

Education tops agenda of Oval Office hopeful

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Illinois Sen. Paul Simon looks more like an aging game-show host than a Democratic presidential hopeful as he skips down an aisle at one of University of North Carolina's lecture halls, shaking hands right and left.

He's in town for a presidential candidates' debate on education, and he's talking the party-line issues that students at large universities love to hear.

He's for cutting defense spending and against tax breaks for the wealthy. Health care for the elderly and education top his agenda. And he calls Strategic Defense Initiative "wrong from every perspective."

But Simon, a throw-back to the days of Harry Truman and radio, is finding more local support among college students than the other six Democratic candidates.

In a race where TV image could be the deciding factor, he's discovering that his dapper bow ties and understated blue jackets are pulling in votes.

"If people are looking for a TV image, then I'm not their guy," the 58-year-old

Democrat from Cook County said. "If they are looking for someone who is hard-working and honest, I'm their candidate."

Simon, who spoke before about 250 North Carolina students, is the only presidential hopeful to meet directly with students during the two-day forum on education issues for both Democrats and Republicans.

A former newspaper publisher who was first elected to the Illinois Legislature at age 25, Simon said he has an unusual rapport with students but doesn't know why.

"I am supposed to be the non-TV type of candidate," he said. "(But) people want something more than just a slick-packaged product."

Simon's most popular subject on college campuses is student loans, and his promise is to provide more grants and limit student debt.

"We are increasingly segregating American education on the basis of economics, and that is not a healthy thing," he said.

Simon received the loudest applause at the end of his speech when he told students of his dreams for America, and "how they can make this country better."

"Frankly, I want your help, I need your help," he said.

Faculty committee changes A's given to 22 law students

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

The College of Law faculty has reversed the grades of a fellow professor's spring semester class, according to two students who attended a faculty-student meeting that was closed to reporters.

Faculty members unanimously voted Wednesday night to change 22 "A's" to "pass" for students who took "international business transactions" from Professor Dale Furnish, said third-year law students Lawrence Felder and Karin Palesek, who took the course. They were among four students from the class who attended the meeting.

Furnish also attended the meeting. He would not comment after it ended, but on Thursday he said, "All I can say is I'm sorry if any of my actions caused all of this."

The meeting was open to students and faculty, but College of Law Dean Paul Bender refused entrance to a reporter and photographer.

"We cannot let you stay because this is a meeting between faculty and law students," Bender said. "We only invite those whose presence is necessary."

Bender said he could not comment on the decision, but said he was "in total support of the faculty."

The students in Furnish's class will receive three credit hours for the "pass" but their GPA's will remain unaffected.

Furnish's students were required to complete three take-home exams, which could be worked on individually or in groups, Felder said.

In the College of Law, group work is acceptable in pass-fail courses but not in graded ones, Bender said Thursday.

Assistant Dean Christine Smith sent letters to each student July 28 to notify them their grades in the class were being withheld until the matter could be looked into, Felder said.

Students could not compute their cumulative grade point averages and those eligible for honors started to worry, he said.

An open faculty meeting was held Sept. 8, said Felder, who added that he attended the meeting as a student representative. Felder said Bender spoke and asked the faculty if Bender could work with Furnish to resolve the problem. But the faculty decided to vote on it themselves and called a meeting for Wednesday, Felder said.

Three students from the class presented their ideas and feelings at the Wednesday meeting in an effort to sway the faculty, Felder said.

"I appreciate the time they (the faculty) took, but I still feel we deserve a grade," Palesek said after the meeting.

She said most students in the class were unsure of facts surrounding the case.

"Some people are happy with a pass, while others want a letter grade," Felder said.

The consensus among students present was "someone's going to get hurt and it's going to be the students," Felder said.

Recall group ahead of schedule with 182,264 petition signatures

By TWYLA PUMROY
State Press

PHOENIX — Already halfway to its deadline, the Mechem Recall Committee has collected 182,264 signatures, 7,000 more than expected for the date, founder Ed Buck said Thursday from recall headquarters.

Following the announcement and the ensuing applause from recall workers, Buck said the group has until Nov. 3 to collect its goal of 350,000 signatures.

A successful recall campaign would require 216,746 valid signatures.

"We're very hopeful," Buck said. "We're at the halfway point."

But Buck said Maricopa County Recorder Keith Poletis' plan to check every petition signature in the county, including handwriting, is a "cheap shot" and does not follow what he believes is standard policy for validating signatures.

He also said the committee is lacking money needed partly to establish a legal defense fund in case of unforeseen complications with the recall.

"We need a large increase in donations," Buck said. "We certainly haven't seen any flood-gates open in terms of donations."

"To date we have taken in $110,000."

"I would like to point out that is less than Mechem spent on his tabloid."

Buck said the committee is not threatened by the governor's tabloid, which went out to 925,000 households Tuesday, and is encouraging recall supporters to turn in their copies for recycling, to raise money that the committee needs to continue its push for signatures.

Buck said the organization will have to change its strategy in response to the Arizona Supreme Court's decision Wednesday not to rule on the committee's appeal for access to five Valley shopping malls.

On Aug. 24, Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Rudolph Gerber granted a preliminary injunction, ruling that the shopping malls are private property and have the right to control their property — including barring members of the recall committee from seeking petition signatures.

"People will have to look (for the recall workers) because we're not in the malls," Buck said. "We're concerned, but we're not worried."

"It ain't over 'til it's over. This is the halfway point, and we are doing good."

Buck said the recall drive slowed in the final two weeks of August but has seen an increase during the first week of September.

The group plans a "high profile day" on Sept. 19 when an "incalculable number" of recall petitioners will be saturating campuses and street corners and traveling in car caravans, he said.

Buck said recall headquarters will be open Monday during the papal visit, but the group will not have an organized signature collection booth at the stadium.

"Individuals who have petitions may be carrying them along the motorcade," he said.

If the recall is successful, Buck said he would not consider running for office, but he did offer the services of "Sly" the recall office dog, because "the dog never tells lies."

