Mecham sings 'swan song' on show

By BEN McCONNELL
State Press

Evan Mecham had said it was just "a plain old ordinary swan song."

But his appearance on "Face the State" on KTSP-TV (Channel 10) Sunday, which was to be the final word on his future political plans, was anything but a recantation of happy memories, a graceful bow and a warm handshake.

The former governor leveled his most vitriolic attack to date on Phoenix Newspapers Inc., publisher of The Arizona Republic and Phoenix Gazette. He also said he was keeping his "options open" about future political office.

"The Phoenix newspapers, key members of the Phoenix 40 and a few others have lost their control over the governor's office and they were determined to regain that control, which they now have temporarily accomplished," Mecham said.

"They were assisted in doing that by those who continue making money on drug sales and use, by polluting minds with pornography ... and by those who want immorality in society.

"It appears the time is right for a truthful newspaper," Mecham said. "No longer will the Phoenix newspapers exercise control" over state government.

The Phoenix 40 is a group of Valley businessmen. Mecham has charged that the group controls state government.

But Mecham's attack on the papers, which he called generators of "venom and hate," is nothing new, according to Publisher Pat Murphy.

"He's entitled to his opinion," Murphy said. "It's to his advantage to shift public attention away from himself. The media have been reporting a very, very historic abuse of power and misconduct."

While Mecham ruled out a challenge to his April 4 impeachment conviction by the Senate, he hinted he may pursue legal action to challenge the Arizona Supreme Court cancellation of the May 17 recall election.

But Mecham declined to say what legal routes are being considered.

"I can't imagine what he has in mind," ASU College of Law Dean Paul Bender said. "He could work on some kind of legislative constitutional change, but by that time, it would be 1990 and time for another gubernatorial race.

"It's a mystery to me."

ASU law dean says Mecham needs to deal

By BEN McCONNELL
State Press

Evan Mecham's criminal trial on six felony counts starts May 22, and the former governor has vowed he will not plea-bargain down the charges. But he should deal, unless he wants to gamble with being shut out of office for 10 years, ASU's law school dean says.

A plea-bargain is a strong negotiating tool, and it will lessen Mecham's chances of being convicted and shut out of office for a long probationary period, ASU School of Law Dean Paul Bender said Sunday.

"The benefit of a plea is that you negotiate (sentencing)," Bender said.

If Mecham is convicted in Superior Court on six felony charges he intentionally hid a $350,000 campaign loan from Tempe developer Barry Wolfson and lied about it before a state grand jury, he will be prohibited from holding public office until the end of his sentence, Bender said.

But Mecham, appearing on a television interview program Sunday, said he has not broken any laws and refuses to negotiate.

"I have no intention of plea-bargaining, and I expect to be acquitted," Mecham said.

It has been reported and assumed in some quarters that if Mecham is convicted in the criminal trial, he will be barred from office for the rest of his life. Not true, Bender says.

Mecham could run for office after serving a sentence and/or probation, providing he is convicted, Bender said. After those terms are fulfilled, a convict's civil rights are restored, he added.

The Arizona revised statute outlining felony conviction of a public official states that the officer is prohibited from holding office until the next general election.

Mecham was convicted April 4 by the Senate on impeachment charges he obstructed a criminal investigation and illegally used state funds. A third impeachment article, similar to the Wolfson criminal indictments, was dropped.

Theoretically, Mecham could be convicted and just serve a probationary period, rather than being sent to prison — a probable scenario because of Mecham's former high-profile job, Bender said.

But in that scenario, the former governor might be sentenced up to 10 years' probation, making him ineligible for office until the end of that 10 years, Bender said.

Rain postpones initial Springfest

The rain came down and washed out ASU's inaugural Springfest this weekend, but, weather permitting, the show will go on next weekend, an event coordinator said Sunday.

Associated Students Assistant Special Events Coordinator Lyle Skillen said one more day (Thursday) has been added to the schedule, and people already holding weekend passes will be admitted all four days.

Admission to the 98-KUPD-ASASU-Coors Light-sponsored Springfest is $2.50 with a valid student identification.

Skillen said all the scheduled performers, except Lita Ford will appear. He added that negotiations are being undertaken to secure a major act to replace Ford's scheduled Saturday night appearance.

In addition to the live entertainment, carnival rides, concession stands and midway games are attractions of the festival.

For more information, there will be a Springfest booth located in front of the MU from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily.

Dukakis wins state's caucuses; voters in Tempe favor Jackson

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis captured the Arizona Democratic caucuses Saturday, but Jesse Jackson was the favorite candidate of Tempe voters.

Of the 2,176 valid votes cast at the five polling sites in Dist. 27, which includes Tempe, 1,003 were for Jackson. Dukakis followed with 972 votes and Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore was selected by 115 voters.

Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, with 28 votes, finished behind the 58 voters who marked "no preference" on their ballot.

Statewide, Dukakis boosted his campaign for Tuesday's New York primary by claiming 52 percent of the Democratic vote, while Jackson followed with 37 percent.

Carol Wade Terrell, Jackson's state campaign chairwoman, said Jackson did better in Tempe than statewide because of his April 5 rally at ASU and because many of his top Arizona campaign staff members live in District 27.

"He did well because he visited your campus," Terrell said. "I think the student body came out and supported his candidacy."

"They appreciated the fact that he came to the campus, and they believed in his message."

About 38,000 Democrats, braving heavy rain and snow in some areas of the state, turned out Saturday.

The delegates elected in Saturday's caucuses will go on to the state convention, where 36 pledged delegates and four unpledged delegates will be sent to July's national convention in Atlanta.

Mark Armour, a Gore spokesman, said the Tennessee senator's poor showing here has not damaged the campaign's momentum going into the New York primary. There are 255 delegates up for grabs in the New York primary.

"We never committed significant time or resources in Arizona," Armour said. "We had to pick our battleground very carefully."

