Tempe City Council favors construction of housing complex

By TRACY SCOTT
State Press

The Tempe City Council has approved the development of an apartment complex that could house students at Mill Avenue and Broadway Road, despite opposition from neighbors, President J. Russell Nelson and an ASU professor.

The council voted 6-1 Thursday, with councilman Pat Hatton dissenting, to allow John Bebbling to build a 75-unit apartment complex at 2424 S. Mill Ave. on an unused lot owned by the Church of Christ. The project also was approved by the city's staff, Planning and Zoning Commission and Design Review Board.

But residents of the relative neighborhood say they fear the increased traffic and density the complex will bring to the primarily family-dominated area.

Hatton said she voted against the complex because she did not want to set a precedent for other developers to construct projects in the area.

Bob Ellis, associate vice president of University Relations, said: "The traffic congestion on Mill and College is now frightful. Another apartment complex is going to add to that problem, especially one that has a fairly high density."

But Grady Gammage Jr., Bebbling's zoning attorney and the son of former ASU President Grady Gammage, said the developer hired a consulting firm to determine if the apartment would increase traffic on Mill Avenue.

"The project will have no discernable impact on traffic on Mill Avenue which carries about 3,400 cars a day," Gammage said.

Gammage's comment was booed by the audience that jammed the council chambers to show their opposition to the complex.

"These units will generate 400 to 500 trips a day on Mill Avenue. This is a drop in the bucket," Gammage insisted.

Nelson and his wife, Bonita, live in the neighborhood near the complex and oppose the project because the apartments would add "more traffic for already a heavily used area," according to a letter signed by Mrs. Nelson and submitted to the council. The Nelsons did not attend the meeting.

Nelson refused to comment on the council's approval of the complex and said he and his wife submitted the letter as private residents.

Gammage said any project, whether it be offices, retail or multi-family homes, developed on the land would increase traffic.

"If you allow something to be developed on this piece of property, it will add to the traffic," he said. "And you can't not allow anything to be developed on this piece of property."

Bebbling began proceedings with the church more than a year ago to build apartments on the land.

Gammage said, "The church had recently determined that they no longer needed the amount of property they had for the growth rate of their congregation."

The vote originally was scheduled for Nov. 12 but had to be pushed back one week because Councilman Bill Ream could not attend the earlier meeting. Because of heavy opposition, the project needed six positive council votes to pass.

Official says ASU may house full-service post office

By TERRI SEABERT
State Press

Instead of the kiosk which occasionally spits out stamps, ASU may be the future home to a shiny, full-service U.S. post office next year, according to a University official.

"Right now all we have is the stamp machine on campus, and many times that machine is broken or out of supplies," said Joseph Barnett, director of ASU Mail Services. "That thing is an eyesore."

Barnett said he has been working on getting a full-service post office on campus for the past year. The office would be housed in the basement of the MU.

"The proposed space must be inspected and approved by the U.S. Postal Service and would cost ASU an estimated $30,000," he said. "I have to hire the people to man it, (find) the space, and pay rent on that space."

ASU has never had a post office on campus because the Student Bookstore, at College Street and University Drive, originally housed a post office that is no longer in operation.

According to Barnett, an ASU post office would take in more than $500,000 annually.

"You figure we have over 43,000 students here. Even if each student only bought one stamp, that's still a lot of money," he said.

Gil Martinez, Tempe postmaster, said he has not received a plan for a University office, but "certainly is willing to listen to any proposals submitted by ASU."

"ASU's campus is really kind of closed to the public, and this has to be a public place," Martinez said. "When I say closed, I'm talking about the parking situation — where will people . . . park?"

"It has to be accessible to the public, but we are open for any kind of discussion."

A post office on campus certainly would alleviate crowded Tempe offices, he added.

Martinez said the U.S. Postal Service would pay for most of the start-up costs of a campus office if a proposal was submitted and approved by the agency's "procurement division." If an ASU bid is approved, construction would take about five to six months.

Students would not be the only people who would benefit from an "in-house" post office.

Agents: Air travel unaffected by crashes

By DANA LEONARD
State Press

Low air fares appear to be overruling some homeward-bound travelers' fears of flying, but others would rather stick to ground transportation to get home for the holidays.

Local travel agents said the number of airline holiday reservations they have booked is normal or slightly above normal this year and that the recent rash of plane crashes has not had much effect on airline reservations.

But a Greyhound Bus Lines representative said its holiday ticket sales are on the rise and that it may be because of people's hesitancy to fly.

"I would say that a lot of people are afraid to fly because of the crashes," said Rich Maas, operations manager at the Tempe Greyhound station, 502 S. College Ave. "A lot of people have mentioned that lately, with the Detroit and Denver crashes, they're a little wary of flying."

The Aug. 16 crash of Phoenix-bound Northwest Airlines

Flight 255 killed 156 people as it left Detroit Metropolitan Airport, while the Nov. 15 crash of Continental Airlines Flight 1713 killed 28 people in Denver on takeoff to Boise, Idaho.

"After a crash, people may avoid that airline for a while," said Marie Zuber, manager of Diversified Travel at 64 E. Broadway Road in Tempe. "But then when something else happens, they'll forget the first incident and go back to the first airline."

Another agent said airplane crashes have had some effect on how people travel but stressed the ratio of air crashes to those on the ground is lopsided.

"It's really funny to think of how many people die on the freeway every day, but people don't think of that when there's an airplane crash," said Donya Hise, assistant manager of Sun Devil Travel at 1045 E. Lemon St. in Tempe. "I don't have the statistics, but on the day of the Northwest crash, freeway deaths were two to three times more (than

Cuban prisoners take hostages, demand to not be deported

OAKDALE, La. (AP) — Cuban prisoners who rioted after they found out they might be sent back to Cuba held more than 20 hostages in a smoldering federal detention center Sunday and demanded that they not be deported, authorities said.

The center was surrounded by hundreds of law officers after the riot left 23 people injured Saturday night.

"They're still asking the same thing — they don't want to go back to Cuba and they'd like not to be prosecuted for what they're doing," said Luenette Johnson, a spokeswoman for the center run by the Bureau of Prisons and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Meanwhile, 17 Cuban inmates in Laredo, Texas, escaped from a medium-security detention facility early Sunday by climbing through a steel roof grating. Authorities recaptured all but three of the escapees within hours.

The Cubans seized 28 guards and staff members but released a few who complained of medical problems, said J.R. Johnson, warden of the complex built in 1985 as a minimum-security holding center for illegal aliens. Johnson did not say how many people were released.

Shultz says United States, Soviets agree on missile site inspectors

SHANNON, Ireland (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Sunday the United States and the Soviet Union had agreed to station inspectors at each other's missile sites for 10 years after banned weapons are scrapped.

Heading for Geneva to try to wrap up a missile treaty, Shultz said only "some operational details" remained to be worked out.

"The treaty is virtually complete," Shultz said. "All of the main things have been agreed to."

The treaty to ban U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear missiles is the designated centerpiece for President Reagan's summit beginning Dec. 7 with General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Faced with that deadline, Shultz scheduled meetings Monday and Tuesday in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

Talking to reporters aboard his U.S. Air Force jet before a refueling stop in Shannon, Shultz said he planned to seek Soviet support for an arms embargo against Iran and a timetable for withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

Man stabs 6 Texas churchgoers before being subdued, wounded

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A man attending a Roman Catholic Mass suddenly walked down the aisle brandishing a knife and stabbed at least six other worshippers before being wounded with his own knife when he was being subdued, police said.

No one was killed, but the assailant and six victims were taken to hospitals and several other people received less serious cuts and scrapes as the man made his way down the aisle, said Fort Worth Police Department detective Mike Garvin.

"He (the assailant) is in pretty bad condition himself," Garvin said.

John Peter Smith Hospital administrator Valerie Bingham said a 37-year-old man underwent surgery and was in critical condition, but she would not say whether he was a victim or the alleged assailant.

The incident took place at about 11 a.m. at St. Patrick's cathedral in downtown Fort Worth, Garvin said.

Shuttle hampered by delays, may miss June 2 launch date

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Manufacturing delays and testing problems have slowed delivery of hardware for space shuttle Discovery, and some engineers say NASA could miss its scheduled June 2 launch date by several months.

The biggest bottlenecks could be the delivery of the primary propulsion units — the three large main liquid-fuel engines and the segments of the solid fuel booster rockets.

"Given those current delivery dates are met, and given that we do our job the way we expect to do it, the June (2) launch is still makeable," said Bob Sieck, shuttle launch director at the Kennedy Space Center.

