Senate denies bid to drop Mecham charges

By VICKIE CHACHERE and BEN McCONNELL
State Press

PHOENIX — The Arizona Senate opened Gov. Evan Mecham's historic impeachment trial Monday by rejecting a defense attorney's bid to dismiss the charges, while the embattled governor and his former defense attorney exchanged bitter words over the handling of the governor's case.

Mecham accused attorney Murray Miller of "pre-judicial grandstanding" in response to Miller's comments that new defense attorney Jarris Leonard staged a "one-man coup" in gaining control of the governor's defense case.

"I've heard statements and rumors from the press that I had deserted from the governor, which is further from the truth," Miller said.

Responding to Miller's comments from his Glendale headquarters, Mecham said, "I am both disappointed and disgusted by the prejudicial and unnecessary grandstanding by Murray Miller before the Arizona state Senate today.

"I deeply resent the possible prejudice to me by Mr. Miller's remarks . . . and do not believe that his actions were in my best interest.

"I don't feel too good about what he did."

Miller told the Senate that he did not know he would be removed from the case until late Thursday evening, when Leonard told him that he did "not want me on the team."

"It was my first indication that the Leonard one-man coup would abolish my authority to represent the governor in his defense," Miller said.

"I don't ever want it to be said or ever to be written . . . that I walked away from my commitment, ever," Miller said. "I don't ever want it to be said that I abandoned the governor."

Mecham said he began a search for more attorneys when it appeared trials in the Senate and Maricopa County Superior court might overlap. Mecham said he brought on Leonard, former district attorney Thomas Crowe and Fred Craft, Mecham's Washington lobbyist, to add a "lot more horsepower."

Twenty-nine members of the Senate voted firmly against 11 different motions to dismiss portions of the charges during the nearly-five hours they were in session. It has been 60 years since a U.S. state governor has stood trial by a court of impeachment.

The state capitol grounds, which has been the scene of harried protests by both supporters and opponents of the governor, was unusually quiet Monday morning. About 30 people gathered at the capitol and laid paper railroad tracks outside the Senate to punctuate their claims that Mecham is being "railroaded" by the Senate.

Mecham is being tried on charges that he attempted to hide a $350,000 campaign loan, improperly borrowed $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund and tried to interfere with a state investigation into alleged death threats made by a Mecham aide.

In addition to the impeachment trial, Mecham also faces a March 22 criminal trial in Maricopa County Superior Court on charges stemming from the handling of the campaign loan and a May 17 recall election.

Mecham did win one small victory Monday when a subpoena of grand jury transcripts from the governor's criminal indictment was quashed.

Leonard told the Senate: "This man hasn't dipped his

Harris top candidate for Michigan post

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

ASU Athletic Director Charles Harris is considered to be the leading candidate for the same position at the University of Michigan, the school's newspaper reports today.

The Michigan Daily reports that alumni and athletic department sources at both Michigan and ASU said Harris became the top candidate for the job after football coach Bo Schembechler declined the job offer Monday.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson confirmed Monday that Michigan has expressed interest in Harris.

Nelson said he met with Harris late Monday about the Michigan position, but said he did not expect Harris to leave.

"I understand Michigan may have an interest in him," Nelson said. "I do not anticipate he will leave."

Harris was not available for comment Monday night and Michigan officials also declined to comment.

Schembechler, a long-time coach for the Wolverines and formerly the leading candidate, would have had to give up his coaching position to take the job. He said he loved coaching too much to leave his present position.

The Michigan Daily reports that Harris has expressed "a lot of interest" in the job.

Although Michigan officials thought Schembechler would take the job, Harris is rumored to be the top candidate, along with former Ohio State Athletic Director Rick Bay and North Carolina Athletic Director John Swofford.

"I think the best guy for the job turned it down," Michigan Associate Athletic Director Don Lund said. "Of the other two names I have heard around, one is possibly acceptable, while the other is definitely unacceptable."

"His peers all went this way (thumbs down) on the guy."

Michigan officials and Michigan Board of Regents are expected to offer the job to another candidate on Thursday.

Don Canham, Michigan's present athletic director, is nearing 70 years old, and must retire in July because of laws, according to the paper.

Skiing accident takes coed's life

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A student who had been admitted to ASU but never attended classes was killed Sunday in a skiing accident northeast of Flagstaff, a sheriff's official said.

Kristen Craver, 20, of Newton, Iowa, was skiing with two friends on the Log Jam Run at the Fairfield Snow Bowl about 9:46 a.m. when she lost control and smashed into a tree, said Bonia Ely, a dispatcher with the Coconino County Sheriff's Office.

Craver was airlifted off the mountain by a Department of Public Safety helicopter and taken to Flagstaff Hospital where she died of massive head injuries at 6:34 p.m.

"You couldn't say enough nice things about her," said Linda Smith, a friend of Craver's family who answered the phone at Craver's home.

Smith said Craver had been admitted to ASU but opted to attend the University of Northern Iowa at Cedar Falls.

Tutu, other church leaders released; say they will continue protesting

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu and other religious leaders from all races were arrested Monday while kneeling near Parliament with a petition against government bans on anti-apartheid groups.

Members of a procession Tutu and his colleagues had led recited the Lord's Prayer as police sprayed them with jets of water and loaded them into vans.

All the detainees were freed in a few hours, and the churchmen said they would continue protests regardless of the consequences. Their petition referred to an order last Wednesday prohibiting political activity by 18 major anti-apartheid organizations.

Riot police blocked Tutu and two dozen other clergymen, wearing robes and holding Bibles, as they tried to march toward Parliament from nearby St. George's Cathedral, the main Anglican church in central Cape Town.

General strike against Noriega leaves Panama operating as usual

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A general strike called by opponents of Panama's military regime faltered Monday, with transportation and most commerce proceeding uninterrupted.

But the strike, called to press for the resignation of strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, appeared somewhat more effective in industry.

Intimidation, censorship and an apparent lack of faith in the effectiveness of mass action conspired against the strike's success. The fact that Monday was payday also hurt the strike call.

"There's fear," said a middle-aged bank employee as he stepped from a bus early Monday. "We lack unity to confront these people, who have all the arms."

"The people don't have means to resist," said a woman, a domestic employee, who was walking with him.

Shultz gets inconclusive responses, no agreement during peace mission

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz neared the end of a peace mission Monday with inconclusive responses from Israel and the Arabs on his plan for negotiations this year on a Middle East settlement.

Final word from Jordan, the key Arab country, awaited a meeting Tuesday with King Hussein in London but the king clearly was no longer pressing the Palestine Liberation Organization to form a joint delegation.

Israel was divided between Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's conservative Likud bloc, which opposes the Shultz idea of trading land for peace, and the center-right Labor Party of Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, which favors it.

"We're not at the point where anybody is saying yes or no," a senior U.S. official said. The secretary of state kept his distance from reporters accompanying him on the diplomatic air shuttle.

Swaggart says prayers helped him; thanks worshipers for their support

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart said he would not have survived a week of allegations of immoral conduct with a prostitute had it not been for the love and prayers of members of other religions.

Today, officials of the Assemblies of God began gathering at the denomination's state headquarters, but they refused to say whether Swaggart's case would be discussed.