"It (the Arizona caucus) is not going to make a significant impact on the New York vote."

Bill Hegarty, chairman of Arizonans for Mario Cuomo, had urged caucus-goers last week to vote "no preference" in order to free Arizona's delegates at the national convention, which he believes will be brokered.

Hegarty said he had hoped that if the convention was brokered — where a party candidate is not nominated on the first ballot, allowing a politician who had not run in the primaries and caucuses to be drafted — that Cuomo would be drafted.

But Cuomo announced April 11 that he would not accept the nomination if drafted, and Hegarty said that announcement "shot down" the "no preference" movement.

Hostage warns of 'black end' if hijackers' demands not met

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — A passenger aboard a hijacked Kuwait Airways jumbo jet said Sunday about 35 hostages on the plane faced certain death if Kuwait refused to release 17 convicted terrorists.

"All the passengers are in good health. I hope the Kuwait government will act quickly to liberate the 17 young prisoners. Otherwise we all face a black end," said the man. He identified himself as Suleiman Farhan Doukhi.

Doukhi, who spoke Arabic in a firm voice, also sent "greetings to the Kuwait people, to my mother and father and to all those who miss me."

The message appeared to be a recording.

On Friday, the hijackers brought two other passengers to the aircraft's radio to make similar statements to the control tower and one on Thursday.

Since the Bangkok-to-Kuwait flight was hijacked April 5, the hijackers have demanded the release of the 17 extremists, jailed for bombing the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait in December 1983.

Kuwait has rejected the demand.

The plane, carrying 112 passengers, first landed in Iran, where 57 hostages were released and additional hijackers reportedly boarded the plane. The jet then went to Larnaca, Cyprus, where the gunmen killed two passengers and released 13.

On Tuesday night, it arrived in Algiers and on Friday the hijackers released an ailing hostage.

Algerian officials said Sunday that Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat was expected in Algiers but declined to say when he would arrive or whether he would play a role in the negotiations.

On the morning of the 13th day of the crisis, Algerian authorities abruptly expelled hundreds of print and television reporters from the section of the VIP lounge where they had been staying for nearly a week.

At about the same time, Algerian policemen, armed with pistols, took up position on the roof of the terminal building facing the plane. It was not clear why they had been dispatched.

Experts expect rise in oil production; natural gas demand should increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Domestic crude oil production in the 1990s should be higher than previously expected and demand for natural gas will be markedly higher, according to the Energy Department's annual forecast.

The department's Energy Information Administration said oil prices will be slower to rise in the decade than it projected in last year's forecast, and natural gas prices will be much lower.

The import share of U.S. petroleum consumption won't be much different at the end of the century from what was predicted last year, EIA said.

In their annual forecast released last week, the agency's forecasters significantly raised prediction for U.S. crude oil production in the year 2000 from 5.4 million barrels a day to 6.0 million barrels. Last year's production was about 8.3 million barrels compared with 9.0 million barrels before the 1986 petroleum price collapse.

Palestinians take to streets for slain PLO leader, 8 hurt

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians angered by the assassination of a PLO leader boycotted their jobs and staged protest marches Sunday, and Israel imposed curfews on cities and camps in the occupied territories.

Eight Arabs were wounded in scattered clashes with Israeli soldiers in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, hospital officials said.

Leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization have blamed Israel for Saturday's killing of PLO military chief, Khalil al-Wazir, in Tunisia. Many protesters carried black flags Sunday to mourn his death.

Also Sunday, most of about 100,000 Arabs who work in Israel stayed away from their jobs.

Shamir declines comment on killing after sources say Israeli agents did it

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli sources said Sunday that Israeli agents had assassinated PLO official Khalil al-Wazir, the No. 2 man in the organization who headed the uprising in the occupied territories.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir declined comment.

The sources said the operation was carried out jointly by the Mossad intelligence service, the Israeli navy and an elite commando unit. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

They said it had been postponed several times before Saturday.

Construction begins on Tempe comedy club

By J. MICHAEL HOEHN
State Press

Construction on the Tempe Improv Comedy Club began Friday, and the club's grand opening should be in August, according to the owner of the comedy-dinner theater.

"We are surging forward and should open sometime around August," said Mark Anderson, chief executive officer of MWA (Mark W. Anderson) Arizona Inc., which owns the club.

The Improv will be located in the Cornerstone shopping center on the corner of Rural Road and University Drive.

The Tempe club will be one of only eight Improvs in the nation. The club has launched the careers of such comedians as Jay Leno and David Letterman and played host to entertainers like Robin Williams and Jonathan Winters.

Construction on the club was originally scheduled to begin in March with the grand opening to be sometime this spring. However Anderson said during a Thursday interview that construction has been delayed while the club's Arizona liquor license is transferred.

"We had originally hoped for a May 1 opening," he said. "We are in the final stage of getting our liquor license transferred."

Anderson said there are no problems with the license application, adding that the delay resulted from the Arizona state liquor policies being tougher than other states.

"It just takes time," Anderson explained. "They have a lengthier process than other states."

Anderson said the license transfer is the only remaining process to go through, adding the club has already been approved by the Tempe City Council and an agreement has been signed with Cornerstone.

"We've already worked all that stuff out," he said. "The main thing now is getting our license transferred."

The club will be a dinner theater that will feature well-known comedians who wish to try out new material or new comedians trying to establish themselves.

The Tempe Improv will be the largest of the eight clubs, seating 300 people with a balcony area that can seat an additional 100 patrons.

The club also has high ceilings, which will allow for the filming of cable and television specials.

Currently, all Improv shows are filmed at the Irvine, Calif., Improv, and Anderson has said that club is really too small for filming.

"It (The Tempe Improv) is designed for television and filming capacity," Anderson said in an interview in January. "The club will have a larger capacity and a larger showroom. The room will have higher ceilings to allow filming and taping to take place."

