PepsiCo donates $1 million toward MBA fellowship

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — In an attempt to boost Hispanic enrollment in ASU's masters of business administration program, the PepsiCo Foundation has donated $1 million to ASU's College of Business, establishing an MBA fellowship targeted toward Hispanics.

The endowment is the largest single gift to a University graduate program ever, said ASU president J. Russell Nelson.

"While the fellowship program will be open to all the college's MBA candidates, we look especially for Hispanic and other minority students to qualify for this support," Nelson said.

According to University statistics, there are just nine Hispanic graduate students enrolled in all the graduate programs in ASU's College of Business.

There are about 700 students enrolled in the University's two-year MBA program, and more than 1,000 students enrolled in all of ASU's business graduate programs.

PepsiCo Inc., the parent company of the Pepsi-Cola Company, has set up the endowment to fund 10 fellowships beginning in 1989. Students awarded the fellowships will receive a $3,000 stipend and a tuition waiver.

Craig Weatherup, Pepsi-Cola Company president and a 1967 ASU Business College graduate, said the number of fellowship recipients will gradually increase each year until there are 20 awards by 1992.

Second-year PepsiCo scholars will receive an assistantship within the college, worth about $3,500 to the students.

John Kraft, Business College dean, said: "We will search the country to find the most qualified students for this program."

"With the PepsiCo Scholar program, we now have the means to place the College of Business' MBA program alongside the leading graduate programs in the nation."

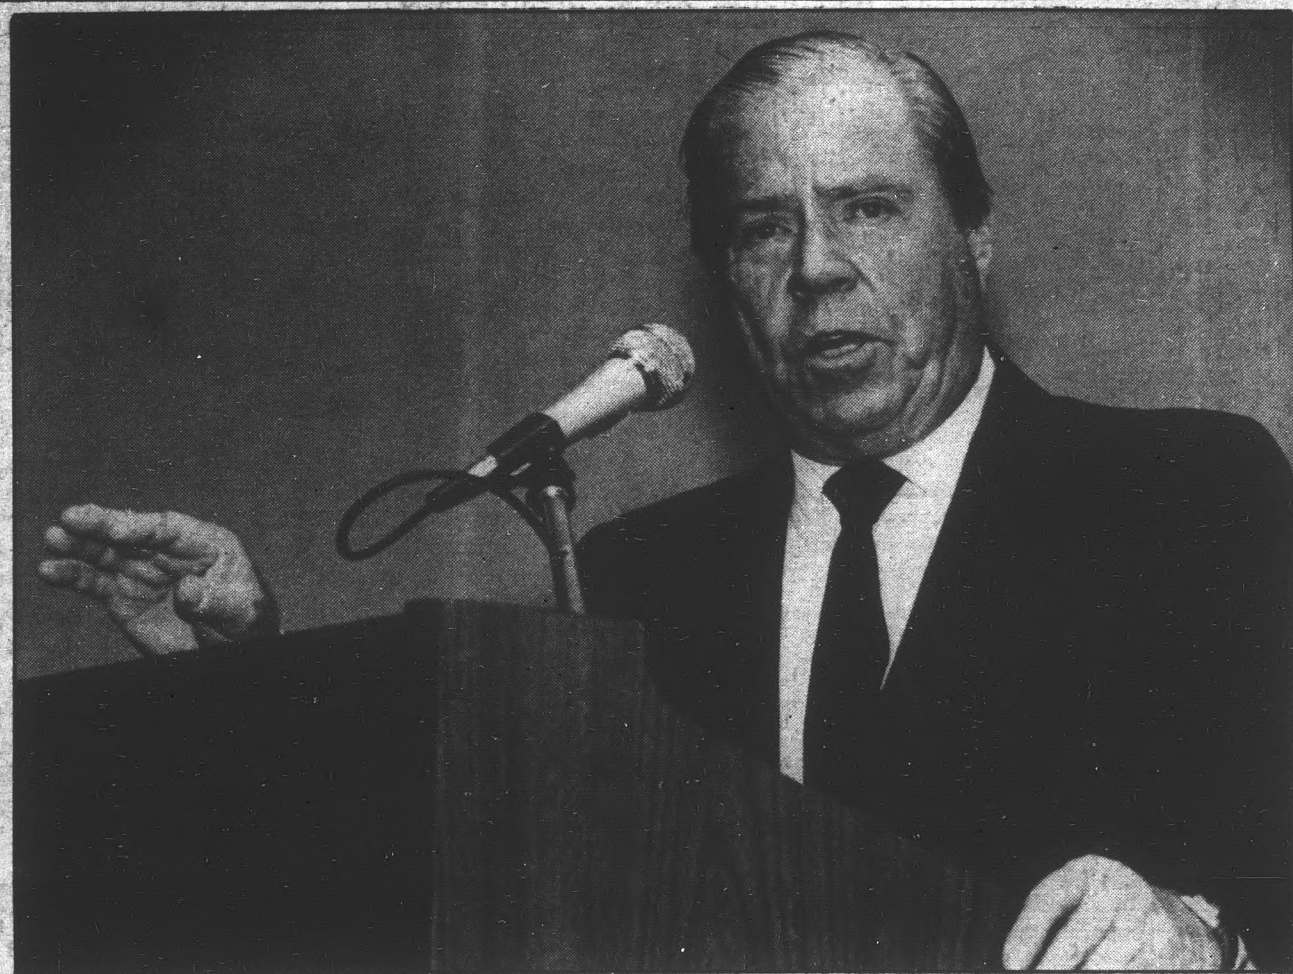

ASU is the seventh College of Business in the fellowship program. PepsiCo has also donated funds to Northwestern University, Stanford, Columbia and the United Negro College Fund.

Nelson said the PepsiCo donation likely will convince other corporations to donate to the college, and Weatherup said he hopes the fellowships will help boost the college's national image.

The American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business deferred the college's accreditation in 1986 because the college was overcrowded, and there were too few full-time professors.

The college's accreditation was fully restored in April 1987, after the accrediting agency determined ASU would improve conditions at the business college.

"We're convinced that Dean Kraft and Dr. Nelson are totally committed to the business college," Weatherup said.

Tempe elections — 7 vie for 3 spots

By J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

Tempe residents will choose three City Councilors from seven candidates today and vote on a proposed hotel bed tax in Tempe's primary election.

All three City Council incumbents are vying to retain their seats.

Mayor Harry Mitchell is running unopposed in his bid for a sixth term in office.

If any candidate captures more than 50 percent of the vote, he or she will automatically be elected. The top vote-getters will compete for the remaining seats in a general election scheduled for May 10.

Up for re-election in the City Council race are incumbents Don Cassano, running for his second term, Pat Hatton, competing for her third term and three-term veteran Bill Ream, who has been on the Council since 1972.

Challenging the incumbents are accountant Vivienne

Campbell, real estate executive Rick Godwin, community activist Barbara Sherman and cellular phone salesman Prentice Williams.

All the challengers, except Williams, are running for the first time. This campaign is Williams fifth attempt at a Council seat.

Also on the ballot today is a proposal to place a two percent bed tax on hotel rooms in the city.

Polls will be open today from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. The results of the election will be tabulated in the City Council chambers at City Hall, starting at 8 p.m.

In the ASU area, polls are located at the Community Christian Church, 1701 S. College Ave.; Tempe High School, 1730 S. Mill Ave.; Scales Schools, 1115 W. Fifth St.; and Thew School, 2130 E. Howe Ave.

For more information about polling sites call the Tempe City Clerk's office at 731-8241.

Heap resigns from LGAU; cites personal reasons

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

After 18 months as the outspoken and controversial co-chair of the Lesbian and Gay Academic Union, Denise Heap has resigned her post because of personal problems for an opportunity to vie for a position on the Associated Students of ASU Senate and a chance to involve herself in other campus matters.

Although Heap, 33, said she does not think anyone will forget her affiliation with the LGAU during her shot at one of two Senate seats in the College of Liberal Arts, she said her sexual preference should not be an issue.

"It's very easy to attack someone that is co-chair of the LGAU, and now they're (other candidates) going to have to go beyond that and have to deal with the real issues," Heap said.

"I believe people do know who I am and they do know what I stand for beyond speaking for lesbians and gays."

"What I do in my private life should have no effect on the fact ... that I bring experience from several organizations and the willingness to work with everyone, including those who have opposed me in the past."

Heap told the 55-member group about her decision last Thursday. The group's bylaws state that there must be a co-chair of each sex, so a female co-chair will be sought in April. The current male co-chair does not wish to be identified.

Heap said she "no longer wants to be merely a spokesperson for the lesbian and gay population at ASU. I think somebody else should take that role."

Last year, Heap was an unsuccessful Senate candidate for her college. While co-chair of the LGAU, Heap lobbied and continuously was denied funding for the group. ASASU gave LGAU $700 for a speaker last year, an action that Heap called "progress." Also, the Residence Hall Association sponsored a film for the group.

"In some ways, things have improved for lesbians and gays (at ASU)," Heap said. "I know for the student body in general, it's not an issue; they do not believe in discrimination on any basis."

Heap said she thinks "it's time that we (lesbians and gays) don't have to be quite that outspoken and try to work with other groups on campus."

Sandinistas withdraw from border; U.S. soldiers may not be needed

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Nicaragua withdrew its soldiers from the Honduran border Monday and declared an end to fighting while it holds truce talks with Contra rebels, according to reports from all sides.

The border region remained tense, with Honduran patrols on the lookout for any booby traps left behind by the Sandinistas.

President Jose Azcona Hoyo said the 3,200 U.S. troops sent to Honduras last week, after the Nicaraguan army was accused of sending 2,000 men across the border last Wednesday in pursuit of Contras, may no longer be needed.

"The worst is over and there is peace now in the border region," Col. Reynald Andino Flores, commander of the Honduran army's 101st Infantry Brigade, said by telephone from his headquarters in southern Honduras.

"We are remaining on a state of alert to be ready for anything that may happen," he added, and soldiers are "constantly patrolling the area."

Shultz to confront Shevardnadze on Soviet weapons in Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz set the stage Monday to confront visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze on massive arms shipments to Central America by the Kremlin.

