

3 students nominated for student regent post

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Two members of Associated Students and a former ASASU president have been nominated to serve as the Arizona Board of Regents' student member, ASASU president Karrin Kunasek said Wednesday.

Chris Cumiskey, who served as ASASU president during the 1986-87 school year and is now an undeclared graduate student; Paul Larsen, regents coordinator in ASASU's state relations office and a pre-med student; and Patrick McWhorter, an ASASU senator from the College of Liberal Arts and political science major, were selected from six applicants for the post.

The nominations have been forwarded to Gov. Rose Mofford, who is expected to appoint one of the men within the next several weeks, said Joyce Geysler, Mofford's special assistant who handles appointments.

The nomination is subject to confirmation by the Arizona Senate.

The student regent, the only non-voting member of the board, is selected from ASU, NAU and UofA on a rotating basis. Current Student Regent Joe Mikitish attends UofA.

Mick Dalrymple, executive director of the Arizona Students Association, a student-lobbying group, said ASA will not be endorsing any of the finalists, although the group has in the past.

Dalrymple said the next student regent is going to have to concentrate more on the "philosophical issues" of higher education as the regents move toward redefining their role in the university system.

Mofford is also expected to appoint two Arizona residents as regents within the next few weeks, Geysler said. Mofford withdrew former Gov. Evan Mecham's nomination of Ralph Watkins, a Phoenix businessman, for reappointment. She also withdrew the first-time nomination of Howard Wren, a retired Flagstaff dentist, after Mecham was convicted in the Senate's impeachment trial April 4.

Watkins, who served as Mecham's treasurer in the ousted governor's 1986 gubernatorial campaign and was nominated to the board to fill a vacancy, said Wednesday he does not know if Mofford will remove him from the board.

Watkins, who said he and Mofford have been friends for more than 40 years, described his regent post as a "very tough job," saying he devotes eight to nine days each month to the board.

Greeks donate resources to benefit Valley groups

By ROBIE KAKONGE
State Press

ASU Greeks have raised more than $60,000 during the 1987-88 school year, while working more than 9,000 service hours in continued efforts to assist Valley organizations.

The total money raised is a combination of $44,000 from ASU's sororities and $17,630 from fraternities through year-long competitive fundraisers. The 9,000 service hours were contributed solely by fraternities.

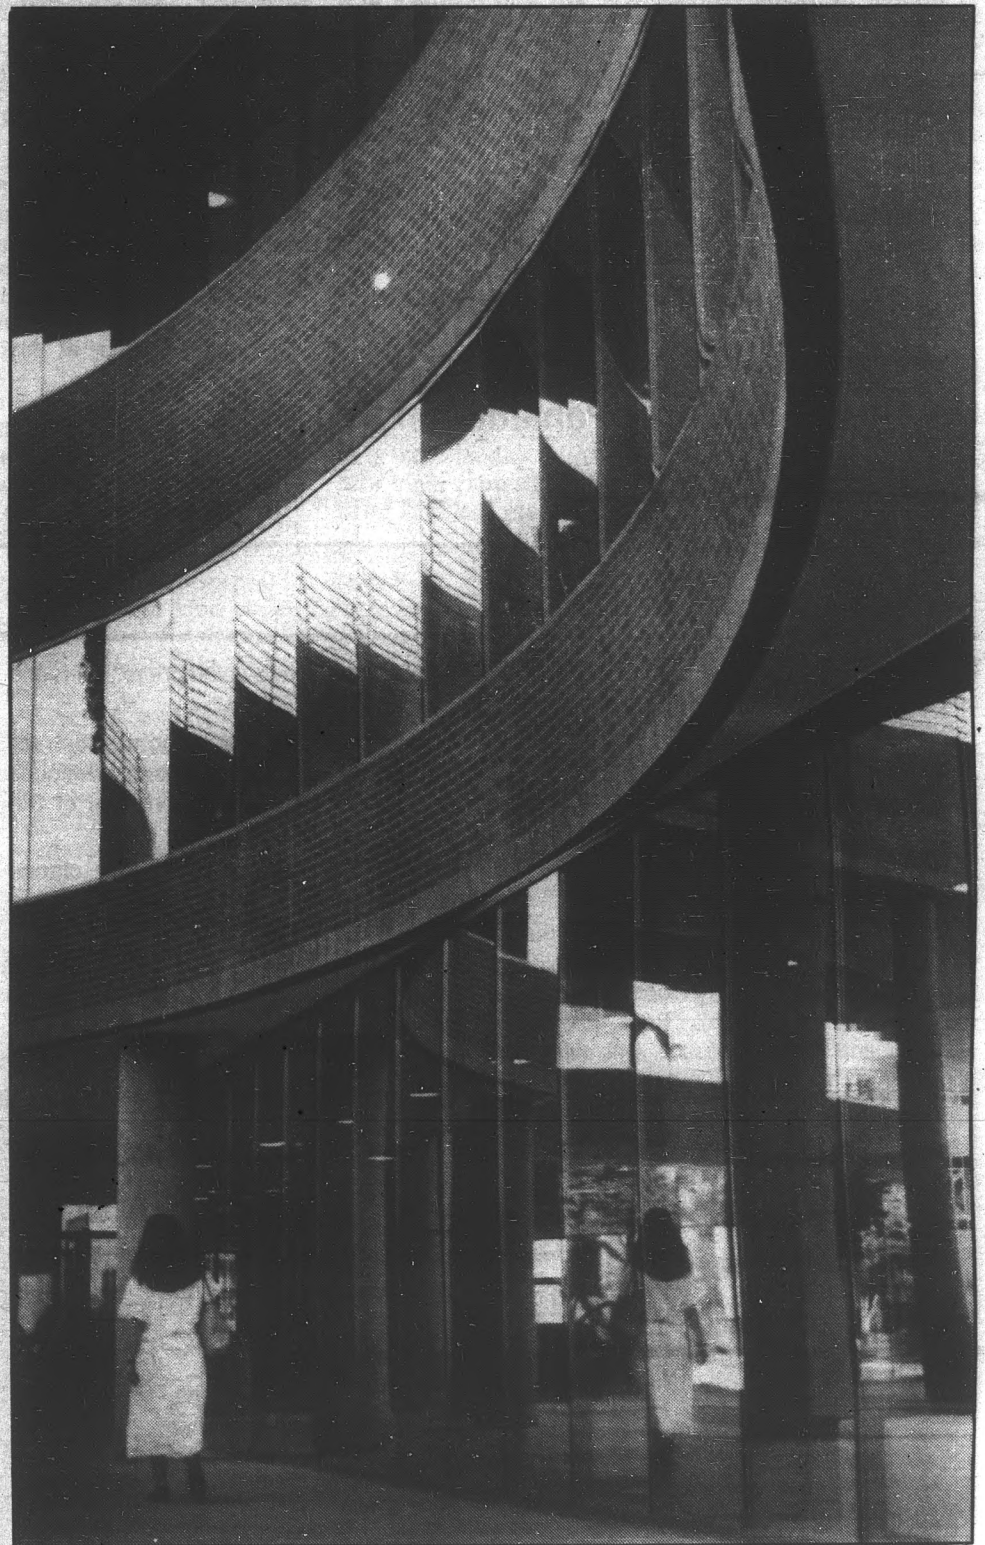

The year-long fundraising ventures included day-long events that were individually sponsored or combined efforts involving other Greeks.

Some of the events included sorority fashion shows and Delta Gamma's "Anchor Splash," while fraternities held philanthropics, such as Sigma Chi's "Derby-Days" and Lambda Chi Alpha's "Watermelon Bust." Earlier this spring the first all-Greek Bowl-a-Thon was held.