"The balcony will give us the extra seating for the likes of a Jay Leno, a Robin Williams or a Jonathan Winters."

Anderson, who constantly joked during the interview from his San Diego office, commented on the difficulty of getting acts for the August opening and the summer heat his workers will have to endure during construction.

"We try to make things as hard on ourselves as we can," Anderson said. "We also try to make it as difficult on our construction workers as we can."

Trial

Mecham said Sunday, "I'll keep my options open" about running for public office in the future.

Mecham could let a jury decide his fate — and risk conviction on all charges — or he could plead on a lower, misdemeanor charge and negotiate a probationary period. Mecham would be better off bargaining, Bender said.

Fred Craft and Jerris Leonard, Mecham's impeachment trial lawyers, were reported to have met with Attorney General Bob Corbin and offered a deal whereby Mecham would leave the state for two years on a Mormon mission and promise to refrain from seeking office.

Mecham said Sunday he had no knowledge of the alleged bargaining.

"In the words of Robert Corbin, let me say that I'll listen to anything," said Michael Scott, Mecham's criminal trial lawyer.

two impeachment charges and ousted from office April 4, did say he is forming two political action committees, one of which will "help the people of the state." The other PAC will help elect people to the Legislature, he said.

"No longer will Phoenix newspapers exercise control," he said. "I predict the turnover of the Legislature will be the largest in the history of the state."

But Mecham's "swan song" signals the end of what waning power he held, ASU political science professor Bruce Mason said.

"His star is fading," Mason said. "Mecham is a second fiddle. He imagined he should have been on top — when in fact he was just a hired hand."

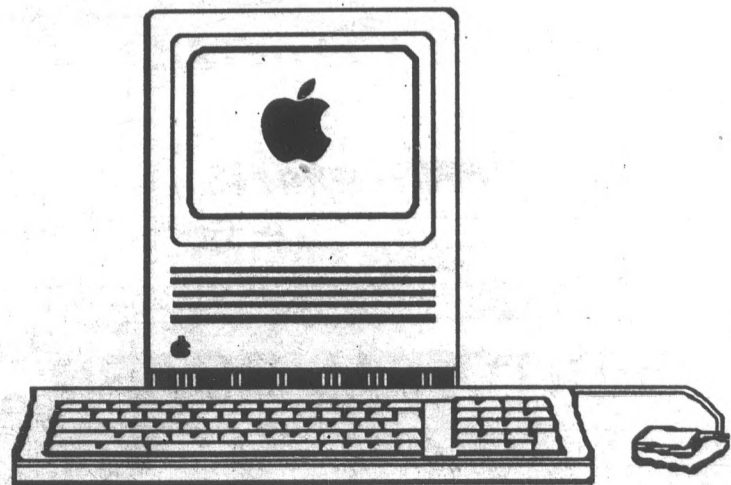

"Mecham is fading each day."

The former governor himself said he would like to disappear from showing up in the news media for at least 60 days.

"He ought to fade away for at least 60 years," Mason said.

Burying the hatchet

Armistice Day.

The Associated Students elections are over, the four executive officers and 20 senators have been chosen, and the political warfare that has engulfed ASASU for weeks has subsided.

And as the student body races toward the end of another semester while looking forward expectantly to the next, it is time to wipe the slate clean and start anew: there is much work to be done.

A great deal of blood has been shed — candidate against candidate, campaign worker against campaign worker and newspaper against candidate — in what was one of the most bitter student electoral battles in memory.

But it is hoped that since the challenges that confront ASASU in the coming year are so formidable, all those interested in the welfare of ASU can bury their differences at this time and proceed united toward our common goal — making the University a better place.

The winners and the losers in the election combat all share one thing in common — an interest in participating in the decision-making process at ASU. And the University needs all the interested people it can get.

To those candidates who won: you now have a mandate and a responsibility to work diligently for the student body.

And to those who lost: you too should maintain your interest and involvement in ASASU, because your participation is vital.

There will be plenty of opportunities to clash over issues in the coming year, and we will be in the thick of the debate.

But for now, it is for the benefit of the student body that all involved in the ASASU elections extend the olive branch and get on with business.

Unnecessary and ruthless

Editor:

The unnecessary and ruthless assassination of Patrice Cabianca's character and ability by Darrin Hostetler (April 13) demands a response. I am not associated with Patrice's political campaign or with the Greek system, of which she has been a member and leader. Patrice is a friend and an individual I have worked closely with. She has shown me that her honesty, dedication, ability to organize and lead others, and maturity can't seriously be questioned.

It is not my intention to endorse Patrice's bid for the ASASU presidency with this letter. It is my intention to let this newspaper know that the decision by the student body of an appropriate leader should not be influenced by an editorial writer who has no facts to back up his assertion that Cabianca is either dishonest or "too ignorant and disorganized" to be aware of her campaign team's activities.

No one doubts that the letter in question is an improper endorsement by a University office and an unacceptable expenditure of student monies. On the other hand, it is reasonable to believe that Patrice is telling the truth when she says she didn't know about it, and it is very possible that she is a bit too busy to be constantly aware of the activities of all of her campaign volunteers.

Appropriate editorial policy for the State Press dictates that unsupported assassinations of character and undeserved accusations of "hypocrisy" and "naivete" be avoided.

The real mudslinger

Editor:

I wish to clarify several points made by Darrin Hostetler in his editorial about Patrice Cabianca on April 13, which have been misstated.

First, the Honors Program endorsement was authored and distributed by the Honors Program administration. It was entirely outside the realm of the Cabianca campaign. Instead of "informing" readers about this issue, why not investigate the incident and have it reported by an unbiased State Press reporter?

Second, Cabianca's opinion regarding (John) Fees' penalty should be regarded as an opinion, just as your editorial is your opinion. That the State Press reported it as fact should not be a reflection on Cabianca. Who was the guilty party? Fees for loopholing his way through the election rules or Cabianca for playing fairly? If she is bumping into the ethical wall, then perhaps John Fees has crumbled it. It seems that your editorial headlining Cabianca's "mudslinging" is a smokescreen for Fees' disregard of election rules.

