

Entrepreneur launches bid for top Sprint post

By SHERI JOHNSON
State Press

ASU students saw a different kind of presidential campaign Wednesday as a 32-year-old entrepreneur rallied for the presidency of US Sprint in front of the Cady Mall fountain.

Paul Walton, 32, president of Paul Walton Promotions, spoke to about 50 students at noon in an attempt to generate support for his desire to run the multimillion-dollar long-distance phone service.

Walton's company, an independent contractor for Sprint between March 1984 and September 1986, generated almost 600,000 customers for the long-distance carrier.

Sprint recently paid Walton $1.7 million to settle a dispute that arose when Walton claimed he had not been paid full commission on his sales. Walton said he was not satisfied with the amount of the settlement and that, because his problems resulting from the inefficiency of Sprint's billing system, he wants to be president and change the system.

"I have chosen this tedious task of campaigning throughout the United States," Walton said. "I will go before the board of directors of the parent companies of US Sprint and ask them to make me, Paul Walton, president."

Sprint's parent companies are United Telecom and General Telephone and Electric Co. The board of directors meeting will be April 12 in Kansas City, Mo.

Walton said so far he has spent $10,000 on his campaign and anticipates spending up to $60,000 before he is finished. Walton's next stop will be the University of California-Berkeley.

Syd Courson, director of media relations for Sprint, said Walton's campaign is "ludicrous."

"It's just amazing that he can think he could become president of a multimillion-dollar company," Courson said. "I don't begin to understand his motive."

Walton said his motive is to correct the problems his customers are having with Sprint's service.

"Instead of having a good life and going off to Club Med like probably anyone else in their right mind would do, I've decided that for all the customers that we signed up, such as many people here in this audience — who never got their service, who got the wrong service, who got the wrong bill, who never got a bill — we will show the company that one person who signed up 600,000 customers still can make a difference."

Walton asked students who have experienced poor service from Sprint to write to the company telling them they heard Walton speak on campus. Walton said this will give him the attention he needs for his campaign.

Although Courson agreed that Sprint has had billing problems, he said that the company has been working to correct them.

"The problems had to do with order processing," he said. "When Sprint merged with US Telecom, the two companies had separate procedures. A business decision was made to continue with the two separate systems."

It turned out that the two systems were incompatible, which is what caused most of the billing problems, Courson said. The results were that customers received incorrect billings and at times the billings were months late, he added.

"We conceded these were problems and

Carlson testifies protocol fund belonged to state

By BEN MCCONNELL
State Press

PHOENIX — A former top aide to impeached Gov. Evan Mecham testified in the Senate Wednesday that she believed money in the governor's protocol fund belonged to the state.

"I was under the impression they were public funds," said Donna Carlson, who served as Mecham's legislative liaison. She contradicted earlier testimony of former Mecham Chief of Staff Jim Colter, who said $92,000 collected during the governor's January inaugural ball was private and for use at Mecham's discretion.

Carlson, who resigned in November, said her discovery that Mecham borrowed $80,000 from the fund contributed to her decision to leave.

Carlson testified that she feared being swallowed into the controversy that plagued the administration last fall when the protocol fund loan, a loan from Tempe developer Barry Wolfson, and an alleged threat toward Carlson's life, made headlines.

Mecham is in the midst of a Senate trial that charges him with obstructing an investigation, concealing the Wolfson loan and "embezzling" the $80,000.

Mecham insisted during House hearings in February he borrowed the money because his son, Dennis, could put it in an account that earned a higher interest rate.

On the witness stand Wednesday, Colter said he thought the money raised by Mecham's inaugural ball, which was deposited in Valley National Bank as a protocol fund, did not belong to the state.

Prosecutors charge Mecham embezzled the $80,000 to help his ailing car dealership.

Carlson testified she learned of the $80,000 transaction when, after a meeting, Colter appeared "extremely upset and quite depressed." She said Colter told her, "I don't think the governor understands the magnitude of the debt."

Carlson said Colter told her the debt was an upcoming installment payment on the $350,000 loan from Wolfson, and Mecham wanted to forge ahead with an expensive tabloid.

"He (Colter) told me, 'I had to loan him (Mecham) $80,000 out of the protocol fund,'" Carlson said.

She said her reaction was that "Mecham could go to jail" for loaning the money to Mecham Pontiac.

Meanwhile, Senate President Carl Kunasek, R-Mesa, told his colleagues that records of how many questions senators ask and how much time is taken by their questions is being compiled.

Thusfar, senators have filled 717 pages with questions, prosecutors William French and Paul Eckstein — 605 pages, and defense lawyers Fred Craft and Jerris Leonard — 1,476 pages.

Senators have asked nearly 20 percent more questions than prosecutors.

Sen. Tony West, R-Phoenix, who has been a frequent questioner in the trial, said senators have been doing a "good job" in their probes, adding that he took offense to the record-keeping.

But Presiding Officer Frank X. Gordon, who requested the record-keeping, said it was not meant to pressure senators to ask fewer questions.

Tempe merchants say 'bed tax' won't hurt hotels

By J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

Tempe merchants said a measure creating a 2 percent "bed tax" will not hurt Tempe's hotels or the city's tourist industry.

The tax was approved by Tempe residents 3,952 votes to 1,150 votes in Tuesday's primary election and will place a 2 percent fee on the use of hotel rooms. The tax is expected to raise about $750,000 for the city annually.

Steve Snyder, president of the Tempe Chamber of Commerce, said the tax should not affect the ability of Tempe hotels to compete in the tourist industry.

"Had it been any more than 2 percent, it might have put them at a bigger disadvantage than the rest of the Valley," Snyder said.

Joe Bellerose, president of the Tempe Motel and Hotel Association, agreed the tax would not hurt Tempe hotels.

"Even with the tax, we are still in line with other hotels in the area," said Bellerose, who is also general manager of the East Airport Ramada Inn.

"We feel we will not lose visitors out of Tempe because of this tax," he said.

Michael Keeler, general manager of the Tempe Mission Palms Hotel, said the tax cannot be considered a small expense. However, he said the tax should not drive tourists to other areas of the Valley since other cities also have bed taxes.

"I don't think it's anything you can call minute," Keeler said. "It has an impact on the dollar amount of the room."

"I don't think this will affect the traveling consumer," he said.

Bellerose said since the tax is based on a percentage and not a set fee, smaller motels will not be affected more adversely than larger resorts.

"That is one of the things we insisted on," Bellerose said.

Jaime Molera, night manager of the 56-room Franciscan Inn, agreed the tax would not be detrimental to smaller hotels.

"I don't think it will affect us," Molera said. Molera said the tax should be viewed as an investment in Tempe, not as an additional cost to the motel business.

Israeli army arrests hundreds, shoots, wounds Arab protestor

JERUSALEM (AP) — The army made overnight raids throughout the occupied lands Wednesday, arresting hundreds of Palestinians in its latest strategy for ending a rebellion in which more than 100 Arabs and an Israeli soldier have been killed.

Israeli warplanes flew their second raid in six days against guerrilla targets in south Lebanon.

Arab reports said about 500 Palestinians were rounded up in the sweep. Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said 3,000 have been detained since riots began Dec. 8 in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Soldiers shot and wounded an Arab protestor in Gaza's Jabaliya refugee camp, officials at Shifa Hospital reported.

They also said a Palestinian from the Deir al Balah camp had serious head injuries from a beating.

According to U.N. figures, 107 Palestinians have been killed since the violence began, nearly all by Israeli army gunfire or beatings. The Israeli soldier was shot to death by an Arab last weekend.

The number of major protests and street battles has declined dramatically in recent days. Rabin credited tough Israeli policies of mass arrest and economic sanctions.

Reagan announces visit to Moscow for summit meeting with Gorbachev

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan announced Wednesday that he would go to Moscow from May 29 to June 2 for his fourth summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and his first visit to a nation he once branded an "evil empire."

The five-day visit will mark the first trip to Moscow by an American president since Richard Nixon's 1974 summer meeting with Leonid Brezhnev. Later that same year, in November, Gerald Ford met with Brezhnev in the Soviet port city of Vladivostok.

The Reagan-Gorbachev summit's intended centerpiece is the signing of a treaty to scrap 30 percent to 50 percent of the superpowers' long-range bombers, missiles and submarines. However, Reagan already has suggested an agreement will not be ready, saying time is too limited.

Asked Wednesday if a treaty would be completed, Reagan said, "I have no way of answering that" and added that the two nations were committed to the cutback.

Tempe businessmen upset about forced relocation

By TERESA OWEN
State Press

Tempe businessmen said Wednesday that they are upset at being forced to relocate at less-desirable locations and possibly lose money to make way for the construction of a downtown mall.

John Aguero, owner of John's Shoe Repair, said the city has assumed a "who are you? attitude" in relocating the established merchants.

Aguero said his shop was located at the corner of Mill Avenue and University Drive for 11 years, before he was forced to move to the corner of Priest and University drives.

Dave Fackler, Tempe deputy community developer, said the five-story downtown mall "Mission Centre," which was approved by the Tempe City Council March 17, will include 75,000 square feet for retail businesses and 47,000 square feet for offices.

A 1,171-space parking garage will be built adjacent to the Mill Avenue mall, located between University Drive and Fifth Avenue, and will replace what is now a 360-space parking lot.

Aguero said the city was originally going to give the merchants three months to relocate but allowed six months when the merchants complained.

But Fackler said the merchants knew one-and-a-half years in advance that they were going to have to move. He said the city's final notice to the merchants was sent six months prior to the moving deadline.

"The city has been generous to make sure the relocation was painless," Fackler said.

Some local businessmen said the redevelopment of downtown Tempe, including the mall construction, is a waste of money and has caused them to lose business.