Pontiff begins U.S. tour in Miami; Reagan welcomes pope at airport

MIAMI (AP) — Pope John Paul II, prepared for dissent but claiming the support of a "silent majority" of Catholics, launched his second U.S. tour Thursday as "a friend of America and all Americans."

President Reagan, who had come from Washington to welcome the pontiff on a clear, 90-degree afternoon, made a pointed reference to Central America as he portrayed himself as a supporter of human freedom.

Said the pontiff: "I come as a friend — a friend of America and of all Americans: Catholics, Orthodox, Protestants and Jews, people of every religion, and all men and women of good will."

"I come as a friend of the poor and the sick and dying; those who are struggling with the problems of each day; those who are rising and falling and stumbling on the journey of life; those who are seeking and discovering, and those not yet finding, the deep meaning of 'life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.'"

Many in the exuberant welcoming crowd of 4,500 held up yellow-and-white papal flags to flap in a breeze which blew the pontiff's white skullcap off his head. The pope did not kiss the ground on this visit, because it was his second tour of the United States.

Security was intense in Miami, and a 53-year-old construction worker was arrested after he was found carrying a gun and knife at Tamiami Park, where the pope will celebrate Mass on Friday. Police said they did not believe the incident was related to the papal visit.

Reagan came to Miami with Mrs. Reagan to head the receiving line.

"In Europe and elsewhere, we continue to place our might on the side of human dignity," Reagan said. "In Latin America and Asia, we are supporting the expansion of human freedom, in particular, the powerful movement toward democracy."

Reagan tells pope arms accord depends on Soviets' earnestness

MIAMI (AP) — President Reagan met Pope John Paul II privately Thursday and said he told him that the superpowers are on the verge of a historic arms accord but success all depends on the Soviets' willingness "to get down to the hard work of completing an agreement."

For his part, the leader of the world's Roman Catholics offered bountiful thanks to Americans past and present "for their generosity to millions of their fellow human beings."

Reagan said he informed John Paul II of the "nearness" of an arms accord with the Soviets which would dismantle both sides' intermediate range nuclear missiles.

"Of course, all of this depends upon Soviet willingness to get down to the hard work of completing an agreement," Reagan said.

The president said the United States also stands ready "for another historic agreement" to cut strategic nuclear arsenals on each side by 50 percent.

United States to seek $270 million in aid to Nicaraguan Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, arguing that the alternative is a "communist victory" in Nicaragua, said Thursday the administration will ask Congress for $270 million in aid to the Contra rebels for an 18-month period.

Testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Shultz said additional aid to the Contras is the best insurance that Nicaragua will comply with terms of the Central American peace agreement it signed last month in Guatemala.

The announcement drew immediate criticism from a number of congressional Democrats and is certain to produce another round of heated debate on Capitol Hill over the administration's Central America policy.

The Guatemala agreement, among other steps, calls on the Sandinista government to arrange a cease fire and implement democratic reform measures by Nov. 7 — about five weeks after the current Contra aid allotment expires.

Researchers create more accurate AIDS test; can detect new strains

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers said Thursday they have developed an AIDS diagnostic test that can be readily tailored to detect new strains of the disease virus and is easier, cheaper and more accurate than existing tests.

Scientists at the Research Institute of Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, Calif., and the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said that the test appears to be superior to the so-called Western Blot test widely used to confirm infection by the AIDS virus.

Health authorities typically screen blood and test people for AIDS infections using what is called an ELISA test, which detects antibodies developed against proteins coating human immunodeficiency virus or HIV.

Because current ELISA tests can give false positive readings — sometimes indicating an infection when none is present — scientists verify positive findings with the Western Blot, a more time-consuming and difficult-to-perform test to detect core proteins to the virus.

POPE DAY

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE ASU STUDENT BODY

Next Monday, September 14, 1987, Pope John Paul II will arrive in Phoenix at 8:30 a.m. for a twenty-four hour visit to the area. Hosted by Bishop Thomas J. O'Brien and the Catholic Diocese of Phoenix, the Pope will make a number of appearances in the Valley on this, the fifth stop of his nine-city tour of the United States. There will be two "open" events in the morning, a motorcade down Central Avenue and an address from the balcony of Saint Mary's Basilica to a crowd assembled on Phoenix Civic Plaza.

The largest ticketed event will take place in the evening on the ASU campus, a Mass in Sun Devil Stadium. Pre-event activities will begin at 3:30 in the stadium, the Pope is scheduled to arrive at 6:30, and the ceremony will last from 7:00 until 9:30 p.m. A post-event fireworks display and exit traffic will mean that the area is unlikely to return to normal until midnight or after.

CROWDS AND TRAFFIC

It is impossible to anticipate the size or nature of the crowds that will assemble to see the Pope. All planning has been based on a "worst case" scenario which envisions half a million pilgrims in the Phoenix-Tempe area. If a crowd assembles around the stadium, it will occupy the parking areas between the Palo Verde residence halls and Stadium Drive since this is the only point which the Pope's motorcade is certain to pass. Although we can only guess at how early such a crowd might begin to arrive, the University Department of Public Safety is prepared to prevent camping on campus over the weekend before the Papal Visit.

Like the crowd, the traffic situation is uncertain, although there are some sure complications. As the event traffic picks up, First Street/Rio Salado Parkway will be restricted to busses only from Priest Road to Scottsdale Road; Scottsdale Road will be closed between First and Sixth Streets and other routes will be modified as they are for incoming football traffic. One of the City of Tempe contingency plans for dealing with "gridlock" in the stadium area would turn away all incoming traffic from an area bounded by Priest and Hayden/McClintock, Curry and Broadway Roads.

PARKING AND SECURITY

With classes postponed, University services curtailed, and uncertain crowd and traffic situations, anyone without a ticket to the Papal Mass would be wise to avoid the campus next Monday. Those who must drive to campus are urged to use one of the three new parking structures, which will be open to all University decals, so that exit routes can be maintained for them.

Residents of Manzanita and the Palo Verde halls have already been informed of the need to move their cars from parking lots 53 and 51 by Sunday evening, and of the alternate parking arrangements that have been made for them. As the letter from the Parking and Residence Life offices indicated, the Secret Service has required this relocation for security reasons. In addition, we are interested in safeguarding the vehicles normally parked in those lots: If a large crowd does gather there to see the Pope enter the stadium, it will be far easier to have moved your car than to convince the twenty people using it as a viewing platform that they want to get off the roof of your Honda.