Third, are the election commissioners incompetent because you do not agree with their decision, or are they unqualified for their positions? The ASASU Bylaws stipulate that the Election Commission is to be chosen by a screening committee comprised of four ASASU senators and four other ASASU officials. The screening process includes written applications for the positions that are evaluated by the screening committee. Why would ASASU go through this whole process to choose Election Commissioners who are incompetent? The Election Commission is a product of the process.

Mr. Hostetler, two weeks ago you made it quite clear that you were fully supporting John Fees. Last week you did all in your power to discredit his opponent, Patrice Cabianca. Perhaps, Mr. Hostetler, you are the real mudslinger.

Laura L. Herrick
Senior, Accounting

Terribly incorrect

Editor:

In Darrin Hostetler's opinion (April 13), he is terribly incorrect in his statements concerning our letter of support for Patrice Cabianca.

First of all, the letter was not an endorsement from the University Honors Program (incorrectly called department in your column) but was an endorsement from two individual honors students who wanted other honors students to get involved in this year's election.

Secondly, the postage for the letter was not paid for by state funds. We (the authors of the letter) reimbursed the Honors Program for the cost at the time of the mailing, which was April 1, 1988.

Mr. Hostetler should get his facts straight before he throws out false accusations.

Haylee Kronberg

Security speaks

Editor:

This is in response to Dave Hodges' commentary April 11 about stadium security. If it was not for security's presence, none of the decent baseball fans would enjoy the game.

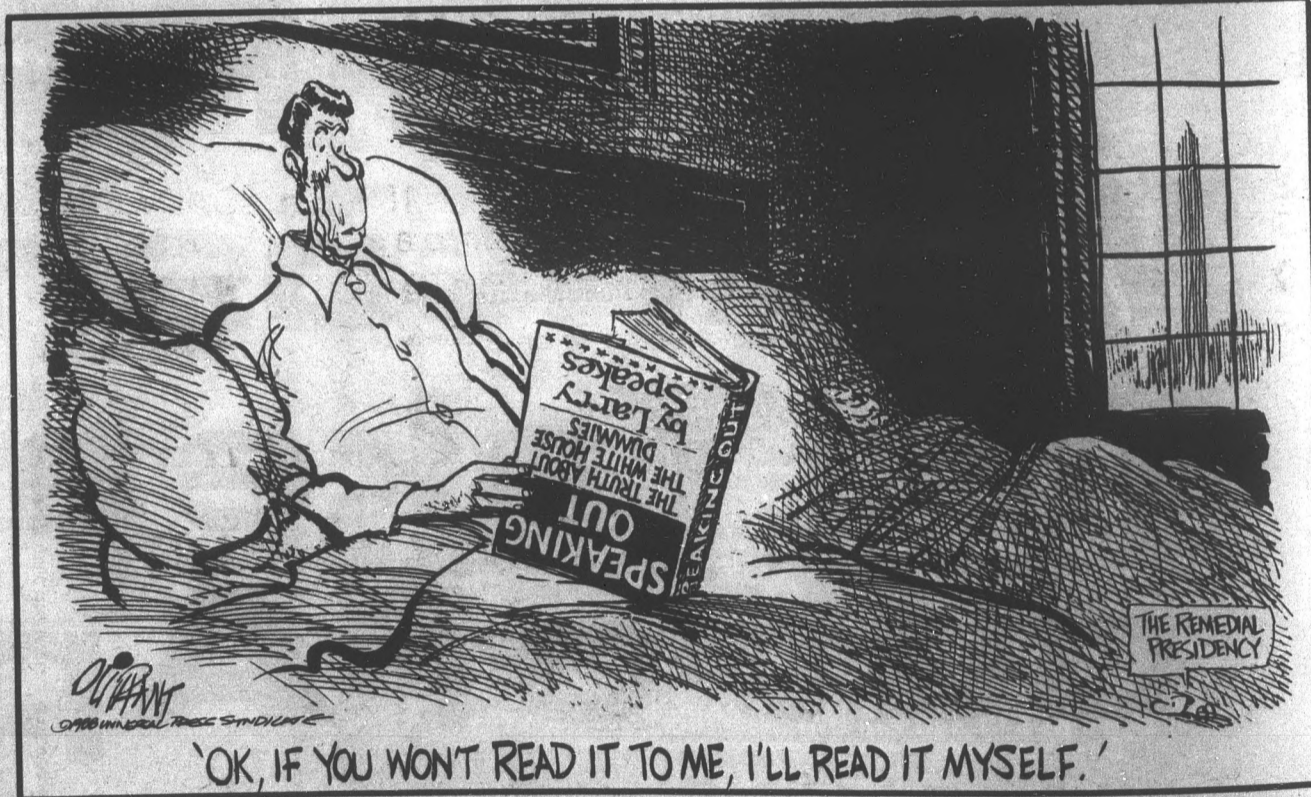

Sure, part of the home-field advantage is to intimidate the opponent, but come on — it is a pretty cheap and easy way out to be hurling racist and degrading statements at another person who you do not know a thing about.

There are a lot of other ways to intimidate a person without degrading them. The problem is, you have to be creative and use your head, which is hard for some of these "college students." Sure, some of the sayings and chants are clever, and I even chuckle a bit, but more often than not, I hear complaints about the vulgarities that come out of the mouths of some people. It is embarrassing to be representing the University (which, believe it or not, is our primary function) whose image is ruined by the few who have no respect for others, either ally or opponent.

Nobody has to be ejected if they use some common sense and come to the games sober.

Oh, and by the way. Just as some think they have a special kind of power of authority by carrying a radio or a gun and a badge, others think they possess this power of authority and all-knowingness by power of the pen. A lot of people think that is funny.