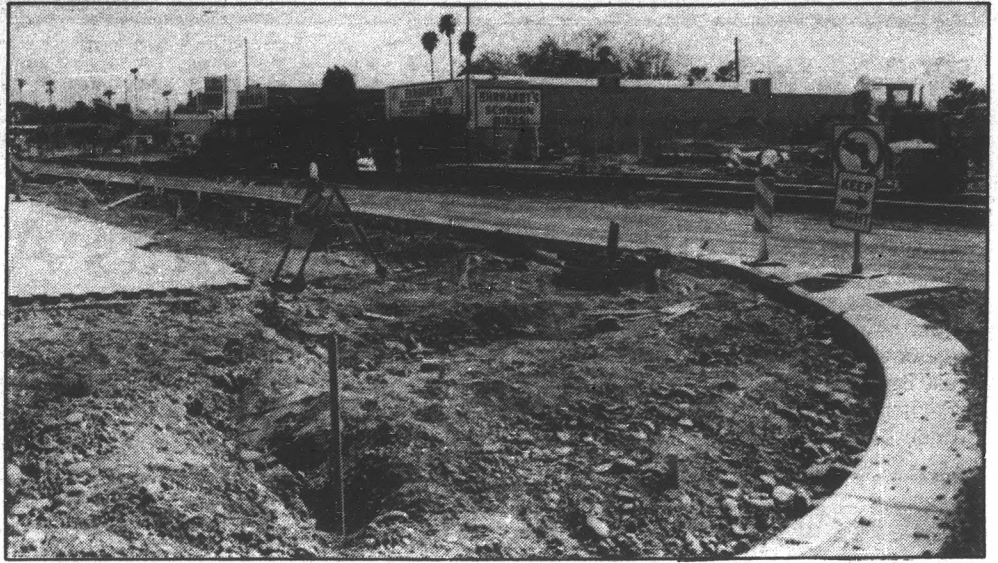

Rundle's liquor store manager Gary Hamilton said the new location of his store, 1324 W. University Drive, is not as profitable as his previous location on Mill and University.

Although Hamilton refused to give an exact amount, he said Rundle's has suffered a "substantial loss" because of the new location.

But Fackler said the redevelopment council does not believe the new locations will cause merchants to lose money.

Hamilton said there is not enough business because the store is no longer close to the ASU campus or Sun Devil Stadium.

Fackler said the city's redevelopment council feels the city is making progress and will provide building space for retail stores and offices.

Both Aguero and Hamilton said they feel the local businesses that used to be in downtown Tempe made the area special. They also said the downtown businesses brought in a large revenue.

Mission Centre and Centerpoint, another planned mall that is part of the redevelopment, are expected to bring in an increase of $2 million to $4 million in tax revenues, Fackler said.

Experts examine Arizona's two major research universities

PHOENIX (AP) — Efficiency experts hired to study the state's university system are trying to determine whether Arizona needs, or can afford, two large research colleges.

ASU and the UofA both attach a high priority to research. ASU is on the verge of becoming a major research institution while the UofA already has achieved that status.

The Texas consulting firm of Coopers & Lybrand plans to present its report today to the Board of Regents' Task Force on Excellence, Efficiency and Competitiveness.

The consultants have recommended that regents spend more time creating a "vision" for Arizona's universities that would address crucial issues such as the need for major research institutions.

"(There is) no over-arching strategy or vision expressed by the board which addresses critical issues such as enrollment caps, variable tuitions, minority access and funding of 'big science,'" the consultants observe.

"Problems include the extent to which Arizona can afford two 'flagship' research universities, the optimal enrollment at various campuses and future plans for additional branch campuses or universities."

The report is the culmination of four months' work by the firm, which is being paid $300,000. The analysis is considered a key ingredient of the task force's year-long study of the university system.

The project began in March 1987 after Gov. Evan Mecham called for reductions in funds for the universities and questioned their efficiency.

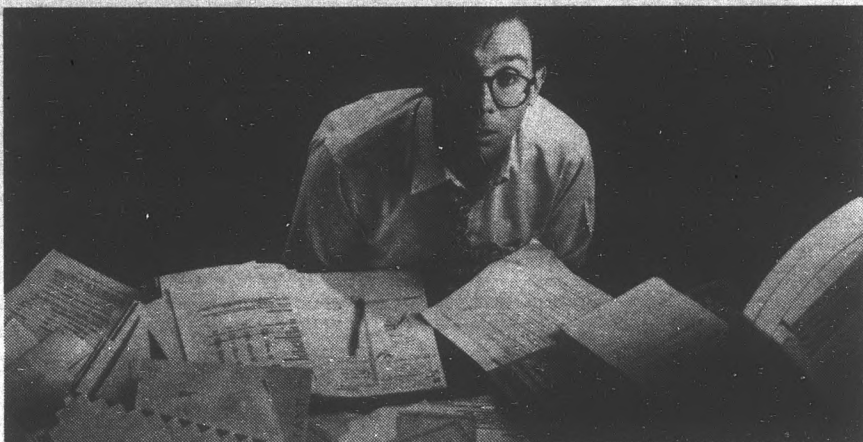

The consultants released an outline of their report two months ago but have waited until now to provide detailed recommendations.

Based on interviews conducted last summer, the consultants said excessive competition among Arizona's universities is taking precedence over their attempts to compete nationally and internationally.

"Advanced scientific research is increasingly requiring such large investments that duplications of recent efforts are prohibitively expensive and in many cases (supercomputers for example) institutional collaboration is needed," the firm said.

John Duffy, the firm's partner in charge of management consulting services, said Tuesday that Coopers & Lybrand has not concluded that Arizona would be better off with only one major research institution.

He said the consultants believe that duplication among universities can be healthy, as long as it is done properly.

Justice or pardon?

'Iranscam' highlights American ignorance of rights

Mike Ritter
Staff Artist

BULLETIN: Apathy and corruption sweep nation's capitol — outraged voters demand more daycare centers. Film at eleven.

A recent Gallup poll indicates that most Americans are sick and tired of the Iran-Contra affair. Apparently the undermining of the safeguards which separate a free society from despotism just isn't good copy.

Actually, Iranscam never did have the kind of "punch" one associates with truly great scandals such as Watergate or Gary Hart's hormonal imbalance.

That's what's so insidious about it.

The precedent set by Iranscam — and the by the apathetic attitude of many citizens — is the most subversive and dangerous scandal to have ever befallen our government.

AND NOBODY CARES!

In fact, common wisdom these days dictates that the recently indicted framers of the arms-for-hostages-for-money-for-more arms-for-Contras scheme will never face justice.

Sen. Orin Hatch (R-Utah) has come right out and asked President Reagan to grant each of them a full pardon before they are brought to trial.

According to Hatch, Ollie "The Shredder" North and the other Iranscam framers cannot possibly receive a fair trial in the District of Columbia. You see, the population from which potential jurors would be selected is overwhelmingly cause for justice is a disgusting example of the kind of abuse of power many Americans are willing to tolerate. A pardon would be the equivalent of an official cover-up, serving no other cause than that of the Republican party in November. Unfortunately it's a cover-up many voters would accept. Ollie North is just a lot more personable than Dick Nixon.

During the House hearings on the Iran-contra scandal North was nearly deified by many as the all-American patriot who to pardon North and his cohorts and sweep the whole ugly affair under the rug ... George Bush.

The last thing Bush needs is a stint on the witness stand — under oath no less. He has very successfully dodged questions about his role in the scandal. His defiance of such news hounds like Dan Rather and his steadfast loyalty to Reagan has even helped him in some circles.

Undoubtedly, Republicans are being forced to consider a choice between the lesser of two P.R. blunders.

Which would the voters sooner forget — the trial of several former top aides spewing God-knows-what about Reagan's foreign policy, or a presidential pardon wrapped up neatly in the name of national security and compassionate justice?

A pardon for North, Poindexter and the others would indeed be a triumph — a triumph of personality over justice; a triumph over the separation of powers; a triumph over the rule of law.

In a society where citizens are so painfully ignorant of their rights and the machinery of their political system, it should come as no surprise that we herald those who seek to destroy it.

Between justice and pardon, they'll probably bet we'd buy the latter.

They're probably right.

'The last thing Bush needs is a stint on the witness stand — under oath no less.'

Democratic. Therefore, reasons Hatch, a full presidential pardon is the only way to protect their rights.

Heck, with such champions of constitutional law as Orin Hatch out there to protect us, who needs democracy

Hatch also contends that the nation must be spared the anguish such a trial would inflict upon our moral fiber.

The grossly veiled facade that a presidential pardon would serve some noble

"stuck it to them commies on Capitol Hill."

Congress bashing has always been a favorite pastime of Americans. Legislators levy taxes. Period. And anyone who thumbs his nose at this body is truly hero material.

Never mind that the executive branch selling arms to Iran and diverting the money to the Contras in direct defiance of Congress flagrantly violates the most basic tenant of our republic. They meant well!

Of course there is a more practical reason

Applauding Heap

Editor:

Finally, there has been an article on Denise Heap in the State Press that I can applaud! I'm sure that there are many on campus who are breathing a sigh of relief at the news of her resignation as chair of the Lesbian/Gay Academic Union. Although I admire Heap for her outspokenness on delicate issues, many times her methods and attitudes left much to be desired. Heap claimed to be the spokesperson for gays and lesbians on this campus. She was never that!

There are hundreds, and possibly thousands, of gays and lesbians on this campus. The LGAU is composed of only a handful of those people. Most of those members, like the male co-chairperson, wish to remain anonymous for understandable reasons. However, it is the silent gays and lesbians on this campus who allow someone like Denise Heap to take the spotlight. Perhaps I should not fault Heap for this, but because she is the only one making her voice heard on this campus, she gives the appearance of being a militant lesbian feminist who calls the shots for the organization and uses her position to serve her own interests, while claiming to speak on behalf of all gays and lesbians on this campus.

