

ASU senator involvement 'minimal,' Kunasek says

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Apathy and lack of involvement are symptoms facing Associated Student senators and the ASU student population as a whole, ASASU President Karrin Kunasek said Thursday.

"Participation from the senators has been very minimal," Kunasek said. She based her criticism of ASASU senators on their lack of attendance at ASASU lectures and activities.

Executive Vice President Will Daly, president of the senate, agreed with Kunasek's observation. Daly said he gets frustrated and upset when the senators are apathetic, but he does not get too mad at them because he also misses certain events.

Kunasek has brought up the issue of the senators' involvement in ASASU activities at the last three senate meetings in both verbal and written form. She addressed senate members three weeks ago at the bi-weekly meeting, saying involvement "must start with leaders like yourself."

She cited examples in which she felt senators should have taken more of an interest. She said only six senators showed up for acting Gov. Rose Mofford's breakfast two weeks ago, and the same number attended the student forums set up to select a campus affairs vice president.

"I don't want to rely solely on myself," Kunasek said. "I need the senators' input on issues going on in their individual colleges and on campus."

Daly said the senators' duties in other areas often do not allow them to attend ASASU-sponsored events. "In most cases, senators are more involved than the average student in campus clubs and their colleges, so they don't have time to make it to other activities. It is time consuming," Daly said.

College of Architecture and Environmental Design Sen. Dan Cortez believes Kunasek and Daly have a valid point.

"A lot of times it is hard to make these events. Personally, I have had time conflicts," he said. But Cortez also attributed the problem to lack of interest.

However, Kunasek said this year's overall involvement is greater than last year's, but she added there is always room for improvement.

Daly disagreed, saying last year's senate was much more active. "Last year's senate spent a lot of time up here (in the ASASU office) and were either friends or friendly enemies," he said. "I am just not seeing that this year."

As a result, the senate apathy has led to student apathy, Daly said, adding that the senators should lead by example.

One reason for the overall apathy Kunasek cited is that ASU is primarily a commuter school with an average student age of 25.

"It is a University-wide problem and occurs because ASU is a commuter school," Kunasek said. "They (students) go to school, go to work and then go home to their families."

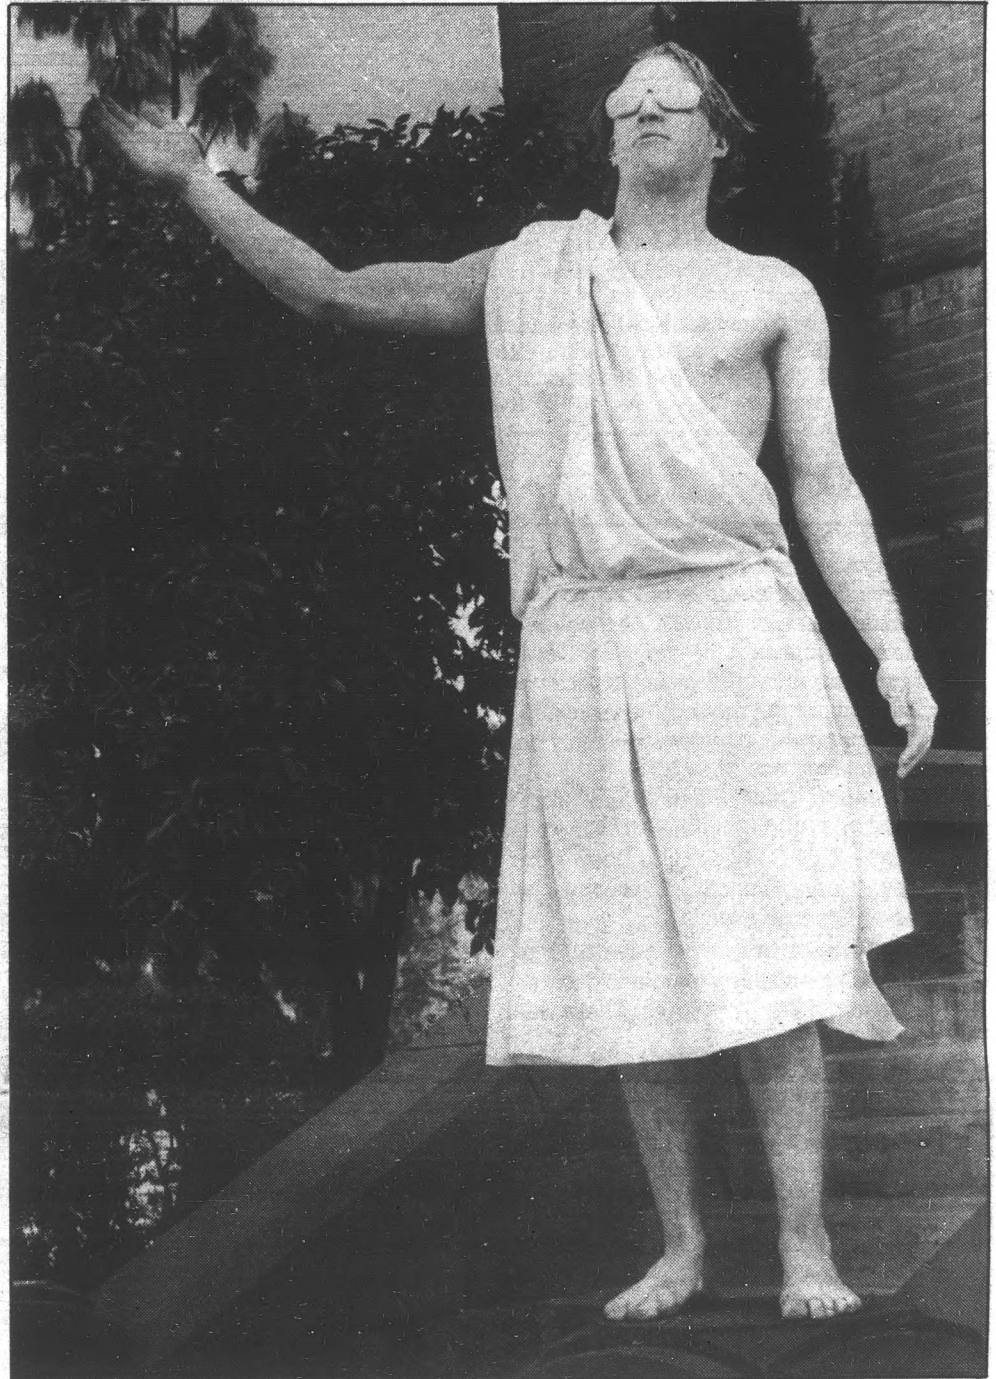

Kunasek said more students are being forced to work because the cost of living is rising every day. Because of the time devoted for employment, time for school-related events and activities is drastically decreased, Kunasek said.

"Employers are looking more and more at extracurricular events," she began. "If students knew earlier on that this was so important, I think they would get involved."

Most college campuses are located in places where they are the center of attention, while ASU sits in the middle of an area filled with activities and action, Cortez said.

The symptoms have been documented and now it is time to find a cure, Kunasek said. She said additional cultural events to build campus community and tradition need to be added to ASU's daily agenda.

Other future ideas include debates between prominent ASU faculty members, she added. "We have the resources on campus, so why don't we use them?"