ASU's Greeks paid money to attend the events and received sponsorships from local businesses, with the money raised going to local Valley organizations, such as the Muscular Dystrophy Foundation, Phoenix Jaycees and ASU's Disabled Student Resources.

Nominees announced for professorships

By SCOTT LUCK
State Press

ASU's first nominees to receive the inaugural Regents' Professorships, honoring exceptional achievements in teaching and research, were announced Wednesday.

Fourteen full professors were selected from among 76 candidates, submitted by a faculty committee, to face Arizona Board of Regents approval during its next meeting April 22 in Tucson.

The 14 professors are: John Alcock, zoology; Robert B. Cialdini, psychology; Jeffrey Cook, architecture; John M. Cowley, physics; LeRoy Eyring, chemistry; Martin T. Farris, purchasing, transportation and operations; David K. Ferry, electrical and computer engineering; Gary D. Keller, foreign languages; Sheng H. Lin, chemistry; Lee Meyerson, psychology; Warren E. Miller, political science; Carleton B. Moore, chemistry and geology; Dennis J. Palumbo, justice studies and MaryBeth Stearns, physics.

Upon approval, the Regents' Professors will receive a salary increase of $5,000. They will also be presented with a medallion patterned after the official University mace.

While announcing the nominees, acting Academic Affairs Vice President C. Roland Haden said the professors reflect the highest standards ASU aspires to achieve.

"All of these distinguished scholars have excelled in research, teaching and public service," Haden said.

The faculty committee making the selections was chaired by psychology professor Peter Killeen and met regularly to create the list of candidates.

The committee compiled letters of evaluation from deans, chairs, personnel committees and external reviewers. In addition, the candidates' credentials were held up to regent and University criteria.

After compiling a final list of recommendations, the committee submitted its choices to Haden, who endorsed them and passed them on to ASU President J. Russell Nelson for approval.

Haden said society, in addition to the ASU community in general, benefits from the work of the candidates.

ASASU runoff outcome to be announced today

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

Results of the Associated Students runoff election will be announced at 1 p.m. today in the MU Rendezvous Lounge, ending a presidential race that election officials said involved "creative conflict."

Patrice Cabcianca or John Fees will be announced as next year's ASASU president, and Mark Collins or Todd Martensen will become the next activities vice president. Other executive offices were decided in the general election.

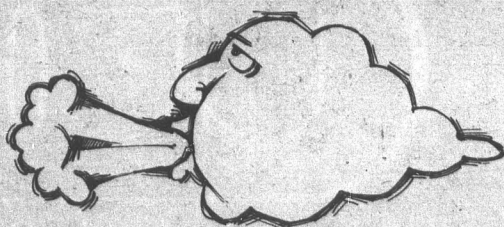

Keith Woods, who is in charge of promoting the '88 election, said State Press opinion editor Darrin Hostetler has influenced a lot of students to vote by accusing Cabcianca of being incompetent in an editorial on

Troops kill 3 Arab guerrillas; woman dies from tear gas

JERUSALEM (AP) — Troops killed three Arab guerrillas trying to enter Israel from Lebanon on Wednesday and a 70-year-old Palestinian woman was suffocated by tear gas soldiers tossed into her home, according to army and other reports.

Two Palestinians were reported wounded by gunfire and 51 injured by rubber bullets, tear gas and beatings in a battle between Palestinians and Israeli soldiers in the Gaza Strip.

At least 144 Palestinians have died in the rebellion that began Dec. 8 in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, according to U.N. figures. An Israeli soldier and a 15-year-old Jewish settler also have been killed.

Arabs attacked Arab merchants who defied Palestine Liberation Organization orders to close, firebombing the shop of a Jerusalem moneychanger and setting stalls ablaze in the Bethlehem produce market, police and witnesses reported. An Arab passerby was reported injured by the firebomb.

U.S. Marines, unidentified intruders fight for 2 hours in Panama jungle

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — About 100 U.S. Marines engaged in a two-hour firefight Tuesday night with about 40 unidentified intruders at a military fuel-tank farm in a jungle area, a U.S. military spokesman said Wednesday.

Col. Ron Sconyers, chief public affairs officer for the U.S. Southern Command, told a news conference there were no apparent injuries on either side in the second reported incident of its kind in two days at the tank farm in Howard Air Force Base.

The firefight took place at the Arriajan Tank Farm, an 800-acre depot where a Marine was shot and killed Monday night while investigating what U.S. officials called a suspected break-in by six to eight camouflaged men.

Algerians say talks with hijackers halted by Kuwaiti 'intransigence'

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — An Algerian official said Wednesday that Kuwait's "intransigence" had created a deadlock in negotiations with Shiite Moslem hijackers for the release of 32 hostages on a Kuwaiti jumbo jet.

Food and water were taken in the afternoon to the blue and white Boeing 747, which the hijackers call the "plane of martyrdom." It baked under the North African sun on an isolated patch of tarmac at Houari Boumediene airport.

A delegation from Kuwait arrived Wednesday afternoon to help in efforts to free the remaining hostages and the plane, which was hijacked April 5 on a flight from Bangkok to Kuwait with 112 people aboard.

It spent three days on the ground in Mashhad, Iran, flew

Reagan spokesman condemns Speakes for putting words in president's mouth

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Wednesday he did not learn until recently that his former spokesman, Larry Speakes, had put words in his mouth on at least two occasions while briefing reporters on presidential meetings.

Reagan did not directly answer, however, when asked whether he approved of the practice or would allow it to continue. His current spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, has condemned any such procedure and said he never would do it.

Speakes said that he once collaborated with an aide in making up quotes which he then credited to Reagan.

PR executives criticize Speakes for making up Reagan quotes

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Speakes' disclosure that he concocted quotes for President Reagan while he was a White House spokesman drew criticism from public relations executives Wednesday, with most calling it deceptive and damaging.

However, none were willing to say Speakes should quit his position as head of communications at the Wall Street investment giant Merrill Lynch & Co.

Regents approve $250,000 roof for new loge seats

By SHERI JOHNSON
State Press

The Arizona Board of Regents' Capitol Review Committee voted Wednesday to approve the construction of a $250,000 roof over the new loge seats in Sun Devil Stadium.

The regents approved an expansion of the south end of the stadium in October for $8.91 million but did not approve the roof because funds were not available.

Last October, Joe E. Woods Inc., the project's general contractor, originally quoted the cost for the roof at $195,000.

An executive summary presented to the regents by ASU states that the reasons for cost increases include a 12 percent increase in structural steel costs and overall inflation.

"I feel good about this expenditure," said Charles Harris, ASU director of athletics. "It will only cost us more if we wait until February 1989 to facilitate the project."

Victor Zafra, ASU vice president for business affairs, said he hoped this would be the last change proposed for the expansion.

"This certainly gives us a completed project on the south end," he said.

Zafra assured the regents that the contractor would lose $176,000 if the original south end project is not completed by the August 1 deadline. He said he thought it was possible that the roof could be finished at the same time.

Harris said the roof was a top priority for him. "This is my highest priority, so we can get this behind us and focus on other things," he said.

The money for the roof is now available, Harris said, because of the overwhelming reception by fans to the new loge seats. The regents approved, at their December meeting, a total of 1,700 loge seats.

"We had projected selling 1,000 seats," Harris said. ASU is "oversubscribed" with 1,784 seats, and there is a waiting list, he added.

The loge tickets sell for $100 with a premium of $275 per ticket, Harris said, adding that he had not anticipated the revenue from the additional ticket sales.

Harris agreed with Regent Herman Chanen that the major reasons for building the roof were to avoid escalated future costs and to have all construction completed at the same time, but Zafra said the spectators are another consideration. "I don't think people who bought those tickets will appreciate there not being a roof there," he said. "We could have difficulty in selling the seats for a second year if there's not a roof on it."