During a brief appearance Sunday before his congregation at the Jimmy Swaggart World Ministries Center, Swaggart thanked about 4,000 worshipers for their backing.

"I'll never have the words to express to you how much that I care, my concern, for you and my thanksgiving. If it hadn't been for you, we would not have made it. It's just that plain and simple," Swaggart said.

Swaggart's wife, Frances, also thanked the congregation.

Swaggart, who confessed last week to sinning against his wife, again was unapologetic about his wrongdoing. Leaders of his Pentecostal denomination, the Assemblies of God, are considering a rehabilitation plan that will suspend him from preaching, reportedly because he paid a prostitute to pose naked and tried to make a deal with a minister who confronted him about it.

350 people apply for Recreation Center chief

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Today is the last day to file applications for the position of director of recreation and student activities, a job that will include heading the proposed $20 million Student Recreation Center.

James Munoz from the ASU personnel department said Monday that they have received more than 350 applications.

He said a search committee will be formed to review the applications and the job will be filled in one to two months.

The job description includes management responsibilities, campus activity planning, implementation and programming.

Gary Kleemann, coordinator for Associated Students and a member of the recreation center building committee, said he would like to see the position filled as soon as possible.

"I would be happy to see a director appointed," he said.

John Fees, ASASU activities vice president who also sits on the building committee, said the director needs to be selected soon.

"The students voted to build the $20 million center and so they would like to see it staffed," he said. "It is the second most important job to be filled on campus."

The most important vacancy to be filled is the academic affairs vice president, he added.

Fees said the director must be student-oriented, progressive and know the history of ASU activities.

"He needs to make recreation an integral part of student life," he added.

In 1985, students were surveyed on whether or not they would like to see a recreation center on campus. They voted to access a $25 per semester student fee over a 30-year period to build it.

ASASU supported the building of the center, and the proposal was then approved by the Arizona Board of Regents.

After that, the University sold $20 million worth of bonds to finance the building.

A building committee consisting of students, faculty and planning and construction members was formed.

Ground will be broken in late summer and construction will be done by fall 1989.

The student fee will go into effect that semester.

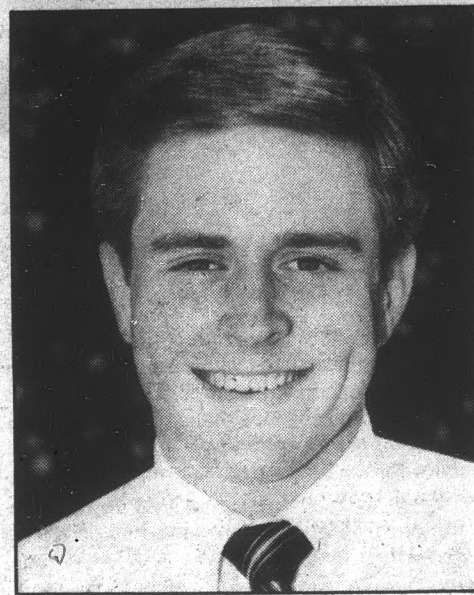

The building will be erected next to the parking garage on Apache where the tennis courts currently are.

The courts will be relocated, so nothing will be lost, Kleemann said.

"I'm excited about the recreation center. It will be a welcome and positive addition to the campus," he said.

UofA hired a director for their proposed recreation center last summer, even though they are behind ASU in terms of building plans.

But Kleemann is not worried about this. "We're different campuses."

Parking rates will not increase despite expansion project

By SCOTT LUCK
State Press

Although ASU is planning a $15 million, 3,000-space parking expansion project, rates will not go up next year, ASU Assistant Director of Parking and Transit Richard Landreth said Monday.

"Our philosophy is not to raise the rates until we need the money," Landreth said. The department is shooting for an August 1989 opening date for the first of two or three new structures.

Landreth said ASU President J. Russell Nelson and his vice presidents' council decided parking fees should not be raised until the University "had something to show the students," meaning a completed structure.

Garage parking decals currently cost $90, as will the new garage decals, Landreth said.

Originally, Landreth recommended a five-year price stabilization program, in which decal fees would not be raised, but he said the need for additional parking will probably mean a rate increase in the future.

A proposal calls for perimeter parking fees to raise from its current $37 cost to $41 to $45 during the next five years. Landreth said that cost would mean "four or five cents" more a day to students.

However, no proposals have been approved by the vice presidents' council or the Arizona Board of Regents, Landreth said.

The University would presently have sufficient parking, except for campus construction, which will have consumed a total of 2,000 spaces in the near future, Landreth said. ASU has about 15,200 spaces with 28,000 decal holders.

The parking department garners $3.5 million in annual revenue and will dole out $2.56 million per year for bonding authority if the proposed project is approved. ASU will have to pay a total of $51.2 million over a 20-year period for its current and proposed parking structures, which cost the bonding companies a total of $24 million.

Bonding is necessary because the parking department is not state-funded and cannot afford to outright buy a garage, Landreth said.

In the future, ASU parking structures will probably be built on existing parking lots because, "they are the only available spaces left to build on," Landreth said.

Because of projected future growth, Landreth said he envisions the massive Lot 59 by the stadium as a multi-level structure. "It may be the only parking available on campus as the University continues to grow," Landreth said.

ASASU

Input on campus construction

When the ASU Associated Students Senate votes tonight on legislation pertaining to the topic of further campus construction, they will be doing far more than showing concern for the preservation of a few historic buildings.

They will be taking a step toward re-evaluating University policies and priorities that affect us all.

If passed, a senate resolution authored by College of Liberal Arts Sen. Patrick McWhorter would call upon the administration to hold open hearings to allow students to voice their concerns about the impact of the ambitious ASU program of capital construction on their lives and education.

And there are concerns to be voiced.

The policy of unrestrained growth on the campus, which is resulting in a declining quality of education, an excessive structure of student fees and fines and an insensitivity to the architectural heritage of the University, is the number one problem facing ASU.

Legislation will also be considered tonight that would enable students to vote in the spring ASASU elections on whether they want to save the embattled home of the School of Social Work — West Hall — from the wrecking ball, as well as a senate bill that would place a more general question about campus construction on the ballot. Combined with the University hearings, these measures would be a major step in letting the administration know that the student body is dissatisfied with current expansion policies. Policies that are being pursued at the expense of educational priorities.

The threatened West Hall, teetering on the edge of the immense pit that is the Hayden Library expansion, is a symbol of a University that has, in many ways, lost its balance and is dangerously close to slipping into the abyss of academic mediocrity.

And if we want to prevent that tragedy, the student body must speak out now.

The effort to obtain the hearings began when a small group of concerned students decided that a line had to be drawn somewhere if ASU is to grow, not only in physical size, but in academic worth and reputation.

Tonight, it's up to ASASU senators to draw that line outside the doors of West Hall.

Ironic

Save West Hall and preserve architectural heritage

Ed Schubert
Asst. Opinion Editor

One night as I passed by the Agriculture Building — the old Science Building, built by the WPA in the 1930s — I stopped and walked over to the entrance and looked up at its three towers of gauzy windows crowned at the top by the word:

SCIENCE

And I felt the sense of awe that the architect must have intended — a feeling of bold optimism mixed with reverential fear of the infinite universe and of man's ability to comprehend it.