Although most University Police officers will be on duty in Sun Devil Stadium for much of Monday, arrangements have been made with the Maricopa County Sheriff's Department and both Tempe Police and private security to guard residence halls and to maintain campus patrol and response teams. Most academic and administrative buildings will be locked at noon, and the police are unlikely to be available to unlock doors.

UNIVERSITY SERVICES

Most academic and administrative offices will be closed by noon. University Police and Physical Plant will maintain essential operations and respond to emergency calls. The Memorial Union will close at 3 p.m. Hayden and Noble Libraries will close at 5 p.m. Residence hall meals will be served at Palo Verde Main, Manzanita and Sahuaro at 8-9:30 a.m., 11 a.m.-1 p.m., 1-2:30 p.m. (cold lunch), and 4:30-6:30 p.m. Palo Verde West and Mariposa will serve only dinner, 4:30-6:30 p.m.

PUBLIC SERVICE

Often overlooked in the discussion of teaching and research is the fact that the University has a three-fold mission. Making Sun Devil Stadium available for a community event of this magnitude is but one manifestation of our public service. I thank you for putting up with the inconveniences the Papal Mass has caused. I think you'll find them worthwhile in the long run, whether you attend the event or not, for this will be an occasion to measure our lives by: Just as we already speak of 1986/87 as the year the Sun Devils won the Rose Bowl, we'll forever refer to the time the Pope came to ASU.

Executive Director of Public Events

My conservative friend Grump was sitting at the end of the bar, so I took the next stool and told him how pleased I was to see him so we could discuss current events. He gave me his usual suspicious scowl and said: "What's it going to be this time — the Bork appointment? You pinkos don't stand a chance on that one."

I agree. As a matter of fact, I sort of like Bork. Anyone who wears that kind of beard has to be a closet hippie.

"Then it's Jack Kemp, isn't it? You're going to try to irritate my stomach lining by bringing up this trivia some media vultures dug up about his military record."

Kemp? You mean because his Army reserve unit was called up during the Berlin crisis in 1961. But he didn't have to go because he wasn't physically fit? So he stayed behind and led the AFL quarterbacks in passing? Listen, I know how that can happen. When my number was called, a military doc told me that I had flat feet, was nearsighted and had a curvature of the spine.

"So they rejected you?"

No, they gave me arch supports and glasses, told me not to slouch, and a tough sergeant shoved me on the next train to boot camp. It was just as well that they did. The kind of physical wreck I was, I couldn't have played quarterback anyway.

"Then I hope you aren't going to dredge up the Ollie North thing again. We've exhausted that subject and you and your ilk have lost."

I concede defeat. Ollie is a genuine hero. Even if he goes to jail, which is quite possible, he'll have a special place in history for making lying a virtue. He has made every used car salesman stand tall.

"Well, then on what subject are you seeking enlightenment?"

It's this business in the Persian Gulf. I'm not sure which side I'm supposed to be on by helping Kuwait, which supports Iraq, we're helping Iraq, even though Iraq has been supported by the Soviet Union, right?

"Yes, but we must remember that in international affairs, things cannot always be exactly as we would like them."

Of course. And our ultimate goal is to see the Iran-Iraq war end, so there will be stability in that region?

"I'm glad your feeble mind grasps that obvious point."

Thank you. But I'm still confused. When we went in there with our ships to protect the reflagged Kuwaiti ships, which is to Iraq's advantage, didn't we ask Iraq to kind the general idea."

So tell me, what the heck is going on? We send our ships and sailors in there because we want to keep the peace so Iraq doesn't lose the war, and now Iraq is bombing the hell out of Iran's oil rigs and ships and escalating the war. So what does President Reagan do now?

"We have made it clear to Iraq that we do not approve of their most recent actions."

Yeah, and Iraq has made it clear that they don't care if we don't approve. So what do we do now if Iran goes after our ships?

"Obviously, we would have to retaliate against Iran. A military response would be in order."

But why don't we retaliate against Iraq for causing this problem by attacking Iran when we asked them not to?

"Because we are trying to help Iraq achieve a peaceful settlement of its differences with Iran."

I get it. Iraq is helping us help them achieve this peaceful settlement by attacking Iran, so that Iran will get mad and attack us for helping Kuwait, which is helping bankroll Iraq in its war with Iran. Do you think that's Reagan's peace plan?

"I'm sure our commander-in-chief has a complete grasp of the situation."

I hope so. But if any of our ships are hit, and our sailors are killed, that'll be a lot of lettering to put on a tombstone. Of course, we could simplify it.

"How?"

We can just say: Killed in Action During Brand X War.

'When we went in there with our ships to protect the reflagged Kuwaiti ships, which is to Iraq's advantage, didn't we ask Iraq to kind of cool it, to stay out of the ayatollah's face for a while?'

anymore. When we went in there and reflagged those Kuwaiti tankers, it was because we were helping Iraq, right?

"Correct. It was the judgment of our commander-in-chief that it was in the best interests of this country for Iran not to win the war with Iraq because the ayatollah would spread his fanatic revolution to the rest of that volatile region, thus eroding our influence."

Which is why Ollie sold weapons to Iran, so Iran wouldn't win the war with Iraq?

"Don't confuse the issues. That was a different piece of strategy."

Excuse me, sometimes I forget. Anyway, of cool it, to stay out of the ayatollah's face for a while?

"I believe such a request was made, although in more formal diplomatic language than your pseudo-ghetto jargon."

Forgive me. I'll have to read George Will more often. But what I'm trying to say is that we asked Iraq to stop zapping Iran's oil wells and ships.

"Yes, we did."

And we did that because if Iraq kept zapping Iran, then Iran would try to get even by going after our ships, us being pals with Iraq these days.

Know thine enemies

Editor:

Abraham Lincoln said we can judge a man by his enemies. We never heard of Judge Bork until Justice Powell resigned and President Reagan nominated Bork to take his place. We must, therefore, judge him by his enemies.

