Mecham convicted

Senate does not invoke 'Dracula clause'

Former Gov. Evan Mecham bows his head as he listens to senators casting their votes to impeach him on two different counts late Monday.

By BEN McCONNELL and VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

PHOENIX — Evan Mecham's stormy 13-month reign as Arizona's governor ended Monday when the Senate convicted him of illegally borrowing $80,000 from the state's protocol fund and trying to stonewall an investigation of a death threat.

The conviction immediately expelled Mecham from the office he had sought five times before being elected in November 1986, but does not bar him from seeking future public posts.

The Senate voted 21-9 to convict Mecham of ordering Department of Public Safety Director Ralph Milstead not to cooperate with a state investigation of a death threat made by one former Mecham aide against another.

He also was found guilty on a 26-4 vote of illegally borrowing $80,000 from the gubernatorial protocol fund for his financially ailing car dealership. A third charge against the embattled governor — that he tried to hide a $350,000 campaign loan from Tempe developer Barry Wolfson — was dropped by the Senate last week.

But senators were not convinced Mecham should be barred from ever holding office again and failed on a 17-13 vote to pass the so-called "Dracula clause." At least 20 of 30 senators had to approve the measure.

Mecham, who sat at his attorney's table and occasionally took notes during the proceeding, told reporters shortly after his conviction: "Well, they don't like my politics. It's as simple as that."

When asked if he felt guilty, Mecham said, "No, not at all."

As he walked through the automatic doors of the Senate chambers toward his waiting DPS limousine, a man screamed, "Sneaky snake!" But the shouting was quickly drowned out by the cheers of Mecham's fans.

About 200 of his supporters had gathered at the Capitol Monday morning, but their numbers dwindled to about 100 when the Senate voted shortly before 5 p.m.

Supporters listened quietly as the roll call vote was broadcast in the Legislature's compound, loudly rejoicing when Presiding Officer Frank X. Gordon announced that Mecham could run for public office again.

The Senate Court of Impeachment's conviction signaled what some called a tentative ending to the saga of the 63-year-old Glendale Republican.

The state attorney general's office issued an opinion Monday night that Mecham cannot run in the May 17 recall election. Additionally, Mecham's attorneys have indicated they will appeal the Senate's conviction to the U.S. Supreme Court.

A news conference at Mecham's Glendale headquarters is tentatively scheduled for sometime today or Wednesday.

Acting Gov. Rose Mofford assumed full gubernatorial powers after the Senate voted.

"My heart goes out to the entire Mecham family," Mofford said in a prepared statement. "Today our constitution has worked. Our elected representatives have spoken."

"Governor Mecham has struck out," said

Palestinian killed, others injured during anti-Shultz protest, strike

ARRUB, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli soldiers shot a Palestinian dead and wounded eight on Monday, a day of strike and protest in the occupied lands against the peace mission by Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

A Palestinian died in the Gaza Strip of wounds suffered last week.

At least 138 Arabs have been killed since violence began Dec. 8 in the West Bank and Gaza, according to U.N. figures. An Israeli soldier also has died.

Talks between Shultz and Israeli leaders focused on the U.S. proposal for Palestinian self-rule rather than how to arrange an international conference.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir opposes such a forum, but Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said: "The international conference is just a door that will be opened." Peres, the prime minister's political rival and partner in the coalition government, supports a conference.

He told reporters in Haifa: "The question is what are we going to discuss after it (the conference) is opened. Maybe the more we go into details, the less threatening it will be for Shamir."

Shamir says Israel would be outnumbered at such a conference and risk having decisions imposed upon it.

Shultz pledged the United States opposes a Palestinian state and efforts to force Israel to give up all territory in the West Bank and Gaza, which it captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

Prominent Palestinians the United States had seen as potential negotiating partners closed ranks against Shultz. They accused him of siding with Israel and refused to meet with him.

The boycott of Shultz and the general strike were designed to underline Arab demands to be represented by the Palestine Liberation Organization at any peace talks.

Jackson asks Noriega to back off; Dukakis disapproves of involvement

Jesse Jackson appealed Monday to Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega again to give up power, but fellow Democratic presidential hopeful Michael Dukakis called Jackson's involvement there a "bad idea," as the two squared off in Monday's Colorado caucuses and Tuesday's Wisconsin primary.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee also criticized Jackson's correspondence with Noriega, but he blasted Dukakis for being "absolutely timid" of Jackson.

The Massachusetts governor dismissed Gore and his comments: "I don't know what he's serious about."

Jackson, Dukakis and Gore were joined by Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois campaigning across Wisconsin on Monday. Simon is trailing badly in his effort to win here and keep his campaign alive, while Gore needs a good showing in the state to boost his faltering effort.

ASU sociology professor to be remembered today

Memorial Services for ASU sociology professor John W. Hudson will take place at 2 p.m. today at the Unitarian Church, 4027 E. Lincoln Drive, Paradise Valley. Hudson, who was blind, died early last Saturday of injuries suffered when he was hit by a car while walking with his guide dog Hobo near his Paradise Valley home. Hobo was also killed. A John W. Hudson graduate scholarship fund is being established and contributions can be made through the sociology department.

ALL MAY, SUMMER and FALL 1988 GRADUATES ARE ELIGIBLE

3 candidates' fate undecided until after election

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Although ASU students will begin voting today for Associated Students elections, ASASU elections officials Monday said the fate of three candidates, who did not file financial statements on time, will not be decided until after the polls have closed Wednesday night.

The ASASU Elections Commission will not rule until 7:30 p.m. Wednesday on the future of the three candidates: Damon Day, campus affairs presidential candidate; Will Daly, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences senatorial candidate; and Christopher Sullivan, College of Engineering and Applied Sciences senatorial candidate.

The commission will convene in the MU Pinal Room North to rule on the future of the candidates who did not turn in their spending statements when they were due March 29.

But Daly, the current executive vice president, did not take any chances. He filed as a write-in candidate Friday, Sellers said. Write-ins had until April 1 to file to appear on the ballot.

Included with the ballots will be four write-in candidates: Jay Greenberg, executive vice president; Greg Wattier, College of Architecture and Environmental Design; Tobie Walsh, College of Engineering and Applied Sciences; and Daly.

There will be blank lines provided on the ballot where voters can pen in the write-ins if they so choose.

Also included on the ballots will be two questions concerning West Hall and campus destruction, a question about whether future ASASU senatorial candidates must first be a member of their college councils and demographics questions.

Each polling booth will contain a book filled with candidate platforms, write-ins and the constitutional amendment in full.

And when the polls close at 9 p.m. Wednesday, the votes will be tabulated, and winners will be announced at 5 p.m. Thursday, Sellers said.

The top two senatorial vote-getters in each college will win, John Parker, assistant election coordinator said. But the executive officers must win with a majority.

"If the race doesn't yield a majority, there will be a runoff," Parker said.

And the runoff will be held April 12 and 13.

Election officials said they hope the turnout will be better than last year's 10 percent.

Parker said, "We certainly have done everything that we can."

Sellers said the political rally held March 25 sparked crowds and interest in the candidates and their platforms.

Security at the polling sites will be provided by Air Force ROTC.

They will act as a check and balance for the pollsters, Sellers said. "They will keep each other honest," she said.

Today's polling places and times, include: MU from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Matthews Center from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Forest Mall from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Tyler Mall from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., College of Law from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., College of Business from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Lot 59 from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Fees: Honors Program endorsed ASASU candidate

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

An Associated Students of ASU presidential candidate alleged Monday that the Honors Program administration attempted to infringe on and influence today's student election by sponsoring an endorsement letter for a presidential candidate, but administrators denied the allegation.

John Fees, current ASASU activities vice president and presidential candidate, said evidence of the letter being an endorsement from administrators include the account number on the University Honors Program's return address, a University postage stamp, and Patrice Cabcianca's campaign logo on the upper part of the letter.

"I really feel I'm getting slammed by the administration," Fees said. "But I don't think there's a direct link between Patrice and the letter."

One of the authors of the letter, sophomore Haylee Kronberg, said the letter was not an endorsement from the Honors Program as a whole, but a letter of support from only two members of the program. She said the copies of letters and postage were paid for by herself and sophomore Margaret Koppen, the other author of the letter.

Kronberg added that any other honors student can compile a similar letter for other honors students in support of any ASASU candidate as a representative of the Honors Program.

"We made sure that there wouldn't be any conflict, so we paid for it from our own pockets," Kronberg said. "It wasn't state money."

But Fees questioned that the students paid for the postage, saying, "I think there should be an investigation to whether or not state funds were used. I seriously think so, and I think it can be easily proven with receipts."

The first paragraph of the letter reads: "After listening to all of the candidates for Associated Students President, we believe that Patrice Cabcianca is the best qualified for the office."

Towards the end of the letter, Koppen and Kronberg invite honors students to attend a meeting today in which several ASASU candidates are scheduled to speak.

Ted Humphrey, director of the Honors Program, said there was no formal vote among the 700 members to endorse any candidate, and perceived the letter only as an invitation to the Honors Program meeting.

"I wouldn't say it's an endorsement, but an invitation for other students to become actively involved in the meeting and make up their own minds," Humphrey said.

Cabcianca, who is not in the Honors

Program, said she did not know about the letter until after it was distributed, but was pleased with the support. She also questioned whether or not Fees had "bad relations" with the Honors Program.

Fees agreed that his relationship with the Honors Program administration has been "tense."

"Why would the administration become involved with the elections if I have no direct link with the Honors Program?" Cabcianca said. "I think it's just two students writing a letter."

Mark Stark, another presidential candidate, said Fees is exaggerating the letter's impact on the election.

"If John (Fees) wants to make a big deal about a piece of paper with ink on it, then that's his prerogative," Stark said. "I don't think it will be important for students."

ASASU Elections

Election day. The candidates have spoken endlessly, shaken a thousand hands and distributed countless fliers and handbills.

The crucial issues have been discussed and the mud has been tossed.

Sometime today or tomorrow is the time to decide who you want to entrust with the $1 million Associated Students budget next year, who you want as your duly elected student leaders.

After careful consideration of all the executive candidates, we have come to the conclusion that there are a few ASASU hopefuls who stand out, who exemplify the kind of leadership that the ASU student body must have if it is to successfully wage the battles that must be fought in the coming year.

Tuition increases loom ominously, the quality of education and the worth of every ASU diploma is in decline, and professorial research projects and the construction of monolithic new buildings are emphasized over classroom instruction.

These are the candidates who are best able to defend student interests in these areas:

President: John Fees.

Clearly, no presidential hopeful is as experienced, prepared or more of a student advocate than Fees, the current activities vice president.

His specific programs for the betterment of ASU, which are detailed and well-thought out, provide a clear blueprint for the kind of university ASU should be — an academic institution with high standards, respect for both tradition and innovation, and an interest in every student. No other candidate has represented students as forcefully as Fees has in the past year, and there are no indications that his credentials as a defender of student rights are in jeopardy.

odds, his ear will always be available to students.

To vote for Greenberg, write-in his name on the ballot jacket according to procedures outlined at campus polling locations.

Campus Affairs Vice President: Damon Day.

Although Day faces possible exclusion from the ballot because he turned in a required financial statement to the ASASU Elections Department 30 minutes late, he remains the most deserving candidate for the campus affairs post.

Activities Vice President: Pick 'em.

All of the candidates for activities vice president, Carlton Hawkins, Mark Collins and Todd Martensen, have demonstrated that they are qualified to program activities for students. The election of any of the three would be a benefit to ASU.

Two resolutions appearing on the ballot also merit special attention.

We urge students to vote NO on the question: Are you in favor of the destruction of West Hall for the purpose of library expansion?

Historic West Hall, the home of the College of Social Work, must be saved as a symbol of student determination to halt the unnecessary capital construction of new campus buildings with dollars that could be better spent on improving the quality of an ASU education.

Cooperative projects involving students, faculty and alumni to save West Hall are in the works, but a strong student voice on the subject is vital if the deterioration of academic quality at ASU is to be halted.

Along the same lines, we urge the student body to vote YES on the question: Do you think the University's expansion policies should include the preservation of historic buildings?

Whatever your stance on the issues and candidates, everyone can agree that the coming year will be a challenging one for ASASU. In this tumultuous time of campus change, make sure your voice is heard in student government.

Today or Wednesday: VOTE.

Associated Students Elections

President:	John Fees
Executive Vice President:	Jay Greenberg(write-in)
Campus Affairs Vice President:	Damon Day
Activities Vice President:	Carlton Hawkins, Mark Collins or Todd Martensen

Executive Vice President: Jay Greenberg.

Greenberg is a write-in candidate, so voting for him will be a little more difficult than casting a ballot for his opponent. But the effort will be worth it.

Greenberg is the most intelligent and independent candidate for the executive job, which consists of managing the budget and presiding over the ASASU Senate. His chief asset is responsiveness — It is apparent that if Greenberg wins the election, against all

Day is a political outsider at ASU, a man armed with fresh ideas to infuse into the campus affairs departments, which include some of the most important services furnished to students by ASASU.