In other ASU business: •The regents discussed a plan to finance the balance of the ASU West campus through lease-purchasing. Lease-purchasing, a concept in which the state will buy back privately funded buildings over a 20-year period, was approved by the legislature and signed by Gov. Rose Mofford earlier this year.

•The regents discussed a north end-zone expansion at Sun Devil Stadium — an item carried over from last week's meeting. They decided not to approve the funding for the project until contracts have been signed with the Sports Alliance, which has pledged to pay part of the costs for proposed skyboxes in the north end-zone area. The alliance is a group of local businessmen who helped attract the former St. Louis Cardinals football team to the Valley.

ASU office eases foreign students' transition into U.S. society

By KENNETH WALSH
State Press

Although ASU's International Students Office specializes in answering questions about immigration, its main goal is to make the transition into American society easier for foreign students, according to an office official.

MaryLee Carter, office assistant director, said when foreign students decide to come to the United States, the admissions office is the first place that gets information about the students.

After foreign students are admitted, Carter said their files are sent to her office, which is located in the new Student Services Building. Next, the office sends a letter of welcome, a list of activities and an invitation to visit the office, she said.

Carter said foreign students who have been to the United States and speak English fluently are less likely to utilize the office than students who have never been here.

"If they are new to the United States, it is likely they will come in," she said.

While the main function of the office is to help international students with immigration and visa questions, Carter said the office has a wide range of services for international students.

'The international student is persistent, willing to take a risk, brighter than the average student.'

Services include: legal advice, job placement, counseling and a "Pen Pals in Person" service, which pairs international and American students as pen pals. Another service is the "Speakers Bureau," which sends students to schools and community centers to discuss their native lands.

Carter said the office also offers a weekly "Conversation Class," in which international students discuss American issues and practice speaking English.

"It's a real kind of interaction for the students in a way that will help them learn to get their points across in English," Carter said.

Carter said the office serves approximately 1,900 students (4.5 percent of ASU's enrollment), the majority of whom are from Taiwan and India. She said the international students are a part of ASU's brightest sector.

"The international student is persistent, willing to take a risk and brighter than the average student," Carter said.

Carter said many international students are willing to set aside some of "that immediate gratification" in order to attain long-range goals.

McWhortor is the one

Now that Arizona Gov. Rose Mofford has officially dropped the "acting" from her letterhead, she will be moving rapidly in the coming weeks to fill various state offices awaiting qualified applicants.

One of those offices is that of student representative to the Arizona Board of Regents. This year, ASU will send one student to the board to serve as the voice of students at all three universities — and the clear choice from among the three students nominated for the post is Associated Students College of Liberal Arts Sen. Patrick McWhortor.

McWhortor has served ASU well as Associated Students Elections Director and consultant, college senator, Political Union volunteer and president of the campus chapter of a nationally recognized academic honorary. He has fully experienced university life — as a dorm student, a commuter student and as a married student — and in the process has learned about the problems and needs of every major sector of the university community.

In all his activities, he has repeatedly demonstrated the highest levels of competence, professionalism, cool-headedness and leadership at ASU. During the coming year, as the Board considers tuition hikes, McWhortor's skills will be vital.

Perhaps best of all, the personable McWhortor — through his experience as an intern with the Arizona House of Representatives — has learned how to work well with the Regents and state government while maintaining his integrity and loyalty to students as their strong advocate.

We urge Gov. Mofford to give all students in the Arizona university system a strong, intelligent voice on the Board of Regents.

We urge her to give students a voice that will always act in the best interests of the university system.

We urge her to give students Pat McWhortor.

Israeli Independence Day highlights Palestinian irony

Ed Schubert
Asst. Opinion Editor

So Jacob was left alone, and a man wrestled with him until daybreak. When the man saw that he could not throw Jacob, he struck him in the hollow of the thigh, so that Jacob's hip was dislocated as they wrestled.

The man said, "Let me go, for day is breaking."

But Jacob replied, "I will not let you go unless you bless me."

He said to Jacob, "What is your name?," and he answered, "Jacob."

The man said, "Your name shall no longer be Jacob, but Israel, because you strove with God and with men, and prevailed."

Genesis 32: 24-28

Thus it began, in the dimly remembered dawn of history. And thus it continues in the state of Israel today.

Tonight, as evening descends on Jerusalem and Rehovot, Beer-Sheva and Tel-Aviv, Ashdod and Haifa, the crowds will gather in the streets as they always do on the eve of Independence Day, celebrating the rebirth of their nation.

Everyone comes out. The streets are jammed with people and the air is filled with music. Everywhere, men and women spontaneously join hands and dance the hora.

On the kibbutzim across the country, the celebration is much like an American 4th of July. Everyone joins a huge outdoor picnic. Contests are held to see which middle-aged reservists can most quickly strip and reassemble their M-16s. As night descends, fireworks set the sky on fire and start the shadows of the trees reeling in an ecstatic dance.

Never, never underestimate the strength, depth or intensity of Israeli nationalism.

But this Independence Day — Israel's 40th — is marked by a profound irony. In the Palestinian Uprising, Israel has come face to face with another revived nationalism which in many ways mirrors its own.

The Palestinian teenagers armed with stones and bottles display the same determination as the Jewish refugees who, in the aftermath of the Holocaust, risked everything to run

'The Jew in 1948 and the Palestinian in 1988 have this much in common: backs pushed up against the wall and nothing to lose by striking out.'

Britain's blockade and reach the embryonic Jewish state. The Jew in 1948 and the Palestinian in 1988 have this much in common: backs pushed up against the wall and nothing to lose by striking out.

In their long and often tortured history, the Jews have struggled against Amalakites and Egyptians, Assyrians and Romans, Christians and Moslems, Nazis and Communists. But they have never wrestled with a people quite like the Palestinians.

In the first place, Jews are not used to playing the role of: occupier, policeman, oppressor. This change in role is dismaying, bewildering. A united Arab world threatening to "push the Jews into the sea" makes more sense than a Jewish soldier roughing up a 14-year-old kid.

Because of this tradition of humanism and conscience the Palestinians, oppressed though they are, at least have had the good fortune to be oppressed by Israel — rather than by, say, Syria, which thought nothing of slaughtering 30 thousand people in the city of Hama in 1982. Or by Iran, with its revolutionary guards. Or by Iraq, with its poison gas.

It now becomes clearer and clearer that the status quo has been shattered forever and the occupation must somehow, finally come to an end. Israel's hip has been dislocated; the Palestinians must be freed; the dawn is breaking.

It also is becoming clearer, in hindsight, that the occupation should never have been instituted in the first place. Few Israelis were able to see this in the heady days after the 1967 Six Day War. But one man clearly foresaw the present crisis.

David Ben-Gurion, Israel's first prime minister, was in political exile in 1967, and few bothered to attend a speech he gave on the topic of the newly conquered territories. But he warned that the occupation must be ended and quickly — that to continue holding an Arab population in captivity would distort, and might ultimately destroy, the Jewish state.

Historian Arthur Hertzberg was there and remembered: "The Ben-Gurion who walked into the meeting had about him the air of a prophet who had walked out of his tent to die, but had paused on this last journey to tell us truths which the less farsighted could not see and only a man possessed by the spirit dare tell."

Now it is clear that Ben-Gurion was right. And if Jewish history tells us anything, it is that we ignore our prophets only at our peril.

Out of the Ashes

Apartment fire disaster a night of terror, chaos and loss

By MIKE BURGESS

State Press

The fire call first came across the newsroom scanner at 7:30 p.m. as a 2-in-1 assignment (two engine trucks and a ladder).

Busy trying to do some school work, I brushed it off as a normal fire call.

