President gives apology to ASU student body for ticket distribution policy

By AARYN KEMP
State Press

ASU President J. Russell Nelson formally apologized to students Monday for last week's Sun Devil football ticket sales fiasco.

In a letter to Associated Students, Nelson said he was sorry for the inconvenience of this year's policy and for the long lines.

"Probably some of the difficulties are understandable in light of the unprecedented demand for tickets," Nelson said in the letter. "Even so, understanding the causes of the problem does not mean that I am accepting of the problem. 'Quite the contrary.'"

Ten thousand student season football tickets sold out in one day for the first time in ASU history. An estimated 5,000 students waited in line last Wednesday for up to 15 hours to buy tickets.

"I was very glad to receive the apology," ASASU President Karrin Kunasek said. "It's something a lot of students were looking for."

She feels Nelson's idea to form a committee is a positive step to include students in the decision-making process.

ASASU Activities Vice President John Fees said 740 season tickets are available on a first-come, first-serve basis. Two thousand vouchers were not turned in for tickets by Friday's deadline.

Nelson appointed Vice President for University Affairs Brent Brown to form a committee that will formulate a better plan for future football ticket disbursement.

A proposed plan will allow students to pre-pay for tickets by marking a box on class registration forms. The ticket cost is then added to a student's fees.

— J. Russell Nelson

The forms would be processed on a date-received plan; those received first will have precedence.

Brown will meet with Athletic Director Charles Harris, Associate Vice President of University Affairs Bob Ellis and Kunasek Wednesday to "look at the problem," and discuss ways to streamline the procedure.

"We don't understand all of the problems with the previous policy yet," Brown said. "But I assure you, the (newly formed) committee will have adequate input from students and representatives of the Athletic Board."

Fees said he does not know how the committee will be chosen, but added, "Students are the ones with the biggest impact at games. They support the whole program. Their input is badly needed."

The Athletic Department was blamed for Wednesday's quick sell-out because students were allowed to buy an unlimited amount of tickets. The policy allowed students to buy one pass for each validated ID presented.

Business students flock to Liberal Arts College

By TERRI SEABERT
State Press

The College of Liberal Arts is "swamped" with students who are transferring from the College of Business to improve their grade point averages and consult with "friendlier advising bodies," a liberal arts college official said.

"We're inundated with the problem of transfer students," said Joyotpaul Chaudhuri, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. "We deal with it every day."

College of Business Dean John Kraft said students who transfer to the liberal arts college usually are not making the grade in required pre-business courses.

Although Chaudhuri could not provide exact figures, more than 500 students in the past 12 months have transferred from the College of Business to the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

"I wouldn't be surprised if it was twice that amount," he said.

The required GPA for majors in the College of Business is 2.50, while the minimum for the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences is 2.00.

This influx of business students is problematic, but Chaudhuri said he envisions it as a "challenge." Additional resources will help, but he said the key to accepting this challenge is leadership and resources.

"You can't just throw money at the problem; but money doesn't hurt," he said.

"We already have a challenge with the literally hundreds and hundreds of students who don't have a home in business now, even with the pre-professional program."

Without the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, the hundreds of students would not have a "home," he said.

The transfers have made for crowded classrooms. Math and science classes especially are crowded because of the increase in transfer students and incoming freshmen, Chaudhuri said.

"I've tried five times already to get my classes," said Ben Loya, a junior marketing major. "I'm trying to get into any class now. It's pretty ridiculous."

"I've had trouble getting into my humanities courses," George Wagner, a transfer student from the University of Wyoming, said. "It's frustrating."

There also is pressure on academic advisers, Chaudhuri said, adding he is handling a large increase in walk-in advisement sessions. One third of the students he sees every day do not have an appointment.

"Many of the students are bewildered as to exactly what it will take for them to get back in (the College of Business)," he said. "When they come to the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, they find warm, friendlier advisers."

"As a result we have been swamped with business college transfers."

In 1983, the College of Business implemented stiffer entrance requirements. Students are completing required general studies but are not qualifying for the pre-professional program, Kraft said.

Rec Center to centralize leisure activities

By SCOTT LUCK
State Press

When it becomes reality, ASU's 134,627-square-foot Student Recreation Complex will offer students a haven of recreation and relaxation.

After working up a sweat in one of 15 indoor racquetball courts, pumping iron in the 9,000-square-foot weight room or "jazzercising" in one of five multipurpose rooms, students will be able to cool off in a 70x25 yard swimming pool.

"It provides students with the opportunity to bond with the institution and have a very healthy development and recreational opportunity," said Betty Turner Asher, ASU's vice president for Student Affairs.

The student-funded project will total $20 million, but the actual construction cost has been estimated at $12.3 million, including site development, utility extension and telecommunication costs.

The University will spend at least $7 million more on interior furnishing, equipment and interest payments, which will total more than $2 million before bonding is repaid.

To fund the project, students will pay $25 a semester beginning in fall 1989.

Construction is scheduled to begin in April and to be completed in June 1989, with plans divided into two phases.

Phase one projects are considered high-priority items and will be complete for the opening of the structure, said project manager Tim Keneipp. He said phase two consists of less essential projects and will be completed as money allows.

The project is unique because all $20 million of the student funds must be spent on the complex, Keneipp said, which means the building will consist of "first class materials all the way through."

Ann Dalen, the project construction administrator, said the high quality materials will cut long-term maintenance costs. The complex will be east of Parking Structure I, at Apache Boulevard, at the present site of student tennis courts.

The courts will be destroyed to accommodate construction. However, in one of several "separate, but related" projects, courts will be reconstructed nearby, Keneipp said.

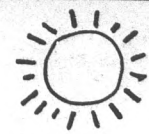

In another related project, Palm Walk will be extended to the entrance of the complex. Profits from the ASU Bookstore have been earmarked to pay for the extension, Keneipp said.

David Body, who designed the Wooden Center, a similar complex at the University of California at Los Angeles, devised plans for the ASU structure.

Keith Jacobson, a member of the project building committee, said Body is trying to achieve a "warm, open feeling" with glass accents.

Cable snaps, elevator falls 4,500 feet killing 8 S. African mine workers

WELKOM, South Africa (AP) — A mine elevator cable failed here Monday, sending a metal cage full of miners crashing to the bottom of a 4,500-foot shaft, company officials said. At least eight men were reported killed and 57 missing. The accident occurred as hundreds of thousands of blacks returned to gold and coal mines after a three-week national strike.

Five men were found alive on a small excavated platform 2,300 feet underground.

Most of the missing men, including black white and miners, were believed to have been in a two-deck elevator measuring 11 feet by less than six. Mine officials initially reported an explosion in the shaft at 6:45 a.m., and at one point expressed fear that 92 men were missing.

Officials of General Mining Union Corp. said there was no indication Monday's accident was connected with the strike and there were no signs of sabotage.

Thai Airways jet plunges into sea; all 83 passengers believed killed

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Thai Airways jet plunged into the sea near Phuket Island on Monday and officials said they believed all 83 people aboard were killed.

Two Americans were said to be among the 37 foreigners on the Boeing 737.

Spokesmen said 17 bodies were recovered before search operations halted for the night because of high winds and poor visibility. Meteorologists said skies were clear when the crash occurred.

Air Marshal Narong Dithipeng, managing director of the state-run airline, told a news conference earlier Monday that the plane was trying to evade a 737 of the Hong Kong-based line Dragonair when it crashed into the Andaman Sea eight miles from the resort island's airport.

Prayoon Thavisang, manager of the Phuket airport, said the aircraft were following a landing procedure that caused no problems in the past. He told The Associated Press by telephone he doubted there were any survivors.

Iran attacks Kuwaiti fighter in retaliation for Iraqi attacks

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian commandos raked a Kuwaiti freighter with machine-gun fire and rocket-propelled grenades in the Persian Gulf Monday in retaliation for three days of Iraqi air attacks, shipping sources said.

Iraq's attacks, aimed at forcing Iran to accept a U.N. cease-fire resolution in their 7-year-old war, came as a convoy of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers under U.S. escort anchored off Bahrain. U.S. helicopters looked for a reported mine.

In Washington, the White House on Monday termed the timing of Iraq's attacks "deplorable," but called on Iran to comply with the cease-fire resolution.

Iran said its artillery shelled Basra in southern Iraq and other border towns in retaliation for the Iraqi air strikes.

Iranian commandos in patrol boats attacked the 24,349-ton container ship Jebel Ali off the United Arab Emirates coast near the Strait of Hormuz.

Justice Department challenges Walsh probe of Iran-contra scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department on Monday challenged the constitutionality of a law under which independent counsels were appointed to investigate the Iran-Contra affair, the financial affairs of Attorney General Edwin Meese III and possible wrongdoing by other Reagan administration officials.

Specifically, in a brief filed in federal appeals court in Washington, the department challenged the independent counsel which is investigating a former Justice Department official in connection with a 1983 Environmental Protection Agency controversy.

The office of Lawrence Walsh, the independent counsel in the Iran-Contra scandal, immediately announced it opposes the Justice Department's position.

The Justice Department said its position, if upheld in court, wouldn't affect Walsh's Iran-Contra investigation or the Meese probe, because the independent counsels in those matters have accepted parallel appointments from the department.

UAW chooses Ford Motor Co. as first strike target for 1987

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The United Auto Workers union chose Ford Motor Co. as its 1987 strike target Monday, a move that intensifies contract talks at the industry's No. 1 profit-maker and leaves General Motors Corp. temporarily on the sidelines.