And I think I've also noticed that there are certain buildings on campus which, if you take time to listen to them, are able to speak. What they have to say doesn't flow through on an intellectual or even a conscious level, but somehow these buildings — older ones, usually — teach some elemental lesson about grace, beauty, and ... something else ...

It's a little hard to put into words, but at times when I'm feeling stressed from the pressure of classes and deadlines, certain buildings have a calming, reassuring influence. It's something in the smooth, wooden banisters on the stairways in West Hall. Or in the playful yellow, red and orange brickwork of Moeur Administration. Or the secret, quiet atrium hidden away between West Hall and Dixie Gammage Hall.

Do you know about that?

If you're walking between Gammage Hall and McClintock Hall, you may notice a ramp that leads down, turns under Gammage and disappears. Follow it down, and you emerge in a grassy alcove, lined with orange trees, where a large blue urn — taller than a man — stands in surrealistic tribute to the University's first business dean. And there's a fireplace: a tall, white outdoor fireplace rising from a patio behind West Hall.

Overall, the place is so beautiful, serene and unknown that just the thought of it is calming. And I wouldn't mention it, because there are plenty of people who live and work in the area who would like to keep it unknown, and I don't blame them. But the atrium will become history when West Hall succumbs before the University's master plan for development. A secret grove with a white fireplace and a giant blue urn is too impractical for a rapidly growing university in need of classroom and office space.

Must there be a conflict between beauty and utility?

What building on campus, after all, is the most practical? I think the Language and Literature Building, which is just chock full of classrooms, offices, labs, even a full-sized underground theatre.

And what is the ugliest building on campus? Can it be anything other than Language and Literature? The thing's just a box. A big, square, ugly box.

And it's not one of those buildings that have the calming, reassuring influence of West Hall or Old Main. Its drabness, if anything, increases stress; its elevators are no place to be during an anxiety attack. The building has nothing for people who need more than hallways, classrooms, offices and desks. It makes no attempt at elegance or beauty. But you'll never hear anyone propose tearing it down on aesthetic grounds.

(No. Wait. I'll propose it: I hereby urge the University to tear down the Language and Literature Building and put up something smaller and more attractive.)

I think there was a wisdom, long lost, that once informed decisions the University made on questions of architecture. I doubt ASU is any more hectic and stressful today than it was when Old Main was built, or West Hall, or Danforth Chapel. But I think there was an understanding then of the human need for beauty, and that this need is best satisfied in buildings, which are the most permanent and constant part of the University's environment.

The wisdom was lost but, if the recently completed Academic Services Building represents a trend in college architecture, perhaps it is being rediscovered. With its generous patio, the skylights, the pastel pink and orange brick floor, Academic Services is truly beautiful. The building is designed with human beings in mind, with features to make them happy, to satisfy their need for beauty.

Could the University, having just completed Academic Services, really tear down West Hall?

It would be supremely ironic, to say the least.

Taking charge: Presidential change a difficult task

David Broder
Washington Post Group

TAMPA, Fla. — Every presidential campaign encourages the conceit that the moment is at hand for a fresh start. Candidates always have a need to convince voters that their election, in and of itself, will make a great difference to the individual and the nation. Otherwise, why bother to vote?

When an elderly president is completing his second term, as is the case this year, it is particularly tempting to adapt the metaphor of "new beginnings" or at the very least of "change," as most of the White House aspirants have done.

Yet history shows that except in times of true national crisis — of war, Depression or civil strife — continuity is more the hallmark of successive administrations than radical redirection.

The analyses of President Reagan's budget, sent to Congress last week, noted the limited nature of the "revolution" he has been able to achieve in his years in office. If ever a man came to Washington with the explicit determination to alter the status quo, not simply preside over the existing culture, it was Ronald Reagan. And the success he achieved in his first year in cutting taxes and redirecting spending from domestic to defense accounts signaled the seriousness of that commitment.

One should not underestimate the significance of the changes that Reagan has accomplished in both the 1981 and 1986 tax laws and in his budget spending priorities. Nor should the alteration in the U.S.-Soviet relationship or the shift of initiative for domestic policymaking from Washington to the state capitols be overlooked.

But the commentaries on this budget were correct in emphasizing, as Paul Blustein and Tom Kenworthy did in the Washington Post, that "Reagan's budget for his last year in office envisions a federal establishment that, in its broad outlines, is remarkably similar to the governmental structure he found when he came to office in 1981."

Viewed as a share of the gross national product, overall federal spending is the same as in the year Reagan took office, while federal revenues are down less than 1 percent. Within the budget, entitlements are the same, national defense and interest payments are each up roughly 1 percent and discretionary domestic spending is down 2 points. The major building blocks of the welfare state — Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid, for example — have all grown during the Reagan years.

All this does not prove Reagan's insincerity or ineptitude; it simply measures the constraints on any President from the fundamental commitments and policy decisions made and ratified in the years before he took office.

What is true of Reagan is almost certain to be even truer of his successor. As Blustein and Kenworthy wrote, "Reagan's impact on the shape of government is certain to last far beyond his tenure, making him in some ways a three-term President."

The main reason is that the Reagan legacy will include not just a largely undiminished welfare state and a vastly enlarged defense establishment, but a budget deficit and federal debt of a scale no previous incoming president has faced.

In the newly published volume "Challenge to Leadership: Economic and Social Issues for the Next Decade," from the Urban Institute, a Washington think-tank, editor Isabel V. Sawhill writes that "budget deficits have all but ruled out new spending initiatives or tax subsidies to accomplish various public purposes."

"Indeed, at least part of the next decade will have to be spent getting the nation's fiscal house in order, leading to a search for existing commitments that can be curtailed or new sources of revenues . . . Changes in spending and taxes of the sort that might conceivably be within the bounds of current political feasibility (no matter who occupies the White House) will simply not do the job. A new national consensus to do the currently unthinkable (such as raising income taxes or cutting Social Security) will have to be forged."

One possible mechanism for helping forge such a consensus exists: The bipartisan National Economic Commission, chartered by Congress late last year, is just now starting work on a report on the deficit problem that is due next March 1, just five weeks into the new president's term.

You can think of that 14-member panel as the National Fig-Leaf Commission, on the theory that its report will allow whoever is in the White House to say, "Golly, this deficit problem is a lot worse than I ever understood. I guess I'll have to modify some of the promises I made during the campaign."

But no commission will do the job by itself. The challenge for the next president will be a daunting one: to recognize the severity of the constraints that are in the Reagan legacy; to be realistic about the discipline they will require; and to be bold enough and skillful enough to persuade the public to take the short-term actions that may be necessary to make it possible, despite those constraints, to start moving toward vital, long-term national goals.

Those are exceptional demands, so keep them in mind as the candidates move through your states and flash onto your television screens. Talking change is easy; achieving it, for the next president, will be very difficult.

Young academic achievers meet with successful professionals

By SHERRY ARPAIO
State Press

Academically talented students in the seventh through 11th grades throughout Arizona will have the opportunity to meet with successful professionals in a variety of fields at an ASU symposium March 12.

