to the college from his position as acting dean of the College of Architecture and Environmental Design, said he wants to ensure the Walter Cronkite School of Journalism's bid for reaccreditation is a success.

The school was given "provisional" accreditation in May by the American Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communication. The council cited several problem areas, including too many students per full-time faculty member, not enough faculty supervision, lack of communication with alumni and lack of diversity within the faculty.

Weschler said he is working closely with the school's director, Doug Anderson, and supporting his planned changes.

The journalism school received a 53 percent budget increase this year, and Anderson said he will use the additional funds to hire more faculty and purchase broadcasting equipment.

Weschler said he was not involved in the budget process last year so he will be "constrained and cautious" with school funds.

Weschler, who was a public programs faculty member from 1980-1987, said returning to the college is like "coming home."

He is working with the college's schools and departments to develop five-year strategic plans. Each school is at a different stage in developing its plan, and he said he hopes the plans will provide direction for the future permanent dean.

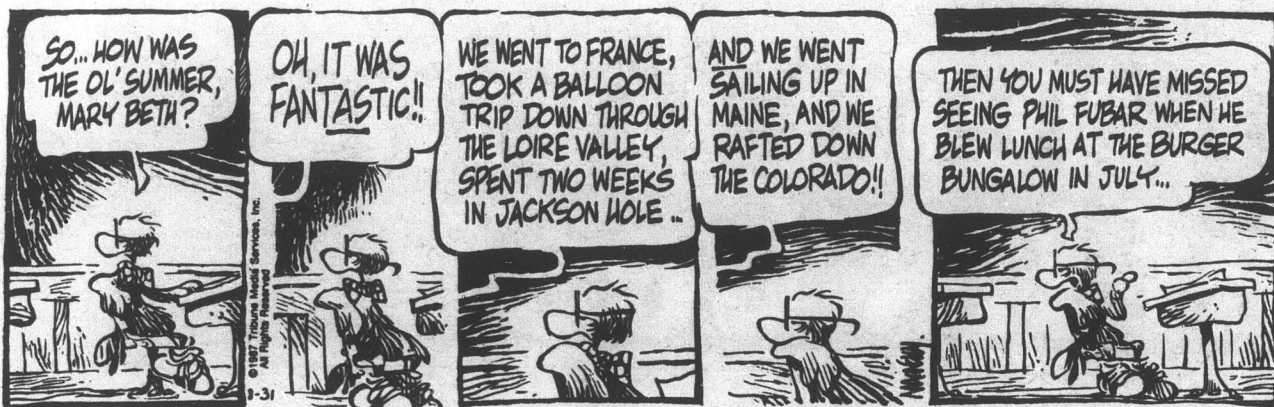

Weschler succeeds Nicholas Henry, who left ASU last semester to become president of Georgia Southern College.

His appointment was announced August 21, and Weschler said assuming the post late in the year has presented some difficulties.

"This past week I've been cramming in lots of meetings and information," he said. "I've been meeting with each of the chairs about what is going on and (about) their problems. "I also want to meet with the faculty this week."

Tempe cop beaten

A Tempe police officer was seriously injured early Sunday during a struggle with a man who reportedly stole his flashlight and beat him over the head with it, police said.

Officer Dan Brown was attempting to place the unknown suspect through field sobriety tests in the 1300 block of S. Wilson St., when the suspect fled.

When Brown, 24, caught up to the suspect, a struggle ensued and the suspect took Brown's flashlight and beat him over the head, neck and back. He also received several bite marks to his arm before radioing for help.

Brown was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital for observation and is listed in good condition.

The suspect remains at large. He was last seen driving a reddish-brown Datsun B210 hatchback with Arizona license plates.

•For Steven Montenegro, the third time wasn't a charm.

Montenegro, 22, address unknown, was arrested early Friday after he returned to the 7-11 from which he allegedly stole a case of beer the previous morning, Tempe police said.

Police said Montenegro had attempted to rob the convenience store at 1006 S. McClintock Drive a first time Monday by pulling a knife on a clerk. Montenegro fled the store when the clerk pulled a knife on him.

On Thursday, he came back to the store and allegedly stole the case of beer, police said.

Montenegro was arrested Friday after a clerk recognized him from the two previous incidents, locked the store's front doors and called police.

ASU initiates literacy campaign

College of Liberal arts receives 3-year grant

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences is launching a program to combat illiteracy on campus and ensure ASU students do not contribute to the national illiteracy problem, the college dean said.

Samuel A. Kirkpatrick said, "Illiteracy is a well-known national problem, not just at ASU."

According to Mary Preston, legislative director of the U.S. Student Association, 27 million adults are functionally illiterate and cannot read or write beyond the eighth grade level.

Preston said 23 percent of females and 17 percent of males are illiterate. She said 16 percent of caucasians, 44 percent of blacks and 56 percent of Hispanic adults are complete or marginal non-readers.

A $100,000 Ford Foundation grant, "Literacy in the Liberal Arts and Sciences," will be used to help ASU faculty members use writing more effectively in their classes, Kirkpatrick said.

He said the three-year grant, which began in June, will promote faculty development, objective writing and study-time for faculty. It also will be used for new courses to meet requirements in literacy and critical inquiry and to enrich current courses, he said.

"Writing across the curriculum" is the key phrase, said Mary Green, associate dean of the college and director of the literacy project.

"The plan is to introduce writing into all disciplines," she said. "If you improve writing, you improve thinking and reading."

The plans coincide with new college graduation requirements and the revamped University General Studies Program.

Kirkpatrick said faculty and student surveys were conducted over a year's time to evaluate student reading and writing deficiencies.

"We found out that writing is the primary stumbling block that students have," he said.

An ad hoc writing committee was formed to find a solution, and this semester, six faculty members will be given release time to research how to effectively incorporate more writing into classes.

Green said project results will be evident in fall 1988.

During the 1988-89 school year, faculty will teach writing-enriched courses, evaluate them and expand the program.

In the third year, Kirkpatrick said grant money will go toward writing development in big, lecture-hall classes.

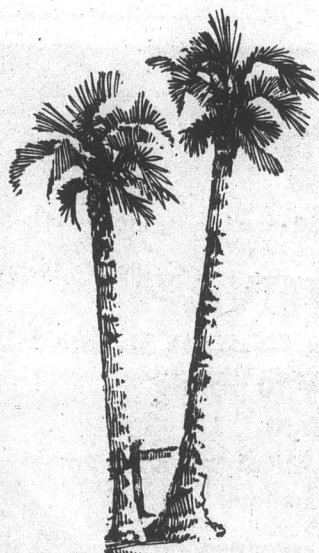

"We hope to use the grant money to get a pilot program which will become a model for a larger program," Green said.

