By SCOTT LUCK
State Press

After five weeks of everyday student use, a West Hall classroom overhanging the "Hayden Pit" was closed last week over concern about the floor's safety.

Jim Knothe, an associate director of Planning and Construction, said Room 169, on the northeast corner of the building, was not closed until Friday because the department was waiting for a preliminary safety report.

Kurt Small, of Robin E. Park Associates, the structural engineer for the Hayden Library expansion, said he recommended further investigation of the floor's anchoring in the report he submitted to ASU construction officials on Thursday.

Knothe said the report was inconclusive, and classes will not be held in the room while the planning and construction department further investigates.

Expansion project manager Tim Keneipp said the stress of a normal class should not be hazardous to the floor but said the classroom was closed "just to play it safe."

"The building itself is sound," Keneipp said of the 52-year-old structure. "It's just the floor we're a little concerned about."

He said there is no danger of the entire West Hall floor slipping, but construction officials are concerned a piece of the overhanging floor might collapse if subjected to heavy pressure.

"The idea of something happening with the floor collapsing would be a tragedy," Keneipp said.

Keneipp said construction officials do not have blueprints for West Hall so they have had to guess about the floor's anchoring.

"When dealing with unknowns, you take the safest route possible," he said.

Classes formerly held in the room have been reassigned to various campus locations. But classes still are being held in other West Hall rooms, including the one directly above Room 169.

However, Keneipp said, "There is no danger at present." He said the classes were moved as a special precaution until "we (construction personnel) know what we're dealing with."

Dean Jesse McClure, of the School of Social Work which is housed in West Hall, said he wants someone to "come in and check the whole building to see if it is safe."

McClure said Monday he would consult with ASU construction personnel later in the day.

Keneipp said construction officials believe the floor is "slab on grade," or anchored on dirt.

Michael Fifield, an ASU assistant professor of architecture, said: "A typical slab-on-grade floor is not normally considered to be a structural member of the building. Therefore, any removal of supporting soil below it could possibly jeopardize the integrity of the slab."

He said because the dirt serves as the floor's support, there

Tambs' Senate chances 'up to courts'

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — Lewis Tambs said Monday it is "up to the courts to decide" how his involvement in the Iran-Contra scandal will affect his possible candidacy for a U.S. Senate seat in 1988.

Tambs, who has talked of running for Dennis DeConcini's senate seat since leaving his post as U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica last December, was one of several prospective candidates to meet with Minnesota Sen. Rudy Boschwitz Monday morning at Republican Party headquarters in Phoenix. Boschwitz is chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee.

Now an ASU history professor, Tambs admitted to the Congressional committee investigating the scandal in May that he violated the Boland Amendment — a congressional ban on U.S. military aide to the contras — when he set up a "southern front" for the Nicaraguan rebels during his tenure as ambassador.

Tambs, who said he was acting on orders from Lt. Col. Oliver North, negotiated an agreement with Costa Rican officials sometime between 1985 and 1986 for construction of an air strip near the Nicaraguan-Costa Rican border. The airstrip was used as a refueling stop for aircraft carrying military equipment to the rebels.

His testimony was the first direct evidence of a State Department official aiding the rebels during the two-year ban on U.S. military aid to the contras.

Tambs said he answered questions from the grand jury investigating the scandal in either April or May from Tempe. A source close to special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh said it will be several months, maybe as late as January 1989, before the grand jury begins handing down indictments.

The first indictments in the case are expected to be issued in late October.

Burt Kruglick, chairman of the Arizona Republican party, said he did not think Tambs' involvement in the scandal would harm his potential Senate candidacy.

"I think the fact that he has some experience and insight into that area (Central America) is to his advantage," Kruglick said.

Boschwitz said after a press conference about the meeting of Senate candidates that he was not aware of Tambs' involvement in the scandal.

Tambs said if he decides to run for DeConcini's seat, it will take about $3 million to beat the two-term senator. DeConcini will kick off his 1988 campaign Nov. 8 with a fund-raiser at the western tourist attraction, Rawhide, 23023 N. Scottsdale Road.

Also meeting with Boschwitz were Arizona Attorney General Bob Corbin; Mac

Money a factor in student withdrawal

By AARYN KEMP
State Press

Work conflicts and financial problems are the two most common reasons 721 students have withdrawn from ASU in the first five weeks of the semester, Dean of Student Life Leon Shell said Monday.

After the 21st day of classes this year, the date from which the University's official enrollment count is taken, 721 students had withdrawn from the University, according to a report from the Student Affairs office.

Shell said students most often leave ASU for "reasons tied into financial problems" and for personal reasons.

ASU's total student population this fall is 42,968, compared with 41,540 in fall 1986.

Withdrawal statistics were compiled and itemized in 1986 for the first time in ASU history, said Leellen Brigman, coordinator of research for the vice president of Student Affairs.

"Withdrawal data has never been collected in the past," she said. "We are currently gathering statistics for 1987 to maintain and examine in the future."

By the last day of 1986 fall semester classes, 1,745 students, or 4.1 percent of those enrolled, had withdrawn from ASU, according to a report compiled by the Student Affairs Research and Evaluation Program and the Office of Student Life.

Seven percent of the graduate students and 3 percent of the undergraduates withdrew from the University during the 1986 fall semester.

Among the exiters, unclassified students had the highest withdrawal rate. Nine percent of the unclassified undergraduates, and 12 percent of the unclassified graduates had withdrawn.

Juniors had the highest withdrawal rate among the classified students (3.2 percent).

The Graduate College had the highest rate of withdrawal (18 percent), followed by the School of Social Work (6 percent), the College of Education (5 percent), and the College of Engineering and Applied Science (5 percent).

Students who decide to withdraw from the University are referred to the Office of Student Life by ASU faculty and staff. The students participate in an exit interview with a member of the REACH paraprofessional staff.

Mines block shipping channel; U.S. suspects Iranian retaliation

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Mines blocked a key shipping channel in the southern Persian Gulf on Monday, and sources said the U.S. Navy suspected Iran was retaliating to the Navy attack on an Iranian minelayer.