The outfits that make millions of dollars killing babies (by abortion) hate Judge Bork. They say he would send us back to the stone age (by voting that unborn babies are actually small human beings). Mainly they are afraid the Supreme Court, with Justice Bork's nomination confirmed, would put the baby-killers out of business.

The folks who want to take away the right of the people to keep and bear arms hate Judge Bork. He has always ruled that the United States Constitution means what it says in plain English. They think the people would be a lot safer if we didn't have guns to defend our families from criminals. It certainly would be safer for the criminals! Judge Bork says the government must obey the Constitution.

The "Liberals" hate Judge Bork. While that may not be a good enough reason to confirm his nomination, it certainly is a good "indicator." Add to that the fact that even his enemies have to admit that he is a very good, competent Constitutional scholar, and come to the conclusion that Judge Bork is the right man for the job. Confirm Justice Bork.

Car chase, accident in Tempe result in arrest of Gilbert man

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A 30-year-old Gilbert man was charged with leading Tempe police on a one-mile chase before crashing into a power pole, causing a minor brush fire, police said.

Richard Evans, of the 900 block of North Gilbert Road, was observed making several traffic violations near the intersection of McClintock Drive and University Drive and fled when police tried to stop him, police spokesman Roger Austin said.

Austin said Evans then ran a stop sign at Perry Lane and headed southbound where he smashed into a chain-link fence and into a power pole. Live wires caused a small brush fire, he added.

Evans was apprehended after he ran into an abandoned office building, Austin said.

He was booked into Tempe City Jail and charged with felony fleeing and driving under the influence of alcohol.

In other incidents:

• A 37-year-old Tempe man was charged with felony assault after allegedly putting an ASU police officer in a headlock and punching him, police said.

The man had been asked to leave the campus after he was selling tickets to an unspecified event, police said.

Carnegie president: top students avoid teaching

By VICKIE CHACHERE

State Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — The President of the Carnegie Foundation For the Advancement of Teaching blasted university administrators and professors Thursday for being "part of the problem, not the solution" to attracting top-level students to the teaching profession.

Ernest Boyer said universities have not created a climate that encourages students to enter the teaching profession, and that has hurt America's educational system.

"The universities have several roles; one is to create a climate where becoming a teacher is not something that you only whisper about to your friend late into the night," Boyer said.

"If a student who is gifted happens to say to his faculty adviser, 'I'd like to be a teacher,' that's usually the end of the friendship."

In the first day of a two-day forum on issues in education for presidential hopefuls, Boyer said education colleges are the least respected on campuses and teaching has become the least-respected profession.

He also called for reform in teacher training and proposed a five-year training plan made up of four years of basic education and one year of training in the field.

"I don't think the art of teaching is achievable on most campuses," Boyer said. "It's in the classroom with great teachers that you develop the subtleties and skills of teaching."

Secretary of Education William Bennett backed Boyer's remarks and added that universities should be held accountable for what students learn.

Bennett, often a harsh critic of higher education, said accrediting agencies should measure what students learn in a college before accreditation is granted. He said accreditation should be withheld if students are not well-educated when they graduate.

"(The accrediting agencies) should measure whatever the claims are that a college or university is making in order to be the recipient of federal funds," Bennett said. "That's accountability. It means you have got to show somebody, you have got to measure up. If you don't measure up, something might happen."

Bennett warned presidential hopefuls that voters will be looking for more accountability as the federal government continues to sink billions of dollars into public education.

"I don't have any objection to a rich nation spending $115 billion a year on higher education, provided we are getting our money's worth," Bennett said. "There is all too much evidence that we are not."

Bennett said governors and legislatures are responsible for much of the accountability, and the federal government should have a limited role.

A former Arizona governor, Bruce Babbitt, the only presidential contender present at Boyer's and Bennett's discussions, said the federal government should have a "partnership" role with local governments in education reform.

Babbitt, who will outline his education platform during a debate with the six other democratic hopefuls today, said he believes teacher training should focus more on basics and less on teaching theories.

Bennett, critical of his own Republican party for not showing more interest in education issues, said improving education should be a bipartisan issue.

"(Among) those who are interested in education reform, you cannot really tell who are the Republicans and who are the Democrats," he said.

Only two Republican hopefuls, New York Rep. Jack Kemp and Delaware Gov. Pete Du Pont will participate in the debate. The other contenders declined to attend.

"It's been pretty hard to get this party to pay attention to education," Bennett said. "They felt the Democrats owned it."

Bennett said he was "interested" in what Babbitt had to say about education and praised Babbitt for setting up career ladders for teachers and student testing programs in Arizona.

"I like governors," Bennett said. "One of the reasons I like governors is because they have real jobs."

"They run schools. They are responsible for the schools in their states."

ASU student drowns during rafting trip

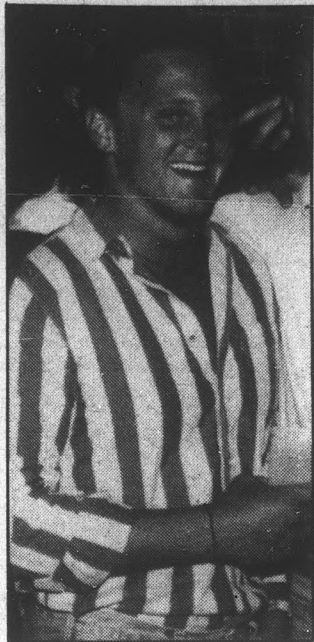

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

The body of a 21-year-old ASU student was found Thursday after apparently drowning Monday during a rafting trip on the Colorado River, a La Paz County sheriff's deputy said.

Dennis Sullivan, an Associated Students campus affairs officer for Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, was rafting alone Monday morning near Head Gate Dam in Parker when he entered a danger zone and was sucked under by a "whirlpool," Lt. Mike Newman said.

"A witness reported that a man near the dam was floundering, trying to get out," Newman said. "Before he could get out he was sucked under."

Newman said Sullivan apparently managed to survive the trip through the dam but was separated from the raft when he hit turbulent water.