But the dispute appeared unlikely to spoil progress on nuclear arms control efforts or preparations for the next superpower summit in Moscow.

Shevardnadze was expected to offer a late-May summit date and to have it accepted by President Reagan after they meet Wednesday at the White House.

A treaty to slash U.S. and Soviet armories of 30 to 50 percent of long-range nuclear arms is the projected centerpiece of Reagan's fourth meeting with General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

IRA gunmen kill police officer; British announce manhunt

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA gunmen killed a police officer Monday at a checkpoint in Londonderry, the 10th victim in two weeks of heightening tension and sectarian violence.

Britain announced a massive manhunt in West Belfast's Roman Catholic ghettos for the killers of two British soldiers caught in an IRA funeral procession.

Northern Ireland Secretary Tom King said in London that the Royal Ulster Constabulary has launched an immediate review of its new policy of keeping a low profile at Irish Republican Army funerals. The policy was aimed at avoiding clashes between police and supporters of the outlawed IRA.

The police officer who was killed Monday, Clive Graham, 25, was shot in the head in a jeep while at a checkpoint in the Roman Catholic Creggan district of Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second-largest city. He died later in the hospital.

The IRA claimed responsibility for Graham's killing in a clandestine message to Belfast media.

Israeli troops kill Palestinian; Army widens weapon search

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troopers on Monday shot a Palestinian teenager dead, and a PLO leaflet exhorted Arabs to "shower soldiers and herds of cowardly settlers" with stones, firebombs and iron bars.

Soldiers were expanding their search for weapons caches in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip the day after an Arab shot and killed a soldier in Bethlehem.

At least 106 Palestinians and the Israeli soldier have been killed since riots began in the occupied lands Dec. 8, according to U.N. figures.

Israeli police arrested a prominent Arab-American attorney Monday and assailants attacked the homes of two moderate Palestinians — newspaper editor and a member of Jordan's parliament.

Cecelia Cichan knows family died in Detroit plane crash last summer

NEW YORK (AP) — Four-year-old Cecelia Cichan, the lone survivor of the Northwest Airlines jet crash in Detroit last summer, has been told that her parents and 6-year-old brother died in the crash and she understands she will not see them again, according to Life magazine. Her father was a professor of botany at ASU.

Cecelia still wears bandages on her chest and arms, the magazine reports in its April issue. She suffered a broken leg and collarbone, deep head cuts and third-degree burns over 25 percent of her body in the Aug. 16 crash, the second-worst U.S. air disaster.

Craft takes stand in unusual twist of Mecham trial

By BEN McCONNELL and VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — In an unusual twist of courtroom acrobatics, the attorney for impeached Gov. Evan Mecham took the witness stand Monday and testified that an alleged death threat toward a former Mecham staffer was not serious.

Fred Craft, who has argued much of Mecham's defense on charges of obstructing justice, also said he charged the state for a sightseeing trip he took with his wife to Sedona.

Craft's testimony marked the 16th day of Mecham's Senate impeachment trial. The controversial first-term Republican governor faces three impeachment counts. After wrapping up work on the first charge of blocking a criminal investigation sometime today, the Senate today is expected to hear testimony on the second charge of embezzling state funds.

Mecham also is charged with concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

Craft's appearance on the stand deviates from typical court actions because a lawyer who is a witness in a case is prevented to represent a client in that trial.

But in this legislative proceeding, Sen. Alan Stephens, D-Phoenix, subpoenaed Craft to testify about what Craft heard when DPS Lt. Beau Johnson told a group of Mecham confidants about an alleged threat made toward former legislative liaison Donna Carlson.

Craft testified he did not perceive the threat to be serious. But former Mecham Chief of Staff Richard Burke testified early in the trial that he took the matter seriously.

The discrepancy angered some senators. "We're stuck with trying to figure out why what you heard is so different from what Dr. Burke heard," said an exasperated Sen. John Mawhinney, R-Tucson.

Former Mecham aide Lee Watkins allegedly threatened Donna Carlson Nov. 11 and 12. She was Mecham's former legislative liaison who was a grand jury witness at the time. Watkins allegedly told Peggy Griffith, director of the governor's office of women's services, that Carlson was "talking too much."

Craft told the senators that when he talked with Johnson, who was told of the threat by Griffith, he thought the threat was related to a New Times article that examined a possible Mecham assassination.

"I thought it was relative to the governor, and at that moment, I said, 'Let's go see the boss.'"

"Once we got into the governor's office, I realized I'd made an error," Craft testified.

Craft also explained he told Mecham to "distance himself" from the incident because resolving the matter was the responsibility of Max Hawkins, director of the Department of Administration and Watkins' boss.

Task force probes seemingly unnecessary updating of textbooks

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Associated Students has established a task force to take a closer look at why ASU entry-level textbooks appear to be updated annually while the material often remains the same.

The group's formation comes on the heels of an ASASU senate resolution calling for a probe into the ASU Bookstore. The bookstore merely purchases what professors, colleges and departments order, according to bookstore manager Val Ross.

The measure was designed to save students money, according to Activities Vice President John Fees and College of Business Sen. Ted Ballard, who drafted the bill together.

Ballard will chair the task force, and three ASASU staff members will comprise the rest of the group.

"We initiated the resolution to find different ways to help students," Ballard said Monday. "There has got to be a way around the trap."

ECN 111 and 112, and MAT 106, 115 and 117 are specific course books targeted by the resolution. Professors teaching entry-level classes will be investigated, in addition to the ASU Bookstore textbook publishers.

Publishers of the targeted books have told the State Press that the texts are updated on three- or four-year cycles. Representatives from Addison-Wesley (math book publishers), Harper and Row and Random House (economic books) said the start-up costs for updating books any quicker are prohibitive.

However, Ballard plans to begin a three-pronged investigation, by contacting:

- publishers to find out how they present books and price lists to professors.
- professors to determine if they are choosing books on the basis of content or price.
- the ASU Bookstore to find out if it is making more money by selecting certain books.

Also, Ballard said the task force will compare ASU's plight to that of other universities around the country. Ballard added that Stanford University's bookstore refunds money to students if it obtains a specific amount of profit during the year.

ASASU President Karrin Kunasek said an investigation is essential, not only at ASU but nationwide.

"If we can start something here, more power to us," she said.

But students are not the only ones taking action. Kunasek received letters last week from concerned faculty.

"The faculty and students have their own tangents and reasons for concern, but what it boils down to is the faculty should demand price lists from publishers," Kunasek said.

She said faculty are primarily concerned with obtaining the best books for their classes while looking at price as a secondary concern.

Ballard is pleased the faculty is in favor of the probe.

"I don't think they are our enemies, and I hope they will work with us," he said.

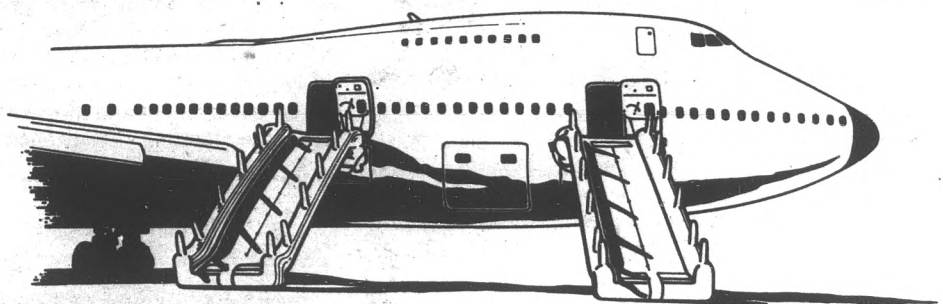

With the support of the faculty and the efforts of the task force, Ballard said he hopes the investigation will be complete by the middle of April. "There is a lot of work to be done," he said.

Kunasek and Ballard will then draft a report containing the task force findings.

Ballard is pleased the issue is being addressed.

"It is something that hasn't been brought to light," he said.

Tempe City Council The Qualified Four

The City of Tempe is in the midst of a period of rapid change. ASU continues to grow, bursting at the seams with new students and buildings. Downtown is undergoing major expansion and renovation. There are new faces of leadership in the police department, the fire department and the office of city manager. And Tempe will soon welcome the National Football League's Cardinals and the accompanying influx of tourists and fans to Sun Devil Stadium.

During this turbulent period, innovative, intelligent and capable leadership from the City Council is vital. And today voters have the opportunity to choose those who will help guide the city into the next decade.

Of the seven candidates running for the three open council seats, we feel that four — incumbents Don Cassano, Pat Hatton and William Ream, and hopeful Barbara Sherman — are well qualified for the job.

Sherman, a community activist for 20 years, has wide-ranging experience and knowledge of Tempe affairs and has demonstrated a concern for city growth and transportation issues.

Longtime Councilman Ream has important experience and contacts in city and state government that enable him to provide stable leadership. Although we disagree with some of his stands — including his effort to remove the 'A' from Tempe Butte — his outspoken honesty is refreshing.

Both Cassano and Hatton are conscientious, have shown a willingness to listen to constituents and are concerned about ASU's relationship with the city.