Business people, doctors, artists and other professionals will share their expertise and personal experiences at the symposium, which is sponsored by the ASU Center for Academic Precocity.

"What we're trying to do is expose kids, at a very early age, to a variety of careers so they can decide what they want to do," said Debbie Lawyer, assistant director of the center.

Lawyer said the symposium is designed to help academically talented junior high and high school students decide what they want to do and what educational routes to take to succeed in their chosen careers.

"The kids are able to see just what it's going to take," she said.

Among the speakers are an optometrist, an artist, an architect, a teacher, an attorney, an engineer, an open-heart surgeon and two ASU professors: Ann Kammer, zoology; and Diana Gabaldon, assistant professor of Research for Environmental Studies.

Gabaldon, who has spoken at the symposium for the past several years about the use of computers in science, said one reason she is asked to speak is she is a female Chicano, making her a good role model.

"Parents and students have been very enthusiastic," she said about the program, which will explore education in humanities, mathematics and science.

Lawyer said the symposium, which costs

$25 per student, is not aimed at promoting ASU, but it will familiarize the students with the University, and may indirectly promote it.

She said students and parents frequently ask her about ASU's programs after the symposium.

"It's certainly a way to bring them to campus and introduce them to campus and the people," she said.

"I've been wondering why (the ASU Center for Academic Precocity) doesn't distribute brochures or catalogs on ASU at that time," Gabaldon said.

Supreme Court to rule on sexual assault conviction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether sexual assault convictions may be thrown out because police failed to conduct state-of-the-art laboratory tests.

The court said it will hear an appeal by Arizona officials seeking to reinstate the conviction of a man accused of kidnapping and sodomizing a 10-year-old boy.

The defendant, Larry Youngblood, was accused of kidnapping the victim on Oct. 29, 1983, from a carnival in the Tucson area.

Police said the boy was driven to a house, raped four times and then released.

The boy identified Youngblood as his attacker from photographs shown to him by police. Youngblood was convicted and sentenced to 10½ years in prison for child molesting, sexual assault and kidnapping.

Laboratory specialists found traces of semen on the boy's body and also in clothing he was wearing.

It was not until a year later that the semen was tested to determine blood typing of the assailant. But no blood group substances were found. The semen sample taken from the boy's body was refrigerated; the clothing, which might have contained a larger quantity of semen, was not.

Youngblood was determined to be a secretor with blood type A. That means that his blood group could be determined from his semen.

Impeachment

hands into public funds. He hasn't ripped off the treasury. He hasn't committed high crimes in office, and I urge you to dismiss these articles of impeachment."

No more than seven senators supported Mecham on individual votes, with the firmest denial coming in motions that would have dismissed some of the charges surrounding the campaign loan from Tempe developer Barry Wolfson.

But prosecuting attorney Paul Eckstein responded, "The conduct that has been alleged in the articles of impeachment... are violative of the whole array of criminal statutes."

Leonard argued that on the charge that Mecham tried to stonewall an attorney general's investigation into alleged death threats made by prison construction chief Lee Watkins, that Mecham was not tampering with a witness nor interfering with official proceedings.

Mecham allegedly ordered Department of Public Safety Director Ralph Milstead not to tell Attorney General Bob Corbin anything about Watkins alleged death threat against Donna Carlson, Mecham's legislative liaison who had been testifying before the state grand jury investigating the Wolfson loan.

Leonard said at the time of Mecham's conversation with Milstead, Milstead was not a witness because he had not taken an oath, as most witnesses do.

Furthermore, Leonard defended Mecham's handling of the Wolfson loan, saying that errors on campaign disclosure forms are "commonplace" and that public officials are routinely allowed to amend the statements to correct mistakes.

Mecham contends that his brother Willard, who served as the campaign's treasurer, made a mistake in lumping the Wolfson loan with other loans and had no intention of trying to hide the $350,000.

"You are applying one standard to a public official which has not been applied to others, and you are doing it in a court of impeachment," Leonard said.

On the third charge, the use of the governor's protocol fund, Leonard said there was never any proof that the fund, which was created from receipts from Mecham's Inaugural Ball, was public money. Mecham borrowed $80,000 to help his Glendale auto dealership make a payment on a Tacoma, Wash., property.

Leonard also denied that Mecham tried to hide the loan when the governor failed to file a deed of trust until several months after the loan was made.

Eckstein countered Leonard's statements, saying Mecham's actions were "grossly offensive to the people of the state."

"I must confess I am in a small amount of shock in hearing Mr. Leonard say that these acts... are commonplace," Eckstein said.

"It is not commonplace in Arizona, or in other parts of the country, to obtain a promise of a $600,000 line of credit and to obtain a $350,000 loan under that line of credit and not report it.

"If that is commonplace, God help us all."

The court will resume the trial at 9 a.m. today. The first witness in the case, who has not been identified, will be called later this afternoon.

The Arizona Supreme Court also is expected to rule today on a defenses claim that the impeachment trial should be delayed until after Mecham's criminal trial is concluded.

Girlfriend charged with shooting death of Tempe man

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A 26-year-old Tempe man who was shot in the head during an argument Friday night died Sunday, and his girlfriend has been arrested in connection with the shooting, police said.

Karen Ann Davis, 28, 400 W. Baseline Road, was booked into Tempe City Jail and charged with second degree murder. She is accused of shooting William D. Brown, her live-in boyfriend, said Officer Roger Clay, a Tempe police spokesman.

Brown was airlifted to Maricopa County Medical Center Friday after he suffered a single gunshot wound to the head from a .22-caliber revolver about 9:35 p.m. inside the couple's trailer. He was taken off life-support Sunday, Clay said.

Clay said police responded to the trailer after they received a 911 emergency call about 9:38 p.m. from Davis, who stated her boyfriend had been shot.

He said Davis told police she and Brown had been involved in an argument and he had hit her in the face numerous times before he went to the bedroom and fetched her gun.

When Brown returned, he told her to kill herself. Then the gun went off and he fell on top of her, Clay said Davis told police.

The incident marks the first homicide in the city for 1988.

police report

In other incidents:

•A Mesa man fended off a would-be purse snatcher with a screwdriver after he knocked the suspect off a bicycle and kicked him several times, police said.

Joe Barnes and Christine Bournheimer, of Chandler, were walking in the 2300 block of East McArthur Drive in Tempe when a Hispanic male, 28 to 32 years old, rode up from behind them and grabbed Bournheimer's purse about 10:45 a.m. Saturday.

Police said Barnes pulled the suspect from his bicycle and kicked him several times before the suspect pulled out a knife.

The suspect fled after Barnes pulled out a screwdriver, police said.

•A 72-year-old Illinois man who was lying on a hotel bed with the door open for fresh air was held down and robbed of $3,000 Friday morning, police said.

Police said Andrew Vanko was robbed at the Regal 8 motel, 1720 S. Priest Dr. about 10:40 a.m. by a black male in his 30s with a medium height and build.

•A 22-year-old Apache Junction man was arrested and charged in connection with the sexual abuse of two girls at a Tempe home in the 2100 block of East University Drive, police said.