Liberal prospectus: Time may be ripe for Democrats

David Broder
Washington Post Group

BROOKLYN — Alan Grossbard, a New Jersey salesman, came to visit in-laws in the Borough Park section of Brooklyn last Sunday night and found traffic stopped by a street crowd surrounding Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee. He was less than thrilled by the delay — and by the scene.

A reporter who encountered Grossbard fuming by his car caught the full blast of his frustration. After sounding off about the traffic tie-up, he turned to the people who caused it.

"I don't understand what's happened to the Democratic Party," he said. "When I started voting, I always voted for the Democrats. Can't remember when I didn't. But lately, I can't vote for the people they've been running: McGovern, Mondale and this crowd."

Why not? he was asked. "Too far left," was the curt reply.

Grossbard is not alone in finding it remarkable that four years after they lost 49 states with Walter F. Mondale, the Democrats have come down to a choice among three men as liberal as the Rev.

Jesse L. Jackson, Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis and Tennessee Sen. Al Gore.

After all, the major movement in the party after the 1984 election was an effort by its Southern and border-state officials to wrench the Democrats "back to the middle," as they put it. That movement, embodied in the Democratic Leadership Council, produced several candidates — including Rep. Richard A. Gephardt and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt. But Gore is the only one who has made it to the finals.

Some have blamed the liberal tilt of Democratic presidential politics on what they call the "Iowa syndrome," by which they mean the exaggerated influence of liberal interest groups on the small-turnout events that began the delegate-selection process.

But you can't blame Iowa for what happened this year. The top two finishers in the Iowa caucuses — Gephardt and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois — are out of the race. And the surviving candidates are the three men who did best on Super Tuesday, the 20-state contest created by the Southern and border-state moderates to assure that their party did nominate a "mainstream" candidate.

What 1988 is proving is that the "mainstream" of the Democratic Party is on the left of the national political spectrum. Dukakis, Jackson and Gore are not aberrations, any more than Mondale, Jackson and Gary Hart were "out of step" with the nation's Democrats in 1984. That is where the Democratic Party really is.

If further proof of that fact is needed, it can be found in the voting studies Congressional Quarterly and the National Journal have published in the past few weeks on the first sessions of the 100th Congress. "Interest Groups See Congress Leaning Left," CQ headlines its piece, summarizing the ratings from four major ideological, business and labor groups. National Journal's story on its own ratings for the 1987 session was titled "Shift to the Left."

Both publications documented the fact that when the Democrats captured control of the Senate in November 1986, the effect was to trip the balance of power on issue after issue to the liberal side of the spectrum. Daniel L. Casey, executive director of the American Conservative Union, surveying setbacks on everything from AIDS testing to aid to the contras, told CQ, "It was a horrible year for conservatives."

What is most striking in the analysis is the demonstration that the key shift occurred in the South, the very region that is supposed to harbor resentment at the national Democratic Party's penchant for nominating liberal presidential candidates.

The reality is that the Democratic Party in the South nominates and elects liberals.

When the states in the region want to vote conservative, they generally vote Republican.

Gore, who won his first term in the Senate in 1984 when Ronald Reagan was re-elected, had ratings 10 times as high in 1987 from the AFL-CIO and Americans for Democratic Action as he did from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States or the ACU. National Journal found him more liberal than 74 percent of the Senators on economic issues and 81 percent on foreign policy.

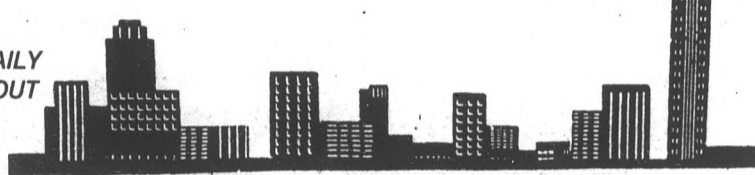

Nor was Gore out of step with the Southern Democrats whose Senate victories in 1986 were the key to the Democrats' ending six years of Republican control. As National Journal noted, "Four of the five new Southerners — John B. Breaux of Louisiana, Wyche Fowler Jr. of Georgia, Terry Sanford of North Carolina and Richard C. Shelby of Alabama — were rated higher (more liberal) on economic issues than at least 65 percent of their colleagues."

The Democrats' penchant for nominating liberal presidential candidates does not automatically translate to electoral defeat. The time will come — perhaps this year, perhaps not — when the voters are ready for a party which advocates a more activist role for government in meeting the nation's needs.

When that moment comes, the Democratic nominee will fit the mold. But in the meantime, there is no way that Democrats can remake themselves as something they are not.

ASASU members protest razing West Hall

By KENNETH WALSH
State Press

The proposed razing of West Hall to accommodate further expansion of Hayden Library would symbolize the demolition of ASU history, University Design Review Board members were told during an address by Associated Students representatives.

"By demolishing West Hall and by neglecting to look at the other interests as far as historical preservation, you're doing a disservice to our university," ASASU President Karrin Kunasek said during a Thursday meeting. "We are asking that you (the board) look at options."

Speaking during a Design Review Board meeting, Kunasek and College of Liberal Arts Sen. Patrick McWhortor presented a "position statement" on West Hall. The statement espoused the importance of preserving historical landmarks and allowing students to become involved in decisions regarding campus expansion.

West Hall was built in 1935 to serve as a women's dormitory, and it currently houses the School of Social Work.

Phase one of the $11.5 million Hayden Library Expansion, which will provide shelf space for about 375,000 books and room for 1,500 students, is slated to be completed in February 1989. West Hall will not be destroyed in the first phase, but talk about further expansion in 1991 or 1992 is underway, according to ASU Vice President of Business Affairs Victor Zafra.

Construction and University officials in the past have stated that West Hall lies directly in the path of future phases of the library expansion and must be destroyed to accommodate the project.