The booster rocket segments, which originally were due from the Morton Thiokol plant in Utah in December, are to reach here a month late, and four weeks has been allotted to assemble them. The main engines have fallen behind in testing at a site near Bay St. Louis, Miss., and they are not expected here until late December and early January, a couple of weeks late.

A faulty joint in one of Challenger's two boosters allowed flame to escape and triggered its destruction and the loss of its seven crew members 73 seconds after launch on Jan. 28, 1986.

Poll shows 60 percent think Mecham should resign

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Nearly 60 percent of adults in Maricopa County think Gov. Evan Mecham should resign, according to a poll released by a Phoenix-based research firm.

Furthermore, three of every four "yuppie" voters and 53 percent of those who bill themselves as "conservative," think the embattled governor should step down, the Behavior Research Center reported.

But Kurt Davis, executive director of the Arizona Republican Party said he did not think the poll is accurate.

"A pollster can make a poll say anything they want to," Davis said. "I don't like polls that aren't statewide. I don't think they reflect the voting population."

The poll, a telephone survey of 608 adult heads of households throughout Maricopa County, was conducted between Nov. 3 and Nov. 9.

During that week, the governor went on television to explain a secret $350,000 campaign loan from a Tempe developer; Arizona Rep. John Kolbe, a Republican, called for the governor's investigation; and Carolyn Warner, the Democrat who lost to Mecham in the general election, announced that she would be a candidate if a recall election was called.

The week also marked the year anniversary of Mecham's election.

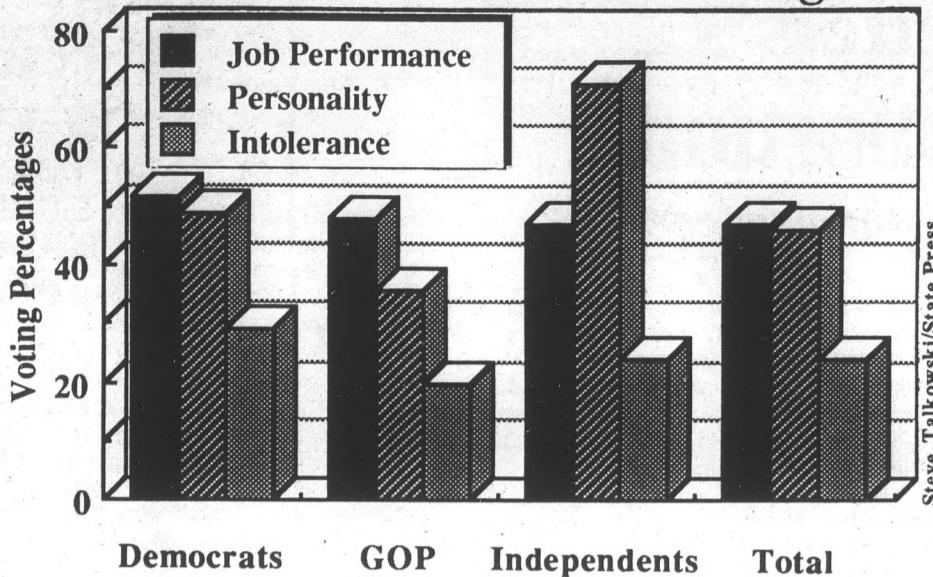

The poll is the first opinion survey to record specific criticisms of the governor. According to a report released by the center, 47 percent of the voters said they were most dissatisfied with Mecham's job performance. Another 46 percent said they also were angered by Mecham's "personal traits," saying he has not been truthful and is "conceited" and a "know-it-all."

Mariel Antonino, a Mecham press aide, said the governor had no comment on the poll.

Mecham's strongest support continues to stem from retired voters.

The poll has a 4.1 percent margin of error.

From TV land . . .

Gov. Evan Mecham, appearing nationally on ABC's Nightline with Ted Koppel Friday, tried to stress his accomplishments and avoided discussing what Koppel termed "embarrassments" that have made the governor a national figure.

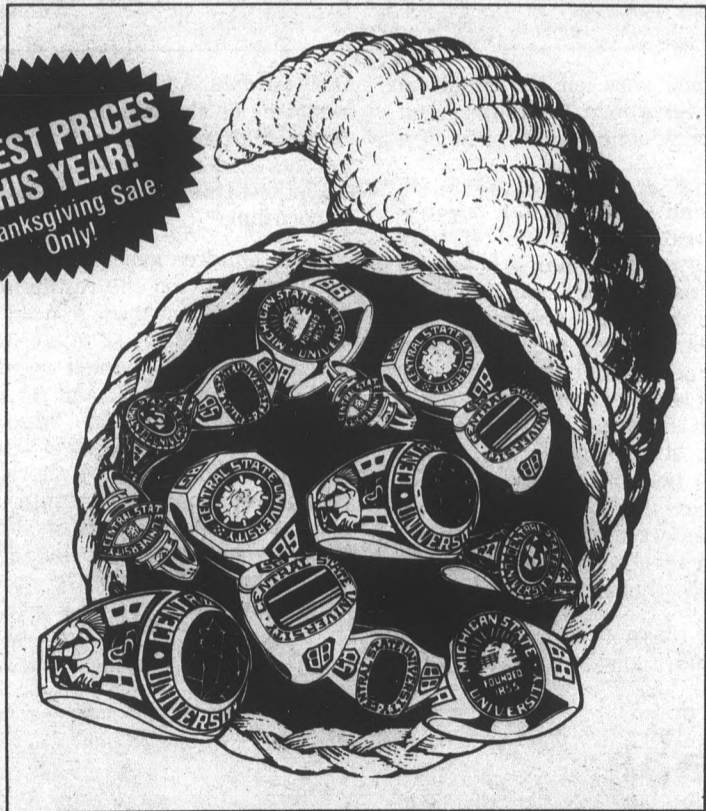

Koppel repeatedly asked Mecham if he has "a problem with gays in government," but the governor dodged making a direct response to the question, insisting that the interview center around the "positive things" in his administration.

Mecham told Koppel The Arizona Republic and The Phoenix Gazette are "determined to kick a governor out of office" and are trying to "run government" by distorting his comments and actions.

Abortion

Congratulations

Editor:

I would like to thank and congratulate Darrin Hostetler for his outstanding editorial, "Dead Wrong," and Mike Ritter for the accompanying cartoon (Nov. 19).

I wish that all those who support the despicable act of abortion and the tragic Roe v. Wade decision (especially Ms. Sarah Weddington) could read this article and see abortion for what it really is: murder.

Mr. Hostetler very eloquently displayed the flawed logic behind the pro-choice movement, and, in doing so, pointed out the fundamental problem in American society today: the never-ending search for the "quick fix." Americans, who like their Big Macs ready in 30 seconds and their throats cured before the commercial ends, cannot help but be enthralled by the concept of being able to quickly terminate that nagging nuisance of a fetus. What better way to cover up a mistake?

The pro-choice movement serves the purpose of sanitizing abortion and making it guiltless. Granted, I am not a feminist, but it seems to me that the biological difference between men and women gives each certain responsibilities, and no amount of lobbying in Congress (no, not even the esteemed Ms. Weddington) can change this. Come to think of it, God must be a man to oppress women with this curse of child-bearing.

As for the issue of rape, I can only answer this with a cliché — two wrongs don't make a right. "He raped me so I'm going to kill the kid and forget about it." Is this justice? How about deformed children? What gives us the right to judge these children as less human than ourselves? Sure, one might say that they will live less of a life than normal children, but should they not at least be given this chance? If someone loses a limb in a car accident, do we put him out of his misery because he will lead less of a life than before? I guess the real answer is that it is inconvenient for a couple to raise such a child, and far be it from us to place the life of a child before convenience. Just waste the brat.

I hope that America and the rest of the world will come to its senses and stop these brutal murders before the loss to humanity is too great, if it is not already. With democracy like this, who needs dictatorship and death camps? Meanwhile, we can only mourn the millions of doctors, lawyers and world leaders killed in these gruesome operations.

Murder label

Editor:

This letter is in response to Mr. Hostetler's "opinion" expressed in his article "Dead Wrong" (Nov. 19). Mr. Hostetler, what experience do you have to formulate your opinion? Have you ever been associated with anyone who has faced the traumatic decision of abortion over childbirth? I have. This is an extremely difficult decision for anyone to have to make and you labeling the option of abortion as "murder" and those who choose this option as "murderers" is at the very least insensitive and cruel.