Michael Bissonette, 1255 N. Sunset, was booked into Tempe City Jail and charged with two counts of sexual abuse.

The girls, 9 and 12 years old, were babysitting at the home and were sexually abused while "playing house," police said. •A 25-year-old Tempe man blew the top portion of his right index finger off when his .357-caliber revolver accidentally discharged while he was cleaning the weapon, police said.

Police said Phillip P. Oates, of the 3300 block of South Terrace Road, thought the gun was unloaded.

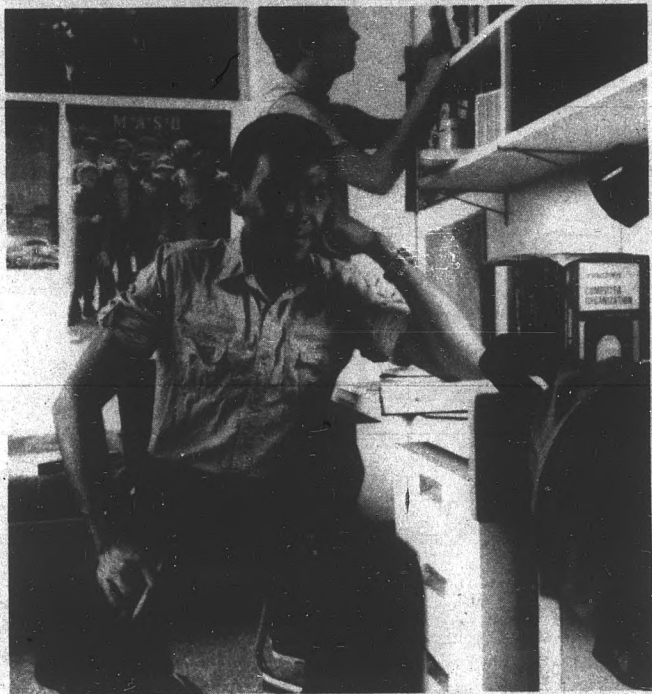

•An ASU student reported he was assaulted by an employee of VIP Security when he attempted to leave 706 Alpha Dr. through a rear exit early Saturday, police said.

Robert E. Johnson, a sophomore liberal arts major, claimed he was struck once in the mouth with a closed fist. There were no signs of physical injury, police said.

•A woman who reportedly suffered amnesia was found in a campus building and taken to the Student Health Center, police said.

The woman was identified as Mary Winscott, 19, of Phoenix. She was returned to her family since she suffered no apparent illness or injury.

"HOW I MADE $18,000 FOR COLLEGE BY WORKING WEEKENDS."

When my friends and I graduated from high school, we all took part-time jobs to pay for college.

They ended up in car washes and hamburger joints, putting in long hours for little pay.

Not me. My job takes just one weekend a month and two weeks a year. Yet, I'm earning $18,000 for college.

Because I joined my local Army National Guard.

They're the people who help our state during emergencies like hurricanes and floods. They're also an important part of our country's military defense.

So, since I'm helping them do such an important job, they're helping me make it through school.

As soon as I finished Advanced Training, the Guard gave me a cash bonus of $2,000. I'm also getting another $5,000 for tuition and books, thanks to the New GI Bill.

Not to mention my monthly Army Guard paychecks. They'll add up to more than $11,000 over the six years I'm in the Guard.

And if I take out a college loan, the Guard will help me pay it back—up to $1,500 a year, plus interest.

It all adds up to $18,000—or more—for college for just a little of my time. And that's a heck of a better deal than any car wash will give you.

ASU drops to No. 11 in latest baseball poll

TUCSON (AP) — Oklahoma State stayed glued in first place in the latest ranking of Division I NCAA baseball teams by Collegiate Baseball-ESPN, but previous No. 2 Arizona State dropped out of the Top 10 after a three-game sweep by California.

Oklahoma State's Cowboys, 7-0, have ganged up on their first seven opponents by a 78-Twenty total score, paced by shortstop Monty Fariss, who hit three home runs while batting .643.

The Cowboys have been in first place in the poll all season.

Miami, Fla., 12-2, moved up from third place to second, followed by Texas, 14-4, up from fourth to third, while Stanford, 13-5, climbed all the way from 11th.

Michigan, still 0-0, remained ranked fifth, and Mississippi State, 1-0, and Loyola Marymount, 15-3, stayed in sixth and seventh place, respectively.

In eighth place was Arkansas, 6-2, which advanced from 12th, while Louisiana State, 7-0, was ninth, up from 15th, and Cal, 15-5, jumped all the way from 24th to 10th.

Rounding out the top 25: Arizona State, 20-5; Texas A&M, 14-2; Southern California, 15-2; Arizona, 17-5; Florida State, 5-2; Oklahoma, 6-1; Brigham Young, 2-0; Hawaii, 8-5; Wichita State, 0-0; UCLA, 12-6; California State-Fullerton, 11-6; Rice, 13-2; Kentucky, 3-1; New Orleans, 6-3, and Minnesota, 0-0.

Xavier enters Top 20

CINCINNATI (AP) — Coach Pete Gillen was surprised and concerned to learn that his Xavier University team has made the Associated Press Top Twenty poll for the first time in 30 years.

Gillen's Musketeers gained national attention last year when they stunned No. 14 Missouri in the NCAA tournament and nearly beat Duke. They've compiled a 22-3 record this year with a schedule that doesn't include any current Top Twenty clubs.

"Frankly, we're surprised that we're ranked so high because there are so many great teams in the United States today," Gillen said. "The parity throughout college basketball is unbelievable."

Xavier was No. Twenty in the AP poll released Monday, its first Top Twenty ranking since December, 1958.

Temple, 25-1, landed 44 first-place votes and 1,234 points from the panel of 63 sportswriters and broadcasters to remain No. 1 in the poll. Purdue, 24-2, with 12 No. 1 votes and 1,185 points, stayed second.

Arizona and Oklahoma, each 26-2, were third and fourth, separated by just 12 points. The Wildcats received three first-place votes and 1,126 points, while Oklahoma had one more No. 1 vote.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 25-3, jumped from eighth to fifth with 905 points, while North Carolina, 21-4, advanced the same number of spots to sixth with 890.

Pittsburgh, 20-4, fell one place to seventh after losing 89-72 to Seton Hall last week. Kentucky rejoined the Top 10 after its 62-58 victory over then-No. 10 Syracuse Sunday. The 20-5 Wildcats, 12th last week, received 786 points.

Harris sends letters to Kerr, UofA

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

ASU Athletic Director Charles Harris prepared a short apology Monday to send to Arizona guard Steve Kerr and the University of Arizona, after ASU "fans" verbally attacked him at Saturday's ASU/UofA basketball game.

During pregame warm-ups Saturday at the University Activity Center, several ASU students and younger kids taunted Kerr with remarks like "PLO," "Where's Your Dad?" and "Go Back to Beirut."

Kerr's father, Malcolm, was assassinated in January 1984 in Lebanon. Malcolm Kerr was president of American University in Beirut.

In the letter, Harris apologized on behalf of the "disillusioned few" and the "mental anguish" Kerr had to face.