His opponent, incumbent Vince Micone, has accomplished little in a year in office, and it is clearly time for fresh blood in the campus affairs area.

If Day can survive the coming challenges to his candidacy, he would make a fine vice president.

Got 'em!

Darrin Hostetler
Opinion Editor

It is over.

Evan Mecham, citizen, looking small and frail surrounded by his beefy bodyguards, stepped from the comparative safety of the Arizona Senate chambers Monday afternoon into the fading sunlight of the Capitol mall.

Still wearing that now infamous tight-lipped grin, the emasculated Mecham slid into the back seat of his car and sped away, his political and personal life in tatters, his finances in disarray, his sanity in question and his name forever branded by the labels of corruption, ineptitude and disgrace.

Phoenix Gazette columnist John Kolbe watched the former governor flee and said: "I'd like to have a picture of that smile. God, doesn't the man have any idea what's happening?"

What is happening is the identification and strangulation of what Sen. Tony West so aptly identified Monday as the evil that lives among us.

As the Senate convicted Mecham on two articles of impeachment and cast him outside to gnash his teeth (to quote the Mecham followers' favorite source of wisdom — The Bible) West read a passage on the floor out of a book entitled The People of the Lie.

Addressing Mecham, he read, in part: "We recognize evil by its disguise."

"We see the smile that hides the hate. The smooth and oily manner that hides the fury."

"The velvet glove that hides the fist. . ."

West went on to point out that Mecham has exhibited all the signs of a severe personality disorder — pretentiousness, vengeful motives, "scapegoating behavior" and intellectual deviousness — and that based on the governor's "veracity and ethics in government, you are in a state of bankruptcy."

And with that vicious blast, West voted "aye" for conviction.

Although many other senators did the same, the Senate failed to finish Mecham off by leaving open the possibility that he may run in the recall election, even though it is probable that he will eventually be banned by the courts from that contest as well — if the recall occurs at all.

It is ironic that the recall — Mecham's original nemesis — is now his only hope to regain power. And it is equally ironic that his expulsion from public life came on the 20-year anniversary of the assassination of Martin Luther King, Jr., whose holiday Mecham rescinded more than a year ago to set off the first of many attacks against his administration.

The Senate could have invoked the so-called "Dracula clause," banning Mecham forever from offices of "honor, trust or profit."

But it did not do so, which only proves that some Arizona politicians are bad and that all others are worse.

And shows that evil in the form of fanaticism dies hard, and will persist when there is any hope for eventual triumph.

The Mecham supporters milled around outside the capitol, listening to a two-piece "country and soul" band. The musicians, loaded down with silver and turquoise jewelry, played a song to the tune of "Elvira," by the Oak Ridge Boys — while the Mechamites sang along.

"Evan Mecham.
"Evan Mecham.
"We lo-ve you, Evan Mecham."

Small children wearing "Evan Mecham, best governor we ever had" t-shirts ran around in the grass on the capitol mall, while their parents — carrying signs calling for the recall of Bob Corbin and the deportation of homosexuals and William French — paraded in front of the Senate building.

When the senate votes began to be tallied, the Mechamites cheered at each "nay" vote. But when it became obvious that the Senate would reach the two-thirds necessary to convict, they became strangely quiet.

And when the ax fell at 4:49 p.m., the precise moment Evan Mecham was thrown out of the governorship, they reacted with all the venom and hate that had built up throughout the day — and throughout a lifetime.

Platinum blonde women with caked makeup screamed "go home faggots," and

Evan the Terrible falls from power, but the evil he represented remains behind in "good people" old men in suede jackets whispered among themselves that "it was the goddamn special interests — and the niggers" that brought Evan down.

All the reasons we set out to recall Evan Mecham a year ago had become personified in front of the Senate building.

Hate. Prejudice. Ignorance.

And, as West said: Evil.

Their flagbearer has been struck down.

But he is only a symptom of the disease, a disease which lingers — albeit often concealed beneath the same tight smile — in the segment of the population that supported Mecham to the end.

And as I watched a mother and her adolescent daughter chant "F--- Bob Corbin." in unison, I realized that the disease is spreading.

And will be with us, Evan Mecham notwithstanding, for a while longer.

quotable

"Well. I guess that's it, isn't it?"

— Paul Eckstein,
attorney for the prosecution of Evan Mecham,
following the governor's conviction, April 4, 1988

Jackson

History testifies to the danger of economic radicalism

Ed Schubert
Asst. Opinion Editor

His name was Jackson. Although he had little experience in government, he aspired to be president of the United States.

Many of the best minds of his time considered him a dangerous kook, and for good reason.

His ignorance of economics was appalling.

But he was popular. Indeed, he inspired intense, almost mystical devotion among his supporters.

And in the end, he won the presidency. In 1828.

By the time he left the White House eight years later, Andrew Jackson had done much to justify the worst fears of his critics. His half-baked economic radicalism had brought the country to financial catastrophe.

Jackson had a profound fear and loathing of banks and bankers, particularly the Bank of the United States and its director, Nicholas Biddle. As historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr. has demonstrated in "The Age of Jackson," the president was not really wrong — the government kept its deposits in the Bank, yet for all practical purposes the Bank was a privately owned corporation with immense power over the economy. And Biddle himself was a conniving weasel who put his own interests well above those of his country.

But Jackson's handling of the bank crisis proved a disaster. In a nutshell: the Bank of the United States was destroyed when Jackson vetoed a bill authorizing its recharter and removed the government's deposits. Those deposits were then distributed to various state banks. The sudden infusion of uncontrolled hard currency sparked an orgy in land speculation.

Eventually it all collapsed, leaving behind the worst depression the United States had suffered up to that point — but not before Old Hickory's term in office had expired, leaving the pain, despair and fury to fall upon his hapless successor, Martin Van Buren.

So just what is the moral of all this? Simple: Don't trust the presidency to a radical.

And that includes Jesse Jackson.

There could hardly be two men more different than Jesse and Andrew Jackson. Jesse is a disciple of Martin Luther King, Jr. and a champion of civil rights; Andy was an Indian killer and a slaveowner. Andy was a soldier; Jesse is a pacifist, or something very similar. The general was one of the most abrasive individuals ever to occupy the Oval Office; the preacher is a genius of diplomacy.

But, irony of ironies, both men share one very crucial characteristic: radicalism. (Incidentally, we are not using the term "radical" here as a synonym for "leftist." A radical, for our purposes, is anyone possessed of extreme views).

The problem with extreme views is that they easily lead to extreme actions. President Jackson did not content himself with wrecking the economy; he also expelled the entire Cherokee Nation from the country (flouting a Supreme Court decision in the process), and in general kept the United States in a state of permanent crisis for eight very long years.

In his own way, President Jesse Jackson promises to be just as exciting. William F. Buckley has observed that "In foreign policy, he is somewhere between Fidel Castro and Pol Pot."

That's hyperbole, but it is also the image Jackson has created for himself through his own statements and actions. (This is the man, remember, who was once photographed playing kissy-face with Yassir Arafat).

But Jackson also grows and adapts with remarkable speed. He recognizes his mistakes and corrects them. Since his last presidential bid, he has dumped the zany Mr. Farrakhan and has made a sincere effort to mend fences with the Jewish community.

Look folks, Jackson might not be the ideal man to play the role of America's first black president, but he's the man we've got. And it's time we end this not-so-subtle prejudice that the White House is for "whites only."

For the Democrats to nominate Jesse Jackson for the presidency would be political suicide. He'd be eaten alive by George Bush.

But Jackson might well make a strong vice-presidential candidate. And if he were elected to that post, the rest of us would have four to eight years to evaluate his performance in the second highest elective office of the nation.

The Democratic Party owes him that much. He's winning the primaries, after all.

Didn't Old Andrew Jackson say something about that? Something about "The democracy of numbers . . ."

Police looking for suspect in serial rapes

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

ASU police said they are searching for a possible serial rapist who may be responsible for an assault on campus early Saturday and two in Tempe during the past week.

Although police have no suspects in the first campus rape case, a second sexual assault on campus occurred just hours after the first one, and a suspect has been taken into custody, police said.

"Priority one is an understatement," ASU Police Sgt. Keith Bailly said of the unsolved assault cases, adding that four extra ASU officers have been assigned to help his detective squad find the rapist. He said police do not have a suspect in the unsolved serial cases, but believe that the rapist may be an ASU student.

Bailly said the first rape on campus Saturday involved a Mesa woman who police say is in her early 20s. She is not a student.

She was sexually assaulted by a Caucasian male approximately 25 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, with a medium build, short light brown hair and a light mustache, police said.

Bailly said the woman and a 15-year-old Mesa girl encountered the suspect in Area 63, a parking lot between Dick's University Drive-In and the Cholla Apartment Complex between 1:30 and 5:30 a.m. Saturday. They were driving to the Sun Devil House when the suspect told them to go to Lot 59, where he allegedly pulled out a black revolver, shackled the woman with handcuffs and told the girl to get in the back seat.

The suspect drove the victim back to Area 63 where he told her, "Don't tell the cops or I'll kill ya," then had intercourse and forced her to perform oral sex on him, Bailly said. The suspect then fled the area on foot.

Bailly said ASU and Tempe police believe the rapist is the same man who sexually assaulted a 19-year-old Tempe woman in the 500 block of South Railroad Avenue March 31st.

Police said the suspect matches the same description and used the same method of operation. He may be responsible for a third rape currently under investigation.

The second campus rape was reported Saturday when a woman exited a van in Lot 59 and flagged down an ASU officer and said had just been raped. Police arrested a man but could not provide further details about the incident.

Art and reason

When Mark and I decided to spend the weekend at his mother's house, I never imagined I would be walking into a mouse's nightmare. There were cats everywhere.

Cat plaques, cat statues, cat clocks, even a cat mat. I couldn't begin to duplicate her collection of kitty litter if I spent a year at a garage sale. Conspicuously absent, however, was a real cat. Strange, I thought, and began to fear that a weekend with cat woman could be a lot less than purr-fect.

But then she came home, and Mark introduced her. She was dressed surprisingly well—no leopard pants. In fact, you could say she was the cat's meow, but I'd rather not.

She offered me a cup of Dutch Chocolate Mint. Now that was something I could relate to. Then she brought it out in the most beautiful, distinctly unfeline china I'd ever seen. As we sipped, I found out that Mrs. Campbell has my same weakness for chocolate, loves the theater as much as I do, but, incredibly, never saw "Cats." So Mark and I are taking her next month.

"HOW I MADE $18,000 FOR COLLEGE BY WORKING WEEKENDS."

When my friends and I graduated from high school, we all took part-time jobs to pay for college.

They ended up in car washes and hamburger joints, putting in long hours for little pay.

Not me. My job takes just one weekend a month and two weeks a year. Yet, I'm earning $18,000 for college.

Because I joined my local Army National Guard.

They're the people who help our state during emergencies like hurricanes and floods. They're also an important part of our country's military defense.

So, since I'm helping them do such an important job, they're helping me make it through school.

As soon as I finished Advanced Training, the Guard gave me a cash bonus of $2,000. I'm also getting another $5,000 for tuition and books, thanks to the New GI Bill.

Not to mention my monthly Army Guard paychecks. They'll add up to more than $11,000 over the six years I'm in the Guard.

And if I take out a college loan, the Guard will help me pay it back — up to $1,500 a year, plus interest.

It all adds up to $18,000 — or more — for college for just a little of my time. And that's a heck of a better deal than any car wash will give you.

THE GUARD CAN HELP PUT YOU THROUGH COLLEGE, TOO. SEE YOUR LOCAL RECRUITER FOR DETAILS, CALL TOLL-FREE 800-638-7600,* OR MAIL THIS COUPON.

Jackson stages rally on campus today

From staff and wire reports

Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson will stage a rally at 9 p.m. today in the University Activity Center.

The ASU stop will be part of Jackson's two-day campaign tour of Arizona in preparation for the state's April 16 Democratic caucus.

Jackson also will visit UofA and NAU during his Arizona campaign swing.

Jackson will fly to Flagstaff from Kenosha, Wis., for a 2 p.m. rally today at NAU before coming to ASU.

Jackson was originally scheduled to be part of a public rally Tuesday afternoon in Tucson, but plans conflicted with a rally for UofA's basketball team, which is due to return from the NCAA Final Four Tournament in Kansas City.

On Wednesday, Jackson will meet at 7:30 a.m. at Tucson International Airport with supporters and reporters before flying to Washington, D.C., for a conference with top Democratic officials.

In July, Arizona will send 40 pledged delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta. The Arizona caucus will be followed by the April 19 New York primary, a key state with 275 delegates, and the Vermont caucuses, which send 19 delegates to the national convention.

Arizona has not been considered a crucial state in the nominating process, because earlier primaries will have already pledged nearly 60 percent of the delegates by April. But Arizona's delegates have become more valuable because of the close race between Jackson, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon.