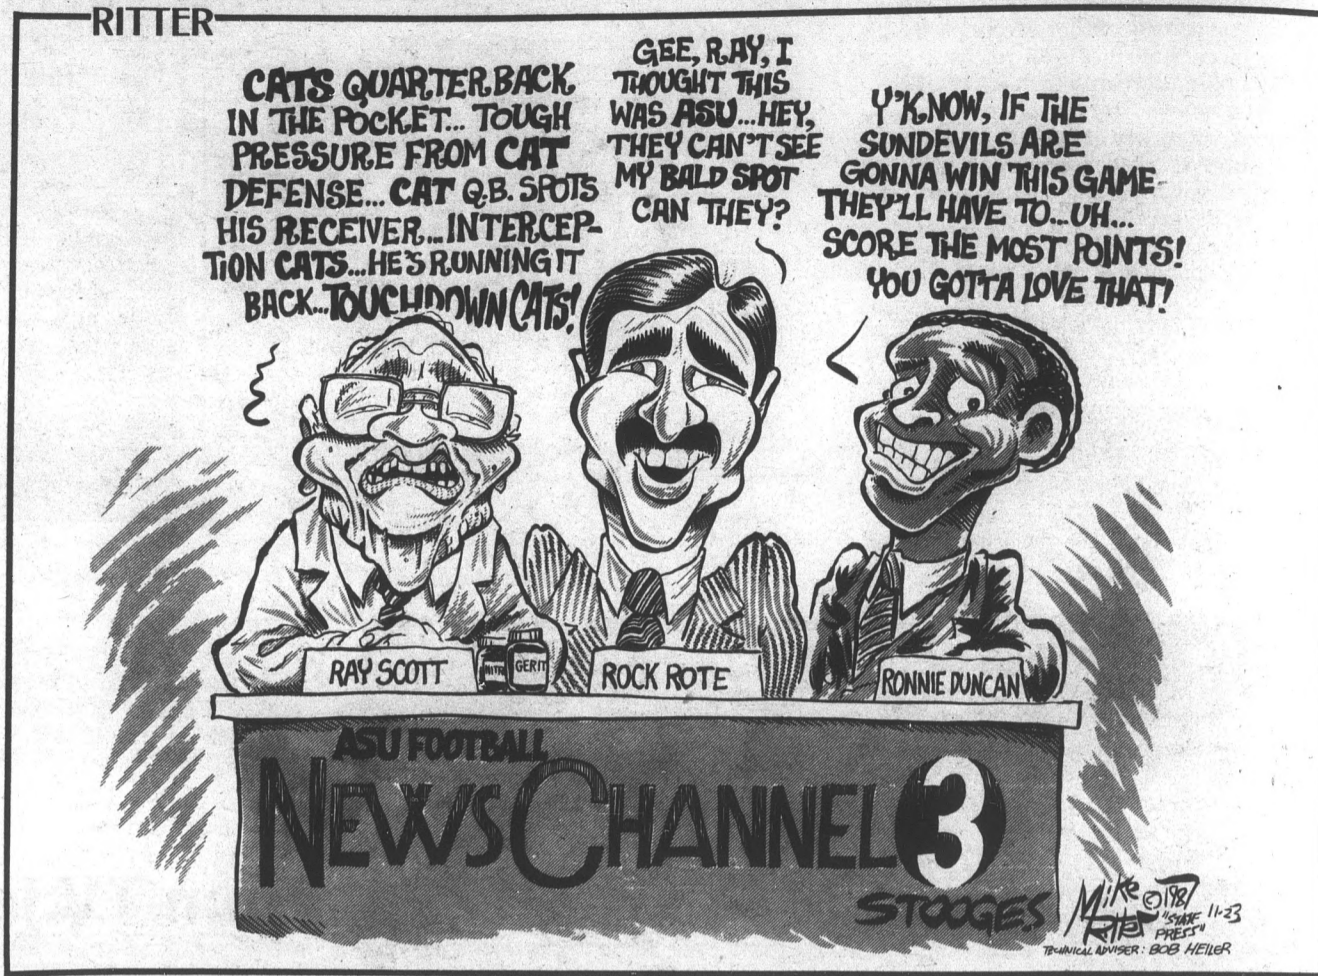

You stated in your article that "It can be effectively argued that life begins from the moment of conception . . . It is at this point that all information for the development of a unique autonomous human being is compiled." Would you then also call an acorn an oak tree, a tadpole a frog, or a caterpillar a butterfly?

You also stated that "In far too many cases, abortions are performed on women who are using the technique as a form of birth control." Unfortunately this is true, but I fail to see why these women should be labeled as murderers. Granted, it is an extreme measure of birth control, but would you rather these women gave birth to these unwanted children? We all know what happens to unwanted children in this society. Many are abused, both physically and mentally.

I am the result of an unplanned pregnancy. I am not, nor have ever been, an unwanted child. My parents chose to have me — this was their decision to make and no one else's — just as abortion is. My mother's pregnancy came at a very difficult time in my parent's lives. Finances were virtually nonexistent.

The Bob and Darrin show

Editor:

Bob Heiler's attempt to trivialize Sarah Weddington's visit, lecture and comments (Nov. 20) is an immature effort at sensationalism and aping right-to-lifers' argument strategy of deflecting the topic under discussion by shifting the focus from philosophical, moral and legal arguments that contradict their own points of view or about which they are ignorant. They then lay guilt on women for claiming right to choose whether or not to become mothers.

How would Bob Heiler or other State Press right-to-life advocates stop abortions? The American experience has shown that declaring an action illegal does not stop its occurrence. Would these people be ready to adopt children whose mothers cannot or do not want to raise them?

Chronological immaturity does not necessarily disqualify one from the right to comment on such issues. However, philosophical immaturity and journalistic sloppiness such as that exhibited in Darrin Hostetler's editorial (Nov. 19) do.

The right to a satisfactory life and the right to realize one's potentials are protected by the U.S. Constitution. Would these right-to-life advocates be ready to provide children already born with the means for achieving a satisfactory life?

Dissatisfied parents pass on their negativity in words and deeds to their children. Has the State Press examined how much child abuse can be credited to parents who might not have wanted those children and take out their frustrations in violent acts against the children? How much thought have State Press newsmen given the issues involved in pregnancy, abortion and childraising?

Michaela Safadi
Women's Studies

This pregnancy was not the result of carelessness or ignorance. It was the result of a faulty prophylactic which failed at a crucial moment.

My siblings and I grew up in a poverty-stricken neighborhood which was dominated by prostitutes, pimps, hoodlums and drugs. Financial problems and the expenses of an unplanned pregnancy kept my parents from moving the family to a better environment. Mom and Dad made the best out of a bad situation and did a magnificent job of raising us. However, not everyone is as strong or devoted as my parents are. My point is this, Mr. Hostetler — being raised in this type of an environment has given me the opportunity to be personally involved with children who have also been born into this dire situation.

However, the majority of these children were much less fortunate as to the virtues of their parents. A child has no way to choose whom he or she will be raised by. Should these children be the ones to pay for their parents inadequacies or should abortion be an option to the parents for the benefit of the unborn child?

These children generally know that they are unwanted and the results are usually disastrous. I am open minded enough to see both sides of the situation. Why not let the individuals concerned decide what is best for themselves and their family, without being labeled as "murderers" by outsiders who have no idea of what they are going through. I respect your right to have your own opinion, but in the future why don't you try to omit the insensitive labels. After all, everyone is entitled to their own opinion. Even those you choose to label as "murderers."

Creeping along with child molesters and the courts

Mike Royko
Tribune Media
Services

As we all know, this country has a severe shortage of prison space. We have millions of hotel and motel rooms, as well as empty condos and office buildings. But we don't have enough cells to hold all of our head-crackers, throat-cutters and fiends.

This means that dangerous criminals are released early or not sent to jail at all because there's no place to stash them. And that means the hostile characters are back on the streets, ready to do what they did before and looking for somebody to do it to.

So judges must struggle with the problem of trying to protect society and punish criminals when there isn't really any way they can do it.

Recently, an Oregon judge came up with an imaginative solution to this problem.

Judge Dorothy Baker had a real creep on her hands — a guy with a long history of sexually molesting children.

The creep, Richard Bateman, had been convicted of sodomizing a little girl almost 10 years ago and did a stretch in prison.

Before that, he had been arrested in another assault, but the child was too traumatized to testify, so the case was dropped.

When he recently came before Judge Baker, it was for having assaulted two children, a boy and a girl, both 5 years old, during the same week. He pleaded no contest, which meant the judge could send him to prison for several years.