The remarks did affect him. Kerr went out and scored 20 points and made 6-of-6 three-point shots in the first half of Arizona's 101-73 victory.

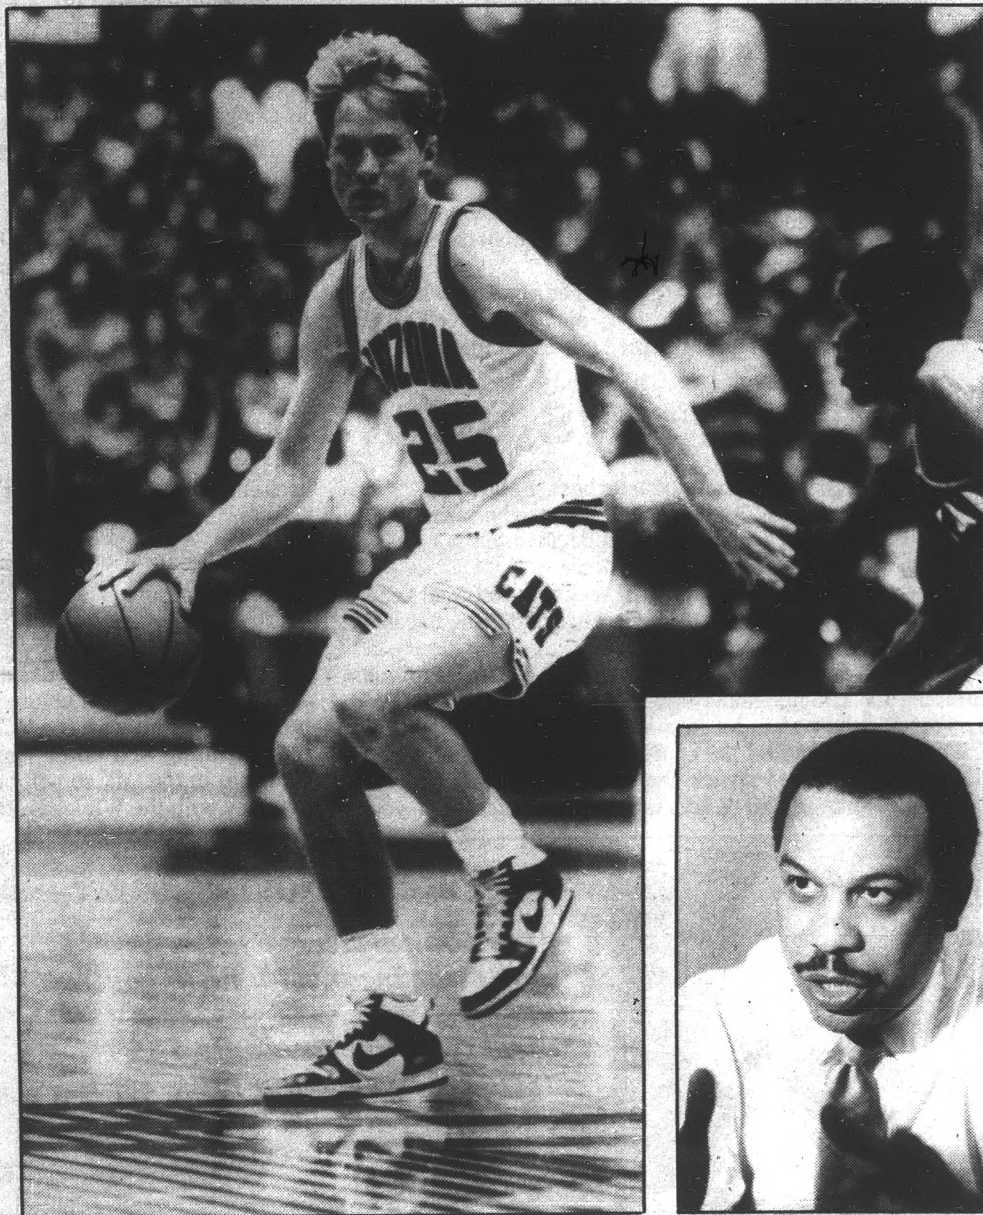

"I was looking for my shot a little bit more," Kerr said Saturday. "At halftime I kind of got control of my temper. Maybe I should get mad more often."

After the game, Kerr called the hecklers "the scum of the earth" and forward Sean Elliot said the hecklers should deserve credit for the loss because the team was upset after hearing the chants.

"There's no place for that in college basketball," Kerr said. "There are some sick people in the world."

The event has made national headlines and Harris said he hopes the ASU/UofA rivalry can be "friendly" in the years to come.

Harris also sent copies of the letter to Arizona basketball coach Lute Olson, UofA athletic director Cedric Dempsey, ASU president J. Russell Nelson, UofA president Henry Koffler, ASU basketball coach Steve Patterson and Board of Regents president Donald Shropshire.

Steve Kerr

Charles Harris

Editor's note: This is the text of Charles Harris' letter to Steve Kerr and the University of Arizona.

Dear Steve:

It is with sincere regret that I write this letter. I would like to extend my apologies to you for the mental anguish that you had to endure because of the disillusioned few at the University Activity Center last Saturday. I refuse to refer to them as fans because they do not dignify the term.

We do not condone that kind of behavior from our ticket holders. I sincerely hope they will realize from this unfortunate incident that it does affect people in horrible ways.

Again, please accept my apologies for you and your family, the Wildcat basketball team and the University of Arizona. All of us respect and admire you and hope that this can be a freindly rivalry for years to come. Thank you.

*Sincerely,
Charles Harris

Suns sport new look; give familiar results

Dave Bigos
Asst. Sports Editor

Winter in the Valley.

It's hard to believe, but there are about three weeks left of this murderously foul weather before spring settles in. The winter visitors are out in full force.

I know this because I can't seem to get a tee time, let alone afford one.

And last week, five more snowbirds flew into the Valley on the tail of a trade-wind.

Phoenix's NBA franchise has a new look. It's a look so unfamiliar that the Miami Herald would have a hard time tailing them.

So, get out the scorecards because it's out with old and in with the new.

Well, almost.

The Cleveland-Detroit-Milwaukee Suns hit the floor on Saturday with a predominately new and young club that gave them a legitimate shot at beating the Washington Bullets.

But it was not to be.

The Bullets, an Atlantic Division powerhouse carrying a .396 winning percentage, edged out the Suns, 116-106

For the Suns it was like spending the first night in a new house. They couldn't wait for that first home-cooked victory. But the energy of the new squad lasted little more than 40 minutes of court time. And when the unpacking was done and the third period was over, the Suns sent out for pizza.

Like a little boy with a new Christmas toy, Suns' coach John Wetzel played his new acquisitions for little more than three periods before getting bored and going back with the veterans.

The Phoenix faceless took a lead far into the fourth period before Wetzel put the familiar names back into the lineup. The old soldiers promptly blew the lead scoring only five points in the last 4½ minutes.

This move put Wetzel in strong contention with ASU's Patterson for coach-of-the-year. There is an intense battle for mediocrity rights going on here for Valley basketball.

