

Mecham wins feud with panel; testimony to resume

By VICKIE CHACHERE and BEN McCONNELL
State Press

PHOENIX — Gov. Evan Mecham won a dramatic five-hour standoff with the House select committee Monday, when the panel granted the governor's demand to testify without being "cross-examined" by special counsel William French.

Mecham will reappear before the committee Wednesday at 9 a.m. and only answer questions from the six Republicans and four Democrats on the panel.

"I think the governor, to a great degree, is just thumbing his nose at the Legislature," said committee chairman Rep. Jim Skelly. "I don't care for that."

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Rose Mofford set the date of the recall election for May 17. On Saturday, Mecham told Mofford that he will run in the election rather than step down. Mofford, a Democrat, will assume gubernatorial duties if he is removed from office or steps down.

Mecham's testimony was brought to an abrupt halt after the governor delivered a 30-minute response to French's charges of malfeasance then said he would not answer questions from French or House Minority Counsel Paul Eckstein. Mecham said his rights would be violated if forced to answer French's questions.

French likely will serve as prosecutor should the House call for an impeachment trial.

Skelly was equally unwavering in his contention that the governor, like the other witnesses who have testified in the 13 days of hearings, should answer questions posed by French and Eckstein.

It took House Republicans more than two hours to decide whether to grant the governor's demands or subpoena Mecham, forcing him to answer French's questions or face contempt charges.

The select committee is investigating French's charges that Mecham tried to hide Tempe developer Barry Wolfson's $350,000 campaign loan, tried to stonewall a state investigation into death threats made against former Mecham aide Donna Carlson and embezzled $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund.

Later in the day, Mecham told about 1,300 supporters at Mesa's Centennial Hall: "Rules are used for or against you, according to who is using the rules."

"This doesn't have anything to do with guilt or innocence; it's a political process."

House Speaker Joe Lane, R-Wilcox, said the House's counsel will sit behind committee members Wednesday and advise them on questions.

"All anybody wants around here is the truth, and the only way we are going to get it is for him to get out there and answer those tough questions, and there are going to be some tough questions," Lane said. "I would hope that when he comes down here he does not beat around the bush."

"We felt that it's very, very unfair for the governor to come in and change the rules, but there is a tremendous number of members in our caucus who still wanted to ask him questions."

Lane said committee members today will draw up questions and confer with French and Eckstein on how to grill the governor.

The committee had the option to subpoena Mecham, a position supported by Skelly, but Lane said Republicans voted against it during the caucus.

Asked what the committee will do if the governor demands additional conditions for his testimony, Lane responded, "If there is, he can sure kiss the House goodbye."

Rep. Jim Hartdegen, R-Casa Grande, said he doubted that Mecham will even answer members' questions on Wednesday.

This is the second time Mecham has refused to answer impromptu questions from House counsel. Mecham denied an interview request by House investigator Bill Woods, who was hired by French to assist in the probe, because Woods would not submit questions in writing to the governor ahead of time.

House Minority Leader Art Hamilton, D-Phoenix, said House Democrats also have agreed to waive Eckstein's right to ask questions because they believe Mecham's testimony is needed before an impeachment vote can be taken.

The House needs 31 votes from the 60 members to proceed with impeachment. The Senate would act as jury and Frank X. Gordon, chief justice of the state Supreme Court, would preside.

"We believe it is absolutely important that the House rules that have been adopted be honored," Hamilton said. "But we believe there may be a higher goal here and that is to get at the truth and to satisfy every Arizonan that we have done that."

ASU reacts to hearings

By MICHELLE ALLMAN

ASU students gathered in front of the big-screen television in the basement of the MU Monday to see the long-awaited testimony of Gov. Evan Mecham before the House select committee on Impeachment.

In the broadcast, Mecham told committee Chairman Jim Skelly that he would not answer prosecutors' questions because, he said, this was a special situation.

"I am, in this case, the accused, not just another witness," Mecham said. "I'll be happy to answer any questions of those who are doing the voting."

Most of the students in the viewing audience at the MU were interested in the hearings. Opinions varied as to the source of Mecham's predicament.

Nelson's off-campus policy becomes public

By SCOTT LUCK
State Press

ASU President J. Russell Nelson's latest off-campus conduct policy became effective Dec. 8, but it did not become public knowledge until the anti-drug measure was published Monday in the ASU Insight.

ASU Legal Counsel Bruce Meyerson said Monday the policy was not printed last semester because the campus news publishers were shut down, not because of "any Machiavellian intention."

The new policy as printed in Monday's ASU Insight states: "Disciplinary measures under the Code of Conduct may be taken against students whose unauthorized use, possession or distribution of any controlled substance or illegal drug off campus poses a threat to the safety and welfare of the campus community."

The ASU Insight reported that Nelson "recently" approved the new policy.

Nelson was out of his office Monday and unavailable for comment.

In September, Nelson implemented an "emergency measure" that technically granted the University an almost free hand in regulating off-campus behavior. Nelson's "emergency" declaration allowed the University to bypass normal formalization procedure, which Meyerson said usually takes about six months for Arizona Board of Regents approval.

The new policy is considered permanent and simply a new version of the original "emergency measure," because, "Otherwise it would be a never-ending process," Meyerson said. The new

'We wouldn't be taking action against the students, unless we had the go-ahead from campus police.'
— Leon Shell

version qualifies as a formal policy now because it went through a number of procedural steps in its original form, including a period for student response and publishing in ASU Insight, Meyerson said.

Office of Student Life Dean Leon Shell said Monday that the new policy focuses primarily on off-campus drug sales.

Several Associated Students executives complained last semester that Nelson's original policy was too vague and broad.

ASASU Activities Vice President John Fees, who was displeased with the ambiguity of the original policy, expressed satisfaction with the new policy. Fees, who had not been informed that the new policy was in effect, said, "There is a responsibility the University has not to encourage drug use on or off campus."

Fees said ASU needed to make a policy to show the University has an opinion on drug use. "The absence of a policy seemed to make it appear that the University had no opinion on the subject."

The original policy stated: "The University reserves the right to take necessary and appropriate action to protect the safety and welfare of the campus community ... against those students whose behavior off-campus indicates they pose a danger to others."

Nelson's original policy sparked a wave of controversy last semester that prompted newspaper editorials, radio debates and ASASU senatorial discussion concerning the vagueness of the policy's wording.

Impeachment: The hunters should become the prey

Darrin Hostetler
Opinion Editor

For the busloads of fourth-graders from the Ray School District, Monday was field-trip day to the Arizona State Capitol.

As the students and their teachers filed off the big yellow buses into the dreary mist that blanketed downtown Phoenix, capitol tour guides met them with a smile and a loud "welcome to the capitol." The children obediently formed a single-file line and followed the pretty guide toward the copper Capitol rotunda while she delivered her spiel: "On your left is the home of the state Senate, and on the right are the offices and chamber of the House of Representatives."