But she knew that if she did that, he'd be out in almost no time because the prisons didn't have room for him. There would be other creeps standing in line for his cell space.

She also considered the fact that he had flatly refused to take part in a program that tries to rehabilitate grown men who like to have sex with children.

So she sent him to jail for a short time and gave him five years of probation.

But she tacked on a special provision in the sentence.

She said that while he was on probation, he would have to have a sign posted on his front door that said: "Dangerous sex offender. No children allowed."

And he would have to have the same sign on the doors of any car he drove.

What she wanted to do was let the community know that their kids shouldn't go trick-or-treating at Bateman's door. Or accept a ride from him after school.

As she said at the time: "I had thought about labeling these people in some way, that it's too bad people don't know who they are. You can't dye them green. The signs made sense to me."

That makes sense to me, too. If a compulsive child molester moved into my neighborhood, I'd like to know about it.

A few days ago, Bateman began his period of probation. But there are no signs posted.

That's because Bateman is indignant. A sensitive soul, he doesn't see why he should be singled out for public humiliation. His lawyer is indignant and has appealed the punishment to the higher courts, which are going to ponder it for awhile.

And, of course, the American Civil Liberties Union is indignant and has jumped into this case.

In general, I like the ACLU. I even have an award on a shelf at home that the ACLU once gave me for something or other. But every so often, the ACLU sounds kind of nutsy.

And this is one of those times. The ACLU said that requiring Bateman the creep to have signs on his doors violated the International Treaty on Human Rights, which forbids sentences that are degrading, stigmatizing and vindictive and violate fundamental principles of human dignity.

I don't see what's so degrading or vindictive about asking a career child-molester to post a sign on his door warning kids to stay away from him. We're executing people at a rapid rate in this country. If you want to talk about vindictiveness, sending a few thousand volts of electricity through somebody's body — that's really vindictive.

Or if you want to talk about doing something that is degrading, I can't think of anything worse than forcing your sexual attentions on tiny children, as Bateman did.

I would ask the ACLU officials — would you rather have Bateman panting into your ear or have a sign tacked to his door? What would they consider to be the greater indignity?

In fact, I kind of like the idea the judge had to reject — dying creeps like Bateman green.

If we must let them roam the streets, we might consider color-coding them. Let's say green for child-molesters, bright red for rapists, purple for muggers and armed robbers and so on.

But this would never be permitted by the higher courts. We no longer believe in an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth. Today the rule is a fingernail clipping for an eye, a small tuft of hair for a tooth.

And you can bet that when the appeals court in Oregon rules, it will decide that it is cruel and unusual to subject Bateman the creep to the indignity of having a sign on his door saying that he is a creep.

Teaching assistants, research emphasis 'cheating' students, writer for Time says

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

Ezra Bowen, a senior education writer for Time magazine, told students Friday that they are being cheated by professors who rely on teaching assistants or who emphasize research over teaching.

"If I went to a school and TAs were teaching me, I'd transfer," he said, suggesting professors cripple the educational process when teaching assistants do most of their work.

"I wouldn't put up with it; I think you're being cheated." Bowen, speaking to a handful of students in Armstrong Hall about university professors' ethics, also said research among professors could hinder effective teaching.

"I think there has to become a better balance between research and teaching," he said. "I think too much of it becomes too narrow and too obtrusive in the disciplines."

But Bowen, who writes Time's Education and Ethics section, said students can improve their own ability to learn by "demanding" more of their teachers and by learning how to read and write more effectively.

Recalling his experience as a teacher at Yale University, he said, "I had some of the theoretically best students with some of the best SAT scores that you can imagine, and half of them couldn't write a decent sentence."

Turning to national issues, Bowen said President Reagan should be held accountable for the Iran/Contra scandal because of what he called a lack of "ethical leadership."

He suggested a censure of Reagan to show him that people do not condone his "failure of acknowledgment."

"I think if I were a powerful senator in Washington, I would talk seriously about a possibility of resolution of censure," he said. "I think a small delegation should go to the president and tell him, 'Sir, you really screwed up. I think you ought to leave.'"

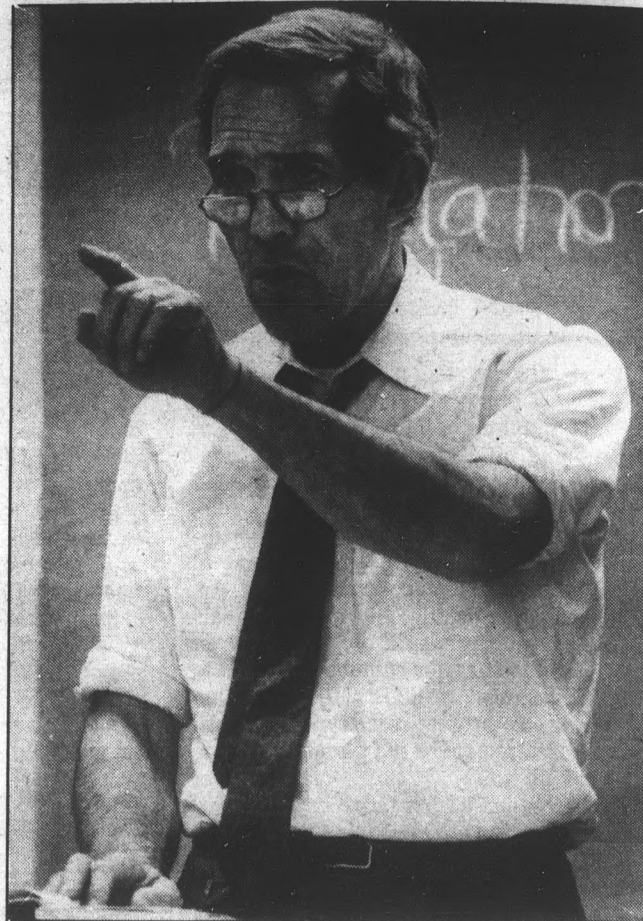

But he added that "the Republic will survive" the few months before Reagan's term ends.

Bowen, who often speaks about political issues on radio and television programs such as "Our World," said the Reagan Administration is ignoring the laws of the U.S. Constitution.

"When they apply themselves to the (Constitution), they try to manipulate it, misconstrue it and mislead people," he said.

"They are very clever. How many people are going to take the time to look at the Constitution?"

Bowen has written six books with topics ranging from economics to World War I fighter pilots. He is an assistant managing editor and senior editor with Time/Life Books and created the Time/Life series "The Old West" and "This Fabulous Century."

Education program working to prepare 'energetic' teachers

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Students applying for spots in the ASU College of Education's post-baccalaureate program have said in writing that they want to become the "energetic and committed" teachers of the future, a college official said.

Formal applications must be filled out by each applicant with an attached essay, said Betty Greathouse, director of curriculum and instruction in the college.

She said the post-baccalaureate program is for students who are returning to college after a stint in the job market or after raising a family, and who now want a graduate degree in elementary, secondary or special education.

There are more than 747 students in the program this fall. Currently, the college has received and begun to evaluate 57 applications for the spring semester.

"We have found by looking over the applications that these people tend to be more mature and have had experience at a job," Greathouse said.

In the applications, students said they want to become teachers because they are interested in working with young children and because they are challenged by the subject matter, Greathouse said.

Some applicants said the work schedule, complete with summer breaks, fits their lifestyles. Others said a career as a teacher would be rewarding, she said, adding that the majority of applicants have undergraduate degrees in business, history and sociology.

To be accepted into the post-baccalaureate program, Greathouse said applicants must have a cumulative 2.5 GPA and must take the college's Pre-Professional Skills Test.

The program was set up at ASU three years ago.

Acute intoxication determined as cause of Tempe man's death

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A 39-year-old Tempe man found dead last week with his legs caught in a drainage grating died of acute alcohol intoxication, a medical examiner's spokesman said Friday.

Dennis J. Coen, whose last known address was in the 3500 block of South Cutler Drive, was found by construction workers near Hardy Drive and Guadalupe Road.

Police said Coen, who reportedly had a chronic drinking problem, had apparently tried to retrieve a full bottle of beer when his legs got stuck in the grating.