Keeping an ear out for the scanner, the fire was upgraded to a first alarm (four engine trucks and two ladders).

Reaching for the phone I put in a call to Tempe Fire Department Headquarters to see what was up. No answer.

A call to the alarm room answered my question.

"We're currently working a first alarm fire at 1717 S. Jentilly Lane," the dispatcher said.

"What kind of building is it?" I asked.

"It's a two-story apartment complex," she responded before I hung up on her to yell to the city editor that there was a fire at some apartment complex on Jentilly. I asked if there was some room to stick it into the police report for tomorrow's paper.

"You've got about an hour," the city editor said as I headed out the door and bolted for my car.

Driving off campus toward Rural Road, I searched for a Tempe map in the glove compartment.

"Where the hell is Jentilly?" I yelled trying not to cut off other motorists as I sped to the scene.

My question was answered as I looked east from Rural Road and Apache Boulevard—a huge plume of fire had lit up the sky with an enormous funnel of gray smoke as its backdrop.

As I pulled into Jentilly from Broadway Road and parked, there was nothing but fire ravaging the complex.

Slipping my press tags around my neck I ran into Prankster's Gar and Brill to use a telephone.

"This is a damn big fire," I told the city editor. "The whole place is on fire. Get a photographer out here!"

Rushing around the yellow "FIRE LINE DO NOT CROSS" tape that was being set up I started off to find the battalion chief for some information.

Meanwhile, firefighters had just been forced to retreat from the structure after they were greeted with a hellish tunnel of fire that had shot through the attic.

Pumping close to 1,000 gallons of water a minute on the blaze from 10 main streams that had been established at the scene, firefighters were forced to take the defensive.

Within a half-hour of the first call the blaze had been upgraded to a three alarm fire with every piece of fire apparatus in the city and units from Phoenix, Mesa and Chandler had converged on the chaotic scene.

By this time firefighters knew their chances of saving anything was slim.

Slithering around a few cops and some firetrucks, I found the battalion chief nestled in his car directing the firefighters' battle with the blaze.

As I waited for him to have a chance to talk, a ball of fire shot towards us. The heat felt like I had checked on a lasagna in the oven a few seconds too long.

Fire officials estimated the fire's heat at 1500 degrees or higher.

After sucking in too much smoke I decided to wait to speak with one of the department's chiefs. Weaving through the throng of people that gathered to watch the fire I set out to find some of the 95 people who lived in the 46-unit complex that was now an inferno.

"I went to Jack-in-the-Box for 20 minutes, and when I came back everything was gone," one resident told me. "I couldn't get anything out — this is unreal."

"We were watching television," someone else said. "All of the sudden a guy came down and pounded on the door. We just got away."

Looking around for other residents I spotted a young-looking guy wearing an ASU sweatshirt.

Teary-eyed, he kept repeating "Everything's gone" as he searched for his roommates.

It finally hit, seeing his sweatshirt. The complex was just about a mile from campus.

"Do you know how many students are going to be out of places to live?" one student who lived at the complex said. "Do you know many student's lived in there? Where are we going to live?"

The student just stood there, stunned, looking up at his apartment where the senior project he had worked on for six months had just been destroyed by the fire.

Rushing to find a phone to give the city desk the information I gathered I spotted a young couple who had made it through fire lines only to find that the building on fire was theirs.

"Oh my God!" the girl cried, holding tightly to her boyfriend.

I finally found a guy who would let me use a Porsche-shaped phone in his apartment to relay my information to the city editor and start putting together my story.

Returning to the scene was difficult.

In addition to more fire lines and grumpy cops who couldn't care if I worked for Associated Press or the State Press, I found a new enemy in getting this story for tomorrow's paper. The street was flooded with water that was used to fight the fire and I couldn't get across to speak with Jim Gaintner, the Tempe assistant fire chief who was handling the press.

About 9 p.m. firefighters had the blaze under control.

"As rapidly as that fire was moving, it was virtually a miracle we got it under control."

Gaintner said investigators would not know until morning if there were any fatalities.

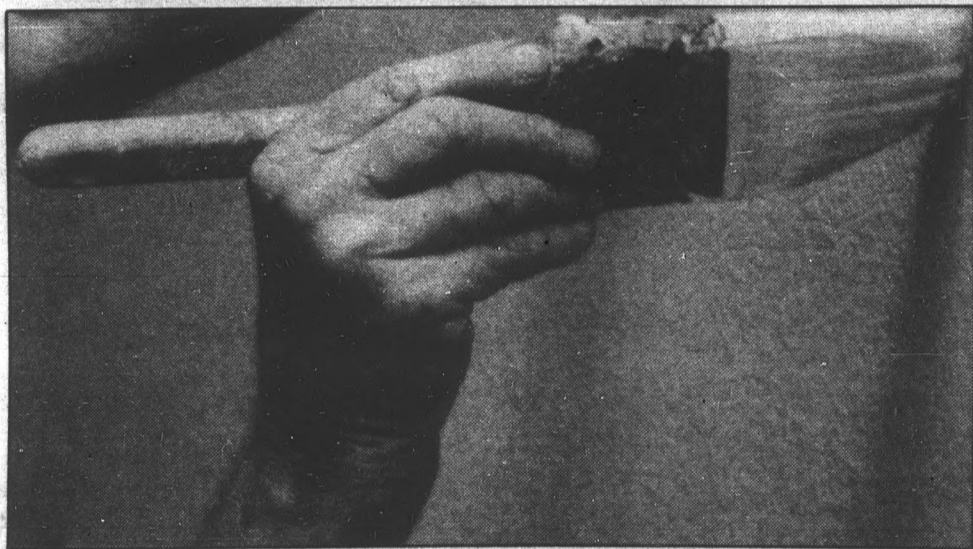

Sloshing in my ruined white bucks and smelling like a chimney I headed back to the newsroom.

I learned two lessons that night.

Never wear white bucks to cover a fire . . . And those ruined bucks were probably more than those victims had left.

Cassano, Sherman work out mutual problems

By J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

Tempe City Councilman Don Cassano said he has met with Councilman-elect Barbara Sherman to work out "differences" that occurred between the two during their races for City Council seats.

Cassano said problems arose after he suggested during the campaign that a reporter should look into Sherman's performance while serving on the East Valley Behavioral Health Association Board from 1985 to 1987.

Don Cassano

"She had some concerns about my talking to one reporter about the 'Say No to Drugs' funding program with the Behavioral Health (Board)," Cassano said.

Cassano and Sherman were the only two candidates to garner more than 50 percent of the vote in Tempe's March 22 primary election to win two of three open council seats. Cassano received 56 percent to win his second four-year term, and Sherman won her first term with 51 percent.

Cassano said he did not make the suggestion to the reporter in order to gain political advantage over Sherman.

"She was concerned I was going around making accusations, and I said, 'Hey, I left it at that,'" Cassano said.

"I said, 'Here is something you should check into,' and I let the reporter take care of it from there."

Sherman told the State Press that she and Cassano met two weeks ago in a "three-hour lunch," in order to work out their problems. Cassano confirmed that the meeting took place, and he explained why he talked to the reporter.

"I said, 'Barbara, as far as I was concerned, there were three seats,'" Cassano said. "There were five viable candidates for those three seats, and I wanted one."

"If I'm held up to public scrutiny because I've been in office, then anyone else running for public office ought to be held up to the same level."

Cassano said Sherman was on a board (the Health Board) appointed by the mayor and confirmed by the council to represent Tempe's interests, and he had the right to criticize her performance if he wanted to.

Cassano said he and Sherman were able to work out their differences, and he foresees no problems working with her.

When they met, Cassano said he told Sherman: "There are no hard feelings. You are here now, and we're here for the same reason. I think as time goes by we will develop a working relationship."