Unaware of the high drama unfolding in the building to the right, the kids jostled and laughed among themselves as they disappeared into the old capitol building — completely oblivious of the most historic political proceedings in the state.

If I had been the tour guide for the day, I would have told the children that "to your left is the Senate, and to your right is a large cement structure where a full-blown constitutional crisis is now exploding.

"Your elders are inside, and they aren't playing nice. And that sound you hear, boys and girls, is the sound of state government breaking down. Noisy, isn't it? Doesn't it sound like that when you scratch your fingernails on the blackboard?"

Tension was thick inside the hearing room from the moment Evan Mecham raised his right hand — amid a fusillade of flash bulbs and clicking shutters — to swear before God and Man that he was prepared to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth concerning his beleaguered administration.

The Select House Committee on Impeachment, as well as the packed room of spectators, legislators and newsmen, were certainly ready for some answers. Evan Mecham sat, with high-dollar attorney Murray Miller at his side, finally ready to present his version of the "facts."

Committee chairman Jim Skelly (R-Scottsdale), destined to be the fall guy of the day, led off the proceedings by urging Mecham to "be as frank and honest" as he could with the committee. But it wasn't to be.

Mecham read from a prepared statement for 40 minutes, addressing all of the allegations against him — the contents of which were neither new or surprising, and then seemed ready to field the multitude of questions which House members had for him. But he refused to answer questions, unlike all the other witnesses in the hearings, from special counsel William French and minority counsel Paul Eckstein.

Mecham claimed that it was "unfair" for the attorneys to "cross examine" him, even though the committee's rules — which were adopted unanimously by members — require witnesses to submit to questioning from the counsels.

To put it another way, the governor was claiming that the rules of the legislature did not apply to him.

Skelly and Mecham engaged in a bitter exchange that left it clear that the governor wasn't about to give in. Skelly was hanging tough with Mecham, insisting that he comply with the house rules.

Skelly called a five-minute recess to discuss the dilemma with the committee.

As the governor left the hearing room for the break, a burst of applause broke out in present "enemies" — the homosexuals, liberals, media types and maverick Republicans — who are everywhere. All threaten to bring down their leader through insidious means, and they berate them with gusto. They shoot out pro-Mecham flyers like bullets to passers-by: "Here. These are the FACTS."

But for all their false bravado, these folks look and act like they are at the Alamo. One woman, carrying a sign proclaiming "Gov. Mecham, we are with you," glared at a reporter who asked her a question and said: "Does your paper tell the truth? Of course not! So why should I tell you anything?"

The angered, bitter look in her eyes was there because she is fighting for more than a duplicious silence.

Mecham didn't want to be "cross-examined" by French and Eckstein simply because he had spent 40 minutes blowing smoke to cover the embarrassing barrenness of his defense — his arguments were, in almost every case, nothing but dirty hot air — and the two attorneys were equipped with very large fans.

Mecham and Miller both knew the governor couldn't stand up under the intense prosecutorial pressure the skilled lawyers would place upon him.

And once the smoke had cleared, Mecham would be revealed to the world, wearing only the emperor's new clothes.

The details of what took place after this are described elsewhere in the State Press, but the basic facts are these: Skelly and several other committee members weren't content with Mecham's insistence that only House members question the governor — instead of the members and the special counsels — so around 1 p.m. the chairman adjourned the committee, informing everyone they would reconvene when Mecham was ready to play by the committee's rules.

Thus the constitutional crisis: Mecham would not condescend to obey the House rules, and Skelly courageously would not acquiesce to the governor riding roughshod over his committee.

Deadlocked.
But not for long.

The Republicans and the Democrats each fled into closed caucus meetings to ponder this development. The state was waiting to hear the governor, and the legislators had to figure out some way to deliver the goods.

Some three hours later, both parties — for all their differences — found a common solution to the problem.

They decided to roll over for the governor.

Both parties announced that their counsels, French and Eckstein, would "waive" their right to question Mecham and would instead serve as advisors to the committee members, who would do all the questioning.

So we will finally, probably get to hear Evan Mecham answer questions from the House on Wednesday.

But is it worth it?
The House provided Arizona with yet another sick and messy chapter to the Mecham saga — they sold out Skelly, who made a courageous stand against setting a dangerous precedent of yielding to the executive branch, they extended the embarrassing impeachment ordeal still longer, and they crafted 12 hours of chaos out of what could have easily been a day of order.

All this instead of doing the obvious — subpoenaing the governor and forcing him to testify or voting for an impeachment trial without hearing Mecham's testimony.

The only question now is: Should we scrap our legislature as well as our governor and start over from scratch?

We couldn't do much worse.

the gallery. Recall organizer Ed Buck arrived on the scene simultaneously, prompting one Mecham supporter to scoff: "Why don't you clap for the governor, Ed?"

Buck replied: "The only kind of clap I would give Mecham is of another variety."

It was a crude comment from Buck, but perhaps he suffered for his indiscretion — he reportedly was thwacked over the head by an umbrella-toting geriatric Mecham supporter outside the capitol and forced to make a citizen's arrest of his attacker.

As always, the small but vocal band of Mecham supporters clustered outside the House. Numbering about two dozen, this regular group of spiteful Mechamites were in an especially foul mood Monday. They heckled House Speaker Joe Lane as he walked by, informing him that "we'll remember you in November," and that he should not be expecting any Christmas cards from them this year.

The comedy they bring to the capitol, which only they seem to think is amusing, is a cheap mix of awkward bathroom-humor references to elected officials and "faggot jokes." They stand in small circles, facing outward so that they can see the everman — she is witnessing an attack on her basic beliefs and on a way of life. The conflict between the radical conservative element that supports Evan Mecham and the rest of the state has been building for years, and now that the lines have been clearly drawn and the battle brought into the open, the conclusion is obvious.

Never again will an Evan Mecham be elected governor of Arizona. The flagbearer is going down for the last time, and the far-right will never be strong or lucky enough to put one of their own back on the ninth floor of the capitol.

Perhaps the look she gave the reporter was not one of hate, but of desperation.

At this point, rumors were rampant that Mecham could actually be cited for contempt of the House for refusing to comply with the committee's rules — even though this seemed unlikely because the governor was present of his own free will, not because of a subpoena.

But one thing was certain: if Mecham couldn't be cited for contempt, he certainly was behaving in a contemptible fashion. After all his claims that he wanted to "bring out the facts," he was retreating in

Bushwacking the press about the Iran-contra affair

David Broder
Washington Post Group

WASHINGTON — The public debate about George Bush and the Iran-contra affair, which took a new turn in his prime-time TV confrontation with Dan Rather, is being hindered by confusion over three separate issues.

Is the issue, as many would have it, whether Bush has whipped "the wimp" issue by standing up to and talking down America's most watched anchorman?