According to a study done by the non-profit Coalition for Literacy in Lincoln, Neb., illiteracy is costing U.S. businesses billions in lost productivity because one in every five American workers cannot read.

Bob Tate, a quality consultant with QCI International in Red Bluff, Calif., said illiteracy in the United States is hurting the country's ability to effectively compete.

In Japan, the employee literacy rate is in the 90-percent range.

"For years we pushed people through our school system without requiring that they actually understand what was being taught," Tate said. "Now it is coming back to haunt us in our work force."

ASU given grant to aid El Salvador

Staff and wire reports

ASU has been awarded a federal $3.48 million contract to help reform the banking system of El Salvador and smooth the flow of American aid to farmers in that country, University officials said Saturday.

The contract, awarded by the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) as part of a $45 million assistance program, is expected to be approved Monday by University officials.

ASU officials have sought the contract for 18 months and say it could boost the school's stature in the international community.

Under the contract, which will be spread over the next four years, ASU is to teach Salvadoran banking and government officials how to get an estimated $41 million in American aid to farmers.

Despite controversy over the United States' presence in Central America, ASU Professor Jerry Ladman said the contract is not viewed as "a political issue at all."

Ladman, director of ASU's Center of Latin American Studies, said the University hopes to create a credit line for farmers with the country's largest bank, the Central Reserve Bank, and conduct training programs for banking officials and credit agents.

Under the training programs, government and banking officials would work toward master's degrees in agribusiness, economics and business administration. Some of those officials would attend six American universities. Others, who speak only Spanish, would attend universities in Costa Rica and Mexico.

The University also would explore policy changes that would help improve the loan-assistance program and set up rural branches to allow farmers to more easily deposit their money and make payments.

Ladman said Salvador's current banking and economic problems resulted from banking officials' inability to deal with governmental reforms in agriculture since 1980.

The government program was designed to eliminate large land estates and replace them with agricultural cooperatives, which consisted of peasants who formerly worked on the larger holdings.

Problems arose when banks became reluctant to make loans to the cooperatives because the farmers were inexperienced in management and use of credit.

Richard Olson, ASU international programs director, said Sunday the purpose of the program, making the 1980 agrarian reform work better, is "incredibly important in a country like El Salvador."

Olson said University officials learned of the planned aid program through University faculty who were doing research in El Salvador.

He said the 300-page contract proposal was put together by several University officials and departments.

"There were lots of players involved," he said, adding that although the program will be operated out of the Center for Latin American Studies, it will be a broad-based University effort.

Olson said this is the first technical contract from AID the University has ever received and has turned the Center into a major research and technical assistance organization "virtually overnight."

"They've always had a solid program, but this gives them major visibility," he said.

Olson said the project will involve mostly current University faculty and staff, with heavy use of off-campus consultants from around the world.

"There'll be some staff which will have to be added, but most of it's going to come from existing people."

Olson said there is a good chance the contract will give the University a reputation in foreign technical assistance and lead to more contracts.

"I know a couple of universities who are running these programs in three or four countries at the same time."

The University has also been involved in a technical assistance program in Saudi Arabia for several years, Olson said.

Sad songs say so much for Texas singer

By TWYLA PUMROY
State Press

Even cowgirls get the blues. Spawned from the land of cowboy boots, rodeos, and above all else, country music, Angela Strehli turned away from the expected and became a blues singer.

How she got there is a mystery even to Strehli.

"It chose me, there was no reason for me to pick the blues," Strehli said in a telephone interview from Lubbock, Texas in a voice that is pure gravel with a twang. "I grew up in West Texas and was barely exposed to it (blues); it got my curiosity going."

"I was always a big fan," she said. "I tried playing harmonica and bass but I got pushed into singing; it took me years to convince myself that I should be singing."

Strehli will be singing in the Valley at 9 p.m. Tuesday at Chuy's nightclub in Tempe.

As a reluctant singer, Strehli is doing remarkably well. Her first album, "Soul Shake," recorded on the Antones label, has recently been released and Phoenix is the kick-off point for a road tour that will take her across America and to Europe.

Strehli's style is upbeat and can't really be described as blues in the traditional sense of the word.

"Blues has various styles," she said. "If you're not familiar with those, you play very boring blues. My original material has varied influence — gospel, Latin American, African, because those are all (types of) music that I have always loved."

Strehli's dedication, loyalty and belief in the emotional quality of the music that she performs is evident. She said she has received offers to do recording work before, but she wanted to record with her band to preserve the feeling of her music.

Strehli, who has been singing the blues for about 20 years, said that she had to take some time out from performing recently in order to write.

"I took some time off from having a band," Strehli said. "I took five years and forced myself to write. During that time, even though I didn't have a band, I sat in with numerous blues masters."

Is Strehli blue now?

Hell no! Everything is coming together for her.

"I feel that as a performer I'm reaching my peak," Strehli said. "You can't really put across blues until you've had some life experiences. I feel that I have finally matured enough to do credible blues."

"What makes it fun, since I am a reluctant performer, is that people need the music and they love it; it's the kind of music that's so straightforward and honest."

Valley band rips n' tears at bar scene hearts

By CERISE WILSON

State Press

The words are shouted with telling effect. "We're tight! Rip n' Tear — that's who we are!" The song "We're Tight" is usually sung at the end of the show, almost as a last reminder, so the crowd won't forget who they have just seen.

If you've seen Rip n' Tear perform, chances are you don't need this little reminder. Their live shows are full of high energy rock and roll, executed by five men who have more than their share of stage presence and know how to use it.

"What we do onstage comes natural," says Jim Seagraves, Rip n' Tear's lead singer. "I'm a natural wise guy. Sure, we all have our down days, and it's hard to go on and do a show, but we do," Seagraves says of playing a show the night after having his wisdom teeth pulled.

Backing Seagraves is Fred Robinson and Mark Parks on guitars, bassist Randy Bush and power drummer Chris Casey. Robinson and Parks were the last additions to the band and the union has been a profitable one. They were voted best heavy rock band in Phoenix by Soundboard Magazine and won the battle of the bands at The Mason Jar, beating out the top rock bands in the Valley.

Seagraves and Bush have been playing music together for four years, beginning in a new wave band called Little Britain. "The idea for Rip n' Tear started way back then," Bush recalls.