A Pentagon official said in Washington that the Navy might attack any vessel it determined to be carrying mines, even if it was not caught laying the explosives in international waters.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the rules of engagement had not changed, and a senior administration official said the rules did not include pre-emptive strikes.

But a Pentagon source said the rules already were fairly broad.

"The key is finding hard evidence, conclusive evidence, that mines are aboard the ship," he said. "If we have it pinned down that a ship is in international waters and carrying mines, then we might move in."

Firing squad executes former aide to Ayatollah Khomeini's successor

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The former right-hand man of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's chosen successor was executed by a firing squad at dawn on Monday in a Tehran prison.

Mehdi Hashemi, charged with treason, died a victim of the power struggle in Iran's divided hierarchy. His execution indicates that "pragmatist" leaders who want to end Iran's isolation have gained the upper hand.

Tehran Radio, monitored in Nicosia, reported in a terse announcement that Hashemi was shot at 6 a.m.

Until his arrest last October on the orders of Iran's powerful Parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, Hashemi was the chief lieutenant of Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, 55.

Montazeri is Rafsanjani's political rival. Khomeini, Iran's leader and revolutionary patriarch, chose Montazeri as his successor two years ago.

Hashemi's associates leaked word that Rafsanjani was dealing secretly with the United States to trade weapons for hostages held by Iranian-backed Shiite Moslem extremists in Lebanon. The disclosure acutely embarrassed Rafsanjani.

Colombian mudslide kills 175; up to 500 missing in buried shacks

MEDELLIN, Colombia (AP) — An avalanche of red mud and rock killed at least 175 people, including 43 children, when it thundered down a mountainside and onto a slum area, officials said Monday.

Some residents estimated up to 500 people were missing in the scores of buried shacks.

At least seven of the children killed were attending first Holy Communion parties when buried under the landslide Sunday in Villa Tina, an impoverished area of the industrial city of Medellin.

Exhausted workers dug through 20 feet of mud looking for survivors and bodies Monday. Slum dwellers wandered through the area searching for dead or missing relatives. Other residents tried to find belongings lost in the mudslide.

Mayor William Jaramillo Gomez told the radio chain Todelar that about 200 people were injured.

B-1B bomber crashes in Colorado; 3 crew members jump to safety

LA JUNTA, Colo. (AP) — A B-1B bomber with six people aboard crashed Monday in a ball of orange flame in the Colorado prairie after birds were sucked into the engines, but three crew members parachuted to safety, authorities said.

The fate of the other crew members was not immediately known; the Air Force said they were listed as missing. It was the first crash of a regular production model of the B-1B, the nation's newest long-range strategic bomber.

The survivors were reported in good condition with minor injuries at the U.S. Air Force Academy hospital in Colorado Springs.

The plane went down two miles south of La Junta at 9:34 a.m., said Capt. Dave Thurston of SAC command headquarters in Omaha, Neb.

ASASU discusses minority programs

New proposals drafted after 'Town Hall' meeting

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

In the wake of last week's Minority Town Hall, Associated Students of ASU is drafting proposals for new programs for minority students that could be implemented next fall.

The Town Hall meeting, held Thursday in the MU, was aimed at discovering the barriers that hinder minority students from joining campus clubs and activities.

"You have to have special programs that will ensure that minority students will succeed," said V.P. Franklin, an ASU history professor.

"I would hope the student government would look into this and put pressure on Academic Affairs to improve the quality of education by putting money into minority programs."

ASASU President Karrin Kunasek, Executive Vice President Will Daly, Campus Affairs Vice President Vince Micone and Activities Vice President John Fees will meet Thursday to review the results of the Town Hall and to compile a list of proposals for the ASASU Senate meeting next Tuesday.

Kunasek said "the easiest and most basic step to take" is a program that would require executive officers to attend minority club meetings. Kunasek said the move would increase interaction between students and the student government and would "make the minority students feel part of the process rather than a product of the process."

Faculty mentoring, another program that ASASU is considering, would involve a minority faculty member interacting with minority students on a continual basis.

Fees said other recommendations made by Franklin during the Town Hall, such as a minority lecture series, scholars' program and faculty recruitment, are "impractical to do at this point" because of budget cuts.

"Probably the most frustrating thing for me is that the University is so slow to change," Fees said.

Franklin said there currently are "zero" funds being given to minority affairs through the Office of Academic Affairs, and, consequently, "the academic (minority) issues are not addressed at all."

But Miguel Montiel, assistant vice president for Academic Affairs, said Monday that most minority programs are funded through the Office of Student Affairs, while others are supported by individual colleges.

"In the past, the Office of Academic Affairs has funded some minority efforts," he said. "There are a lot of minority programs in student affairs that are academic programs."

ASASU officials plan to sponsor future Town Halls aimed at a broader audience and more diverse issues.

Schroeder decides against Democratic nomination bid

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Saying she "could not figure out how to run," a teary-eyed Pat Schroeder announced Monday she will not be a contender for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination.

"I could not figure out how to run and not be separated from those I served," said Schroeder in a Denver press conference. "There must be a way, but I haven't figured it out yet."

"I could not bear to turn every human contact into a photo opportunity."

Schroeder, with her husband Jim at her side, broke into tears in the middle of her statement. She had spent nearly four months testing the political waters and had raised about $1 million — half of what she said she needed — to finance her bid for the White House.

Pam Solo, Schroeder's campaign manager who was reached at the congresswoman's Washington office, said Schroeder was contemplating running until Sunday afternoon. Campaign workers were not aware of the final decision until Monday morning.

"I think the decision was the right one," Solo said. "There wasn't the time to raise the kind of resources needed to put a serious campaign together."

"We were so encouraged by the enthusiasm and support, but the dollars weren't there, and we couldn't project them being there in the time constraints of the nominating process."

Solo said Schroeder, an eight-term congresswoman, will spend the next 13 months of the campaign season talking with other candidates and "bringing more people into the political process."

Pat Schroeder

She said college students will be among the groups to which Schroeder will be speaking in hopes of recruiting young voters into the Democratic party.