Is it, as Bush has tried to say from the beginning, whether he behaved in a principled way through the original decision-making and told the truth in the later investigations?

Or is it a question of the judgment he exercised — or failed to exercise — in his role as the No. 2 official of the federal government?

The answers, in my opinion, are respectively: no, no and yes. And sorting it out that way may help dispel at least some of the confusion.

The issue is not Bush's "wimpiness," because that issue was a phony from the start. It rested on his prep-school vocabulary, his almost too well-tailored clothes and much-too-youthful appearance. Most of all, it came from the incident of the Nashua debate in 1980, when Bush appeared to choke in the face of Reagan's last-minute effort to include four other candidates in the forum.

The Nashua impression is contradicted, not only by Bush's demonstrated courage as a young naval aviator, but by the tenacity with which he has pursued his political goals, often against heavy odds, over the last quarter-century. A man who is a "wimp" does not hurl himself twice against the favored incumbent Democratic senator in Texas. Nor does he seek the presidential nomination, as Bush did in 1980, when his only election victories had come in two House races more than a decade earlier.

Anyone who was around Bush when his friend and campaign manager, Jim Baker, was trying to get him to concede the inevitability of Reagan's nomination halfway through the spring primaries in 1980 would testify that the man is no quitter. Bush was the last to give up the fight.

In virtually every debate this campaign, he has punched and counterpunched effectively, so his standing up to Rather's belligerent questioning and frequent interruptions should not have been a surprise.

Nor, frankly, does it prove much. Many a politician has proved he can beat the press, especially on TV. But that hardly qualifies him to be president. Remember Spiro

Agnew, no slouch as a press-basher?

Nor is it an adequate presidential credential to insist, as Bush does, that he has acted on principle and been completely honest in discussing the Iran-contra affair. In his first Iran-contra interview last August, after the televised Senate-House hearings ended, he told me with some satisfaction, "I think people may now understand I was telling the truth. . . . The question of telling the truth is awfully important to me. It's sacrosanct. And I found it troubling when people thought I was lying."

Those who are scholars of Iran-contra (as I am not) will tell you that while the official investigations have left Bush unscathed, he has changed what they regard as significant details of his story. On the basis of more than 20 years of dealing with him, my strong presumption is that he is telling the truth and that any contradictions result from the human tendency to gloss over or push from our memory moments or incidents which make us think badly of ourselves.

It is also completely in character for Bush to insist on "the principle" of keeping confidential his advice to the president. As Fred Barnes has pointed out in The New Republic, that was one of "the rules" Walter Mondale gave Bush after the 1980 election, when they discussed how to be a success as vice president.

Bush is a stickler on "rules." The main reason he got into trouble in Nashua was his fixation on "the agreement" he had made with the Nashua Telegraph, the debate sponsor, to go one-on-one with Reagan. Bush still believes he did the principled thing by adhering to that agreement, and he insists on keeping silent on his advice to the president out of the same principle.

But discussions of principle don't take you much farther than the "wimp question" does. The question voters must resolve about Bush is one of judgment and of action: Can he assess a situation realistically and act effectively?

In the Iran-contra affair, the evidence clearly indicates Bush did not. He has said repeatedly that he did not figure out it was an arms-for-hostage deal. Nor, he says, did he see it as a contradiction of the anti-terrorism policy Reagan had asked him to develop for the administration. He says he did not pick up the fact that the secretary of state and secretary of defense had strong and vehemently stated objections to the arms sale. He says he expressed some reservations of his own — about the role of the Israelis and the risk of exposure — but clearly his "reservations" had no impact on the president's decisions.

It is, in short, a record of obtuseness and futility.

Now, as Bush reminded Rather, it is also one episode in seven years as vice president and almost 25 years in public life — so it deserves to be put into context. But in itself, it raises disquieting questions.

Man hungry for food, cash robs sandwich shop

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A man entered a Tempe sandwich shop Sunday night, ate a roast beef sub, then locked two employees in a back room at gunpoint and robbed the store of almost $400, police said.

"I thought he was going to kill us," said one of the clerks, a 20-year-old ASU sophomore communications major, who requested anonymity. "He looked so scared, I was hoping a customer wouldn't come in and make him nervous so he'd start shooting."

The bandit entered Subway Sandwiches & Salads, 4 E. 10th St., about 8:40 p.m., and waited his turn in line. He ate his sandwich and waited for all the customers to leave before he pulled out a 9mm semi-automatic handgun, the student said.

"He looked like a real normal customer — he even asked for an application to work here," she said.

The student, who has worked at the store for three months, said that after Sunday's robbery she plans to quit the night shift.

police report

"My mom said not to (work nights) and I don't need her worrying about me."

The other clerk, who is a sophomore liberal arts major, has worked at the shop for a couple of weeks.

Detectives say the suspect may also be responsible for the Jan. 28 armed robbery of the Payless Shoe Source, which is located across the street.

The suspect is described as a Caucasian male, 25 to 30 years old, 5 feet 10 inches, 165 to 170 pounds with brown hair that is long in the back. He was last seen wearing blue jeans and a black vinyl coat.

In other incidents:

• A 34-year-old transient was arrested and charged with assault after he allegedly tried to stab a man outside a Tempe bar Sunday, police said.

Donald D. Pierce, address unknown, was booked into Tempe City Jail in connection with the incident.

Police said a man entered the Saw Mill

Saloon, 933 E. University Drive, about 11:15 p.m. after he was told to leave by the bar's owner, Mike Anderson, 36, of Tempe.

When the man refused, police said Anderson told a bouncer to take him outside. Anderson, the bouncer and another man went outside where the suspect lunged at Anderson with a 4-inch folding knife.

The suspect was arrested after an off-duty Gilbert police officer pulled a gun and the suspect was chased by a Tempe police officer who responded to the call, police said.

• Tempe police are searching for a youth in connection with several car burglaries and criminal damage done to vehicles in the 200 block of East Baseline Road and the 5100 block of South College Avenue Sunday night.

The suspect is described as a Hispanic male, 16 years old, 5 feet 4 inches, 110 to 120 pounds with dark hair.

• A sophomore public programs major suffered a back injury while "folding clothes" in her room at Manzanita Residence Hall Sunday, police said.

She was taken to Tempe St. Luke's and treated.

Replacement for Tempe Justice of Peace sought

By J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

The search is continuing for a replacement for Tempe Justice of the Peace Fred Ackel, who resigned last week to avoid an investigation into sexual harassment charges.

According to Maricopa County Supervisor Ed Pastor, a committee is being named to review resumes and recommend a list of candidates to fill the vacancy.

Pastor said some of the committee members have been named already and the entire committee should be selected by the end of the week.

"We are naming a committee made up of members of the bar . . . and one or two lay persons from the justice courts," Pastor said.

"The process is going to be: anyone who is interested (in the position of justice) can submit a resume," he said.