University revises Papal Mass bill; $19,000 cut

By TRACY SCOTT
State Press

ASU has revised its bill to the Catholic Diocese of Phoenix for Pope John Paul II's use of Sun Devil Stadium for the September papal Mass, cutting more than $19,000 from the original $198,998 bill.

The diocese now owes the University $164,765, despite the diocese's original claim that it would not create a deficit by spending more than $1.5 million for the Sept. 14, 1987 visit.

The diocese gave ASU $15,000 in August 1987 when the contract was signed for the stadium.

Bill Shover, chairman of the papal finance committee and director of community and corporate services for Phoenix Newspapers Inc., said he has not seen the final bill yet but diocesan officials were looking to cut some expenses from the ASU bill.

"We felt there were some things that we weren't obliged to pay," Shover said.

He said the diocese is facing a deficit of approximately $75,000, despite expectations to raise the same amount from post-visit sales of souvenir books and videos.

The ASU office of Public of Events released the new bill Thursday after holding negotiations with diocesan officials earlier this week.

ASU presented the diocese with its original bill in December when ASU and diocesan officials agreed to review the bill for misapplied costs at a later date.

The University will pick up almost $15,000 it spent for T-shirts for more than 1,000 stadium and medical workers and volunteers, $3,264 it spent for stadium-area dorm security and $329 for a hotel room for University personnel.

Pepsico was originally going to sponsor the T-shirts but pulled out of the deal because Coca Cola products are sold inside the stadium. The University did not have enough time to find another sponsor.

The $19,000 will come from the $36,317 stadium rental fee. The University received 50 cents for every ticket to the Mass, as part of a standard procedure for ASU to receive 50 cents on every ticket less than $7. Tickets to the Mass were free.

University officials have not given the diocese a deadline for paying the remainder of its bill.

The Rev. John McMahon, head of the diocese's papal-visit committee, said Thursday that church officials will not comment on the revised bill until next week.

"We just got the bill from ASU and we want to see where we are at," he said.

Mecham: Johnson 'never' revealed alleged threat

Staff and Wire Reports

PHOENIX — Gov. Evan Mecham, in his second day of impeachment trial testimony, contradicted prosecution witnesses' statements that he tried to stonewall a state investigation against a grand jury witness when he knew a felony had been committed.

The embattled governor told the 29 state senators that Lt. Beau Johnson, who had been head of the his security detail, never told him Mecham aide Lee Watkins' alleged threat against former Mecham aide Donna Carlson was a felony.

"If he had mentioned the word felony I would have heard the word felony," Mecham said. "I understand the importance of the word."

Mecham, who at times became angry at prosecution questions, said he did not think he was doing anything wrong when he asked Department of Administration director Max Hawkins, Watkins' boss, to investigate the incident.

Mecham said at that time he thought the incident was just an altercation between two employees.

Mecham, a 63-year-old Glendale Republican, faces obstruction of justice charges stemming from allegations that he told Department of Public Safety director Ralph Miltstead not to cooperate with a state investigation into the alleged death threat.

At the time of the alleged threat, Carlson, who had resigned as Mecham's legislative liaison, had been called as a witness before a state grand jury investigating Mecham's campaign finances.

Mecham testified that he did not tell Miltstead not to cooperate with Attorney General Bob Corbin's investigation, but said he did tell Miltstead, "Tell them we've looked into it and there's nothing to it."

"There isn't a piece of evidence that I had any intention at all to obstruct any kind of justice," Mecham said. State Press reporter Vickie Chachere contributed to this report.

world/nation in brief

American troops fly to Honduras to counter Nicaraguan forces

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first of 3,200 American infantry and airborne troops flew to Honduras today in the most dramatic show of U.S. force in the six-year Nicaraguan war. President Reagan was guilty of "overreaction," Senate Democrats said.

The White House described the movement as "an emergency deployment readiness exercise" triggered by what it called the invasion of Honduras by 1,500 to 2,000 Nicaraguan forces pursuing Contra rebels.

But the Nicaraguan government said again today that its troops had not crossed the border and called on the United Nations and the Organization of American States to "establish what the facts are."

Shortly after 7 a.m., two battalions — about 2,000 troops — of the 82nd Airborne Division from Fort Bragg, N.C., began leaving on a three-hour flight to Palmerola Air Force Base in Honduras, about 125 miles from the reported hostilities.

Those troops and an additional two battalions from the 7th Infantry Division at Fort Ord, Calif., due to leave later in the day, will be stationed at Palmerola.

Most of the men, being ferried on 26 transport planes leaving at 30-minute intervals, were flying directly to Palmerola, but about 800 would parachute into Honduran territory about 5 miles away and then move toward Palmerola, the commander of the 82nd Airborne, Maj. Gen. Carl Stiner, said.

Noriega firmly in charge of Panama; government takes over utilities

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The government on Thursday took over major public services crippled by strikes, and heavily armed soldiers patrolled the capital to keep order after an attempted coup against Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Leaders of the National Civic Crusade, an anti-government coalition, had planned demonstrations Thursday, but the sight of hundreds of soldiers carrying automatic rifles and tear gas canisters apparently discouraged them.

A day earlier, opposition activists and public employees furious about not being paid poured into the streets in the biggest protest yet of Noriega's military rule.

In the face of widespread walkouts by public employees, Noriega's Defense Forces took control Thursday of all major utilities, most government ministries, railroads, ports, airports and the post office.

Irishman buried on St. Patrick's Day; Catholic leaders appeal for calm

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army buried a guerrilla Thursday alongside the trampled graves and tumbled tombstones where a Protestant gunman killed three people and wounded 68 at an IRA funeral a day earlier.

Wearing shamrocks and green or black armbands on a somber St. Patrick's Day, 3,000 mourners gathered in the Roman Catholic Milltown cemetery to bury Kevin McCracken yards from where the gunman opened fire and hurled grenades on Wednesday.

At St. Patrick's Day services, Catholic leaders appealed for calm amid fears the cemetery killings will herald new and prolonged sectarian clashes. For the second day, police reported sporadic rioting and car burning in Belfast's Catholic districts Thursday.

Police kept a discreet distance while funeral speakers, standing amid tombstones knocked over in Wednesday's pandemonium, renewed charges that British authorities and Northern Ireland's mainly Protestant police force colluded in the attack.

Ream cites his odds of winning as '50-50'

By J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

Even though Bill Ream has been a member of the Tempe City Council for 15 years, longer than any other councilman, he describes his chances of winning a fifth term as "50-50" because of his outspoken manner.

Ream, who is one of seven candidates running for three council seats in Tempe's March 22 primary election, said speaking his mind has made him unpopular with some Tempe residents.

"Incumbency picks up a lot of baggage," Ream said. "I've always felt compelled to bring things up, make a statement."

"In many cases I'm the one that is identified with problems, because obviously I'm the one that spoke up," he said.

Ream has run successfully in four previous council elections, but said if he is elected to another term, it will be his last.

"This is positively and absolutely my last term," he said. "There is no way in the world I will run again. But I enjoyed it — I enjoy it now."

However, Ream said he is not ready to sit back and reflect on what he has done. He said there are many problems and issues for him to tackle in his next term.

Ream said the biggest issues Tempe will have to face in the next four years are traffic congestion and enhancing city revenues.

"Obviously, our surveys indicate traffic is the biggest problem on the minds of the community," he said.

Ream said many steps have been taken to relieve congestion, such as the widening of lanes, creation of right turn lanes and adding extra lanes. But he is worried these measures only increase the amount of traffic in the city and may hurt the quality of life in Tempe.