"Our first objective is to establish a settlement pattern that is good for the workers and good for the industry by making stable domestic employment a part of how these companies do business," said UAW President Owen Bieber, whose choice of Ford was approved by union leaders.

Ford chief negotiator Stanley Surma said Ford has bargained under the assumption it would be the target. He said Ford wants a settlement which addresses the union's top priority of job security while ensuring that Ford's quality and competitive position improve.

The GM and Ford contracts both expire at midnight on Sept. 14, but the selection of Ford as the target means the union will seek to settle with Ford first.

American business efficiency improves in year's second quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Led by a 4.9 percent jump in manufacturing productivity, American businesses improved their efficiency in churning out goods and services at an annual rate of 1.3 percent in the second quarter of the year, the government said Monday.

The overall productivity improvement for non-farm businesses was slightly below the 1.4 percent increase reported in preliminary figures last month by the Labor Department but was still more than triple the gains of the first quarter.

The labor costs associated with producing each unit of goods or services rose at an annual rate of only 1.7 percent in the second quarter compared with an inflation rate of 5 percent so far this year as employers kept nominal wage increases to 3 percent.

After accounting for inflation, workers saw the purchasing power for each hour of their labor drop 1.8 percent in the second quarter.

U.S. proposal to monitor nuclear tests under Soviet consideration, official says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading Soviet arms control official said Monday the Kremlin will seriously consider a U.S. proposal for monitoring nuclear tests and might even permit the United States to explode its own bomb at a Soviet test range to check monitoring equipment.

Col. Gen. Nikolai Chervov, an official of the Soviet defense ministry, said that in such a case, the Soviet Union would expect to be permitted to explode a Soviet nuclear device at the U.S. test site in Nevada.

The proposal, linked to negotiations for a new test ban agreement, appeared to catch U.S. officials by surprise.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., an aide with vacationing President Reagan said there was no immediate official White House response to the announcement.

Campus Crater

Hayden hole slows movement and impairs mental health

Mike Rowell
Wire Editor

Last week I was reminded once again that the things right in front of you are often the hardest to see.

I spent the whole week feeling vaguely uneasy as I wandered about campus. People were different somehow; they looked lost, ill-at-ease, not quite as jovial as your standard first-week fall semester population. For a whole week, I thought it was just me — but other people mentioned it too. And it wasn't just the freshmen types who looked disoriented; in fact they looked less confused than upperclassmen.

That's when a little voice inside my skull said: "Hey, bonehead, you've been here all summer. You've seen workers digging that crater in the middle of campus since day one and have had time to adjust. A lot of these people haven't — as far as they're concerned, terrorists stole West Lawn while they were off enjoying the MTV Summer of Love."

How could I be so blind? Here was a full-blown case of constructophobia, and it took me a week to figure it out. It would be naive to believe that this $100 million massive building project now in progress would affect only student walking distances; it's got to alter the collective campus psyche as well.

Let's focus just on the Hayden Library Expansion. Never mind the Student Services Building, the Fine Arts Complex, the Architecture Expansion or any other obstacles the administration has up its sleeves; this single 30-foot-deep

'... I propose we make the best of an unfortunate situation and put this pit to use.'

whopper has done more to impede student movement and destroy the focus of this campus than a successful air-strike from Williams Air Force Base. Because, let's face it; the focus West Lawn and Cady Mall gave ASU was the difference between a University and 11 loosely interrelated colleges.

Remember how campus organizations would line the mall with tables? How the fountain used to be a hub of student interaction? How West Lawn was a common area for activities and speakers, both planned and unplanned? These functions, crucial to the total University environment, have been scattered hither and yon, lying on the spokes of a wheel converging on The Big Hole.

It has to have some psychological impact. Since construction of the library expansion going into The Big Hole probably won't start until sometime in November, I propose we make the best of an unfortunate situation and put this pit to use.

Since they're currently pouring concrete down the walls of the crater, why not do the bottom as well and give ASU the prestige of having the world's biggest skateboard park? Or let's throw some rebar and plaster in there and have our own man-made lake. Cannonballs off of West Hall, anyone?

Or we could make use of the hole's arena-like qualities. Just think — concerts, soccer matches, motocross, bullfights, mud bogs and gladiators — all right at the center of campus. Boy, we'd be Playboy's number one party school for sure.

But the best thing about The Big Hole is it's going to be there until February, 1989. This means I get the dubious honor of graduating from the University of Swiss Cheese Topography, and many of you will too. Just remember to include a map of pedestrian routes in those invitations you send to friends and relatives.

Grand poobah?

Editor:

I'm afraid the State Press has usurped its own ethical and moral common sense, as well as failed to remember its own stormy adolescence, when it editorialized about abortion and parental consent.

The State Press strongly emphasizes that abortion is a choice protected by law. They also assert that when teenagers need the protection of this law they fall under a different interpretation.

Teenage girls do not need parental consent in order to feel that their emotionally wrenching decisions now have the stamp of approval from their morally and ethically perfect parents. Also, who is the grand poobah who thinks teen pregnancy is the only entity that wreaks havoc with minors? Do you mean to say that it's all right for teens to lace their bloodstreams and fetuses with heroin without consent? It seems some people want to prosecute pregnant women who abuse drugs for child abuse. What if the girl is using drugs and she's 16? Do we get a parent's consent before we can prosecute her?

A 13-year-old girl's pelvic size is often not large enough to accommodate labor, which results in inadequate space for the baby. This, in turn, results in the need for a cesarean section delivery, with all its risks, especially anesthesia. The uterus is weaker in teen years, which can lead to uterine rupture during late pregnancy and labor. It is almost always fatal to the mother unless she is being maintained in a high level labor and delivery unit. The risk of drug overdose while in the hospital is very real for pregnant teens because they are pediatric patients with pediatric dosage needs; untrained doctors and nurses may be too concerned with the pregnancy to realize this.

What if a parent denies consent yet discovers during delivery that the teen needs medication or procedures that they are unfamiliar with, and do not want to sign yet another consent form? The consent form madness (i.e. ear piercing) has evolved because of liability issues that cover adults who serve the minor population in some respect; not because of the erroneous assumption that teens need a piece of paper to guide them through every tattoo and Friday night.

Pregnant teens need parental guidance, not consent. They need a family support system and peer acceptance, not consent. And they need professional counseling about their decisions, right or wrong, not consent.

The State Press and proponents of parental consent must re-examine their common sense and base their policies and opinions on the realities of teenagers, not adults. Judge Hardy's decision was based on these realities. Teens must be free to experience the frustrations and sometime severe consequences of life without the wrath of pieces of parental paper.

The Hot Seat

The Hot Seat is a new weekly feature on the State Press opinion page. Every Tuesday, a notable individual will be distinguished for acts of exceptional buffoonery, gross negligence, unique foolishness, or for demonstrating special incompetence in the line of duty. No one at ASU, in the state of Arizona, or anywhere in the world is immune from involuntary placement on The Hot Seat. Potential throne holders are selected by the team of Mike Ritter and Darrin Hostetler.

Tired of complaining about the chaos surrounding last week's sale of ASU student football tickets?

Reached the realization that whining about the nameless, faceless bureaucrats in the ASU ticket office is futile, because even though you hate them all, you know deep in your heart that the 15 hours you spent in line really wasn't their fault? After all, they aren't smart enough to come up with a torture as sophisticated as making students wait all day and all night, through both rain and scorching heat, in a line stretching to Tucson to buy football tickets.

Want to know who is really to blame?

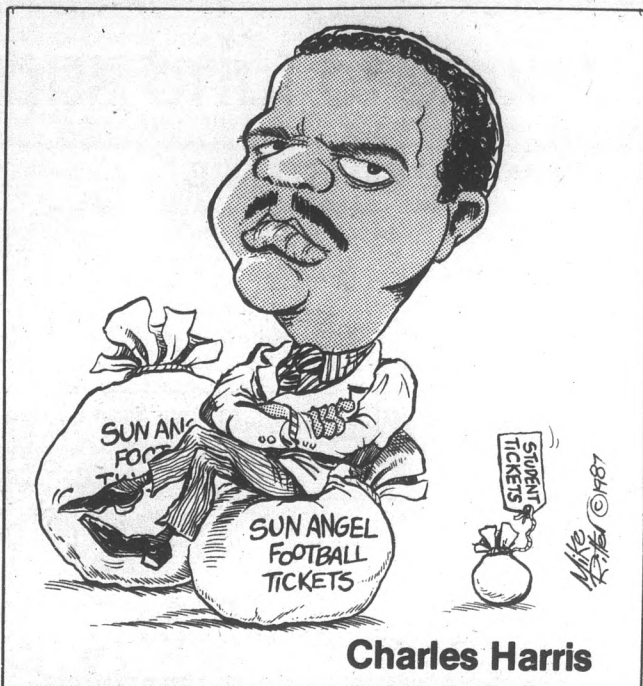

Yeah, that's right. There is one person in particular who is guilty of this crime against student humanity: ASU's esteemed Athletic Director Charles Harris.

In case you were too busy grousing about the guy in front of you with 50 IDs waiting to buy tickets to notice, Harris is the one ultimately responsible for determining the number of tickets allocated to students.

While most people would recognize as legitimate the idea that every student who wants to should be able to purchase tickets to his or her college football games, it must be admitted that the financial realities of a major university preclude this.