Schroeder also will give serious consideration to running in the 1992 election, Solo said, using some of the $1 million collected to prepare herself for that race.

Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who was campaigning in Iowa Monday, said Schroeder would have been a valuable opinion in candidates' debates on defense and foreign policy.

"I believe her decision not to run further confirms that the field of candidates is set," Babbitt said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Law and Order

Serenity of library masks reality of violence outside

Ed Schubert
Columnist

It was a calm Sunday afternoon in the State Press newsroom, just about a week ago.

I had stopped by on my way to the ASU law library, where I faced the intimidating task of researching, for the first time, a legal issue and writing legal briefs.

It was just about 3:30 p.m., and I was pouring through the immense, 155 volume Corpus Juris Secundum, when the relaxed newsroom I had just left erupted into furious activity. Over the police scanner, they heard an officer radio for help: A mentally ill patient he had been transporting had escaped at 40th Street and Van Buren. "He's got my gun . . . He has a hostage."

A 999 call went out over the police radio: OFFICER NEEDS HELP URGENTLY.

As the gunman turned south on the Hohokam Expressway and a chase ensued, I continued to pour over the Corpus.

The Corpus Juris Secundum is a summary and index to American law. As such, these tomes are just a terse introduction to the shelves and shelves of court decisions and other laws that crowd the three floors of the library.

But it is also extremely well organized. Before long, I'd found the references I was looking for in volume 16A. The next step was to follow the references to the text of the actual court decisions — not so easy.

Outside, a few miles away, Lt. John Bradshaw of the Tempe police force was in hot pursuit of the gunman — "I have the suspect at Hohokam and University."

Inside the law library, one is impressed with the law's amazing order. The rows and rows of legal tomes are interconnected by the most intricate, delicate and invisible spiderwebs of reference and cross-reference. But the delicacy and order of American law ends at the library door.

'Outside, a few miles away, Lt. John Bradshaw of the Tempe police force was in hot pursuit of the gunman.'

At Broadway and 48th Street, Bradshaw, hit in the chest by the gunman's bullet, lost control of his car. Lights flashing and siren wailing, it careened through a red light at the intersection and crashed into a tree.

Bradshaw was taken to Maricopa Medical Center, where we was pronounced dead at 4:20 p.m. — the only Tempe police officer ever to die in the line of duty.

The gunman was killed in a brief stand-off with police on the Seventh Avenue off-ramp of the Maricopa Freeway.

Returning to the State Press newsroom later in the afternoon, I heard for the first time of the tragedy that had been enacted so rapidly — no more than 25 minutes from start to finish.

The calm and order of the law library now seemed so deceptive. As much as legislation and court decisions, law is about police officers who are always a heartbeat away from death, day in and day out. Without these men and women, the ASU law library would soon be a meaningless anachronism in a lawless land, its books burned for warmth against the coming winter.

I recalled a scene from Robert Bolt's "A Man for All Seasons," in which Sir Thomas More confronts his son-in-law Roper, a protestant firebrand:

Roper — "So now you'd give the Devil benefit of law!"

More — "Yes. What would you do? Cut a great road through the law to get to the Devil?"

Roper — "I'd cut down every law in England to do that!"

More — "Oh? (Roused, More advances on Roper) And when the last law was down, and the Devil turned round on you — where would you hide, Roper, the laws all being flat? . . . Yes, I'd give the Devil benefit of law, for my own safety's sake."

The man who killed John Bradshaw was an elementary school teacher who reportedly was devoted to his students, and who would dress up as a clown to entertain elderly hospital patients. If such an individual could explode into madness and violence, then surely the Devil is with us as much today as he was in the time of Thomas More.

Let us therefore thank God not only for the law, but for men and women like Lt. John Bradshaw who make law possible.

Little Greek 'incidents. . .'

Editor:

Since attending ASU for the last two years of my college education, I cannot help but notice that the State Press does very little to help promote the positive activities that the Greek system does.

Why not give a little space to promote the Philanthropic events and groups that the Greek system has supported, or the many Greeks who are involved on campus? Instead you seem more interested in publicizing the few derogatory incidents involving Greeks.

I can only compare your paper to the National Enquirer. Why not try to help the Greek system? For they have helped you.

What if everyone in the Greek system stopped using your paper to convey their messages to the ASU campus? Considering how fast rumors spread through the Greek system. . .

Not a threat, just a thought.

. . . like killing 'helpless chickens'

Editor:

Members of the Greek system here at ASU (and elsewhere) often justify their organizations by saying that fraternities and sororities build "lasting friendships and leadership qualities."

If any Greek can explain how terrorizing helpless chickens with lawn shears ("Kappa Sigma charged with fowl play," Sept. 28 State Press) is a means to these noble goals, I'd love to hear it.

Was this an isolated incident of treachery and immaturity on the part of Kappa Sigs? Or does it reflect an underlying mentality among all Greeks?

Once again, fraternity men have shown themselves to be drunken elitists who believe themselves to be above even the most common sense system of morals.

They create the stereotypes of immaturity and childishness that are so prevalent among non-Greeks.

Editor:

This letter concerns the thunderstorms that devastated Arizona last Tuesday, Sept. 22. After an intense and thorough study of the Bible, we have determined the cause of the recent storms: God is punishing Arizona for the election of Evan Mecham as governor.

Indeed, did He not smite Egypt with plagues and pestilence, to liberate the Hebrew tribes from bondage?