I, for one, want to make it perfectly clear that I have never considered her to be a spokesperson representing my concerns and attitudes at ASU. My gay and lesbian friends on this campus, many of whom are comfortably open regarding their sexual orientation, have often been heard groaning whenever Heap has made one of her pronouncements. ASU has gained more in notoriety than in progress with Heap at the helm of the LGAU. I would personally like to thank her for her resignation.

I would like to extend my appreciation to those faculty members, departments heads, staff members and heterosexual students on this campus who have shown courage, understanding and compassion in their acceptance of openly gay and lesbian students within their academic units. They have helped us more than they realize in coming to terms with ourselves, enabling us to concentrate on receiving the education we came here for without having to deal with prejudice and recrimination. I do not have to name these people or departments. They know who they are.

It is my hope that by working together we can overcome the fear and loathing of gays and lesbians that still permeates much of the student body, particularly in ASASU.

I do not believe progress will be made in this direction by people like Heap crying "foul" and bringing lawsuits every time they don't get their way. I also don't believe that progress will be made by those who insist on hiding in their closets and letting someone else do the talking for them. If the members of the LGAU want to make a difference on this campus, they need to begin speaking as a body and as individuals in their daily associations with others rather than relying on someone like Denise Heap to do it for them.

State Press GPA?

Editor:

Concerning the March 23 editorial by Darrin Hostetler, "pathetic" is the word . . .

. . . the word concerning his editorial, that is.

Hostetler takes the opportunity to denigrate the ASU fraternity system during the self-motivating celebration of our goals in what we call Greek Week. He does this by doing an image slam-dunk with the issue of the fraternity grade point averages.

Unfortunately, Mr. Hostetler may need a little schooling himself, in basic statistics. The fact that "Nineteen of 20 ASU fraternities failed to achieve the average GPA for male undergraduates . . ." is no crime. The 2.60 average GPA is just that — the average grade points achieved, not the ideal. (That's 4.0, remember?) Some fraternity members make higher GPAs than the average; some make lower GPAs . . . just like the general ASU population.

As Hostetler said, "The situation is simple . . . (what fraternities promote) . . . is making friends." Of course, grades, community service, business contacts and social skills are also promoted, as noted in the editorial. But, if the primary goal of fraternities were a 4.0 GPA, then we would not be fraternities, but rather academic honor societies.

It is regrettable that the State Press should again choose to jump into such a boring tirade of judgmental attitudes, when many other campus, state, national and world situations might better merit print coverage and analysis.

In closing, I'm curious what the average GPA of State Press editors is. Let's hope that the words "appalling" or "pathetic" do not come to mind.

Growth

'Relaxed campus setting' should be University goal

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

The cover of the 1987-88 ASU Directory of faculty, staff and students features photos of campus construction scenes outlined against a field of black.

In the lower right-hand corner there is a famous quotation from Winston Churchill: "We shape our buildings; thereafter they shape us."

Churchill was certainly not an environmental psychologist, but the relationship that he recognized between the physical environment we live and work in and our behavior is extremely relevant for consideration at ASU.

The construction motif is especially appropriate for ASU this year, as the campus has been torn from end to end by growling bulldozers and sweeping, octopus-like cranes. There is no question that we are indeed shaping our buildings — destroying the older ones and erecting the new. But exactly how they will shape us and how the phenomenal growth explosion will effect students is still a matter for debate.

The purpose of the University campus is to furnish an environment that facilitates intellectual development — an island of buildings and landscaping that is sheltered from the outside world, where the intense pursuit of scholarly matters is unhampered by noise and other sensory distractions.

The classic ideal of the University, with ample green spaces and isolated buildings — like that of the Ivy League and some Big-10 schools — has proven to be excellent for this purpose. But at a large, rapidly expanding institution like ASU — afflicted with tight budgetary pursestrings — it is becoming increasingly difficult to provide an environment that is both functional and attractive.

And if the environment is not attractive, it may not be really functional either.

Prof. Roger L. Schluntz, director of the ASU School of Architecture, said: "Obviously, the architecture on campus is extremely important to the overall learning process."

"Our perceptions of the environment have something to do with our expectations of that environment."

"The fundamental issue is whether the institution reflects an academic atmosphere as opposed to that of a shopping mall."

While disappearing campus characteristics such as aesthetically pleasing buildings and open green areas are less tangible academic assets than textbooks and movie equipment, they are no less vital to the educational process.

"If there are no cues or clues, some indicators of a relaxed campus setting, then the environment becomes something students have to overcome rather than an aid," Schluntz said.

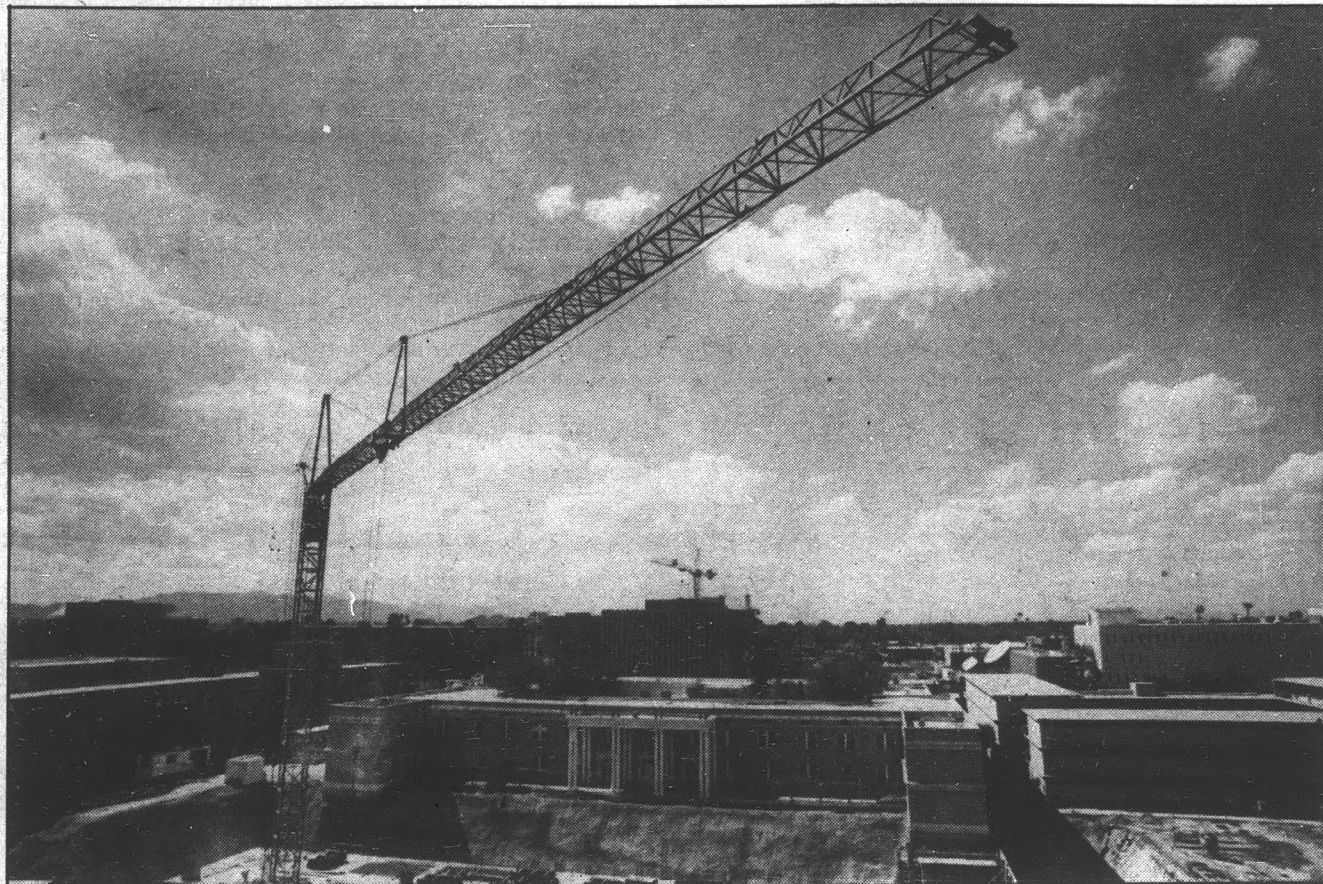

"One ought to be able to 'read' over a campus and say — ah, this is conducive to learning."

While there is agreement among many students and faculty that there are buildings on campus that are both functional — in the sense that they accommodate large numbers of students — and aesthetically pleasing, campus construction plans have sometimes favored new buildings that were not on par with their predecessors.

"I think there is a presumption that new is better than old," Schluntz said. "That has not always been borne out by fact."

Younger is not necessarily better.

West Hall, the current home of the School of Social Work, is slated for destruction within the next five years as part of Hayden Library expansion. Several members of the student body, including State Press editors and Associated Students officials, have expressed concern that destroying West Hall is a prime example of irrationally favoring the "new" over the "old," and insist the building should be saved.

College of Liberal Arts Sen. Patrick McWhortor, who sponsored a resolution — passed unanimously by the ASASU Senate — that called upon the administration to hold open hearings on the issue of campus construction, said preserving campus architectural assets is "vital."

"We really don't have that many examples of structures from the past that are examples of timeless architecture," McWhortor said.

"Buildings like that are functional and besides, they are relaxing to be around and in. They don't assault your senses or become distractions."

"They are important to the campus, and you don't realize how few there are until one of them is threatened."

There will be meetings between student representatives and University planning officials to discuss alternatives to the destruction of West Hall and possible avenues for library expansion that would incorporate the existing building, rather than razing it and replacing the structure with a group of modular units resembling the main Hayden Library building.