The athletic department is charged with raising its own revenue, and it does not take an economics major to realize that the more tickets sold at the general public price of $112, rather than the student price of $28, the better off the department is.

Nevertheless, to only allocate 10,000 tickets to students, leaving 60,000 to the masses, is not an equitable division. It does not reflect the best instincts of collegiate sports, a forum where the student-athlete, school spirit and pride in the game is still supposed to mean something.

It reflects greed.

And in case you were really mad at the guy with the 50 IDs and didn't think about it — the price you paid for your tickets (if you were lucky enough to get them in the hysteria caused by the ticket shortage) was $7 higher than last year.

For insensitivity to the needs of students, for money lust above and beyond the need of the Rose Bowl champion ASU Sun Devils, Charles Harris deserves a place in the sun. Preferably in a long line.

NEA in the Soviet Union

Editor:

It must be another slow news day for Mr. (Ed) Schubert. Last year around this time, he tried to persuade an Iranian student to attend a meeting that included members of the Israel Action Committee and an Israeli writer in order to pass him off as a Palestinian student to create a false image that the meeting could cause a future confrontation and he would be able to write about it.

In his (Aug. 25) supposed editorial column, Mr. Schubert, an admitted National Education Association (NEA) and Arizona Education Association (AEA) member, used the editorial section as an advertisement for the union he belongs to. He falsely claimed the Education College recommended students join this union.

Lyndon Searfoss, associate dean of the education college, explained in a conversation I had over this hack-written article that before students go into student teaching they are recommended to get occupational liability insurance and that no organization or insurance company is singled out by the College to obtain it from.

In a phone conversation which I later had with Mr. Schubert, which I will gladly turn over a transcript of upon request, he further stated that he had been told during class by an Education College professor to join the NEA. This would indeed be of interest to ASU's Legal Counsel were it true. Since it is a violation of the Faculty Handbook and state law to push unionism and/or a political persuasion during class time and that such activities should be confined to out of the classroom.

Comrade Schubert also stated to me that before he had the article printed, he sent it to NEA Headquarters for approval. If all this is also true, then Mr. (Darrin) Hostetler and the State Press have been duped into allowing an unpaid advertisement for a union to be printed in their editorial column, phone number and all.

If this is the devious way the NEA stoops to recruit members, through faculty and star-struck students proselytizing a union during class time to others who are unaware they can also purchase occupational liability insurance for student teaching through an insurance company or a legitimate organization such as the American Federation of Teachers, then they will find a welcome mat in the Soviet Union, where tactics such as these are a way of life.

Students best beware of these false prophets trying to sell you a lemon and seek the advice of parents, counselors, legitimate insurance agencies and legitimate organizations before paying for occupational liability insurance. And Herr Schubert best stick to issues that deal with the truth, reality, and not something from which he may gain financially.

Opinion Editor's Note: Ed Schubert declined to comment on the accusations made in this letter. However, it should be mentioned that the State Press does not submit editorial material to any person or organization for "approval." Mr. Schubert did not send his editorial to the NEA for sanction; rather, he checked relevant facts with a member of this organization.

Waiting Game

Organized labor holds back 1988 presidential pick

David Broder
Washington Post
Writers Group

WASHINGTON — Rare is the deed that confounds the cynics and at the same time makes sense. The improbable proposition of this column is that the AFL-CIO (a.k.a. Big Labor) may well have demonstrated both its sincerity and its shrewdness in deciding last week to postpone any endorsement in the 1988 presidential race.

Union leaders regularly rank even lower than journalists in polls of public trust. It was no great feat for critics of Lane Kirkland and his brethren in the federation leadership to sell the notion that the 1984 endorsement of Walter F. Mondale was dictated by the "union bosses."

Mondale had been labor's loyal ally from his first days in Minnesota politics. It would have been rank ingratitude for the AFL-CIO to deny him its support. Nonetheless, he never escaped the "special interest candidate" tag, and labor never persuaded most people there was anything very democratic about its endorsement vote.

Thus, when Kirkland announced early this year that the AFL-CIO would canvass its members' sentiments and endorse a 1988 hopeful "if there is a consensus," the statement was greeted with knowing nods and winks. The smart guys figured Kirkland and the leaders of the six or eight biggest and most politically active affiliated unions would sit down and decide who they wanted — and that would be it.

Wrong. Instead, the unions flooded their local leaders and members with biographies, voting records and videotapes of all the candidates (including Republicans) and then polled them repeatedly on their preferences. The answer came back that the membership was all over the lot, with only George Bush and Jesse Jackson breaking into double-digits.

'The answer came back that the membership was all over the lot, with only George Bush and Jesse Jackson breaking into double digits.'

"There is no consensus within our ranks at the local or national level," Kirkland announced. No consensus, no endorsement. As simple as that.

Except it isn't. The deferral of the AFL-CIO endorsement changes both the perception and the reality of the Democratic contest. The candidates' first test now is to win not the endorsement of interest groups, but the support of voters in the early caucuses and primaries. That change was one of the earliest and most important objectives announced by democratic National chairman Paul G. Kirk when he took over after the 1984 Reagan landslide.

When Kirk first asked labor, teacher and other interest groups to forgo or delay their endorsements in 1988, they told him to mind his own business. He has. But circumstances have yielded the result he wished, and he is smart enough not to gloat.

Also not gloating but privately rejoicing are the candidates who were unlikely to get the AFL-CIO nod: Bruce Babbitt, Jesse Jackson, Albert Gore, Jr. "It levels the playing field," said Robert J. Keefe, a longtime Democratic operative with close ties to labor. It also frees candidates to exploit their alliances with particular unions in particular places, Keefe noted. That may help Jackson in some urban areas.

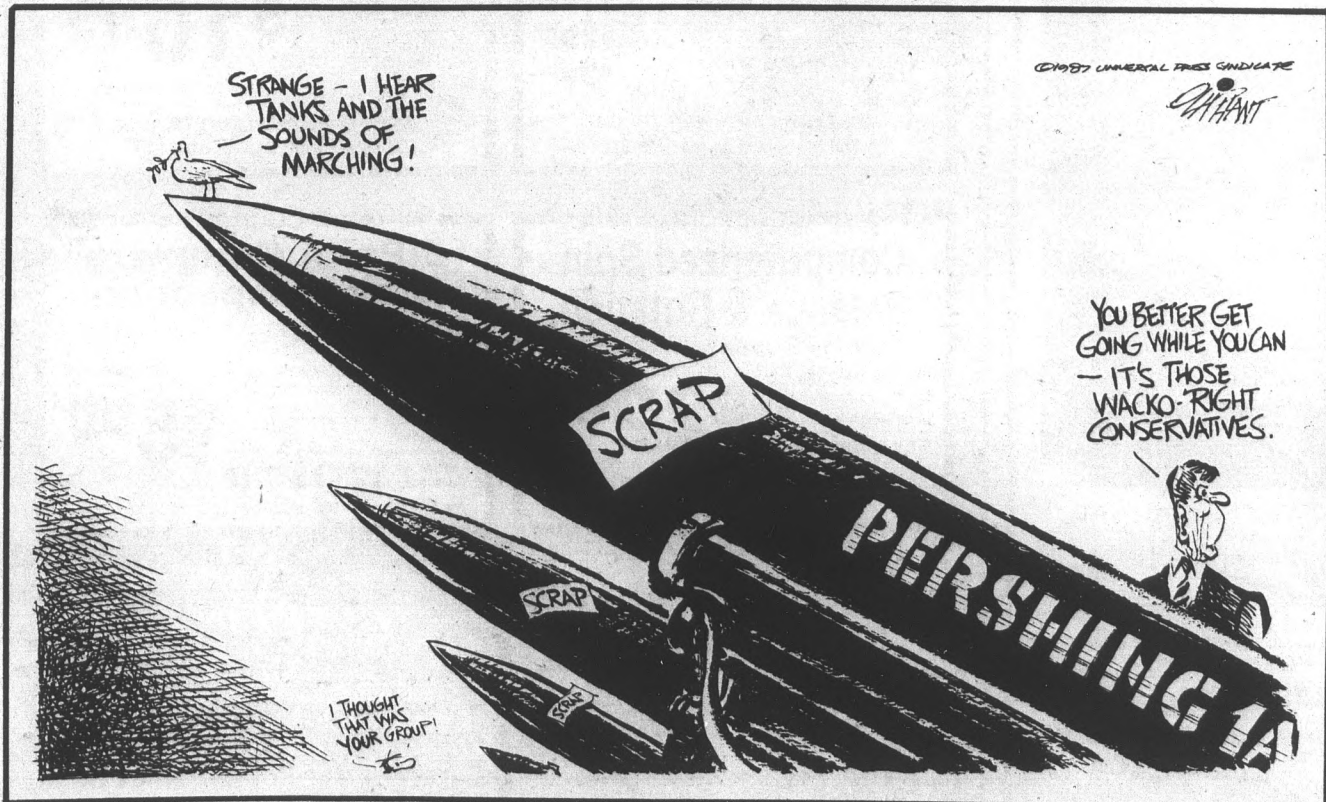

Under the recommended rules, no union is supposed to make an official candidate endorsement until the AFL-CIO does, but unions can help union members become delegates. It's a thin line, and Paul Jensen, who was Mondale's liaison with labor in 1984, thinks the unions will have to blur it further if they are going to be at all effective.

"No candidate is going to slate labor delegates unless the union is working for him," Jensen said. "Everyone knows that." Jensen, who is now counseling Dukakis, is also of the view that Kirkland and Co. will have to discover the missing consensus and make an endorsement by mid-January, at the latest, or risk becoming bit players in the 1988 nomination drama.