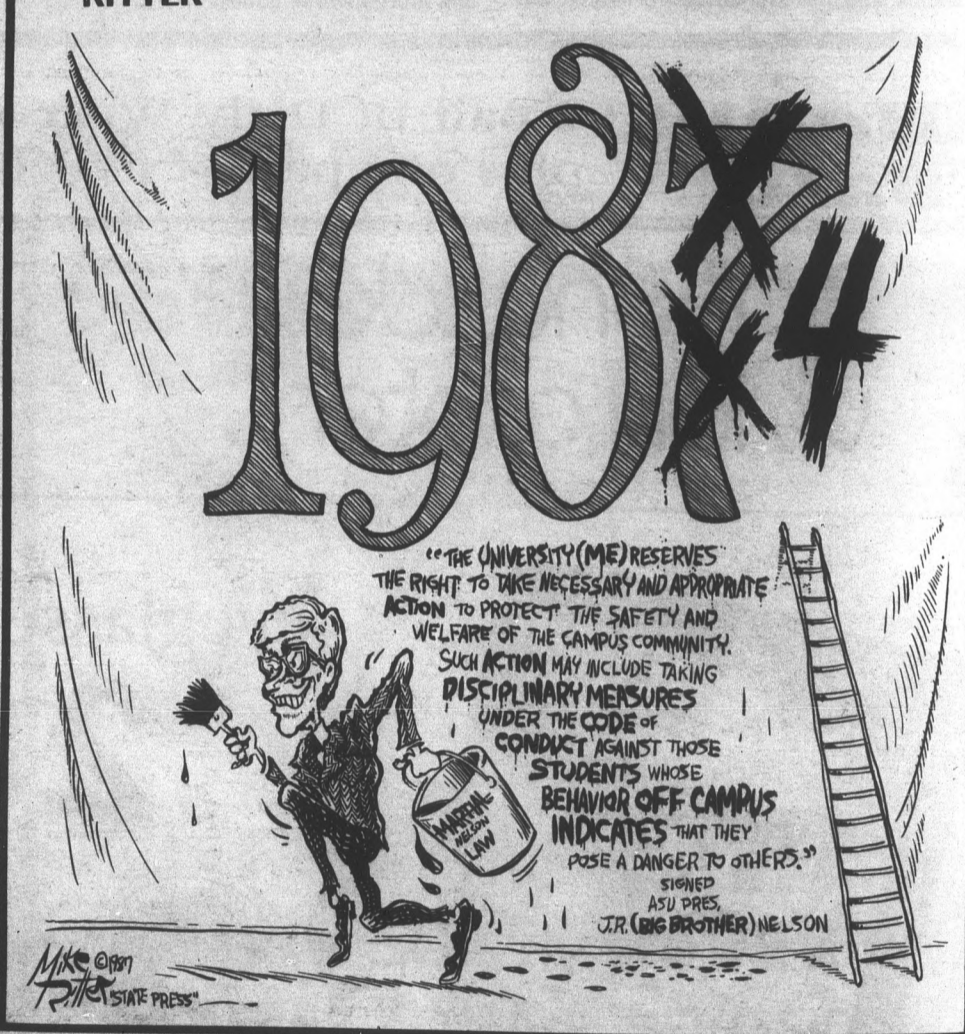

And does He not also chastise our state with lightning, floods and hail, to free the land from the oppressive, festering yoke of Mecham?

The wicked and apathetic citizens of Arizona must hear and obey the command of the Almighty. Until they recall and eject Mecham from office, our land will remain accursed, suffering piteously under the terrible wrath of the Lord. Amen.

ASU student raped after party

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

An 18-year-old ASU student was raped after a party early Saturday while she slept at a friend's University Towers apartment, police said.

Police arrested 19-year-old Stacy Lee Lind and charged him with sexual assault. He is being held at the Maricopa County Jail.

Lind, who is not a student according to the Registrar's Office, told police he resided at the University Towers student housing complex at 525 S. Forest Ave., but officials there showed no record of his residence.

Police said Lind allegedly entered the unlocked apartment around 1 a.m. and went into a back bedroom where the student was sleeping.

"He woke her up when he started assaulting her," said Lt. Steve Graehling, head of the Tempe police department's criminal investigations bureau. "She started screaming, and she chased him off."

He said the girl apparently did not know Lind.

In other incidents:
• Tempe police said they arrested a 28-year-old man who ran a stop sign and led police on a two-mile chase late Saturday because he was afraid his wife would find out about the woman driving with him.

The man told police he fled because his license had been suspended from a prior DWI.

police report

He said he was on his way to an apartment with a woman he had met at a bar and didn't want police to tell his wife, police said.

• A man claiming he was being followed by truckers who were going to shoot him was arrested at a convenience store early Sunday after police found he was carrying a .45-caliber pistol, police said.

The man was booked into Tempe City Jail and charged with misconduct involving weapons.

Clinical Psychology Center offers self-help groups

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Research conducted in the ASU psychology department is leading to self-help groups for those troubled by recent divorce, bulimia or the difficulties of child-rearing.

The Clinical Psychology Center has formed a divorce group to help members cope with the difficult transition period following a divorce or separation, said co-therapists Rusty Overby and Camille Garza.

"The group will help people in divorce make the transition from a married couple to a single adult," Overby said.

The group will be limited to about 10 people; it needs to be small so that members can "share divorce experiences," Overby said.

"The whole purpose of the group is learn from the experiences of other people," he added.

The group will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. once a week for 10 weeks, beginning Monday Oct. 5.

Fees for the group will be determined on a sliding schedule, based on gross monthly income and family size.

Interested persons should contact Rusty Overby at 965-7296.

A bulimia group will also be formed to help people experiencing frequent episodes of binge-eating, followed by depression and self-induced vomiting, said therapist Ana Cofresi, who is heading the group.

The program will help bulimics gain control of their eating habits as well as other aspects in their lives.

Interaction and education will be stressed, Cofresi said.

"It is a psycho-educational program based on research done at ASU," she said.

The group will be limited to 10 people and interviews will begin this week, Cofresi said.

The program will include seven weekly group sessions and two individual sessions, tentatively beginning Monday, Oct. 19.

Fees for the program will be based on a sliding schedule. Parenting skills workshops will also be held.

These programs will provide parents with basic behavior management skills, Cofresi said. Temper tantrums, noncompliance and aggressive behavior in the home or school will be topics for discussion.

"The workshops will provide very basic information on behavioral management skills for parents," Cofresi said.

The four-hour workshops are split into two sessions and will begin in late October.

A $40 registration fee will be collected.

Individuals interested in the bulimic or parent skills groups should contact Ana Cofresi at 965-7296.

must be an alternate means of floor reinforcement during excavation.

Four concrete support stanchions were built under the floor this semester for reinforcement.