"We wanted the guys in the band to be as much fun visually as possible," Seagraves said. Their new band started out doing copy tunes until they built up an ample amount of original songs. They now have enough original material to fill over three albums.

Rip n' Tear

The songs begin with music that Seagraves, Bush, and Robinson put together. Seagraves then puts words to this music. "We write for everybody," he said, whether it's sexist heavy rock (I Love Sex), a slow love ballad (I Caught You Crying) or mock reggae (Oh No, I Get Zero). The reggae actually started out as a joke.

"We were trying to get a raise from Ed (owner of Edcel's Attic) and we found out that he paid (reggae artist) Walt Richardson more, so we wrote it and played it for Ed one night. When we finished, the crowd roared. We've been doing it ever since."

Rip n' Tear get their inspiration from many different sources. "Foolish" was a song written when they were asked to participate in the Rock Against Mechem concert at ASU last spring. The song became their anti-Mecham anthem.

"Bad vibrations from shaking your hand. You look at me so cold, you try to ruin this land," the words read.

Hard-driving rock and roll is alive and well in the Valley of the Sun. Rip n' Tear is evidence of that. Even if you're not expecting to have an enjoyable experience, dare this band to entertain you. They'll take the dare. With their silly stage antics and danceable rock and roll, Rip n' Tear will do what it takes to give the crowd a show not soon forgotten. It's a performance that should be seen at least once.

Rip n' Tear takes center stage tonight at 9 p.m. at Deja Vue, located at 5025 N. Seventh Ave. For more information call 274-1934.

Cryer and entourage save 'Dudes'

Who ever said movies had to make sense? From the incredibly vivid directing of Penelope Spheeris comes "Dudes," a seemingly off-the-wall comedy/drama about the misadventures of three punked-out teen-agers attempting to find solace in the wild west.

Although "Dudes" is no dud, it does suffer from too much cinematic mousse, making it and the audience's nerves stand on end from time to time. If it's heavy metal and hair you want, "Dudes" is definitely the "how to" picture of punk.

Jon Cryer ("Pretty in Pink") headlines the film as the often fed-up Grant, a New York City punker who chooses to head West with his two friends — played by Daniel Roebuck (Biscuit) and Flea (Milo).

Big city life has given the trio big city blues and while traveling in the desert, they discover big cactus mayhem.

Milo is killed by a group of desert banshee-types. Grant and Biscuit survive the ordeal, but it's Cryer's character who opts to stay and fight back.

From there the film winds into some predictable and nonsensical adventures as Grant and Biscuit have a few more unsuccessful run-ins with the bad guys.

Enter Catherine Mary Stewart ("Night of the Living Dead") as Stewart comes into the picture playing a j eventually the big apple of Grant's eye.

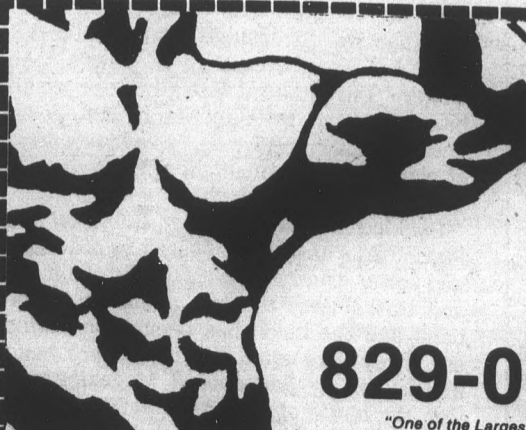

It is here she teaches Cryer's character how to ride a horse and shoot a gun while Biscuit suddenly decides he's really an Indian chief.

Go figure. Actually Cryer and his entourage save "Dudes" from being the total dud it could have been. At times the film is original and innovative, but overall it lacks the kick in the keister it takes to make it a sure-fire hit.

Cryer and Stewart are particularly good, but unfortunately the script never allows any of the actors to shine as best they could.

By GREGORY ROBERT KRZOS
State Press

It took a lot for actor Daniel Roebuck to leave his home back East, head to Hollywood and try battling it out against all the California ne'er do-wells.

Roebuck, who currently can be seen in Vista films' "Dudes," insists there's a reason for this rambunctious decision.

"I must have been dropped on my head when I was a kid," Roebuck said jokingly in a telephone interview from Los Angeles. About show business, he said: "It's the dumbest career choice anyone could make. I just want to go down to all those people at the bus depot and say 'What's the matter with you? Get on that bus, There are 20,000 people coming here a day.'"

Apparently dropping in on Hollywood has paid off for the young actor. In "Dudes," Roebuck plays Biscuit, a wild and bizarre punk rocker who's fed up with life in the big city. In the film, Roebuck, Cryer and Lee Ving are friends who head West for a simpler life.

"The kids grew up with a particular type of ideals," Roebuck said of the punked-out trio. "I guess all of the emotions they've had bottled up inside have been ignored and eventually come out."

Roebuck's character, Biscuit, is especially dripping with emotion. And for the actor, playing the role of a wild and frenzied wildman was indeed far from his own upbringing.

"I had this quaint, little, parochial upbringing in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania," he said. "I'll never write a book about how my parents beat me, I had a wonderful family. I have wonderful friends and the character in that film was so alienated."

When asked if he was attracted to out-of-the-ordinary roles, Roebuck said, "I guess I'm fortunate enough because it finds me too. I'm such a wierd type. Ya know I'm big — I'm not fat, I'm not huge — and thank God I got away from those fat guy parts where the kid goes on Bob Newhart and says, "Yeah, give me 12 pizzas."

Roebuck was last seen as Samson in the critically-acclaimed "River's Edge." In October, he'll begin filming "Farm of the Year," with Richard Gere.

"I play this state trooper, who's not deranged in the crazy sense, but is chasing Richard Gere and Kevin Anderson," he said.

Gere and Anderson play brothers who "have to burn down their family's farm or they're going to lose it. By the end of the film, I catch the other brother and go after Gere."

Although Roebuck enjoys acting, he said his way of "doing Hollywood" is somewhat different from most actors.

"I'm excessively lucky and I have good people working for me," he said. "I work in kind of a funny way — I stay away from the Hollywood thing, I stay away from parties and screenings and have this small group of agents and managers who tell me where to be. I usually go do my job and then come back home."

About breaking into the business, like most professionals, Roebuck has a lot to say.

"Ya know, the odds are just so set against you."

"If you feel like you can do something else, then don't come out here," he said. "There's such a drive from people already out here. If you want to come out here and be a success, then you're coming out here for the wrong reasons."

"I came out here because I wanted to be an actor. I didn't need to be a star. I think you just need to do this and nothing else."