"I think there are other options," Schluntz said. "There are a number of ways to add on to the library. There is no reason to pursue just a single solution."

But even if buildings like West Hall can be preserved, there are other aspects of campus architecture that can impair the educational process — features within the classrooms themselves.

Psychology Professor Ed Sadalla, who teaches a class in environmental psychology, points out there are many "outmoded classrooms" on campus that prevent adequate teacher-student communication.

"There are a lot of classrooms that absolutely need to be updated," Sadalla said. "There are obvious things like inadequate seating, the lack of an unobstructed view of the professor, etcetera, that can have a detrimental effect on the class."

"If the classroom isn't as good as it should be, then the student's education obviously suffers."

Schluntz echoed Sadalla's concerns.

"Our fundamental problem has been rooms that don't reinforce what students see and hear."

"Inadequate lighting, lack of consideration for audio-visual equipment, creaking doors, et cetera, have been a problem," he said.

"There have been some classrooms that are so bad our architectural faculty have refused to teach in them."

But Schluntz said the administration is taking steps to remedy such problems and was hopeful that older buildings on campus have assumed a high priority in University expansion plans.

"President J. Russell Nelson is absolutely in the top one or two percent of presidents I have seen in regard to concern for the campus environment," he said.

But although Nelson may be aware of campus architectural concerns, some administrators may not be as sensitive.

"What it comes down to is whether those making the decisions on campus construction issues are getting the full information on the situation from others in the administration," Schluntz said.

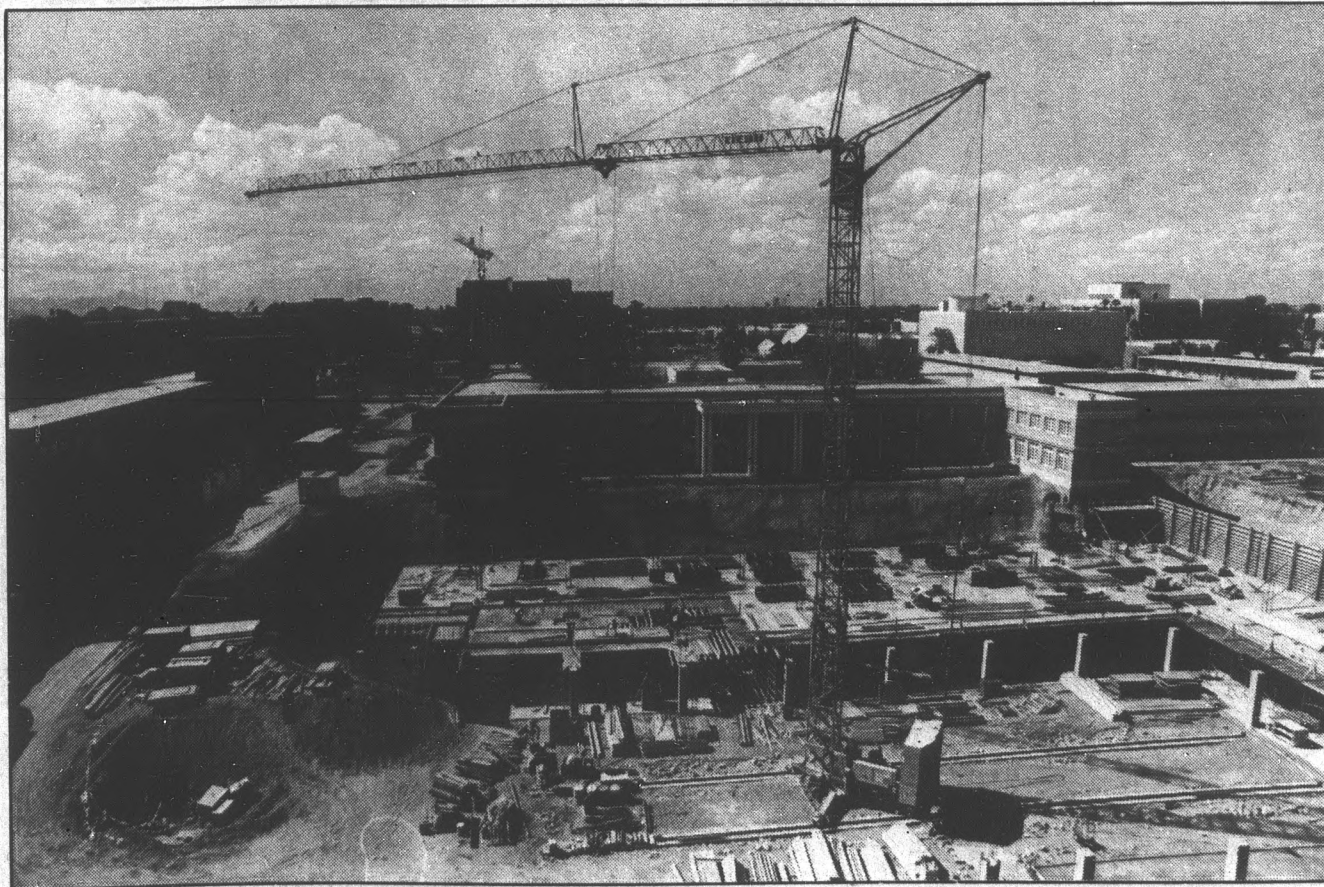

Whatever the future of campus architecture and the overall educational environment, it is certain that student input is vital. For who can know better what is a good environment in which to learn than those doing the learning?

One opportunity to voice concern over such issues will occur April 5 and 6 during the ASASU elections, when two measures will appear on the ballot that call for student opinion on the destruction of West Hall and the preservation of historic buildings.

Progress is inexorable and often beneficial. But while moving forward it should be remembered that much can be gained and learned from the past, and that our links to that past — older structures and landmarks — need to be preserved just as functional and beautiful new ones need to be built.

Another famous Churchill quote states: "I have always considered the substitution of the internal combustion engine for the horse a very gloomy milestone in the progress of mankind."

We must develop those new engines. But it is important to keep the old horses around as well.

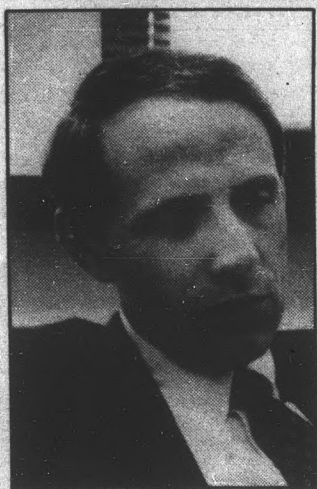

Business college plans New Venture Incubator program

By KELLY ARNOLD
Contributing Writer

ASU's College of Business will begin a New Venture Incubator program next fall to help new businesses while bringing in profits for the program and increasing student jobs.

The Hahn Center for Entrepreneurship and Innovation, one of the eight centers within the college's Institute for Business Leadership, organized the program as part of a plan to develop nationally recognized programs in the College of Business.

John Kraft

Director LeRoy Ellison said the Hahn Center, which was created by an endowment in 1985, promotes and coordinates entrepreneurship, provides service to entrepreneurs and the community and identifies research needs that will enhance the college's ability to respond to Arizona business needs.

Planning for the New Venture Incubator, the Hahn Center's main program, began in 1986.

Ellison said the Incubator program wants to help as many client ventures as possible to become sound, profitable and well-managed.

"The failure rate of new companies is very high nationally," he said. "Ninety percent of new companies fail within a few years and 80 percent don't last more than two years."

"We want to improve those statistics."

Ellison said the Incubator will not be investing in clients directly, but will charge an unspecified monthly rent and operate on a "pay-as-you-go" basis for the office resources provided to clients.

Mary Jo Waits, College of Business director of development/major gifts, said funding for Incubator has come from contributions of $10,000 each from 35 businesses in the Valley.

She said the program is aiming for 100 partner contributions.

Business college Dean John Kraft said the program will be extremely important to the economic development of the Valley.

"It is unique because it would be the only Incubator operated by a College of Business," Kraft said.

"If Phoenix is going to continue to attract new firms, we must create a culture for them."

Ellison said an active relationship between ASU and the Incubator, which will be housed in a building near the University, will offer part-time jobs for students as well as faculty expertise to Incubator clients.

He said the Incubator also will benefit the Phoenix metropolitan area through successful client ventures that will provide jobs, expand the gross state product and broaden the industrial base of the Valley.

The Hahn Center holds breakfast meetings every other month to show the Incubator project to entrepreneurs and to ask for contributions for the Incubator program.

"There has been a lot of interest at each meeting," Waits said. "We've had about a 50 percent response."

Ellison said, "The interest level is high and a lot of people are willing to contribute money. I am anxious to get several big corporations to back us."

Report clears DPS of witness tampering allegations

By BEN McCONNELL

State Press

PHOENIX — The Pima County Attorney's office cleared the Department of Public Safety Wednesday on charges it tampered with witnesses in the Senate's impeachment trial of Gov. Evan Mecham.

Pima County Chief Deputy Attorney Howard Fell delivered a two-page report to Senate President Carl Kunasek and said it concludes the DPS "did not violate influence or witness tampering statutes" when it arrested Terri Fields a day after she testified in the Senate trial.

Little more than a week ago, Mecham's attorneys charged that the arrest, combined with DPS officials speaking to defense witness Antonio Corio and talking to San Diego police about a potential witness, broke laws that prohibit tampering with witnesses.

DPS Spokesman Allan Schmidt said the combination of the recent U.S. Attorney's exoneration and the Pima County report closes the case.

"I kind of didn't expect anything different," Schmidt said. Mecham attorney Jerris Leonard maintained the DPS criminally tampered with the witnesses, adding he is considering filing a civil suit against the agency.

"It's a chilling effect when a 1600-person state police force and its resources are brought to bear against a private citizen," Leonard said.