Sherman said Cassano's account of the meeting is correct and agreed the two have worked out their differences.

Cassano said since Sherman will be replacing either four-term incumbent Pat Hatton or 15-year veteran Bill Ream, the Council will lose Hatton's or Ream's political experience and their "historical perspective."

Hatton received 47 percent of the primary vote and Ream garnered 41 percent to make them the third and fourth top vote-getters respectively. Both failed to receive more than 50 percent of the vote, and they will face each other in Tempe's general election May 10 to decide the winner of the sole remaining council seat.

Cassano said while Sherman will replace a long-term incumbent, her addition to the council will not make that much difference.

"I don't see significant changes," Cassano said. "I think there will be some change because each of us brings a little different method of doing things, and we have to make some adjustments for that."

"I think it (the City Council) is going to be stable; we will remain stable and remain a consensus council and not factionalize."

Cassano said many factors contributed to the older incumbents poor showing, but he said lack of campaigning

Tempe council will consider proposal to widen Rural Road

By J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

The Tempe City Council will consider a proposal to widen Rural Road to six lanes during its meeting at 8 tonight in the City Council chambers.

The widening, which would take place between University Drive and the Superstition Freeway, has been proposed in an effort to relieve traffic congestion along Rural Road. During construction, the Salt River Project would install new power lines along the route.

The council may vote on approving or rejecting the project tonight.

The proposal has faced opposition from the Superstition Neighborhood Association — a coalition of homeowners in the area.

The association has been worried about the impact the widening would have on their neighborhood, and members voiced their concerns at several meetings held last week. They cited noise pollution as a primary concern.

Tempe's Department of Public Works has recommended the city proceed with the widening and has agreed to several of the association's requests, if the project is approved. Those agreements include the construction of additional landscaping and buffer zones between the street and homes.

According to a staff report made by the department, the widening would result in a reduction in congestion and accidents, and a wider sidewalk would allow for safer pedestrian and bicycle movement.

However, the staff said an additional $3.5 million will be required to finish the project, and more property would have to be purchased by the city.

Currently, the city has bought six homes along Rural Road between Southern Road and the Superstition Freeway. The city has agreed to restore the homes after construction is completed and sell them at a later date.

ASU readies for weekend's Springfest celebration

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

The spring fever bug is in the air, and its cure can be found at Tempe Diablo Stadium Friday through Sunday.

ASU's inaugural Springfest, sponsored by 98-KUPD radio, Associated Students and Coors Light, will kick off Friday with carnival rides, games, food and live entertainment.

The carnival will be held 6 p.m. to midnight Friday, noon to midnight Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Alex Fung, Springfest promotion director, said rain or shine, the event will be a success.

"We've been working so hard for the last couple of months, and we want people to come out," he said. "The event is for the students."

Admission tickets will be $2.50 with a validated ASU ID and $5 without an ID.

Ride tickets will be $1 each. In advance, students can purchase seven tickets for $5 from the Springfest booth in front of the MU, Fung said.

"The booth is just waiting for students to go to it," he said. "They can find out anything they ever wanted to know about Springfest."

The booth will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. today and Friday.

Trams will run every half-hour, beginning Friday, to transport students to Tempe Diablo Stadium, Fung said.

Stops will include: the post office kiosk near the MU, residence halls and the business building.

Fung said the weather forecast includes clouds but should not hinder Springfest. "Everything has been going fine so far, and I expect things to continue to go well," he said.

To remember the festival, which ASASU officials hope becomes an annual tradition, T-shirts will be sold at the Springfest booth all weekend for $10.

"It is a nice souvenir," Fung said.

Also available at the booth are apartment raffle tickets, which can be purchased for 50 cents. Two rent-free apartments will be raffled off for the summer months and the winner, who must be present, will be announced Saturday, Fung said.

And Fung said he hopes the event will bring in a lot of money. Multiple Sclerosis will be the beneficiary of money raised during the weekend.

"I hope students realize (Springfest) is for a good cause," he said.

But some students are still not sure what Springfest is all about, Fung added.

"Students are curious and are asking a lot of questions," he said.

Results

Wednesday. He said students were either annoyed by the editorial or shared the same views.

"When you have criticism of one candidate, it reflects well in voter turn-out — something we haven't had in the past two weeks," Woods said. "This creative conflict caused a late stir of things."

Woods added that the intensity level for campaign workers and candidates seemed to gain steam because of the editorial.

Fees garnered 1,606 votes (43.1 percent) in last week's election, compared to Cabianca's 1,221 votes (32.7 percent). Martensen takes a hefty lead into the runoff after gathering 1,717 votes (49.7 percent), compared to Collins' 988 votes (28.6 percent).

Executive office runoff elections are held when a candidate is unable to capture 51 percent of the vote in the general election.

But election officials are convinced that voter turn-out for a runoff election will not improve from past years, when 1,000 less students voted than the general election. But in preliminary results Wednesday, about 1,800 showed up at the polls Tuesday. There was a total of 3,981 voters in this year's general election.

"We expected it to be a lot slower, but it has been sporadic all day," Woods said. "I don't think we're going to make a drastic improvement in voter turn-out, but we're going to have to make do in creating larger voter turn-outs in small percentages."

Gusts of wind Wednesday forced election officials to close two booths about 15 minutes early. Also, three booths were not opened for the runoff due to lack of participation, including Lot 59 and the College of Law. The Forest Mall booth was not opened because the runoff between two Public Programs senators was canceled.

Shannon Sellers, ASASU elections coordinator, said there are different trends as to why students vote and don't vote: students either vote in the general election and feel as if they don't have to vote again, or students who didn't vote in the general election feel they have another chance to vote.

Sellers added that she decided to announce the winners earlier than she did for the general election because "it seems to be a popular time" for students. Since there are only four candidates, the vote count at the Maricopa County elections department won't take as long as last week, she said.

Commuter Association holds Town Hall meeting

By KRISTI ELLIS
State Press

The Associated Students Tenants/Commuter Association will hold a Town Hall at 6 tonight in the MU Arizona Room to discuss the needs of commuters and ways that ASU can help them participate more in University life.

Betty Asher, vice president of student affairs, and Art Carter, assistant dean of student life, will address their views of being a commuter.

The Town Hall is also being held to see if there is enough interest in the new Commuter Devils organization, according to Kevin McKeever, associate director of the association.

"If we have 30 or 40 people for the first one (Town Hall), it will be an accomplishment," McKeever said.

Commuter Devils is a new organization for commuting students to discuss mutual commuter issues and problems and advocate solutions, according to McKeever and Carter.

"It's a serious need because of the large student body, and we need to facilitate them," McKeever said.

In the future, McKeever would like to see Commuter Devils become "an organized group that meets once a week and takes advantage of what ASU has to offer."

According to McKeever, Carter will probably be the academic adviser for the Commuter Devils.

"We've laid some good groundwork and hopefully we can get it going (this summer)," McKeever said.

Police are still searching for the person who killed a 27-year-old Tempe man Monday night and say his death may have been drug-related.

"It's a possibility," said Tempe police Lt. Steve Graehling, commander of the department's criminal investigations bureau. "The guy he was renting the place from is in jail on a drug violation and neighbors say there's a lot of drug activity at the place."

But Graehling said police have few new leads in the shooting death of John Allen Colyott, a recently unemployed construction worker whose body was found inside his townhouse at 821-B S. Casitas St. about 8 p.m. by his estranged wife and an ex-roommate.

Colyott shared the townhouse with 28-year-old Rick Connley, who is being held at Maricopa County Jail on a Coconino County warrant for possession and transportation of narcotic drugs.

Colyott, who lived in the townhouse for about a week, was killed by a single gunshot to the left side of his lower back, police said.

Police would not say what type of gun was used. They said they have not found the weapon.