But Design Review Board members said Thursday that no final decisions about West Hall's fate have been made.

Kunasek and McWhortor said West Hall is a historical building worthy of saving, adding that there are other alternatives for library expansion.

"It's definitely a part of ASU's past, and that's really the reason the Arizona Historical Society has designated West Hall as historical," McWhortor said. "I support the library in this expansion, but I want the administration and this board to consider that West Hall is not a roadblock."

McWhortor said some of the alternatives the board should consider are using West Hall for storage of infrequently used materials or adding a new floor on top of Hayden Library.

Kunasek said results of last week's ASASU elections indicated that almost 90 (88.4) percent of ASU students felt that the University's expansion policies should include the preservation of historic buildings.

"If the administration chooses to ignore this statement, then they will be effectively sending a signal to the students that the administration wants to achieve its goals over those of the students," she said.

Kunasek said that in working with the president and vice president, she has heard many comments about West Hall such as, "West Hall just isn't an impressive building," and "Why would you want to keep West Hall?"

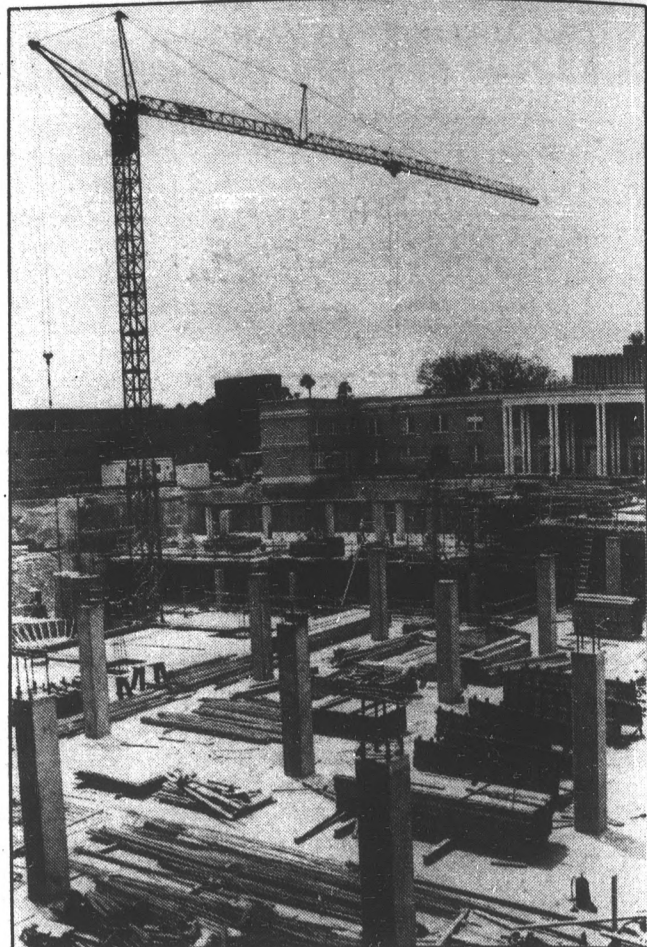

But McWhortor said, "History doesn't necessarily take place in pretty buildings. It doesn't have to look good. History is merely a record of things that happened."

"I want to come back as an alumnus to this university one day and feel that I know this campus."

Kunasek said she had come to speak to the board in hopes of starting a dialogue between the members and students to inform them about the students' concerns.

"Students are not asked to enter into any dialogue on these questions, and that's what we're here asking for today," Kunasek said.

Board members said they were "delighted" by the concern and enthusiasm of students regarding historical preservation of buildings.

Construction of the Hayden Library Expansion continues in front of West Hall. Representatives of ASASU spoke against the destruction of the building last week.

Bomb experts remove volatile chemicals from Tempe High

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

Police bomb experts on Saturday removed potentially explosive chemicals that were found in a lab at Tempe High School, police said.

The chemicals were removed after police received a call from the school, 1730 S. Mill Ave., about 4:30 p.m., police said.

police report

Police said a shipment of lab chemicals contained two bottles of picric acid that had crystalized and were considered highly explosive. Picric acid is used in dyes, medicines and explosives.

In other incidents:
•An ASU student was arrested after he was allegedly seen climbing a crane at the Architecture Annex construction site on the southwest corner of Forest Avenue and University Drive, police said.

Eric D. Gradyan was charged with second degree criminal trespassing and released on his own recognizance.

•ASU police arrested a man unaffiliated with the University on a Maricopa County sheriff's warrant for allegedly possessing narcotic drugs and dangerous drug paraphernalia.

John Tanzella was arrested and booked into the Maricopa County Jail substation in Mesa after the vehicle he was a passenger in was stopped in the Student Health Center parking lot, police said.

Police said the vehicle was stopped because Tanzella was allegedly hanging out the window with a bottle of beer.

Tanzella was also cited as a minor in possession of alcohol.

•Someone stole a silver 1979 Honda automobile from Lot 59, police said. Loss is $2,500.

•Somone stole a television set and VCR from the crew room of the MU McDonald's, police said. Loss is $550.

Wednesday named Personal Challenge Day, to honor Hudson

By TERESA OWEN
State Press

Wednesday has been designated "Personal Challenge Day" and is being held in honor of the late John W. Hudson, a blind ASU sociology professor who was killed April 2 in an automobile accident.

Associated Students Campus Affairs Vice President Vince Micone said everyone has some kind of disability, and Personal Challenge Day is designed to provide individuals with an appreciation for themselves and the challenges they face daily.

"Some people have a disability because they are in a wheelchair, and some people have a disability because they are closed-minded," Micone said.

Personal Challenge Day is sponsored by ASASU and the Personal Challenge and Action Association (PCAA) and was originated in 1985 by former ASU student Arthur Jacobs, Micone said. The day will feature many speakers and entertainers on the Student Services Building lawn, he said.