But that is not likely. Indications are that Kirkland sees mid February, right after Iowa and New Hampshire have voted, as the best possible time for labor to deliver its blessing, its dollars and its field organization to someone who has survived the early tests.

"Labor may be in a position to cement a base under the guy that's flying high after New Hampshire," Keefe said. "If labor comes in with an endorsement the day after New Hampshire, that could just about put him over."

It would be quite something if Kirkland, by playing straight, turns out to be that shrewd. What would the cynics say then?

Profs dig into own pockets to fund superconductor project

By STEVE NOLEN
State Press

A major superconductive materials research initiative is in its infancy at ASU, but University researchers will fall behind in the international race to develop this technology unless new funding comes soon.

Several ASU professors have been researching superconducting materials, which offer advanced products in energy, electronics, science and consumer goods, without formal University funding.

ASU chemistry professor William Petuskey makes a ceramic superconducting material and supplies it to other ASU professors for analysis.

ASU physics professor John Spence headed a group that photographed and described the atomic structure of the high-temperature ceramic, and physics professor I.S.T. Tsong was the first to photograph atoms on its surface.

Spence said funds for his research were borrowed from other projects, and he and others had to spend their own money to get the ball rolling.

Tsong said: "We can do everything ourselves. The only thing we're lacking is money."

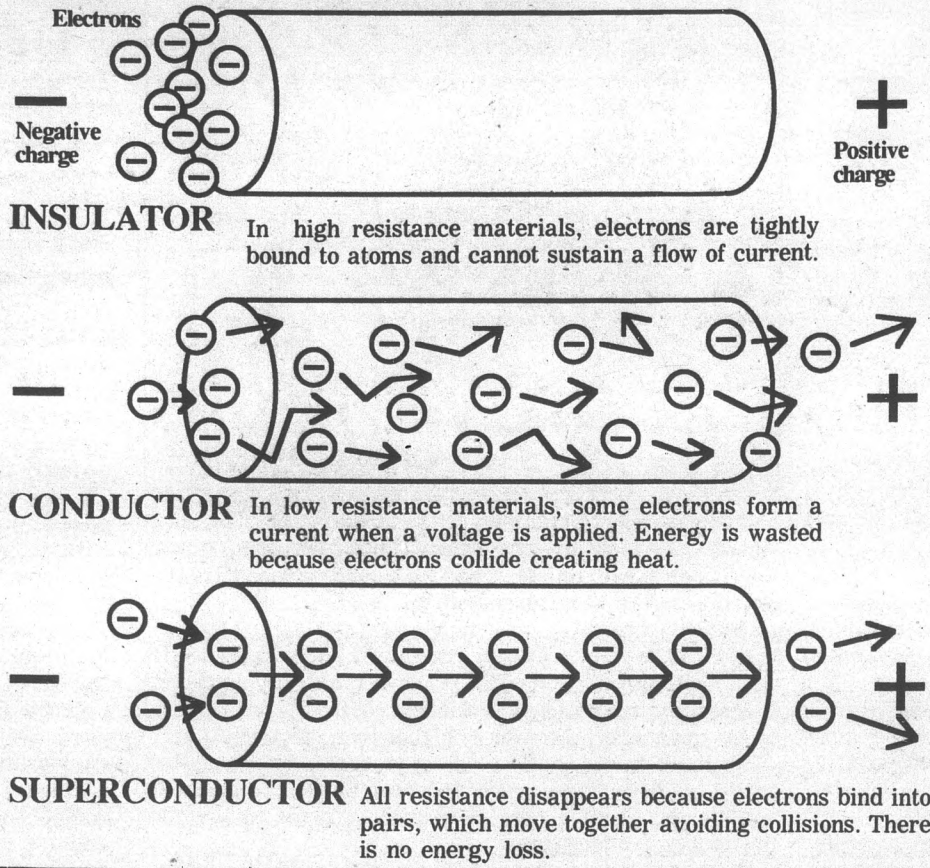

Afraid that Japan will get the high-tech jump on the United States, industry scientists held a national meeting in Washington last month to plot a strategy for developing products using the new superconducting materials.

University scientists hope this urgency to compete with Japan will put their research proposals on the fast track to funding.

"People are really excited about this," Tsong said. "But the competition will be very, very stiff."

Spence said it now takes nearly a year to receive money for new research, and "this puts university researchers at a real

CURRENT FLOW AND RESISTANCE

State Press graphic adapted from Time Magazine

competitive disadvantage."

But Tsong said federal funding agencies are "scraping up money" for superconductor research. He said a proposal he submitted in July to produce and study superconducting thin films may be funded by Thanksgiving.

He said the research climate at ASU is getting better.

"I've been here for six years, and things are actually improving," Tsong said. "But in other states things are improving faster."

A special session of the Texas Legislature recently appropriated $10 million for superconductor research at the University of Houston.

"If (Gov. Evan) Mechem would just give us $1 million, it would help tremendously," said Tsong. "But it's peanuts compared to Texas."

ASU Vice President for Research Henry Reeves said a "decision package" request for research funds has been sent to the Arizona Legislature for approval. The package includes approximately $1.3 million for advanced materials research, he said.

Tsong said: "The decision package is going to take a while, and it may be too little too late. But something is always better than nothing."

Reeves said superconductor research facilities will be housed in a $25 million Center for Science and Engineering Technology scheduled for completion in 1990.

Ronald Barr, assistant vice president for research, said about $1.5 million, or half of the money for equipment and instrumentation, will go to superconductor and advanced materials research facilities.

Reeves agrees that ASU currently is lacking in its ability to study superconducting materials.

"The University is very strong in the analytical research areas," he said. "Where we are not as strong as we would like to be is in the front end."

Reeves said ASU needs to hire more faculty "to strengthen the entire program."

The stronger the University's faculty in superconducting materials and materials science in general, the more attractive the ASU Research Park is to its potential occupants, he said.

Spence said ASU's research problems go beyond the need to hire new faculty, but he said there is no easy solution to the lack of timely funding for new areas of study.

"If 10 years ago the University had set up a fund for situations like this, do you think there would be any money in it now?" he said.

Business College may kill pre-professional program

By J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

ASU's College of Business is studying a proposal to eliminate its pre-professional program and force incoming business freshmen to join the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

"We are looking at the possibility of essentially eliminating the classification of pre-business and suggesting that students be admitted directly to the College of Liberal Arts and apply to the professional program," college Dean John Kraft said.

Currently, freshmen apply to enter the college's pre-professional program, which registers students with the college although they have not been officially admitted.

After students complete 56 credit hours and their general studies requirements, they may apply to enter the professional program, which consists of 300- and 400-level courses.

Under the new proposal, incoming freshmen would enter the liberal arts college instead of the business college. After completing 56 hours and applying for the professional program, students then could transfer to business.

Kraft feels the changes are needed to eliminate confusion for students.

"A lot of students who are in it (the pre-professional program) don't really understand they are not in the college," Kraft said.

He said students not accepted into the professional program are left without a college.

But under the new plan, students would remain in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences if they were not accepted into the professional program.

Kraft said the proposal is being studied by the college's Undergraduate Curriculum Committee. If approved there, it will be forwarded to the Standards Committee and eventually to the full faculty for a vote.

Kraft said business college officials have not consulted with those of the liberal arts college because "there is no sense in contacting them if the (business) faculty is not interested in the idea."

He said the proposed changes would not affect the liberal arts college because most business freshmen and sophomores already are enrolled in liberal arts courses.

"There would be no difference to them in terms of courses offered, advisors needed, or student credit hours given," Kraft said.

He said students wanting to enter the business professional program still would meet with business college advisors.

Kraft also said the college is not trying to get rid of its underclassmen, only to eliminate a program he feels does not help them.

"We do have a responsibility for them (students in the pre-professional program), but the real people we have priorities for are students who have done all that is required to do and are in the professional program," Kraft said.

Arizona's population growth rate tails off in 1987

By DANA LEONARD
State Press

Arizona's rapid population growth rate took a dive in 1987, probably because of overconstruction, a University official said Monday.

Tom Rex, manager of ASU's Center for Business Research, said, "The main factor in the drop has been overconstruction between 1983 and 1986."

Construction then died off in 1986, he said, and the economy went into a slower rate of growth, leading to an increase in unemployment.

Rex said changes in population growth "lag behind shifts in economic performance, such as an increase in the unemployment rate or a decrease in job creation."

"After the unemployment rate goes up, people don't move out here to get jobs," he said. And the people already living here move elsewhere to find work, he added.

"Things have improved a little," Rex said, citing the last three months of 1986 and the first three months of 1987 as the slowest period.

But Rex said the downturn will last for a while.

"There's not a whole lot that can be done in the short run," he said. "It will take some time to work down the vacancy rates (created by the overconstruction)."

The vacancy rates are more evident in apartments and office spaces than in single family homes, he said.

Population increases, which are measured quarterly, reached their peak in mid-1985 at an influx of 19,000 people to Maricopa County per quarter.

By the first quarter of 1987, the rate of growth had dropped to 12,000 new residents per quarter, and that number was cut in half the second quarter.

The total population increase for the Phoenix area during fiscal year 1986-87, which ended June 30, was 68,000. The rate for the preceding fiscal year was 88,000.

The state's population grew by 108,000 people during 1986-87, down 24,000 from 1985-86.