"Is it the desire of the community to move traffic through it, or is it the desire of the community to maintain good neighborhoods and protect neighborhoods from traffic noise?" he asked.

Ream said traffic congestion will not be relieved until traffic is diverted around Tempe.

"We're unfortunately the crossroads of the east Valley and Phoenix," he said. "Many thousands of cars are just using Tempe as a crossroads."

Ream said the state and county must push for the development of freeways in a timely manner.

He said such measures are already being taken to divert traffic. One of the measures includes the realignment of Rio Salado Drive so traffic can go from the Hohokam Expressway to Fourth Street in Mesa without entering Tempe. Another measure is the creation of new freeways, such as the east Papago and the southeast loop.

Ream said another concern he has is with increasing city revenue. He said revenue can be increased by the proposed city-wide bed tax for hotels, as well as increasing spending to attract tourists to the city. The bed tax would increase the sales tax on hotel rooms by 2 percent.

Ream said there are 100,000 people who drive through the Valley every week, and he would like to lure the visitors to stay in Tempe for an extra day. He said city revenues would be increased by 20 percent if visitors stayed an extra day.

He said another source of revenue would be a regional mall that the city is now working with developers on constructing. However, he feels even if the mall was not built, Tempe's redeveloped downtown can serve as a regional mall.

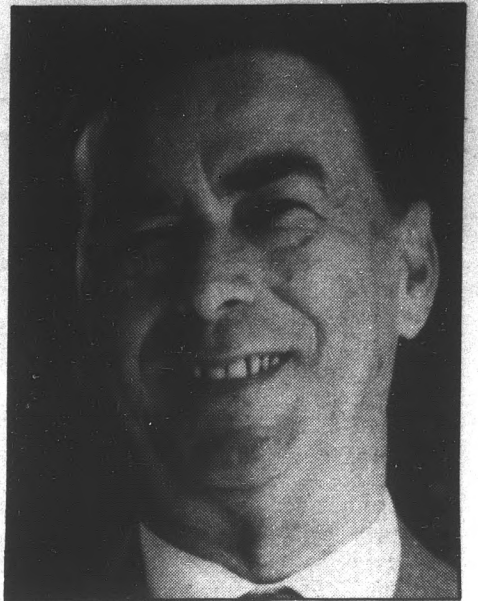

"If we don't get the regional mall, but I think there is a good chance we will, our downtown alone has been developed into a very good tax base," Ream said.

Ream said he would like to see some of this increased revenue go toward increasing cultural activities in the city.

He said Tempe also needs a multi-use facility that would include a performing arts center and theater.

In addition, Ream said he would like to see some development in the Rio Salado area, as well as a park and walkway around and up the side of Tempe Butte.

Concerning the University, Ream said he is very happy with the relationship the city has developed with ASU. He said the joint effort by ASU and Tempe to bring the Cardinals to the Valley is evidence of the working relationship that has developed between the two.

Bill Ream

"Both the University and the city are growing, and sometimes we get so caught up in our own problems we fail to communicate, but on the whole, the relationship is good," he said.

Ream said while he has been criticized for some of the positions he has taken on certain issues, he feels he can be re-elected to the Council because of his past voting record and concern for the city.

"My last four years and the time before that has to be addressed by 'How do you feel about your city?'" Ream said. "And 94 percent of the people in this city would not want to live anywhere else."

Tempe woman robbed of jewelry and raped at knifepoint

From staff reports

A 21-year-old Tempe woman was raped and robbed of $560 worth of jewelry after she was forced into truck at knifepoint and told to drive to a park at the Phoenix Zoo early Thursday, police said.

Police said the woman had been involved in an argument with some friends at After The Gold Rush, 1260 E. Apache Blvd., and was walking to a pay telephone when she was approached by a man about 12:15 a.m.

The suspect displayed a 6-inch switchblade knife and told

police report

her to get inside a white 1980 full-sized truck and drive to the Phoenix Zoo, 5810 E. Van Buren Ave.

Police described the suspect as Hispanic, 19 years old, 5 feet 4 inches and 140 pounds. He was clean-shaven and was missing his left front tooth.

He was last seen wearing a brown sleeveless jacket and blue jeans. He had a St. Joseph's medal around his neck, police said.

In other incidents:

•A stickup man entered a Tempe grocery store late Wednesday and robbed the store of $600 in cash, police said.

Police said the gunman entered ABCO, 1845 N. Scottsdale Road, around 10:50 and displayed a blue steel revolver while he purchased a six-pack of Budweiser.

He demanded cash from two cashiers and pointed the weapon at several customers before stuffing the cash into a pant pocket and running out of the store.

An English assignment and a trip to shop class hell

Dave Miller
Arts Editor

Imagine drinking lots of liquor with one of your professors. You meet at a corner pub, throw back a few, snort lime juice and then go back to her place to listen to Jackson Five singles:

Sounds like a whoopin' good time, huh?
Then imagine further, to a place beyond pounding skulls and skinny dancers.

Imagine it's the next day, and your professor, while in her fuzzy stupor, has made your next assignment.
And it is the worst.

This happened to me, although I never drank with my English prof. I only experienced the hangover.

In an act that may have been alcohol-induced, my professor committed two educational faux pas in almost one swoop.

She not only forced her class to purchase and read a Harlequin-style romance novel she wrote but also to critique it and offer ideas for translating it into a script.

She says it's being considered for a movie.

It's not that it's a bad romance novel, as far as I can tell (I haven't read many — I spent my teen summers reading National Lampoons and Penthouse Forums, as should all young boys).

It seems to be a good piece of work in the genre.
But it doesn't seem educational.

Don't university professors always display scruples of the highest order?

No babe.
My professor, and her novel, will remain nameless for obvious reasons. I'm no hero. Besides, she's bigger than me. But I am a little on the nonplussed side.

Sometimes this happens. We all know professors who write textbooks and require them for their classes, and occasionally they overstep the bounds of assigned reading.

And the majority, I'm sure, act legitimately, using their published material to enhance their lessons.

Others, however, are less coherent in their reasoning.

An example comes from my high school. A shop instructor, Mr. Obitz, was also a closet fan of Hunter Thompson, the famed "gonzo" journalist and substance abuser.

Obitz idolized Thompson, so much that he'd bring grapefruits and Wild Turkey in his lunch pail, and smoke tiparrillos through a long Bette Davis filter between classes.

One summer his creativity was sparked and he pounded out his own piece of Hunter-ish writing. At last! An outlet besides creative swearing!

'This happened to me, although I never drank with my English prof. I only experienced the hangover.'

Obitz returned to school in the fall and introduced his literature to the school board, which hesitantly allowed him to use it in his classes.

He had written a pamphlet on the aggressive use of power tools, at home or in the office.

Obitz, in his Hawaiian go-to-hell shirts and power belt, was not a man to be trifled with but not one to take too seriously, either.

Most of the kids just ignored him.
One, however, didn't. And that's where the trouble started.

You might say Danny Magill was a bit of a troublemaker and maybe even deserved what happened to him.

Actually, you could say whatever you wanted about Danny Magill — lots of kids did, they just didn't say them too loud. Danny was a punk, but he could swipe your lunch, make you do the chicken and ther. steep in your car in record time. The kid had no respect, especially for Mr. Obitz.

But Obitz' shop lessons rigidly adhered to the structure of his pamphlet, and he brooked no criticism of it. "Learn it, live it or love it," he would say.