Pastor said the committee should complete its list of candidates in about two weeks.

From the committee's list, Pastor and Supervisor Tom Freestone will recommend a replacement to the entire Board of Supervisors, which the Board will then approve or disapprove.

Usually the supervisor whose district the post is in makes the recommendation for a replacement.

However, the district boundaries are being redrawn and Tempe, which lies in Freestone's district, but will soon become part of Pastor's district. Both supervisors are working together to locate a replacement.

Until a justice is found, Mike Jones, an attorney and former worker for the state attorney general's office, will fill the vacancy. Jones has said he is not interested in holding the post permanently.

The replacement will finish out Ackel's four-year term, which expires in 1991. Ackel, a Republican, was re-elected to the post for his third term in 1987.

University science center to replace forest building

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

The U.S. Forest Service is being moved to NAU to make way for the $25 million Barry M. Goldwater Center for Science and Engineering scheduled to begin construction next year.

The move of the forestry lab, located north of Noble Library, will allow the currently federally leased land to be purchased by ASU. Planning for the 188,000 square-foot Goldwater building is not yet completed, but ASU officials predict that the lab, which has been at ASU for 25 years, will be moved in 12-15 months.

"We've enjoyed our working relationship over the years with ASU and will continue to work cooperatively with them as well as with the University of Arizona in Tucson," said F. Dale Robertson, chief of the U.S. Forest Service. "Overall, though, we feel the Flagstaff location best fits our long-term needs and is most cost effective.

The ASU site currently has a staff of about 35 people conducting research in water erosion and soil loss as well as ways of meshing fish and wildlife needs with forestry and grazing practices.

Leonard DeBano, project leader at the ASU site, said the multi-level forestry program at NAU, together with campus-owned property, should provide a better location for the lab. But he estimates the lab will remain at ASU for at least three more years.

He added that employees at the lab "would be afforded the opportunity to move if they desire, but that will depend on their own personal situations."

According to ASU President J. Russell Nelson, Congress approved 60 percent of the $25 million cost of the Goldwater center. The remaining funds are expected to be appropriated within a year.

Impeachment Hearings

Margie Babcock/StatePress
Ray Cambell, left, a Phoenix resident, argues in front of the State Capitol Monday with a Mecham supporter who refused to identify herself. Cambell said he dislikes the governor because "he has embarrassed the state."

Wolfson loan

Editor's note: The following text is taken directly from the Gov. Mecham's report to the House Select Committee.

Mr. Wolfson and Mr. Gregan had been introduced to me as two people who were interested in a sizable contribution to the campaign. Subsequently they contributed $15,000 each to the campaign, which was in fact, the two largest contributions in the campaign itself and they were incidentally properly identified in all disclosures. Out of that came discussions and later an agreement for Wolfson to loan the campaign $350,000.

During the campaign, Barry Wolfson and his associate agreed to loan the Mecham for Governor Committee $350,000. In consideration for the loan they wanted assurances that it would be paid back. Mr. Wolfson drafted the letter, which I signed, containing, in general, some of the terms of the loan, and it is my understanding Mr. Wolfson further prepared the promissory note/form which was to be signed payable to Evan Mecham and endorsed back to Barry Wolfson.

The statement in the letter 'your agreement will remain confidential' meant nothing more than Mr. Wolfson wanted some assurance that his name would not be indiscriminately bantered about to other people who may seek him out for unsolicited campaign contributions or other charitable causes.

Mr. Wolfson clearly made known his view in this matter both in the newspaper and on television programs. He stated that it was never his intent nor did he discuss with me or my staff, to infer violation of any campaign disclosure laws.

The only reason I had in signing this letter, prepared by Mr. Wolfson, was simply to respect his wishes in a contractual agreement which is common in any business transaction. Had the intent been otherwise there would have been no back up or supporting documents to show the transaction and every detail listing the date the money was received, from whom it was received, the bank account they were deposited in, the name of the bank account and the payments remitted to Barry Wolfson in repayment of this loan.

Every penny coming in and every penny going out was meticulously accounted for, and all records showing the details of this transaction have been kept and available from the instant the loan was made for any responsible person to review. Exhibit No. 1: Mr. French had a copy of the ledger card kept by my brother, Willard Mecham, to show these transactions. There was no attempt to Barry Wolfson or Hugh Gregan, his partner.

THE "SECRET" BANK ACCOUNT
When Mr. French addressed the House another bank account, often referred to as the "secret" account, he carefully opened up to receive the $350,000, he carefully 'secret' to suggest something improper, a word 'laundering,' which I highly resent. In fact, nothing is further from the truth than that I knows this.

Protocol fund

My information comes strictly from those involved. The reports were the legal advice of the attorney general's office of John Shaddege, and that the corporation solicited as well as ticket money for the Inaugural. I was informed that it would be handled in a proper manner and would be in compliance with the law, and the funds would be used to pay campaign debts.

I was told that when the inaugural ball was held, approximately $92,000 remaining, which would be used to reduce campaign debts. I then became aware that there have been a problem with the use of the funds as a result of Proposition 130.

My first suggestion when any question of these funds was to return them to the people, so there would be no question. I was informed that it would be almost impossible to do because of the legal advice of the attorney general's office involved and that part of the money had been used for the Inaugural. I was assured that it would be legally correct, and that, although we may or may not be able to use the funds for campaign notes, I would have them at my disposal for other purposes. That is the total gist of my information. Long came into my office as the chairman of the Inaugural and said he was handing the funds over to Edith Richardson. His instructions to me were that the funds could be used in any way we desired as long as it was used in a political campaign or to pay campaign debts.

I remember very early on someone from the Department of Commerce suggesting that we set up a Protocol Fund out of part of the Inaugural fund. I wanted to use part of the fund in the Department of Commerce. We told them no. They were any sense of the word. They were given to be used by me in any of the activities surrounding my activities as governor that I could not use state funds for.

Carlson threat

Unfortunately, Mr. French's statement was incomplete and misleading.

... On Friday, Nov. 13, 1987, at approximately noon time, Lt. Johnson stepped into my office with Fred Craft and Dr. Burke. I was preoccupied with other matters at the time, but within the next minute or two Lt. Johnson said something to the effect that Peggy told Officer Martinez, who relayed it on to Lt. Johnson that Lee Watkins had said some threatening words or made a threat about Donna Carlson to Peggy Griffith. From what I hear I believed it to be a personnel matter, and inasmuch as Lee Watkins worked for Max Hawkins at the Department of Administration, I simply suggested that this department look into it, talk to the parties involved, and see if the matter could be resolved. Nothing was ever said to me in the presence of Dr. Burke or Fred Craft that there was any kind of death threat, a boat ride or a possible felony-type of thing.

I heard nothing more about the matter until that evening, when Mr. Hawkins notified me that he and spoken to both Lee Watkins and Peggy Griffith and after reviewing the matter, he believed there was nothing to it. His words were to the effect that it was a lot of hot air and would go away. I had no reason to doubt him and simply dismissed it from my mind.