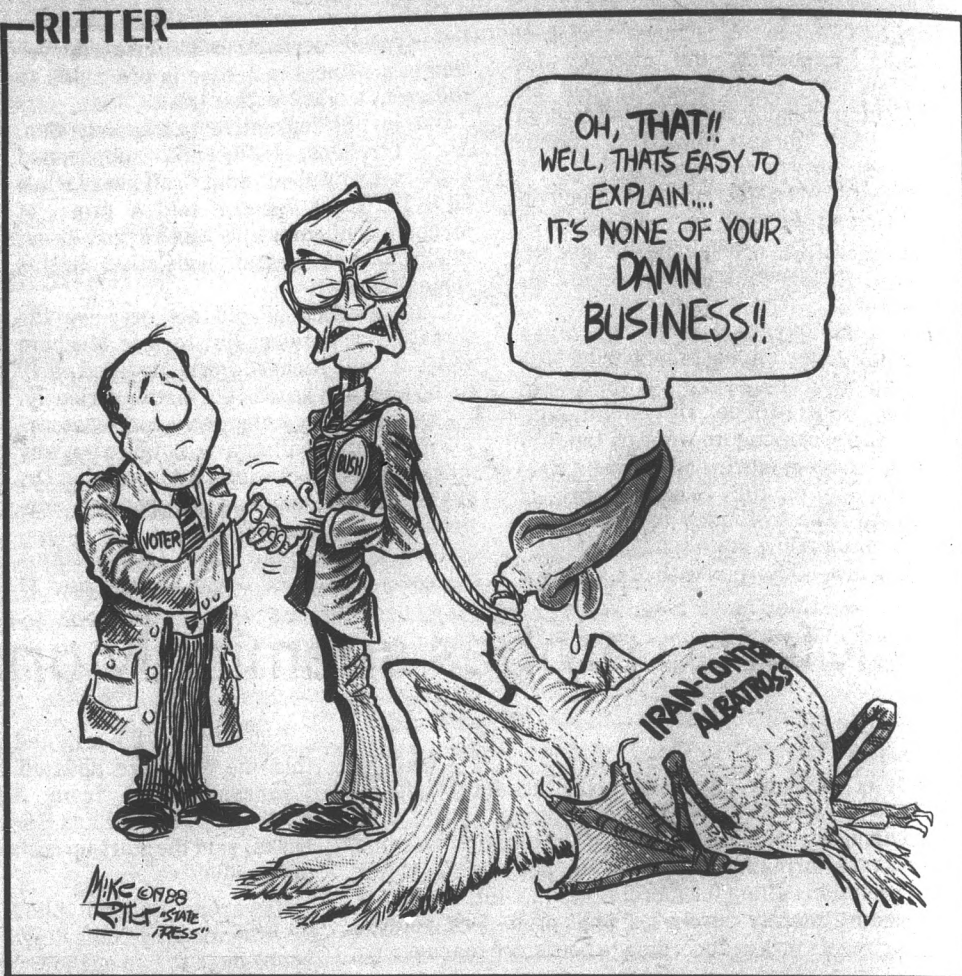

Any of the four would make fine council members for the next four years.

The University is an integral part of Tempe. For those of us who live and work in the area, the two institutions are one and the same.

ASU students must not forget that together they constitute a powerful segment of the Tempe community and, if they make that influence felt through the vote, there is no community issue that is beyond their reach to affect.

Vote today, and take control of the issues that have impact on you, the ASU student and Tempe resident.

Yes or No?

In February of 1922, Winston Churchill, then British colonial secretary, made a proposal for Palestinian home rule: a "legislative council" was to be established as a first step toward self-government and eventual independence. The new council was to be composed of three Christian Arabs, nine Moslem Arabs, three Jews and, initially, 11 British officials.

The proposal caused alarm within Palestine's Jewish community. Though democratic in principle, they feared that the Arab majority on the council would use its advantage to stop Jewish immigration into Palestine and perhaps even destroy the existing Jewish community once the British had departed.

The plan, however, was dropped — not because of the Jews, but because the Arabs successfully boycotted the legislative council, refusing to be part of a body that included any Jewish representatives.

The British twice repeated similar offers of home rule which, if put into effect, might well have ended Zionist dreams of a Jewish state in Palestine. Each time the proposals were defeated by the Arabs.

Today, Israel controls the entire territory that was under dispute in 1922. And, from exile in Tunisia and elsewhere, the PLO still dreams of "liberating all of occupied Palestine" and "raising the Palestinian flag over Tel-Aviv."

This tradition of rejecting anything short of complete and immediate victory, of preferring the romance of a lost cause to solid, incremental gains, has been a constant pattern in Palestinian history.

It is a pattern that is being repeated today.

More than ever before in their history, the Palestinians have victory within their grasp. Defiant, stone-throwing teen-agers have challenged Israel's occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip more effectively than 20 years of PLO terrorism.

The government and the people of Israel are deeply divided over the uprising. Thousands of Jews have taken to the streets of Tel-Aviv and Jerusalem, demanding an end to the occupation. Although Prime Minister Yitzak Shamir is hanging tough against a settlement, his position is precarious — Labor Party members of his own government are openly defying his leadership. If the PLO were to announce its acceptance of a two-state solution to the Palestinian problem — a solution recognizing Israel's right to exist within secure borders — unbearable political pressures would be brought upon Shamir to give in.

'... if the PLO indeed "liberates" Palestine, the result would be: Jewish corpses stacked like cordwood in the streets of Tel-Aviv ...'

So where is the PLO?

Well, there's a problem. The PLO has never accepted a two-state solution. As in 1922, these self-proclaimed Palestinian leaders seek the complete destruction of Israel — or, as the PLO euphemistically puts it, "the establishment of a secular, democratic state in all of Palestine."

Nor has the leadership of the uprising within the territories shown much promise of moderation. CBS interviewed one typical organizer who said: "I'm not saying I want to kill the Jews or throw them into the sea. I am saying that everybody who came from outside the country should go back to where he came from."

"I'm not saying I want to kill the Jews..." Meaning, one would suppose, "But I will if I need to..."

Suppose the Palestinian extremists were to win. It is interesting to speculate what life would be like under the PLO's "secular, democratic state."

At the very best, Israelis and Palestinians would simply trade places as oppressors and oppressed. Instead of Israeli soldiers policing a restive, angry Arab population in the territories, Arab soldiers would be policing a restive, angry Jewish population of more than 3 million along the coastal plain. And don't suppose that the PLO would attempt to control that population with rubber bullets, clubs and tear gas.

No, if the PLO indeed "liberates" Palestine, the result would be: Jewish corpses stacked like cordwood in the streets of Tel-Aviv, Jewish bodies choking the harbors of Ashdod and Haifa, Jerusalem reduced to the fate of Phnom-Penh.

This Israel understands, yet sentiment there still leans toward a territorial compromise.

It is the Palestinians who must now make a decision.

The PLO, the Palestinian people and their supporters everywhere must answer a very simple question:

Will you accept and support a two-state solution? Yes or no?

Issue asphyxiation plagues presidential campaign

David Broder
Washington Post Group

WASHINGTON — Back in the days before the reformers got their hands on the campaign-finance laws, a wealthy, charming and public-spirited San Francisco matron was much sought after by Democratic candidates for the presidency. They knew that simply by putting pen to checkbook, June Degnan could keep them in the race for another two months or more.

In the 1960s and early 1970s, Mrs. Degnan's support was so earnestly solicited by so many aspiring hopefuls that she became notably tough-minded in her judgments, finally distilling her criteria into what I came to think of as Degnan's Law.

"I figure," she once told me, "that anybody who deserves to be president of the United States ought to be able, in a half-hour conversation, to express one thought I had not already thought of myself."

After watching what passed for a presidential campaign in my home state of Illinois this week, I think it is time to invoke Degnan's Law. A race for the White House is not a Ph.D. oral exam, but this one, friends, is about to expire from a lack of oxygen to the brain.

It is quite something to sit in a handsome Northwestern University Law School auditorium, reminiscent of the House of Commons, and listen to Sen. Albert Gore, Jr., of Tennessee, the product of St. Alban's and Harvard and possessor of one of the best minds in Washington, move his lips and produce such banalities as, "It is time to bring the Democratic Party back to the grassroots."

It is equally stunning to hear Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas, who has served in Congress for 27 years, who leads his party in the Senate and who has traveled widely in the world, address the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations in a fashion so utterly devoid of intellectual discipline or concept that a question on the future of U.S.-European relations draws a response about the value of the line-item veto.

Gore and Dole were among the notable losers in Illinois on Tuesday. But it would be wrong to conclude that they were more deficient in content than the winners, Vice President George Bush on the Republican side and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois on the Democratic. They also went through the week saying nothing, unless you believe that promises to make "public service and not private gain" the touchstone of the next administration or make "government caring and compassionate again" constitute a discussion of the agenda.

I am not one who has a hang-up about "issues." A campaign is not an exercise in intellectual abstractions but a choice of leaders. In the dynamic of the primaries, there are periods — like the time before Super Tuesday — when the candidates are trying to cover so much ground and reach so many people they cannot fairly be asked to deal with substantive policy issues.

But this was not the case in Illinois, and it is not the case in the two states whose primaries come up next, Wisconsin and Connecticut. In past campaigns, candidates as different as Ronald Reagan and Gary Hart have used the prestigious forums that Chicago offers and the availability of highly competent local and national news coverage to make serious speeches on economic and foreign policy.

This year, they did not, and the voters were cheated. What happens when no substance is being provided by the candidates is that the campaign reverts to more primitive levels of decision-making: tribal loyalties. In Illinois, Bush rode on the shoulders of Ronald Reagan, his offstage patron, and Gov. James R. Thompson, his constantly visible Illinois chairman. Simon invoked the loyalties of 30 years in Illinois public offices to overcome the racial core support for the other "favorite son," the South Side's Rev. Jesse L. Jackson.

Dole and Massachusetts Gov. Michael S.

Dukakis (Democrat), the outsiders who hoped to make a mark in Illinois, failed to do so, because neither gave voters of his party a good, substantive reason to be for him. Instead of talking policy, they talked process. Dole went around the state complaining that Bush was afraid to debate him but never made clear where he differed substantively with the vice president. Dukakis foolishly tried to persuade voters that a "brokered convention" would be bad for them, instead of arguing why his nomination might be good for them.

The temptation may be strong to play small-bore, tactical politics again in Connecticut on March 29 and Wisconsin on April 5. For Bush, his Yale ties and family roots make Connecticut yet another home state, and in Wisconsin he has another governor ready to do the heavy lifting for his campaign. Dukakis can do the "neighboring governor" bit again in Connecticut and Simon can run the "neighboring senator" campaign in Wisconsin.

But somebody, some day, is going to have to recognize there is a national campaign about national needs, national concerns and national challenges that is out there, waiting to be run. Whoever has the guts to lift the level of his game may just find a surprising response.

The voters are all becoming June Degnans. So come on, guys, tell us something we don't already know.

Israeli-Palestinian debate moves to law building

By CARRI MITCHELL and SCOTT LUCK
State Press

Friday's 2 p.m. debate between pro-Israeli ASU student Yousef Hashimi and his pro-Palestinian counterpart Omar Shurab has been moved from the MU Pima Room to the College of Law Building's Great Hall to accommodate a larger anticipated audience.