Danny Magill did none of those. He objected to being forced to spend $2.95 on the pamphlet, which was the going cover price of "Guns & Autos," his favorite magazine.

"Obitz oughtta be movin' pianos," Magill said.

One day in shop, as Obitz was lecturing, Danny played with a copy of the pamphlet. He was daydreaming, wrapping and unwrapping it around a Phillips head screwdriver.

He absent-mindedly poked the contraption in a light socket, and the current blasted him out of his seat. He flew five feet, landing in one of the kids' Foster can lamp.

His hand was smoking, and his hair had been braided.

He seemed astonished and even more so when Obitz padded him for misbehaving. "Blow up my pamphlet, will you!?" Obitz said. "Why I oughtta . . ."

For Obitz there was no good end to the story. His pride had been damaged, and the school made him pay for a new light fixture out of his pamphlet royalties. He was bitter, tired and angry.

Danny, however, had discovered a new form of entertainment. The girls also liked his braided hair.

Now, I'm not sure what this incident has to do with professors forcing students to purchase their literature, but I am sure there is a nasty parallel in here somewhere.

There is a lesson to be learned from the horrible experiences of Mr. Obitz for professors who assign questionable published materials to captive audiences.

Perhaps I should leave it to wonder.

Or perhaps I should crank up my power tools next week in class.

I probably don't need to, though.
I'm sure I've already got my prof's attention.

Living nightmare

Editor:
If only I could hear the words "Hi Mom!" again. If it could have been me and not him. I lost a son over the Spring Break. Nothing can ever happen so terrible. We truly loved and respected each other.

Dylan Phillips was an ASU freshman. He loved being here and truly enjoyed the friendships he formed here. I leaned on those friends these last few days, and they responded in their caring so much — I know that Dylan had chosen wisely.

I'm really saying that they cared and I care what happens to all of you, because this could have happened to any one of you and it never should.

Dylan was killed on a "College Tour" Mazatlan 1988 Spring Break package sponsored by Cerkevenik-Anderson Travel, Inc., 2544 N. Seventh St. in Phoenix. 11,000 students a year go there from 40 colleges around the country, to get a break from the pressures from school.

Please investigate the conditions of these tours carefully before you make a decision to take this kind of trip. It is an unsafe Mexican train that looks like a freight train. There are hundreds of students on board. Each traveler is given six pages of instructions delineating the rules and regulations on the train. However, few of the conditions prevailed, nor did the enforcement of the rules by tour or train personnel.

To refute the rules listed: they state that "Mexican Law and the Mexican train system will no longer allow anyone to bring liquor on the train." However, students brought coolers of liquor and, if you paid off the Mexican train employee, you could bring anything.

Supposedly, "the train system is strictly enforcing the rule that there is no walking from car to car with your beer in hand." There were no Mexican supervisors on board to monitor this. The train was totally unsupervised. One boy was walking on top of the train. Many students walked between cars as the train was moving at normal traveling speed.

"After 10 p.m., the porters will not let anyone pass from car to car, so make sure you are in your proper car by 10 p.m." My son left his friends at 10:30 p.m. to go to another part of the train. He fell between the train (cars). There were no porters seen by his friends to stop anyone from doing anything.

The lighting totally blacked out several times. There was no lighting on the platform between cars, part of the train became unhitched and the train had to go backwards to retrieve it, the train made unscheduled stops so Mexican peddlers could come on and sell beer, and the bathrooms were unsanitary. The regular passengers on the train were seedy. Students were robbed and bothered by them. This train was totally out of control.

The students I spoke with said the only member of College Tours they saw was walking through the train giving out coupons for free cocktail parties. I quote the flyer: "If you miss the train. P.S. You will need a big bottle of Mexican tequila for the bus ride, you can give the driver the 'worm' from the tequila bottle."

You are striving to be responsible adults and also to have fun in your college years, but these conditions are beyond what you imagine you can handle. This was not a "fun tour" but a living nightmare and death trap.

Powerful stepping

Editor:
At the beginning of this, the spring semester, I had to fight tooth and nail to be admitted to the College of Education. This after I had passed all three sections of the Pre-Professional Skills Test easily on the first try, as well as meeting the minimum GPA requirement and the minimum hours requirement. I finally was admitted but at the ASU West campus 45 minutes away.

I am not the only one in this predicament. Approximately half of the students in any one of my classes also make the commute.

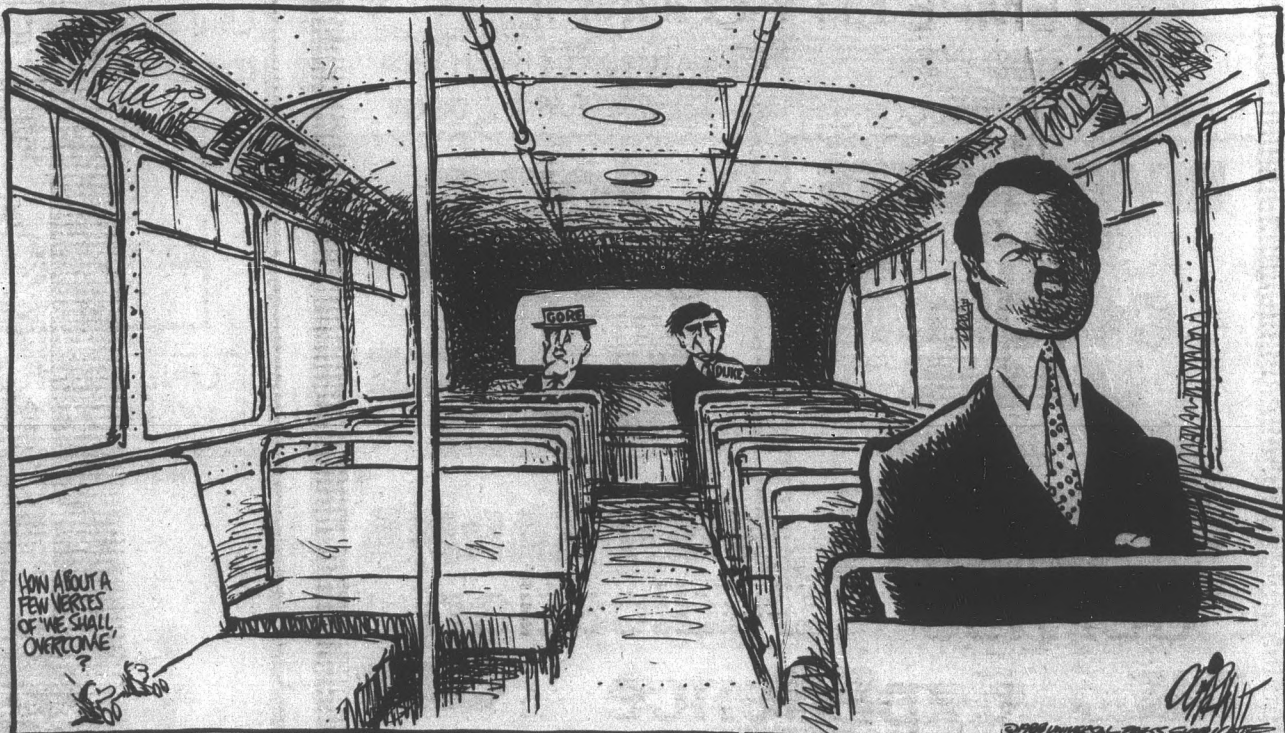

Lyndon Searfoss, after telling me I could get in to the teachers preparation program, changed his story and said that I could not. He said there were too many applicants, but now only two months later they want to open the college up to more students.