Dennis Sullivan

He was found floating eight miles downriver, he said.

Sullivan, a junior business major and former New Jersey state wrestling champion, was spending the weekend in Parker with fraternity members.

"He was our third baseman," said Scott Isham, a member of the "Pike" house who lived with Sullivan at 620 Alpha Drive. "It's kind of ironic because we were on our way to practice when we got the call."

"We hoped it was a practical joke because we were just with him last week."

Isham said this is the first time the house has faced the death of a member.

"We are all just trying to stick together," Isham said. "It's been roughest for his roommate. He didn't go down with him that weekend. They were pretty much inseparable."

Matt Ardito, a junior biology major and Sullivan's roommate, said, "I don't think there was a person who cared more about this house. He would have been such an asset."

Ardito said Sullivan was a born-again Christian who paid for his tuition with money earned selling Bibles over the summer.

"You know he went down fighting," said Ken Kozlik, a fellow fraternity member and friend.

A memorial service for Sullivan is planned for 7:30 p.m. tonight at the All Saints Catholic Newman Center, 230 E. University Drive.

Building committee forum enables students to voice opinions about rec center

By AARYN KEMP
State Press

ASU students can voice their ideas for the proposed $20 million ASU student recreation center next Tuesday in an open forum sponsored by the building committee.

The discussion in the MU is open to anyone interested in exchanging ideas for the center, ASASU President Karrin Kunasek said.

The meeting will mark the final opportunity to amend construction plans, she said, and members of the building committee will be present to hear feedback and answer questions.

A model of the complex has been set up in the north end of the MU. Construction is scheduled to begin this spring and will take approximately one year to complete.

Kunasek said she is pleased with the plans, except for the fact that the men's locker room is larger than the women's.

"I've been told that it is a normal thing for men's locker rooms to be larger," she said. "But I don't agree. I think both locker rooms should be equal in size."

"The proposal to make both rooms the same size will definitely be brought up in the meeting."

David Body, who designed the Woodman Center, a similar complex at the UCLA, designed plans for the student-funded project.

Box Office Bingo:

•"Prayer for the Dying," starring Mickey Rourke ("9½ Weeks") and Bob ("Mona Lisa") Hoskins opens Valleywide today. The political thriller asks the question "Is there life before death?" No, it's not about growing up in Utah, it's about the world of Northern Ireland. Rourke plays Martin Fallon, a man disheartened enough by the injustice around him to become a terrorist for the Irish Republican Army. Sounds like a bit of a contradiction.

Exposed:

•The Playboy Channel will be filming three half-hour segments for its monthly talk show, "Women on Sex," today. The shows, attended by women only, will deal with the topics "Campus Sex," "Addicted to Love," and a third to be announced. Tickets are $.60 (handling charge) at any Dillard's box office. If you would like to be on a discussion panel, call Cheryl Pappas collect at (213) 854-3775. For more information on the show, call KSLX at 941-1007.

Bob Hoskins tries to convert Mickey Rourke in "A Prayer for the Dying," which opens today in Valley cinemas.

On second thought

"I think (Gary) Hart would've made a great president. I mean, we could've played at the White House. But a president, to me, is Abe Lincoln, George Washington — not some guy who's sleeping with some chick."
—Vince Neil, lead singer of Motley Crue in Rolling Stone magazine.

Popular singing trio headlines benefit show

By GREGORY ROBERT KRZOS
State Press

In 1984, Michelle Katzenbach and Christy Welty, two Valley singers, took turns carpooling to the show they were working on for the Arizona Opera Company.

Somewhere between the downtown area and their perspective homes, a friendship formed — one they would later benefit from, musically.

Meanwhile, at ASU's Lyric Opera Theater, Brian Wayne Hall, a friend and colleague of Welty's, was studying hard to obtain a master's degree in directing. One day, Hall and Welty heard from a friend on the Arizona Commission of the Arts. Apparently, the Valley needed a good cabaret-type singing group.

It didn't take Welty long to remember her carpool partner whom she shared "musical" dreams with.

The result was the birth of Christy & Co.

Since their first stanza as a musical troupe, Christy & Co. has crescendoed to fabulous heights here in the Valley. They have performed in front of 60,000 people state-wide and continue to grow an amazingly wide repertoire.

Saturday, the group will bring its vocal magic to the Lyric Opera Theater stage for a special benefit show. The production, beginning at 8 in the Music Theater, will help raise funds for LOT's scholarship fund, which in turn will help the company's actor-singers achieve educational goals.

Although the trio have toured many a stage in Arizona, this particular show may be somewhat significant for a number of reasons.

"I'm scared to death," Hall said in a recent interview. "I teach there (at LOT), and my students are coming. I haven't been on the LOT stage (except for Christy & Co.) for quite a long time."

Although Hall's pre-performance jitters may or may not be the most unusual thing about the benefit show, another twist for theatergoers may be the ensemble's wide range of showbiz tunes.

"There's something for everyone, we do jazz, blues, opera, music theater and comedy and serious and sentimental type things," Katzenbach said. "We've taken different songs from different musicals and subgrouped them into different topics."

"There's also a section — I hate to call them crazy people, but that's sort what they are — with us playing a group of unusual and strange people in unusual and strange types of circumstances."

A great deal of the show is compiled of a variety of Broadway showtunes, operetta pieces and a number of selections from Stephen Sondheim.

"We love Stephen Sondheim," Katzenbach said.

Welty, a former student and singer for LOT sees the show as a benefit — for herself.

"Obviously, for me, I've learned a lot from Lyric Opera Theater," she said. "I've got a lot of benefits that I use in my singing. It's an opportunity, maybe, to go back and thank them, and also to provide money for other students to get similar types of education in their lives."

"For us, the show is one of the more exciting musical shows we've put together. We may not be the best opera singers out there, we may not be the best musical theater and jazz troupe out there, but we're ... pretty good."

Tickets for popular ensemble are $10 for adults and $5 for students. For more information, call 965-3434.

The Twyla Zone

If the shoe fits...

Editor's note: "The Twyla Zone" is a monthly feature on fashion and entertainment news. "The Krzos Nest" and "Miller Highlights" rotate biweekly on Wednesdays.