"The decrease is probably not going to affect ASU's student population," he said. "It may be a concern to graduating students, though."

Rex estimated Arizona's population at 3.4 million with 1.97 million people living in Maricopa County.

GOP chair urges unity; comic spoofs Mecham

PHOENIX (AP) — State Republican Chairman Burton Kruglick soon will be sending a letter to party members warning that intra-party division won't help in the battle against the Mecham recall campaign.

Meanwhile, Gov. Evan Mecham will get a new kind of national publicity next week when he is featured as a character in the "Doonesbury" comic strip.

Congressman Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., has been mentioned as a possible candidate against Mecham if the Republican governor is forced to face a recall vote.

If the Mecham Recall Committee gathers enough signatures for a recall election, Kruglick said, "The thing we don't want to do is have several Republicans running, which conceivably could help the Democrats."

"If we are divided internally, it could cause a lot of problems."

Political observers have said that support from Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., would be crucial if Kolbe were to decide to run against Mecham.

Kolbe has refused to rule out a campaign against the governor, although he also has said he doesn't consider it likely at this point.

McCain said he is not urging Kolbe to enter a campaign, and he declined to say whether he would back a possible run by Kolbe, a two-term congressman who also is a former state senator.

Mecham, asked Monday about a possible Kolbe candidacy, said, "You want to know what I think of it? I don't."

The governor also declined to comment on "Doonesbury" creator Garry Trudeau's use of a Mecham character in a series of six cartoon strips that will be run beginning next Monday.

One shows a caricature of Mecham patting a black child on the head and saying, "My, what a cute little pickaninny."

Earlier this spring, Mecham had defended the use of the word "pickaninny" found in an essay of a book by a man he considers his mentor, conservative constitutionalist W. Cleon Skousen.

Trudeau's comic strip also has Mecham refuting claims that he is insensitive by saying "Lies. Lies, spread by queers and pickaninnies."

In the final strip, the recall movement is reported to be losing momentum, but it receives renewed support after Mecham holds a news conference to announce that "all the people involved in the recall are practicing homosexuals."

Mecham Recall Committee founder Ed Buck is an acknowledged homosexual, and Mecham said earlier this summer the committee was a band of "homosexuals and dissident Democrats."

Monster Bash Network undaunted by derailed party

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

A group of ASU students calling itself the "Monster Bash Network" is trying to improve the school's "party image" with massive parties, but their latest effort was derailed by a court order.

University Towers was successful in shirking a party aimed at impressing a Playboy reporter who had attended "Monster Bash 2."

Playboy freelance reporter Wayne Duvall ranks colleges and universities in the country annually for their party quotient.

Duvall could not be reached for comment about the failed "Monster Bash 2."

But ASU administrators are not so eager to boost the University's image of tanned, fun-loving students gulping free-flowing beer.

Jo O'Donnell, associate dean of Student Life, said ASU's "party image" hurts the school's academic reputation.

"If any school has the reputation of being a party school, it seems as if students are at the school for the fun and not the quality of the institution," she said.

"You don't want to have that label attached to a school."

But the group now is planning "Monster Bash 3," to boost ASU's party reputation and raise money for victims' families of Northwest Flight 255.

This time, the party will not be held at University Towers and the organizers will not try to impress a reporter.

Not satisfied with ASU's No. 13 ranking in Playboy, the "network" planned a party for 1,000 students Aug. 7 at University Towers to impress Duvall.

John Kusumi, a bachelor of arts major and founder of the "network," instead was given a restraining order by the privately-owned student apartment complex at 502 S. College, prohibiting the party.

But the party did happen, although on a much smaller scale.

"They knew (the party) was coming," Kusumi said. "The whole point of the party was to gain management-resident cooperation."

T.J. Taub, public relations officer for University Towers, said Kusumi was warned orally and in writing several times before the restraining order was given.

"He was given three options," Taub said. "He could either cancel the party, move it, or bring it down to the size that it said on the lease."

Kusumi, who had been a resident of University Towers and has since moved, was aware of the memo but said Tom Samp, director of the complex, had written a letter saying he "would not try to stop your party."

Samp recalls talking to Kusumi, but denies supporting a large party.

"I thought it was going to be a normal party we were used to having," Samp said. "I can't stop people from having parties."

Kusumi gathered a petition with 100 signatures to show management the residents wanted a large party. He also decided to invite the management.

"It was nice to get an invitation, but at that point I thought I was getting invited to a party which was something different than (Kusumi) was originally talking about," Samp said.

Taub said the lease agreement given to all residents states only 14 people are allowed in a room at one time.

She also said Kusumi "disappeared" for two weeks after signing a memo stating he could not have a party of that size.

"That's not true," Kusumi said. "I was there and I was available. I was trying to keep the communication line open."

Hanson said the first party on June 26, in which organizers claimed "no damage or incidents", was much smaller than the second party.

"I saw the crowd in the first party, (but) the crowd that was expected for the second party was a lot larger," Hanson said. "I didn't think it would be safe."

John Morgan, assistant manager at Short Stop, a convenience store at University Towers, said he did not find the parties to be troublesome.

"We did sell a lot of beer, but I don't know if it was because of the parties," he said.

Mecham signs state's atom-smasher bid

PHOENIX (AP) — Holding a T-shirt that said "Bring Your Scientists to Arizona," Gov. Evan Mecham on Monday signed the state's bid for a $4.4 billion federal atom-smasher project.

Arizona's bid is scheduled to be submitted to the U.S. Department of Energy in Washington on Tuesday. The state is pushing two sites for the superconducting super collider, and project coordinator Ian Macpherson said the geology at each site is ideal.

"We hope that now the issue will be laid to rest that Arizona simply does not have the wherewithal or the expertise to proceed," Macpherson said. "These proposals, I believe, are superb."

At least two dozen states are submitting proposals, and the Energy Department is expected to narrow them to a "short list" by the end of the year. A final decision is to be made in 1988.

One of Arizona's proposed sites is in the Maricopa Mountains east of Gila Bend, and the other is in the Sierrita Mountains southwest of Tucson.

Macpherson said the super collider can be built more quickly and more cheaply at both sites because it can be built at a shallower depth than at proposed sites in other states.

Other states may have more political clout in Washington, Macpherson said, but added, "We're in here to compete for this thing and the fact that we're up against some larger states doesn't deter me in the least."

Arizona's proposal is described in eight volumes for each of the two sites, describing — among other things — the geology, financial incentives, regional resources, environment and utilities.

The super collider would be a circular tunnel, 53 miles around, in which streams of protons would be hurled at each other at almost the speed of light. The resulting collision debris could be studied for the clues to the most basic subatomic particles and the forces that hold matter together.

Mecham praised the state Legislature as well as the scientific, business and academic communities for "getting behind it and casting aside politics and going for what's best for Arizona."

"We have no discordant voices," the governor said. "There isn't even anyone arguing on which site gets selected, just so it's one of them."

Asked about a controversy earlier this summer about claims that Mecham tried to improperly influence the hiring of a lobbyist for the state bid, the governor said, "We aren't discussing that today." At the time, members of Arizona's congressional delegation warned that the dispute and related delays could hurt Arizona's chances of winning the project.

University of Arizona physicist Peter Carruthers, who worked on the state bid, said the state decided to propose two sites because "these are both outstanding sites having somewhat different virtues . . . We cannot really second-guess a committee operating at a distance."

Rec Center

Body's blueprints include skylights, or vaulted windows, that stretch from ground to ceiling along a central L-shaped hallway.

An open balcony on the second floor will allow observers a view of first-floor rooms and an outdoor pool.

The pool will include two "bulkheads," which are movable platforms that can divide the pool into three sections.

Plans call for a set of stairs around the perimeter of the pool, so students can lounge in the water and soak up the sun simultaneously.

Unlike ASU's Mona Plummer Aquatic Center, Jacobson said the pool's extensive landscaping may include terraced gardens, tables and chairs with shade covers and possibly a grass area.

Five multipurpose rooms, ranging from 2,844 square feet to 10,800 square feet, will be included in phase one.

Jacobson said the rooms will be used for aerobics, basketball, volleyball and martial arts, among other things. He said one of the smaller rooms will have padded walls for martial arts practice, while another will feature a special "springy" floor for aerobics.

Jacobson, the director of ASU intramurals, said the small rooms will help facilitate several "small-interest" groups on campus who now have nowhere to practice their art.

Keneipp said the bidding environment for the project is lower than expected, and construction of two more multipurpose rooms is likely.

Other features of the complex include a 3,000-square-foot lounge, a diagnostic center, locker rooms and a universal intercom system, operable in each room. The intramural department also will move its offices into the building.

The complex is scheduled to be open from 6 a.m. until midnight, and Keneipp said, "We think every one of those 18 hours we'll have people in the building."

Jacobson said providing facilities for ASU's disabled students was a primary concern among building committee members.

A dry wheelchair ramp will be installed to allow the disabled easy access to the water, he said.

Jacobson said a 4,000-square-foot "physically challenged" room will provide specially adapted exercise equipment for disabled students.

Rec Center to contain popular poll choices

The $20 million Student Recreation Complex will include all of the facilities recommended by a majority of ASU students who voted in a 1985 survey, according to project plans and officials.

"We are consistent right down the line with the results of the survey, except for it's going to be an outdoor pool, rather than indoor," said Keith Jacobson, director of the ASU intramural program and member of the building committee.

To fund the complex, student will begin paying $25 a semester after the building opens in summer 1989. Students will continue paying for 30 years, until bonding for the building is paid off.