The administrators in the College of Education obviously have no regard for the students who they take advantage of at every turn. Although the College of Education is by far the worst, other students should also be aware that when this college changed the rules on me after I had been in for two years the University backed them all the way.

If you think because you have rules specified in your catalogue you are safe from rule changes that affect your degree work — think again.

This is just another instance of the powerful stepping on the powerless.

Presidential line-item veto could add to conflict

David Broder
Washington Post Group

CHICAGO — In a campaign generally devoid of specifics, Vice President George Bush has been strikingly clear on one thing. He will make the quest for presidential line item-veto authority part of his drive for the White House.

Like many of Bush's other thoughts, this is a hand me down from Ronald Reagan, who has argued for eight years that if he had the same authority to veto individual items in appropriations bills in Washington that he had in California, he could slash the budget deficit. "Why not give the president of the United States the same power that 43 states give their governors to cut down on wasteful spending?" Reagan has asked.

Well, why not? It's not a partisan issue. Kansas Sen. Robert J. Dole, Bush's main competitor for the GOP nomination, has endorsed the item-veto, but the idea has strong Democratic antecedents. It first appeared in the constitution of the Confederate States of America. In his 1952 presidential campaign, Adlai E. Stevenson asked, "Is it too much to hope that our federal government may soon adapt this priceless invention of Southern statesmanship?"

All of which makes extremely pertinent the skeptical study, "Prospects for the Item-Veto," by Ronald C. Moe of the Congressional Research Service, just published by the National Academy of Public Administration. After analyzing the experience with the item-veto in the states, he concludes that its adoption at the federal level would have dubious effects as an economy measure but radical consequences for our system of government.

Among other things, Moe says, an item-veto would "profoundly alter the relationship of Congress and the president, to the advantage of the latter . . . increase the number of formal confrontations between the branches . . . (and) precipitate a whole new field of litigation between the legislative and executive branches."

Proponents say the line item-veto would allow a president to eliminate wasteful, pork-barrel spending projects now buried in catchall appropriations bills, which he cannot veto without jeopardizing vital functions or, at the extreme, shutting down the federal government.

That sounds plausible, but the state experience is equivocal, Moe said. A 1985 study he cites concluded that spending in states without an item-veto "is not higher, and may be lower, than in states with some form of item-veto."

What is clear is that the item-veto changes relationships between the executive and legislative branches of government. In his Sacramento days, Moe says, Reagan found it "a major bargaining tool" in making his own deals with individual legislators, often undercutting the democratic leadership of the legislature in the bargain.

"As governor," he wrote, "Reagan was able to accumulate political capitol with individual legislators through not using the item-veto. In one-on-one meetings with the governor, they would find themselves mortgaged in the future by the governor's not so subtle indication that he had decided not to item-veto a favorite project of the member as something of a favor. They often left the meeting with the feeling that they 'owed him one.'"

The fear that an aggressive president could use an item-veto to threaten or lure individual congressmen into giving him his way is the reason most congressional Democrats have opposed Reagan's entreaties on the issue. But such conservatives as Rep. Mickey Edwards (R-Okla.) also oppose it as an unwarranted extension of executive power. Moe's study will deepen their doubts.

Item-vetoes mean increased confrontations between the branches, Moe points out. Now, presidents choose the occasions for vetoes with care, and Congress "goes to considerable length to avoid (provoking) them," because both side recognize that the stakes in such showdowns are very large.

This leads to a great deal of formal and informal negotiating before a bill takes its final form. Once the item-veto is available, the negotiation is likely to be postponed until after the bill has been enacted, and the president sits down with individual legislators or groups of legislators to dicker over specific items.

And that leads Moe to the conclusion that political conflicts are more likely to be exacerbated than resolved by the item-veto. "The item-veto, billed as an instrument of accountability, may actually serve to diffuse and confuse accountability by constantly shifting the onus of action to another body: from the executive to the legislature; from the legislature to the executive; and from both political branches to the courts."

That fear may be exaggerated. But it is hard to challenge Moe's conclusion that, "Whatever else may be said about an item-veto amendment to the Constitution, it cannot be described as simple cosmetic surgery to correct a flaw made visible by institutional age. However limited in impact the item-veto might prove to be in the financial realm, its potential to alter permanently the political relationship between the president and Congress is enormous."

Future dynamics

Creativity foundation of tomorrow's finest jobs

By LAURIE SMITH
State Press

So what are you going to do when you finally get out of ASU?

For some people, security is enough. For others, the promise of jobs without impact and originality are as frightening as the prospect of watching the same episode of "The Colbys" night after endless night.

Safe, semi-lucrative, 9-to-5 — is that all that awaits once the struggle for the degree is complete?

Not for those with imagination.

As the world shrinks through communication technology and expands through space exploration, it gives birth to a dynamic group of careers, ranging from earthquake engineers to nuclear pharmacists.

And, in truth, the search for those innovative jobs of the future may be as entertaining as the jobs themselves.

Today more than ever there is an overabundance of "career guidebooks" that "guarantee" the eager college grad the career of his dreams.

Some books focus on more traditional jobs, targeting graduates concerned mainly with security.

Luckily, for those more adventurous people, there are other guides that target graduates in search of careers through which they can fully exploit their unique skills.

Those are the careers that Elizabeth Fowler, author of "The New York Times Career Planner," promises her readers.

The "Planner" outlines the most intriguing and promising careers, citing "the 101 best opportunities of tomorrow."

According to Fowler, jobs with such unusually striking titles as nautical archeologists and robotics engineers are becoming as common as real estate agents and tax brokers.