It's now Sunday night and the Suns are in Los Angeles for their semi-annual blow-out at the hands of the World Champion Lakers.

Phoenix lost the game, 111-97. Not a bad margin considering Phoenix was without the help of Kevin Johnson. Kevin who?

You know, the guy the Suns got from Detroit for James Edwards. Wait, sorry about that, my scorecard says he came from Cleveland with Mark West and Tyrone Corbin. Even sportswriters get confused.

Johnson was a no-show in L.A. due to a couple of bone bruises in his right foot. The faces are fresh but it seems no one thought to check the bodies.

One fresh face that the scouts managed more than a quick peek at was Craig Hodges. Craig who?

The guy they got from Washington for Edwards and Murray Miller. No, that was Leonard.

It seems Hodges limped in from Milwaukee where he spent a good portion of his time fretting about the tendonitis in his Achilles' tendon. He'll be a big part of the Sun's limp-and-shoot offense we're bound to see a lot of in the future.

The last name to become familiar with is Ron Moore. Detroit sent him packing to the Suns for Edwards. As part of Colangelo's "commitment to the future", Moore was picked after a full 25 minutes of playing time in his illustrious pro career.

The trades appear questionable on the outside and are certainly no miracle cure. This season was shot.

If Suns fans are looking for a winner, give it three to four seasons. There are several draft picks that they will be cashing in on in the next few years.

But for the present, get out your programs and try to follow along.

Young swim team rallies to place 4th

By CRIS NACKINO
State Press

ASU women's swimming coach Tim Hill seems to have found the fountain of youth. With over half the team consisting of underclassmen, the sixth-ranked team swam like veteran leaders.

The Sun Devils rallied Sunday in Portland, Ore., to finish fourth in the Pac-10 swimming championships; just 30 points behind third place.

Thirteen swimmers qualified for the nationals, including the only returning NCAA scorer from last year, Susie Mortenson.

The other qualifiers in three events and the relay included: Missy Allington, Christina Erlen, Jennifer Linder, Nancy Osborne, Jodi Quas, Nancy Schlueter and Michelle Thompson.

The Sun Devils also had several qualifiers in two events plus the relay. These swimmers were Amy Bush, Jenny Howell, Bente Rist and Mortenson.

Hill also will have Kim Staab and Colette Van de Berg competing in the tournament, while Robyn Benincasa will advance for the Sun Devil divers.

Thompson and Osborne, considered two of the top swimmers in the conference, went on to fare well in the freestyle sprints. Bush also finished second in the 100 breast stroke.

"They'll (Thompson, Osborne and Bush) be ranked in the Top 16 in the country," Hill said.

Other swimmers who finished well at the meet include Mortenson, finishing third in the 100-meter breast stroke; Jenny Hou, earning second place in the 200-meter breast stroke; and Schlueter, winning third in the back stroke.

Although the team finished only fourth out of nine teams, Hill attributes the finish to the health of the team.

"Ten of the NCAA qualifiers for nationals were untested and we had some illness at the meet," Hill said.

The level in which the swimmers compete is considered to be one of the toughest in the NCAA.

"Six teams in the conference could be in the Top 10 in the country," Hill said. "It was a real tight meet and we had a lot of good swimmers."

Hill said he remains optimistic about the remaining swimmers.

"We hope to have a few other people qualify this coming weekend," Hill said. "Most are potential finalists."

"Right now our focus is for the nationals."

On March 5, the Sun Devil swimmers will play host to the Sun Devil Qualifier tournament at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

Watters says he wants to play at UofA

TUCSON (AP) — Arizona quarterback Bobby Watters, a senior transfer from Southern Methodist who sustained a broken thumb early last season, has decided to play in 1988, he and Coach Dick Tomey said Monday.

Watters, 5-11 and 184 pounds, will seek an additional year's eligibility from the Pacific-10 Conference under the hardship rule.

He started Arizona's first three games in 1987, directing its combination run-and-shoot and wishbone offense, installed by Tomey, who was in his first season with the Wildcats.

Watters was leading the conference in passing efficiency when his right hand struck the helmet of a UCLA player while throwing in the Wildcats' third game of the year, breaking his thumb. Watters was out for the rest of the season.

Under the hardship rule, a player who has not redshirted can petition to receive an additional season of eligibility if a season-ending injury occurred no later than his third game during the first half of the season.

Watters played two years as a reserve and one as a starter at Southern Methodist before transferring last year after that program was hit with the NCAA's so-called "death penalty" for recruiting and other violations. He joined the Arizona program in the fall, so will be going through his first spring practice with the Wildcats starting March 22.

Softball team finishes tournament with 2-4 record

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

Home-field advantage does not guarantee good performance, as the Sun Devil softball team found out last weekend. Hosting the Arizona State Invitational tournament, the team finished with a shaky 2-4 record.

It brings Mary Littlewood's team record to 8-9 on the season.

The seven-team tournament is designed to provide early season competition before conference play begins. Each team plays each other once, with the winner being decided upon by win-loss record. Cal-Poly Pomona breezed through the weekend at 6-0.

The Sun Devils began things in a tailspin, losing their first four on Thursday and Friday, before rallying to take the last two on Saturday.

Run-scoring has been the Devil downfall. In those four defeats, they scored a total of three runs.

"Our offense is very inconsistent," Littlewood said. "With all the new young people we have starting, they are fairly easily intimidated by opposing pitchers and defenses, even though they shouldn't be, because we didn't see anything above average."

"The problem is psychological, and that's the hardest thing to cope with, because it's so vague. You can't go out and practice some skill to make it better."