Although it is hot news to some, there is more to life than Reeboks. Shoes, those pedal accoutrements, are versatile little buggers, and given the right attention they can be quite fun. The possibilities are limitless, and as evidenced by the platform wonders of the 70s, sometimes frightening.

There is a school of thought that shoes are the ultimate joy in life, the essence of civilized society, the supreme reason to be alive — and then there is the unfounded idea that shoes are simply protection from the elements.

The shoe-worshiper (not to be confused with a shoe-fetishist), will travel great distances to find the perfect Italian loafer and then endure crushing sacrifices to accommodate the "shoe fix."

Contrary to these shoe-maniacs are those who believe a shoe is a shoe. Primarily, they just want to be comfy and get a lot of wear for their shoe-cash.

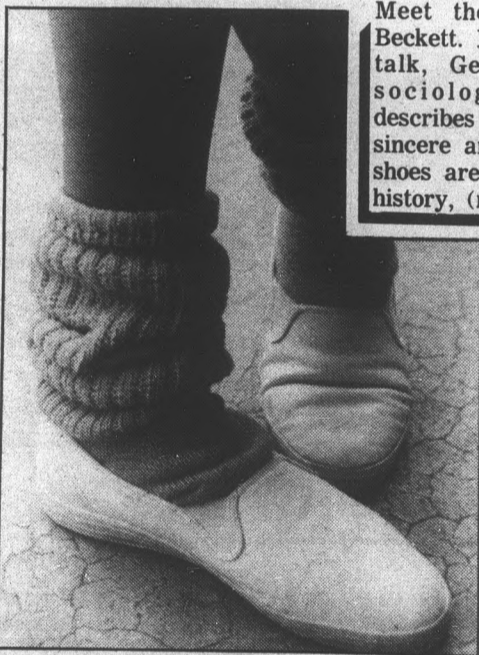

Regardless of which faction you would join, take heed to the emerging art of footwear-personality-assessment, known to the layman as the "if the shoe fits, wear it" theory.

If you want to know the intimate trials and tribulations of a person, go ahead and walk a mile in their shoes. But, if you just want to know a little something about their personality, a quick gander at their footwear ought to do the trick.

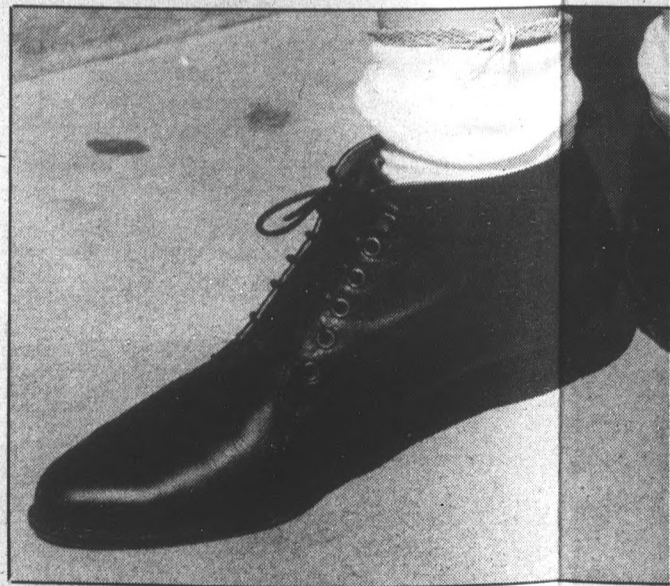

Meet the feet of Geoff Beckett. In "dating game" talk, Geoff is a senior sociology major who describes himself as open, sincere and persistent. His shoes are in sync with his history, (maybe they're old shoes). "I used to be a business major but I had to work and my grades kept going down so I changed to an easier major. My immediate goals are to be a successful commercial real-estate salesman," he said.

These leather Keds and the feet within belong to the 18-year-old Lisa Mandelbaum, who said that she is undecided about her major. She isn't confused about fashion, though, she said she tries to keep aware of what's "in." She does like gymnastics and going to parties — although not necessarily at the same time. And even trendy shoes can't make Lisa stop longing for New Jersey.

Alison Lille certainly wears her feet well and probably has for all 18 of her years. This "undecided" frosh says she really wants to live in or near a lake in France and do "NOTHING." When asked what she likes to do for fun, she said, "I don't have fun. I hate it here; I can't stand it; I'm going to transfer!"

Scott Palmer and his feet are 19 years old and majoring in English. The sophomore said that he is fun-loving and wants to go to law school or be an "English prof." He added that he wants to stay in school as long as possible. In his spare time he likes to sit, be a drummer and eat vegetables — not necessarily all at the same time.

He is a graduate student in accounting and plays tennis, drinks and spends time with his son for relaxation. "I'm hard working and confident about studying," he said.

Pope tips: Dos and don'ts for Tempe papal Mass

By TRACY SCOTT
State Press

Pope John Paul II is coming to Sun Devil Stadium Monday and here are a few tips for worshippers attending the Mass and University students in the surrounding ASU community:

The event begins at 6:30 p.m. when the pontiff tours the stadium in his popemobile and the Mass will begin at 6:50 p.m.

Ticket holders will be able to enter the stadium through the north gates at 2 p.m. Handicapped people will enter through the northeast gates.

Worshippers must pass through airport style metal detectors, magnetometers and University officials are encouraging ticket holders to arrive early to allow for time to pass through the detectors.

Additional information for the papal Mass can be obtained by calling 965-ROME for a 30-second taped informational message, and 965-PARK for papal parking information.

To comply with University policy, no glass or plastic containers, coolers or ice chests will be allowed in the stadium.

No large banners, signs or recreational objects will be allowed in the stadium.

Worshippers can bring cameras, binoculars, personal umbrellas, seat cushions and sack lunches into the stadium.

Inside the stadium concession stands will be open before and after the Mass. Water will be distributed for free throughout the stadium.

Temperatures in the stadium are expected to be a few degrees above normal and people attending the Mass should wear lightweight, light-colored clothing and hats to help maintain normal body temperature.

Stadium entertainment will begin at 3:30 p.m. and continue until 5:30 p.m.