In other incidents:

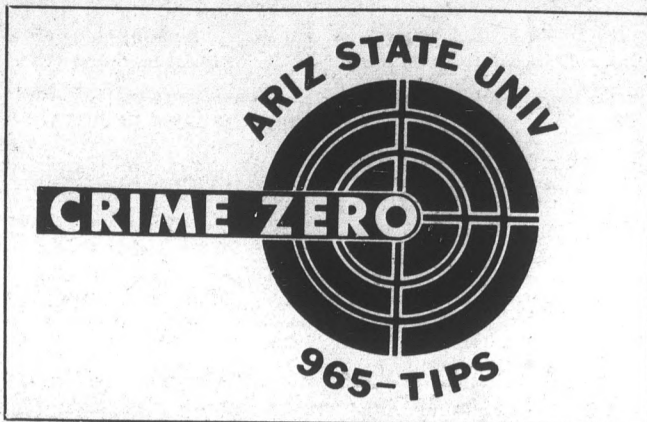

•A man kicked a robber in the groin and sent him limping away during a failed robbery attempt Friday, police said.

Police said the robber asked for money as the victim was walking to his car at A-K Metals, 212 W. Southern Ave. about 5:25 p.m.

•Two Tempe men were arrested early Saturday in connection with a pair of armed robberies, police said.

The first robbery occurred at a Circle K store, 228 E. Baseline Road, about 1:40 a.m., police said. Tempe police Sgt. Jim Norwood said the suspect asked the clerk for a pack of cigarettes and said, "Give me your money, too."

After the clerk told him, "You gotta' be kidding," Norwood said the suspect stuck his hand into his jacket as though he was holding a gun and made off with a $13.55 carton of cigarettes.

At 2:23 a.m. the suspect entered the lobby of the Embassy Suites at 4400 S. Rural Road, where he took a clerk's wallet worth $63 and $3 cash, Norwood said.

He said the suspect and an accomplice were arrested at a Guadalupe Road and Hardy Drive traffic stop minutes later. •Tempe police still are searching for a suspect in a pair of similar armed robberies Saturday.

The first robbery occurred at Mobil Oil, 1435 W. Baseline Road, when the suspect asked for a pack of Camel cigarettes about 3:19 a.m., then pulled out a blue steel revolver and demanded cash.

The suspect made off with $66, Norwood said.

At 5:53 a.m., the Circle K store at 606 W. Broadway Road was robbed after a suspect asked a clerk for a pack of Camels, pulled a blue steel revolver and demanded money. The suspect got away with $56, Norwood said.

•A transient was arrested Friday night after he allegedly ransacked an apartment, police said.

The man was caught by the owner after neighbors told him they saw him enter the apartment at 919 E. Lemon St.

•A man walking through Tempe Moeur park Friday night was robbed at gunpoint after saying "Hi" to the suspect, police said.

Police said the robber made off with $6 and the man's car keys after the robbery at 715 N. Mill Ave.

•ASU police are investigating the theft of a prescription pad from the Student Health Center.

Police said the suspect attempted to forge two prescriptions from the pad Nov. 13 at the Drug Emporium, 1126 N. Scottsdale Road.

Opponents of the complex also raised objections to adding more neighborhood apartments that appeal to University students.

But Gammage said: "These are not typical Tempe apartments. They're certainly not typical student-oriented apartments. They are in a much higher price range, and that will have an impact on the type of residents."

The complex will include 15 one-bedroom units and 60 two-bedroom units that will fall into the $450-$575 a month price range, he said.

But Dale Hunt, a Tempe resident who opposes the project, said the complex will attract ASU students despite the relatively high price.

"The presence of Arizona State University in our city is a big asset," he said. "But we also have the highest population density of any city in the Valley because of the large population associated with the University."

And David Mickey, a supporter of the complex, said increased density so close to ASU is inevitable.

"The nature of the city, including our location which is only a mile south of the campus with 45,000 students, is that we are going to have density," he said. "We can't escape that."

Gammage said opposition always will arise when someone proposes to add apartments near the University.

"'Apartments' is the longest four letter word in Tempe today," he said. "It is a controversial subject."

But Ellis asked whether Tempe wants to be forerunner in the race for density.

"Tempe does have a larger number of apartments, and the city is at the forefront of increasing density," he said. "Is that where you want us to be?"

Opponents also said they would prefer tenant-owned units rather than an apartment complex.

But Gammage said: "The condo market is dead right now. Condos are not selling. Nevertheless, these units are going to be built to condo standards."

Gammage said each apartment will include a fireplace, a washer and dryer and a separate dining room so the units could be marketed as condos if the market turns around.

"They are going to be built for rent at the outset but can be converted to condos if the market improves," he said.

the number of crash victims) on freeways nationwide that day."

But Hise said the number of airline reservations for the holidays are above normal, especially for students, because of the type of fares airlines are offering.

"They're very low but very restricted," she said. "College students don't mind being a little more flexible to save some money."

"College students were very smart this year in booking in August or September. Only certain numbers of seats are offered at the low rates. When those tickets are reserved, then the prices go up. Airlines raise their rates at holidays because that's when people have to fly. That's how they make their money."

Hise said she expects rates to remain low and said they may go even lower over spring break.

Although holiday travel does not appear to be affected, Hise said business trips and other casual travel has been set back by the stock market decline.

"A lot of money lost in the stock market went for corporate travel," she said. "Most people had already made their travel plans (before the stock market decline). But if they haven't made them now, they're just going to have to pick and choose — just about everything's taken."

Staying up

Heads' singer and NY artist keep kids awake

By DAVE MILLER
State Press

David Byrne, singer for The Talking Heads, has long been suspected of bananas behavior. But now it looks as though he's gone as far as having tortured his little sister.

Byrne, however, denies engaging in sadistic behavior, or encouraging it.

In his song "Stay Up Late," which has now been translated into a children's book, he describes subtle ways of dealing with new siblings, adding that it's all in fun.

"I don't think it's (inflammatory material)," he said in US magazine. "Mainly I think (children) will be kind of enchanted by the drawings. The story holds them together, leads you from one drawing to the next."

Maira Kalman, the artist behind "Stay Up Late," agrees wholeheartedly.

"I think it's different from other children's books, and I'm happy with it," she said by phone. "We (Byrne and I) cared very much for the children when we were doing it.

"We wanted to do a book that was strange and funny, and not bunnies, and I think we have."

And according to Kalman, Byrne was the perfect strange and funny collaborator for her project. As an artist for M & Co. in New York, the design group responsible for several Talking Heads album covers, including "Little Creatures," she had worked closely with Byrne. But never this close.

Since "Stay Up Late" came out she's gotten used to David Byrne questions. "Do you want to know if I touched him?" she jokes, firmly planting any demi-god notions in the ground. "Yes I touched him," she laughs.

"He's a sweetheart," she said of the entertainer rarely thought of as being a sweetheart. "He's an interesting, smart man, and a role model for people who are becoming famous, because he maintains a graciousness with people. He maintains a great respect for them."

And he wanted to do something for the kids. "It was my idea and I approached him about the song and we decided to write something together."

That something turned out to be an unusual sort of children's book, something fans of Byrne and the Heads would enjoy. Kalman says it's populated with an amorphous collection of bizarre and strange individuals — she lives in New York.

"The people in the book are heroic characters who manage to survive living in New York," she said.

"In New York there are millions of people walking around, and I wonder how they survive — the odds are so overwhelming.

"I admire the lunatics."

She can relate, a little. In character with the drawings in "Stay Up Late," she says her work is always somewhat off-key. "All my drawings are a little out of whack. That's how I perceive things. I let my imagination go unchecked.

"The end-product always has a different look than what I envisioned," she said. "But it's best not to maintain a rigid viewpoint."

She is harder, however, on the children's book industry. Part of the reason for "Stay Up Late" concerned a market seemingly aimed at dunderheads.

At best a lot of children's books border on being mediocre, according to Byrne. "A lot of them are just real cute," he said. "I think they underestimate the intelligence of the kids. I guess a lot of them are like the parents' ideas of what a kid should be — a cute pet."

"Families don't sit around smiling," Kalman said. She recalled involving her own children, Lulu and Alexander with the book. "Late at night, they were yanked out of bed and forced to model."

Hopefully they didn't have to stay up too late.

One of his companions, who had decided to sleep under the stars, was awakened by a bobcat. His first instinct was to bang on a pan — an action that sent the scared cat flying onto one of the tents, causing it to collapse.

The Pearl Fishers

Bizet's classical opera enthralls, charms LOT audiences

By SCOTT C. SECKEL
State Press

A visual riot of spectacular color and a few outstanding performances give the Lyric Opera Theater's production of Georges Bizet's "The Pearl Fishers" a sturdy base from which to work upon and build a stronger all-around production.