Tuesday will be Jackson's second visit to Arizona in the past 18 months. He last appeared here in January to protest former Gov. Evan Mecham's rescission of the holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr.

In 1984, Jackson finished third in the Arizona caucus, behind Walter Mondale and Gary Hart, with 13 percent of the Arizona Democratic vote.

Jackson was invited to the campus by College of Liberal Arts Council President Robert Davis, and the rally was organized by ASASU Activities Vice President John Fees and Political Union director David Jordan.

ASASU Elections '88

4 candidates vie for ASASU presidential post

Editor's note: This section profiles the four ASASU executive races and the remaining senate races.

Patrice Cabianca is a senior organizational communications major running for Associated Students president. Cabianca was asked eight questions by the State Press during an interview last week.

1. What experience do you have that will help you get elected as president?

Cabianca: "Specific experience includes my diversity in campus activities. I've been involved in a wide range of activities, and it's through those activities that I think it's going to benefit students the most. Activities include being involved with Residence Life as a resident assistant responsible for a floor on a residence hall. Also, I have served as president of the Panhellenic Council, which is an organization on campus of nearly 1,500 students, and (I have been) a member of Devil's Advocate and Sun Devil Spark. I also served on various committees that worked directly with the University. My diversity in lifestyles includes both on and off campus. I have had the experience of being a commuter student. I have had the experience of an international student studying abroad and have the experience of being an undergraduate student becoming a graduate student."

2. What is your philosophical basis behind your campaign?

Cabianca: "This university is on the threshold of becoming a great university. There's a lot of activities that have been on campus, whether it be something as the Rose Bowl to something like Rita Dove's Pulitzer Prize. We just need to continue recruiting top students to the University. I see a lot of places where we are just right on the edge, and we need that extra push to make this university into a great one."

3. What is your position on minority recruitment and retention at ASU?

Cabianca: "Minority recruitment and retention are both major issues in my mind. It's an area that tends to be lacking at times. Currently, the amount of money spent on minority recruitment and retention is inadequate, and I think we need to go to the Legislature and to the (Arizona Board of) Regents and ask for money and get more money for minorities. We also have to work within ASASU in developing programs and actually seeing that the needs of those students are being met. Those needs aren't going to be met by having somebody, perhaps the student body president, going in and talking with the administration, the Regents or the Legislature about the concerns, but those needs are going to be met by actually having the students (get) involved in the process."

4. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial-aid decreases?

Cabianca: "As far as the $5 increase, I am definitely in favor of it. In the student opinion survey that was taken last year by ASASU and the Student Affairs Office, it showed that 68 percent of the students right now said that they would be willing to give the $5 to needy students so that they can continue their education. That is clear evidence as to why I am supporting that."

5. What would you do to help the senator apathy problem in ASASU?

Cabianca: "In order for any person/student to feel a part of something, they have to be directly involved in it. That means getting students involved in their college councils and directly involved in the activities going on. This would decrease the apathy, because they are going to have a commitment and feel a commitment to what's going on."

6. What distinguishes you from the other presidential candidates, especially on the political spectrum?

Cabianca: "A lot of talk throughout the campaign has been done about issues — expansion, minority recruitment, financial aid — I think those are all evident and obvious. Somebody running for a position such as this had better be looking out for the best for the students. I am especially different in my diversity. Right now, experience in student government isn't going to provide the type of leadership that is needed. What we need is a leader who is involved in that variety of activities and somebody that recognizes that diversity of students on campus and that is going to work towards getting all students involved in the ASU community and getting involved in this community."

7. Do you consider yourself a conservative or liberal?

Cabianca: "I consider myself a progressive or a moderate person, especially when it comes to human rights and human programs such as the Springfest, which are, I think, a response to what students really wanted. I focused on programs because that is what really mattered to students."

2. What is your philosophical basis behind your campaign?

Fees: "I think it goes back to the philosophy I had as activities vice president, and that's the programming over politics. This philosophy is simple — it's people not politics. When Associated Students starts dividing over political issues — Greek versus non-Greek, between the races, divisions between commuter students and special-interest groups — that really doesn't serve students, and that's not what student government is here to do. Student government to me is to unite people, and that's why the focus should be on people and the things we share in common, like the cost of education or University expansion. The quality of our life at ASU is the quality of our education as well."

3. What is your position on minority recruitment and retention at ASU?

Fees: "First of all, I think we have to diversify our entire student body and make sure the access and opportunity is there for all students — not just minority students but all students. I have a real concern with the implementation of the new undergraduate-admissions requirement and how that will impact minority students who are trying to apply into the University. I feel it would negatively impact the number of minority students we have on campus, and we need to come up with some type of bridge program which helps those students make that transition. I also think the University has to work harder through minority recruitment to actually get a cordial representation not only in the student body but in the faculty. We need to develop role models through the faculty members in professional positions. I think our efforts to retain students have been pretty good. But we need to make sure we provide the resources, staff, space and funding which would help student organizations become successful."

4. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial-aid decreases?

Fees: "I'm generally against any redistribution of wealth by other students. I think students are having a hard enough time just getting through school. We all have a difficult time affording school. But a student opinion survey that was conducted last fall tended to show that students are willing to do that (pay higher tuition) — to make sure those students (who could not afford college on their own) can afford college. I think the student government has to start worrying not only about not just the financial-assistance programs and what level tuition is but the nickle and dime fees that are taking place all around us."

5. What would you do to help the senator apathy problem in ASASU?

Fees: "Encourage more student involvement through the student councils. If college councils aren't strong, then the senators aren't going to be held accountable. Just like if student voter-participation is low, probably the student government is not going to be representative of the student body. As activities vice president, I tried to do fun things — anything I can do to get their attention. Hopefully we'll have a new body of senators that will not only be interested but sincerely care about students."

Turn to President, page 10.

rights issues. When we're talking more fiscally, I consider myself more conservative."

8. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system, and what changes would you recommend?

Cabianca: "There's a lot of room for changes with every organization on campus. The fraternity system specifically has a strong foundation laid underneath. It has some strong leadership going for it. I wouldn't leave it like it is, because I would hate anything to stay like it is. Nothing is at its perfection. There is a lot of room for growth and improvement. The leadership is showing that they are making strides toward improving the weak areas, and they are also strengthening their already-strong areas."

John Fees is a junior communications major running for Associated Students president. Fees was asked eight questions during a State Press interview last week.

1. As a candidate for activities vice president last year, you promised to emphasize programming over politics. Do you feel you have accomplished this?

Fees: "I think so. I think my efforts have been completely devoted to the several departments that I've been trying to manage and the $500,000 budget I'm responsible for. You can see that through one of the best lecture series we've ever had, through political-union events that range from homosexual issues to Contras to debates to involving faculty in them. Also, one of the very best homecomings ever and developing

Greenberg, Niemeyer run for vice presidential post

Jay Greenberg is a junior economics major running for executive vice president. The State Press asked Greenberg eight questions during an interview last week.

1. What is the philosophical basis behind your campaign?

Greenberg: "The two things I want to get across are to get students involved, and I'm not running for an office — I'm running for a purpose. I want to get a lot of students involved so that they know what's going on."

2. What is your position on minority recruitment and retention at ASU?

Greenberg: "I've talked to a few people in minority recruitment. I feel it definitely needs to be strengthened. There needs to be more funding and better programs."

3. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial aid decreases?

Greenberg: "I don't feel it would be necessary, but I don't know all the facts behind it."

4. What would you do to solve the senator apathy problem at ASASU?

Greenberg: "The executive vice president is basically an officiator of the senate. The two senators now have to go to college council meetings. Second, the ex-vice president should implant ideas and problems (in the senators minds) and say go for it. The senators get involved by working on their issues, and they're not just doing paperwork but they're solving student problems."

5. What distinguishes you from the other vice presidential candidate, specifically on the political spectrum?

Greenberg: "I don't really know my opponent. I've seen his resume. I don't think a resume guarantees you're going to do a good job in office. My opponent is running for a position on his resume. I'm not doing that — I'm running for a purpose."

6. Do you consider yourself a conservative or liberal?

Greenberg: "I don't feel politics should get involved in student government. I have my own opinions, but that doesn't play a role."

7. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system and where it is heading?

Greenberg: "I think the ASU fraternity system does a lot of good things, but they also make some silly mistakes. They hit the news quite a bit because people want to hear about the incidents, not the good things. They develop a lot of leaders on campus, and they definitely need some work in specific areas."

8. What experience do you have that will help you to be elected executive vice president?

Greenberg: "Probably working with the administration in the past in University committees. Also, I've sat in on almost all of the senate meetings this semester, so I understand how they're run, and I could easily fill right in."

Matt Niemeyer is a junior political science major running for executive vice president. The State Press asked him eight questions in an interview last week.

1. What is the philosophical basis behind your campaign?

Niemeyer: "Primarily what I'd like to do is expand the role of the college councils. They have a $25,000 budget, and the involvement in them right now is pitiful, and I really think something can be done about it."

2. What is your position on minority recruitment and retention at ASU?

Niemeyer: "To tell you the truth, my department is a budgetary department, and I don't handle policies like that. I think there is a serious problem because this campus is lacking in minorities."

3. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial aid decreases?

Niemeyer: "No, I'm not. Right now the state raises tuition according to two requirements: one — in-state students pay 20.5 percent of their education every year, and two — out-of-state students pay 74.5 percent. And the tuition only rises by that amount every year. And for us to use other criteria — it just won't cut the mustard. I don't think for us to mess with this system is right."

4. What would you do to solve the senator

Jill Lindsey Clarke/State Press

apathy problem at ASASU?

Niemeyer: "I'd like to make the senate a little more serious. One, they don't always attend their college council meetings. This is in the constitution and needs to be enforced. Also, maybe a dress code. A lot of the senators don't even read the bills before they walk in the door — that's ridiculous."

5. What distinguishes you from the other vice presidential candidate?

Niemeyer: "My experience. I know the system. I work with it every day. Although (State Press opinion page editor) Darrin Hostetler thinks this is detrimental, I disagree. I love my job (assistant to executive vice president) up there."

6. Do you consider yourself conservative or liberal on the political spectrum?

Niemeyer: "I consider myself a moderate, basically because I have leanings both ways."

7. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system and where it is heading?

Niemeyer: "I think that something needs to be done about hazing. That can't go on. It's a legal liability, and the University is going to get it in the end. And I think something should be done about the GPA's. Some kind of scholarship program needs to be set up, especially in the pledge programs, because they're so busy."

8. What experience do you have that will help you to be elected vice president?

Niemeyer: "I see a lot of problems that need to be fixed. I know what they are, and I know how to do it. From being up there this year I know what can be done with the college councils, and I know how to improve communication with the clubs. Basically, I am assistant to the vice president, and I handle a large spectrum of jobs. I am a legislative assistant, which basically means I am the errand boy for the legislative branch. And I'm also treasurer of the College of Liberal Arts."

3 hopefuls run for ASASU activities vice president position

Mark Collins is a junior purchasing materials management major running for Associated Students activities vice president. Collins was asked six questions during a State Press interview last week.

1. What is the philosophical basis behind your campaign?

Collins: "What I'd like to concentrate on is getting students involved in the beginning so that they can have a good time at ASU. I feel in a lot of ways that if you get somebody involved on campus, get them going in activities and get them to meet people, they're going to have a good time in college and also get better grades because they're going to enjoy coming to school. We have a problem with freshman retention, and people get lost in the system because it's such a large University. I'd like to use the activities department to make the University smaller so that people can feel at home here."

2. What is your position on minority recruitment and retention at ASU?

Collins: "I work in REACH, and we work with all campus clubs and organizations. I think that with minority recruitment and retention, if we can first get them here, then get them involved with activities with other students, that's going to help with retention."

3. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial aid decreases?

Collins: "Tacking on five dollars to supplement our student aid base would help, because there are students who can't afford it. It is important especially for students who wouldn't normally come to the University. If they can have help with financial aid, and, if it tacks on an extra five dollars on my tuition, I wouldn't mind at all."

4. What would you do to solve the senator apathy problem at ASASU?

Collins: "First of all, before they become senators, I would encourage involvement in their college councils. If they are active in their college councils, then they are going to go into ASASU with good communication between them and the executive officers. Communication is key."

5. What distinguishes you from the other activities vice presidential candidates, specifically on the political spectrum?

Collins: "I'd like to think that my participation in campus activities sets me apart. I've attended almost all of the 'Friday Fixes.' I've been to the (ASASU) concert series events, I've been to most of the lecture series events. I was a volunteer with the Leadership Institute (under ASASU activities vice president). I participated in the first Leadership Institute retreat. I helped out with campus 'High School Leaders Day,' and I helped with homecoming. It's the background of participation in student activities that sets me apart from my opponents."

6. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system and where it is heading?