ASU Fire Marshall Andy Anderson said he inspected the West Hall floor last week but could not make a judgment because he is not a structural engineer.

Madelyn Wright, the University scheduling coordinator, said: "For the current semester they are going to shore up (reinforce) that one end slightly, so we cleared the class. We want our students always to be safe."

Although the room officially was closed Friday, a School of Social Work class was seen in the room at 8:55 a.m. Monday.

McClure said the school does not hold class on Friday, so students did not know to stay out of the classroom. The class adjourned to its new meeting place in the Education Building by 9 a.m.

"Some are potential candidates in my mind, and some are potential candidates in their own minds," Boschwitz said of those gathered to discuss campaign strategies and financial resources needed to beat DeConcini.

Boschwitz, who would not reveal specifics of the meeting, said he has not settled on a candidate.

"I haven't come to any conclusions, and I don't think (the potential candidates) have either," he said. "It's a little early in the game."

Arizona is one of 18 states where Democratic senators will be up for election in 1988, Boschwitz said. He said Republican victories are needed in each of the states if the GOP wants to regain control of the Senate.

Women's rights expert to give on-campus lecture

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Dr. Bernice Sandler, author of over 50 articles on sex discrimination, will address "issues that try men's souls" today at a breakfast speech hosted by acting ASU President C. Roland Haden.

Sandler, the first person ever appointed to the staff of a Congressional committee to work specifically in the area of women's rights, will meet and have breakfast with Haden at 7:30 a.m., where she will deliver the address: "Women's Issues: Issues that Try Men's Souls."

Sandler, director of the Project on the Status and Education of Women of the Association of American Colleges, will meet with ASU students, faculty and administration today in a series of lectures and discussions.

After the breakfast, the activist against sex discrimination will conduct a lecture titled, "Friends Raping Friends: Relationships Between Men and Women" in a Student Affairs Staff Development session in the MU Pima Room.

At the Faculty Womens' Association and University Career Womens' Luncheon, Sandler will speak on "The Chilly Campus Climate: Why it Still Hurts to be a Woman in Labor?" in the MU Turquoise Room.

An open discussion to assess the climate for women at ASU will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Alumni Lounge.

Sandler will again speak about "date rape" at a seminar for student leaders at 7 p.m. in the Palo Verde Main Residence Hall Cafeteria.

Sandler filed formal charges of sex discrimination against more than 250 universities and colleges when she headed the Action Committee for Federal Contract Compliance of the Women's Equity Action League.

Sandler was also the first person to testify specifically concerning discrimination against women in education.

Sandler was the first chairperson of the National Advisory Council on Women's Education Programs from 1975 to 1977, and served as a member of this presidentiallyappointed council until 1982.

The lecturer, named one of Washington's 100 most powerful women by The Washingtonian magazine in 1982, has six honorary doctorates, and was the first recipient of the Athena Award given by the Intercollegiate Association of Women's Studies.

The project, headed by Sandler, is the oldest national higher education project concerned with achieving equity for women students, faculty and administrators. It published the first nationally distributed papers on sexual harassment in academe and on the "chilly classroom climate" for women.

Watergate plumber G. Gordon Liddy to speak today at MU

By AARYN KEMP
State Press

Former FBI agent, spy, convict, lawyer and White House aide G. Gordon Liddy will speak of how he became "a winner time after time against overwhelming odds" at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday in the MU.

Described as "extremely persuasive in moving others to action," Liddy will recount tales of his will to survive in a presentation noted for its ability to inspire.

Liddy, highly criticized for his role in the Watergate scandal, appears frequently on international radio and television talk shows. He has published two best-sellers and has been the subject of two motion pictures.

Liddy was sentenced to 21 years in prison for his role in the Watergate affair because he refused to implicate anyone else who was involved. He served nearly five years, including 106 days in solitary confinement and maximum security in nine prisons.

President Jimmy Carter freed Liddy from prison "in the interest of justice."

Born in New York City in 1930, he attended private schools where his IQ was measured at 137 to 142 — the genius range. Liddy was educated by Benedictine monks and Jesuits.

He is a Law Review graduate and has a doctorate in law from Fordham University. Liddy entered the FBI after serving as an army artillery officer in the Korean War.

At age 29, he became one of the youngest supervisors at the FBI national headquarters. He first came to the public's attention when he led two raids on the headquarters of Dr. Timothy Leary, leader of the 1960s psychedelic movement and LSD proselytizer.

Narrowly losing the 1968 Republican congressional primary in New York's 28th district, Liddy took command of the Nixon presidential campaign in that area. In the first Nixon administration he was first appointed Special Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, then Enforcement Legislative Counsel and finally Staff Assistant to the President of the United States.

He was assigned to the secret Special Investigation Unit. Liddy left this post to become General Counsel to the Committee to Re-elect the President.

Today, Liddy owns an industrial security company and a home on the Potomac River. He resides the majority of time in Paradise Valley with his wife and five children.

Withdrawal

interview is designed to support retention efforts of the University by providing personal attention to any student leaving during a semester.

"The staff created the program so that students would feel comfortable talking about withdrawing," said REACH president Shannon Duncan. "Through the interviews, we can see if there is a way for the student to stay in school. There have been situations where we've found ways for students to stay enrolled."

In the first step of the one-on-one interview, the REACH staff reviews why the student is withdrawing from ASU.

The exiting student is then provided with information about campus resources that may enable them to continue enrollment.

The second part of the three-part interview is designed to assist exiters in properly withdrawing with a "clean slate." It also alerts students to potential refunds from the University.

At the student's request, the REACH staff will refer their name and address to the Admissions Office to receive information about returning to ASU for a subsequent semester.

During the fall semester, one-third of the undergraduate exiters and 2 percent of the graduate exiters were referred to the REACH staff for exit interviews. Among undergraduate exiters, one in every two freshmen and sophomores were interviewed. One in three juniors and one in four seniors were interviewed.

Exit interviews during the 1986 fall semester were conducted with almost one-half of the exiters from the School of Social Work and more than one out of three exiters from the College of Architecture and Environmental Design.

In contrast, fewer interviews were conducted with exiters from the Graduate College (3 percent) and the College of Engineering (11 percent).