While some individual performances really shone with strength and the extras did a notably exuberant job, it is felt that other performers failed to live up to their full potential.

The show, which opened last week and plays at 8 p.m. Dec. 2, 4 and 5 at the Music Theater, is set in the days of Ceylon before British rule, when the Hindu Gods walked among the hunters and fishers, and magic was a tangible thing. "The Pearl Fishers" is the story of two friends and the girl they both love but cannot have.

Zurga (Matthew K. Smith) is the chief of the pearl fishers, chosen to lead them through the time of year when the storms arrive and they pursue their dangerous livelihood. His childhood friend Nadir (Curt Peterson) arrives from hunting in the forests and is invited to remain with the tribe.

Soon after Nadir appears from the jungle, a veiled priestess is brought before the tribe to pray for them as they dive. Leila (Lauren M. Vigil) pledges to keep her identity a secret and to remain chaste. Nadir recognizes her as his long-lost love and approaches her in the middle of the night. He is caught by the High Priest Nourabad (Winston Jones) and thus the story starts.

Both Peterson and Smith have great talent in their vocal roles. Their voices are strong and well-defined and they are both top-notch performers. However, their stage roles seem to lack a focus, a definition of character that would make them more distinct.

Winston Jones steals the show. His forceful stage presence and powerful vocals sweep the stage and electrify the audience. This is his first featured role with LOT and his stage appearances are to be anticipated. Jones has the haughty demeanor, the poise and carriage of a High Priest in his red robes.

Lauren M. Vigil is a reliable performer with LOT and her beautiful voice disappoints no one in "The Pearl Fishers." She gives a great portrayal of a girl who can't live the life she wants due to the exigencies of her position. Vigil's work on stage proves she has the presence of mind to deal with any problems that develop unexpectedly on stage. She appeared last spring as Micaela in "Carmen."

Let it be noted that the orchestra's performance of Bizet's light, airy music was a really great thing to hear. The pieces soared and skimmed with feeling and respect for the composer and his story. The emotional melodies were treated in such a way that the orchestra was neither intrusive nor ignorant of feeling.

This is not an opera that neglects the eye in order to focus all mental faculties on the ears. The sets, designed by Charles Davies, are simply magnificent, on the scale of a major company's production. Huge stone temples, a camp deep in the jungle and an immense sacrificial altar to the god Kali are elaborate. The audience is taken to ancient Ceylon with these beautifully painted and constructed sets.

The costumes are also reminiscent of productions from the days when cost was neither an object nor something audiences would stand to have cut. Costume designer Shahnaz Morir deserves kudos for her work. The detail, variety and brilliance add a great deal to the feel of the piece.

In spite of the few faults with "The Pearl Fishers," it is a production worth seeing. They are not irreparable and the sheer beauty of the singing, sets and costumes are reasons to attend. There is an epic quality that is brought to Bizet's opera and it is captured here.

The Music Theater is located in the Music Building. Tickets are $9.50 for adults and $5 for children and are available at Dillard's, Gammage and at the box office one hour before curtain time. For more information call 965-2856.

Abbie Hoffman's sleeping around causes voting mishap

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Because activist Abbie Hoffman has more homes than "a flea on a collie," he should not be allowed to cast the tie-breaking vote in a suburban election, attorneys argued in court.

Attorney Edward Connelly said Thursday that Hoffman had failed to establish residence in New Hope before the Nov. 3 borough council election.

"He often boasted he slept down the river and he slept in other states. The law intends that you have a fixed residence and that is not the case of Mr. Hoffman," Connelly said.

Hoffman is seeking to have his absentee ballot counted by the Bucks County Board of Elections in a race between Democrat Geraldine Delevick and Republican Jacob Fell.

If U.S. District Judge James McGirr Kelly rules against Hoffman, a coin toss will decide the winner.

Hoffman moved to the area to lobby against the controversial Point Pleasant pumping station, which will divert 95 million gallons of water a day from the Delaware River.

The Board of Elections invalidated his ballot on the grounds he hadn't established residency. Hoffman appealed, claiming the board made the move because of his opposition to Point Pleasant.

"Mr. Hoffman had more places to stay than a flea on a collie," said Connelly, who represents Fell.

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — Hailey Nance read 118 books over the summer and won the right to sit in the principal's chair for a day, and the next thing she knew, she had moved into a chair next to Johnny Carson on the "Tonight Show."

After an initial attack of stage fright Thursday night, Hailey came back to spend the last minute of the show with Carson. She said that as principal for a day, she ordered free ice cream for students and checked for mice in the school boilerroom, normally off-limits.

"Tonight Show" talent coordinator Darcy Hettrich read about the 8-year-old in a newspaper, and invited Hailey to the NBC studios in Burbank, Calif., to tape Thursday night's segment.

Hailey had said in a telephone interview from California that she wasn't nervous, but took along a teddy bear named Carol for moral support.

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Fire destroyed the garage at singer-songwriter Bob Dylan's home in Malibu, authorities said Friday.

"We're still going to do a cause investigation, but the speculation right now centers on the spontaneous combustion of materials stored in the garage, mainly rags and flammable liquids such as paints and varnish," said Los Angeles County sheriff's Sgt. Kevin Mauch. The fire Thursday night caused no damage to Dylan's home, Mauch said.

Outing

Owen said the Outing Club makes her feel "totally removed from the real world."

But it isn't a traditional, typical, formal club. And it certainly isn't wrought with boring meetings.

The AOC has hourlong gatherings during which members discuss the previous weekend's trips and future plans and watch videos or slides of sky diving, hiking and other types of adventures. Occasionally, they also feature guest speakers.

When Diane Smith, a still-involved graduate, first arrived at ASU, she said all she did was go to bars. After a while, it got boring, so she turned to the Outing Club.

Smith and President Elisa Stansbury echoed her sentiments. "When I first came here (to ASU)," Smith said, "I had never hiked. I never thought I could, but bar-hopping got boring. Then I met Gordon (McCraken, a former member) and I started rock climbing. We still party, but I found other things too."

"The club's philosophy is low key and laid back," said O'Brien. "It is based on people and run by people."

Although many people, mostly students, come and go as their schedules permit, the club has a definite core. These dedicated members meet at Bendersnatch Pub throughout the summer to plan, and to just have fun. And some members from years back are known to drop in from time to time.

O'Brien, a 20-year-old electrical engineering major, joined the club as soon as he started at ASU. "I had never backpacked or hiked before," he said. "The club is a good place to pick up knowledge."

Along with learning from experience, the members also learn from the speakers.

On Nov. 9, Jim Sprinkle, from Parachute Incorporated, spoke on skydiving. Last Monday, Dave Day from Peak One Backpacking, Skiing & Climbing Equipment showed slides from his trip to Mt. Everest.

Day is the only Arizona person to have skied the north face of the mountain.

Membership fees for the club are $10 per semester or $15 per year. It is open to students, faculty, alumni and friends of members and everyone is welcome to attend meetings. The fee includes equipment use, information and organization.

Meetings are held Monday nights at 7:30 in the MU Pima Room.

Sun Devil wrestlers dominate tournament

Susan Schuman/State Press

ASU wrestler Zeke Jones puts a move on Tom Tingley of the Air Force Academy Saturday during the Sun Devil invitational at P.E. West. Five Sun Devils won championships in different weight classes during the tournament.

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

Two great coaches, two nationally ranked teams and they are both in the hunt for one thing: a national title.

Iowa and Arizona State meet Dec. 2 in a match that could be a preview of the NCAA tournament.

Hawkeye coach Dan Gable and Sun Devil mentor Douglas are both considered to be fine technicians of the sport, but Douglas has never coached a national champion. Gable has led Iowa to nine championships.

ASU is ranked fifth in the collegiate preseason rankings while the Hawkeyes hold down the number two spot.

Douglas had his entire team in the finals of the Sun Devil Invitational and saw five grapplers crowned champions.

Sophomore Zeke Jones (118 pounds) picked up where he left off last March by being named the tournament's outstanding wrestler.

Jones, ranked sixth in the country, cruised to the finals, pinning Joey Pangelinan of Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo in 6:50.

"Personally, I don't feel I was the person that deserved it," Jones said. "But I did wrestle well in the finals and that must have had something to do with it."

Sun Devil Chip Park (ranked third in the country) defeated teammate Jerry Garcia in the semifinals, 3-1. The match turned into a wrestle-off to see who would man the 126-pound spot for the Sun Devils.

Gonzales, an ASU assistant coach, wrestled in the tournament for the Sunkist Kids club and beat Park, 12-6.