Collins: "A lot needs to be done with communication between the ASU Greek system and the other students. The Greek system has a lot to offer to some people. If people choose not to be in it, then that's good, but if students choose to be in the Greek system, then full support should be given both ways. The Greeks, and I am one, have a responsibility because they are so high-profiled to account for their actions, our rituals and the ideas that we are founded on. The Greek system here is more positive than it is at other campuses. In some universities, if you're not Greek, you can't adjust to the university too well."

Carlton Hawkins is a senior advertising and marketing major running for activities vice president. Hawkins was asked six questions by the State Press during an interview last week.

1. What is the philosophical basis behind your campaign?

Hawkins: "My philosophical basis of my whole campaign is to work more for the community and to have more activities for don't see many organizations working toward retention. I don't see ASASU actually going out and trying to get people. By myself being a minority, and being on the executive board, I can work towards making it more comfortable for people coming up to ASASU and working with minorities."

3. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial aid decreases?

Hawkins: "I'm in favor of it, because I'm a benefactor of financial aid. Some of the aid should go to students who need it most."

4. What would you do to solve the senator apathy problem at ASASU?

Hawkins: "I'd try to get in touch and more involved with senators. I currently work for the activities office, and I don't see very many senators up in the ASASU senators' office. I try to associate them with activities because I think they are the voice of the colleges, and if I can get in touch with them, I can get activities more popular and successful."

5. What distinguishes you from the other activities vice presidential candidates, specifically on the political spectrum?

Hawkins: "I've actually researched the office in such a way that I've gone to every director and asked how their department worked and what things could they see that would work better. They've given me some objectives, and I've actually written what I want to do with each department, and I've given a focus and objective for every department. By having such a plan, I set myself apart."

6. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system and where it is heading?

Hawkins: "I think it's doing a good job in some ways and a bad job in other ways. It has its benefits and drawbacks like any other organization, and I believe sororities and fraternities are good for people that are involved. My overall opinion of them is that they're good."

Todd Martensen is a junior business marketing major running for Associated Students activities vice president. Martensen was asked six questions by the State Press during an interview last week.

Mecham convicted

Senate convicts Mecham on Articles I, III

Convicted Governor Evan Mecham talks with his chief defense lawyer Jerris Leonard during the closing arguments at his impeachment trial in the Arizona Senate.

Convicted

Sen. Jesus "Chuy" Higuera, D-Tucson, as he explained his vote to convict Mecham for misusing the protocol fund.

"I am not responsible for anyone's stupidity or ignorance. Let us put a stop to this fiasco."

"I am ecstatic it's over," said Sen. Greg Lunn, R-Tucson.

"I feel satisfied that justice has been done. I feel satisfied that the interests of this state under the impeachment process have been protected.

"I feel relieved that the nightmare is over."

Fred Craft, Mecham's defense attorney who had once served as the governor's liaison in Washington, D.C., said: "I'm tired. We have had a long, trying day.

"I'm very, in one sense, relieved that this is all over, and, in the other sense, I am certainly sorry about the outcome.

"I think it's time to back off and let things cool down a little bit. Let's see where we are tomorrow after the smoke of this battle lifts and we can see a little clearer."

Mecham still faces an April 22 Maricopa County Superior Court date to face charges stemming from the Wolfson campaign loan.

Sen. Tony West, R-Phoenix, had the harshest words for Mecham on the Senate floor.

"Evil originates not in the absence of guilt, but in the attempt to escape guilt," he said, quoting from a religious book. "The evil hate the light that exposes them."

With Mecham's back toward him, West added, "Your veracity and your ethics are in a state of bankruptcy."

The failure of the so-called "Dracula clause" showed "the nature of the beast," according to Sen. Jeff Hill, R-Tucson. Hill voted to acquit Mecham on both articles but voted to enact the "Dracula" disqualification.

Senate President Carl Kunasek, R-Mesa, who voted to convict Mecham on the protocol fund charge, said he voted against disqualification because Mecham had not broken criminal laws.

Sen. Jacque Steiner, R-Phoenix, said she voted against invoking the "Dracula" consideration because "it's one thing to impeach a governor, but it's too heavy a responsibility to say to three million people in Arizona that he cannot run again.

"I have faith in the judgment of the people."

Mecham's troubles began before he took office on Jan. 5, 1987. The winner of a three-way race for governor, Mecham drew national attention and sparked a massive recall effort when he rescinded a holiday honoring slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Mecham has contended former Gov. Bruce Babbitt illegally created the law and that Attorney General Bob Corbin would have sued him to recover the holiday's $3 million pricetag.

Ironically, the Senate's conviction fell on the 20th anniversary of King's assassination.

Mecham followed with a series of controversial appointments and made comments that drew fire from blacks, Hispanics and Orientals who labeled the governor a "racist."

He also called for a list of all homosexuals working in state government, contending that they were breaking the law and should be removed from their jobs. Mecham angered some when he told a statewide radio audience that working women caused high divorce rates.

Some trial observers said the Senate's dismissal of the Wolfson loan charge was dangerous because it was expected to be the most damaging evidence against Mecham.

Lee Watkins, the former prisons construction chief who is reported to have made the alleged death threat against former Mecham aide Donna Carlson, was the only witness in the Senate trial who invoked the Fifth Amendment and did not answer questions.

For the first time since the impeachment trial started nearly six weeks ago, Presiding Officer Gordon spoke to reporters and said the trial was "extremely fair."

"All of the governor's basic constitutional rights were accorded," Gordon said. "It was a very trying experience for me. But I learned a lot about their (senators') process."

Gordon said he was the target of some "disrespectful" calls during the trial but was not threatened.

Senators reported a barrage of phone calls following their votes, some callers threatening to kill lawmakers who voted to convict Mecham.

"Each of us know, as divided as the people are on the issue, that clearly there will be repercussions at the voting box and on my life," said Sen. Lela Alston, D-Phoenix and assistant Senate minority leader.

"I think the governor's supporters are very angry and emotional," she said. "I don't think that will go away and I, of course, realized that when I made my vote.

"But I had to do what was best given the oath of office I have taken. If that works against me, so be it. I voted the way I think best represents the people of Arizona."

Tempe Sen. Doug Todd, a Republican, said calls from his constituents ran 3-to-1 in favor of convicting Mecham.

Rep. Jenny Norton, R-Tempe, an early Mecham supporter who later called him a "stumblebum," said she was relieved.

"I'm relieved that he has been impeached and convicted," she said. "I don't think he's made a good governor at all."

Mecham attorney Jerris Leonard said he was "very disappointed" in the verdicts.

"I thought we put on a great case," Leonard said, adding that the defeat of the "Dracula clause" was a victory.

"He (Mecham) is going to have to ponder if he wants to run in the recall."

Sen. A. V. "Bill" Hardt, D-Globe, said the conviction tells the world that "the chief executive, the governor, should set an example for the rest of the people."

Rep. Jim Skelly, R-Scottsdale, who chaired House hearings on impeachment, said he expected a conviction.

"For the good of the state that we all deeply love, I am relieved," he said.

It was the first impeachment conviction of a governor since 1929, when Oklahoma Gov. Henry S. Johnston was removed from office for ordering the National Guard to surround the state's Capitol. Johnston wanted to prevent the Legislature from assembling to investigate him.

Five other U.S. governors have been removed from office through impeachment.

The Senate's vote, which took about 90 minutes, came after prosecutor Paul Eckstein asked earlier in the day during closing arguments, "How would you tell your grandchildren that it's OK to borrow money that's not yours?"

"Let's bring down the curtain on this prolonged and bitter controversy."

After the vote, Eckstein said he was satisfied with the results, but added that in retrospect he would have preferred that the Wolfson loan charge be presented first.

"It may have taken six to seven weeks, but I would have put it first in the case," Eckstein said.

His partner in prosecuting Mecham, William French, said he was confident throughout most of the case.

"Sunday, I was tight and tense," French said. "But I feel comfortable with what we presented. I wouldn't have done anything different.

"It was a very, very jealous mistress for us."

French took on his "mistress" Oct. 26, when the House hired him to investigate the Wolfson loan and the alleged threat against Carlson.

On Jan. 15, he produced the "French Report," which outlined alleged wrongdoings by the governor. Mecham was impeached three weeks later. Mecham had been indicted Jan. 8 on six felony counts stemming from the handling of the loan. Mecham's brother, Willard, who had acted as the campaign's treasurer, was indicted on three felony counts.

Republican senators expressed some concern that their vote against the governor would signal an end to their legislative careers in next fall's elections.

"I think the Mecham controversy will carry on for awhile, especially into the next election," said Sen. John Mawhinney, R-Tucson, who voted in favor of both impeachment articles.

"The recall election — if it comes off, and I dearly hope it will — will carry some of the Mecham baggage, some of the Mecham people and some of the Mecham ideas. There is very little we can do about it."

Mawhinney said he voted to convict because he believed the Mecham administration was characterized by a "continuous disregard" for the law and balked at Mecham's request that the state pay for his reported $1 million defense costs.

"We did not bring the governor's problems on to him," Mawhinney said. "He did. It was his actions that caused him to be impeached."

State Press reporter Michael Hoehn also contributed to this story.

How they voted

Here is how senators voted in three roll call votes Monday in convicted Gov. Evan Mecham's impeachment trial. All three votes required a two-thirds majority, or 20 votes of the 30-member Senate, for approval.

Mecham convicted

Students applaud Senate's decision to convict

Senior finance major Chris Garrett watches the Mecham impeachment hearings in the MU lounge Monday.

By TERESA OWEN
State Press

The Senate's vote to convict Gov. Evan Mecham brought cheers from students who were watching the proceedings in the basement of the MU Monday.

Most of the approximately 50 students agreed with the Senate's conviction of Mecham on both Article I, the obstruction of justice charge, and on Article III, the $80,000 illegal loan charge.

"He can't have done the stuff he did and be governor," said Ria Cottle, a freshman nursing major. She also said that it is ironic that Mecham was convicted on the anniversary of Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination.

John Fees, ASASU activities vice president, called the Mecham impeachment an educational event for ASU students and a challenge for ASASU.

"Relating this whole thing to the ASASU elections. It just goes to show how the people's involvement is so important... If people don't vote then there won't be enough representation," Fees said.

Many students agreed that the Senate, which voted 21-9 on Article I and 26-3 on Article III, convicted Mecham because they felt there was clear and convincing evidence.

"The evidence is legitimate and it has given good, probable cause," said Michael Roose, a sophomore business major.

Even before the conviction on the first article, students were predicting and hoping that the Senate would convict Mecham.

"He's history," said Craig Younger, a senior journalism major, when the vote on the first article was 16-4.

Again the audience cheered and laughed when Sen. Jesus Higuera, D-Tucson, said Mecham has "three strikes" against him.

"He is an incompetent public officer," said Chris Garrett, a senior finance/real estate major. "He doesn't realize what he's done to the state and the people."

The cheers continued when the Senate convicted Mecham, the first governor to be impeached and removed from office since 1929, on Article III.

"We have to have good, clean government and I'm glad we stand up for good government," said Betty Daniell, a graduate student in religious studies. However, she added, "It is bad to rejoice in someone else's downfall."

Some students were surprised that the Senate did not pass the Dracula clause, which would have prohibited Mecham from ever running for public office in Arizona.

"If they took the trouble to convict him, they should have taken the trouble to see he can't run again," said Ken Pina, a junior math major.

Although it is still uncertain if Mecham will be allowed to run in the May 17 recall election, students said that if Mecham is allowed to run in the recall election and wins, it will be an embarrassment to Arizona.

"They did the right thing to convict, but I thought they would vote against the Dracula clause," said Jon Paukovich, a masters student in business administration.

ASASU Public Programs Sen. Scott Thomson said, "It says something about our state for letting him run."

Liberal Arts Sen. Patrick McWhorter, who interns in the House of Representatives, said that he was surprised that the Dracula clause was not passed by the Senate.

"I was surprised. Three Democrats voted on the clause, and if they had voted the other way it would have gone through."

U.S. senators agree conviction ends chapter in state's history

By SCOTT LUCK and MARTY SAUERZOPF
State Press

Arizona's U.S. Congressional delegation agreed the state Senate's conviction of Gov. Evan Mecham Monday ended a sad chapter in the history of Arizona.

In a prepared statement, Republican Rep. Jim Kolbe echoed the thoughts of most of the U.S. delegates. Kolbe said, "The conviction of Gov. Mecham on two counts of impeachment ends a sad chapter in the political history of Arizona."

Rep. Morris K. Udall continued the analogy. "The time has come to put this unpleasant chapter in our history behind us — Arizona can grow and prosper if we do," he said.

Rep. Jay Rhodes said, "I don't think anyone should be particularly happy we found ourselves in this situation." Rhodes added that he was relieved but not surprised at the decision to convict Mecham.

Democratic Sen. Dennis DeConcini said he also breathed a sigh of relief because the state can now return to business.

"It's a relief to have this behind us. I can't help but feel sorry for Gov. Mecham, though," DeConcini said.