The project's building committee, comprised of faculty and students, was responsible for changing the pool to an outdoor facility, said Gary Kleemann, coordinator of Associated Students.

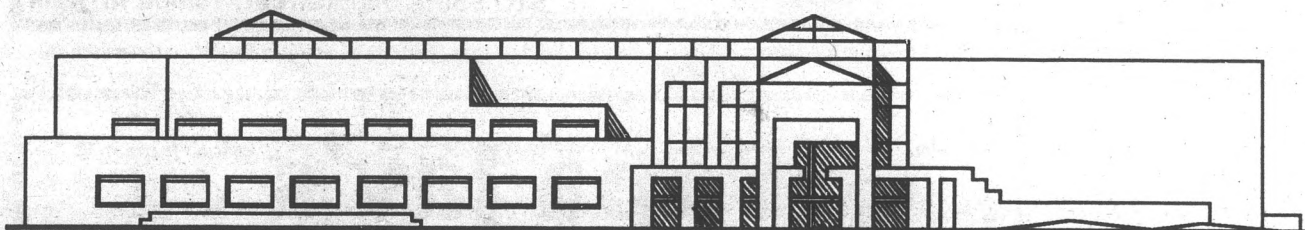

Kleemann, acting executive secretary of the committee, said an outdoor pool was more practical because of students' propensity for suntanning and cost considerations.

Students were asked to answer on a scale of 0 to 4: 0 — "Do not include"; 1 — "Possibly do not include"; 2 — "No opinion"; 3 — "Include if space"; 4 — "Include."

He said the committee decided more students would use the outdoor pool despite survey results that indicated 12 percent more students voted to "include" the indoor facility.

The six most desired facilities will be incorporated into the building, including locker rooms, aerobics rooms, a weight training area, equipment checkouts, an exercise room for handicapped and racquetball courts.

Yuma police chief, 40, selected to take over Tempe department

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

David Brown, an ASU graduate, will become Tempe's youngest chief of police when he replaces the retiring Art Fairbanks next year.

Brown, 40, and currently Yuma's police chief, will assume his post Feb. 1.

Brown served 12 years on the Tempe force before becoming Yuma's chief of police in 1980.

"I think Tempe has a good, young department," Brown said Monday. "I am very anxious to meet with the city council to discuss the strengths and weaknesses of the department."

Brown's appointment was announced Thursday. He was chosen after interviews with four officers in the department and another former officer.

"Everyone here at the city is anxious to see Dave around here again," said Assistant City Manager Jerry Geiger. "I think he will fit in very nicely with our organization."

"I'm sure there will be things that I do different from Chief Fairbanks," Brown said. "But I'm sure there won't be anything real big. I just have my own style of management."

Fairbanks, 62, has been with the department since 1968 and like Brown, was hired out of Yuma. He had been a Phoenix police officer more than 20 years before going to Yuma.

police report

Suspect in flashlight-beating case caught

A Tempe man suspected of beating a Tempe police officer over the head with a flashlight has been arrested, police said. Kevin Patrick Noonan, 31, 505 W. 14th St., was arrested Sunday in connection with the attack.

Noonan was found hiding in closet of a friend's home in the 1200 block of S. Wilson Street in Tempe, police said.

When Noonan exited the closet he asked, "How's officer Brown?" police spokesman Roger Clay said.

Patrolman Dan Brown, 24, was beaten with his flashlight during a brief struggle after Noonan allegedly tried to flee during a field sobriety test Sunday morning.

Brown required stitches to his head and remains in good condition at Tempe St. Luke's Hospital.

Noonan was booked into Tempe City Jail and was charged with armed robbery, resisting arrest and aggravated assault.

In other incidents:

•An unidentified person went on a window smashing rampage during the weekend at Tempe High School causing $11,000 in damage, police said.

Police said the suspect entered the school located at 1730 S. Mill Ave., sometime Saturday morning and used an eight-foot wooden pole to smash 37 windows and mirrors.

New engineering dean appointed

By STEVE NOLEN
State Press

George C. Beakley, associate dean of the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences, was promoted Monday to dean by acting Vice President for Academic Affairs C. Roland Haden.

Haden vacated the dean's position and moved to the academic affairs post to replace Jack Kinsinger, who accepted a position with a hospital in Chicago. Beakley will serve as dean of the college until a permanent replacement for Kinsinger is named and Haden returns from his present position.

Haden will serve in his present position until July or until a search committee finds a successor.

"George Beakley was the first faculty member hired in engineering at ASU after Dean Lee P. Thompson," Haden said. "His long-term service and dedication to the college make him the ideal person to be the dean of the college during my absence."

Beakley, who has been at ASU since 1956, said: "I've been part of an exciting drama that's three decades old, and the last decade has shot us into national prominence. I will continue to work very closely with industry and with the faculty to continue the surge toward national prominence."

Beakley said he hopes to give special attention to technology and the Division of Construction, which he described as "very good programs that have not moved as dramatically as engineering."

"George Beakley has been a good thing for the college, a good thing for ASU and a good thing for Arizona," said Lee P. Thompson, founding dean of the engineering college.

Beakley is a strong advocate of teaching and research, Thompson said. "He has improved the engineering textbooks and presentations, all in the interests of the students."

"ASU has been his life," said Assistant Dean of Engineering William E. Lewis. "This is a fitting reward for his efforts." Beakley recently was named 1987 Distinguished Engineer by Texas Technological University, his alma mater.

"No, I've never lost a term paper because of disk error. But then, I've always used Sony."

When it's three o'clock in the morning and you're nearly done with your term paper, the last thing you want to see on the screen is "fatal disk error."

That's why so many people insist on Sony. One reason is that Sony invented the 3.5" disk drive as well as the 3.5" floppy diskette. Another reason Sony floppies are so popular on campus is their relentless reliability. And that goes for our 5.25" floppies, too. After all, when it comes to magnetic media, nobody's ahead of Sony. We're a world leader in audio, video and computer magnetic media.

The thing to remember about magnetic media in computers is that almost any input error can be corrected, but lost data is forever.

So, instead of learning your lesson the hard way, trust the diskettes that set the standard for the others to follow.

Mayfair greeted with open arms at airport

The plane landed, but Bill Mayfair was still on cloud nine.

Mayfair's friends and family awaited his arrival at Sky Harbor International Airport Monday, to greet the ASU golfer after winning the 87th U.S. Amateur Championship Sunday in Jupiter, Fla.

Mayfair, in his final year for the Sun Devils, emerged into the concourse with his trophy in hand, raised it above his head and showed his family, friends and teammates the symbol of his accomplishments.

"It all really has not sunk in yet," the NCAA Player of the Year said. "The greeting at the airport topped it all."

Mayfair was met by his father, Dick, with open arms. With tears in his eyes, the proud dad admired the trophy his son had earned for ASU, his family and himself.

"Look," the elder Mayfair said as he held the trophy proudly for everyone to see.

The Sun Devil golf team came out to welcome their comrade, and share the moment of joy.

The ASU golfer was the first Arizonan to win the U.S. Amateur Championship. With the honor, Mayfair will be allowed to play in the U.S. Open next year as an amateur.

In his younger years, Mayfair was on the swim team and the golf team. When the schedules conflicted, he chose golf.

The choice paid off.

"He stuck with golf when he found out winning was really nice," Winoma Mayfair, Bill's mother, said.

Mayfair will have his name inscribed on a trophy with such golfers as Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Bobby Jones, Craig Stadler and Dean Beaman.

The senior never trailed Eric Rebmann of Plantation, Fla. in the final round of the tournament, but did not take the lead for good until the 22nd hole.

"When I struggled, I played as safe as I could to get out," the three-time All-America said.

What will be Mayfair's next move? Will he try for his card and turn pro or continue playing in the amateur ranks?

"This opens so many doors for me, but I will be back next year to defend my title," Mayfair said.

Mayfair said he will join his ASU teammates for practice in three or four days. Coach Steve Loy said he is looking forward to the upcoming season.

"The momentum should be an inspiration to the team and himself," Loy said.

Loy was with Mayfair every step of the way during the tournament. He said he shared the low times as well as the elation of victory.

"I kept telling Billy to be comfortable with everything," Loy said. "He was intent to win. He had one thing in mind: to be the national champion."

Mayfair carries a trait that singles him out from other competitors, Loy said. He is willing to put the Sun Devils as high as himself.

"I want to be a good representative of Arizona," Mayfair said.

So far he has not let the state down.

Cardinal defense-minded, missing quarterback

STANFORD

Today: Stanford (1986 8-4-0)

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a nine-part series previewing each football team in the Pac-10 Conference.

By STEVE BRENNAN
State Press

There are two notable aspects of this year's Stanford football team, neither of which are common topics of discussion in Palo Alto in the preseason: a tough defense and an offensive threat who runs with the ball instead of throwing it.

The Cardinal finished last season with their first bowl appearance in eight years (Gator Bowl) after an 8-3 regular season, and according to head coach Jack Elway, the key to success was defense.

And after losing only two starters from last year's defensive squad, things shouldn't be a whole lot different this season.

"Our defensive line will be excellent with quality depth," Elway said. "The linebacking corps is young and talented, and our defensive secondary should be quicker than last year."

The Cardinal finished second in the Pac-10 in scoring defense, allowing only 14.9 points per game. The defense also allowed only 101.3 yards rushing per game, and gave up only 319.5 total yards per game.