Glenn McMinn won the 134-pound division for ASU. The victory over Donnie Stevens of the Sunkist Kids, 4-2, gives him a 3-0 record in his senior season.

Last year ASU had a freshman All-America wrestler at the 142-pound class, Dan St. John, but he jumped to the 158-pound division. Taking his place are Robert Mathers and Jim Sinadinos.

The pair engaged in their own civil war in the semifinals of the 142-pound match. Sinadinos emerged as the victor and went on to place second. Mathers claimed third-place honors.

Another sophomore that will aid in the Sun Devils' national hopes is Tommy Ortiz. Ortiz, ASU's 150-pounder, was the number one seed in the tournament and no one would come close to him. In two of the three matches, he won by 15 points or more.

St. John was defeated in the finals of the 158-pound division by former ASU wrestler Eddie Urbano, 2-1, in overtime.

Jim Gressley (167 pounds) is coming back from a knee injury that sidelined him last year. He was defeated in the finals by Eric Osborne of Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, 16-10.

Ginther walked through his field to win his class. He beat Anthony Romero of Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, 10-7.

Mike Davies, who is ranked third, continued his quest for a national championship by beating Steve Brennen of the Air Force Academy, 21-6.

In his first match with Fernando Ugalde, Davies shot for the takedown and hurt his opponent five seconds into the match.

Hoop team beats Bulgarians; shows off new style, attitude

By STEVE BRENNAN
State Press

The 1987-88 ASU basketball team has a new look — a high-scoring offense with more than a couple of excitement-generators.

But defensively, the Sun Devils haven't changed much.

ASU coach Steve Patterson put his virtually all-new basketball team on display for the first time Friday night in the University Activity Center, as the Sun Devils beat the Bulgarian national team, 102-89, in an exhibition game.

Patterson and many team members agreed that something is different for the Sun Devils this year, namely attitude.

"I haven't felt like this since high school," senior guard Arthur Thomas said after the game Friday. "It was really fun playing out there with those guys."

The "guys" Thomas was referring to are four new additions to the team: Trent Edwards, a 6-foot-6 forward; John Jerome, a 6-8 forward; Eric Holloway, a 6-7 forward; Tarence Wheeler, a 6-2 guard; and Joey Johnson, a 6-4 small forward.

The combination of these new additions led to an offensive flurry Friday, as Holloway, Johnson, Jerome, Thomas, Wheeler, and Mark Becker (who saw a great deal of action last season) all scored in double figures against the Bulgarians.

"This team has good balance," Patterson said. "We showed we have quite a few guys who can play."

Thomas, who now shares the point guard duties with Wheeler, said he enjoys his new role on the team and the attitude of the players this year. Thomas led the Sun Devils with 21 points against the Bulgarians.

"I can really get into the flow of the game (at a wing guard position)," Thomas said. "It feels really good."

"There is so much heart on this team — they don't give up," he said. "I'm really excited about this season."

Despite the Sun Devils' rejuvenated offensive attack, there is a dark cloud hanging over Patterson's hopes for a successful season — defense.

The Sun Devils gave up 89 points to the Bulgarians, a defensive performance which had Patterson concerned.

"Our suspicions about our defense were shown," Patterson said. "They (the Bulgarians) did a good job exposing our weaknesses."

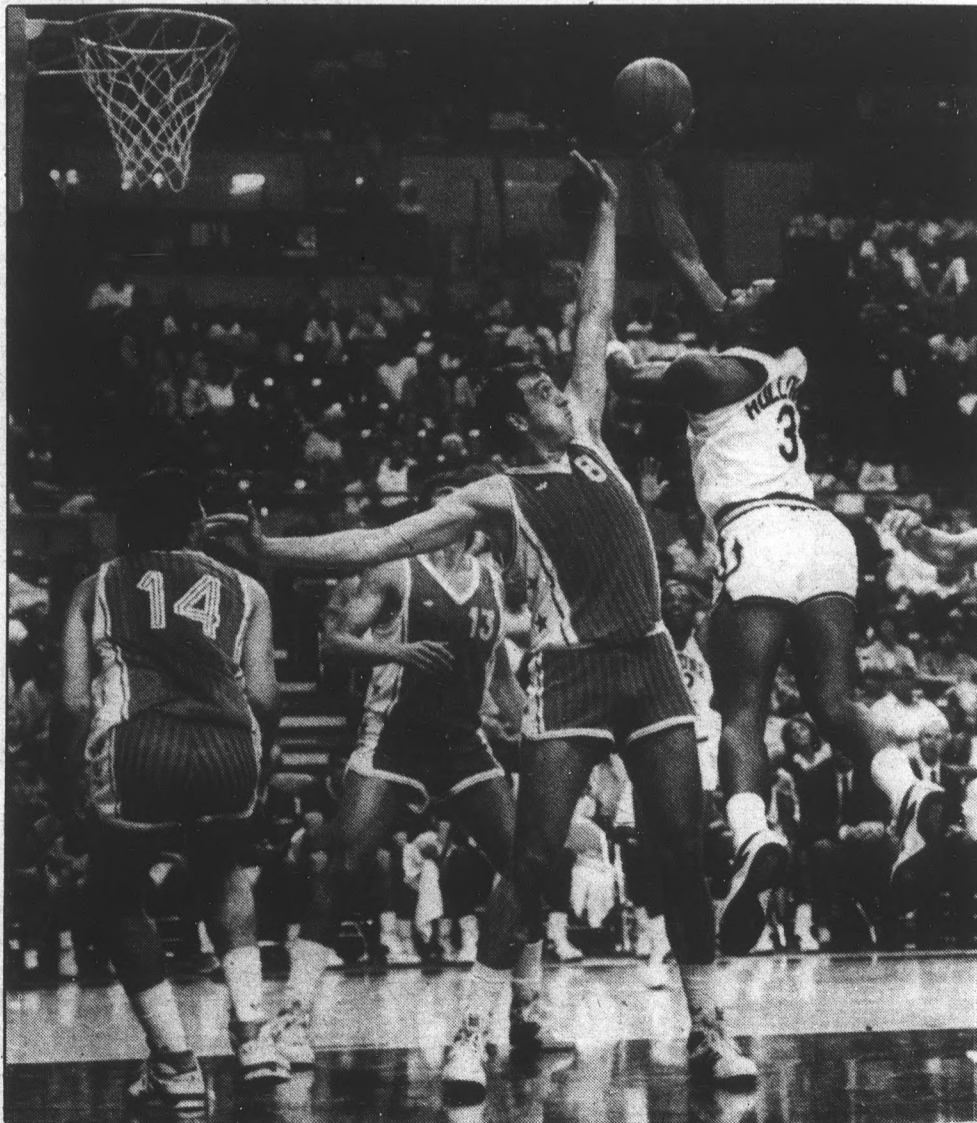

"We need to get much more efficient defensively," he said. "We were not reacting as quickly as we should. We were reacting slowly to the movement of the ball."

Thomas said the defense needs work, but improvement will come with time.

"We didn't play as good defensively," Thomas said. "But the defense will pick up. We'll be all right."

Patterson said following the game Friday night that sophomore guard Matt Anderson will be redshirted this season.

Anderson transferred to ASU this year after playing for Ricks College in Rexburg, Idaho as a freshman. Following his freshman season, Anderson took two years off from school to participate in a church

ASU women swimmers beat UCLA, Ohio State

By BRET ROSE
State Press

The Sun Devil women's swim team remained undefeated with three victories over the weekend, but the men's team suffered its first loss of the season to the top-ranked team in the country.

The women's team easily handled all three meets, defeating USC on Thursday, 139-127, and UCLA, 87-53, and Ohio State, 99-23, on Friday. Several outstanding individual efforts contributed to the Sun Devil victories.

"We became a lot better team this week," coach Tim Hill said. "I saw people stand up with the idea of really doing well."

ASU's Michelle Thompson was undefeated in both the 50 and 100 freestyles over the two days of competition, and Amy Bush and Jenny Hau dominated the 200 and 100 breaststroke events, respectively. All three are freshmen.

Hill also commended freshman Shari Countryman for her winning the 200-meter butterfly against USC (2:20.56) and Nancy Schuller in the 200-meter backstroke (2:22.65).

"From the showing we've made so far, it looks like we're going to have a good year," co-captain Carolyn Mills said.