DeConcini said he believes the state will go through a transition period before everything returns to normal.

"I think it's going to take a while for the state to heal," DeConcini said.

While they related their thoughts on Mecham's conviction, the minds of the U.S. delegates invariably wandered to the scheduled May 17 recall election.

"Now the citizens of Arizona must turn their attention to selecting a governor for the remainder of Gov. Mecham's term," Kolbe said. "The recall election, set in motion before the impeachment process, should not be halted when several people have filed petitions to be candidates.

"I look forward to a spirited campaign during which those on the ballot give the voters their vision of Arizona's future," Kolbe said.

DeConcini disagreed. He said he does not believe there will be a recall election, and he thinks Gov. Rose Mofford should serve out the rest of Mecham's term.

Udall said, "Gov. Mofford did not seek this office, but she has conducted herself with restraint and great dignity and distinction. She is now the lawful holder of this office.

"I personally believe that the action today should take precedence over the recall election, which has been called for May 17. But this is a matter for the courts to decide. I hope we can have a prompt resolution of this remaining issue."

Attorney General Bob Corbin issued an opinion Monday that the recall election will go on, but Mecham is barred from participation.

DeConcini added that he does not believe Mecham will hold public office again despite the Senate's rejection of the "Dracula clause," which would have prevented Mecham from seeking any office again. "I don't think so — that chapter's behind us, and we should move on."

Rhodes said he was not surprised by the Senate's decision to allow Mecham the possibility to run in the future. "I'm not surprised they voted no, and I would not have been surprised if they would have voted yes."

Rhodes would not speculate how he would have voted on the clause.

Udall and Kolbe also lauded the senators for their conduct.

Udall said, "The Arizona Legislature is to be complimented on the way it courageously confronted an unpleasant and painful process.

"It was clearly bipartisan and reflects very favorably on the way our state Legislature handled this very difficult affair."

Kolbe said, "I believe every Arizonan owes a debt of gratitude to the members of the Senate and the House, who performed their duties according to their sworn responsibilities.

"This judgment should be extended to all senators and representatives, regardless of which way they voted," Kolbe said.

"Their decision was a very difficult one. I believe it was evident from their intentions to the proceedings that they made their decision on the basis of the evidence and not on any other basis."

Mofford 'not celebrating' new position of governor

By SHERI JOHNSON
State Press

The atmosphere was solemn on the ninth floor of the Capitol building Monday evening as Rose Mofford made her first public statement as Arizona's new governor.

Mofford assumed the role after the Senate convicted Gov. Evan Mecham on charges of obstruction of justice and misuse of state protocol funds. However, the Senate voted down the Dracula clause, which would have barred Mecham from ever again running for public office.

Athia Hardt, Mofford's press secretary, said Mofford was not celebrating her new position.

"Her general thoughts were that this is not a happy time, but it's a solemn time," she said.

Hardt said Mofford had not listened to the roll-call vote on either article of impeachment; she heard about the outcome from staff members.

"She was working in her office thinking about her remarks," Hardt said. "Her reaction was really very solemn, as was most of the staff's (reaction). There was no jubilation."

Mofford doesn't know when she will be sworn in, but she will find out from Attorney General Bob Corbin, Hardt said, adding that Mofford will decide what to do with the transition team later.

Hardt said there are a lot of questions right now, but that she (Hardt) doesn't have many answers. Some issues are "too early to tell," she said.

However, she said that Mofford is not planning a legal challenge to the recall election.

Gov. Rose Mofford

Mofford's speech . . .

Members of the press and my fellow Arizonans:

This is a difficult hour in our State's history.

My heart goes out to the entire Mecham family.

Today we have reached the end of some difficult times in Arizona. I know the decision made by the Senate today was not reached lightly. It is time to put all that behind us and move forward.

Today our Constitution has worked. Our elected representatives have spoken.

As we work together to bind the wounds of the last few months, let us purge our hearts of suspicion and hate. Today none of us are Republicans, none of us are Democrats. We are all Arizonans. Let us go forward together as Arizonans.

I ask all of you for your prayers and support, both for me and for the Mecham family. I did not ask for this burden. But I do not shrink from the job before me.

With God's help, I will not let you down.

Carlson, Smith reactions differ

By CARRI MITCHELL
State Press

Donna Carlson, a former aide to convicted Gov. Evan Mecham, said she was surprised by the Senate's conviction of Mecham on an obstruction of justice charge Monday, while former press secretary, Ken Smith, said Mecham would have won a recall election if he was acquitted.

Carlson said, "I didn't think the obstruction of justice clause would carry."

But Smith said the 21-9 vote on the obstruction clause came as no surprise to him.

"That's politics," he said.

Carlson, who was allegedly the target of a death threat from former Mecham aide Lee Watkins, expressed happiness immediately after Mecham's conviction.

Carlson said she was surprised the vote on the third article, concerning Mecham's protocol fund, was so strong. The Senate voted 24-6 to convict Mecham on article three.

Smith said, "If he (Mecham) had been acquitted, he would have won the (May 17) recall election."

"I really feel that the problem with Evan Mecham is one of political and public relation," Smith said. "If he had handled some things different — the Martin Luther King holiday, the Legislature — than we wouldn't be talking now."

"But that's politics, and it's not wrong or right," Smith said. "It's a dirty business."

PHOENIX — While a short, slightly dishelved woman in bright red sweat pants and tennis shoes sang her praises of Gov. Evan Mecham outside the Senate Monday, Prosecutor William French was reciting Sir Walter Scott inside.

"If they don't like who we elected, they set out to take our vote away," the woman sang.

"Oh what a tangled web we weave when we practice to deceive," said French, the two orators' meters nearly identical.

The singing woman in the electric red pants had plenty of company. Joining her were about 100 people, mostly Mecham supporters, some toting babies, signs or pamphlets, all of them carrying plenty of enthusiasm.

"Mecham speaks truth, but Goldwater has a forked tongue," read one hand-lettered sign. Another was directed at the senators, who decided Mecham's fate: "Wash your hands of it, or we'll have to clean house and senate."

The throng clapped, whistled and cheered after a trio of trumpeters played along with pre-recorded music. The loud mob marched indiscriminately along the Capitol mall that sits between the Senate, House and Statehouse.

An appearance of a senator in a second-story window above the throng ignited chants of "We want Mecham; we want Mecham."

During the lunch break, men in navy blue suit jackets nervously touched their earpieces while Mecham threaded his way from the Senate chambers floor, down one flight of stairs (a blue-suited Mecham bodyguard quickly stopped a reporter from going down the stairs with Mecham and his entourage), and finally to automatic opening doors where the governor's vocal supporters erupted into a thunderous cheer.

Mecham, acknowledging his supporters, smiled and waved. Cameras whirred. Protest signs bobbed up and down. A woman with a pocket camera turned toward her companion and exclaimed, "I got him!"

Mecham barred from office, recall election, Corbin says

By BEN McCONNELL
State Press

PHOENIX — Convicted Gov. Evan Mecham cannot run in the May 17 recall election and is barred from running for office until 1991, according to an opinion issued by the attorney general's office Monday night.

Assistant Attorney General John Shadegg also said during a news conference that Mecham's removal from office makes Gov. Rose Mofford the incumbent candidate in the election and eligible to campaign.

"But that is the least clear, most difficult question right now," Shadegg said. "There's no reason for her (Mofford) to resign."

A previous opinion from Attorney General Bob Corbin stated that Mofford would have had to resign her secretary of state post, and, effectively, her acting governorship to run in recall.

Her resignation would have vaulted Corbin into the acting governor's chair.

Mofford could not be reached for comment and her spokesman said the matter will not be discussed until later today.

"This whole situation is unprecedented," Shadegg said. "The answers are unclear and will have to be resolved by a court."

Mecham's conviction does not cancel the recall election, Shadegg said, because there is no precedent for canceling an election.

"The election is to determine who should be governor," he said. "The candidates have a right to the election."

Recall candidate and GOP national committeeman Jack Londen said the attorney general's opinion is what he expected because the Constitution states an election cannot be canceled.

"The Constitution very clearly defines that," Londen said, adding that he looks forward to running against Mofford, former Congressman John Rhodes, former businessman John Oertle Sr., and Socialist Workers Party candidate Bernie Senter.

Rhodes could not be reached for comment Monday night.

If Mofford's name does appear on the ballot May 17, Democrat Carolyn Warner, who lost to Mecham in 1986, said she will pull out of the race.

"All of us should say, 'Isn't the state more important than our political agenda?'"

ASU personalities have mixed reactions

By KRISTI ELLIS
State Press

There was mixed reaction from ASU professors and administrators Monday following the Senate's vote to convict former Gov. Evan Mecham on two articles of impeachment.

Bruce Mason, ASU political science professor, said, "I was surprised, but pleasantly surprised."

Mason said he felt it was better for the Republican Party for Mecham's term to end with impeachment, rather than a recall election.

"The Republicans are far better off. Right now, obviously, the Republicans are scared like hell," Mason said. "I don't think the damage is permanent — I think the wound will heal quicker this way."

College of Law Dean Paul Bender said he wasn't surprised by the results Senate votes.

"No, it's exactly what I thought," Bender said.

Victor Zafra, vice president for business affairs, called the impeachment trial "a great mishmash," adding that he didn't have much of a reaction because he doesn't consider himself an authority on politics.

"I'll watch the news and let them tell me," he said.

Mason said, "Since Evan Mecham is gone, I would argue that there's no need for a recall election. Under no circumstances should he be eligible to run for governor on May 17."

"No one can help but feel sorry for the man. You hate to see any man humiliated."

Zafra, speaking on the lease-purchase law that Mecham opposed but is favored by Gov. Rose Mofford, said it didn't matter who was in office to sign the bill because the Legislature already voted in favor of the bill.

"As far as we're concerned it's the law of the land," Zafra said.

Mason said, "It (the vote) was very shocking, but I'm satisfied it's over with."

Attorneys give closing summations before the Senate.

Mecham supporters believe he will be re-elected

By SHERI JOHNSON
State Press

Supporters of convicted Gov. Evan Mecham who gathered at the Capitol building Monday expressed optimism that he would be re-elected May 17, despite the Senate's vote to convict him on charges of obstructing a criminal investigation and misusing the state's protocol fund.

Don Ruzicka, chairman of Concerned Arizona Voters, said that Mecham would be re-elected in the May 17 recall election.

"The people will vote overwhelmingly to put him back in office," he said.

Leon Woodward, a member of Concerned Arizona Voters, said that he was "very, very upset," claiming that there was not enough evidence to convict the governor.

"I thought that Article I (obstruction of justice) we'd win by a landslide," Woodward said "... There was no obstruction of justice. If there had been an obstruction of justice, he should have been arrested. He was never arrested."

Woodward said he believed Mecham would be re-elected. "I want to thank Ed Buck for the recall, because if it weren't for the recall, it would be the end of Gov. Mecham," he said.

Kip Shippy, who founded the Mecham Fan Club, said, "My first reaction at the impeachment, I cried."

Mecham supporter Dave Archer said that Mecham would be the first governor to be impeached and then re-elected.

"Everybody was disappointed, but if you think about it, he had to go through the recall whether he was impeached or not," he said.

"There's a lot of grassroots support, more than they (senators) want to admit. I think that it (Mecham's re-election) is going to come about and you're going to see something surprising."

Recall founder Ed Buck is one of the first to sign the recall petition in summer, 1987.

History of impeached governors

PHOENIX (AP) — Here is a list of the six U.S. governors who have been impeached and removed from office:

WILLIAM W. HOLDEN of North Carolina, removed in 1871.

Holden was impeached after he unconstitutionally suspended the right of habeas corpus and sent militia to quell violence by the Ku Klux Klan, which was accused of murders aimed at frightening blacks into not voting. He also arrested a number of political opponents.

DAVID BUTLER, Nebraska's first governor, removed in 1871.

Butler was removed for misappropriating school funds, but the impeachment proceedings subsequently were expunged from the legislative record and in 1888 he was elected to another term as governor.

WILLIAM SULZER, New York, removed in 1913.

The Senate convicted him of three charges of misappropriation of funds. Sulzer, a product of Tammany Hall, snubbed the machine's patronage demands after he was elected and launched an investigation of corruption. Annoyed legislators then dredged up charges of financial irregularities, which even some anti-Tammany forces agreed were true.

JAMES E. "Farmer Jim" FERGUSON, Texas, removed in 1917.

Ferguson was convicted by the Senate on 10 charges, some stemming from a fight over control of the University of Texas. Ferguson resigned a day before his conviction was announced.

His wife, Miriam "Ma" Ferguson, was twice elected governor, serving from 1925-27 and 1933-35.

JOHN C. WALTON, Oklahoma, removed in 1923.

He had declared martial law and ordered the National Guard to disband a grand jury which was investigating him. The House returned 22 articles of impeachment ranging from violation of the separation of powers to diverting public funds.