A Mecham spokesman said the governor was disappointed with the Pima County report.

Fell asserted the investigation could not measure how Fields' arrest would affect the trial.

"It is irrelevant for us to speculate about the motives of the involved DPS personnel or to evaluate the procedural regularity of their activities," he said. "Our office was asked only to determine whether or not any unlawful acts had been committed. We offer no opinion about the practical impact."

Fields testified that her former boss, Women's Services Director Peggy Griffith, tended to exaggerate and doubted that former prisons construction chief Lee Watkins told Griffith that former Mecham aide Donna Carlson could take a "long boat ride."

Fields was arrested by DPS and Mesa police on an outstanding warrant of obstruction of justice and willfully disobeying a court order.

The obstruction charge subsequently was dropped.

Black Greek organizations APA, AKA to participate in Greek Week

By ROBIE KAKONGE
State Press

Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority and Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, both black Greek organizations, are participating in Greek Week activities for only the second time in eight years.

This is the first time the fraternity has participated in Greek Week, according to fraternity vice president Greg Williams.

"In the past we only did intermediate shows during the sing, but this way is much better because it brings us closer as fraternities," he said, adding that it also promotes awareness of black fraternities on campus.

Meanwhile, AKA sorority President Eva Bowen said the sorority is making only its second appearance in Greek Week in eight years because of low membership.

"It is hard to participate in most Greek activities when you don't have that many members. It also hurts us financially because without members, it's difficult to get funds to sponsor the social activities," she said.

Williams said that although the APA fraternity was founded on the bases of a black organization, it is not exclusively for blacks.

"In the past, APA has been a haven for young black men," he said.

"We were the support group for most communities and also helped make that social adjustment," he said.

Williams added, "The trend with our fraternity is changing and the numbers of other races joining our organization are growing in most of the larger schools nationwide."

Williams said the increase in numbers is mainly due to racial attitude changes.

"People are beginning to see what we are all about and they realize that it takes more than color to support others. It takes dedication and we've got a lot of that," he said.

APA was founded in 1906 at Cornell University and the ASU chapter began April 26, 1976. It currently has 20 campus members.

The AKA sorority was founded in 1908 at Howard University and the ASU chapter began in 1970.

Between 1970 and 1978, AKA had over 60 members. There are currently only 20 members.

we were going to fix them," Courson said. Courson said the company has fixed the problems for the most part.

"The latest figures showed that the billing was only six days late instead of one month," he said.

However, two students who attended Walton's rally said they knew what he was talking about. Dan Hoffiz and Bobby Bock, both 27-year-old law students, said they have had problems with Sprint's billing.

"This is almost a year later, and they keep sending me the bills," Bock said. Courson said it will take time to correct the problems, but that Sprint has them under control. He said customer complaints have decreased over the past few months.

Walton said if his bid for president becomes a reality, it should take him a year to straighten out the problems, and he will not take a salary during that time.

Tax

"I think the tax is extremely beneficial to the city," he said. "$750,000 isn't too shabby."

Bellerose said the hotel association endorsed the tax before the election but requested some of the money be directed toward creating a visitors bureau in Tempe.

The Chamber of Commerce also endorsed the tax in February and similarly requested some of the revenue go towards a city convention and tourism bureau.

"I felt it relevant as to why these proceedings are taking so long," Gordon said.

The Senate could conceivably keep an inventory on how many times it changes its mind. After only one day of working eight hours instead of six to save time and money, the Senate voted to revert to its old schedule.

The vote was the Senate's third in the matter.

Prosecutors are striving to prove that Mecham Pontiac was in financial straits when the governor ordered Colter to cut the $80,000 check from the protocol fund.

Randall Sorensen, a Tempe certified public accountant, conducted an audit of Mecham Pontiac at prosecutors' request and testified Wednesday that if Mecham had not borrowed the protocol money, the business would have faced $60,000 in overdrafts.

Sorensen also testified that Mecham repaid the $80,000 loan in three installments. Mecham paid a total of $1,798.85 in interest, but the protocol fund has a $142 outstanding balance because of an accounting error, Sorensen said.

Jack LaSota, a former attorney general, testified that the $80,000 loan was improper and may have violated two state laws. One of the statutes governs what protocol fund money can be spent on.

The other statute stipulates that spent protocol money must either "promote the interests of the state" or "promote citizen public service in the state."

Fire officials ask for public's help to find suspects

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

Tempe fire officials are asking for help from the public in finding the suspects involved in an arson fire last Tuesday that caused more than $500,000 in damages to R & R Printing, 4820 S. Ash St.

"There are no suspects or leads," said Jim Gaintner, Assistant Fire Chief. "It is clearly an arson fire, but we don't have much to go on."

The blaze started about 12:06 a.m. Four engines and two ladder trucks battled the first alarm fire for 46 minutes.

Gaintner declined to say what was used to start the fire but said there were multiple points of origin.

Anyone with information about the fire should call fire investigators at 731-8850.

In other incidents:

•A woman reported to police Wednesday that a man with a gun ran past her in the parking lot of an apartment complex at 201 W. Hermosa Circle, and said, "Call police, I'm going to blow someone's head off."

The man, who was wearing a white t-shirt and blue jeans, ran towards the complex's

police report

east parking lot but could not be located, police said.

•A woman who lives in the Apache Trailer Court called ASU police to report a prowler Wednesday, police said. But a check of the area did not turn up anything.

The woman told police she was concerned because she thought her sister and her sister's boyfriend may have been involved. They are reportedly heavy drug users and were allegedly involved in shooting the women's brother in Mesa, police said.

•A woman received stitches to her left eye after she was struck in the head with a baseball while sitting in the stands at Packard Stadium watching a baseball game Tuesday, police said.

•The basement and first floor of Manzanita Residence Hall sustained $75 in water damages after a trash-chute fire was extinguished Tuesday, police said.

Police said the fire ignited about 5:55 p.m.

Increase of indecent exposure cases caused by warmer weather, police say

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

Warmer weather means less clothing, but some people take it a step farther.

Sometimes they don't wear any. "It's a fact that with spring there are more indecent exposures," said Officer Roger Austin, a Tempe police spokesman who spent two years investigating sex crimes for the department. "We average five or six (a week) during the peak time of the year."

Austin cites two reasons why warm weather causes an increase in what police call "weenie wavers".

"People are out moving about more, that's one of the biggest reasons," Austin said. "Also, more people are out sunbathing and wearing less clothing."

In addition, people are more likely to leave doors and windows open with warmer weather, he said.

"Indecent exposure is a serious crime," Austin said, adding that sexual gratification is not the primary goal of people who expose themselves.

"It's to disturb somebody, to cause somebody to become a victim of a crime," he said. "It causes them fear, lack of security. It embarrasses people."

He said most indecent exposure suspects are not dangerous.

"Most will not go on to be rapists," he said. But, "if they do it knowingly, they have a psychological problem that needs looking into."

Indecent exposures occur throughout Tempe, Austin said, but most incidents tend to happen in the northern end of the city, near ASU, because of the younger population, apartments and parks.

ASU police say most indecent exposure incidents occur in the MU or Hayden Library.

The popular perception of indecent exposure suspects of men dressed in large overcoats is not true, Austin said.

"It doesn't happen that way," he said. "They are usually dressed like everyone else. They normally wear shorts and a t-shirt, and that could be three-quarters of the population during summertime."

Most indecent exposure suspects are men, but Austin estimates about ten percent are women.

"If men are victims, they are less likely to report it to police," he said. "Men are inherently less offended."

Police say victims should report all incidents, but mostly importantly, do not act shocked.

"The best thing to do is get a good description (of the suspect)," Austin said. "It sounds funny, but people focus on the act or the area being exposed."

Indecent exposure is a class one misdemeanor and carries a maximum sentence of six months in jail. First offenders are usually fined, Austin said.

Individual importance subject of IBM vice president's speech

By KRISTI ELLIS
State Press

In order to achieve excellence, businesses have to believe that "one person can make a difference in this world," said F.G. "Buck" Rodgers, former International Business Machines Corp. vice president, in a lecture in the MU Arizona Room Wednesday.

Rodgers spoke on the importance of the individual in contributing to the success of a business as part of the ASASU lecture series.

"The real heroes in this world ought to be you and I," Rodgers said.

Rodgers was employed by IBM for 34 years, eventually rising to vice president of marketing before retiring in 1984.

He began lecturing on the college circuit in the early 1960s and focused on the pursuit of excellence in business.

Rodgers' experience has culminated in two books: "The IBM Way: Insight Into the World's Leading Marketing Organization" and "Getting the Best Out of Yourself and Others."

In the lecture, Rodgers said that businesses must focus on the key principles of respect, service and excellence.

"Businesses make these principles come alive through individual heroism," Rodgers said.

There are three "magical" elements in the success of a business, according to Rodgers.

The first magic element is respect for the individual, which is a "meritocracy," Rodgers said. A business must give recognition to people who make an extra effort.

At IBM there is a concept called "Lightning Strikes" that gives management the ability to give instantaneous recognition to someone who accomplishes something unusual. Businesses must recognize those who do herculean things, Rodgers said.

The second magic element is the decision of a business to give the best service it can. According to Rodgers, consumers are now the "equalizers" of businesses. They no longer stand for poor service.

"For too long we've been floating on a sea of mediocrity and we got too bloated on its beaches," Rodgers said.

The third magic element is that you as an individual have to demand excellence from yourself and anyone else.

Another area that Rodgers addressed was leadership.

Leadership is "the ability of single individuals through his/her actions to motivate others to higher levels of achievement," Rodgers said.

Rodgers claims one of his main goals in IBM was to motivate other people to higher levels. It is also one of his goals in lecturing across the country.

He said leadership also includes accountability, responsibility, a positive attitude, seeking advice, the ability to strategize and winning.