On Sunday, Nov. 15, at approximately 11:15 in the morning, I received a phone call from Ralph Milstead. The conversation was fairly brief and Milstead mentioned to me that Peggy had told Frank Martinez then told Beau Johnson, who in turn spoke to Lt. Col. Phelps, who in turn called the Attorney General's office.

Officer Martinez states in his report that Peggy Griffith told him it was Wednesday, November 11th, in the parking lot, that Lee Watkins told her of Donna taking a long boat ride.

Peggy Griffith, in her Affidavit delivered to the committee chairman, states it didn't occur Wednesday, Nov. 11, but occurred Thursday, Nov. 12; that this threat did not occur in the parking lot but occurred on the 8th floor of the State Capitol Building.

Terri Fields states that she was present with Peggy Griffith on November 12th in the parking lot with Lee Watkins and Lee Watkins made no death threat of any kind.

Mecham

In a 15-page statement refuting French's allegations, Mecham said "there is nothing evil, nothing sinister," about his actions.

On the Wolfson loan, Mecham said there was no attempt to keep the $350,000 loan secret. Willard Mecham lumped the loan together with another $125,000 in loans under Mecham's name because the governor would be ultimately responsible for repaying Wolfson, the governor testified.

Mecham testified that his borrowing of $80,000 from a protocol fund for his automobile dealership was a "mistake in political judgment."

"Beyond that, however, the disgraceful part of this is the extent that accusers have gone to try to make something where there is nothing," he told the panel.

On alleged death threats against former aide Carlson by Lee Watkins, also a former Mecham aide, the governor said he was never told that Watkins' statements mentioned harming Carlson.

Mecham testified, "Nothing was ever said to me . . . that there was any kind of a death threat, a boat ride or a possible felony-type thing."

Following Mecham's statement, a lively round of bantering between the governor and Skelly ensued, prompting Mecham attorney Murray Miller to enter the debate.

After he was cut off by Skelly, who told Miller that he could only advise Mecham, not make statements to the committee, Miller said, "You're keeping me here as another potted plant."

Skelly retorted: "The last thing you would ever be is a potted plant, Mr. Miller. We're not filming Perry & Mason."

Skelly later said he objected to Mecham's tactics because the governor had two weeks to notify the panel that he would not respond to counsel's questions.

"I don't think the governor himself, despite all his repeated public statements, was really interested in answering questions," Skelly said. "If the governor were interested in answering questions, what difference does it make does if he answers Bill French's questions or Paul Eckstein's questions?"

"What was lost and it's an unfortunate thing, is that the public, the citizens of the state of Arizona, have a right to expect the governor to be open and to answer these questions."

Rep. Gary Giordano, R-New River, said he was pleased with the compromise Republicans agreed to in granting Mecham his wishes.

"We want to make sure that no one thinks we're not accommodating the governor," he said. "We're going along with what his perception was about what he thought the conditions were for him to come here."

After Mofford set the recall election date, seven people jumped into the race. But each will need 3,336 valid signatures to qualify for the election.

The seven candidates for the recall election are: Ilias Kostopolous, Tempe; Calvin D. Harris, Chandler; Robert Greeley Barnes, Phoenix; Norman F. Bauerle, Scottsdale; Frank G. Vanpell, Phoenix; Earl M. Cooke, Phoenix; Robert Winn, Queen Creek and Carolyn Warner, Phoenix. Former U.S. House Minority Leader John Rhodes is considering running.

Party affiliations are not listed on the recall ballot.

Sun Devils stay undefeated despite errors

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

Gloomy not only described the weather on Monday, but the action at Packard Stadium as well. The Sun Devils blew out Cal State-Northridge, 13-4, in a game that will soon be forgotten.

Not that the Devils looked bad, 13 runs on 14 hits is nothing to sneeze at. But such a lopsided game, with eight total errors thrown in, is never easy to watch.

ASU broke out on top in the first inning. Singles by John Finn and Kevin Higgins, a sacrifice fly by Mike Burrola, and two Matador errors gave ASU a 2-0 lead. The Burrola sacrifice was ASU's first of the season, and first of three on the day for the Devils.

Left-hander Brian Dodd started the game for ASU and went five innings for his first win of the season. Dodd gave up one run on four hits and walked four.

Entering the fourth inning, ASU had a slim 3-1 lead. Steve Willis led off with a double to left-center, pushing his hitting streak to six games. What he began was an inning in which the Devils would send 11 men to the plate, scoring seven of them.

During that fateful fourth, left fielder Ricky Candelari hit his first home run of the season. With Dan Rumsey running from first base, Candelari lifted the first pitch over the right field fence for a two-run homer.