HENRY S. JOHNSTON, Oklahoma, removed in 1929.

Johnston had ordered the National Guard to surround the Capitol to prevent the Legislature from assembling to investigate the governor. Johnston was impeached but not convicted in 1928, but was impeached again the next year and removed.

Day, Micone seek ASASU campus affairs office

Vince Micone is a junior organizational communications major running for campus affairs vice president. The State Press asked Micone eight questions during an interview last week.

1. What is the philosophical basis behind your campaign?
 Micone: "Service through action. Serving in the position for the past year as campus affairs vice president, I have insight into how the departments function and what is required to make them work effectively to meet the needs of the students."

2. What is your position on minority recruitment and retention at ASU?

Micone: "Obviously in the past there has not been complete recruitment for minorities on campus. My position, especially with the Minority Cultural Awareness Board being a campus affairs department, is that we need to go out and work with the high schools more effectively to recruit minority students. I think a lot of times students are told they can't succeed in college, and I think it is the responsibility of the University to try and dispel this belief."

3. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial aid decreases?

Micone: "I think that we need to look at the fact that Arizona is one of the lowest states providing financial aid for its students. It is becoming increasingly hard for students to come to a college or university in this state, and if it requires us to look at how we, ourselves, can contribute to that, then we need to take a serious look at that."

Vince Micone

4. What would you do to solve the senator apathy problem at ASASU?

Micone: "A lot of that in the past I have tried to solve by sitting on the senate by getting them involved, especially in the service programs and encouraging them to get involved. Perhaps working on integrating them into some of the programs. I'd like the senators to know what's going on and question a lot more."

5. What distinguishes you from the other campus affairs vice presidential candidate?

Micone: "I think perhaps the most distinguishing factor is my experience in working with the departments. In the last year I have turned a lot of what I promised to do into action. A lot of my campaign promises have come true to make the department revitalized."

6. Do you consider yourself a conservative or liberal on the political spectrum?

Micone: "In the political spectrum I would be a liberal. Where I come from, being a Democrat is like being a Republican in Arizona. But when it comes to student government it doesn't matter if you're liberal or conservative, it matters if you are committed to students."

7. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system and where it is heading?

Micone: "I think there's a misperception (sic) about the Greek system. It does provide some students with the necessary personal fulfillment while they're in college, which is a good aspect. And it, in itself, can have positive and negative impact on students. It is very disheartening to hear about things like the Fiji incident, but it's good to know the University is taking action to handle problems like that."

8. What experience do you have that will help you to be elected campus affairs vice president?

Micone: "Insight into all the problems and a good working relationship with a lot of the administration this year. I've received a lot of development and training through a lot of programs, and this has helped."

Damon Day is a junior accounting major running for campus affairs vice president. The State Press asked Day eight questions during an interview last week.

1. What is the philosophical basis behind your campaign?
 Day: "I think raising the student awareness and letting students know what services are available. The campus affairs office is what administers the services that ASASU provides to students. If they don't know about them, they won't be able to take advantage of them, and they will suffer."

2. What is your position on minority recruitment and retention at ASU?

Day: "I think that we definitely need to do something about helping minority students in a university this size. We need to do all that we can to help them relate to their classes and with the bigger environment."

3. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial aid decreases?

Day: "No, because I think students are doing all that they can to get by. All of the programs that are in the campus affairs office and everything that will be implemented in the future need to save the students time and aggravation. This will just make an education harder to get."

4. What would you do to solve the senator apathy problem at ASASU?

Day: "It goes back to student awareness. Most students don't know what is available. They don't know what influence senators can have. They feel that the body is a powerless body. Let students know and make senators more accessible."

Damon Day

5. What distinguishes you from the other campus affairs vice presidential candidates, specifically on the political spectrum?

Day: "I'm excited about the office. I'm not coming from the Associated Students' offices but from the student population. I've been involved in student governments before but not extensive involvement at Arizona State. But I think I understand what the vast majority of students are going through."

6. Do you consider yourself a conservative or liberal?

Day: "Moderately conservative, but not closed-minded."

7. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system and where it is heading?

Day: "The Greek System here is one of the only self-regulated systems in the United States. I think that is a positive feature to stay away from the negative reinforcement. It's got some problems and the problems need to be dealt with. But in principle, the Greek system is a positive thing."

8. What experience do you have that will help you to be elected campus affairs vice president?

Day: "My experience comes from a lot of different areas. I've been involved in student government all my years in high school. I was involved my first year at a community college, then I transferred to ASU and was involved somewhat in the public relations office of ASASU."

Senate: previews of architecture, education, social work

Two students are running for the two Associated Students Senate positions in the College of Architecture and Environmental Design. Candidates are Dale Johnson, a junior architectural studies major and write-in candidate Greg Wattier, a senior architectural studies major. Each candidate was asked six questions by the State Press.

What are two of your goals that you would accomplish if you are elected?

Johnson: "One is to open up the process of review, by the student body, of construction on campus. I know there's a great deal of concern this semester about the amount of construction and the timing of it. The second is to represent my college the best I can. We tend to be an inclusive group, and I believe we need to expand and get in touch with the rest of the student body."

Wattier: "Basically I would be after the idea of involving the College of Architecture more in the senate and the University in general because you very seldom hear anything out of the College of Architecture. Secondly, I think it's important to give equal representation to all of the clubs and organizations."

What is your position on campus growth and on-campus destruction, especially West Hall?

Johnson: "The West Hall issue is a good issue to deal with at this time, especially since they haven't begun the actual planning of a new facility there. It's always better to get in before they make the decisions. That way you'll have all of the viewpoints heard."

Wattier: "Campus growth is nothing but a plus. As for the destruction of West Hall — I don't agree with that. I don't believe that growth means that anything in the way you should destruct. I think, coming from a design background, you're always faced with problems in life and constraints on what you're doing, and that just happens to be one of them. We need to work with it and not against it."

What is the biggest problem facing ASU students today?

Johnson: "Their lack of awareness of the services that are offered throughout the ASASU organization, and through the student affairs department. A lot of students go through their college careers and are not exposed to many activities on campus."

Wattier: "I guess it's the idea of society in general. Everybody's so concerned with themselves, and not many people are concerned with society, whether it be good or bad. I guess you can take that to mean more involvement and getting more people together."

Monica Ramirez

What is the biggest problem facing students in your college?
 Johnson: "I think the biggest problem is time — time to get out and get involved with other groups. We tend to be an exclusive group and spend most of our time in our studios working. Also, the difficulty that we have in expressing our views to the rest of the campus. For example, on the issue of West Hall."

Wattier: "The big gap between our professional program students and our pre-professional students, and we're working through clubs in our college like AIAS and other clubs on trying to bridge that gap between the first and second year of the student and the upper level."

How do you plan to go about solving these two problems?

Johnson: "I think we can have open forums, work with planning and construction and the administration, to address the issues of construction."

Wattier: "AIAS is a club, and what they're doing is forming a program — basically similar to the big sister/big brother idea, where you take on a freshman or sophomore and just help them with questions and any type of thing like that."

Do you describe yourself as conservative or liberal on the political spectrum?

Johnson: "Liberal."

Wattier: "I would have to say I'm more of a liberal conservative."

Dale Johnson

to benefit them. Second would be to try to get more minorities on all levels at ASU. Not just students, faculty and staff, but all levels."

What is your position on the senator apathy problem and what would you do to improve involvement?

Branigan: "I'm not so sure it's so much apathy. Being there one year already, I suggest that we need to meet more informally. A lot of times we come up 15 or 20 minutes before the meeting, and we're not too sure what the issues are. I think when we are up there a little earlier we are able to discuss the issues, and we have a better handle on it before we go into debate."

Ramirez: "I think there's a little bit of apathy, but not as much as it sounds. Within (College of) Social Work, the other senator and I worked hard this semester."

We got a cart for disabled student resources, and there were a lot of other senators that backed us up on that."

What is the biggest problem facing ASU students today?

Branigan: "Tuition hikes. It's excluding a lot of students. I think there are other revenue-generating measures other than in the form of tuition hikes."

Ramirez: "The price of housing around ASU and the rent."

Greg Wattier

What is the biggest problem facing students in your college?
 Branigan: "Lack of information, lack of a flow of information — not just from the senate but from the administration."

Ramirez: "I don't think the University really recognizes the school of social work as a professional college here on campus, and they don't know a lot about what we're doing and the activities that are going on."

How do you plan to go about solving these two problems?

Branigan: "I plan to better advertise our college council meetings and hopefully get the administration involved. I'd like to get a student liaison to the administration, just to get the flow of information going — and for us to continue to go to those meetings and answer any questions."

Ramirez: "On the first one — maybe working with the Tempe City Council to get some legislation and maybe some rent control prices. And secondly, just putting more publication out about what we're doing in the school of social work."

Only one student is officially running for the two open Associated Students senate positions in the College of Education. David G. Auerbach, a senior education major, is the only candidate. He was asked five questions by the State Press.

What are two of your goals that you would accomplish if you are elected?

Auerbach: "I would like to become an effective conduit between the students I represent and the administration, specifically, the administration of the College of Education. I would also like to increase the academic prowess of this university by combatting the lowering of standards which I consider to be a major issue in the College of Education, now."

What is your position on campus growth and on campus destruction, especially West Hall?

Auerbach: "Campus growth is fine, however, if ASU was to raise the standards for entry, growth would be curtailed to a certain extent. We must make way for growth possibly, including the destruction of West Hall, because the money may be available now and not in the future."

What is your position on the senator apathy problem and what would you do to improve involvement?

Auerbach: "Senator apathy begins with the students themselves. A case in point is the fact that I am running unopposed. The only thing I can say is that I will set an example by going to meetings and representing the concerns of my constituents to the best of my ability."

What is the biggest problem facing students in your college?

Auerbach: "Stumbling blocks — classes that are too large for their own good — do not offer important interactions to take place between students and their professors. These super-large lectures and discussion classes are generally given at times that usurp more than one time slot, making the scheduling of specialization classes a nightmare for many students."

Activities

1. What is the philosophical basis behind your campaign?

Martensen: "What I'm trying to run my campaign on is listening, understanding and implementing. The students pay $25 a year to the University through their tuition for ASASU. I think the students should see that in the activities on campus. I want to hear what the students have to say. They're the ones that pay the money so they should reap the benefits."

2. What is your position on minority recruitment and retention at ASU?

Martensen: "I definitely think we need to recruit and retain more minorities. I've talked to the Hispanic Business Students Association and got ideas on how I can do more programs for minorities as far as lecture series. I don't think there are enough programs to get minorities involved on campus right now."

3. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial aid decreases?

Martensen: "I would definitely fight for keeping tuition lower and looking for other ways to get financial aid, mainly because students aren't rich people, and we need as much help as we can get."

4. What would you do to solve the senator

apathy problem at ASASU?

Martensen: "I think what I would do is try to shorten the senate meetings a little bit, if at all possible. I would try to get more senators involved and make sure the senators are qualified when they go into office. I think if you find senators who are qualified and are willing to do the job and run, then those are the senators who will be really interested in the senate. If you have people running that don't know what's going on, then you will have apathy."

5. What distinguishes you from the other activities vice president candidates, specifically on the political spectrum?

Martensen: "I've been around different portions of the campus. I feel like I've got a feel for the student on campus, off campus, commuters, residence halls, and I feel like this is my strongest point."

6. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system and where it is heading?

Martensen: "I feel the ASU fraternity system and the ASU on-campus system have grown apart in the last couple years. I feel like the on-campus and Greek system counterbalance each other. I feel like if we work together on different activities that we can make activities be a lot better."

President

6. What distinguishes you from the other presidential candidates, especially on the political spectrum?

Fees: "My commitment to students. I've demonstrated it. My commitments from last year prove it, and you can trust them. It's very simple. My commitment to students is to represent students to the administration and involve them through that process. I'm the only candidate that has dealt with the Board of Regents this year. I haven't had to work under anyone; I've done it myself. I don't think my opponents have either the resume or record that I have as far as experience. It really makes a difference. If for no other reason, I hope people will vote for me as a vote of confidence in the job I've done as activities vice president and in how I've prepared to address the issues of the utmost concern to students."

7. Do you consider yourself a conservative or liberal?

Fees: "I'm generally conservative regarding many things, although I don't think I'm any less progressive than any liberal. I'm willing to change and be flexible unlike the conservative label might lead you to think."

8. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system, and what changes would you recommend?

Fees: "As president, I don't think it's my responsibility to do anything to change the Greek system at this point. However, I'll support the Greek system as a positive influence on campus. That's both fraternities and sororities. They may not be treated as fairly as they should be. On the other hand, my role is going to be very minimal towards the Greek system. I'm pro-student, and that means making sure everything on this campus has a positive influence on our academic achievements — and that includes the Greek system."

Terri Hoffman is a senior political science major (pre-law) running for Associated Students president. Hoffman was asked eight questions by the State Press during an interview last week.