Colyott's body was found lying on the living room floor with his head covered by an object. A struggle had taken place prior to his death.

Graehling refused to say what the object on Colyott's head was, stating that only the killer knows what it is and it would be detrimental for prosecution to release it.

The object was removed from Colyott's face about 15 hours later when an autopsy was performed. Colyott was identified by fingerprints.

Police have questioned Colyott's estranged wife and the ex-roommate who found him.

In other incidents:

- Two more out-of-state license plates were reported stolen from Area 63, a campus parking lot located between Dick's University Drive-In and the Cholla Apartment Complex, police said. Six other plates have been stolen from that lot between April 8 and April 11.

- The latest plates reported stolen were California BEARASU and New Jersey AZK 50V.

- Police arrested three juveniles who allegedly stole light blue fuzzy dice from a vehicle parked on campus Tuesday.

- Two bicycles were reported stolen from the Engineering A-Wing, police said.

- A light blue men's Raleigh valued at $320 and a black men's Huffy cruiser worth $50 were taken. There are no suspects or leads.

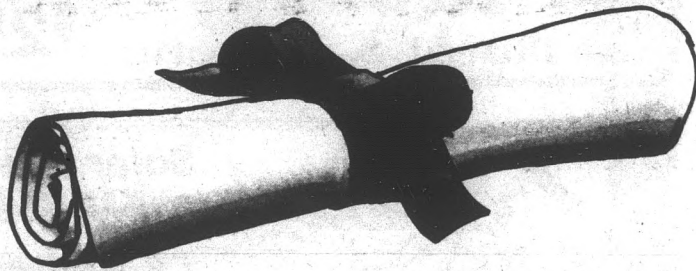

- Someone stole a snap-on top from a convertible automobile parked in Lot 11, police said. Loss is $250.

- Someone stole a backpack and its contents from the bleachers at the Physical Education West Gymnasium, police said. Loss is $215.

- Someone stole a touchtone receiver from a telephone in the MU, police said. Loss is $15.

- Two blank checks were reported stolen from a backpack in an office at the Physical Science A-Wing, police said.

Other sorority-sponsored fundraisers, like bake sales, involved participation from house alumnae members.

Another fund-raising first was a competitive ASU-UofA blood drive, which was sponsored by United Blood Services, to determine which university enlisted the most students to donate blood.

The award was presented to ASU during last fall's ASU-UofA football game. ASU donated 434 pints of blood during the drive, with UofA donating 384 pints.

Lori Lux, a member of the Alpha Phi sorority, said the renewed Greek dedication to community involvement is due to re-establishing ties with other Greeks nationally.

As a reward for the charitable efforts, the Greeks received points from the Panhellenic Philanthropic Board. The sororities and fraternities with the most points received an award during Greek Week closing ceremonies.

Rich Peters, a Panhellenic chairperson and a member of Phi Sigma Kappa, said the award for first place in the best overall participation and philanthropic events was awarded to Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and Alpha Chi Omega sorority.

Second place went to Alpha Delta Pi sorority and third place to Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

may have been part of the problem.

"A lot of it had to do with campaigning hard — if those two incumbents had put more energy into it, it (the election) could have been different," he said.

"It (the election) was the result of Barbara doing the grass-roots work — getting some new voters out. It was the old voters wanting a change, feeling things have remained the same long enough."

As for himself, Cassano said the voter support he received was an endorsement of his working style.

"You have to listen to them (the constituents) and weigh what they tell you with what is happening in the city. They are the ones you have to pay attention to."

Cassano said he is looking forward to his second term and getting to work on several projects, including relief of traffic congestion, the creation of more neighborhood associations and the construction of the Phoenix Cardinal's football training facility.

"I'm not out there to create issues," he said. "But I want to be a part of what is going on — I want to be involved with these meetings with various groups, much more so than I could have done a few weeks ago when I was preoccupied with the election."

Testing cannot verify burial shroud as Christ's, experts say

TUCSON (AP) — UofA scientists said Tuesday carbon-dating testing of the Shroud of Turin only will help show whether the cloth existed at the time of Jesus Christ — not whether he was buried in it.

The co-directors of the National Science Foundation-Arizona Accelerator Facility for Radioisotope Analysis, one of three laboratories that independently will test fingernail-sized samples of the shroud, said they probably will not be able to pinpoint its age within more than 80 to 100 years.

"The certainty with which the date would be known from work in this laboratory would not be much better than a span of a hundred years," said geoscientist Paul E. Damon, co-director of the facility.

It will not prove that the burial wrapping was Christ's, said Douglas J. Donahue, a physicist who is co-director of the facility. "What the measurement determines is the age of the cloth — nothing else."

"There's no way you can prove it (authenticity) by dating the cloth," Damon added. "But you can disprove it."

They said the tests, which also will be performed at England's Oxford University and at the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology at the University of Zurich, will include two control samples of known age for each facility.

Original plans called for seven laboratories to take part in the tests, but the Vatican announced in January that only three would do so.

"They said that it was to conserve material; that's a quote," Donahue said.

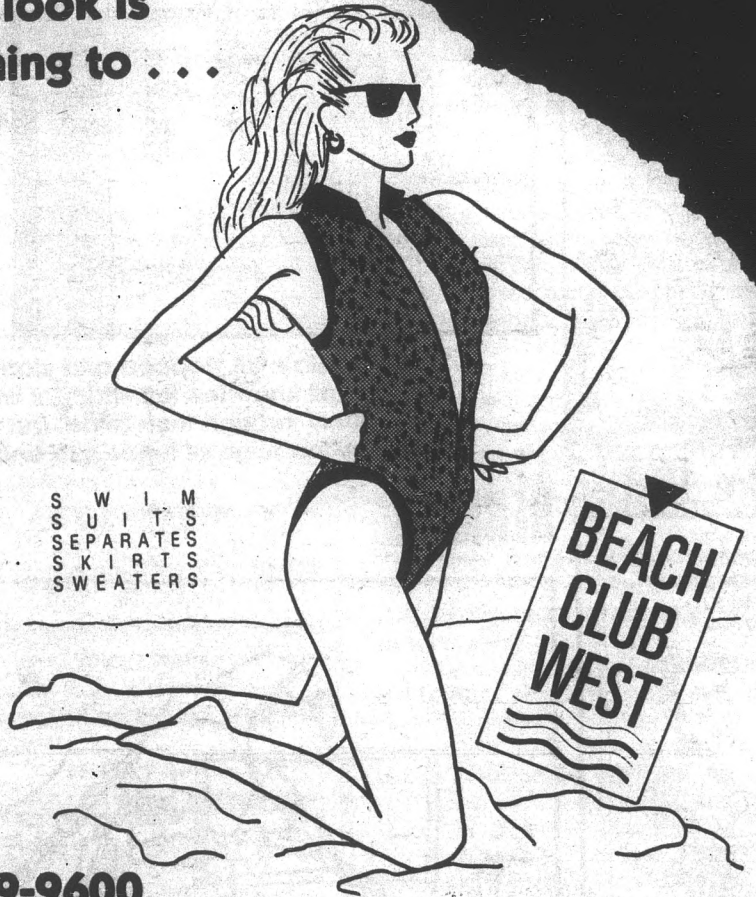

"If we get plus or minus 70 or 80 or even a hundred years (within the date of the shroud), we will have accomplished what we set out to do, I believe," he said. "Twenty years would be exceptional and the thing we hope for."

"I think the understanding with the archbishop of Turin is if we get it to within plus or minus 80 years, we'll all be happy."

The shroud, 14 feet, 3 inches long and 3 feet, 7 inches wide, is owned by the Vatican and is kept at the cathedral at Turin, Italy.