Love

Latest Touchstone flick buys into fine storyline, comedy

By SCOTT C. SECKEL
State Press

"The moon has a crack in it," says Ron (Patrick Dempsey). Like the moon, teen-drama "Can't Buy Me Love" also has a dark, murky side; the over-exaggerated emotional interactions of the characters, too much adolescent humor and some nasty assumptions about women.

Crossing to the other side of the moon, Touchstone Pictures has put out a basically good, temporally relevant story with some fine performances and NO ANNOYING TAILOR-MADE soundtrack to distract moviegoers from it.

In a market that is gagging on sweet teen flicks (John Hughes is the name that comes to mind), "Can't Buy Me Love" is a refreshing drink that is made palatable for all by director Steve Rash.

Ron, a nerd living in Tucson (apparently Hollywood has discovered that teenagers live in places other than southern California), becomes fed up with his limited social life and pays beautiful cheerleader Cindy (Amanda Petersen) $1000 to act as his girlfriend for a month.

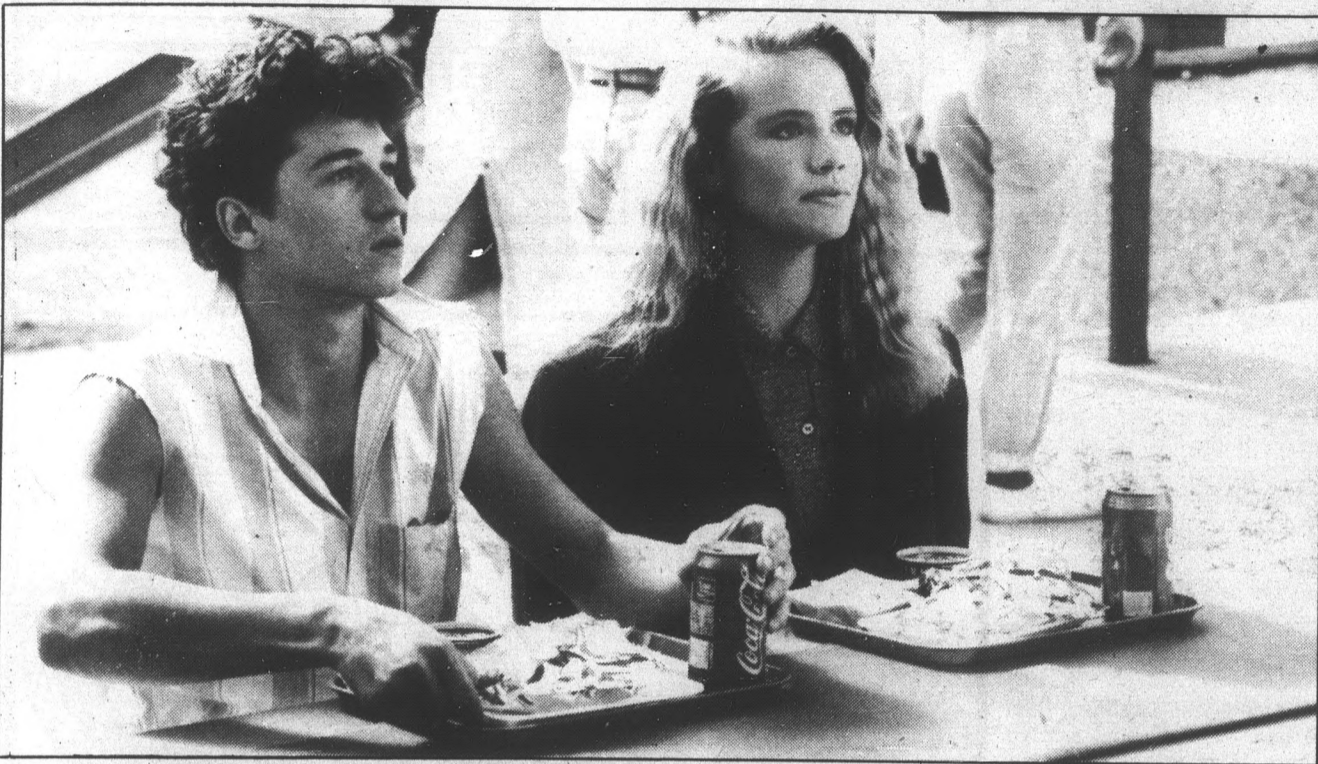

Ron's scheme works for a while. He goes from "geek status to chic status." The movie's pace takes off at this point and its predictability careens as wildly as a divine force.

As it takes a divine force to destroy man's ordered world and show its faults and strengths, it takes Cindy's drunken confession at a party to put Ron's unrealistic personality ambitions into perspective.

This film has a nasty little twist to it; it is high school as it really was, with kids driven wild by taunts and humiliation. Screenwriter Michael Swerdlick has captured the callousness of young adults old enough to know what hurts but too young to know where to draw the line.

The main characters have depth and personality due to Swerdlick's skill and the actors' capabilities. One young professional to keep an eye on is Courtney Gaines, who plays Kenneth, Ron's ex-friend and object of torment. The exceptions to these standards are the supporting characters, both male and female.

Patrick Dempsey and Amanda Peterson are lovestruck in "Can't Buy Me Love."

The former aren't much more than Cro-Magnons in Lacoste and the latter... well, it doesn't take an ERA diehard to object to these cardboard nymphomaniacs.

We also get shafted with adolescent humor ("Porky's"-type yuks over flatulence are dissipating from the genre, one hopes), but what can be expected from a flick about adolescence?

This film can be viewed by everyone on the basis that everyone, to some extent, practices self-deception. The long- and short-term harm resulting from phoniness are portrayed in such a way that the theme of the film is driven home — hard.

Reagan wishes best for Marvin's family

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan and his wife Nancy "are saddened by the news" of actor Lee Marvin's death, a White House spokesman said Sunday.

Deputy Press Secretary Dan Howard said the president and first lady "extend their sympathies" to Marvin's family and friends.

Four days ago, White House press office staff members accompanying the Reagans on their 25-day California vacation issued a statement on the first couple's behalf, mourning the death of actor-director John Huston.

Reagan co-starred with Marvin in the 1963 movie, "The Killers."

Marvin, 63, who won an Oscar as a drunken gunfighter in "Cat Ballou," died of a heart attack Saturday at Tucson Medical Center in Arizona.

He had been hospitalized since Aug. 13 with what Tom Reavis, director of community affairs for the hospital, described as a rundown condition related to the flu.