College of Engineering Sen. Hashimi is a member of the American Israel Cultural Education Society, and Shurab is a member of ASU's Committee in Solidarity with the Palestinian Uprising.

However, Shurab and Hashimi stressed Monday that they will be representing themselves and not their respective organizations at the debate, which is slated to focus on the issue of Israel's occupation of the West Bank territories.

The MU Pima Room holds about 150 people, while the law lecture hall holds more than double that amount. Hashimi said he hopes the event draws people without an already-set viewpoint on the issue.

"I wish to see those people who are striving to learn more about the situation and then form an opinion about it," Hashimi said.

Hashimi and Shurab said they would not reveal the texts of their speeches to each other, in order to make the debate "spontaneous."

The debate was brought about after an impromptu agreement between Shurab and Hashimi during a pro-Palestinian rally in front of the MU last week. The two organizations have had several verbal confrontations in the past.

The speakers will respond to written questions from the audience at the end of the debate. Hashimi said the questions will be written in order to avoid any "shouting matches."

Shurab and Hashimi disagreed Monday on the nature of a confrontation between their groups during last week's rally.

Shurab said Hashimi's pro-Israeli group broke ASU rules when it held a demonstration on the same day as the pro-Palestinian rally. Shurab added that Assistant Dean of Student Life Art Carter refused permission for the pro-Israeli group to interfere with the other group's authorized rally.

But Hashimi said that while Carter informed him that the pro-Israeli group could not have an "authorized" demonstration, it could still "peacefully organize."

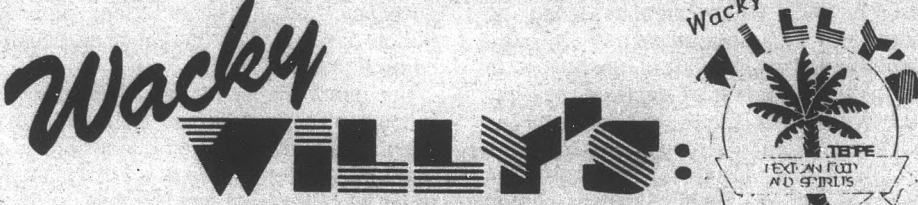

Carter is out of town until Thursday and was unavailable for comment.

Shurab was disturbed that "some of them (Hashimi's group) were saying verbal words to the Palestinian protesters" during the rally.

Hashimi admitted some of his group "may" have passed words to the pro-Palestinians, but he added that Shurab interrupted the pro-Israeli "peaceful" get-together.

"He's (Shurab) just as guilty of verbal confrontation... as we are," Hashimi said. Hashimi and Shurab agreed on political science professor Bruce Mason as mediator of the event after Shurab turned down David Jordan, the director of ASASU's Political Union.

Mason is the faculty adviser of the ASU Model United Nations.

Candidate hopes to become liaison between ASU and Tempe

By J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

This story and the one that follows are the sixth and seventh parts of a seven-part series profiling the candidates for Tempe City Council.

One of Barbara Sherman's major concerns in her race for Tempe City Council is that certain groups in the ASU community may be harming the quality of life in Tempe.

"I think we have major problems in terms of party-house type of situations and frequency of complaints in certain areas where the existing police response is not what it should be," said Sherman, one of seven candidates for three Council seats in today's primary election.

Sherman said she is upset by some of the problems Tempe faces from having a large university within the community.

"We've got drinking and drug types of problems which need to be addressed in the community," she said. "We're a university community, and you have to expect that kind of thing."

Sherman said the City Council can help prevent problems by being cautious where apartment complexes are built.

"We have to be awfully careful before we build large complexes and apartments where University students can congregate, because there is instant fighting..." she said.

But Sherman does not believe ASU students are the cause of all the problems. She said many are caused by people attracted to the University area.

"A lot of it is people who have outgrown the University but still are involved in drinking and drugs and selling alcohol to minors," Sherman explained. "So the University students get pulled in and high school students get pulled in."

Sherman said she would like to see increased police patrols in "problem" areas in order to halt trouble before it begins. Sherman complained the present system of issuing citations to people causing disturbances is inadequate because an officer must first give a warning.

She said she would like to meet with the police department and the city attorney to create a new way to issue citations.

"This (system) will be based on frequency of complaints," she said. "So if kids are partying and having fun and not causing any problems, there are no problems."

Despite the occasional disturbances, Sherman said ASU is an asset to Tempe, and the University is the major reason she and her husband Thomas, a professor of mathematics at ASU, moved to Tempe.

Sherman will be teaching a class at ASU next fall in logic and ethics in government. If she is elected to the Council, Sherman said the teaching position would make her a good link between the City Council and the University community.

Sherman said "there has always been" friction between the city and the University and believes communication could be improved between ASU and city government.

"My understanding is power plays are made rather than trying to work things out together," she said. "There needs to be vehicles for better communication."

"I think I have a good possibility of being able to improve the relations between the University and the town, serving basically as a liaison between the town and ASU," she said.

Sherman describes her occupation as "community activist," since she has been involved in several boards and community organizations, including the Phoenix Sky Harbor Noise Abatement Committee, the North Tempe Homeowners Association and the Tempe Community Council.

"I have been involved for 20 years, and I have been encouraged to run for probably 18 of those years by someone in the process," Sherman said.

Sherman said a major concern is the growth of Tempe. She said the biggest questions concerning growth are area density and how to protect neighborhoods from over-development.

Sherman said the density issue needs to be considered in the city's overall general plan and criticized the present City Council for deciding not to reveal the plan until after the election.

"What they have done is held up the general plan for a year, so that it wasn't considered before the election," Sherman said.

"The effort of the City Council on the general plan is... let's try to keep everything low-key, and let's wait until after the election — not get the people stirred up," Sherman said.

In addition, Sherman said the Council should consider developing transportation systems that will keep pace with Tempe's growth.

"We need to work on trying to find some solution that works for the whole community," she said. "Light-rail for the downtown-ASU area, buses that feed into that and smaller trolleys that go between the bus routes."

"Special transportation services are very important."

Former ASU football player runs for Council; keeps low profile

By J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

Former ASU football player Prentice Williams will be making his fifth attempt at gaining a seat on the Tempe City Council in today's primary election.

Williams, a cellular phone salesman, could not be reached for comment about his campaign.

During this campaign, Williams has made few public appearances. He appeared at only one candidate debate, and he has generally kept a low profile.

However at the March 15 debate, Williams said he would like to make himself accessible to the citizens of Tempe. "I want to be the person, who when no one else on the Council listens... listens," Williams said.

Williams said he has been trying to find out what issues Tempe residents want the City Council to address.

"I ask people 'Why do you live in Tempe?' and 'What would you like to see changed, if anything at all?'" Williams said.

"They immediately ask me what my program is — what I would like to do, and I say I am not the one to decide that — you are."

Williams said citizens are concerned with many issues, including increased police patrol and traffic congestion.

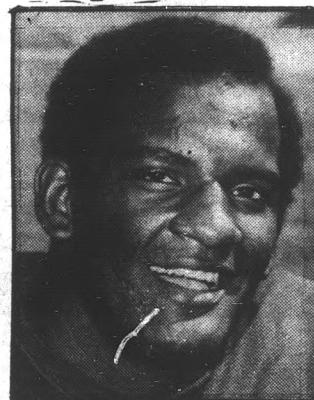

At the debate, Williams said some councilmen have been on the City Council for too long. He said it is time for new ideas and solutions.

"There are people on the Council who were on the Council when I was in college," he said. "This is wrong."

"Until we break that stranglehold that people have on the City Council of Tempe, we will see the same things we have seen the last four years."

Williams said he would "frown upon" any person serving more than three terms on the Council. He added that incumbents keep getting re-elected, although they avoid addressing perennial problems like the traffic congestion question.

When asked at the debate how he envisioned Tempe in 25 years, Williams replied he was concerned about the future but more concerned with solving current problems.

20 percent of pro-Mecham voters surveyed give Corbin good job performance ratings

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — Arizona Attorney General Bob Corbin, who has been accused of conspiring to oust Gov. Evan Mecham from office, was given good job performance ratings by 20 percent of pro-Mecham voters in Maricopa County, according to a recent survey.

But Mecham supporters also accounted for the largest group opposing the attorney general, with 46 percent of that group saying Corbin does a poor job. Twenty-seven percent of that group said he did a fair job.

The survey, conducted by Phoenix-based Behavior Research Center, said Corbin is rebounding in voter popularity. Corbin gained an overall 36 percent approval rating from the 608 voters surveyed.

Corbin's popularity had slipped to 34 percent in January, following a state grand jury investigation into Mecham's handling of a $350,000 loan from Tempe developer Barry Wolfson.

Corbin, a Republican, is doing a good job, according to 37 percent of the Republicans interviewed and 49 percent of the anti-Mecham voters surveyed.

Mecham, who was indicted on six felony counts following the investigation, has frequently lashed out at Corbin, claiming the attorney general was trying to remove him from office because of his own gubernatorial ambitions.

Corbin has denied an interest in running for governor. The poll, conducted in mid-February, indicates that Corbin's strongest support comes from Democrats, with 47 percent giving him a good rating.

Twenty-five percent of those voters 55 and older gave Corbin poor ratings, while 17 percent of those under 35 disapproved.

The poll had a 4.05 percent margin of error.

Arizona must solve pollution problems, Rhodes tells students

By SHERRY ARPAIO
State Press

One of Arizona's top priorities should be finding a fuel that will not pollute the atmosphere, John Rhodes, a Republican candidate in the gubernatorial recall election and a former Arizona Congressman, told a group of ASU students Monday.

"Arizona can and must take the lead in finding a solution to what is really a global problem," Rhodes told about 50 students in the MU Arizona Room.

Rhodes said the state should draw on its research resources at ASU, NAU, UofA and state research agencies.

"The main source of pollution is the automobile," he said.

In an interview after the speech, Rhodes said two possible "clean fuels" are hydrogen and electricity, and that he expects the development of a "clean fuel" before the turn of the century.

Rhodes will face Republicans Gov. Evan Mecham and Jack Londen along with Democrat Carolyn Warner in the May 17 recall election.