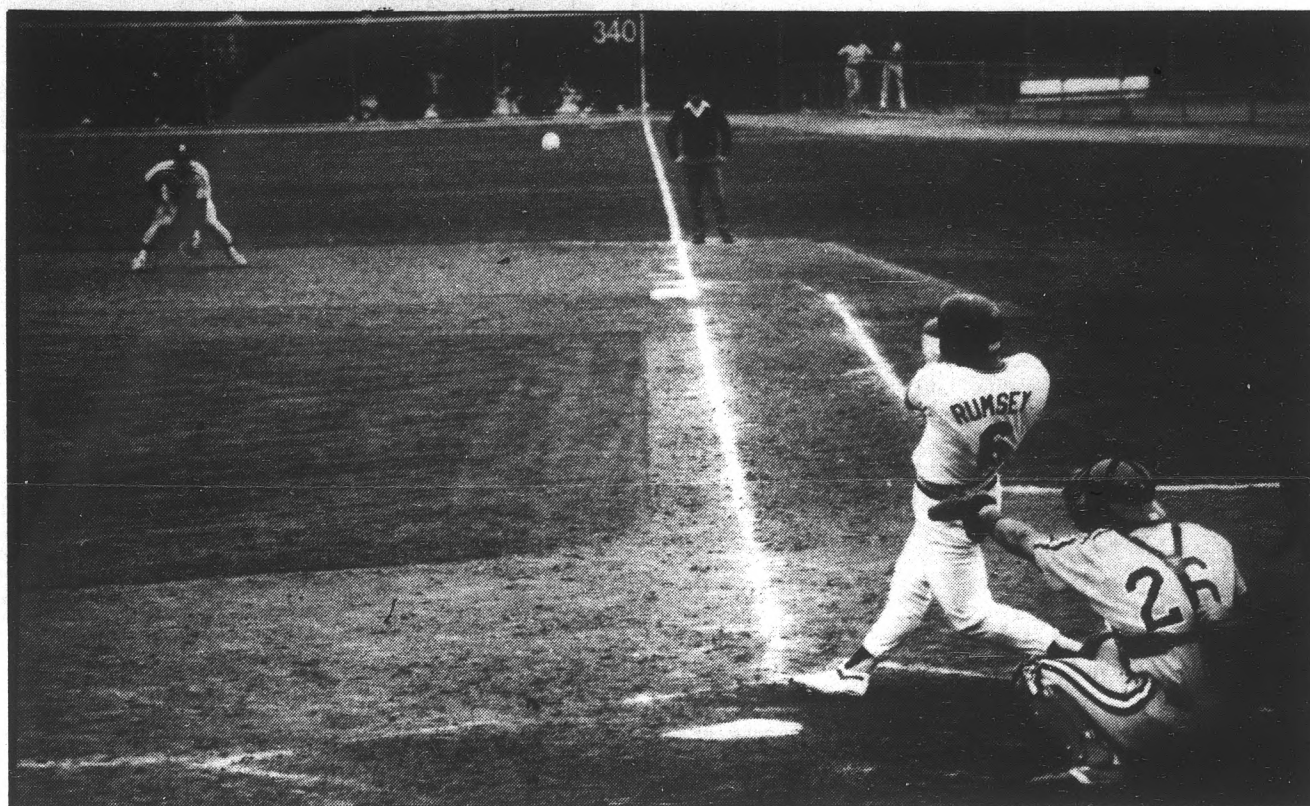

"I kinda made a mistake," said Candelari. "It was a hit-and-run and I was supposed to hit that ball on the ground."

If the ball had not gone out, he might have had reservations in coach Brock's dog house, but a two-run homer is hard to argue with.

Candelari went 2-for-3 with two walks. Defensively, he played pretty well and said he loves left field. However, Mike Burrola is nursing a sore back and may return to left when feeling better. But Candelari's early playing time is a good investment.

"He's definitely one of the bright spots," Brock said. "It's good for us that he's getting the opportunity to play. We're very encouraged with his progress."

ASU reliever Rob Mattson entered in the sixth inning, with a very safe 13-1 lead. Mattson pitched the rest of the way, allowing three runs on four hits. The split-fingered fastball, his "out-pitch", has not been as effective lately, and he's experimenting with some different pitches. He was not razor-sharp.

ASU outfielder Dan Rumsey puts the ball in play during Monday's game against Cal State-Northridge. The Sun Devils won the game, 13-4.

"Right now he's just trying to do too many things," Brock said. "It wasn't a bad outing, but I think he's capable of better."

The Sun Devils are now 6-0, equalling their starts of 1982 and '86. ASU's best start of this decade was 9-0 in 1980.

The Devils meet UC-Northridge again at 2:30 p.m. today at Packard Stadium.

Basketball team needs work despite victory over Wildcats

By CHRIS PIRKEY
State Press

A free throw in the last seven seconds by ASU senior forward Shamona Mosley boosted the women's basketball team past the UofA, 65-64, on Saturday.

The game was tied at 64 with 39 seconds left when the Wildcats took possession. UofA guard Greta Naranjo attempted a top-of-the-key shot but missed, and Mosley came up with the rebound.

Mosley was immediately fouled and made the free throw that clinched the game for ASU.

Despite the win, coach Maura McHugh feels the team still needs to improve its performance from the line (ASU was 12 of 21 Saturday against UofA).

"We shoot much better in practice than we do in the games," McHugh said.

Mosley, who nabbed 17 rebounds, just one short of a career high, said she thought the game went well and the team performed up to par.

"I thought we played pretty good," Mosley said. "We executed and did the things like rebounding that we needed to do."

Sophomore center Fran Ciak pumped in 11 points and had four rebounds. McHugh said she was pleased with her performance against 6-4 Wildcat Dana Patterson and felt she had three key baskets that aided the Sun Devils in their win.

"She's done a real good job, especially being physical for us," McHugh said. "She came in the game and got some clutch points for us."

Sophomore guard Carolyn DeHoff chipped in for two points and six assists and executed what McHugh termed a "key steal" in the last few seconds of the game. McHugh called DeHoff a "great defensive player."

Turnovers, often a big factor in previous contests, were again a problem, but not only for ASU. Both UofA and ASU had 20 turnovers, a number McHugh is not happy with.

"We're still at 20 turnovers," McHugh said. "They are one of our biggest problems, and they are really hurting this team."

The Sun Devils are now 7-9 overall (2-5 in Pac-10 play) and have homestands this weekend against Stanford and California. McHugh said size will again be an element the team will have to compensate for.

"Stanford has only lost one game," McHugh said. "They are very deep and very big, much bigger than us. We have to work on boxing them out."

Although California is comparable in size to ASU, both McHugh and Mosley said the team will have to keep playing well to beat them.

"When Cal and Stanford come down, we're going to have to keep playing the same or even better," Mosley said. "We'll need to rebound and execute well, and we should beat those teams."

ASU will play Stanford at 7:30 p.m. on Friday and California at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday in the Activity Center.

Lady Sun Devil Carolyn DeHoff passes the ball to a teammate during Saturday's game against Utah in the Activity Center. ASU won the game, 65-64.

ASU wrestling coach Douglas gears team for national title

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

ASU wrestling coach Bobby Douglas says his squad is getting ready for the national tournament in March.

"We are getting ready to climb the mountain," Douglas said. "If we do well in the next 30 days we will be the national champions."

The Sun Devils are coming off a successful roadtrip in Oregon. The men of the mat managed to pound Oregon, 33-7, and Oregon State, 44-0, and take first place in the Portland State Classic.

Douglas' crew was never tested as it posted seven champions against a tournament field that included several Pac-10 schools.

"They wrestled extremely well," Douglas said. "They are wrestling with a lot of intensity."

ASU named champions at: 118 pounds, Zeke Jones; 142 pounds, Tommy Ortiz; 158 pounds, Dan St. John; 167 pounds, Jim Gressly; 177 pounds, John Ginther; 190 pounds, Mike Davies; and Rod Severn at Heavyweight.

The tournament provided Douglas with several highlights. At the 142 pound division, Ortiz defeated the defending Pac-10 champion. St. John beat a worthy opponent, a two-time Pac-10 champion and All-America.

When the Pac-10 tournament rolls around in March, Douglas said the team should have nine champions.

"I would say we are an overwhelming favorite," he said. "I feel we can qualify 10 people for nationals and have nine (conference) champions. It is an excellent conference and it is going to be a good tournament."

The Sun Devils are gearing up for the national title and Douglas is getting his team ready.

"When we meet everyone in nationals they will see a different Sun Devil team," Douglas said. "All it is now is preparation. We know what we have to do to close the deal."

And the goal that ASU had at the beginning of the season is nearing: becoming the national champions.

"We want to make history and we feel the time is right," Douglas said.

Gymnasts to face UCLA without Baldock

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

The ASU women's gymnastic team will have to compete against the top-ranked Bruins without All-America gymnast Suzy Baldock, in the UCLA Invitational Tournament at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday.