Marvin owned a sprawling home in the Catalina Foothills near Tucson.

Usually playing a tough guy, he had roles in such films as

"The Dirty Dozen," "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance," "Donovan's Reef" and "Ship of Fools."

In 1979, he made headlines in a landmark palimony case when he was sued for half his estate by Michelle Triola Marvin, a woman he lived with for six years but never married.

Her claim was rejected, but Marvin was ordered to pay her a nominal sum for rehabilitation.

In 1984, after he married his childhood sweetheart, Pamela Feeley, he moved to Tucson.

In December, he had intestinal surgery after suffering abdominal pains while at his home. Officials said then that there was an inflammation of his colon but that no malignancy was found.

The Reagans returned to their ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains on Saturday after spending four days in Los Angeles.

The weather was overcast and there was a low-lying fog Sunday as the pair resumed their vacation.

The 25-day respite ends on Sept. 6, when Reagan returns to Washington.

Ely keeps rock n' roll faith with latest LP

By HOWIE MALHAM JR.
State Press

How do you like your Rock n' Roll? Or, perhaps, in the day of the albino-bleached, clean-shaven Madonna, should I ask, "Do you like Rock n' Roll?"

Well, in any case, if you do like Rock n' Roll and you prefer it raw, lightly marinated in Southern seasoning, with a twist of rythm and blues, Joe Ely's "Lord of the Highway" will make your day, if not your semester.

"Highway" is undoubtedly a milestone for this Austin-based rocker, who, for too long, has remained virtually anonymous in the world of rock. Despite his anonymity, Ely has dared to bring back to rock n' roll what so many artists have abandoned in their pathetic quest for MTV Stardom-Toughness: integrity and passion.

With a guitar that mimics a refined Keith Richards and a voice borrowed from a content Bob Dylan, Ely manifests his most fervent effort to date.

The title track sets the pace for an album that, at times, rivals Ollie North for emotional diversity. Once he starts, there's no stopping.

He teases us with a sample of his flame-throwing riffs as he leads us through the silky "(Don't Put A) Lock On My Heart." He closes the side with his "Letter to L.A.," a painfully redeeming ballad in which Ely graciously filters his emotional vulnerability through a bleeding, servile guitar, that slices itself right out of your speaker.

Ely elevates us out of the gloom he set us in and leads us through a playful second side, without compromising any of the indigenous Texas sound he promised us.

In keeping with the tradition of his famed Austin predecessors (Stevie Ray Vaughn, The Fabulous Thunderbirds) Ely plays for the valiant cause of keeping the very foundation of true Rock n' Roll from meeting its demise.

"Lord Of The Highway" won't sell a million copies. Ely knows and Ely doesn't care. What he does care about is fulfilling all the empty promises that rock has spawned and once again clearly defining what rock n' roll really is all about. For that, we should all be grateful.

Ready

Ford begins to take over as starting quarterback

Todd Green/StatePress

ASU quarterback Dan Ford scrambles away from defensive back Jimmy Watkins in practice. Ford has emerged as the starter for the Sun Devils' first game against Illinois Sept. 12th.

By CAROL BOOS
State Press

Dan Ford has paid his dues for the last two years, and now he's ready to collect.

The junior from Tulsa, Okla., spent most of his first year at ASU on the bench, watching ex-Sun Devil Jeff Van Raaphorst break records.

And after fighting five candidates last spring for the starting position, Ford has finally risen to the top.

"No one likes to sit on the bench," Ford said. "I never intended to be a back-up. I know I wasn't ready last year, but I improved and I learned a lot from Jeff."

On Sept. 12, it looks as if Ford will get his chance to show his improvement and what he has learned as the Sun Devils travel to Illinois for their season opener.

Despite head football coach John Cooper's insisting that the quarterback job is still open, Ford is the man wearing the starter's yellow first-team jersey.

"I can't see anyone taking the job away from him over the next few days," Cooper said after Saturday's practice. "The job is still open but the other candidates have got to get ready and quit missing practice."

Saturday's practice included a game-situation practice, and Ford completed 17 of 26 passes for 240 yards along with two touchdowns and two interceptions. One touchdown was a 60-yard pass to split end Aaron Cox.

Among the other starting quarterback candidates is junior John Walker, who is Ford's closest competitor. Walker, who sat out spring practice recovering from elbow surgery, reinjured his elbow Saturday after completing 5 of 9 passes for 42 yards.

Paul Justin is also vying for the job, but the redshirt freshman is running a distant third. He completed 2 of 4 for 17 yards, after completing 11 of 16 (81 percent) for 163 yards and three touchdowns in eight appearances last season.

As of today though, Cooper has not been overly impressed with anyone.

"I'm a long way from being pleased," he said. "Thank God we have two more weeks to stop making some of the mistakes we're making."

"You build on what you learn," he said. "You just don't keep spinning your wheels. It's O.K. to fall down as long as you can get back up and don't make the same mistake again."

Ford began his college career at the University of Minnesota in 1984, where he completed five of 12 passes for 65 yards and one interception.

He then left Minnesota to go to Tulsa, where Cooper was the head coach.

"Sometimes things happen to make you better," Ford said. "If I'd stayed and started four years at Minnesota, I'm not sure I would have been better. I went through hard times, but I think I'm stronger for it."

When Cooper came to ASU, Ford came with him; but Arizona didn't seem so sunny

New coach, old problems plague California's Rose hopes

PREVIEW

Today: California (1986 2-9-0)

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a nine-part series previewing each football team in the Pac-10 Conference.

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

California had a season to forget last year.

The Golden Bears finished 2-9 overall, with a dismal 2-7 record in the Pac-10 — just barely enough to keep them out of the cellar. Cal was hammered by teams like Washington (50-18) and ASU (49-0).

Things can only get better in Berkeley, right?

With new head coach Bruce Snyder, 15 returning starters and an experienced quarterback, you would think there would be some optimism in northern California.

But there is not. The Bears will be lucky if they can stay out of last place again.

The most exciting thing going on up there is Cal's switch from the traditional black sneakers to the "sparkling new white shoes."