Brown signs letter of intent with ASU

Adrian Brown, a 6-foot-1, 170-pound guard from Sahuaro High School in Tucson, has signed a national letter of intent to attend ASU.

Brown, who averaged 18 points, 10 rebounds and six assists for the Cougars, was named the 1988 AAA-1 Player of the Year in Arizona by The Arizona Republic.

Brown, who has a 42-inch vertical jump, shot 52 percent from the field and 70 percent from the free-throw line as a senior, while committing only two turnovers per game and posting six triple-doubles.

"We are thrilled with the signing of Adrian Brown," ASU coach Steve Patterson said. "We feel that he is not only an outstanding Division I basketball talent but an exceptional young man as well."

"He exhibits the qualities that we are looking for that are three-fold — outstanding player, outstanding student and outstanding young man."

Brown joins Ron Waller, a 6-foot-1 guard from Detroit, as players who have signed with ASU.

'Gorilla' plays top banana; leaves Suns to attend ASU

PHOENIX (AP) — The NBA's Phoenix Suns and their mascot for the past seven-plus years — "the Gorilla" — are parting ways at the end of this season, club officials said.

Henry Rojas, the man inside the costume, is wrapping up the option year of his contract with the team and plans to return to college at ASU.

"I think it's time for a change. I want to finish my degree in psychology at ASU," the 30-year-old Rojas told the Phoenix Gazette, "but I'd like to continue to develop the character."

Rojas said he wants to retain the use of the Gorilla character for his youth ministry at an area church, in public-service films and charity work, and for occasional appearances at sporting events around the country.

The Suns, however, also want to retain the rights to the character and have somebody else in costume at their home games in the future.

Rojas and team officials are scheduled to meet Thursday to iron out an agreement.

"That's what our meeting will be for, to cover the bases of separation, the rights, that sort of thing," said Tom Ambrose, the Suns' vice president of public relations. "The Gorilla's identity has been established with the Suns. We want to build on that, even though the person inside will be different."

Lady golfers charge to tourney win

By DAVE BIGOS
State Press

The ASU women's golf team used 30 mph winds to its advantage Wednesday as it won the 1988 Lady Sun Devil Invitational Golf Tournament at Anasazi Golf Course in Paradise Valley.

Pam Wright led the Sun Devils to victory with a final-round score of 74, putting her into a tie for first-place with Eva Dahllof of Oklahoma State. No playoff was held for the individual players.

ASU, ranked third in the country, turned in a team score of 303 for a final of 900 in the three-day event. Tulsa, ranked No. 1 in the country and leader through the first two rounds, shot a 317 on Wednesday to finish second with a total of 907. Oklahoma State came in third with a score of 910.

"It was great beating Tulsa," ASU coach Linda Vollstedt said. "They're ranked No. 1 and they had a big lead on us. We made up 14 shots — that's hard to do against Tulsa."

ASU had five players finish in the top-15: Wright tied for first with a 220; Amy Fruhwirth tied for seventh with a 224; Missy Farr, playing as an individual, was all alone at 10th with a 225; Pearl Sinn tied for 12th with a 227; and Eve-Lyne Biron tied for 13th with a 229.

Heather Hodur finished with a 240 and individual players Susan Perrault and Carol Berger finished with scores of 244 and 274, respectively.

ASU had not won the Lady Sun Devil since 1981. Tulsa and Oklahoma State have each won the tournament twice.

Vollstedt said that there were several factors that helped the team win.

"The crowds were good," she said. "We had a lot of people rooting for us."

"We also had a lot of positive energy. This morning the kids all said that they felt they could win the tournament. There was electricity in the air. We could feel it."

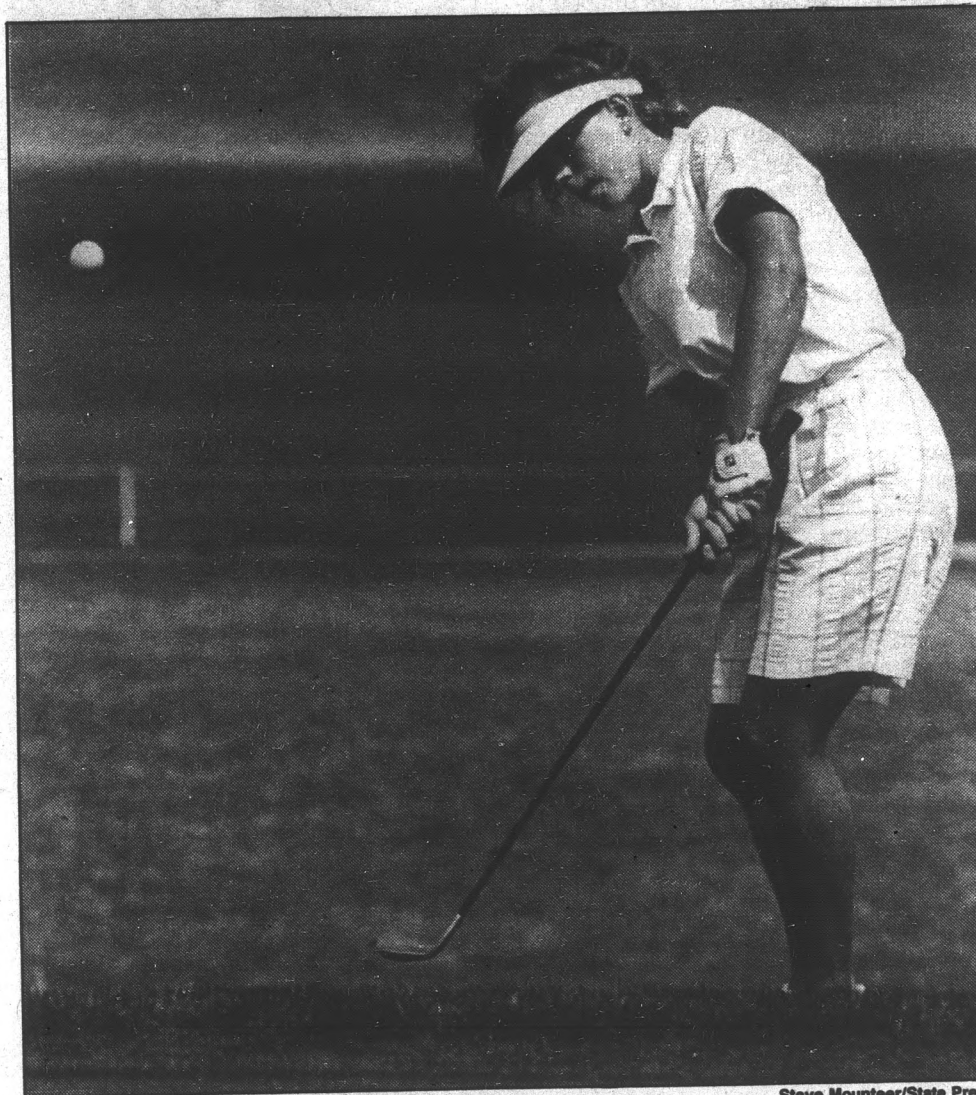

Wright said that she agreed with Vollstedt.

"We went out with confidence and it paid off," Wright said. "When the wind got up, we played it to our advantage. We know this course and it helped. The other girls were struggling."

Wright said that she played some of her best golf of the year in this tournament.

"I was very happy," she said. "As far as ball-striking, it was probably the best all season. I felt good because it was good for the team."

Vollstedt said she was very impressed with the way Wright was hitting the ball.

Amy Fruhwirth hits a chip shot toward the green during the Lady Sun Devil Invitational in Paradise Valley. Pam Wright tied for first-place and Fruhwirth tied for seventh as ASU came from behind to win the tournament Wednesday at Anasazi Golf Course.