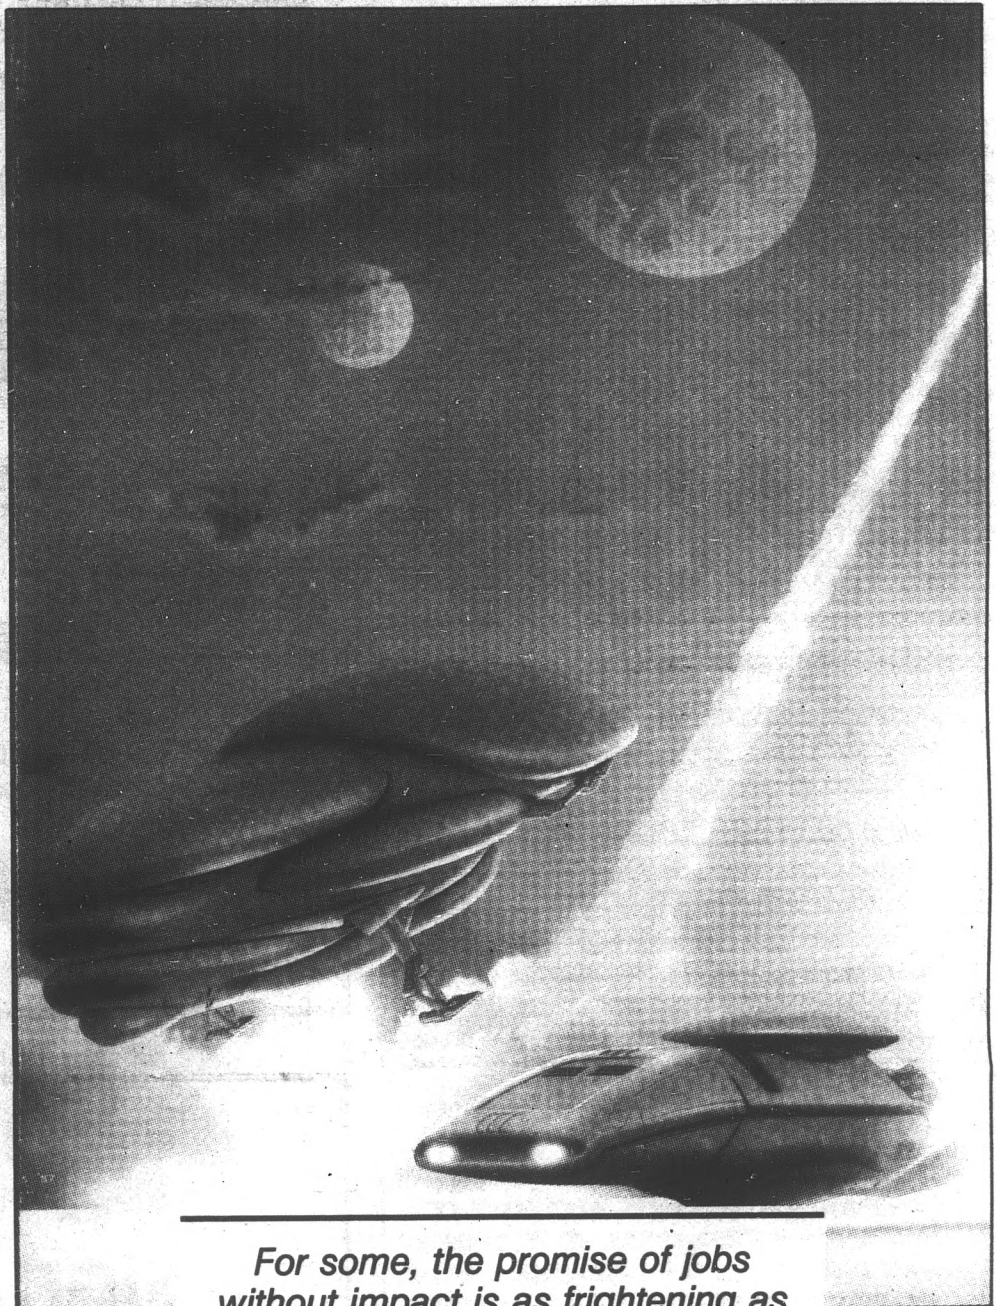

Just to give you a taste of what's out there, the following is a sample of some of the more innovative titles listed by Fowler.

• Ceramics experts — No, this doesn't mean a career in analyzing pottery or arranging bathroom tiles. Rather, these experts design the heat-resistant tiles that form the outer skin of spacecrafts. A generous salary — $40,000 to $60,000 — is included in the title.

• High-rise experts — Perfectly good job if you're not afraid of heights.

• Human-factors experts — These people are a strange combination of psychologists and consumer-needs analysts.

• Imaging Scientists — No, not imagining, imaging. Imaging is a fast-growing field for professionals interested in anything from television to computer graphics to satellite surveillance.

For some, the promise of jobs without impact is as frightening as the prospect of watching the same episode of 'The Colbys' night after night.'

• Palynologists — These guys spend their time studying rocks for signs of oil deposits and are in high demand in Saudi Arabia. In other words, if you want to go where the money is . . .

There's no excuse left for suffering through day after day of monotony under the pretense of earning a living when the future offers the adventurous graduate career challenges unlike any in the past.

In the words of Tom Robbins, "If you take any activity, any art, any discipline, any skill, take it and push it as far as it will go, push it beyond where it has ever been before, push it to the wildest edge of edges, then you force it into the realm of magic."

Stones guitarist heads baseball festival

By HOWELL J. MALHAM, JR.
State Press

The American Cancer Society has a knack for working miracles.

They've proved it for years in their perpetual battle against one the world's most persistent afflictions.

Now they're doing it for rock and roll.

They've made it possible for Valley residents to catch a glimpse of priceless rock history by bringing Rolling Stone guitarist Ron Wood and rock pioneer Bo Diddley, and their "Gunslinger" tour, to town.

It's just one part of the first four-day "Cactus League Baseball Festival" at Southbank Business Park, Interstate 10 at University, which continues today through Sunday, March 20.

Mary Jo Duvall, Public Information Director for the Society, said the festival combines food, rides, entertainment and baseball in an attempt to raise funds for their foundation.

"Basically, it's something we thought would be fun, and also would raise funds for the American Cancer Society," she said.

Along with an impressive list of live entertainment and an abundance of festive food and drink, players from the Cactus League teams will be present each night to sign autographs and photos.

Batting cages and speedguns will be on hand for all to enjoy, as well as a chance to win a trip to Chicago for a Cubs weekend.

The live entertainment kicked off St. Patrick's day in a traditional style with Irish folk music. U2, however, was nowhere to be found.

Tonight, country music fans will have a chance to sport their Stetsons as Eddy Raven brings his down-home sound to the show at 8:30 p.m.

The highlight of the festival will be Saturday night when the sounds of the "Gunslingers" take over.

Wood, making his second musical appearance in the Valley this decade (this time, without the Stones), has temporarily teamed up with Diddley for a short "slinger" tour of the States.

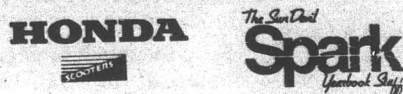

Duvall said they will be a major part of the fair's attraction.

Chuck Hall and the Brick Wall will open for the "Gunslingers" at 6 p.m.

Admission is $4. Festival hours are from noon to 11 p.m. today and Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Cary Grant memory mussed in debacled film revision

By MIKE RITTER
State Press

Webster defines "original" as "occurring first; not copied or imitated; creative and inventive."

If you are an avid filmgoer these days, this word is undoubtedly an alien concept.

Tri-Star's latest release "Switching Channels" is the fourth film version of "The Front Page." More specifically, it is a remake of the Cary Grant and Rosalind Russel version entitled "His Girl Friday."

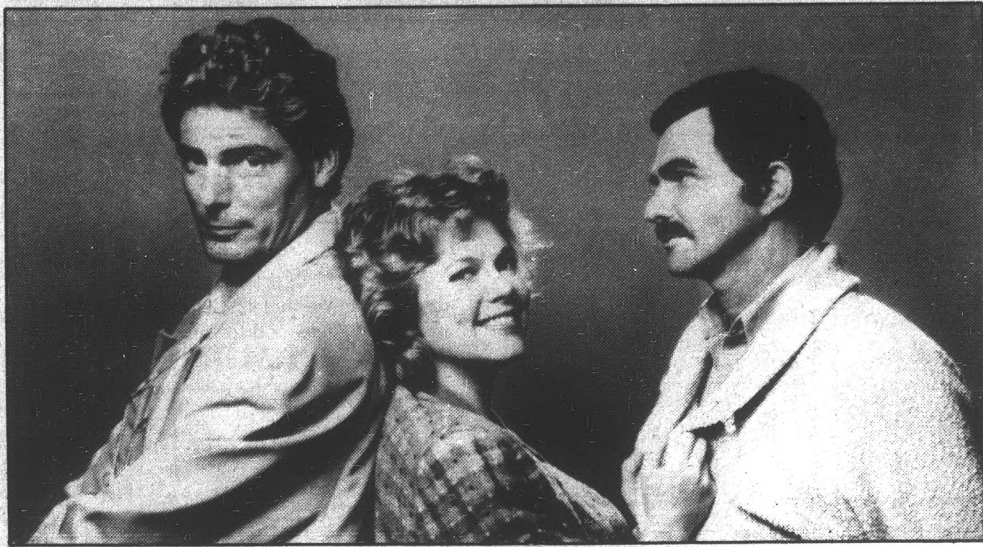

This film is yet another glaring example of Hollywood deja vu — a peculiar phenomenon in which remakes and Roman numerals dominate the movie marquee.