1. What experience do you have that will help you get elected as president?

Hoffman: "What would help me get elected is mobilizing students. As far as my experience, which should show through in my campaign, is that I've worked two-and-one-half years under previous ASASU presidents. One of those years I was state relations director. On that position you speak on behalf of the president of ASASU. Being part of the presidential offices has helped me a lot."

2. What is your philosophical basis behind your campaign?

Hoffman: "My philosophical basis is quality. I'm interested in seeing issues of quality worked on and also interested in seeing a quality candidate be put in office. As far as being president, I feel it needs to be someone that is well-rounded and has been involved with a lot of different institutes on campus, and I have been."

3. What is your position on minority recruitment and retention at ASU?

Hoffman: "I feel it's crucial at this point for our university to represent all people of all types at all times. Unfortunately, I don't think we provide enough financial aid for minorities to come here and to stay in school. My idea as president is to lobby the administration, the (Arizona) Board of Regents and the state legislatures to see that there's more budgeting, for example, of the LIA 100 class. I'd also like to see a special section of that class to gear directly towards minorities to keep them in college. Also, I would work with the admissions office. I know recruitment has gone up in the past two years. I want to work with the administration and help choose positions in the faculty and staff. As president I really want to see a lot of those positions go to minorities."

4. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial-aid decreases?

Hoffman: "Tuition is going to increase. I have no control over tuition going up. However, for the financial aid department, I am all for the proposal which will create statewide funding. What will happen is $5 or $6 will be put on tuition. I feel that students that can pay tuition are willing to pay five extra dollars to help someone else have a college education. That's one way where students see directly where their money is going."

5. What would you do to help the senator apathy problem in ASASU?

Hoffman: "As president, I'd like to help and promote and boost the executive vice presidents in getting the senators involved and more excited about campus life. There's a lot of things they have never approached — new ideas, new areas they have never worked on. I think the senate can be a very powerful and very exciting group. What it takes is for somebody in the leadership role to get in there and get excited and bring in new ideas so that there isn't apathy."

6. What distinguishes you from the other presidential candidates, especially on the political spectrum?

Hoffman: "I am the only candidate that has worked for two previous presidents. I think I am the most experienced within the office. Otherwise, I feel like I am a good representative. I've been here four years. I come from the political science department, and I think that helps me because what I've been studying is how the political process works, and I think just having that major gives me a boost in working with the people and dealing with the politics."

7. Do you consider yourself a conservative or liberal?

Hoffman: "I consider myself a moderate conservative. But I tend to lean democratic on a lot of social issues."

8. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system, and what changes would you recommend?

Hoffman: "I have positives and negatives on the Greek system. I feel that there's a lot of things that have to be taken care of and handled. But I think the administration has got a hold on the situation, and I think they're doing a good job of it. I have a double-sided view of the Greeks because I've been involved with the Greeks, but the last few years I've been uninvolved. I think the Greek system does a lot of positive things, but they also cause a lot of problems. The most important thing for me is to keep my eyes open and to be neutral and to understand, to a point, that I'm supposed to take a stand against the Greeks if there's a problem that arises."

Mark Stark is a senior painting major running for Associated Students president. Stark was asked eight questions by the State Press during an interview last week.

1. How can you apply the experience you gained as president of the College of Fine Arts College Council to the ASASU presidency?

Stark: "I believe that by my experience as president of the fine arts council, I've gained a great deal of knowledge on producing events and college activities, such as concerts on campus, art fairs, and international art festivals. I believe I've created and helped organize the 'Friday Fix' program, which is now in full force, and I'm somewhat proud of it since I really didn't get too much credit towards the idea, but that's all politics.

2. What is your philosophical basis behind your campaign?

Stark: "I'm charismatic, and I have a different way of showing my stance. I'm an artist, and many artists have to express themselves in different ways, and most artists express their art visually, and I just like to make somewhat of a show of the campaign, even though I am very serious, and I know what I'm talking about. It's just another way of campaigning — a unique way."

3. What is your position on minority recruitment and retention at ASU?

Stark: "I do believe that it's very important for all minorities to get involved on this college campus. There are many international cultural backgrounds and ethnic groups which make up this University, and I feel it's very important that all of us integrate to unify as a fraternal body at ASU. I feel that it is extremely important, and that is one of my main focuses as president."

4. Are you in favor of raising tuition fees to supplement financial aid decreases?

Stark: "I am in favor of decreased tuition. I'm opposed to increasing any type of tuition. It's very important to keep it down. I think it's very crucial that no increases should happen if I was elected as ASASU president."

5. What would you do to help the senator apathy problem in ASASU?

Stark: "I personally feel that it's a big problem. I believe in all classes in the University there's a rule that if you miss three absences, your grade goes down. I feel that instead of going down one grade, they will just be out of office and the president or vice president of the college council will become senator. After three misses, I think that if the senator has missed three times at a crucial meeting, I feel that it's important for all senators to be prompt and to be aware of what is going on, since they are the working body of this University."

6. What distinguishes you from the other presidential candidates, especially on the political spectrum?

Stark: "I'm very unique in my own way. It's very important to recognize this, and I'm sure everyone has. I like to do things to an extreme, but there's a meaning behind everything I do. Some people say I have a tendency of being somewhat flamboyant. As an artist, I feel in complete control, and I'm very charismatic and very showy with the way I present myself, but I get the job done right. I am nothing like a bureaucrat. I personally feel this University needs a change of style and rhythm, and they won't get another bureaucrat out of me."

7. Do you consider yourself a conservative or liberal?

Stark: "I am probably half way. I can't really put a label on myself since I'm in my own category. I probably tend to be liberal about things, but then again, conservative. I think it's important to be open minded and aware about what's going on with everybody."

8. What is your opinion of the ASU fraternity system, and what changes would you recommend?

Stark: "I am a brother of the Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity. I had time at the fraternity to experience everything, and I feel it's a great opportunity for incoming freshman, sophomores, and possibly juniors to experience. There are some faults, but I think it's a great program, and it should be on campus with no doubts. It's very important to have a fraternal and sorority organization like that on campus, such as all ethnic and cultural organizations."

Blind ASU professor struck by car dies

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A blind ASU sociology professor, who died after he was struck by a car while walking near his Paradise Valley home last Friday night, may have been hit because the flashing lights he wore to alert motorists did not work properly, police said.

"Only one of the three (lights) were operable," Paradise Valley Police Sgt. Ron Warner said. "It was very dark and he (the driver) didn't see him until it was too late."

John W. Hudson, 62, of the 5500 block of North Quail Run, was hit by a westbound 1987 Chevrolet station wagon while crossing McDonald Drive at Quail Run Road about 7:30 p.m., Warner said. He was taken to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital where he died at 12:10 a.m. Saturday of massive head injuries and several broken bones.

The driver of the station wagon, 61-year-old Erma

Anderson of Indianapolis, Ind., was uninjured. There were no citations issued.

Hudson, a popular campus fixture, best-known for his positive attitude, was out for his nightly walk with his guide dog, Hobo, when they both were hit.

"This is a tremendous blow for the department and the University," said Leonard Gordon, chairman of the sociology department and Hudson's friend for 28 years. "Students have been calling all day. He had a remarkable following. He was a remarkable fellow."

Hudson wore bright, flashing lights and bright clothing during his walks.

Hobo, who suffered internal injuries, wandered from the accident scene and was later found dead near where his master was killed.

Hudson, who held a doctorate degree in sociology from Ohio State University, taught at ASU for 22 years.

Man robs Tempe First Interstate Bank

A bandit entered a Tempe bank Monday, handed a teller a note and got away with an undisclosed amount of cash, police said.

Police said the robber entered the First Interstate Bank branch at 3350 S. Price Road about 2:01 p.m., said he had a gun and handed a teller a green piece of paper that said, "This is a hold up." No weapon was seen.

The suspect then grabbed the cash with his right hand, stuffed it into a pocket and fled the bank in an unknown direction, police said. A police canine was unable to track the suspect.

Police described the suspect as a Caucasian male, 30 to 35 years old, 6 feet 1 inch tall, 170 pounds with short dark brown hair. He was clean shaven and had a dark tan.

He was last seen wearing a white T-shirt with stripes, blue jeans, black boots and a maroon corduroy ASU hat with a Sun Devil logo, police said.

In other incidents:

•A Tempe bicyclist who was critically injured when he was struck by a car last Friday died Saturday at Maricopa County Medical Center, police said.

Lornezo Alacola Ramirez, 47, 401 S. Roosevelt St., was struck by a Cadillac driven by 36-year-old Vincent Paul Fassi.

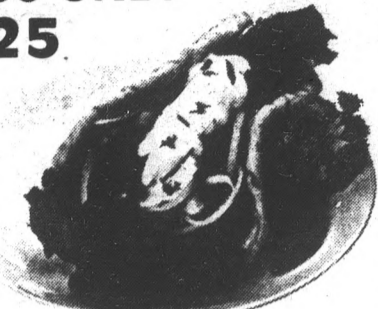

Ramirez was riding in the 200 block of West University Drive when he was hit about 6:29 a.m.

HERE'S ONE COLLEGE MEMORY WE'LL HELP YOU FORGET.

If you're like a lot of people, your longest-lasting memory of college is the student loan you're still paying back. The Army has a solution, though: qualify, sign up with us, and we'll sign off on your loan.

Each year you serve as a soldier, the Army will reduce your college debt by 1/3 or $1,500, whichever amount is greater. So after serving just 3 years, your government loan could be completely paid off.

You're eligible for this program if you have a National Direct Student Loan, or a Guaranteed Student Loan, or a Federally Insured Student Loan made after October 1, 1975. The loan must not be in default.

Get a clean slate, by erasing your college debt. Take advantage of the Army's Loan Repayment Program. Your local Recruiter can tell you if you qualify.

Advertising Sales Reps . . .

The State Press is looking for several new advertising sales reps to begin training now to work next semester. The rewards are many . . . you'll gain valuable experience in sales, layout, design, production and communications. This job is not for everyone, however. It's highly demanding and requires every spare moment of your time . . . 25 to 35 hours per week. And you must be an advertising or marketing major with an incredibly strong desire to learn about advertising and the insight to understand the benefits of this pre-professional opportunity. If you have a demanding class schedule or lots of extra-curriculars, this job's not for you.

BUT . . . if you have a sense of pride in doing a good job; are creatively inclined; feel you can handle 30-40 local accounts, as well as your classes and a not too wild social life; don't need anyone to get you going every morning and above all, operate well under the pressure of a daily deadline . . . Cowboys stay on top in latest baseball poll

TUCSON (AP) — The Collegiate Baseball-ESPN poll of Division I NCAA teams has 25-1 Oklahoma State firmly ensconced in first place for the ninth straight week.

The Cowboys have won 18 straight games, have hit 24 of their 46 home runs this season in their last eight games and are hitting .355 as a team while holding opponents to a .206 batting average.

The next five teams also are unchanged from last week's standings.

Texas, 38-5 and victorious in its last 20 games, remains in second place, followed closely by Fresno State, 32-6, which has won 15 in a row.

Holding onto fourth place is Miami, Fla., 32-5; in fifth is Loyola Marymount, 31-7, which has won its last dozen games, and Texas A&M, 33-7, is again sixth.

Mississippi State, 18-7, has climbed from ninth place top seventh; California State-Fullerton, 25-10, remains in eighth; Michigan, 16-5, has jumped from 14th to ninth, and California, 25-13, has moved from 11th to 10th.

Others in the top 25 are: Arizona State, 34-8; Stanford, 22-11; Nebraska, 23-7; Washington State, 23-6; Wichita State, 16-4; Southern Cal, 26-11; Clemson, 28-6; Louisiana State, 21-9; Florida State, 27-8; Florida, 25-10-1; Oklahoma, 22-8; Nevada-Las Vegas, 24-10; New Orleans, 22-11; Tulane, 20-7, and Auburn, 22-7.

Amy Alcott is, in fact, good enough at the game that she's working on her third million.

Alcott, 32, went over the $2 million mark in earnings Sunday, when she won the Dinah Shore tournament for the second time.

The $80,000 winner's check lifted her career earnings to $2,050,831, making her only the third player in LPGA history to surpass $2 million.

9 in a row! ASU completes sweep of UofA, 6-3

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

Although some ASU athletic teams have had trouble defeating the University of Arizona in recent years, Sun Devil fans can take heart — the ASU baseball team has now beaten UofA nine times in a row.

Linty Ingram (11-2) pitched nine innings on Monday night as the Devils won, 6-3, completing a three-game sweep of the rival Wildcats.

ASU was also victorious by scores of 5-4 on Friday and 18-3 on Saturday.

Arizona State (34-8 overall) has run its winning streak to 15 straight — the longest since the 1977 team won 19 in a row on the way to a national championship. The sweep also has boosted ASU's conference record over .500, to 8-7.

Ingram was shaky in the early innings, as he had been in his last three starts but settled down and finished strong.