Leonard Gordon, sociology chair, will begin the day's events with a tribute to Hudson at 9 a.m.
Miss Wheelchair Arizona Susan Castle and athlete Billy

Mills will be among the speakers during the day's activities. Other speakers include David Covey, a wheelchair-bound athlete who will challenge amateur ASU tennis players in a tennis demonstration.

"They (the speakers and entertainers) will demonstrate how good we are as individuals and how we can become better," Micone said.

A banquet will follow the day's activities, Micone said. The proceeds from the banquet will go partly to disabled students and toward a scholarship in Hudson's honor.

Death in the aisle

Latest Agatha Christie film keeps appointment with disaster

By DAVE MILLER
State Press

A man of infinite wisdom said: "Let it be known. Man who invite friends to bad movie, seldom asked over afterward for chips." A haunting, yet accurate, prophesy.

I did not have chips with my friends following our screening of the film "Appointment With Death." I was not included in intelligent conversation afterward, and I was asked to pick up the bar tab.

I deserved it, of course. "Appointment With Death" may well have been the worst cinematic experience in modern memory. Anyone's memory. There were people who hadn't seen it who said they hated it. Comparisons were made to "Ishtar," the monstrous flop, except that "Appointment" wasn't on as grand a scale.

Good. A flop that knows its place. "Appointment With Death," however, knew anything but.

The true place for this Agatha Christie mystery, which opened in Valley theaters Friday, should be nestled between "King Kong I" and "II" in a video store or hidden in the "Learn Languages Fast" section (possibly between Hindu and Spartan), or in the frozen food section of a Smitty's. Anywhere would be more appropriate than in a theater.

Which, unfortunately, is where "Appointment With Death" ended up.

The nightmare begins with the film's soundtrack, which thumps a modern, sunny beat into the opening of what is supposed to be a murder mystery set in the '30s. The score could effectively back a reunion of The Brady's or Eight is Enough.

Rule number one: in a period piece, use period music!! Thanks.

Later, the score flips to an appropriate

Hercule Poirot (Peter Ustinov) and Lady Westholme (Lauren Bacall) decide to read the script for "Appointment With Death" before dinner. A bad move.

theme, but it's too late. The memory of the Top-of-the-Pops selection hangs like a cloud of room deodorizer, filming the popcorn and putting dread into each scene change.

The script is worse. As the credits roll, we discover a weird family vacationing after the death of their father. A will providing each of four children with a large sum of money has been disposed of by their psychotic mother, (Piper Laurie) and her rodent-like attorney (David Soul).

The kids are forced to hop continents with their mother hoping that she'll kick over soon — or at least shut up for an hour or two.

She has pecked her boys unmercifully, and has flushed her son Lennox's (Nicholas Guest) marriage to viper-woman Nadine (Carrie Fisher — an accurate role) down to the toilet. On top of all that, Fisher decides to make woo-woo with attorney Soul on the sly.

University bands battle aversion to avant-garde

By MATTHEW LINDENBURG
State Press

It's been called many things — from simply "band" or "concert band" or "symphonic band" to the lofty-sounding "wind ensemble" — but none of its names elicit immediate respect.

Though every major city in the United States has a professional orchestra, there are only a handful (about 10) of professional bands of the same caliber.

The concert band is basically a 20th-century construct and hasn't had enough time to build a reputation for itself as symphony orchestra.

ASU has three bands: the Concert,

Symphonic and Marching Band. Unfortunately, said ASU Band Director Richard E. Strange, people think of bands only as the group out on the grass at half-time bellowing fight songs and transcribed rock songs and motion picture themes.

"An orchestra doesn't have that problem," he says, "because orchestras, by-in-large, don't march."

Part of the problem stems from the lack of compositions written specifically for band; whereas orchestra never lacks for material, bands must search hard for their music. "Give us 200 years," Strange said, "and we'll have the same body of literature as the symphony orchestra."

Many modern composers (Aaron Copeland, for example) have demonstrated interest in the band as a new conduit for their music. Their so-called "avant-garde" music, though, is not easily accepted by standard concert-goers. Strange says that most of the listeners want to hear something familiar, not something different and challenging.

ASU's bands have exerted many efforts to counter the band's misplaced image. They have experimented with names, for instance. "We've tried simply by using the word 'symphonic' to suggest that we're inside instead of outside."

But, once inside, they must convince the serious concert audience that the band can play something worth listening to.

A good amount of the work performed by the band has been transcribed from known orchestral works; the band "covers" songs in a sense, and provides the listener with a familiar tune.

"They want," he says, "Brahms, Beethoven, Mozart — if you don't give them a good dose of that you're not going to sell the tickets. (As a result), most orchestras, including the Phoenix Symphony, spend a great part of their time playing 18th and 19th-century literature."