Baldock re-injured her knee during the uneven bars event, which she took first place in last Friday at the ASU Invitational.

Baldock will be in the gym during the week to strengthen her knee, and then will probably have a scope done in two weeks.

"Her knee doesn't seem to be that bad, but she's had so many surgeries on that knee and one on the other," assistant coach Lisa Zeis said. "John (Coach Spini) doesn't want to take any chances."

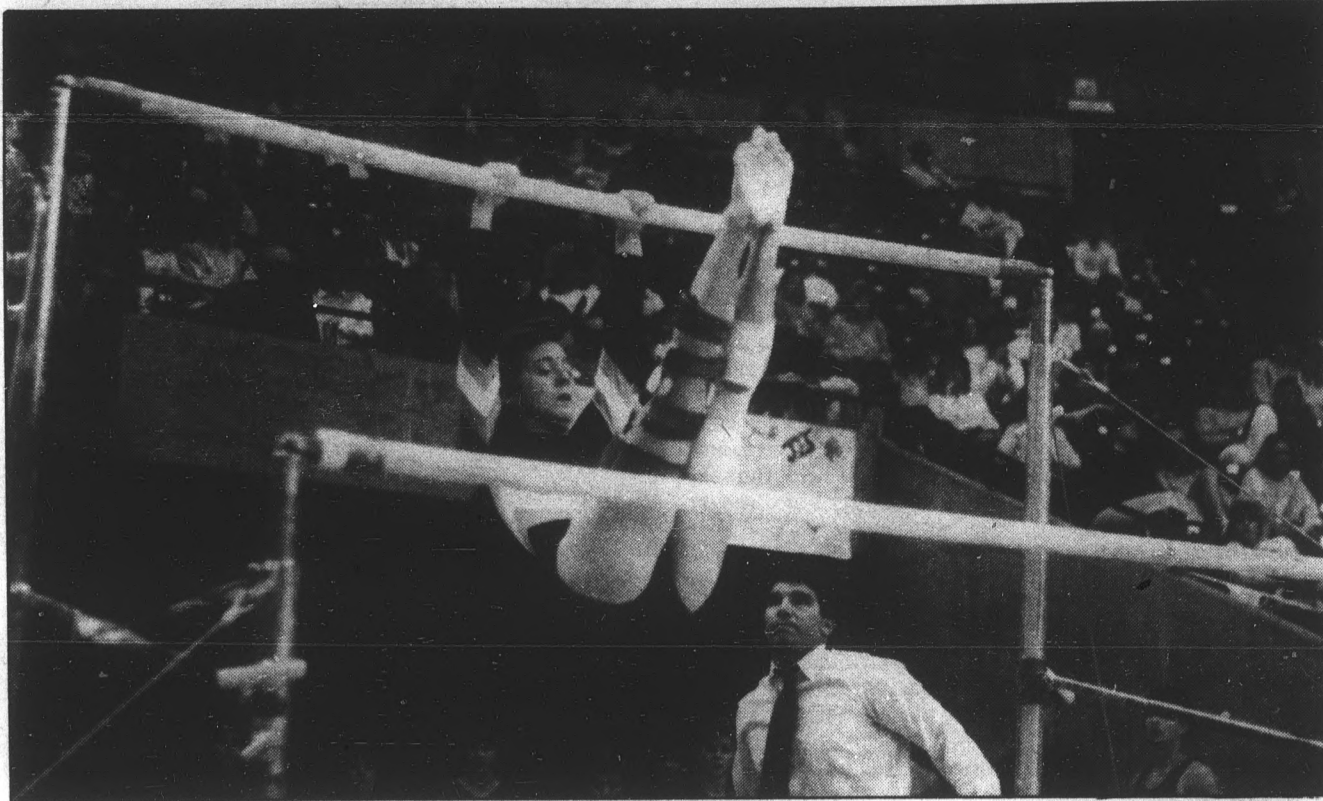

"He wants the team to do well, but he cares so much about the girls. He's so upset, not because we lost the meet, but because Suzy got hurt."

"Suzy is a great competitor and loves the sport — she'll be back," teammate Michelle Colavin said. "She has been an inspiration to me because she is so good."

"It's going to be tough, UCLA is ranked number one," Zeis said. "We're hoping for a good score. We can still get 185-plus without Suzy."

To qualify for nationals, the Sun Devils believe they'll need to score 186-plus points in meets.

After Baldock's season-ending injury, the Sun Devils lost momentum and fell short of their goal. ASU finished with a 185.25 total, and .35 points less than Utah.

ASU gymnast Suzy Baldock competes on the uneven bars during Friday's ASU Invitational in which the Sun Devils' finished in second place behind Utah.

Do you see yourself?

Eating disorders show up in many ways, and are not always obvious. This checklist can help determine if an eating disorder is controlling your life, or the life of someone you love.

- Is dieting the most important area of your life?
- Has food become a power struggle between you and your family or friends?
- Are you unable to eat in a normal social setting with other people?
- If you have lost or gained a great deal of weight, do you feel powerful because of it?
- Do you feel depressed about your body image?
- Have you felt isolated from your family and friends?
- Do others try to get you to eat more, even though you think you look "fine"?

If you answered "Yes" to one or more of these questions, call to set up an appointment for an evaluation. 941-8002. If you have questions for us, please call. We'll help you get control of your eating so you can get control of your life.

Gymnasts

"Basically, we were all shaken up," teammate Colette Anderson said. "It (her injury) definitely hurt us."

"In meets, it always comes down to beam," Zeis said. ASU had performed well in the first two events, vault and uneven bars, before struggling on the balance beam.

ASU finished first in floor exercise, their final event, but did not score high enough for the victory.

"We really had some problems," Zeis said. "You can't win a meet when four girls out of six fall."

"We'll do a lot more sets in practice, before we go to UCLA. The only way to be consistent is to do it over and over again until you get it down."

Although Zeis said they will concentrate on beam, the Sun Devils still have to work at events in which they are doing well.

"We still need to work them just as hard as the other events," Zeis said. "Once you start slacking off, you have to work harder on the other events."

Karli Urban, who topped the competition with an all-around score of 38.00 in four events, will again be looked upon to lead the team against UCLA.

Urban finished fourth in the uneven bars, took third in vaulting and the balance beam, and ended the evening with the top score in the floor exercise on Friday against Utah.

Sophomore Heather Carter will be stepping in to take Baldock's spot in the line-up. Carter will most likely participate in vault, beam, and floor exercise.

"She'll probably compete in three events this weekend at UCLA," Zeis said, "and then she is going to try to work into the line-up on bars, that's where we really need somebody."

ASU will also have to rely on the experience of Michelle Hanigsberg, who is back in the line-up after missing last year because of injuries.

"She's a senior, so she can handle the pressure," Zeis said. Molly Carpenter and Marika Lessieur will add to the Devils' experience and should help ASU over UCLA.