Relief

Outlook good for injured Devils

By JOAN MCKENNA
State Press

The post-surgery verdict on volleyball player Mindy Gowell's knee is good. But the Sun Devils will be without her for tonight's Flagstaff match against Northern Arizona and probably for the next two weeks.

Head coach Debbie Brown went with Gowell Friday for her surgery and said Gowell tore her anterior cruciate ligament.

Brown said this is an injury that heals without surgical correction. But she said Gowell still is at the mercy of her doctor and trainer.

"She is anxious to get back. But she has limited range of motion right now," she said. "She also has decreased strength and won't be released to play until she has adequate strength."

"That decision is made by her doctor and trainers. And the trainers are working with her every day."

ASU's other injured hitter, Christy Nore, will start against the Lumberjacks, and Brown said she is glad to have her back.

"I feel good with Christy's progress, especially after she's had a weekend off," she said. "I think she'll be able to play with less difficulty."

Brown was referring to Nore's visible fatigue in the fifth game of ASU's match with UA last Wednesday.

"I would say I'm hoping she is 90 percent, but I'm not sure," Brown said.

The Sun Devils substituted a team meeting for Thursday's practice and reassessed their current goals. The Wildcat loss left the Sun Devils with a 4-4 record overall, 1-2 in the Pac-10.

Brown said they emerged with a more positive attitude. "The feeling I got was that maybe we're even more determined to improve each day and particularly each match."

Brown's pre-season goal had been to be 6-2 at this point, but she said injuries have left them a little behind.

The Sun Devils face an equally gimpy team in NAU. Starting middle blocker Abbey Bayona has been out for a week due to a death in the family. She had to fly to Puerto Rico.

Star hitter Kira Strehlow has a possible stress fracture in her ankle and could be out for a while. This leaves head coach Steve Hellmann with just nine active players.

"After losing Kira, we lack offensive power," Hellmann said. "We've been playing pretty tough defensively and that's what is keeping us in matches. But it's hard to win on pure defense."

Hellmann said he would guess ASU is the toughest team NAU will play all year. The Lumberjacks are in the Mountain West Conference and are 5-6 and 0-2 on the year.

"Realistically our chances of winning are slim," he said. "I just want my team to compete hard against them."

The first year coach said he is trying to instill a competitive attitude at the school, the first stage in his plans to rebuild. He said the second stage is recruiting.

"Eventually we would like to compete for a top 20 position. But we're a couple of years away from that," he said.

The 18th-ranked Sun Devils will be trying to break their two-game losing streak, both losses being to Pac-10 teams. Their next opponent is conference rival UCLA, last season's champions, Friday, Oct. 2.

Nore enters NAU's match with team highs of 81 kills and 66 digs. Setter Regina Stahl has accumulated 309 assists and ties Tracey Barberie for most aces with 15. Dawn Meidinger has 30 blocks, 5 of them solo.

Brown said she is looking forward to playing a non-conference match. "It's good to play solid teams, but teams that are not in the top 20," she said. "We play enough of those."

ASU volleyball player Debbie Lynch spikes the ball during practice. The Sun Devils will face the NAU Lumberjacks tonight in Flagstaff.

Joseph out for season, seeks medical redshirt

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

For ASU defensive back Jeff Joseph, the 1987 football season is over.

The senior from Los Angeles suffered an injury to his right knee during the sixth play of Saturday's 35-28 loss to Nebraska.

Joseph underwent arthroscopic surgery Monday to see the damage done to his right medial collateral ligament. If it needs to be repaired, surgery will be performed.

ASU will petition for a medical redshirt in order for Joseph to be eligible to play next season if he desires. Joseph has not been redshirted during his career, which makes him able to apply for the medical waiver.

To petition for the medical redshirt, the school must submit a letter to the NCAA explaining the injury and the player's eligibility status. The NCAA then reviews the letter and makes a decision.

"Jeff was in on a nickel (five defensive backs) situation," said Don Bocci, associate director of football operations. "There was a body on the ground, (Nebraska quarterback Steve) Taylor was scrambling and someone hit him from behind. Taylor then went into Jeff and his leg was pinned."

"He will have surgery and if the ligament is totally torn it could take three to four months to rehabilitate the knee," assistant trainer Bruce Kalish said.

Head athletic trainer Troy Young said Joseph was not wearing a knee brace. The only ASU players required to wear the braces are down linemen, linebackers, tight ends and quarterbacks.

Joseph entered his senior year after starting six games in 1986 for Anthony Parker. He was fourth in the nation in punt returning with a 14.1-yard average.

This season he was slated as the second-team cornerback at both the right and left sides.

Freshman Nathan LaDuke, a Phoenix Alhambra High School product, came in to play for Joseph for the remainder of the game. The youngster recorded three unassisted tackles and hauled down his first collegiate interception. Before the game, the Sun Devil staff was contemplating whether or not to redshirt LaDuke.

Floyd Fields, also a freshman, is expected to replace Joseph at cornerback with LaDuke taking over the nickel back position. Fields has tallied three stops in the two games he has seen action in this season.

The Sun Devils will play at home this weekend against undefeated Texas-El Paso (3-0).

Game counts as loss, but football squad wins recognition

ASU tailback Darryl Harris, No. 12, sets a block from guard Randall McDaniel, No. 62, during Saturday's 35-28 loss to Nebraska.

Night football may be synonymous with ASU football, but the stars were shining during Saturday afternoon's 35-28 loss to No. 2 Nebraska.

The game will show up just as an "L" in the standings and will probably lower the Sun Devils in the national polls (although I think they should actually move up to No. 11), but the game really doesn't mean much toward the run for the roses. The loss will actually help the Sun Devils.

How often do you see a loss that the fans enjoyed? Well, not too often here in this desert city. Coach John Cooper has an uncanny habit of not losing lately.

It's almost as if Valley football fans were beginning to forget what it was like to lose. The Devils only lost one game last year — to a school in another desert city about 100 miles southeast of here.

But Saturday's loss was actually a victory. But it won't show up as one until

New Year's Day. If there was ever a case of one of those infamous "moral victories," the game against those Cornhuskers has to rank right up at the top.