Another way to decrease air pollution is through the creation of an efficient mass transit system, he said, and also through the implementation of voluntary car pools and altered work schedules.

Rhodes also places education as a top priority, in both the primary and secondary levels and in higher education.

Education "is absolutely one of the first" priorities, he said.

It is something, he said, that "if you were to short change it, you would, in effect, be eating your seed corn."

Rhodes also put help for the mentally ill high on his list of priorities, "Arizona is the lowest in the country for taking care of its mentally ill," Rhodes said.

He said he is upset by the fact that so many mentally ill people are in prison.

"It's not humane, and it's not economically smart," he said. He added that more funds must go to state hospitals to fix the problem.

Rhodes said another problem Arizona faces is eliminating its $104 million state budget deficit.

Rhodes said his plan, if he is elected, is to set up a commission that would study state government and make recommendations on how to reorganize parts of it to save money.

He would also create a commission to study the state revenue system to look for new and creative ways to raise money. One possibility is the use of bonds, he said.

"I believe I could heal the wounds of the state and bring it back to some semblance of order," he said, adding that he does not plan to raise taxes.

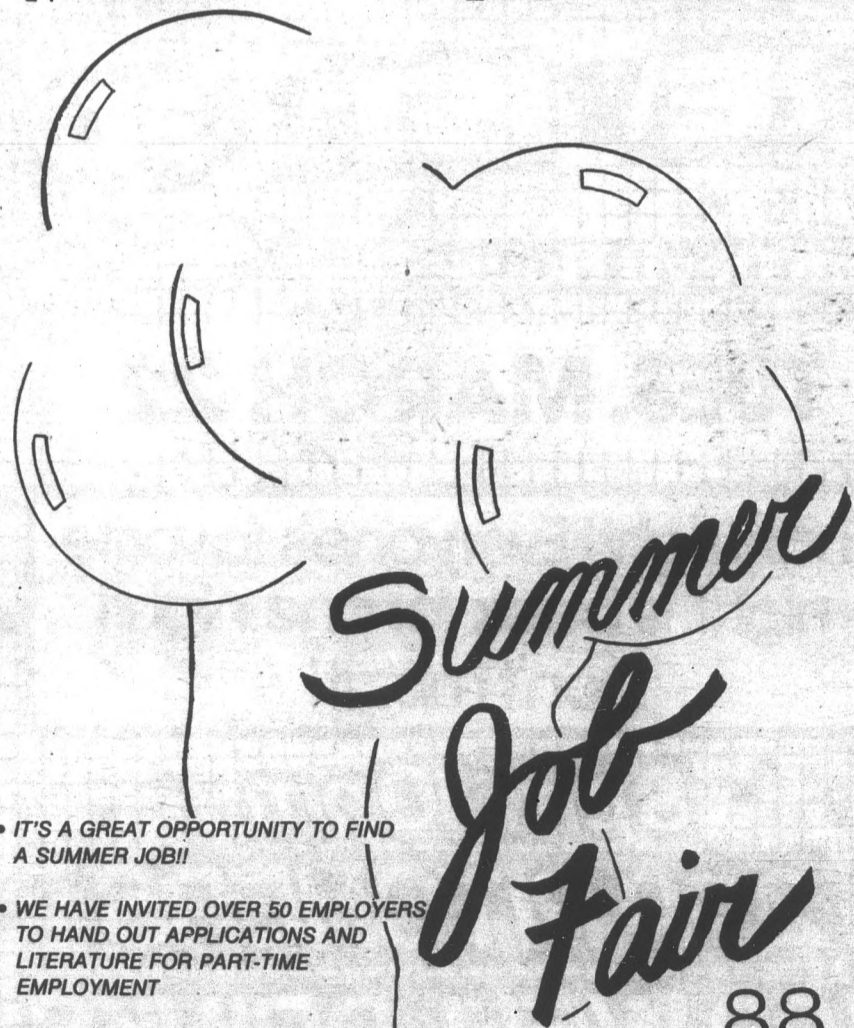

"I would hope that I don't raise taxes," he said after the speech.

Rhodes said he advocates prioritizing state spending so that programs that need money are funded and those that are adequately funded are not.

ASU librarian says legislature should help funding

By KRISTI ELLIS
State Press

In the face of reductions in ASU's library budget, University Librarian Donald Riggs told the Faculty Senate Monday that the Arizona Legislature should help fund University subscriptions.

Riggs said despite a proposed 7 percent increase by the Joint Legislative Budget Committee, library subscriptions would still have to be reduced by 5 percent because subscription prices have increased.

In addition, book prices have increased from an average of $47 in 1987 to $105 in 1988, forcing the University to reduce those purchases by $90,000.

"The inflation in journal prices in relation to the value of the falling dollar is devastating," Riggs said.

Riggs said that the University could find the $90,000 somewhere in its budget, but stressed that the Legislature also has a responsibility to help buy subscriptions.

If the increase in the acquisition fund is less than 7 percent, Riggs said a the library will have to reduce its subscriptions by 10 percent or about 1,714 titles. The reduction would save

'It's easier to raise money for library buildings than it is to raise money for library books.'

—J. Russell Nelson

the University $180,000.

Under the JLBC's 7-percent increase, the library would have to cancel 857 subscriptions, Riggs said.

The UofA is in the second year of a three-year plan to reduce journal subscriptions. Last year that university cut $100,000 worth of subscriptions and this year another $100,000 will be axed, Riggs said.

"I want to try to stop this reduction before it goes too far," he said.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson pointed out that ASU and the other two state universities have presented proposals to the Arizona Board of Regents each year to increase funding for the libraries at Arizona's three universities.

Nelson said although there has been "enormous progress in the improvement of library collections," the University has not been able to maintain the purchasing power of dollars allocated to the libraries.

"It's easier to raise money for library buildings than it is to raise money for library books," he said.

Nelson said that many administrators usually do not like to budget for continuing purchases because they don't see the results.

James Odenkirk, a health and physical education professor, said: "The faculty is not reacting vigorously enough against this cut."

"The library is one of the major lifelines of this institution."

In other Faculty Senate action, Associated Students President Karrin Kunasek announced a commuter town hall on April 14 for students living off-campus. Commuter students make up 85 percent of ASU's student body.

Trial

Craft testified he never heard Johnson say that Watkins' alleged threat constituted a felony because "it would have been an alarm for me."

Watkins was a "one-man wrecking crew," Craft said. "I just knew from a political point of view, he was a disaster."

One of Craft's tactics in defending

Mecham has been to attack the credibility of the prosecution's star witness, Department of Public Safety Director Ralph Milstead, by claiming Arizona's top cop used his state car for personal reasons.

But prosecutor Paul Eckstein asked if Craft billed the state for the Sedona leisure trip. Craft said he did, but defended the jaunt because he was "on call," waiting to hear from Mecham.

Outside the Senate, Craft said the excursion cannot be held against him for making charges of impropriety against Milstead.

"I don't think there's any parallel at all," Craft said. "If you want to make a big federal case out of that, I suggest you go ahead and do it."

Under questioning, Eckstein asked if Craft had ever told Mecham he should resign. Craft paused for nearly ten seconds, then said he talked to the governor often and recalled "telling the governor he should examine his options."

Mecham's steadfast refusal to step down has legal bills that compound at $10,000 per day, Craft testified.

Rally held to protest U.S. intervention in Nicaragua

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

Calling the recent United States intervention in Nicaragua "another Vietnam," protesters rallied in front of the Student Services Building Monday for immediate withdrawal of American troops from Honduras, and told students to send postcards showing their opposition to U.S. senators who support intervention.

President Reagan sent 3,200 troops to Honduras last week in response to Sandinista troop movements across the Honduran border. Reagan said the troops are merely a show of force, and are not meant for military action.

The Coalition Against War in Central America, a campus and local group formed in 1976 and the sponsor of the event, is planning a series of events this week against American intervention, including a debate Thursday between Lewis Tambs, former ambassador to Costa Rica and ASU history professor, and Martin Vega from the Nicaraguan embassy in Washington, D.C.

About 30 onlookers gathered to hear speeches by representatives from several campus groups.

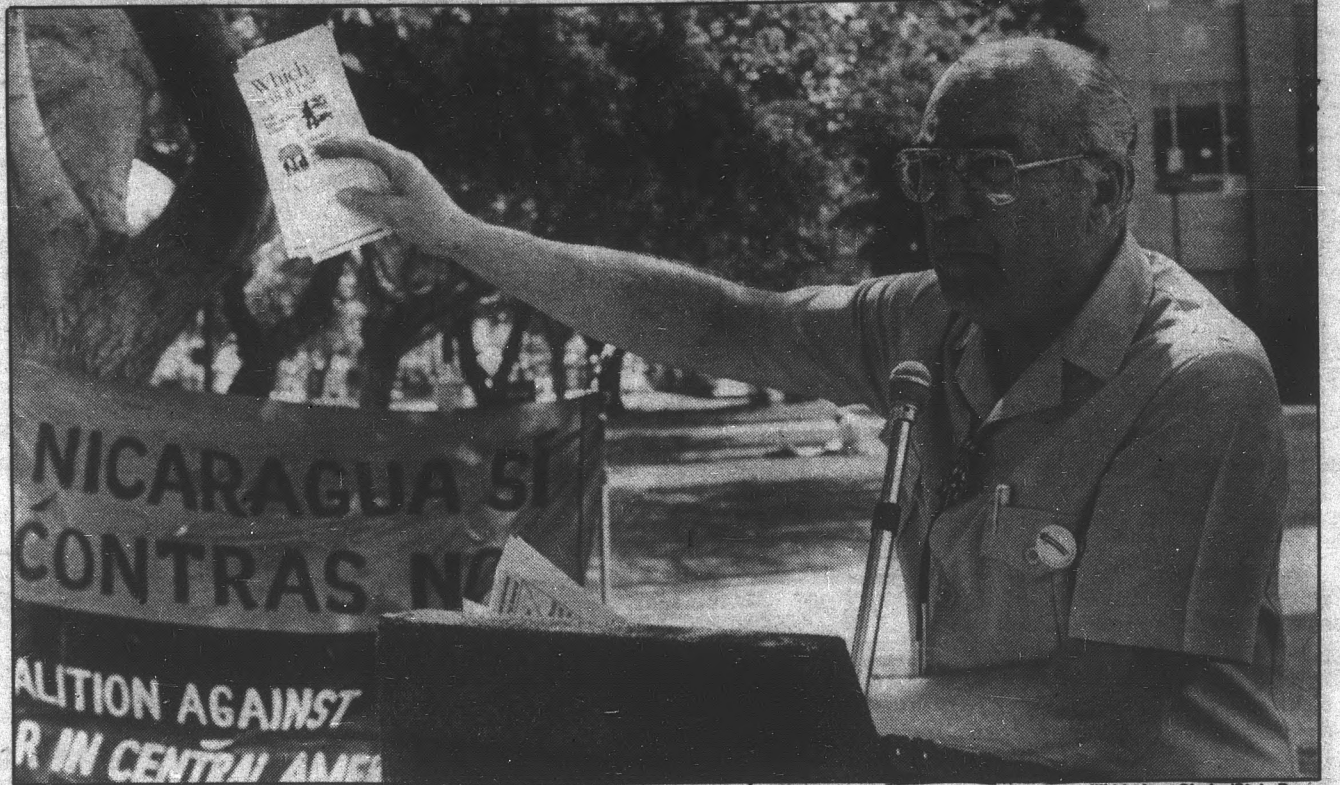

Steve Doncaster, a representative for the coalition, said the intervention is against public opinion, similar to that of Vietnam.