Colavin, the only freshman for the Sun Devils, has added depth to the team and pleased her coaches and teammates.

Although Colavin's performance on Friday was hindered by Baldock's injury, Zeis said she didn't think it will be a factor on Saturday.

"Michelle and Suzy are good friends, but she should be fine," she said.

"I was really excited in my first meet," Colavin said.

"Everybody is a team. We all work together."

"John is just the greatest coach you can imagine. He's always positive and makes you want to work."

Both Zeis and Spini are slowly working the Devils into the season so that they'll reach their peak in time for nationals. Although ASU has only suffered one defeat, the gymnasts still need a little improvement.

"Once you get a few meets down, you get more consistent," Zeis said. "After a few meets, they'll start getting used to the judges and getting in front of the crowd. They're still a little nervous."

"This will be our first away meet, except for UofA. This one will be out of the state."

In addition to UCLA, ASU will compete against Cal State Fullerton, Ohio State, and New Mexico.

Zeis said that when two good teams meet, they usually compete at a higher level.

"When we go against tougher teams, we look for a better score," she said. "They're going to be going for a better score."

Zeis said the Sun Devils will be facing top teams the entire season.

"From now on we'll go against UCLA, Alabama, and Utah again," she said. "It'll be good, because the girls know what they need to do."

ASU junior Paul Linne displays his skill on the pommel horse during ASU's gymnastic competition on Saturday. The Sun Devils defeated Houston Baptist, 273.55-273.25. John Schwab/State Press

Sun Devil gymnasts 'up' after victory

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

The ASU men's gymnastics team will take its victory over Houston Baptist University and try to continue the streak against the Cornhuskers at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday at Nebraska. ASU defeated HBU, 273.55-273.25, on Friday in the Activity Center.

"We improved a lot — I'm very pleased with them," Coach Don Robinson said. "I hope we can continue to improve the way we have been."

"We've moved up about five points each meet. We're going to have to do that again at Nebraska."

"I'm glad we won. It's a big step for us," Sun Devil Paul Linne said. "Our enthusiasm has really improved over the last three meets."

Robinson said the win over HBU was like beating a country, since the majority of their team was recruited from Spain.

"All week long we were joking about playing a Spanish National team," Linne said. "It helped to relieve the tension."

Like many of the gymnasts, Linne has had to deal with injuries that make performance difficult.

"I'm progressively getting stronger and stronger," he said. "I'll be there when we really need it. This is a start."

ASU doesn't have depth to rely on, so the Sun Devils have to be all-arounders and consistently put out top scores in all of the events.

"We do the best we can with what we've got," Linne said. This situation puts a lot of pressure on the gymnasts, Robinson said.

But, on Friday the Sun Devils reached inside and pulled out the win, grabbing top over-all scores from Licurgo Diaz-

Sandi, Linne, Randy Scott, and Jody Newman.

Christian Rhode also helped the Devils with an individual victory on the parallel bars.

ASU dominated over BPU in floor exercise with a win from Scott; in vault, with the top finishes coming from Linne and Scott; and tied BPU on the pommel horse.

"They (BPU) got ripped at high bar, but so did we," Robinson said. "I didn't like the high bar judging."

"I was dissatisfied, but the other coach was violent."

Injuries can be devastating to a gymnast's performance, and the Sun Devils have had more than their share.

Still, even with their bumps and bruises, the Devils are working hard to secure a Pacific-10 Conference championship, and a bid to nationals.

Although a win at the dual meet with Nebraska could be a motivating victory for ASU, the Devils will concentrate more on their score.

It is the overall score, not the victory that qualifies a team to the NCAA National Tournament.

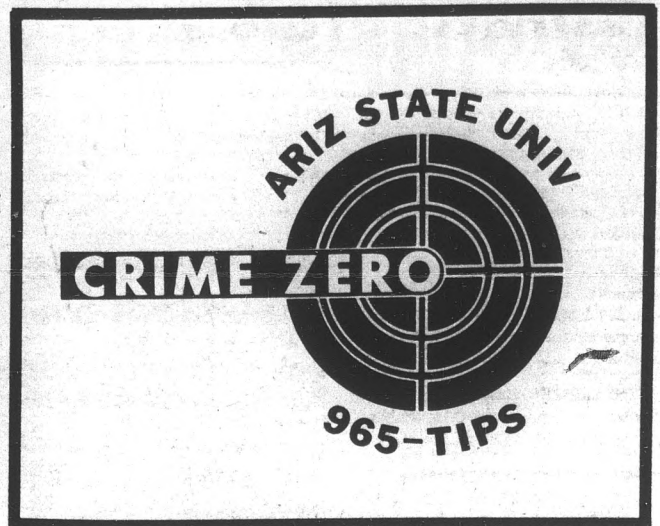

Since the Devils are working under pressure, and with fewer athletes, they cannot afford to have individuals who excel in only one or two events.

In preparation for Nebraska, the ASU gymnasts will be concentrating on their best events, while working to improve in all six areas.

"We need to be as clean as we can this week and work as hard as we can," Linne said. "If we hit, we can beat anybody."

Robinson said that the routines have the right amount of difficulty, and that if both teams hit, ASU will end up with the better score.

"This week we need to do more routines," Linne said. "The more we do, the more consistent we're going to be."

Redskin QB spot up for grabs despite Williams' MVP effort

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Super Bowl heroics may bring glory, gold and the glow of respectability for Doug Williams. They may not, however, guarantee his job.

He knows that next summer, he and Jay Schroeder will renew their battle to be the Washington Redskins' No. 1 quarterback.

"On any given day, coaches make decisions, and they can do whatever they want," Williams said Monday as he accepted the Most Valuable Player award for his record 340-yard, four-touchdown performance. "The bottom line for us coming to San Diego was to win the Super Bowl. Whatever happens after that, I'll be prepared to deal with it."

Williams limped to the podium to accept the keys to the new car that goes with the MVP. His knee, sprained moments before he ignited Washington's record-breaking 35-point second-quarter Sunday, had stiffened up overnight.

It had been a glorious evening for Williams. After leading the Redskins' 42-10 victory over the Denver Broncos, Williams shut off the phone in his hotel room after talking to his dad in Zachary, La.

Williams accepted one visitor, Eddie Robinson, his coach at Grambling. It was an emotional meeting, particularly for Robinson.

"I'm at the age that I didn't know if I would see a Grambling quarterback play in the Super Bowl," Robinson said. "This is the performance he gave us for four years. It's just a different scenario."

As a four-year starter at Grambling, Williams threw for 8,411 yards and led the team to a 35-5 record. But Robinson was just as pleased with Williams' effort against the Broncos, and said it could lead to more opportunities for blacks.

"I think the NFL has finally removed the stigma of a black man playing quarterback," Robinson said. "Now I hope they remove the stigma of a black man being a head coach."