"Switching Channels," featuring Burt Reynolds and Kathleen Turner, is actually a remake of a remake of a film adapted from a play based on a story written over sixty years ago! In Hollywood terms this is known as a "fresh idea."

Burt Reynolds plays John L. "Sully" Sullivan, a devoted if not blatantly unethical director of a cable network news program.

Kathleen Turner is Christy Collieran, Sully's star reporter, largest ratings-getter and ex-wife.

After years of the fast-paced and often hazardous world of television journalism, Christy decides to throw in the mini-cam and settle down to raise a family with sporting goods magnate Blaine Bingham (Christopher Reeve).

Christopher Reeve, Kathleen Turner and Burt Reynolds star in "Switching Channels."

Convinced that Christy will regret giving up her journalistic calling — and that he will equally regret losing his star reporter — Sully scrambles to thwart the marriage.

He eventually lures her back to cover one last story, the execution of a man (Henry Gibson) who unwittingly killed a police detective. Meanwhile he schemes to unravel her matrimonial plans as well as her fiance's nervous system.

Kathleen Turner gives a spirited imitation of Rosalind Russel. But although she is the only one of the three stars who breathes any energy into the picture, her performance — like the film itself — is just an expensive copy of a much better original.

Reynold's character actually appears to have been downplayed and takes a backseat to Christopher Reeves' painful portrayal of the GQ fiance.

Perhaps the writers didn't have enough confidence that Burt's comedic savvy could stand up in the shadow of Cary Grant.

They were right.

"Switching Channels"

(out of four)

Rated R

Comparing this film to the original may be unfair, but it's difficult to avoid — there are just so many original versions out there!

With the much funnier "Broadcast News" playing at local theaters and "His Girl Friday" available in most video stores, "Switching Channels" has nothing new to offer.

The script does contain a handful of good laughs and is all in all a valiant attempt to bring 1920s yellow journalism into the video age.

But the question still remains: why did anyone bother?

ASU Ice Devils battle Bruins, bill collector

While the ASU Ice Devils play their last home series this weekend, the team will be battling two opponents: UCLA and the bill collector.

The Ice Devils end their season with games at 5:15 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. Sunday at Tower Ice Palace, 40th Street and Thomas Road in Phoenix, but need good crowds because the team is in financial trouble.

Don Carlson, a goalie for the Devils, said the team is just trying to get by and has not even had enough money to afford practice.

"We need to get enough people out for both games to pay for the ice," Carlson said. "When we played Cal State-Fullerton we had the largest crowd of the year (about 500) and everyone had a great time."

Tower Ice Palace is located in Tower Plaza and admission is two dollars, $1.50 for ASU students with an ID.

Wrestlers 3rd after 2 rounds at tourney

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

AMES, Iowa — The opening day of the 58th annual NCAA Championship concluded Thursday with ASU holding down third place with 24.5 points after two rounds, just one point behind first-place Oklahoma State.

The Sun Devils advanced six of seven qualifiers in the quarterfinal round in front of 10,095 here at Hilton Coliseum in Ames, Iowa.

"We have never been in this position before," ASU coach Bobby Douglas said. "I think we're wrestling well, but the key round is the quarterfinals. It is when conditioning really starts to show."

ASU is looking to make history by claiming its first NCAA championship.

"We're on our way," 118-pounder Zeke Jones said. "We have paid the price, now it's time to collect."

"Arizona State has been outstanding," Iowa coach Dan Gable said.

Douglas' squad got big wins from All-America Mike Davies (190 pounds) and Jones.

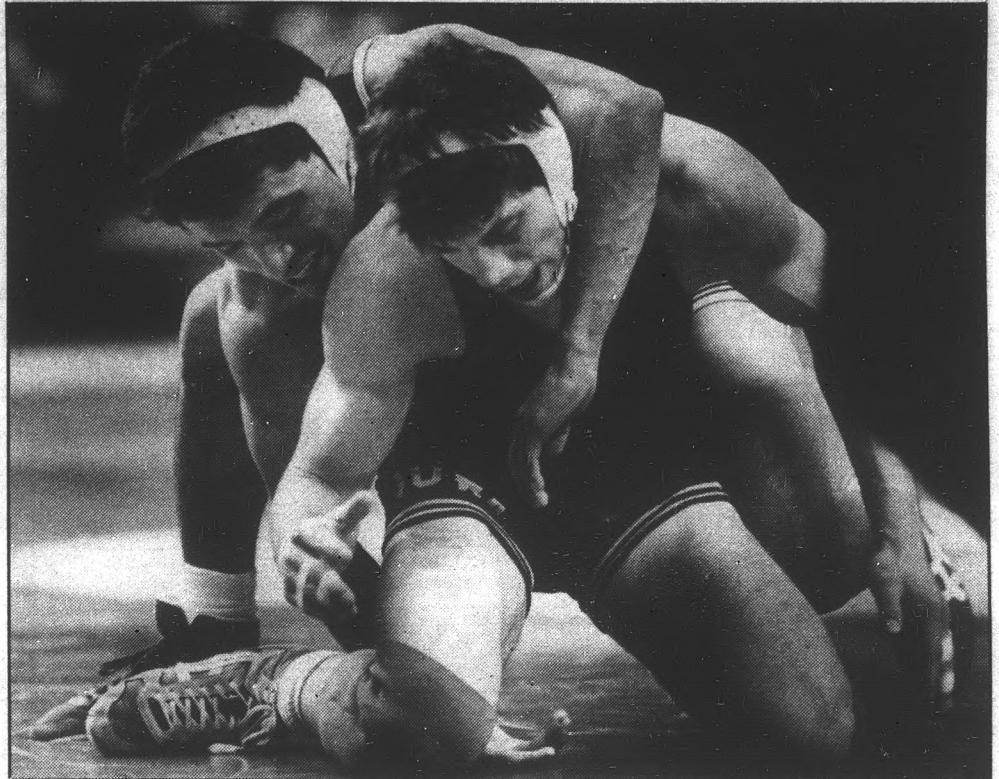

Davies, 38-2, pinned Oklahoma's Junior Meek in 2:45 to continue his quest for a national title. It marked the third time this season the Sun Devil has beaten Meek.

"It gets tougher now," Davies said. "So I have to be 100 percent in every move I make. I have to get mentally sharp from here on out."

Jones also picked up a pin in the second round over Marc Annis of North Carolina State. The sophomore dominated throughout the match ending the contest at the 5:45 mark.

"That's the best I've felt in two months," Jones said. "I am on a roll. I didn't come here to lose."

Two time All-America Rod Severn remained undefeated in the heavyweight division, posting a 28-0-3 mark, after a win

Brian O. Mahoney/Sun Devil Spark

over Lee Roy Ligons of Utah State, 7-4.