The Cardinal returns some top talent up front with junior Ray Huckstein at nose guard, who managed 57 tackles last season, along with junior Lester Archaibeau at tackle, who has earned high praise from Elway.

"Archaibeau will be one of the great defensive players ever at Stanford before he's through," Elway said.

Archaibeau made 69 tackles last season, including eight sacks for 52 yards.

Graduation did hit the Cardinal's linebackers, though, as All-Pac-10 performer Dave Wyman moved on to the NFL, Junior Barry McKeever is expected to fill Wyman's shoes. McKeever was second on the team in tackles with 94, despite missing two games with an injury.

In the secondary, Stanford returns two players with a lot of playing time under their belts.

Senior strong safety Brad Humphreys will anchor the secondary, along with sophomore cornerback Alan Grant, who played 11 games last season as a redshirt freshman.

On the offensive side of the ball, a running back (believe it or not) is the big story.

Senior running back Brad Muster, who was last season's Pac-10 Player of the Year, will try to fill the offensive hole left by quarterback John Paye's graduation.

Stanford has announced Muster's candidacy for the Heisman Trophy, but his chances are about as good as those of Washington quarterback Chris Chandler.

Muster does have impressive statistics, though.

In 1986 the 6-3, 226-pound running back led the Pac-10 in all-purpose yardage (147.1 yards per game), was third in rushing (95.7 yards per game) and finished with 1,053 yards on 243 carries.

"Brad Muster is an impact player," Elway said. "His versatility as a running back has been of tremendous impact to this club."

"I think it is safe to say that he'll be handling the ball between 25 and 30 times a game. I'd be crazy to do anything different," he said.

The big question offensively will be at the quarterback position.

In the recent past, quarterbacks have come out of the woodwork in Palo Alto, but this year it is a no-name, Greg Ennis, who must lead the offense.

Ennis played back-up to Paye last season before taking over in the Gator Bowl after Paye was injured.

Ennis did throw two touchdown passes in the Cardinal's 27-21 loss in the Gator Bowl, but will be challenged by a number of younger quarterbacks.

Whoever is playing quarterback for Stanford this season, he will have good people catching the football.

Leading the receivers will be wideout Jeff James, a second-team All-Conference selection last year. Senior Eric Snelson will also put in his two cents at tight end.

The Cardinal travels to Seattle Sept. 5 for their first game against Washington. The key for the Cardinal will be the quarterback position and the defense, because if it is raining in the Emerald City (and you can almost guarantee it will be), very few teams come out of Husky Stadium alive.

Eligible

Nelson overturns ruling, reinstates linebacker

ASU president J. Russell Nelson announced Monday senior linebacker Stacy Harvey, who appealed to school administrators to accept a summer correspondence class to retain his academic eligibility, will be allowed to rejoin the Sun Devil football team on Sept. 13, with a few restrictions.

Nelson ruled in favor of Harvey's appeal to have his correspondence course accepted as credit to retain his eligibility, but said this was only an exception.

The president also said Harvey's classroom attendance will be monitored daily and his mid-term grades must be passed for him to retain his eligibility.

He overruled a decision last week by faculty representative Marianne Jennings, who had said that Harvey's correspondence class was not acceptable.

Jennings declared the 6-foot-4, 230-pound senior academically ineligible last Thursday, saying the history correspondence class he passed Aug. 21 did not count toward the 24-hour "progress toward graduation requirement."

She based her ruling on a policy which states "The faculty athletic representative has ruled that student-athletes may not take ASU correspondence courses without justification."

Isn't being able to graduate and retaining eligibility good enough justification?

That brings up a very strange point: ASU will not accept a course offered by ASU.

Could it be the University is making athletes work harder than they should be?

The course Harvey took is acceptable for both the NCAA

Dave Hodges
Asst. Sports Editor

and the Pac-10. But not ASU.

Let's not kid ourselves. This is a state-run public school — not Harvard or Stanford. By the way, the course is accepted at Palo Alto.

It looks like ASU is being a little too careful. NCAA violations have hurt the school badly in the past, but the University does not have to be so picky that it actually winds up hurting itself.

ASU head football coach John Cooper agrees.

"Since I've been coaching, I've always complied by NCAA and Pac-10 rules," Cooper said Monday. "Other schools are able to use the correspondence courses — why not us?"

"I understand why we have the rule, but it doesn't mean I agree with it."

In 1979, eight football players received counterfeit credits from "Rocky Mountain College" and ASU was slapped with sanctions by the NCAA.

As a result, ASU imposed a policy that said correspondence courses of any kind are unacceptable for student-athlete eligibility.

But in Stacy's case, Nelson found that Harvey's problems were not entirely of his own making, but seemed to stem from inadequate advice given to him earlier in the summer about how many courses he needed.

Nelson said Harvey should have been advised to take two resident summer courses. Instead, Harvey was told to enroll for only one course.

In a letter from Nelson to athletic director Charles Harris, Nelson said the University was partly to blame.

"Thus, in the case of Stacy Harvey, the system broke down and the student was not well served," Nelson said. "I do not believe that in this situation we can place the full burden of responsibility on the student-athlete because of a violation of University policy and procedure which appears to be the fault of University personnel."

But Nelson added he found it difficult to see how Harvey could not know about eligibility standards.

Cooper said the team will be conducting its academic advising a little more carefully in the future.

"We're just going to try and do a better job with academic advising," Cooper said. "Our players need to be more responsible. They know the academic requirements at Arizona State."

Athletes should not be given preferential treatment, but they should not be forced to do extra work either. It was a second chance that should have never become an issue.

NFL Players Association sets deadline for strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The executive committee of the NFL Players Association, discouraged by a lack of progress in contract negotiations with NFL management, set a strike deadline on Monday but would not reveal the date.

"We will do what we have to do to reach a fair agreement," NFLPA executive director Gene Upshaw said. "With that in mind, the executive committee unanimously agreed on a date in which the strike would be."

The current collective bargaining agreement expires at midnight Monday. But the earliest the union can strike is Sept. 15, after the season's first weekend, because its mandatory 60-day notice of intent to strike was filed on July 15 with the National Labor Relations Board and the 28 NFL teams.

Upshaw said the nine-man union executive committee would recommend the date to the full board of player representatives on Sept. 8 at Washington. He said he wanted the players to consider the date before revealing it to the public.

"I think the board has to know first," he said. Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the owners, has said he expects the players to set the walkout following the third weekend of the season, at which point they would have the minimum amount of time required to qualify for a year's pension.

"I'm hoping that's the date they have in mind," Donlan said Monday. "We've got a whole lot of issues to get through. I don't think we could get through them in a week or two."

Negotiations last took place Aug. 14-15 after which union representatives went on the road to meet with players in training camps.

"Due to both of our schedules, we knew there wasn't much hope of our getting together," Upshaw said. "I decided to go on the road. I visited eight or 10 teams in that two-week period to inform the players of the lack of progress because there was so much misinformation about the progress that was being made at the tables."

Negotiations for a three-year contract are at a stalemate, Upshaw said.

"Eventually we'll get down to bargaining," he said. "We intend to bargain with the other side. We intend to reach an agreement with the other side."

The union is seeking improvements in several areas, including guaranteed contracts, increased pension benefits and, most importantly, a free-agent system that does not involve compensation.

Donlan has said free agency is the main impediment to an agreement. The owners are also seeking a salary scale for rookies and mandatory drug testing.

Upshaw, replying to reports that owners have talked about using free agents in the event of a strike, said: "We predicted things that management would do, and they're doing that."

Donlan said using free agents is "just one of the options we have. We wouldn't try that without a full meeting of all the owners."

Donlan expressed hope that the two sides can get together soon to iron out their differences. "We're ready to negotiate any time, any place," he said.

In 1982, a 57-day player walkout eliminated seven games from the schedule. Commissioner Pete Rozelle has said that strike cost owners around $150 million.

The NFLPA also called strikes in 1970 and 1974, although those walkouts didn't last nearly as long and the impact on the game wasn't nearly as dramatic.

Joyner-Kersey well ahead of world record heptathlon pace

ROME (AP) — Jackie Joyner-Kersey, dizzy from the heat, provided a glimmer of hope for the disappointing U.S. team at the World Track and Field Championships Monday as she moved well ahead of her world record pace in the heptathlon.

Her performance, which included career bests in the high jump and shot put, shared the spotlight with the second-longest triple jump history, a 58-foot, 9½-inch effort by Bulgarian Christo Markov in the final.

Joyner-Kersey, who twice shattered the world heptathlon record last year, raising it to 7,158, had 4,256 points after four events. It was a world record for the first day of a heptathlon, breaking her own mark of 4,151 set in 1986 during the Goodwill Games in Moscow.

That put her 111 points ahead of the pace of the record she set last year at Houston, and on target to become the first heptathlete to reach 7,200 points.

Like Markov, Monday's other gold medalists all came from Eastern Bloc countries.

Sigrun Wodars of East Germany set a national record in capturing the women's 800 meters in one minute, 55.26 seconds, the fastest time in the world this year.

Her countrywoman, Martina Hellman, won the women's discus with a meet-record 235 feet, and Olga Bryzgina of the Soviet Union took the women's 400 in 49.38, the year's quickest time.

The United States, meanwhile, still was seeking its first gold medal after three days of the eight-day meet in 60,000-seat Olympic Stadium.

And Joyner-Kersey appeared ready to provide one in Tuesday's final three heptathlon events.