Finally, there must be integrity in a business. According to Rodgers, people have integrity if others can count on what they do as well as what they say.

"If you lose character and integrity, you've lost everything," Rodgers said.

Rodgers concluded with four lessons that can be learned from history:

- There is no substitute for human relations and the high morale that it can bring to the productivity in an organization.

- There are two things that are always out of proportion to the growth rate of a business where money should be spent: education and training, and communications.

- The most natural insidious disease of an institution is complacency.

- Businesses need a market-driven, customer-oriented philosophy where everything exists for the purpose of giving it value.

ASU to capture spirit of Las Vegas in MUAB-sponsored Casino Night

By CARRI MITCHELL
State Press

The neon lights of Las Vegas will move to the MU this Friday night as the Memorial Union Activities Board sponsors Casino Night.

Darryl Smith, special events coordinator for MUAB, said the night will feature all major casino games including slot machines, electronic poker, craps, black jack, roulette, bingo and poker.

Smith said the event will also feature a Los Angeles jazz band, Slow Burn.

"We program events for students, and casino nights are always popular with students. We give them what they want," Smith said.

Smith said students will pay $1 in advance, or $2 at the door, and they will be given chips to play the games with. At the end of the evening students will turn their chips in for raffle tickets.

"So the more chips you have better your chance of winning," he said.

Smith said the grand prize is a trip for two to Las Vegas and the other prizes are being offered by local merchants.

Casino night will be in the MU Maricopa Room and the Starlight Terrace from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Smith said advance tickets can be purchased at the MUAB office in the basement of the MU.

ASU to capture spirit of Las Vegas in MUAB-sponsored Casino Night

By CARRI MITCHELL
State Press

The neon lights of Las Vegas will move to the MU this Friday night as the Memorial Union Activities Board sponsors Casino Night.

Darryl Smith, special events coordinator for MUAB, said the night will feature all major casino games including slot machines, electronic poker, craps, black jack, roulette, bingo and poker.

Smith said the event will also feature a Los Angeles jazz band, Slow Burn.

"We program events for students, and casino nights are always popular with students. We give them what they want," Smith said.

Smith said students will pay $1 in advance, or $2 at the door, and they will be given chips to play the games with. At the end of the evening students will turn their chips in for raffle tickets.

"So the more chips you have better your chance of winning," he said.

Smith said the grand prize is a trip for two to Las Vegas and the other prizes are being offered by local merchants.

Casino night will be in the MU Maricopa Room and the Starlight Terrace from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Smith said advance tickets can be purchased at the MUAB office in the basement of the MU.

AIA increases fees

PHOENIX (AP) — Dues and participation fees will increase more than 200 percent next year for many high schools wishing to remain members of the Arizona Interscholastic Association.

The AIA Legislative Council passed a resolution 23-10 Monday to increase the yearly dues for member Class AAA schools from $1,250 to $1,565.

In addition, the AIA will assess each school a new fee of $150 for each sport in which it competes.

The AIA is an association of Arizona high schools that governs the competition of interscholastic activities, including events such as chess matches, speech debates and ROTC.

An amendment to exclude chess, speech, drama and other such activities from the fees schedule passed overwhelmingly.

The legislative council's action affects only sports competition.

Dan Arredondo, Phoenix Union High School District athletic director, objected when the disbursement of the gate receipts originally was to be left up to the discretion of the executive board.

Arredondo said the AIA was increasing fees without any corresponding increase in services. He said control of the disbursement of the gate receipts should be with the conferences, not with a select few.

The original proposal would have given the AIA all monies from any games other than the regular season.

Buck Clark, president of the executive board, said the AIA hasn't had a dues increase since 1978-79.

MEN'S GOLF — The third-ranked ASU men's golf team travels to Fresno, Calif., to compete in the Fresno State Classic today through Saturday.

Fore!

ASU golf team heads west for tourney

By DAVE BIGOS
State Press

Men's golf coach Steve Loy said he hopes to take the Sun Devils into the Fresno State Classic today and come away with more than just a top-five finish.

"We need to play three solid rounds," Loy said. "For some reason, that has slipped our grasp this year.

"That third round is so important, it is the difference between whether a team wins or finishes second or third." ASU's worst finish so far this year was sixth at the Miami-Doral Intercollegiate on Feb. 3-7. The team has been near the top of the leader board in every tournament it has competed in during 1988.

Making the trip to Fresno, Calif., for the Sun Devils will be Billy Mayfair, Tom Stankowski, Jim Strickland, Scott Frisch, Todd Kernaghan and John Bizik.

Going into the tournament, Loy said he feels that ASU will be one of the top three teams to beat.

"All the West Coast teams will be there," he said. "ASU, Arizona and USC should be the favorites going in."

ASU is currently ranked third in the nation. UofA is ranked second and USC is ranked eighth.

Course conditions will definitely be a factor to the team and could mean an underdog victory according to Loy.

"The course we're playing at is a short, tight course," he said. "Any team could win it going in with a hot putter."

Loy, however, has some of the top golfers in the country going into the three-day tournament.

Billy Mayfair has had five top-10 finishes this season with two victories. He has also been very good in practice.

"Billy has been under par in every round he's played lately," Loy said.

Tom Stankowski is another golfer who has been hot of late. His 74.00 stroke average is third best on the team to Bizik's 73.78 and Mayfair's 71.28.

Stankowski has three top-10 finishes this season.

"Stankowski has been playing super golf lately," Loy said. "His last two tournaments were great."

Bizik, although only a freshman, may be the key to the Sun Devils' first 1988 victory. He has only played in three tournaments this season because of school needs. Bizik has one top-10 finish.

"Bizik has played with us in every trip that we've won," Loy said. "So knock on wood — maybe he can turn it around for us."

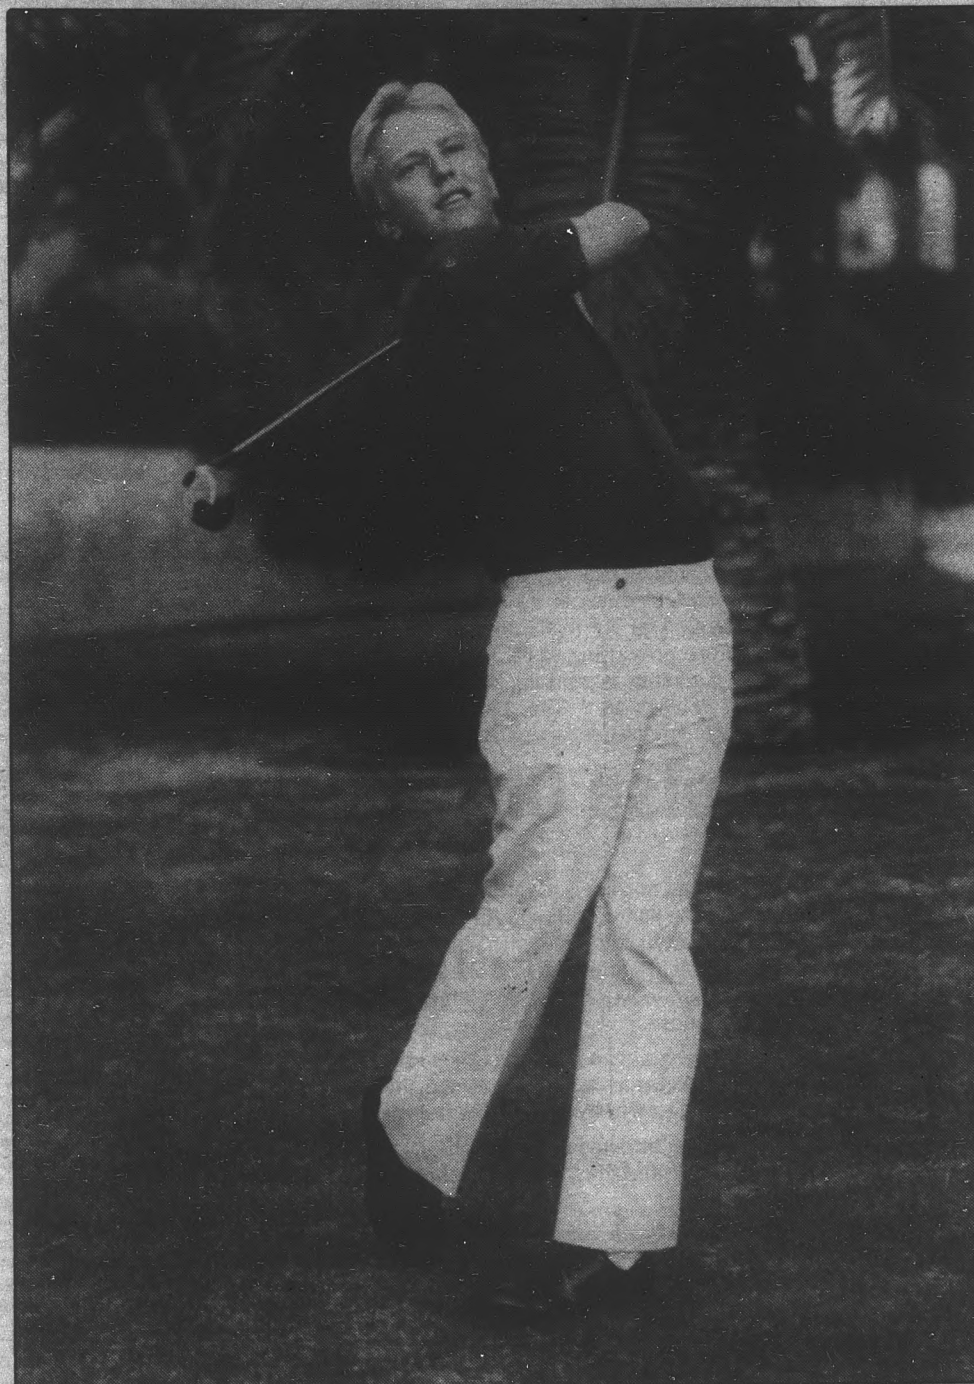

"It's definitely time to get him back in the lineup."