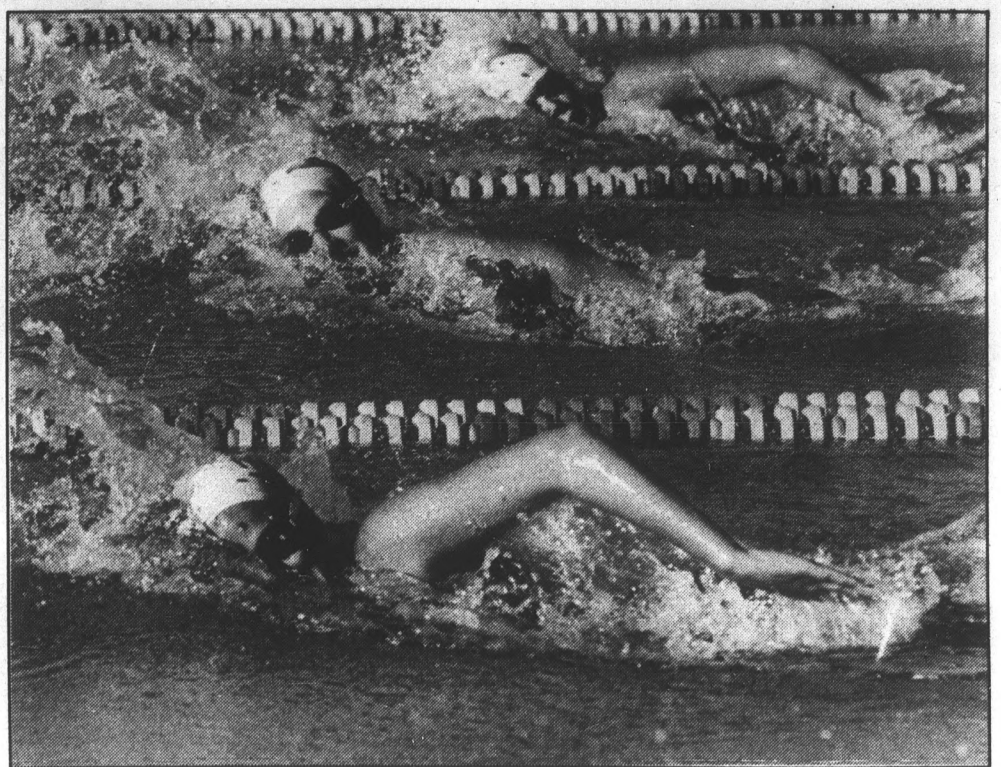

At the other end of the pool, ASU's men's team was defeated by what appears to be a certain NCAA Championship contender in USC, 63-50.

The top-ranked Trojans left perhaps their three best swimmers at home, including 1984 Olympic gold medalist Mike O'Brien, former world-record holder and freshman Dave Wharton and U.S. national champion Steve Bentley.

Although the Trojans captured all but five events, ASU coach Ron Johnson felt the Sun Devils gave a valiant effort.

"We kept on chugging all the way through, especially in the second half of the meet," Johnson said.

Senior Richard Schinnick had perhaps one of the best efforts of the day for the Sun Devils by winning the 200-meter butterfly (2:04.60). Other individual winners for ASU were Chuck Gabrean in the 50-meter freestyle (23:80), Ross Anderson in the 200 individual medley (2:09.24), and Scott Siford in the 1-meter diving. The Devils also closed the meet with a victory in the 400-meter freestyle relay.

Susan Schuman/State Press

Members of the ASU and UCLA women's swim teams compete in a three-way meet last Friday at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center. The Sun Devils defeated UCLA, 87-53, and Ohio State, 99-23.

"I really thought we had a chance to beat them," Anderson said. "I think everybody got down when we lost the opening medley relay."

Both the men's and women's squads will begin resting for the Huskers Invitational on Dec. 4-6 in Lincoln, Neb., and the U.S. Open in Orlando, Fla., Dec. 20-22.

Sticky situation

Spikers defeat Beavers, struggle against Ducks

By JOAN McKENNA
State Press

The ASU volleyball team showed little imagination this weekend when it started off its road trip Friday night with a 3-0 loss to Oregon, a match in which ASU coach Debbie Brown said, "We beat ourselves."

The Sun Devils had a 1-6 Pac-10 away record before the trip, with many losses being attributed to a lack of team intensity. But ASU recovered Saturday night as it finished up the conference season with a 3-0 victory over Oregon State and a season-high hitting percentage of .413 for the match.

"I think that's one of the team's best hitting percentages ever," Brown said. No records are kept on hitting percentages, but the ASU Sports Information Department said it definitely is among the highest.

OSU went into the match with an 0-17 Pac-10 record, which Brown said, if anything, fired up the Beavers (3-26).

"They didn't have anything to lose," she said. "They just hustled a lot."

"I think they were up 7-1 in the first game. But we steadied out."

ASU (15-12, 9-9 in Pac-10) won, 15-8, 15-6, 15-6.

Three Sun Devils hit over .600 for the evening. Outside hitter Tracie Kisro had an offensive high .667 percentage with eight kills and no errors.

Senior co-captain Tracey Barberje finished out her conference career with a team-high 14 kills, hitting .619.

Middle blocker Sue Nord scored nine kills and hit .615.

But Friday's performance was as dim as Saturday's was brilliant.

"We started off with a 7-1 lead, playing really well," Brown said. "(But) we beat ourselves with hitting errors and serving errors."

The Ducks (17-10, 11-7) defeated the Sun Devils, 15-13, 15-11, 15-10.

Brown said a string of mistakes touched off the downfall, but ASU did not block well all night. The team also only hit .129.

"But (against Oregon State) we turned it around and made very few mistakes."

Brown said the Duck loss resembled many of ASU's less-than-stellar performances away from Tempe.

"We just have not played well on the road," she said. "I'm not sure exactly what the secret ingredient is that's missing."

The split weekend for ASU coupled with Arizona victories over Oregon State Friday and Oregon Saturday left the two rival schools tied in a sixth place finish at the conference season close.

Brown said ASU's status should remain the same for an NCAA playoff invitation. One of the criteria is where a team is ranked within its own region.

"We were ranked eighth in the region last week," Brown said. "We should be in the same place. I feel really confident we'll get a bid."

The coach said she is more concerned about with whom ASU will be paired.

"We have three matches left," she said. "If we beat Colorado State or BYU, we should move up."

Brigham Young is ranked fourth in the nation and the Rams are ranked sixth.

ASU plays host to Brigham Young at 7:30 Wednesday night in the Activity Center before heading to the Rockies over the Thanksgiving weekend.

mission in Taiwan.

The coaching staff is also considering junior forward Alex Austin as a possible redshirt this season.

"We think a year of maturity will be helpful for Alex," Patterson said. "We think a lot of Alex. An extra year will be good for him."

Patterson said that Thomas, who was under investigation by the NCAA for a car loan from former assistant coach Herb Livsey last summer, has been cleared of all possible sanctions.

"It was determined to be inadvertant — there was no material benefit gained," Patterson said. "It was what we had hoped for. I think we are gaining credibility with the NCAA."

The Sun Devils will begin their collegiate season Friday night against Texas Tech in the UAC. The game will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Bowl invitation accepted; Cooper focusing on Cats

By CAROL BOOS
State Press

ASU officially accepted a trip to the Freedom Bowl Saturday, but ASU football coach John Cooper said Sun Devil thoughts are on the game against the University of Arizona Saturday, not the Dec. 30 matchup. "The thing right now is placing all attention on UA," Cooper said. "After this game, then we can start focusing on the bowl."

In fact, Cooper said he started to watch the Sun Devils' bowl opponent, Air Force, on television Saturday night, but lost interest.

"I tried to watch some of it and fell asleep," Cooper said. "I was too tired."

The Sun Devils were idle this week and took advantage of it.

"We really needed an open week," Cooper said. "Our players are tired and we're trying to get some of our players healthy — we're a banged-up football team."

After a week of fundamental practice and recouperation, Cooper said today's practice will begin to focus on the actual UA game plan.

Breaking the five-game losing streak against the Wildcats is included in the game plan.

He said that the Wildcats might have put more emphasis on beating the Sun Devils in the past, so this year Cooper said ASU will place more emphasis on the UA game in hopes of breaking the streak.

Cooper added that in the past one of the UA's primary goals has been to beat ASU, while the Sun Devils' goal has been reaching a bowl game.

Both teams have struggled this year. ASU (3-3 in the Pac-10 and 6-4 overall) and UA (2-3-2, 4-4-2) have been plagued with quarterback problems throughout the year.

But Cooper said a good season or a bad season makes no difference, the game is still a "big, big ballgame."