"Pam played her best golf of the year," she said. "Not only was it a great tournament for the team, but we also had someone who won it individually."

Wright said that the team is now looking forward to the NCAA Championships May 25 through 28.

"We're very much in contention for nationals," she said. "This year, we've been close. Our worst finish was sixth."

"Now we're in a winning frame of mind. It was like there was an invisible barrier — but now we've broken through."

Vollstedt said that she has been trying all season to produce the kind of emotion from the players that she saw today.

"I've been trying really hard to get them to trust each other to where they felt they could win every time," Vollstedt said. "It was the only missing ingredient — that 'eye of the tiger.'"

ASU's final round score of 303 was the best of a field of 14 schools that included Arizona, Brigham Young, Hawaii, Lamar, New Mexico, New Mexico State, San Diego State, Stanford, U.S. International, UCLA and Washington.

The Sun Devils will return to action April 25 through 27 for the Pac-10 Conference Championship in Seattle, Wash.

Sun Devils extend streak to 20 in slugfest

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

The wind and the Sun Devil bats blew away New Mexico State, 18-9, on Wednesday at Packard Stadium, to complete a two-game sweep of the Aggies.

Steve Willis

On Tuesday night, Gordy Farmer struck out a career-high 11 men as ASU won 9-3.

Wednesday's victory brought ASU's winning streak to 20 games, the fifth longest in school history. The next milestone to pass is a 21-game streak by the 1976 club.

ASU has not lost since March 6. The Devils pounded out 20 hits, tying a season high. That kind of production would certainly be enough to match any opponent, but there was a downside — pitching.

Five ASU pitchers made appearances, none going more than three innings, giving up 16 hits.

"I'd hate to think the pitching would do that every time it gets windy," pitching coach Dub Kilgo said. "It's tough to pitch in the wind, but that's no excuse for what happened. It was definitely an offensive day."

Kilgo was running the ballclub on Wednesday, as coach Jim Brock was out of town recruiting.

Brian Dodd started the game and got out of a jam in the first inning. But in the third, he gave up three extra-base hits and the first two NMSU runs of the game.

In the bottom of the third, Kevin Higgins led off with his second of three hits on the day, a single to left field.

Steve Willis then hit a Zack Kerr fastball over the green monsterette in straight-away center field. The wall stands 400 feet from home plate, and is 40-feet-high. The ball cleared it by plenty.

Debate along press row concluded the last player to accomplish the feat was Barry Bonds in 1984.

"That would have been out even without the wind," Willis said. "I definitely got all of it. I didn't even feel the ball on the bat. That's as far as I could hit one straight-away."

The blast made the score 3-2 in favor of the Sun Devils.

David Cassidy took the mound in the third, and retired the side in order, the only time a Devil pitcher would do so.

The ASU fourth inning looked like the team was taking a leisurely trip to the batting cage. The first seven men sent to the plate came around to score. The inning was capped by a Ricky Candelari three-run homer, his 11th of the season.

ASU went on to score four times in the sixth, and four times in the seventh.

The Aggies scored four runs in the ninth off reliever Rob Mattson before Rusty Kilgo entered to become the fifth ASU pitcher of the day. After giving up one hit and walking one, Kilgo struck out the final two batters to end the game.

Offensive highlights: Tim Spehr — 3-for-4 with 4 RBI. Ricky Candelari — 4-for-5 with 4 RBI. Martin Peralta — double, two-run homer.

Three Sun Devil gymnasts set for NCAA competition

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

It appeared to be Black Wednesday for Don Robinson, ASU men's gymnastics coach, after learning that his team will not be competing in the NCAA Championships today through Saturday.

However, three Sun Devils will compete in Lincoln, Neb., individually. It marks the second straight season ASU has failed to qualify after winning the national championship in 1986.

The Sun Devils' team was denied a spot in Lincoln to allow an Eastern school, Penn State, to participate.

Robinson must rely on: Paul Linne, all-around; Randy Scott, floor exercise and vault; and Licurgo Diaz-Sandi, floor exercise, to earn individual national titles.

ASU's ace-in-the-hole could be Linne. The junior is ranked fifth in the country in the all-around competition, with a 57.10 score.

"I've got to go out and do what I can do," Linne said. "If I hit well, things will happen."

Since Linne was the lone gymnast who was on the 1986 squad, his experience will aid in his cause.

"I feel I am better in every event than years ago," he said. "I keep improving and my gymnastics are a little more mature."

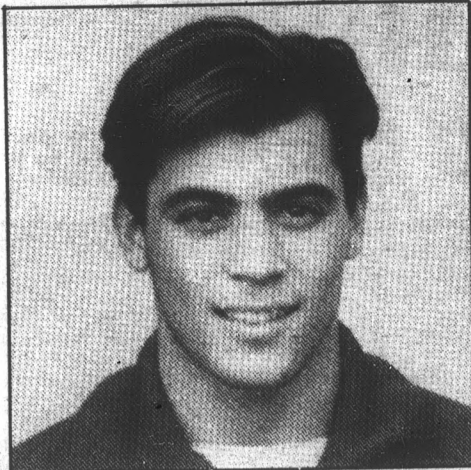

Keys to his success thus far in the season have been the still rings and high bar. But Linne is hoping to be a national champion in the all-around.

"I am shooting for the all-around title," he said. "It is realistic, the person that hits all 12 routines can win the competition."

In order to place high in the competition, Linne knows what it will take in order to bring home the high honor: being clean during the events and strong. With these qualities he feels he can achieve his goal.

His confidence can also be seen in the eyes of his coach.

"I think he can be a national champion in the all-around," Robinson said. "I think now it is a mental game."

Randy Scott

Scott, a sophomore, is making his first trip to nationals, in which he will attempt to score high in both of events: floor exercise and vault.

He is highly-ranked nationally in the floor exercise with a 9.78, which is the highest of any Sun Devil. Scott has earned a 9.9 once during the season and said he can execute the same feat once again in Lincoln.

"I want to do well — I'd like to be an All-American," Scott said. "Floor is a little more important than vault, but I'd like to do well in both of them."

The vaulting exercise is the toughest event for him. His 9.48 score ties him with teammate Linne for a fifth-place ranking in the Western region. During the Pac-10 finals, Scott scored a 9.55, which aided in his nationals cause.

Diaz-Sandi, a freshman, is gearing up for the championships. Although he is competing in only one event, it is his strongest.

"I'm excited," the Mexico City native said. "I am going to go there and do my best."

Tennis team downs UofA in last match

By DAVE BIGOS
State Press

The ASU men's tennis team capped off a great season Wednesday as it downed Arizona, 5-4, at Whiteman Tennis Center.

The 11th-ranked Sun Devils finished the season 18-8.

ASU coach Lou Belken said it has been an interesting season.

"You have to say it's been a pretty good season when your worst loss is to California — and they're ranked 15th in the country," Belken said.

After singles, the match was tied at 3-all with Doug Sachs, Brian Gyetko and Jeff Wood winning their matches.

"Sachs has just been unbelievable for us this season," Belken said. "He should be seeded in the NCAAs after this."

In doubles, Sachs teamed up with Ken

Kuperstein and Wood teamed up with Danny Marting to clinch the match.

The Sun Devils will now get ready for the Pac-10 Conference Championships (April 21 through 24 in Ojai, Calif.) and the NCAA Championships (May 14 through 22 in Athens, Ga.).

"This is our second season," Belken said. "We have a month to get ready for NCAAs. We're going to relax a bit and then work on conditioning and mechanics."

Belken said that the team is confident in its quest for a national title.

"I don't think we're afraid of anybody," he said. "Stanford is the best team, and we had a chance to beat them when they played here. But the atmosphere in Athens will be different."

"We just want to give our best performance. If we put in a good effort, we're going to win."