She began her assault on the record by registering the fastest time in the 100-meter

Mayfair

Mayfair is the only amateur to win both the U.S. Amateur Championship and U.S. Public Links Championship.

According to Rich Wanninger, ASU assistant sports information director, Mayfair has won every amateur golf title except the NCAA championship.

That is Mayfair's one remaining goal. The season begins Sept. 29 at the LSU Intercollegiate Tournament in Baton Rouge, La. Every golfer in the tournament will be looking to burst the ASU golfer's bubble.

"I cannot think about the past," Mayfair said. "I have to take one tournament at a time."

The boy that started golfing at the age of 7 is beginning to get the rewards he deserves, Loy said.

But for now it is back to school for the celebrity; a week late, but on top of the world knowing he is the best amateur golfer in the country.

U.S. Open favorite Lendl confident preparing for Becker, Edberg, Cash

NEW YORK (AP) — Two-time defending champion Ivan Lendl doesn't consider himself the clear-cut favorite at this year's U.S. Open.

"I feel confident, but I don't know if I'm the favorite," said Lendl, who plays South African Barry Moir in an opening-round match Tuesday.

"Boris Becker will be dangerous because of his big serve, Stefan Edberg just won a tournament and will be confident, and Mats Wilander seems to be enjoying his tennis, which isn't always the case. John McEnroe is playing better than last year, and so is (Wimbledon champion) Pat Cash."

Lendl, who has been an Open finalist five straight years, is the top seed. Edberg is No. 2, followed by Wilander, Becker, Miloslav Mecir, Jimmy Connors, Cash and McEnroe.

Lendl, Becker and McEnroe are the only top-10 men's seeds scheduled to play Tuesday, when the two-week tournament gets under way at the National Tennis Center.

On the women's side, No. 2 seed Martina Navratilova, No. 4 Hana Mandlikova, No. 6 Helena Sukova, No. 7 Zina Garrison, No. 8 Gabriela Sabatini and No. 9 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch play opening-round matches Tuesday.

The top seed is West German teen-ager Steffi Graf, who has won 50 of 51 matches this year. Last month, Graf replaced Navratilova as the No. 1 women's tennis player in the world.

The men's and women's singles champions at the Open will each receive $250,000. Total prize money for the event is a record $4 million.

Becker's first-round opponent is Tim Wilkison, the only American man to reach the quarterfinals at last year's Open. The match should be entertaining because both players are known for their acrobatic dives and all-out hustle.

Becker is a two-time Wimbledon champion, but has never reached an Open final. He was beaten by Mecir in last year's semifinals.

McEnroe, who was upset by Paul Annacone in the first round last year, must get by Matt Anger of Pleasanton, Calif., to advance to the second round this year.

McEnroe showed flashes of his old brilliance this summer in Davis Cup matches against West Germany and the Volvo International tournament in Vermont, where he led Lendl in the final before it was rained out.

However, tennis may not be the foremost thing on his mind at the Open. His wife, Tatum O'Neal, is expecting their second child next week and McEnroe says he'll leave the tournament whenever she goes into labor.

Edberg, ranked No. 2 in the world, comes into the Open in top form. The 21-year-old Swede has won five tournaments this year, including the recent ATP Championship in Ohio, and has beaten Becker in their last two meetings.

His countryman, Wilander, has also won five tournaments this year, but may lack the power it usually takes to win the Open.

Cash hasn't played particularly well since winning Wimbledon, and his serve-and-volley game is more suited to grass than hardcourts. But he has a history of playing well in big events, and must be considered a threat.

Mecir was the big surprise at last year's Open, where he lost to Lendl in the finals.

Connors, who turns 35 Wednesday, hasn't won a tournament in three years. But the five-time Open champion hasn't lost his competitive desire.

"I still love the one-on-one," he said, "going against somebody 15 years younger than me — and beating him."

Pirates clear house hoping to save face

PITTSBURGH (AP) — It's not a fire sale, not a Thrift sale. General Manager Syd Thrift insists the wholesale changes he's made dealing away nearly all of Pittsburgh's veteran players aren't designed to save money, but to save face.

Thrift insists the Pirates, headed for their fourth consecutive last-place finish, are going to start winning with young talent, not keep losing with old players.

"We're making this a better ballclub. We're bringing the talent in," he said. "Now we've got to teach them the little things it takes to win."

Lately, the Pirates have been winning. They carried a six-game winning streak at home against Atlanta Monday night.

Since April 1, Thrift has traded away what many would consider the heart of the Pirates — and, certainly, the heart of their payroll. The team's four highest-paid players — Tony Pena, Rick Reuschel, Don Robinson and Johnny Ray — are gone, along with their estimated $3.3 million a year in salaries.

In their place are major league baseball's youngest and perhaps lowest-paid team, a team that has only two players, Andy Van Slyke and reserve outfielder Terry Harper, who make more than the big league average of $425,000 a year. Seven players make the major-league minimum of $62,500 a year.

Not only has the wheeling-dealing Thrift dealt or discarded other veterans such as Jim Morrison, Larry McWilliams and Bill Almon since March, 13 players currently on the 24-man roster weren't there a year ago. Only two Pirates, pitcher Bob Walk and Harper, are over 30, and Walk, who joined the team in mid-season 1984, finds himself the senior Pirate.

In the last eight months, Thrift has traded away the Pirates' two best starting pitchers, Rick Rhoden and Reuschel; Robinson, their bullpen stopper; their most popular player, three-time All-Star catcher Pena, and Ray, one of baseball's most consistent hitters.

"Our philosophy has been to get good, young talent for veteran players," Thrift said. "We're not trading for financial reasons, not at all. We've given up talent, but we've got talent in return."

Ray, dealt to the California Angels Saturday for two minor leaguers, was replaced by promising rookie Jose Lind.

"We know he's one of the best fielders in the major leagues. We know he's our best-fielding second baseman since Bill Mazeroski. He can turn the double play like few players can."

Dan Devine given honor in ASU Hall of Distinction

TEMPE (AP) — Dan Devine, who compiled a 27-3-1 record as a football coach at ASU from 1955-57, has been named to the school's Hall of Distinction, University officials announced Monday.

Devine, 60, currently serves as the school's new director of community education of substance abuse. He assumed that job recently after serving as executive director of the Sun Angel Foundation — the school's largest booster organization — from 1982-86.

where he was 99-37-7 in 13 seasons. He coached the NFL's Green Bay Packers from 1971-74 and then went to Notre Dame, where he posted a 53-16-1 record from 1975-80 including a national title in 1977.

In 22 college seasons, Devine had a combined record of 179-56-9 for a .761 winning percentage. He was elected to the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame in 1985.

Devine will officially be inducted into the ASU Hall of Fame during halftime ceremonies of the Sun Devils' Sept. 26 game here against Nebraska.

high hurdles, skimming over the barriers in 12.91 seconds.

She followed that by high-jumping 6-2¾, a personal best and the best ever by an American in the heptathlon. Then, she threw the shot a personal-best 52-6 and completed her solid showing by running the 200 meters in 22.95, the fastest among the 25 heptathletes.

That gave Joyner-Kersey a 338-point lead over the Soviet Union's Larisa Nikitina, the runner-up with 3,918. Third was Yuqing Zhu of China with 3,873, with Jane Frederick of the U.S. fourth with 3,844 points.

Joyner-Kersey accomplished her score in 88 degree heat and 80 percent humidity that, she said, made her feel dizzy.

Frederick won the only event that Joyner-Kersey did not, taking the shot put with 53-5¾.

If Joyner-Kersey wins the heptathlon gold medal it would be a tremendous boost to the sagging fortunes of the U.S. team.

So far, the Americans have only two silvers and one bronze.

The second silver came Monday, when Mike Conley, the Olympic silver medalist and ranked No. 1 in the world in 1986, finished second in the triple jump, behind Markov.

Markov, the 1985 World Indoor Games gold medalist and 1986 European champion, exceeded the world championship record on each of his three legal jumps.

First, he went a wind-aided 58-1, then 58-2, fouled, 58-9½, and fouled twice.

The winning jump surpassed the European record of 58-5¼ that Markov had set at Sofia, Bulgaria, this year.

Conley, a come-from-behind specialist, could not do it against the fired-up Markov. But he earned the silver with a leap of 57-11¾ on his final attempt.

The bronze medal went to the Soviet Union's Oleg Sakirkin at 57-2¼.

In the women's 400, Bryzgina led a 1-2-3 Eastern Bloc sweep, beating East Germans Petra Mueller (49.94) and Kirsten Emmelman (50.20).

The first three places in the women's 800 also went to Eastern Europeans, with Christine Wachtel of East Germany taking second behind Wodars in 1:55.32 and Liubov Gurina of the Soviet Union third in 1:55.56.

The same East Bloc dominance held in the women's discus, with Diana Gansky of East Germany taking the silver medal at 230-1 and Tsvetanka Khristova of Bulgaria grabbing the bronze at 225-9.

An East German, Thomas Schloenebe, broke the meet record in the men's 400 meters, capturing his second-round heat in 44.81.

Two Americans, Butch Reynolds, the fastest quarter-miler ever at sea level, and Roddie Haley, reached the semifinals, but 1984 Olympic bronze medalist Antonio McKay was eliminated after placing fifth in his heat.

Edwin Moses, the king of the men's 400-meter intermediate hurdlers, kept on pace for another crown.

The two-time Olympic champion celebrated his 32nd birthday by winning his semifinal in 48.38 and advancing to Tuesday's final.