Scott Frisch is fourth in the lineup in terms of stroke average with a 74.4 and Jim Strickland is fifth at 74.6. Both have also had top-10 finishes this season.

"We need depth from all the players," Loy said. "We need to cover the leader board."

Kernaghan will be playing his first competitive round of the year for the Sun Devils and Loy said that he will turn out to be a good young player, adding depth to the team.

Freshman Scott Sullivan has played in two tournaments this season but will not make the trip in order to catch up on academic needs, Loy said.

ASU Sports Information

Billy Mayfair leads the third-ranked Sun Devils into today's opening round of the Fresno State Classic in Fresno, Calif. Mayfair's 71.28 stroke average is highest on the team.

Sun Devil swimmer aims for Olympics

By CRIS NACKINO
State Press

In a few short months, hundreds of athletes will travel to the Far East in hopes of capturing their long desired dreams — a gold medal.

For all the hard work and long hours, these chosen few will put their abilities and efforts into representing their country in the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, Korea.

One athlete aiming for this will be ASU swimmer Peter Boden.

"Making the (Olympic) team would have to be my ultimate goal since 1984, when I first qualified for the Olympic trials that year," Boden said.

This athlete definitely deserves attention for his past achievement, both athletically and academically, over the past four years at ASU.

As a sophomore, Boden placed fifth in the 100-meter and fourth in the 200-meter breaststroke in the Pac-10.

In the NCAA that year, he received All-America honors by placing fifth in the 100 and fourth in the 200.

During the 1986 season, Boden competed in what he said he considers the most memorable experience he had while swimming at ASU.

"In 1986, I competed in the World Championships in Madrid," Boden said. "It was the first time that I qualified for a USA/International team. It was really special."

During his junior year as a Sun Devil, he rose to the top of the Pac-10 by winning first place in both the 100-meter and 200 breaststroke.

This not only earned him the title of being the best breaststroke swimmer in the Pac-10, but he also captured two ASU school records.

"When I broke the records (100 and 200-meter breaststroke), it was great," Boden said. "When I thought about it, it was the ultimate thrill. Sometimes it is nice to be remembered as one of the fastest swimmers on the team."

To end the '87 season, Boden went to the NCAAs and placed seventh in the 100 and third in the 200 and again earned All-America honors.

Boden is now competing in his final year for the Sun Devils.

Kerr says Wildcats' confidence key in semi-final game with Hawkeyes

SEATTLE (AP) — Arizona guard Steve Kerr says the second-ranked Wildcats will have confidence on their side when they face Iowa in an NCAA West Regional semi-final game in the Kingdome Friday night.

"I think we've got to be confident knowing we beat them on their home floor, on a night when we didn't play very well," said Kerr.

"They'll have the motivational revenge factor. But in the NCAAs there's no greater motivational factor than knowing if you lose you're out."

Arizona beat Iowa 66-59 in Iowa City on Dec. 12.

"We're probably better in every area since December and I'm sure Lute (Olson, Arizona's coach) will tell you the same thing about his team," said Dr. Tom Davis, Iowa's coach. "I don't think it will come down to anything exotic."

Three All-Americans — Sean Elliott of Arizona, Gary Grant of Michigan and J.R. Reid of North Carolina — will be featured in a West Regional that brings together two Big Ten teams, the Pac-10 champion and Atlantic Coast Conference regular season champ.

Arizona will take a 33-2 record against Iowa (24-9) in the 7:30 p.m. PST Friday nightcap after Michigan (26-7) and North Carolina (26-6) meet in the 5:10 p.m. opener.

Arizona crushed Seton Hall 84-55 Sunday in Los Angeles to get to the Kingdome.

"That's the best anyone has played against us this year and the poorest anyone has made us look," said Seton Hall coach P.J. Carlesimo. "Not only are they well coached, they play intelligently. They pass well, they play very much under control. They're a very, very balanced team in every sense of the word."

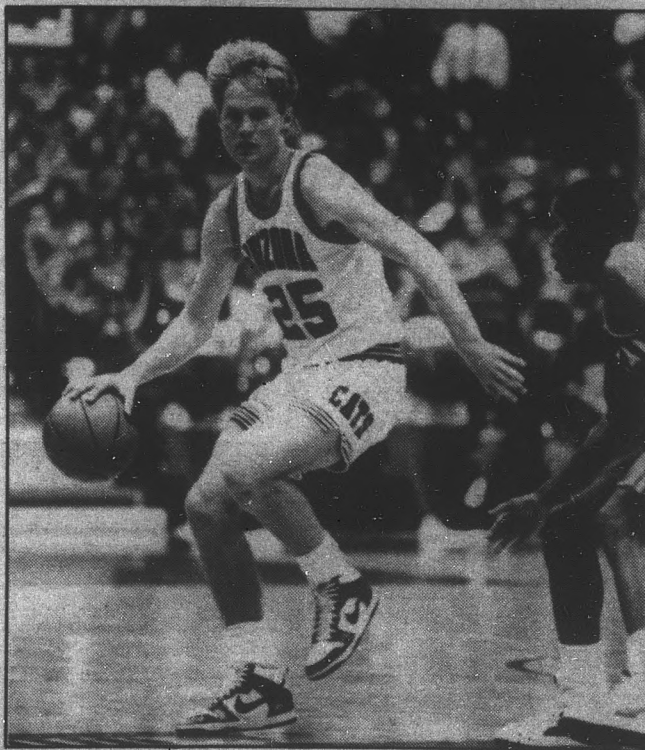

"If we're national champions and people say we never got tested, that wouldn't bother me at all," said 6-foot-8 Arizona center Tom Tolbert.

Arizona is the top seed in the West and is the nation's best shooting team with an average of 54.9 percent from the field and 50.1 percent from three-point range.

The Wildcats beat Cornell 90-50 in their first NCAA tournament game last Friday.

Iowa, which tied for third in the Big Ten Conference, has scored 100 or more points 15 times this season, a school record. The Hawkeyes defeated Nevada-Las Vegas 104-86 Sunday to get to Seattle.

Nevada-Las Vegas saw its season end at 28-6. Rebels Coach

Steve Kerr

Jerry Tarkanian said Iowa's press was too much for his team.

"It destroyed us defensively," he said. "We turned the ball over much too much to win the game. We got whipped every way you can imagine."

Michigan and North Carolina won in a breeze last Saturday to qualify for the West Regional, the Wolverines beating Florida 108-85 and the Tar Heels beating Loyola-Marymount 123-97.

Michigan lost three of its last five regular-season games and struggled in its first tournament game against Boise State before prevailing 63-58.

North Carolina is making its eighth straight trip to the NCAA's "Sweet 16." The Tar Heels' 123 points against Loyola-Marymount set an NCAA tournament record.

Bradley to defend Turquoise Classic title

PHOENIX (AP) — Pat Bradley returns to defend her title in the $350,000 LPGA Turquoise Classic that begins Thursday on the Moon Valley layout where she set a course record last year.

That was the first time this tournament was played on this 6,404-yard, par-73 course where it was moved from the Arizona Biltmore, and Bradley fired the record-setting third-round 67 en route to a two-stroke victory over Chris Johnson.

The crowd favorite is likely to be Mary Bea Porter of nearby Scottsdale, who was given an unprecedented exemption into the field in recognition of having saved the life of a drowning youngster last Wednesday while trying unsuccessfully to qualify for this tournament.

Porter will be the 145th member of the field that usually numbers 144.

Playing in the Tucson Open the next two days immediately after her heroic rescue, Porter failed to make the cut after 36 holes.

Bradley has not been playing well this season. She is not among the top 50 in earnings, for instance, and she didn't do well in Tuesday's sudden-death shootout that panned the field with each hole. Bradley missed the green on the second hole, the par-3 11th, to wind up with a bogey and a quick trip back to the clubhouse.

Patty Sheehan, who says she enjoys the shootouts because they give spectators a chance to see the players relax and joke, went on to win over Beth Daniel three holes later.

Sheehan had finished second in the Tucson Open shootout a week earlier, and has previous shootouts at Denver and Cincinnati.

"But I didn't win any of those tournaments," she said, adding that she hoped the shootout victories were not becoming bad omens for tournament play.

'Wee Woosie' confident for tournament

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ian Woosnam expects to win. If not this week, then soon.

But if he doesn't, the tough little man from Wales said, "It's not that important."

"At the end of the day, it's how much money you make, isn't it?"

And Woosnam, all 5-foot-4 of him, did more of that last year than any other pro golfer has ever done. His worldwide winnings amounted to about $1.8 million.

He won five European tournaments, one in Hong Kong, collected $1 million in South Africa, led Wales to the World Cup title and was a key member of Europe's winning Ryder Cup team.

Now, he is making the second stop on a four-tournament swing around the United States in the $1.25 million Players Championship, a highly prestigious event billed as the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

The event, which begins Thursday, offers $225,000 to the winner, along with a 10-year exemption.

The man called "Wee Woosie" declines to place any particular importance on this tournament.

"Last week is as big as next week," he said.

"On the last nine holes on Sunday, if I'm in contention, then it'll be different," he said. "I'll be nervous. Everybody is nervous then. But I don't want to get over-awed the first three days."

In addition to Woosnam, the foreign field contains defending champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland, Greg Norman of Australia, Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Seve Ballesteros of Spain.

Jack Nicklaus made a last-minute decision to make this his last start before the Masters.

U.S. Open titleholder Scott Simpson, Masters champ Larry Mize, PGA champion Larry Nelson and Tom Watson lead the American pros.