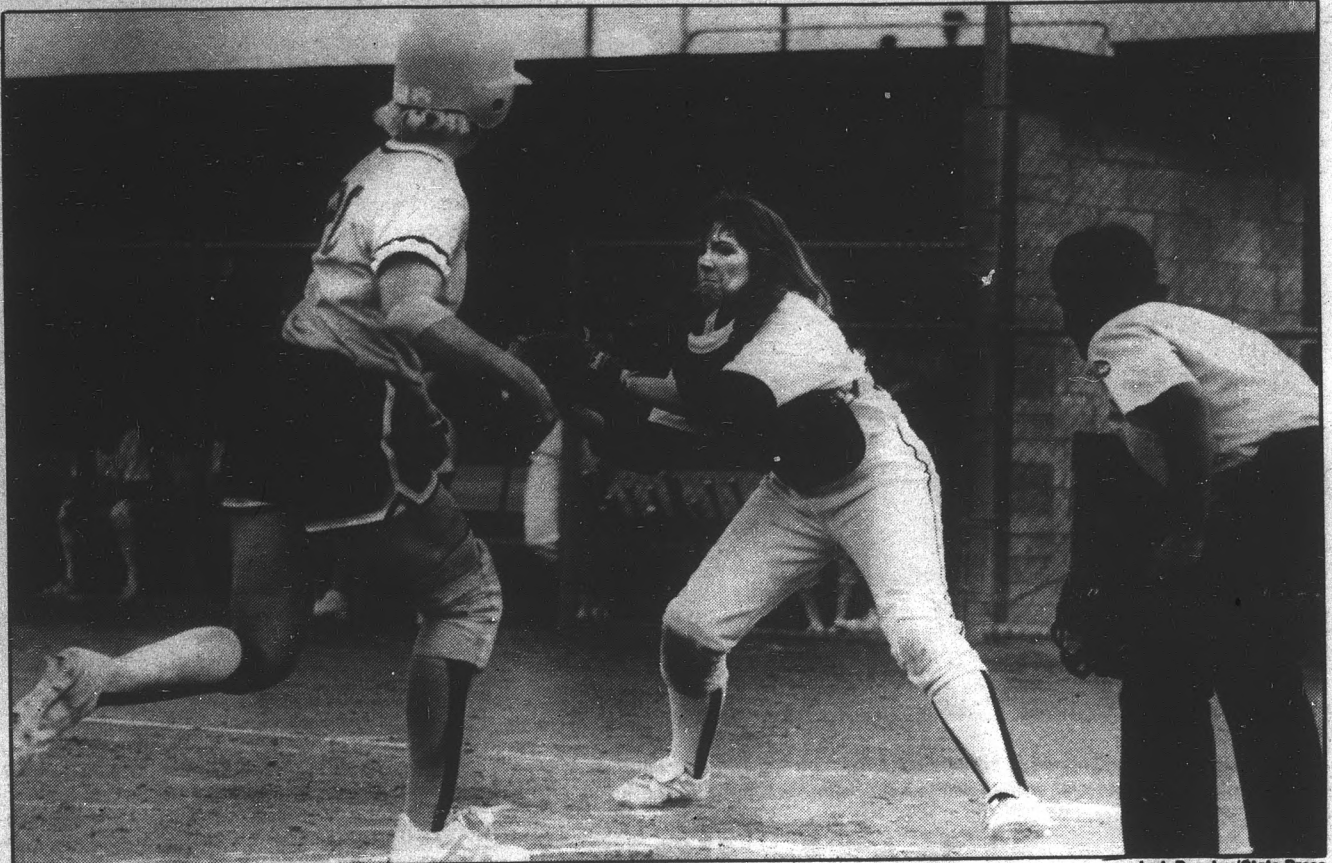

On Saturday, the Devils vented some frustration against Pacific. The game was called in the fifth inning at 8-0, due to the eight-run rule.

ASU continued on the upswing Saturday night with a 2-1 extra-inning victory over U.S. International, the team that handed UCLA, the number one team in the country, its only loss of the year.

"Beating USIU was great for us," Littlewood said. "The fact that we hung in there and fought back enough to win was really good psychologically."

Pitching ace Donna Stewart, who is expected to hurl most of the games, was not sharp over the weekend. As it turned out, the pitching cupboard was not as bare as Littlewood had thought.

"Michele (Gravatt) and Becky (Stevens) had to carry more of the load, and they did a good job," Littlewood said.

Jack Beasley/State Press

ASU's catcher scowls as she prepares to tag an opponent during last weekend's ASU Invitational. The Sun Devils finished 2-4 during the tournament.

"That's very encouraging. They were just as good as the pitchers from other teams."

The most solid performer for the Devils so far this season has been junior Karen Fifield. A 1985 graduate of Scottsdale Coronado High School, Fifield has started every game since coming to ASU.

"She has done an outstanding job all season," Littlewood said. "She's really the only player on the team who has been consistent both offensively and defensively."

Fifield has a knack for getting on base. Over the weekend, she hit .583. And if that were not enough, her on-base percentage was an astounding .700.

Personal bests lift men's gym team

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

Four Sun Devils scored personal bests to bring the ASU men's gymnastics team to season-high marks during two tournaments last weekend.

ASU scored 279.65 at California on Friday and 280.60 at San Jose State on Saturday with the help of personal bests by Paul Linne, Jody Newman, Licurgo Diaz-Sandi and Randy Scott.

"It goes back to hitting our routines," assistant coach Scott Barclay said. "We hit 83 percent our first night. "We have been hitting in the 60s and low 70s in previous meets."

The coaches have said all year that the team would need to hit at least 80 percent to receive a 280 score.

"If we keep going at the rate we have been and consistently score in the 280s, which I think we can, there is a possibility that we can go to nationals," Barclay said.

ASU has improved its team score almost every meet this season. The 279.65 score was a two-point improvement over its score at the Southwest Cup a week ago.

Linne said the team is peaking at the right time. "Everybody is starting to do their part," he said. "The guys have been doing a great job, which is helping a lot."

Linne said that only four of the Sun Devils are all-arounders, but each has shown consistent performances all year.

"If we can continue to hit around 80 percent on routines, we will score in the high 270s to 280s," he said. "Hopefully in the next couple weeks we can get some big scores."

As the only Sun Devil gymnast remaining from the 1986 championship squad, Linne knows from experience what it will take to make it to nationals.

In an earlier ranking this year, Linne was 29th individually in the nation, scoring less than a point away from being in the Top 10.

"That was before I scored a 56 at UC-Santa Barbara, 57 at UCLA and the two scores this weekend," Linne said. "I think it will move me up to fifth or sixth."

With the Sun Devils scoring consistently in the high 270s and looking to score more in the 280s, "It has opened up our eyes a lot," Linne said. "We're all really pumped to do well and to do well in nationals."

Newman, a freshman, is one of the many young Sun Devils who will help the team to make it.

"We definitely expected him to do well," Barclay said. "We think he can do quite a bit more this season."

Linne said Newman has been a factor for the team all year. "He has been pretty consistent and has made a strong showing," he said. "He's starting to get the scores he deserves."

Barclay said the team is on the right track, and has the potential to excel in the last few weeks.

"We have a young team and have a lot of room for improvement," Barclay said. "They have been pushing themselves to reach where they want to be by the end of the year."

Competing against teams like Nebraska, Oklahoma and UCLA has added tension to the meets. But there is also pressure in competing against California and San Jose State, Barclay said.

"It took off the pressure of having to win," he said. "They had to work at getting scores higher than their own — it's a different kind of pressure."

Scores in the 280s will give ASU a better chance to qualify for the NCAA Championship meet. Although this is only the first time the Sun Devils have reached that mark, Barclay said the team has the potential to make it to nationals.

We know we should be scoring up in the 280s each meet — we can go all the way with that," Barclay said. "We are not out of the ball park at all."

"There will be a lot of pressure in the next few meets, but they can do it."

To qualify for nationals, a mixture of five home and away scores are counted. Only two scores can be at home, but all five could be away.

With the two season-high scores, and equally high scores in the last three meets, the Sun Devils are a strong contender for one of the top 10 spots in the country.

ASU will compete at Ohio State on March 6, and will play host to Brigham Young on March 19. The last meet of the year will be the Pac-10 Conference Invitational at UCLA.

Barclay said the head-to-head competition at the Pac-10 tournament carries a lot of weight. Many of the top teams will be competing, he said.

Gymnastics is a team sport at only four Pac-10 universities (ASU, California, Stanford and UCLA) and is a club sport at Washington.

From 1982-86 only four teams competed in invitational. Last year, 11 teams, many from the Western Athletic Conference, entered the tournament.

This year the Pac-10 and the WAC invitationals are at the same time, reducing the representation at UCLA by a small margin.