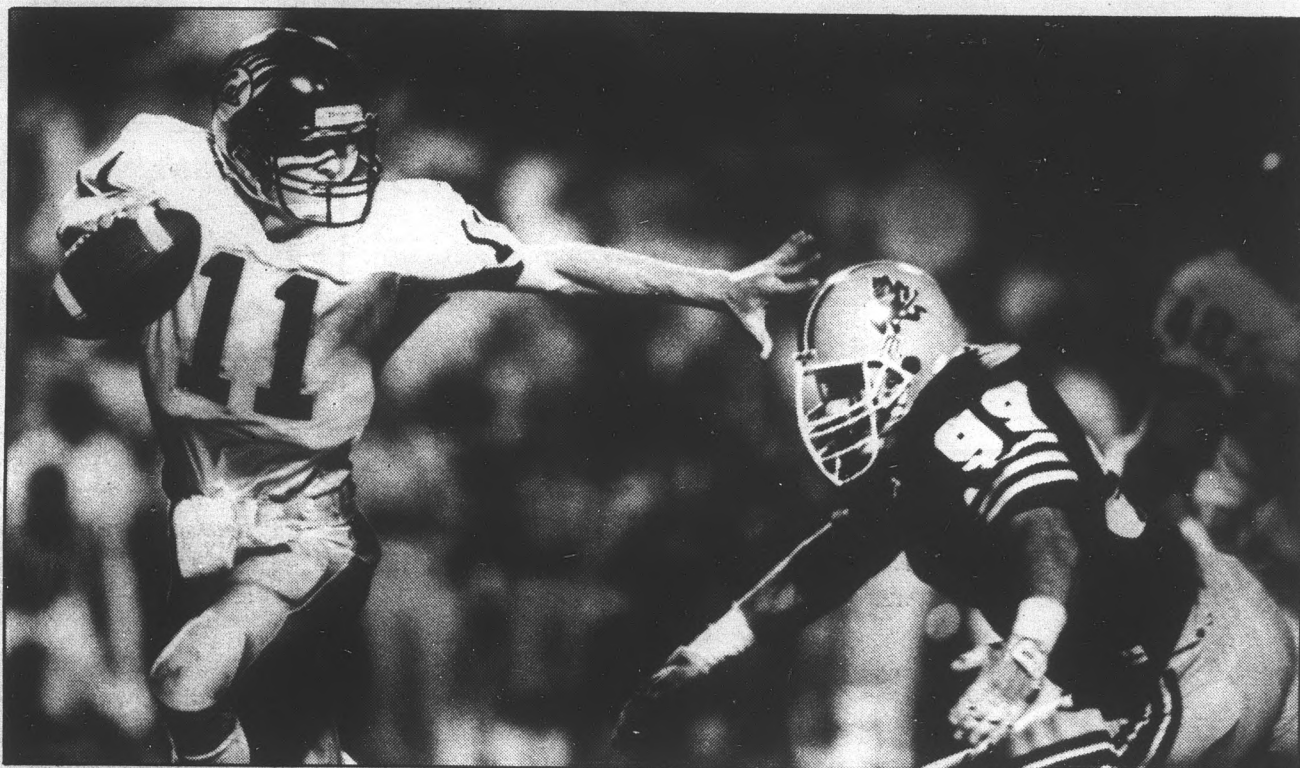

Snyder, who comes to Cal after a four-year stint as offensive backfield coach and rushing game coordinator with the Los Angeles Rams, inherits a team that returns 56 lettermen. Their 15 returning starters represents more than any other team in the Pac-10.

But the Bears will be counting on inexperienced sophomores at key skill positions. Their development will be crucial to the team's fortunes. Quarterback, flanker, outside linebacker and both cornerback positions fall into that category.

Understandably, Snyder is cautious about evaluating his team.

"It's very difficult for me to compare our talent level to other teams in the conference because I don't have that frame of reference," Snyder said. "The things I can judge — the effort, the commitment, the willingness on the part of the players — that's all been very positive."

This season also marks the first year for offensive coordinator Terry Shea. Shea has a lot of work to do with the Bears' offense, which appeared to be in slow motion last year — scoring only 145 points, the first time in 20 years a Cal team had scored less than 150 points in a season.

California quarterback Troy Taylor eludes Sun Devil Frank Rudolph last season. The Bears are hoping to improve this season under new coach Bruce Snyder.

But if anyone can revamp an offense, it's Shea. Last season at San Jose State, Shea's offense led the nation in total offense and scored 397 points.

The Bears will have a different look on offense. While the "I" formation is considered Cal's primary system, the Bears are expected to go to a three-wide receiver alignment as much as 60 percent of the time this fall.

"We're going to throw the ball a lot, there's no question about that, but I don't want people to think we are a finesse team," Snyder said. "In order to be successful, you need to have a solid running game and we plan to work hard to develop that."

"Our goal is to be a tough, physical football team and that means having a power running attack as opposed to one that depends on deception."

The Bear offense will be led by sophomore quarterback Troy Taylor (6-4, 180). Taylor, who was thrust into action five games into last season but posted some respectable numbers, throwing for 891 yards while hitting 57.5 percent of his passes (92-160-1 TD).

The Cal running game will have a new look this season, but most of the personnel will be the same as seven of the Bears' top eight rushers return.

Tailback Chris Richards (5-11, 185) and fullback Todd Powers (6-2, 230) return as Cal's top rushers. Richards rushed for 269 yards in 80 attempts for a 3.4 average and one touchdown. Powers gained 249 yards in 66 attempts for a 3.8 average and one touchdown.

The California receivers appear to be in for a busy year. The Bears return two of the top four receivers with junior James Devers (6-2, 180) and Richards. Devers had 40 catches for 582 yards and a 14.6-yard average. Richards had 26 receptions for 135 yards and a 5.2-yard average.

Cal's defensive unit has the opportunity to be one of the more improved groups in the Pac-10, with a strong bunch of returning frontline talent. The Bears have a new philosophy with its 3-4 defensive scheme that relies on zone coverages and patience.

"There are two qualities that we need to have in order for our defense to be successful," Snyder said. "We must have front people who cannot be knocked off the ball, meaning we have to be physical up front."

"And secondly, we must be able to make pattern reads in to Ford.

"When I first came here I was seventh string," Ford said. "I've always started at the bottom. I got knocked down but you've got to survive. I quit one thing in my life and it was the biggest mistake I ever made. I will never quit again."

In high school (East Central, Tulsa), Ford set records for total offense, passing yardage, and touchdown passes, along with throwing for more than 3,200 yards.

Ford said one of the best things about this year's team is the attitude.

"No one is complaining, even about conditioning this year. The other day I heard someone say 'What if we have to run another one?' and Darryl Harris said, 'Then we'll run another one,'" Ford said.

"The team knows what it takes to be a Rose Bowl team again and we are a Rose Bowl team. We know we have to do any more than last year. We're inexperienced but we don't rebuild — we reload and come back at them (opponents)," he added.