The general public will be able to park on campus in specified areas and the Dust Bowl, the lot east of the stadium. The parking fee is $5 for cars and $10 for buses and motorhomes. Vehicles fitting into one parking space will be considered cars.

Current ASU decal holders will be able to park on campus in the three parking garages without a fee.

Three additional parking lots are available to ticket holders only in the 56th and Washington streets area and include Phoenix Municipal Stadium, 5999 E. Van Buren; the former Legend City parking lot, 1655 N. 56th St. and the Chaparral Speedway, 5519 E. Washington.

There will be a $5 fee for people to ride the shuttle service, which begins at 1 p.m., to the stadium from these lots.

The MU will be open from 6:30 a.m. until 3 p.m. And Hayden Library will be open from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

KPHO-TV (Channel 5) will be televising the Monday Night Football game between 1987 Super Bowl champion New York Giants and former champion Chicago Bears that has been pre-empted by the papal Mass on KTVK-TV (Channel 3).

New coach, offense creates optimism in Tucson

PREVIEW

Today: Arizona (1986 9-3-0)

Editor's note: This is the eighth of a nine-part series previewing all of the football teams in the Pac-10 Conference.
By STEVE BRENNAN
State Press

New Arizona head football coach Dick Tomey has done the equivalent of jumping aboard a freight train by taking over former coach Larry Smith's job this year.

The Wildcats, who finished the 1986 season with a 9-3 record and an Aloha Bowl victory, lost very few key players to graduation, and have the tools to finish in much the same fashion this year.

Tomey will introduce an interesting new offensive approach to the Pac-10, one that he has been quite successful with at his previous place of employment, the University of Hawaii. Tomey accumulated a career record of 63-46-3 with the Rainbows.

The Wildcats' offensive attack will combine the wishbone, the power-I formation, the option, play-action and the run-and-shoot.

"The thing that's especially exciting (about the offense) in this conference is we're the only ones doing anything remotely like this," Tomey said. "We know we still have to do the work, it isn't magic.

"But it's going to be good for us. We have the opportunity to be explosive," he said.

A primary reason for Tomey's optimism about this offensive approach is the addition of former Southern Methodist quarterback Bobby Watters, who joined the team after the Mustangs disbanded their football program last year. Watters passed for over 2,000 yards for SMU last season.

"Bobby appears to have the intangibles we are looking for plus he has the experience and background doing the kinds of things we want to do in our offense," Tomey said.

Watters will be backed up by sophomore Craig Bergman. Tomey said he is especially pleased with the running backs, and this facet of the offense will be the Wildcats' strength.

"Running back is one of the strengths of the team," he said. "We have flexibility. With Art Greathouse, Charles Webb, David Eldridge and newcomer Alonzo Washington we could make our running game outstanding."

At wide receiver, the Wildcats are both talented and deep. Both of their top receivers return: flanker Derek Hill, who caught 32 passes for 523 yards last season, and Jeff Fairholm, who added 24 catches for 382 yards.

"We have a corps of excellent receivers," Tomey said. "Hill and Fairholm are proven Pac-10 talents."

Backing up Hill and Fairholm will be sophomore Melvin Smith and junior Branch McNeal.

"McNeal made great progress this spring and Smith shows great potential," Tomey said.

These new additions in the offensive backfield will replace the loss of Arizona's second-leading career passer Alfred Jenkins, 1,000-yard rusher David Adams and second-leading career receiver Jon Horton.

The Wildcats return three starters from the 1986 offensive line: All-Pac-10 and All-American center Joe Tofflemire (6-3, 255), tackle Jeff Rinehart (6-2, 327) and guard Tom Lynch (6-5, 254). Also benefitting the line will be another SMU transfer, guard Kevin McKinney.

But Arizona was forced to patch up holes in the offensive line, the area hardest hit by graduation. Defensive lineman Rob Woods moved over to fill out the depth chart.

"The offensive line was a real patchwork operation," he said. "We moved some guys over there and coach Ron McBride did a nice job bringing the guys together."

The tight end position will be filled by fifth-year senior Vince Lotti and sophomore Jim Hanawalt.

"Vince Lotti did a good job in the spring, and Hanawalt was one of the most improved players on the team this spring," Tomey said.

Defensively, the Wildcats return six starters from a squad that led the Pac-10 and was fourth in the nation in rushing defense (84.4 yards per game).

Anchoring the defense will be All-Pac-10 safety Chuck Cecil, who had six interceptions last year including a 106-yard interception return for a touchdown against ASU.

But the Cats will be hurting at all three linebacker positions, and the task of replacing Pac-10 Defensive Player of the Year Byron Evans was not an easy one for Tomey.

The only returnee will be Boomer Gibson, who had 77 tackles last season and is expected to guide an inexperienced linebacking corps.

Sophomore twins Kevin and Chris Singleton will fill out the outside positions, while Blake Custer and Jerry Beasley will play both inside positions.

Arizona returns two starters to the defensive line, as junior nose guard Dana Wells (6-1, 252) and senior tackle George Hinkle will anchor the front. Two sophomores, Reggie Gaddis and Toby Watts, will switch off at the other tackle position.

Kicking for the Wildcats will not be a problem, as sophomore Gary Costen returns to add extra points and field goals to the offensive attack. Costen led the Pac-10 last season in scoring with 97 points.

Trivial pursuits signal beginning of college football season

Ah, the real college football season is finally upon us; a time of couching, eating and drinking — not necessarily in that order.

College football also seems to bring out the Jeopardy lover in all of us. Polls and rankings are almost as eagerly awaited as the games themselves.

So here are some trivial tidbits to think about when you're glued to the tube Saturday:

•BEST COLLEGIATE GAME OF THE WEEKEND: Third-ranked UCLA ventures to Lincoln, Neb. to tackle second-ranked Nebraska. The game is actually just a tuneup for the Huskers, who will take a week off to prepare for their Sept. 26 visit to Tempe.

•BEST NETWORK GAME OF THE WEEKEND: Notre Dame at Michigan. Need I say more? UCLA and Nebraska will be televised on ESPN.