The middle weights continued to dominate while aiding in the Sun Devils' championship cause.

Tommy Ortiz, 142 pounds, overcame a Scott Collins (West Virginia) lead to win, 12-6. Collins led after the first period, after that, he took charge.

The momentum carried over to the 158-pound match, where Dan St. John beat Jeff Turner of Pittsburgh, 8-3.

Jim Gressley (167 pounds) defeated Rod

Sande of Minnesota, 5-3.

The Sun Devils' only loss in the second round came by way of 126-pounder Chip Park. Park was beaten by Lehigh's John Epperly, 18-11.

Park made his return to the tournament in the consolation round, beating Brad Tennager of Wisconsin, 16-6.

The biggest upset of the day came in the 190-pound weight class. Defending National Champion Eric Voelker was defeated by Bill Freeman of Lock Haven, 5-4.

Baseball team set for 18-game homestand

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

Packard Stadium has left a light on for the ASU baseball team, and the Devils have checked in for their longest stay of the season.

The 26-day, 18-game homestand begins at 7:30 tonight as ASU (23-8) plays host to the Tennessee Volunteers.

As far as the conference is concerned, the Devils are limping back home. They stand at 2-7, with a firm grip on the cellar door of the Six-Pac.

Last weekend's games in Hawaii and the first part of the homestand give the Devils a break in the conference schedule and the opportunity to "get back on track."

"We realize this is a very important time for us," ASU coach Jim Brock said. "We look at the 10 non-conference games in 18 days as very important. What we get accomplished, how we play, and how we feel about ourselves after those games are over is certainly key to how we're going to do over the next 21 conference games."

The Devils have been spectacular in non-conference games at 21-1. Eleven of those wins came against teams that were nationally ranked at the time of the contest.

"The conference is just incredibly tough," Brock said, "and some of our very good efforts have been in non-conference situations."

The Sun Devils are 6-0 on artificial turf, by way of sweeps in Hawaii and Texas. ASU seems suited to the style of play that turf demands.

"It's a team that has such quickness," Brock said, "and seems to be geared to the Astroturf-type game, when you're hitting the ball on the ground. We are trying to tailor our park here to be a little closer to that type of surface. We want to get runners in motion in different ways."

Shortstop Pat Listach continues to swing a torrid bat. He had seven hits in the Hawaii series, raising his average to .295. Brock said he feels Listach is firmly entrenched in the lead-off spot of the batting order.

"Listach had an outstanding Hawaii," Brock said. "He has changed his stroke, and we anticipate him getting on base a lot more."

John Finn and Kevin Higgins have slid to second and third in the order, respectively.

The pitching rotation will be Linty Ingram (7-2) tonight, Brian Dodd (5-1) on Saturday afternoon, and Blas Minor (2-1) in the Saturday nightcap.

On Monday afternoon, ASU will meet the Seattle Mariners in an exhibition game at Packard. The Devils annually meet a Cactus League team for fun and opportunity.

"It certainly is very important for our juniors who have thoughts of trying to sign professionally," Brock said. "Scouts seem to weigh how you perform with wooden bats against major league pitching heavier than normal college play. If they do well, it certainly increases their worth professionally."

ASU women's swimming coach Tim Hill seems to have put all his eggs into one basket — underclassmen.

The Sun Devil women's swimming/diving team has sent one of the nation's youngest squads to the seventh annual NCAA Championship in Austin, Texas, finishing up on Saturday.

In Thursday's action, the Sun Devil relay team finished in eighth place with a time of 1:44.46 in the 200-meter medley. In the preliminary heat, the team finished in seventh place with a time of 1:43.48 — a Sun Devil record.

The ASU team consisted of Missy Allington, Amy Bush, Michelle Thompson and Jodi Quas.

Hill said he felt the results of the first day could be attributed to the intensity of the competition.

"We had the freshmen jitters," he said. "There was a lot of emotional tension and we were a little scared. We responded well."

The four-time defending NCAA champion University of Texas is playing host to this year's meet and will again be a major threat in the competition.

The Longhorns, along with Stanford, Florida and California, are expected to battle for top honors at the tournament.

Although the Sun Devils finished fifth in the Pac-10 conference, Hill said he feels the team will be a top contender at the tourney.

"I feel really good considering the pressure," Hill said. "This is definitely the highest level of competition we've faced this year."

The team consists of eight freshmen, three sophomores, two juniors and one senior.

Although the team is young and consists primarily of freshmen and sophomores, Hill expresses his confidence in the team.

"We have faced the nation's top schools this year and the majority of our swimmers have a great deal of national competition experience," Hill said.

As the Devils face their ultimate test of the year, Hill relays the feelings of the team.

"Our goal is to break all the team records," Hill said. "I am expecting good things from this year's team."

'Freshmen jitters' hit ASU swimmers

Sun Devil track team at full force for home opener

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

ASU track coaches said they are excited to compete at full force during the first home meet of the season on Saturday.

"For the first time we have our entire team competing together," acting ASU head coach Ed Gorman said. "We are looking forward to some fine performances and a great meet."

Sun Devil coach Ken Lehman said, "anytime our athletes compete in front of the home crowd, they get a little bit more geared up."

The Sun Devils and four other teams will meet in Sun Angel Stadium. ASU, Colorado State, Texas, and the University of Texas-El Paso will have both men and women teams, while New Mexico and Manhattan will only have men competing.

"The weather should be to our advantage," Lehman said. "The other athletes who come down from the cold (areas) usually take a few days to adjust."

Gorman said the competition will be tough and he is hoping for some good early-season times from the Sun Devil athletes.

"We hope to get the support of ASU students, faculty, and the whole community," he said.

Lehman said there will be a lot of talent and some key match-ups during the meet.

Sun Devil Lynda Tolbert and Texas' Karen Nelson finished No. 2 and 3, respectively, in the 55-meter hurdles at the NCAA Indoor Championships March 11-12 in Oklahoma City.

ASU's Jacinta Bartholmew, who finished third in long jump at the championships, will try to out-distance Texas' Carlette Guidry, who won the event.

Freshman Guidry was voted the outstanding athlete in the indoor championships. She won the long jump, the 55-meters, and finished second in the 200-meters. Guidry was also on the winning 4x400-meter relay team.

Bartholmew and Tolbert will have another chance to top Guidry when ASU competes against Texas in the 4x400 relay.

ASU high-jumper Jackie Belzner, who competed in the championships will challenge Texas' Angie Bradburn, who took first place honors.

The ASU women's team finished eighth in the NCAA Indoor Championships, while the Texas women turned out the top overall score.

Two Sun Devils will be returning to the men's squad, from the championships.

Jeff Smith, who competed in the mile, will run the longer distance of 5000-meters, for the Sun Devils.

Mark Gersten, who competed in the pole vault, should produce the highest mark for ASU.

ASU will showcase several athletes who turned in good scores in the first outdoor meet of the season at the Bud Light Invitational in San Diego on March 5, Lehman said.

"Toinette Holmes had a real good opening meet," he said.

Senior Tim Woods will compete on the 4x400 relay team, against the Texas and Manhattan teams that finished sixth and seventh, respectively, in the indoor championships.

Sprinter Gordon Bugg was an All-American in the 400-meter hurdles last year.

The events take place at various times: field events begin at 1:30 p.m.; jumping at 3 p.m.; and running at 4:40 p.m.