"He just does not seem to pitch well in the early innings," ASU coach Jim Brock said. "So much of what he does is on adrenaline, and it takes a while to get that going."

ASU jumped on top in the first inning. John Finn drew a walk, advanced to second on an Arizona error and scored on a Ricky Candelari base hit to left. It was Candelari's team-leading 50th RBI of the season.

After Arizona tied the game at 1-1 in the second, Tim Spehr hit his 12th home run of the year. The solo shot to left-center made it 2-1.

ASU inflated the cushion even more in the third, scoring four runs on four hits, but that would be it for the offense.

Arizona reliever Heath Lane came in and shut down the Devils. He pitched 5½ scoreless innings, allowing five hits, striking out five and walking two.

"Lane's five innings were the best pitched against us in a long, long time," Brock said. "He had good command of all his pitches."

Lane's mastery would have given his teammates an opportunity to get back into the game, but Ingram kept getting stronger. He gave up solo home runs to Rick Lantrip in the fourth inning, and to Frank Halcovich in the fifth, but did not allow any extended rallies.

"By the seventh inning, it was over," Brock said. "In the eighth and ninth, he was dominating."

"I was real flat — a little out of sync in the first four or five innings," Ingram said. "I just tried to concentrate harder. As soon as the sun went down and it cooled off, I got my second wind and felt strong."

"As the game wore on, he was bearing down a little more, just doing what he's capable of doing," catcher Spehr said.

It was the second victory of the series for Ingram, who won in relief on Friday.

Ingram has had success against the Wildcats in the past. His career record versus UofA is now 5-0.

Kansas wins national championship

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Danny Manning scored 31 points and grabbed 18 rebounds as unranked Kansas won its second national championship with an 83-79 victory over No. 4 Oklahoma Monday night to become the losingest champion in NCAA history.

The Jayhawks, 26-11, played fast and slow and withstood a record-setting 3-point performance from Oklahoma's Dave Sieger to avenge two losses to the Sooners, 35-4, during the regular season.

This was the third championship game played between two teams from the same conference, and it was the third this decade in which a heavy underdog managed to win the title.

Kansas was an 8-point underdog, but in the first half the Jayhawks ran with the Sooners, the nation's second-leading scoring team and the regular-season and tournament champions in the Big Eight. Then they showed patience in the second half, running down the 45-second clock before taking good percentage shots. The Jayhawks shot 64 percent for the game, 35 of 55, and they cooled off after a first half in which they made 17 of 20 at one point.

But for all the strategy of Coach Larry Brown, it was Manning, the two-time All-American, who carried the Jayhawks to the title in a year in which they overcame injuries and academic problems.

Milt Newton added 15 points for Kansas, while Kevin Pritchard had 13. Sieger led Oklahoma with 22 points, while Stacey King had 17, and Harvey Grant and Mookie Blaylock had 14 each. But King and Grant, the two leading scorers, had just four each in the second half.

Kansas took the lead for good at 69-68 on a hook shot by Manning with 8:50 left in the game. It was the last of seven straight Kansas points scored by the 6-foot-10 center, and the play started with Manning standing at midcourt with the ball waiting for Oklahoma to come out and apply pressure.

Manning handed the ball off, cut to the basket and hit the hook.

Chris Piper then hit a jumper to give Kansas a four-point lead. The Sooners tied the score on a free throw by Sieger and a turnaround jumper by Grant with 5:55 left.

Pritchard hit a baseline drive with 5:34 left, and the Jayhawks were on the way to the first national championship for a team from west of the Mississippi River since UCLA won in 1975.

Manning sealed the victory with four free throws in the final 14 seconds. He gave Kansas an 81-77 lead with the first two. Scooter Barry had missed the second free throw of a 1-and-1, but Manning tapped the rebound and was fouled by King.

Sieger made seven 3-pointers, six in the first half, to tie the championship-game team and individual record set last season by Indiana's Steve Alford.

The game was played in Kemper Arena, the site of the Big Eight tournament and just 35 miles from the Kansas campus.

Manning picked up his third foul just 25 seconds into the second half but he never got his fourth.

Sieger made his seventh three-pointer of the game on his 10th shot from that range but then he went cold.

Sieger missed two in a row on one possession and seemed ready to take a third when the ball bounced back to him. But

ASU relay team sets school record, earns NCAA bid

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

ASU athletes, both past and present, boasted top scores Saturday in the Ninth Annual Sun Angel Track Classic at Sun Angel Stadium.

The ASU women's 4x100-meter relay team qualified for the NCAA Championships and set a school record with a 44.50 second time. Lynda Tolbert, Maical Malone, Tamika Foster and Jacinta Bartholomew topped the former record time of 44.60 set in 1979.

ASU took a close second in the race, running .06 seconds behind Morgan State.

Freshman Malone, who has been ill, has not run with the team since spring break.

"We couldn't get a pass during practice this week, but we pulled it off when it counted," Malone said. "I'm glad to be out here and to be part of the team."

The women's 4x400-meter relay team took first-place honors and received a trip to the NCAAs with a 3:35.10 time.

In the first leg of the race, Toinette Holmes kept pace with the top sprinters before handing off the baton. With a burst of speed, Malone took over and flew by her competitors giving ASU the lead.

The Sun Devils never looked back as Bartholomew stayed ahead of the pack going into the final leg. Tamika Foster, who ran the fastest split (53.0) for the team, took the baton home for the ASU victory.

Sun Devil sprinters on the relay teams also qualified individually for the June 1-4 NCAA Championships in Eugene, Ore.

Bartholomew dominated the women's long jump, outdistancing the closest competitor by almost a foot. Her 21¾ jump qualified her for the NCAAs.

Tolbert's first-place time of 13.20 seconds topped the NCAA standard in the 100-meter high hurdles. She already qualified for nationals in that event during the March 20 home meet.

Sun Devil assistant coach Denise Gaztambide took fourth place in the women's high jump, clearing 5-10¼.

Gaztambide, a graduate student at ASU, competed unattached.

"I'm really excited about how I did," Gaztambide said. "I'd like to qualify for the (Olympic) trials."

As a senior at Stanford, she earned All-America recognition in the heptathlon at the 1986 NCAAs.

Gaztambide said she liked concentrating on just the one event but only started practicing two weeks ago and only worked out twice a week.

"I'm a little rusty, but I'm mentally ready," Gaztambide said. "I have the height; I just need the timing."

ASU part-time assistant coach Greg Moore competed with the first-place 4x100 relay team in the open meet. Moore ran the first leg in the event for the Sports Track Club, which topped the competition with a 39.37 second time.

Moore is a member of the ASU record-setting 4x100- and 4x200-meter relay teams and received All-America honors on the Sun Devil 4x100 team, which placed fourth in the 1981 NCAAs.

Baseball teams open regular season with optimism

Tigers 5, Red Sox 3
BOSTON (AP) — Alan Trammell hit a two-run homer off Boston reliever Lee Smith with two outs in the 10th inning Monday and the Detroit Tigers beat the Red Sox 5-3 in the first game of the 1988 baseball season.
 Boston's Roger Clemens and Detroit's Jack Morris hooked up in a strikeout duel for nine innings before Smith, acquired from the Chicago Cubs in December, made his American League debut in the 10th.
 Morris, 7-2 on opening day, got the victory with help from Mike Henneman, who pitched the final inning for a save. Morris gave up nine hits, struck out nine and walked one.
 Clemens, making his first opening-day start, struck out 11, gave up six hits, including Matt Nokes' tying, solo home run in the sixth, and walked four.
Brewers 12, Orioles 0
BALTIMORE (AP) — Teddy Higuera pitched three-hit ball for seven innings and Dale Sveum's two-run homer highlighted a 16-hit barrage Monday as the Milwaukee

Brewers routed Baltimore 12-0, the Orioles' worst opening-day loss ever.
 Higuera allowed only one runner past first base. He struck out seven and walked one. Mark Clear gave up two hits in the eighth and Dan Plesac pitched a hitless ninth.
Blue Jays 5, Royals 3
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — George Bell became the first player ever to hit three home runs on opening day, leading the Toronto Blue Jays past the Kansas City Royals 5-3 Monday.
 Bell, bitter throughout spring training with his move to designated hitter, homered three times in that role off Bret Saberhagen. Bell hit a solo home run in the second, a two-run drive in the fourth and a solo shot in the eighth for the first three-homer game of his career.
White Sox 8, Angels 5
CHICAGO (AP) — Kenny Williams homered and doubled to drive in three runs Monday, leading the Chicago White Sox over California Angels 8-5 before an opening day crowd of 35,899.

 Williams, whose homer capped a three-run fifth, doubled to key a five-run seventh and wipe out a 4-3 lead for the Angels, who were playing their first game under manager Cookie Rojas. He took over 10 days ago when Gene Mauch retired.
Reds 5, Cardinals 4, 12 innings
CINCINNATI (AP) — Kal Daniels singled home Jeff Treadway with two outs in the bottom of the 12th inning Monday, giving the Cincinnati Reds a 5-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the traditional National League opener.
 Daniels also had a solo homer in the sixth inning to help the Reds overcome a 4-1 deficit en route to their fifth consecutive opening day victory.
Giants 5, Dodgers 1
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dave Dravecky pitched a three-hitter, and Brett Butler had three hits, including a two-run triple, in his first game for San Francisco as the Giants opened defense of their National League West title Monday by beating the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-1.

Manning tallies 31, earns MVP honors

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Even though the game was on the line, Danny Manning knew it was over.

The score was 79-77 with 14 seconds left, an eternity for Oklahoma's racehorse offense. Manning had been 1-for-3 at the foul line until that point. But he coolly dropped in two free throws for a four-point lead.

Oklahoma came right back for a basket by Ricky Grace and, with five seconds left, the 6-foot-10½ Manning found himself back at the foul line again.

At that moment, with the score 81-79, the game was still in doubt. But not according to Manning.

"I was thinking, 'it's over,'" Manning said.

Was that before or after he calmly dropped the two shots? "Before."

Manning, selected the game's Outstanding Player, then completed a sensational game by grabbing the final rebound on a desperation heave to punctuate Kansas' 83-79 victory for the NCAA championship.

Manning finished the game with 31 points, 18 rebounds, five steals, two assists and two blocked shots.

"I knew Danny wanted it bad," Oklahoma's Stacey King said. "He came out and proved it."

Manning committed his second personal foul just 11 minutes into the first half and sat on the bench for the next three minutes. But Kansas stayed with Oklahoma during that span and, by halftime, with a stifling pace, the score was 50-50.

In the second half, Kansas had Manning doing everything, even bringing the ball upcourt.

"We have the greatest player in the game," Kansas coach Larry Brown said. "With a great player like him, you've always got a chance."

The game was the final one in Manning's brilliant college career and he was particularly gratified it came in Kansas City, only 30 miles or so from the Jayhawks' campus in Lawrence.

"This feels great, to be able to close it out in Kansas City before the people who supported me for four years."

Manning, a two-time All-American, holds a fistful of Big Eight records, including the career scoring mark of 2,895 points. But for the past two years, he was troubled by a dismal four-point performance when Kansas reached the Final Four in 1986. He fouled out of the semifinal game against Duke as the Jayhawks' were eliminated.

NCAA

he hesitated and passed the ball inside to King who scored for a 65-60 lead, Oklahoma's largest of the game.

Brown called a timeout just before King's basket. The Jayhawks scored five straight points to tie the game, the last three coming on a three-point play by Manning.

Kansas made 22 of 31 shots in the first half, 71 percent, including 17 of their first 20.

Sieger was the hot hand for Oklahoma as he made six of eight three-point attempts while the Sooners made 48.7 percent as a team, 19 of 39.

The first half was played at Oklahoma's tempo as the teams finished tied at 50-50.

There were eight lead changes and neither team led by more than six — and that was when Pritchard hit a three-pointer to give the Jayhawks a 31-25 lead with 9:35 left in the half.

Oklahoma had beaten Kansas twice during the season, 73-65 and 95-87.

Sweep

"I went out today thinking either my luck is going to run out, or they have a mental block against me," Ingram said.

In Friday's game, Dan Rumsey's two-run home run in the bottom of the eighth inning lifted the Sun Devils to a 5-4 win in front of a season-high crowd of 5,003 fans at Packard Stadium.

After the high intensity of Friday's game, ASU enjoyed a rout Saturday, pounding 20 hits in an easy 18-3 victory.

Rusty Kilgo (3-1) pitched 8½ innings in relief of Brian Dodd to pick up the victory.

Arizona took a 2-0 lead in the first inning, chasing Dodd. But Kilgo came in and only allowed five hits and one run for the balance of the game.

"The game could be over in the first inning if you don't stop the bleeding," Brock said. "And we felt Rusty had the best chance to stop the bleeding."

ASU was led offensively by Candelari, who had two homers and five RBI, and Steve Willis, who was 4-for-4 with four RBI.

Arizona has now lost 10 straight conference games, digging itself further into the Six-Pac cellar.