This season's cover is loaded with Rose Bowl memorabilia and includes a picture of the ASU crowd at the game.

•WORST HEADLINE IN A PRESS RELEASE: U of A. As the Wildcats prepare for their season-opener Saturday night against Hayden Fry's Iowa Hawkeyes, the Arizona press release boasted a headline of "Waiter, there's a Fry in my soup."

Dave Hodges
Asst. Sports Editor

•WORST DISPLAY OF SCHOOL SPIRIT IN A SUPPORTING ROLE: Larry Smith. The USC coach, after losing 27-13 to Michigan State, said, "If we continue to make the mistakes we did tonight, we'll go 0-11 this season."

I'll buy that for a dollar.

•JUST WHO HAS THE TOUGHEST SCHEDULE THIS YEAR?: USA Today's computer rankings list Notre Dame's schedule as toughest in the nation, but six of the eight worst schedules belong to Pac-10 teams: Oregon (2), Oregon State (4), Washington State (5), UCLA (6), USC (7) and California (8).

•BEST PREP GAME OF THE WEEKEND: Moon Valley at McClintock. If you really can't wait until next week to go to a football game, you might be in for a treat.

The top-ranked Moon Valley Rockets, last year's state runner-up, make the long drive from North Phoenix to Tempe to lock horns with the second-ranked McClintock Chargers.

Their game begins at 7:30 tonight at McClintock High School, McClintock Drive and Alameda Drive. A standing-room-only crowd is expected at Charger Stadium.

•MOST IMPROVEMENT IN A PAC-10 TEAM: California. The Golden Bears are picked to finish eighth in both the Pac-10 Skywriters poll and the State Press poll. They finished ninth last year.

The team won't be much different, but they get two thumbs up because the team has done away with the black, clunky shoes in favor of "new, shiny white shoes." At least they'll look better when they lose.

The Bears also have a new coach after Joe Kapp was fired. That's good. The Pac-10 really doesn't need a coach who exposes his genitals to the media.

•WHAT'S IN A POLL?: The Pac-10 Skywriters (a group of journalists that travel to each Pac-10 school and write previews) have chosen UCLA to win the Pac-10.

The Skywriters have correctly picked the Pac-10 champion 11 times in 26 previous polls. The last time they correctly chose the winner was 1979. ASU was picked to finish fifth last season.

In preseason polls, ASU has been ranked everywhere from fifth in the country and first in the Pac-10 by The Sporting News, to 18th nationally and fourth in the Pac-10 by Game Plan.

•WHY I AM PICKING ASU TO WIN THE PAC-10 AND BEAT U OF A: ASU will win the Pac-10, although the team does not have the most talent in the conference.

The Sun Devils have the easiest schedule in the Pac-10, including misses of Stanford and USC — teams that can beat any opponent when they feel like it. ASU has the luxury of playing both UCLA and U of A in the friendly confines of Sun Devil Stadium.

The Devils are headed for a 9-2 season and another trip to the Rose Bowl. The only blemishes on the record will be losses to Nebraska (they're just too good, 31-28) and at Washington (they'll finally beat us, 30-24).

UCLA plays one more conference game than the Devils and will finish with a better Pac-10 record, but since ASU will beat the Bruins, the Sun Devils will earn the roses.

As for why ASU will beat U of A, the Mildcats (sic) have always structured their team specifically to beat ASU — and nobody else. The people in the beautiful city of Tucson now realize U of A is the only team eligible that has not been to the Rose Bowl — now the team will beat everyone except ASU.

•HERE IT IS, THE STATE PRESS PAC-10 FOOTBALL POLL: Results are based on total points at 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1. First place votes are in parentheses.

1. Arizona State (3)	48 points
2. UCLA (2)	46

Bids to open soon for ICA expansion

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

The six-story, 100,000 square-foot expansion of Sun Devil Stadium will open for bidding Sept. 15, with the awarding being Nov. 1, ASU officials announced Thursday.

Construction on the $8 million Intercollegiate Athletics Building will begin immediately following the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 5, 1988.

The building proposal was submitted to the Arizona Board of Regents in December 1985. The planning and details got underway in the spring of 1986.

"This will make the south end of the stadium look complete," assistant athletic director Tom Collins said.

The addition will create 1,700 more seats to the south end zone while making room for the athletic program.

Collins said ticket priority would be to the Sun Angel Foundation, Varsity A Association and Sun Devil Club for their contributions. If any tickets are left over, the general public would be next in line.

The basement of the building will house the athletic locker rooms. On the first floor, a new access to the stadium will be built, allowing a quicker entrance for football games.

The ticket office will also be located on the first floor. A rehabilitation center and training facility will be on the second floor, while the third floor will house the Olympic sports offices.

The administrative offices are scheduled to be on the fourth floor, along with the offices for basketball, baseball and track. The top floor will include the academic services and football offices.

The completion date has been set for Oct. 15, 1988. According to Athletic Director Charles Harris, the basement, first floor and loge level should be completed by August 15, 1988.

"We are looking forward to breaking ground," Collins said. The ICA will keep two quadrants of the Activity Center, while the remaining space will be distributed according to need.

Collins said the long-awaited structure is in the final stages of preparation, and will create one of the best facilities in the nation.

"People will look at it from the street and take a lot of pride in it," Collins said.

Oklahoma to face 'Cats on 1988, 1989 schedules

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — The University of Oklahoma football team will play the University of Arizona in 1988 and 1989, replacing games with Southern Methodist University, officials said.

Oklahoma Athletic Director Donnie Duncan said Wednesday he has recommended the change to university President Frank Horton, who planned to recommend it to the university regents at a meeting today in Norman.

Arizona, a member of the Pacific-10 Conference, had a 9-3 record last year, including a victory over Rose Bowl champion Arizona State, and beat North Carolina in the Aloha Bowl.

SMU was forced to give up football this year because of NCAA sanctions, and the university decided to drop its football program in 1988 as well.

Duncan said he did not think the Mustangs could have a representative team in 1989 either.

"Arizona is a quality team. They've beat Arizona State five years in a row. That's going to give us a very demanding schedule, especially in 1988," he said.