"It's the same pattern developing today as developed in Southeast Asia, so what we have today is troops in Honduras that are set to be there on training exercising, but we all know they are all there waiting to go into Honduras," Doncaster said.

During a speech by senior Denise Heap, one student screamed, "bleeding hearted liberal," a comment expressing support for American intervention.

"Yes, I'm a bleeding heart, because I care about you, and I don't want to see anyone come home in a body bag," said the 33-year-old Heap, who said she was a high school student during the Vietnam War and doesn't want to experience another war.

"We don't have any right to interfere in the internal affairs of any nation, we have the right to take care of ourselves and that is it."

Kevin Walsh, representative for the American Federation of Teachers and University Employees local 2050, said the "invasion" of Honduras was not the American people's responsibility, but they can help end the intervention.

"We can set this country right by stopping this shameful war in Nicaragua. Let's turn this country around," Walsh said.

"If they (students) feel strongly about the issues as we do, then I hope they get involved in resisting these policies."

Roger W. Axford, associate professor of secondary education, said a solution to U.S. intervention would be to strengthen the United Nations and develop world law.

Holding company acquires 2 regional Greyhound lines

PHOENIX (AP) — Greyhound Corp. officials said Monday that GLI Holding Co. has exercised its option to acquire Greyhound's two regional bus lines, Vermont Transit Co. Inc., and Texas, New Mexico & Oklahoma Coaches Inc.

The sale will be for cash and is expected to be completed within 90 days, Greyhound officials said. Other terms were not disclosed.

The Dallas-based GLI Holding obtained the option in 1987 when it purchased Greyhound Lines Inc., the nationwide bus company, from Greyhound.

"This transaction will complete the sale of our bus service operations in the United States," said John W. Teets, Greyhound chairman and chief executive officer.

"It further emphasizes Greyhound's focus on consumer products, services, transportation manufacturing and financial businesses."

Texas, New Mexico & Oklahoma Coaches offers scheduled intercity bus service on a 3,500 mile route serving locations in the Southwest.

Slingshots become dangerous new fad at ASU

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

In a throwback to medieval wars of catapults and fireballs, police say many ASU students are turning to catapults of their own — in the form of huge slingshots that hurl golf balls and other projectiles.

"It could kill someone," ASU police officer R.B. Morales said of the slingshots, which are made of surgical rubber tubing with a nylon pocket. "Our biggest fear is that these are going to get more popular."

Police said the huge slingshots, which take three people to operate, can fling objects up to 200 feet at speeds close to 100 mph. They have already led to the arrest of one ASU student and several hundred dollars worth of broken windows.

"They're buying them at swap meets for $10," Morales said. "You can put just about anything into them."

Morales said police first started noticing the use of the sling shots last week after receiving reports of golf balls being shot at motorists from the Cholla Apartment Complex — 150 golf balls were confiscated.

Police confiscated two slingshots this weekend on Alpha Drive (New Row), where officers say most of the crossfire occurs.

"They (fraternities) were having some type of orange wars," Morales said. Water balloons were also used.

A student reported to police on Saturday that the windshield on his car, which was parked in Lot 57, was shattered after a water balloon was launched from the roof of 701 Alpha Drive. Another vehicle-owner parked in that lot reported windshield damage from a water balloon.

Several windows on different floors of Manzanita residence hall, facing Alpha Drive, have also been broken.

Police have no idea why the slingshots have become student's weapon of choice.

"I guess they just like the idea that they can propel objects and people do not know where they came from," Morales said.

But police and University officials have begun to take action, he said.

"We're not going to tolerate it," Morales said, adding that students caught shooting objects can be charged with endangerment, a class-six felony.

The sling shots are also a violation of the University Code of Conduct, police said.

Dean of Student Life Leon Shell and Assistant Dean Art Carter, who discipline students for conduct violations, are away from campus until Thursday and unavailable for comment.

Heroin addict threatens to blow up house of girlfriend

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

Police are searching for a 24-year-old man who telephoned his ex-girlfriend and her mother six times Saturday threatening to blow up their house, police said. He is also wanted in connection with three other similar incidents.

Police said the women, who live in the 2100 block of East Alameda Drive, are terrified and will obtain an order of protection which prohibits calls, threats or contact of any kind.

The man, who police decline to identify, is reportedly a heroin addict and mentally unstable. He is reported to usually be armed with one or more handguns, police said.

In other incidents:

A Phoenix man, who claimed he was urinating in a yard, was arrested early Monday after a neighbor called police to report a prowler, police said.

police report

Tony Lynn Vannote, 32, 5129 N. 6th St., was booked into Tempe City Jail and charged with criminal trespassing.

Vannote was arrested after police set up a perimeter of the area and was tackled by an officer after a short chase, police said.

•A Tempe man was arrested after he allegedly stood naked and masturbated in front of two women and a 6-year-old girl who were in the laundry room at an apartment complex, police said.

Donovan Cunejo, 22, 1717 S. Jentilly No. 236, was booked into Tempe City Jail and charged with three counts of indecent exposure.

•A 19-year-old ASU student was arrested after he allegedly punched another student in the face twice and stole stereo equipment and a water cooler, police said.

Brad Hunt, a freshman business major, was charged with misdemeanor assault and theft, police said.

•An ASU student was arrested and charged with criminal nuisance after he allegedly fired several fireworks from the southside of Alpha Drive towards Manzanita Residence Hall, police said.

Steven P. Dillemath, was cited and released after a consent search of his room produced several bundles of illegal fireworks.

•An ASU student suffered minor injuries when an athletic department "courtesy cart" ran over his left foot at Palm Walk and Tyler Mall, police said.

UofA assistant named U. of Detroit coach

DETROIT (AP) — Ricky Byrdson, the top assistant under Arizona Coach Lute Olson the past five seasons, was named Monday the new head coach at the University of Detroit.

Byrdson, 31, takes over a program with a 14-44 record in the past two years. He becomes the 17th coach in the 81-year history of Titan basketball.

"I do believe this is a program that can be rebuilt," Byrdson said. "If I did not believe that I would not be here. We will be on a mission to show the high school coaches and players in the area that U-D basketball will be a good opportunity for them."

Byrdson takes over from John Mulroy, who assumed the job on an interim basis after Coach Don Sicko quit three games into the season. The Titans finished 7-23 and in last place in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference. They did, however, reach the finals of the conference tournament before losing to Xavier.

"We have hired an individual who is young, energetic and very personable," Detroit Athletic Director Brad Kinsman said. "He has been an integral part of one of the top programs in the nation under Lute Olson."

"He brings with him a well-rounded background in Division I basketball."

Byrdson has been an assistant at Arizona for six years, the past five under Olson. The Wildcats, who will face Iowa in the NCAA West Regional semifinals on Friday, were ranked near the top of the Associated Press basketball poll the entire season.

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Doug Robbins' run-scoring double in the sixth inning broke a 4-4 tie Monday and the Stanford Cardinal held on to beat Arizona 5-4, completing a three-game sweep of the Pacific-10 series.

The Cardinal, leading the Pac-10 Southern Division with a 7-1 record, made their overall mark 19-6 with a fifth straight victory. Steve Chitren went the final 5 2-3 innings for the pitching victory. The loser was Jim Richardson.

Stanford took a 4-0 lead in the first, when Tim Griffin hit a three-run homer. The Wildcats, 2-9 in the conference, drew even with the help of Kevin Long's two-run homer in the third.

NCAA tourney holds several surprises

Senior two-time All-America Mike Davies placed second at this weekend's NCAA meet in Ames, Iowa. Davies owns the ASU all-time win record at 136 victories.

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

Time had elapsed in the first match of the 1988 NCAA Wrestling Championships between Iowa's Brad Penrith and Jim Martin of Penn State.

With the viewers of ESPN and 11,000 spectators in Hilton Coliseum anxiously awaiting the outcome, the second-seeded Martin pulled off an upset, beating the favored Hawkeye wrestler, 5-2, for the 126-pound crown.

Pandemonium not only broke out in the Penn State sector of the arena, but eight more men, devoting all their attention to the match, also began to celebrate.

The seven Sun Devil wrestlers and 14th-year coach Bobby Douglas were interested in the outcome; because when Penrith lost the title bout, ASU had clinched the national championship.

Going into the final round of the tournament, the Sun Devils held a 93-81.5 lead over the perennially-tough Iowa squad. In order to clinch the title, the Hawkeyes had to lose one of its three matches in the final round.

"We have worked so hard and this is the best reward," 126-pounder Chip Park said.

But after the match, they were left speechless. The only thing the Sun Devils could muster was screaming, "We're number one!" while slapping high-fives and congratulating each other for their efforts.