Sure, the Devils weren't perfect. They missed tackles, made some crucial mistakes at inopportune times and gave up the big play.

But the game will help the Devils, knowing that they did play well over their heads and almost, maybe even should have, beat the second-ranked team in the country.

ASU received some much-needed national television coverage, too. When high school seniors are deciding where to go to school when it's 10 degrees out, they'll remember VOLLEYBALL — The women's volleyball team will attempt to snap a two-game losing streak as they travel to the Flagstaff to play the Northern Arizona Lumberjacks at 7:30 p.m. today.

MEN'S GOLF — The men's golf team plays its season-opener today and Wednesday as the team travels to Baton Rouge, La., to participate in the LSU Intercollegiate Tournament.

Golf team learns teamwork during Japanese tournament

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

The ASU women's golf team found more than quality competition during its trip to Tanagura, Japan last week — they found team unity.

"The trip brought us all together — We spent a lot of time together, away from golf," added Pearl Sinn, who finished third. "It was more of a cultural experience. We knew we could win, there was no pressure."

Amy Fruhwirth lead ASU women's golf to a victory in the U.S.-Japan Intercollegiate Friendship golf tournament at Shirakawa, Japan last Wednesday. In her first collegiate victory, Fruhwirth set a course record on the first day with a 2-under 71 round.

"I played really well and happened to win," Fruhwirth said modestly. "I shot a 78 in the middle round which is not too good, but otherwise I had a flawless game."

"I am pleased that Amy won individually," Coach Linda Vollstedt said. "It was a motivational trip. The team is excited and confident about this season."

"We have a good team — We're always in contention," Pam Wright agreed. "We all feel we can win Nationals."

With Sinn and Wright, ASU has a young, spirited team with experience. Sinn hopes to win her first collegiate tournament and become an All-America, and Wright, who was 11th in the nation last season is trying to improve on that mark.

Fruhwirth said the victory gave her confidence.

"It's nice to know that I can play at their level," Fruhwirth said. "Pam and Pearl are such experienced golfers."

Sinn said: "It is very important that the third, fourth and fifth golfers do well."

"When we all get it together, we do well," Wright added.

Of the nine players on the team, five will compete on Oct. 16-17-18, in Tulsa, Okla., at the Tulsa Invitational.

Vollstedt said players who finished in the top 10 at the previous tournament (Roadrunner Invitational) are exempt from qualifying for the traveling squad, but the others will have to compete in practice.

A combined field of eight women's and eight men's teams will compete in Tulsa, which is a new format, Vollstedt said. The top eight ranked teams from last year were invited to play.

Vollstedt gave the girls the week off for studies, but said they would probably practice on their own. Sinn added that playing in Japan and New Mexico, the week before, was difficult. "It's been hard to catch up on sleep, schoolwork, and golf," she said.

Baseball's top 2 teams battle for A. L. East crown

DETROIT (AP) — Baseball fans hooked on the drama provided by Detroit and Toronto last weekend can only hope for another injection of excitement this week.

There was no better baseball on God's green and carpeted earth than what the Tigers and Blue Jays provided in four crucial games in Toronto as they vie for the American League East title.

When they were over, the Blue Jays had won three of them and held a 2½-game lead over Detroit.

The competition was so good that:

- All four games were decided by one run.
- In the last three games, the losing team was three outs away from winning.
- The team that scored first lost each game.
- Manny Lee, the replacement for injured All-Star shortstop Tony Fernandez, made vital contributions for Toronto in all four games.
- MVP candidates George Bell and Alan Trammell had hits in every game. Each drove in two runs in the series.

Still, the Tigers needed 13 innings Sunday to salvage a 3-2 victory, keeping their hopes alive.

"It's the most pressure-packed game I've been in, from start to finish," said Detroit slugger Kirk Gibson, who hit a home run and singled home the winning run. "Emotions were up and down. I feel very relieved it's over. I feel like I've been standing for four days."

Gibson would like to get that feeling again.

The Blue Jays play three games with Milwaukee and the Tigers play four games with Baltimore before the season-ending three-game series between the Tigers and Blue Jays in Tiger Stadium.

For the weekend in the Motor City to be meaningful, certain things must happen during the week:

- If Toronto sweeps Milwaukee, the Tigers must win three of four from Baltimore.
- If Toronto wins two of three from Milwaukee, the Tigers must win at least two of four from Baltimore.
- If Toronto wins one from Milwaukee, the Tigers must win at least one from Baltimore.

• If Toronto gets swept by Milwaukee, the Tigers will still be alive Friday, even if they get swept by Baltimore.

"Milwaukee's a very good ballclub," Toronto Manager Jimmy Williams said. "We sure don't want to get caught looking past the Brewers."

The Blue Jays and Tigers have the best records in baseball and their four games in Toronto showed that they are, indeed, as evenly matched as two such divergent clubs can be.

One major difference did emerge, however. That is: the Blue Jays have a vastly superior bullpen.

True, ace reliever Tom Henke gave up a key home run to Gibson on Sunday. But he struck Gibson out on the same pitch Thursday earning his 34th save.

But at least Toronto has an ace. Detroit has none. Willie Hernandez, who gave the Tigers their winning edge in 1984, is struggling.

If the two teams are tied after 162 games, the AL East will be decided by a one-game playoff Monday in Detroit.

Twins appear healthy heading into final week of season

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Heading into the final week of the season, the American League West-leading Minnesota Twins were in good health both physically and mentally.

Knuckleballer Joe Niekro, who missed his start Sunday because of a hip injury, was scheduled to start Monday's game at Texas against the Rangers.

Leading home run hitter Kent Hrbek, who missed much of the last two weeks with an abdominal injury and a virus, officially proclaimed himself fit Sunday with a tape-measure homer, his 34th of the season.

Manager Tom Kelly has kept fatigue to a minimum, as only Kirby Puckett, Gary Gaetti and Tom Brunansky will have played more than 150 games by season's end.

Mentally, the Twins are also on top of their game.