Swimmer

In the Pac-10, Boden finished eighth in the 100 (unshaved) and, although he injured himself in the finals, he placed 18th in the 200.

On April 7-9, Boden will compete at Purdue University for the NCAA Championships.

"My main goal at the NCAA is to swim my best time and to do the very best I can. I don't want to worry about what all the other teams' swimmers are doing," Boden said. "This will be a good meet to match up the other United States swimmers to see if I am in the running for the Olympics."

For Boden the next step after the NCAAs will be the Olympic trials. Instead of having a fun-in-the-sun summer, complete with vacations, Boden will focus all his attention on training.

"Only the top two go to the Olympics. I'll have to do my best times then," he said. "This is all I have on my mind this summer. I think I'll be ready — I feel really good."

Although Boden is a phenomenal athlete, his abilities are equally as impressive outside his physical achievements.

Along with a charismatic personality, Boden is an industrial engineering major with a 3.2 GPA.

He said that although athletes must devote much time to athletics, academics should never be overlooked.

"There is usually not much life after swimming — we have no where to really go. It is really important for us to do well in school," Boden said.

Boden, along with additional qualifying teammates, will put in his last effort for the Sun Devils at the NCAA Championships.

"We have at least five to six swimmers that should qualify for the Olympics," Boden said. "So our performance at the NCAA should be great."

Kerr says Wildcats' confidence key in semi-final game with Hawkeyes

SEATTLE (AP) — Arizona guard Steve Kerr says the second-ranked Wildcats will have confidence on their side when they face Iowa in an NCAA West Regional semi-final game in the Kingdome Friday night.

"I think we've got to be confident knowing we beat them on their home floor, on a night when we didn't play very well," said Kerr.

"They'll have the motivational revenge factor. But in the NCAAs there's no greater motivational factor than knowing if you lose you're out."

Arizona beat Iowa 66-59 in Iowa City on Dec. 12.

"We're probably better in every area since December and I'm sure Lute (Olson, Arizona's coach) will tell you the same thing about his team," said Dr. Tom Davis, Iowa's coach. "I don't think it will come down to anything exotic."

Three All-Americans — Sean Elliott of Arizona, Gary Grant of Michigan and J.R. Reid of North Carolina — will be featured in a West Regional that brings together two Big Ten teams, the Pac-10 champion and Atlantic Coast Conference regular season champ.

Arizona will take a 33-2 record against Iowa (24-9) in the 7:30 p.m. PST Friday nightcap after Michigan (26-7) and North Carolina (26-6) meet in the 5:10 p.m. opener.

Arizona crushed Seton Hall 84-55 Sunday in Los Angeles to get to the Kingdome.

"That's the best anyone has played against us this year and the poorest anyone has made us look," said Seton Hall coach P.J. Carlesimo. "Not only are they well coached, they play intelligently. They pass well, they play very much under control. They're a very, very balanced team in every sense of the word."

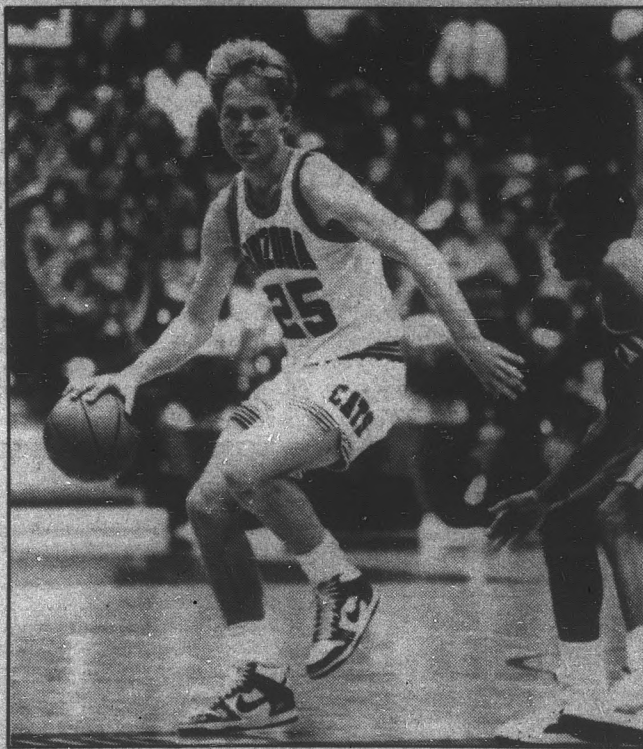

"If we're national champions and people say we never got tested, that wouldn't bother me at all," said 6-foot-8 Arizona center Tom Tolbert.

Arizona is the top seed in the West and is the nation's best shooting team with an average of 54.9 percent from the field and 50.1 percent from three-point range.

The Wildcats beat Cornell 90-50 in their first NCAA tournament game last Friday.

Iowa, which tied for third in the Big Ten Conference, has scored 100 or more points 15 times this season, a school record. The Hawkeyes defeated Nevada-Las Vegas 104-86 Sunday to get to Seattle.

Nevada-Las Vegas saw its season end at 28-6. Rebels Coach

Steve Kerr

Jerry Tarkanian said Iowa's press was too much for his team.

"It destroyed us defensively," he said. "We turned the ball over much too much to win the game. We got whipped every way you can imagine."

Michigan and North Carolina won in a breeze last Saturday to qualify for the West Regional, the Wolverines beating Florida 108-85 and the Tar Heels beating Loyola-Marymount 123-97.

Michigan lost three of its last five regular-season games and struggled in its first tournament game against Boise State before prevailing 63-58.

North Carolina is making its eighth straight trip to the NCAA's "Sweet 16." The Tar Heels' 123 points against Loyola-Marymount set an NCAA tournament record.

Bradley to defend Turquoise Classic title

PHOENIX (AP) — Pat Bradley returns to defend her title in the $350,000 LPGA Turquoise Classic that begins Thursday on the Moon Valley layout where she set a course record last year.

That was the first time this tournament was played on this 6,404-yard, par-73 course where it was moved from the Arizona Biltmore, and Bradley fired the record-setting third-round 67 en route to a two-stroke victory over Chris Johnson.

The crowd favorite is likely to be Mary Bea Porter of nearby Scottsdale, who was given an unprecedented exemption into the field in recognition of having saved the life of a drowning youngster last Wednesday while trying unsuccessfully to qualify for this tournament.

Porter will be the 145th member of the field that usually numbers 144.

Playing in the Tucson Open the next two days immediately after her heroic rescue, Porter failed to make the cut after 36 holes.

Bradley has not been playing well this season. She is not among the top 50 in earnings, for instance, and she didn't do well in Tuesday's sudden-death shootout that pared the field with each hole. Bradley missed the green on the second hole, the par-3 11th, to wind up with a bogey and a quick trip back to the clubhouse.

Patty Sheehan, who says she enjoys the shootouts because they give spectators a chance to see the players relax and joke, went on to win over Beth Daniel three holes later.

Sheehan had finished second in the Tucson Open shootout a week earlier, and has previous shootouts at Denver and Cincinnati.

"But I didn't win any of those tournaments," she said, adding that she hoped the shootout victories were not becoming bad omens for tournament play.

'Wee Woosie' confident for tournament

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ian Woosnam expects to win. If not this week, then soon.

But if he doesn't, the tough little man from Wales said, "It's not that important."

"At the end of the day, it's how much money you make, isn't it?"

And Woosnam, all 5-foot-4 of him, did more of that last year than any other pro golfer has ever done. His worldwide winnings amounted to about $1.8 million.

He won five European tournaments, one in Hong Kong, collected $1 million in South Africa, led Wales to the World Cup title and was a key member of Europe's winning Ryder Cup team.

Now, he is making the second stop on a four-tournament swing around the United States in the $1.25 million Players Championship, a highly prestigious event billed as the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

The event, which begins Thursday, offers $225,000 to the winner, along with a 10-year exemption.

The man called "Wee Woosie" declines to place any particular importance on this tournament.

"Last week is as big as next week," he said.

"On the last nine holes on Sunday, if I'm in contention, then it'll be different," he said. "I'll be nervous. Everybody is nervous then. But I don't want to get over-awed the first three days."

In addition to Woosnam, the foreign field contains defending champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland, Greg Norman of Australia, Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Seve Ballesteros of Spain.

Jack Nicklaus made a last-minute decision to make this his last start before the Masters.

U.S. Open titleholder Scott Simpson, Masters champ Larry Mize, PGA champion Larry Nelson and Tom Watson lead the American pros.

Swimmer

In the Pac-10, Boden finished eighth in the 100 (unshaved) and, although he injured himself in the finals, he placed 18th in the 200.

On April 7-9, Boden will compete at Purdue University for the NCAA Championships.

"My main goal at the NCAA is to swim my best time and to do the very best I can. I don't want to worry about what all the other teams' swimmers are doing," Boden said. "This will be a good meet to match up the other United States swimmers to see if I am in the running for the Olympics."

For Boden the next step after the NCAAs will be the Olympic trials. Instead of having a fun-in-the-sun summer, compete with vacations, Boden will focus all his attention on training.

"Only the top two go to the Olympics. I'll have to do my best times then," he said. "This is all I have on my mind this summer. I think I'll be ready — I feel really good."

Although Boden is a phenomenal athlete, his abilities are equally as impressive outside his physical achievements.

Along with a charismatic personality, Boden is an industrial engineering major with a 3.2 GPA.

He said that although athletes must devote much time to athletics, academics should never be overlooked.

"There is usually not much life after swimming — we have no where to really go. It is really important for us to do well in school," Boden said.

Boden, along with additional qualifying teammates, will put in his last effort for the Sun Devils at the NCAA Championships.

"We have at least five to six swimmers that should qualify for the Olympics," Boden said. "So our performance at the NCAA should be great."