This was the story of the entire tournament — unison. ASU backed each other and cheered each other on from the opening match between Zeke Jones (118 pounds) and Wayne Gibson of Old Dominion.

Jones, named All-America for the first time in his career, went on to defeat Gibson, 7-2, and take sixth place in the tournament.

The biggest setback of the tournament was for 190-pounder Mike Davies. In his last season wrestling for ASU, Davies has accomplished several feats. In addition to winning his third Pac-10 championship, he set the all-time victory record with 136 wins, and finished the highest of all Sun Devil qualifiers by finishing in second place.

Exhibition game takes pressure off Sun Devils

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

Regular-season pressures on the Sun Devil baseball team were alleviated for a few hours on Monday and the guys got a chance to just play ball.

The annual Cactus League-ASU exhibition ended with the Seattle Mariners beating the Devils by a score of 12-2 Monday afternoon at Packard Stadium.

Such a drubbing would ordinarily cost coach Jim Brock a sleepless night, but this time the outcome was easily dismissed.

'It's a chance to play a major-league ballclub. . . We don't worry about the emotional involvement.'
—Jim Brock

"We take the loss more lightly because it doesn't count on the record," Brock said. "It's a chance to play a major league ballclub, and I think that's fun for the kids. We don't worry about the emotional involvement."

ASU stayed close to the Mariners through the first six innings.

ASU starter Kurt Dempster had a rough first inning, walking the first three men of the game and allowing one run on a fielder's choice ground ball before getting out of the jam with a 5-4-3 double play.

The Mariners made it 3-0 in the third on the wings of Ken Phelps' two-run homer to right field. It was a homecoming of sorts for Phelps, a former Sun Devil who played under Brock in 1975-76.

In the ASU fifth, John Finn delivered Tim Spehr with a sacrifice fly and Kevin Higgins singled home Mike Burrola to make it 3-2.

Higgins, who had three hits on the day, was not intimidated by the opposition.

"When you put the uniform on, it's just another game," Higgins said. "You know that they are where you want to be eventually, but it doesn't enter your mind once the game starts."

"I get more nervous before a Six-Pac game than I did before this, because you're not really expected to win. It's a learning experience, and you learn just by watching them play."

The game unravelled for ASU in the seventh inning.

Dempster gave up two more runs before being relieved by Scott Hutson, who didn't fare much better.

The Mariners batted around and scored eight runs before the first out of the inning was recorded. Rich Renterea accounted for half of those with a grand slam over the left-field wall. ASU committed three errors in the inning.

The Sun Devils (26-8, 2-7 in the Six-Pac) resumes regular-season play tonight with a game against Nevada-Las Vegas. The series concludes at 2:30 p.m. today at Packard Stadium.

ASU women's tennis team downs UC-Santa Barbara

By DAVE BIGOS
State Press

The courts at Whiteman Tennis Center remained unfriendly to opposing teams as the ASU women's tennis team defeated the University of California-Santa Barbara, 6-3, on Monday.

The 22nd-ranked Sun Devils (9-7, 0-4 in the Pac 10) clinched the match when Jill Hamilton and Kristi Jonkosky downed Francesca Heron and Sara Mann, 6-3, 6-3.

"SB (UCSB) is a good team for us to play," coach Sheila McInerney said. "Even though we should be able to beat them, they can give a young team like us trouble."

The Sun Devils played five freshmen in the six singles positions.

McInerney said that it is tough to keep winning in perspective.

"We're a young team building for the future," she said. "They want to win now, but we have to look down the road. We obviously want to win every match but we have to set the foundation now."

ASU lost only two singles matches on the day.

Barbara Thompson lost a close match to Liz Costa, 5-7, 7-5, 6-2.

Laura Glitz, a junior and the most experienced tennis player of the squad, lost to Tracie Johnstone, 6-3, 6-3.

Glitz came back to win her doubles match, however, as she teamed with Karen Bergan to beat Johnstone and Julie Sanford, 6-7 (7-3), 6-4, 6-2.

"Laura lost her first match and then the first set in doubles but she just kept plugging away," McInerney said. "Good players and good teams just keep hanging in there."

"Look at the wrestling team (1988 NCAA Champions), they were down but they kept trying — even in the consolation rounds."

Jennifer Rojohn won her singles match, playing at the number two spot, over Mette Frank, 6-3, 6-3. Bergan was also triumphant in her match over Julie Coakley, 6-1, 6-3.

Jonkosky defeated Heron, 6-4, 7-5, and Paola Conte came up with a victory over Sanford, 6-4, 6-0.

Rojohn and Conte were downed by Coakley and Costa, 4-6, 7-5, 1-6, for the Sun Devils' only loss in doubles.

"We're not good enough to cruise by the lower teams yet," McInerney said. "Every match is still a little bit of a struggle."

The Sun Devils have been on a winning track ever since spring break, when they defeated 12th-ranked Texas, 5-4, in Austin, Texas. After that victory, they lost a close match to Trinity College before beating Grand Canyon and UCSB.

"The win against Texas over the break helped us a lot," McInerney said.

The tennis team will be facing some tough competition in the next few days.

Today it faces 19th-ranked U.S. International at 1:30 p.m. at Whiteman.

"It will be a tough match," McInerney said. "USI beat us last year, 7-2."

Including USI, the Sun Devils will face five Top-20 teams in the next two weeks.

"It will be tough," McInerney said. "But this will help us to keep looking forward."

"Of the matches we've lost so far, we've stayed close. We just need to keep in there, be aggressive and come back and win."

The men's tennis team was supposed to meet the University of Texas-El Paso Monday at Whiteman, but UTEP was forced to cancel the match and did not show up.

The men will play host to third-ranked Stanford at 1:30 p.m. Friday and 13th-ranked UCLA at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday at Whiteman.

Coach Lou Belken said the matches will be very tough even though the Sun Devils are coming off wins over top-ranked Southern California and 11th-ranked California.

"I believe UCLA will give us a harder time than USC did," Belken said. "And Stanford is loaded with talent; they have the top names in the country."

performance, but the team winning the national championship makes up for it," Davies said.

Earning the respect of many wrestlers was Park. The Mesa native took third place the hard way, having to wrestle his way from the onset of the consolation round. The senior entered the tournament as the fifth seed and finished his ASU career with a record of 82-24-2.

During the quarterfinal round, Jim Gressley (167 pounds) suffered a setback when he was knocked out in his match with Mike Amine of Michigan. Amine scored the fastest pin of the tournament in 35 seconds. Gressley, who qualified for his third NCAA tournament, came away with third place despite the mishap.

Also being named All-America were Tommy Ortiz (142 pounds), Dan St. John (158 pounds), and Rod Severn (HWT).

The tournament supplied everyone with surprises from beginning to end, and history repeated itself.

Douglas, who defeated Gable in the 1968 Olympic trials, pulled off another big victory 20 years later for the honor of being the best in the country.

4 in a row ASU badminton team captures another title

By CHRIS PIRKEY
State Press

For the fourth time in a row, ASU has swept the Collegiate National Badminton Championships, taking national titles in five divisions.

The nationals took place March 5 and 6 at Swarthmore College in Philadelphia. Coach Carol Fisher said ASU's domination of the championships came as no surprise to her, as the Sun Devils have been the top rated team all season, and have already won successive national titles.

ASU has dominated women's collegiate badminton since the early 1970s, winning 12 national titles in 18 years. The men have won nine titles since 1978.

Dedication and hard work are a part of the team's philosophy and, according to Fisher, the team contributes large amounts of both.

"They're pretty dedicated — dedication is an important element," Fisher said. "They practice a lot and they do a lot more than people realize."

Lee echoed Fisher's thoughts and added that he feels the training the team goes through played an important role in its victory in Philadelphia.

"It takes a lot of dedication because the sport is so misunderstood," Lee said. "But our love of the game is definitely there."

This year the ASU men's team won its division by 35 points, with Swarthmore College placing second with 5 points. The women's team won by 18½ points over Bryn Mawr College, which nabbed 19½ points to take second.

Fisher said the competition went pretty much like she expected, with all of her players making the semi-finals.

"I thought the women would be a little tougher — the point spread a little closer," Fisher said. "We were just really strong."

The individual women's title went to sophomore Liz Aronsohn, with the women's doubles title going to Aronsohn and junior Tracy Holmes.

Aronsohn won the women's title last year as a freshman, and is expected to dominate the women's collegiate badminton scene for the next two years.

Senior Benny Lee snagged the men's title, while Lee and junior Tom Carmichael took home the men's doubles title.

Lee placed second in the men's singles competition at the 1987 nationals, coming in behind former ASU player Chris Jogis. This year Lee finally got the chance to realize his dream — that of becoming a national champion.

"I had high hopes, and it looked good," Lee said. "Our main competition was from ASU, and I wasn't that worried."

Lee faced Carmichael in the finals for the championship crown. Lee said he felt confident going into the match because he had beaten Carmichael in practice more times than Carmichael had beaten him.

The mixed team also placed first, consisting of Lee and Aronsohn. Fisher said there were no mixed team point totals given due to the lopsided victory by ASU. Second through fifth places were given out, however, with Stanford taking second and Swarthmore placing third.

All-America honors went to Aronsohn, Holmes and sophomore Pam Rekiere for the women; and Lee, Carmichael, sophomore Joel Kiernan, junior Joel Goldstein and sophomore David Shay for the men.

Sun Devil swimmers finish in NCAAs best since 1981

By CHRIS PIRKEY
State Press

At the end of three long days, the ASU women's swimming team headed home from the NCAA Championships in Austin, Texas with their most successful finish in seven years and several school records.

The seventh-ranked Sun Devils (7-2 in dual meets), who finished fifth in the Pac-10 Conference, ended the year placing sixth in the NCAA Championships this past weekend.

"We went into this championship with a young team and came out with veterans," coach Tim Hill said.

Texas again prevailed victorious and won their fifth straight title with an NCAA record of 661 points.

Following Texas were Florida (542), Stanford (419), California (241), Clemson (218.5), and ASU (205).

Arizona finished in 13th place.

"It was really fierce competition and we have a really young team," freshman Jodi Quas said, after attending her first NCAA Championship.