Ford, a history major, said he enjoys school.

"I enjoy school and it's kind of a distraction for me. It takes my mind off it (football). But, I'm a player and it's my job. I'm committed. Sure, it takes a lot of extra time and some of the time is hell, but the heaven in that Saturday makes it worth it. No one else can know what it is like out there."

NOTES

ASU president J.R. Nelson reviews inside linebacker Stacey Harvey's case today to determine if his correspondence course will be accepted. Harvey has been out the entire season finishing an American history course. If the course is not accepted, Harvey will fall short of the required 24 hours needed each year and will be ineligible.

Redshirt freshman offensive tackle Michael Simmons is expected to return to practice today after injuring his ribs Friday.

Chris Dugan, a Scottsdale Community College graduate, reported to practice Friday after problems with admission. The walk-on from Eastern Kentucky will battle with sophomore Alan Zendejas for kickoff duties.

our secondary. We might give up 10 yards on a play, but that's all right if eight of our guys converge on the tackle and make the other team pay."

Anchoring the defensive line is noseguard Majett Whiteside (6-2, 260) who has earned second team Pac-10 honors the last two seasons. Surrounding Whiteside is a good pair of defensive tackles: Natu Tuatagaloa (6-4, 255) and Joe Nelms (6-5, 255).

The Bears also return outside linebacker Ken Harvey (6-3, 225), inside linebacker David Ortega (6-2, 225), strong safety Darryl Stallworth (6-0, 190) and free safety Derek Taylor (5-11, 195).

"The emphasis we're going to have every practice and every game is that we want everything up-tempo from the time we get on the field or in the weightroom until the time we leave. We want to play 'high velocity' football at Cal.

That's what we want to be our trademark."

But with Cal's schedule, which takes advantage of frequent flyer plans, the high velocity may describe air speed. The Bears have road trips at Minnesota, Tennessee, UCLA, Oregon, Stanford and Washington State in Tokyo.

The Bears will attempt to avenge its 49-0 loss to ASU as the Sun Devils travel up to Berkeley for a Nov. 14 showdown.

Spikers take shots against each other at festival

By JOAN McKENNA
State Press

The ASU volleyball team normally blocks, sets and hits from the same side of the net. However, at the Olympic Festival in Raleigh, N.C. in July, three Sun Devil sophomores squared off across the court as members of separate teams.

But only setter Noelle Fridrich, from Chicago, came out on top. Fridrich started and led the Southern team to the gold medal.

Outside hitter Tracie Kistro, of Spokane, Wash., played for the East, which captured the silver.

Middle blocker Sue Nord, 19, of Portage, Mich., competed for the North, which finished fourth.

The Olympic Festival selection system is responsible for the confusing dispersment of the three players. In volleyball, the four qualifying regions each are divided into three tryout sites, with 12 in all. A player can qualify at his hometown site or college site.

ASU is in the Southern region and the Sun Devils chose to tryout together at the Southern site of Tuscon in April.

Twelve players were selected from each region, but since the western states have dominated the sport in the past, the final 48 were scrambled intentionally for more balanced teams.

Nord had mixed feelings about playing opposite other Sun Devils. "It felt weird playing against a teammate, but at the same time it was kind of neat," she said. "I guess because it was supposed to be a fun competition, there really wasn't any pressure."

While the three concurred that the festival was their greatest volleyball experience outside of college, each came away with a different perspective.

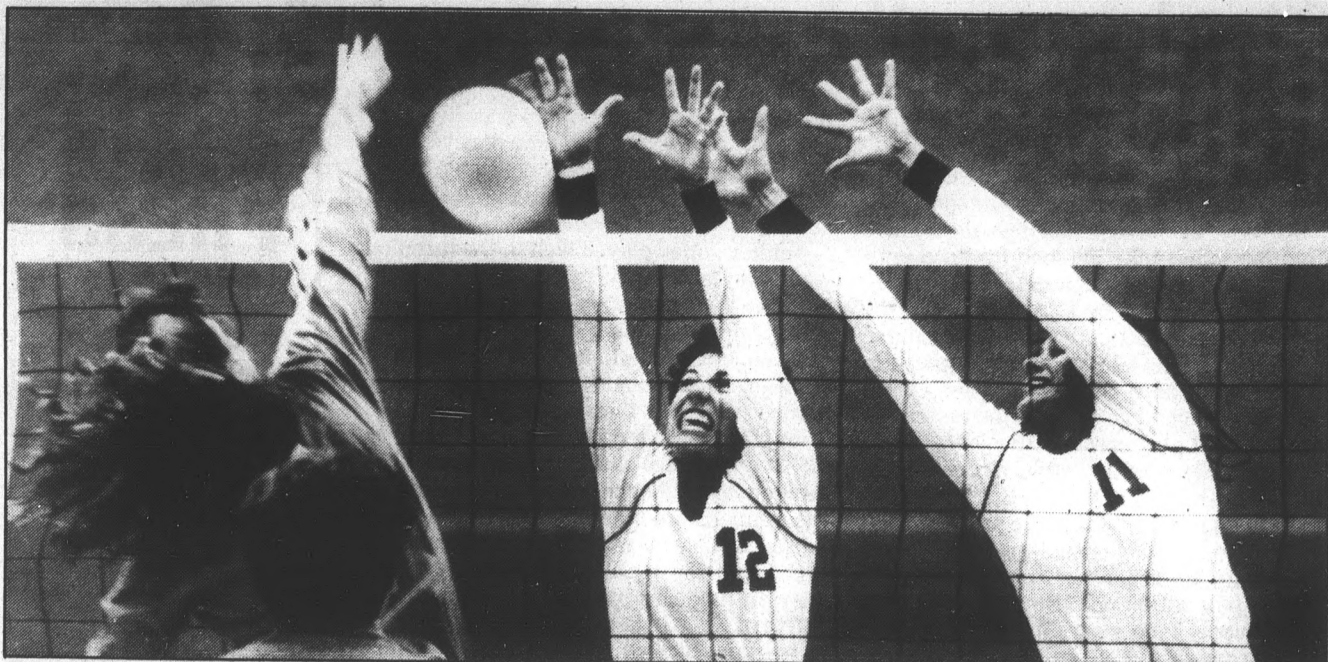

Fridrich enjoyed the level of competition.

It was a neat experience to play a lot of top athletes," she said. "It was also good experience playing with people I hadn't before and learning to adapt to it quickly."

Fridrich attributed her team's success to good coaching. "We had a great coach, Scott Luster from Louisiana State."