They went 7-2 on their final homestand to finish their home season with a 56-25 record at the Metrodome, the best home showing in the majors.

They went on the road Monday comfortable in the knowledge that they needed only one victory in their last six games — or one Kansas City loss during that span — to clinch their first AL West title since 1970.

"The Rangers swept us last time we went down there (June 26-28) . . . but that was a long time ago," Al Newman said. "When they came in here on this homestand, we swept them and that's got to get us a little respect from them."

Asked about his possible pitching rotation for the AL Championship Series, Kelly only said: "I'm worried about winning a ballgame in Texas. After that, I'll worry about other things."

Tuesday night, Kelly will start ace Frank Viola, 17-9. Viola, with a 69-48 record since 1984, is the winningest left-hander in the majors over the last four seasons. He'll be shooting for his third 18-victory season.

Viola's 2.89 ERA ranks second in the AL and his 192 strikeouts also put him among the league leaders. He is enjoying a better season than he had in 1984, when he was 18-12 with a 3.21 ERA and was chosen baseball's top left-hander by The Associated Press.

"I'm not thinking about the Cy Young," Viola said. "I'm sure that at the end of the season, I'll look at my record and say, 'Hey, that was a pretty good year.'"

Rookie Les Straker is the scheduled starter for Wednesday's game.

A 27-year-old right-hander from Venezuela, Straker spent 10 years in the minors until making the Twins in spring training. He has gone on to become the Twins' No. 3 starter, with an 8-9 record and 4.43 ERA.

"Les has done a great job for us," Viola said. "Nobody really gives him credit because they don't know who he is, but everyone on this club knows who he is and how valuable he has been."

After an off day Thursday, the Twins conclude their season with a three-game series at Kansas City.

the sun-drenched crowd and good-looking students.

That's another factor that made the game so special. The crowd was unbelievable. 71,264 maniacs, the fourth largest crowd to witness a game in Sun Devil Stadium, weathered apparent temperatures in the 100s and made noise — lots of it.

The student section stood the entire game without being yelled at by the Sun Devil Club and the gold was flowing. The pompons helped a lot. They look very intimidating to the opposing team, get the crowd going and look sweet on TV. It's probably one of the best promotions the athletic department has done in recent years. Too bad every game can't be a "go gold" game.

Overall, the game will help the image of ASU. Two reporters from the Daily Nebraskan, the student newspaper in Lincoln, said they "couldn't believe ASU was ranked 12th." They suggested ASU should be fourth or fifth.

And remember, when the Huskers crushed UCLA, the Bruins were ranked third. They said ASU is much better than UCLA.

Although Tennessee and ASU could move up in the polls to 10 and 11 because of No. 10 Arkansas' 51-7 loss to Miami, the Devils will probably move down in the rankings — very few teams move up with a loss.

But for now, rankings are moot.

It's still too early to really see who the best teams are. Michigan State began the season by thrashing USC and have slowly faded since. And any time the 10th-ranked team loses 51-7, you know something's wrong.

The game against Nebraska only meant two things: recognition and money. ASU put on a good enough show to gain some status, and the paycheck from the network is enough to make any school smile.

The real season starts Oct. 10 when the Devils play at Washington in a very big game. If the Devils can win, and they should, they will be on the inside track for a return trip to Pasadena in January.

The Devils have the easiest schedule in the Pac-10. After the game with the Huskies, the only other tough teams the Devils play are UCLA and Arizona (only as a rival because they're not a good team anymore) — both in Sun Devil Stadium.

Look for the Devils to get through the season with a 6-1, maybe even 7-0 Pac-10 record. Only UCLA and Washington will challenge. They meet Nov. 14 at the Rose Bowl.

Speaking of the Rose Bowl, the Devils will be there New Year's Day. Will you?

Todd Green/StatePress

ASU tennis player Paola Conte serves during the Kachina Open Sunday. Conte lost to teammate Barbara Thompson, 6-3, 6-3.

Team forms 'bond' at tourney

By CHARLIE DIAZ
State Press

Although members of ASU's women's tennis team competed in the Kachina Open as individuals, they may have left the four-day tournament as a team.

Despite rough doubles play, ASU coach Sheila McInerney said the Sun Devils developed a bond, one it will need later in the season.

ASU must replace five seniors from last season's 15-12 squad.

"It's only September, but the key to our season is how much our kids improve," McInerney said. "I think we're in pretty good shape."

"I also think they're going to help each other improve. We need to improve a lot but I think it's a good start. And with this group, they all want to get better."

Third-seeded Barbara Thompson of ASU beat second-seeded Paola Conte, also of ASU, 6-3, 6-3, in the finals of last week's United States Tennis Association-sanctioned event at the Western Reserve Club in Tempe.

Thompson upset top-seeded ASU teammate Lisa Haldas, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2, to advance to the finals. Haldas had defeated sixth-seeded Kristi Jonkoski of ASU, 6-4, 7-6, in the quarterfinals.

Fifth-seeded Jennifer Rojohn of ASU lost in the round of 16 to Laura Rutledge, 6-4, 6-1, and Sun Devil Jill Hamilton lost in the first round to fourth-seeded Randi Rosen, 6-4, 3-6, 6-1.

McInerney said the tournament went mostly as she expected, with the ASU players doing well in singles, but not as well as hoped in doubles. McInerney said the team has concentrated most of its early training on singles and conditioning.

The more inexperienced players have not been exposed to college doubles. Junior tennis, McInerney said, does not place the emphasis on doubles that the college game does.

"We really need to work on our doubles," she said. "But we've only been playing together for a couple of weeks."

"In a month if we don't improve, then I'll worry."

Conte and Haldas advanced to the doubles semifinals, losing to Kristen McKeem and Randi Rosen, 6-2, 6-3.

The team of Hamilton and Thompson lost to Kim Florez and Nicole Storto, 7-6, 6-2, in the quarterfinals. Rojohn and Jankoski also lost in the quarterfinals, 7-5, 6-1, to former ASU players Carol Coparanis and Kristi McCormick.

McInerney said the match experience and camaraderie developed over the course of the tournament was important. ASU trained hard prior to the match, lifting weights and running.