During the first day of competition, the 200-yard medley relay team placed eighth in the finals, and tied a third-best mark in Sun Devil history.

The team consisted of freshmen Quas, Amy Bush and Michelle Thompson and junior Missy Allington.

Beginning on Friday, the Sun Devils attempted to recover from the previous day, when the 200-yard medley relay team was the only ASU event to place in the top 16 (only the top 16 advance to finals).

One Sun Devil scoring for the team was Susie Mortenson, who placed eighth in the 100-yard breaststroke, setting a school record previously held by former ASU Olympian Terri Baxter.

Also in the 200-yard freestyle, Thompson broke an ASU school record and finished in 10th place.

"It is nice to have the record," said Thompson. "It feels good because I didn't think the 200-yard was my best event."

Other individual swimmers adding to the point total on Friday were Quas and Bush.

Completing the day for the Sun Devils, the 400-yard medley relay team (Quas, Mortenson, Bente Rist and Osborne) placed fifth with a time of 3:46.57.

The 200-yard freestyle relay team also finished fifth with a time of 1:33.43, tying a record set in 1981.

The 200-yard team consisted of Thompson, Osborne, Kim Staab and Allington.

In the last day of competition, ASU advanced six individuals and one team to the finals Saturday night.

The results of the evening included several All-American performances and new team records.

Adding to the superior finish were Quas, Osborne, Hau, Linder and Erlén.

Achieving school records on Saturday were Osborne (100-yard freestyle), Hau (200-yard breaststroke) and Linder (200-yard butterfly).

Also adding a school record to the list was the 400-yard freestyle relay team, which finished sixth.

The team turned in a time of 3:23.13 and included swimmers Allington, Osborne, Thompson and Colette Van de Berg.

Christina Erlén also competed for the Sun Devils in the 1650-yard freestyle.

"I am really pleased with the team's finish," Quas said. "It is exciting because a majority of the team are freshmen."

The Sun Devils, under third-year coach Hill, improved their performance from last year's seventh place.

"Our goal was to break ASU school records and that is what we did," Quas said. "I know Tim (Hill) was really happy. He always tells us to be pleased with our performance, but not satisfied."

Two ASU track members qualify for NCAA's

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

Two Sun Devils qualified for the NCAA Championships, and the entire team turned in good scores on Saturday, ASU track coach Ed Gorman said.

"It's good to qualify this early in the season," Gorman said. "Competing at home gave the entire team an opportunity to compete. They train hard, and get to come out and compete — that's their pay day."

ASU competed against Colorado State, Manhattan, New Mexico, Texas and Texas-El Paso at Sun Angel Stadium.

The ASU women's team topped the competition, while the men beat all the teams except Texas, Gorman said.

The Texas track team was coming off competition in the NCAA Indoor Championships, in which they won the women's division.

Gorman said he was happy with the team's first home performance.

"We're very pleased," Gorman said. "We had a nice size crowd and had a lot of support. I think they (the athletes) responded."

Jackie Belzner cleared 6-0 to win the high jump. The next closest mark was 5-4 $\frac{1}{4}$, by Sun Devils Gea Johnson and Lennon Gardner who finished second and third, respectively.

Belzner qualified for the NCAA championships, and attempted to clear 6-1 $\frac{1}{4}$, the Olympic height, but came up short.

"I think I have the ability to get it," Belzner said. "I've already jumped six feet a couple times this season."

"My coach (Gorman) puts the bar up to 6-2, 6-3, and makes me jump at it."

Belzner also won the tripple jump spanning a 38.5 distance, and qualified for the Pac-10 championships.

"I don't even train for the triple jump," Belzner said. "I just compete in it to add to the team score."

All-America Lynda Tolbert qualified for the NCAA's with a time of 13 seconds in the 100-meter high-hurdles. During the race, Tolbert kicked into a higher gear to leave Texas' Karen Nelson in the dust.

"I wasn't expecting her to push me, but she stayed with me for the first five hurdles," Tolbert said. "That's when I picked up speed and headed home."

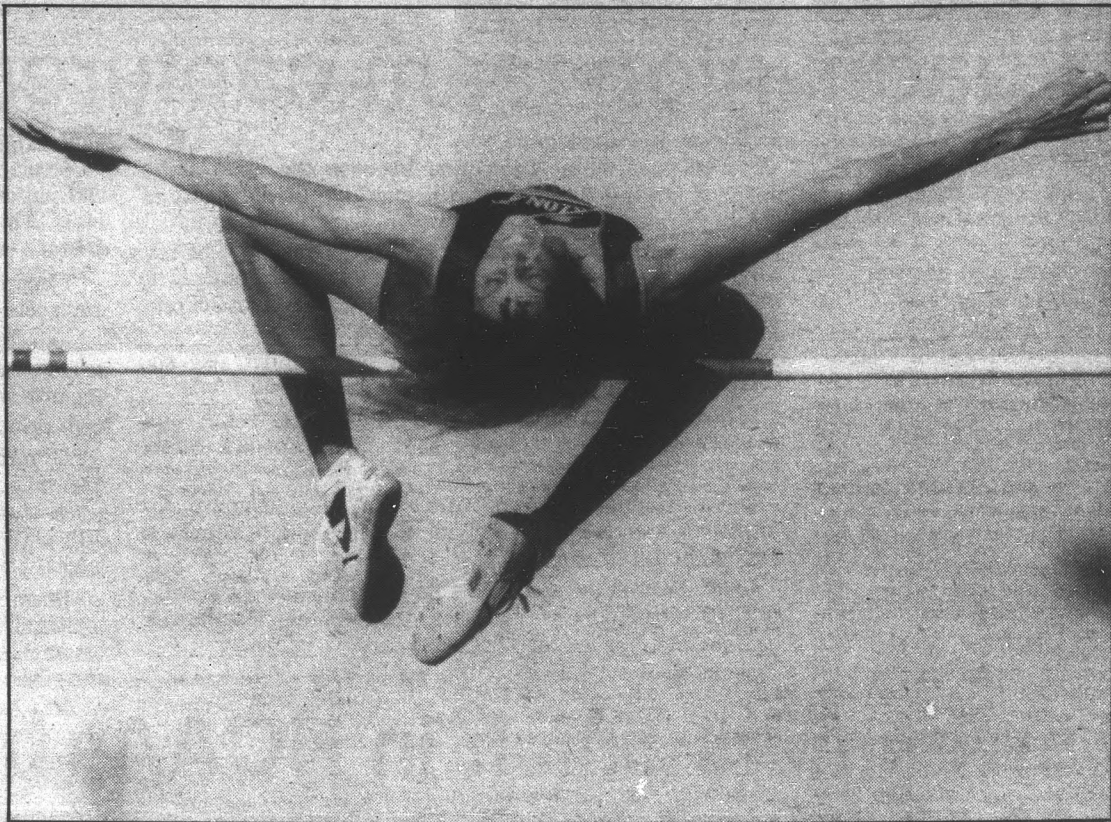

Tolbert and Nelson finished two and three in the event at the NCAA Indoor Championships.

Competing in various individual invitational meets put Tolbert against top athletes. Now that the indoor season is over, Tolbert will be able to spend more time with the ASU team, which focuses mainly on the outdoor season.

But there will be meets where Tolbert will be the lone star in some of the events she competes in.

"I know what I have to do," Tolbert said. "I've run some of my best times alone."

The ASU women's 4x100-meter relay team of Tolbert, Jacinta Bartholomew, Tamika Foster

Brian O'Mahoney/Sun Devil Spark

On her third and final attempt at 6' in the high jump, Jackie Belzner clears the crossbar. The jump earned her a win and qualification for the NCAA's.

and Dana Jones ran a time of 45.30, finishing second to Texas' 44.99. The Sun Devils missed qualifying for the NCAA's by .06 seconds.

"Our hand-offs were really off," Tolbert said. "Texas took up all our tapes. We had our marks all measured out, and Texas stole our tapes."

But the ASU women's 4x400 team later took first with a 3:44.43 time, ahead of Texas who finished at 3:47.59.

The Texas women's team was leading the competition going into the last event (4x400) and was winning the race.

"Jacinta picked up 25 yards, caught up, and passed off to Tamika who held the lead," Gorman said. "They (the relay team) not only won the race, but won the meet for us."

Senior All-America Gordon Bugg and sophomore Robert Rucker finished one and two in the in the 400-meter hurdles.

"It's a great event for us," Gorman said. "Gordon trained hard and ran very well."

The ASU men's 4x100 relay team of Bugg, Shawn Flood, Edward Lovelace and Curtis Moss missed qualifying for the NCAA's by .73 seconds.

The team ran without Sun Devils Chip Rish and Curtis Moss, who sat out the race.

Rish was resting to speed up the healing process of a hamstring injury, and Moss was not feeling well after competing in the 400-meters.

In the women's shot put, Sun Devils Donna Mirani and Johnson took first and second, with distances of 41-4 $\frac{1}{2}$ and 40-3 $\frac{1}{2}$, respectively.

Johnson also finished first in the women's long jump. She turned in top scores in five events throughout the day.

ASU pole vaulter Mark Gersten and Texas' Warren Smith both cleared 17-0 $\frac{3}{4}$, but Smith won the event having a higher previous mark.

Both vaulters tried to clear the NCAA qualifying mark, (17-5 $\frac{1}{4}$) but neither succeeded.

"I'm pretty confident I can qualify," Gersten said. "I'd like to qualify here, but I'm counting on getting it at Mt SAC (track meet)."

Shane Collins threw the shot put 58-6 $\frac{1}{4}$ to win the event. Collins could have qualified for the NCAA's on his first throw, but lost his balance and had a foot foul.

Sammy Bryant, coming off his fourth surgery, returned to the Sun Devil line-up and received a personal best in the shot put, Gorman said.

Gorman said the scores were not as important as for the team to compete together. The athletes had a lot of personal bests, and many came close to qualifying for the NCAA's.

"There will be a lot of opportunities to qualify for the NCAA's," Gorman said. "If it comes (qualifying), it's great. Right now there is no pressure."

On Saturday, ASU will play host to Brigham Young, Idaho, Dartmouth, NAU, LSU, Washington and the women's team from Utah State at Sun Angel Stadium.