Luster helped the players improve many skills in the short practice span of one week, Fridrich said.

Nord felt honored to take part in an event with so much

ASU volleyball player Noelle Fridrich (12) blocks last season. Fridrich competed along with teammates Tracie Kistro and Sue Nord in the Olympic Festival this summer. State Press photo national attention. She said the high point for her was opening ceremonies, held at the North Carolina State stadium and featuring the Charlie Daniels band and a huge fireworks display.

"The opening ceremonies were the most spectacular thing I've ever seen," she said. "The place was packed. I've never been in front of so many people."

"When we walked in, and they all clapped, it was overwhelming. It gave me goose bumps."

Nord said her team had a lot of talent but did not play up to expectations. "We didn't come together as well as the other teams. We just didn't click. But our spirit was there."

Kistro's team had the opposite situation. "We were expected to come in last, but we did really well and came in second," she said.

Coaching was a factor for the East team as well, Kistro said. "Our coaches were great. They had us do a lot of stuff together, like going to meetings and eating."

"The team was amazingly close — probably the closest of all four (regions)."

"We had host parents who took care of us. They did things like come shag balls for us and bring us treats."

The volleyball matches themselves consisted of each team playing the three other regions. The two with the best overall records rematched for the title, while the other two competed for third and fourth place.

ASU's Mayfair captures Florida golf tournament

JUPITER, Fla. (AP) — Billy Mayfair, the NCAA Player of the Year from ASU, defeated Eric Rebmann 4 and 3 Sunday to win the 87th U.S. Amateur Championship.

Mayfair, 21, never trailed in the 36-hole final but didn't take the lead for good until the 22nd hole. He was a model of consistency after finishing the first 18 holes over the 6,879-yard, par-72 Jupiter Hills Club course at two over par, and wrapped up the title when Rebmann, of Plantation, Fla., bogeyed the last two holes of the match.

"He didn't play conservative," Rebmann said after Mayfair made two birdies and 13 pars over the last 15 holes. "But he made a lot of putts for par to keep the pressure on." Rebmann, a 23-year-old graduate of the University of Tennessee, birdied the 27th hole to pull within one. He saw his chance for an upset fade when Mayfair made his only birdies of the afternoon round to win the next two holes and go 3-up with seven to play.

"We both learned a lot out there. Eric's a fighter, a real scrapper," Mayfair said. "There were a couple of times when he could have given up but he didn't. I think he'll look back to this day and find that he learned a lot, just like I did."

Mayfair, the 1986 U.S. Public Links champion, finished the match even par for the 33 holes, while Rebmann was five over par with four birdies and nine bogeys.

"It all came down to I wasn't able to get anything going with the putter," Rebmann said.

Neither golfer played well in the morning when Mayfair clung to a 1-hole lead after 18 holes.

Mayfair led by as many as two holes on the front nine, but slipped back to even when he bogeyed No. 9 and No. 12 while Rebmann settled for par on those holes.

Mayfair went ahead again with a par on No. 17 and the see-saw positioning continued as the players began the final 18 holes and the temperature climbed into the low 90s.

The finalists played through a rain shower and found the match even after 20 holes. Mayfair made his move on No. 22, the par-5, 537-yard No. 4 hole.

Mayfair birdied the hole and gained another when he won No. 26 — the par-4, No. 8 — for the sixth time in seven match-play rounds at this tournament.

Rebmann, who reached the final by beating two-time champion Jay Sigel and medalist Scott Gump on Saturday, was bidding to become the first Amateur champion to win the title in his home state since Nathaniel Crosby won it in 1981 at the Olympic Club in San Francisco.

Tennessee upsets Iowa on late-game field goal

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Phil Reich, Tennessee's new placekicker after six years of the Reveiz brothers, kicked his third field goal, a 20-yarder with three seconds left Sunday as the 17th-ranked Vols opened the college football season by defeating No. 16 Iowa 23-22.

Reich also connected from 45 and 25 yards earlier in the fourth quarter to bring the Vols back from a 19-14 deficit after they blew a 14-3 second-period lead in the fifth annual Kickoff Classic.

What proved decisive, however, was Iowa's failure on a two-point conversion pass after taking a 19-14 lead on Kevin Harmon's 20-yard touchdown run late in the third period.

Tennessee scored both its touchdowns in the second period on a one-yard run by redshirt freshman Reggie Cobb, the game's most valuable player and leading rusher with 138 yards on 25 carries, and a 96-yard run by linebacker Darrin Miller after he intercepted a pitchout from Chuck Hartlieb, one of Iowa's three quarterbacks.

Harmon scored Iowa's first touchdown on a 23-yard run after taking a shovel pass from Hartlieb in the second period. The Hawkeyes' other points came on field goals of 42, 27 and 42 yards by Rob Houghtlin.

Tennessee's winning drive began with 4:37 left after Terence Cleveland returned a punt four yards to his 29. The march included a 15-yard pass interference penalty against Iowa's James Pipkins and a 16-yard pass from Jeff Francis to tight end Nate Middlebrooks at the Iowa 36.

After Cobb carried for three yards and a first down at the Iowa 7 with 1:18 remaining, two running plays netted six yards and the Vols let the clock run down to six seconds before calling a timeout. Reich drilled his game-winning field goal from the left hashmark.

A crowd of 54,681 watched the game in 77-degree weather in 76,000-seat Giants Stadium. Some 58,174 tickets were sold.

Strange wins; sets new PGA record

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Curtis Strange established a PGA Tour single-season money-winning record on Sunday as he scored a relatively easy three-stroke victory in the World Series of Golf.

Strange's third victory of the season was worth $144,000 from the $800,000 purse and pushed his earnings for the year to $697,385, surpassing the record $653,296 amassed by Australian Greg Norman last year.

Strange also moved atop the Player of the Year point standings and into first place in the Nabisco Grand Prix of Golf, a season-long points competition that will award the winner $175,000.

To qualify for that, Strange would have to play in the Nabisco Championships of Golf at San Antonio in October. And that brought into focus a potential confrontation between Strange and PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman.

Strange wants to skip the San Antonio tournament to fulfill some lucrative contracts in a three-week tour of Japan. To do that, he would have to forego any money he would win from the Nabisco Grand Prix as well as a minimum $32,000 for taking part in the tournament, which has a $2 million total purse and $360,000 first prize.

Although unavailable for comment Sunday, Beman is known to be opposed to Strange's plans to bypass the Nabisco tournament, the richest in golf history.

Strange declined to say whether Beman has authorized the release necessary for an American tour player to compete in a conflicting foreign tournament.