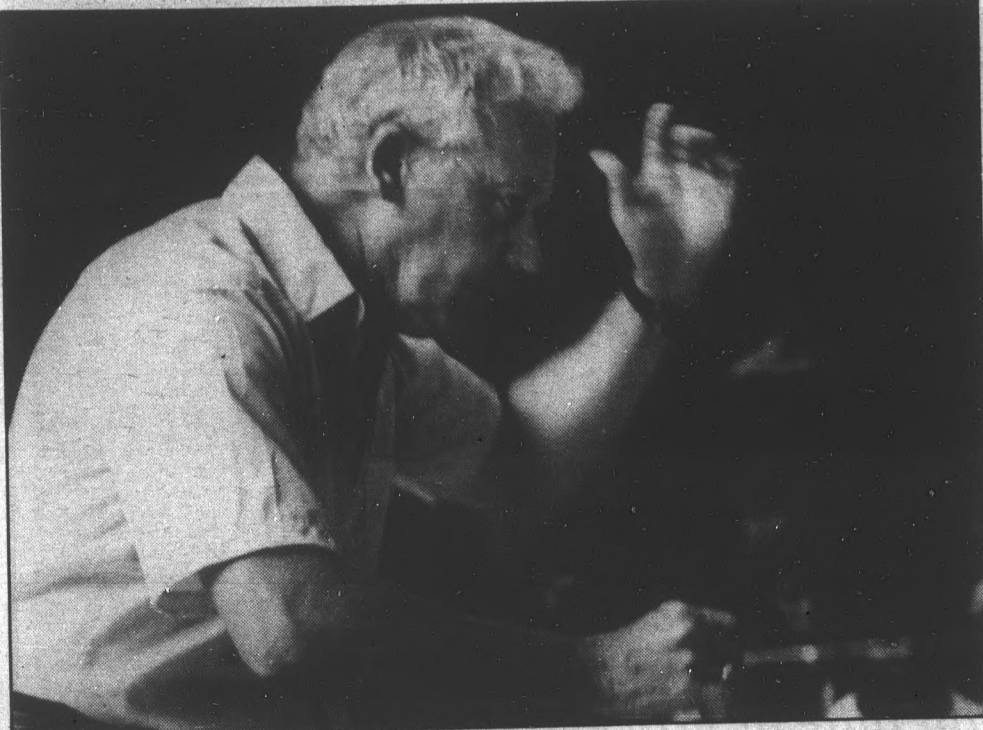

The band doesn't have that option; it never existed as a performing group at that time.

Also, it seems somehow suggested that the musicianship of the band is not as great or as serious as the musicianship of the orchestra. According to Strange, the band fits more comfortably in the park, under the gazebo; but it doesn't "suggest a serious endeavor."

It is, though, equally difficult for a musician to get into ASU's Symphonic band as it is to become a member of the school's orchestra. "We have top-caliber musicians," Strange affirmed.

This kind of ensemble's problems often seems to be a simple error in semantics. "To the uninitiated person, the word 'band' means marching band. It goes even farther than that — most people, most kids in high school, for instance, would think of a rock band. They wouldn't even think of anything symphonic."

ASU's Symphonic and Concert Bands' final concert is at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Gammage Center and will feature the work of such composers as Aaron Copeland and Ralph Vaughn Williams.

"Albert Herring," a "comic opera of virtue (or lack of it)," will mark the end of the 1987-88 Lyric Opera Theatre season when it plays Wednesday, April 20 and continues through the weekend.

The opera was the first to be written by contemporary British composer Benjamin Britten, who also wrote "Billy Budd," "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Noye's Fludd." Eric Crozier adapted the libretto from a short story by the famous French author Guy de Maupassant. Dr. Kenneth Seipp, producer and principal conductor of LOT, said "It's an ideal opera for us; it's all leads and no chorus. We like to do operas with a lot of parts so all the students get a chance."

Set in a small market town in east Suffolk, England, the comedy revolves around the characters' vices and virtues. Associate Professor Sylvia Debenport is directing "Albert Herring." She has also directed "Carmen," "Cosi Fan Tutte" and "La Bohème" for LOT.

"Albert Herring" will be performed at 8 p.m. Wednesday, and on Friday, April 22, and Saturday, April 23 in the Music Building. Tickets are $5 for students and $9.50 for the general public.

'Albert Herring' closes 1987-88 Lyric season

Death

Meanwhile Lauren Bacall shows up as yet another uptight traveler bucking for position as "Nastiest Frequent Flier." Her purpose seems to be preening and making rude hand signals at Peter Ustinov, who reprises his role as primo sleuth Hercule Poirot.

At last! An actor in a role that can't go wrong. Perhaps the title of this film doesn't refer to seven and nine o'clock showings after all.

Ustinov proves the film's only breakthrough, but even his amusing character acting can't save the film, as becomes obvious through the unraveling of the unsuspeful "mystery".

Although the film was murderous from the beginning, it took two confusing death plots and about half the movie before the actual murder materialized.

From there, we are subjected to Poirot's unending interrogation of each knucklehead suspect. He re-enacts each step, each movement and utterance, in painstaking detail. It's more painful for the audience, who has to sit and watch as Piper Laurie hisses that she "never forgets anything." Not a name, not a face, not an action," — four or five times. She's very convincing. She's also very scary.

Don't try making your own guesses as to the killer's identity. There are no logical clues identifying her (whoops), except that she has the least reason for appearing in the story — let alone remaining in it — making her the most obvious suspect. Some fun, huh?

Little else makes more sense. Sappy love scenes arise and the immense talents of Bacall, Laurie, Fisher and John Gielgud are wasted in empty roles. A fine cast is not always an excuse to appear in a film, and it's not enough to hold together a lazy script for a film seemingly thrown together in days.

It's certainly not reason enough to stay in the theater while this film spurts onto the screen.

'Gentlemen' album splashed with freight train rhythm, slammin' soul

"Those Dangerous Gentlemen"
The James Harman Band

By HOWELL J. MALHAM JR.
State Press

It takes a lot of guts these days to be white and play the blues.

It's daring enough just want to play the blues.

However, after a blasting of "The James Harman Band and Those Dangerous Gentlemen," it's refreshingly obvious that these boys are undeniably qualified to shake your soul.

If you're looking for synthesizers, drum machines and guest appearances by the Pet Shop Boys, go cuddle up next to VH-1.

Wailing harmonicas, slide guitars and a real drummer soak this welcomed debut from a group committed to being "the quintessential bar band."

Spawned from the splintered music culture of the West Coast and driven by the spirit of Carl Perkins and Elvis Presley, Harman and his "Gentlemen" have escaped banality and joined the urgent revival of the long lost sounds of rock 'n' roll's youth.

From start to finish, "Gentlemen" is a faithful messenger of tried and true rock 'n' roll, but carries with it a surprising twist of originality and a splash of freight train rhythm.

"My Baby's Gone," a simple yet shivering, mono-riffed rocker, opens a side that shifts gears at every interval.

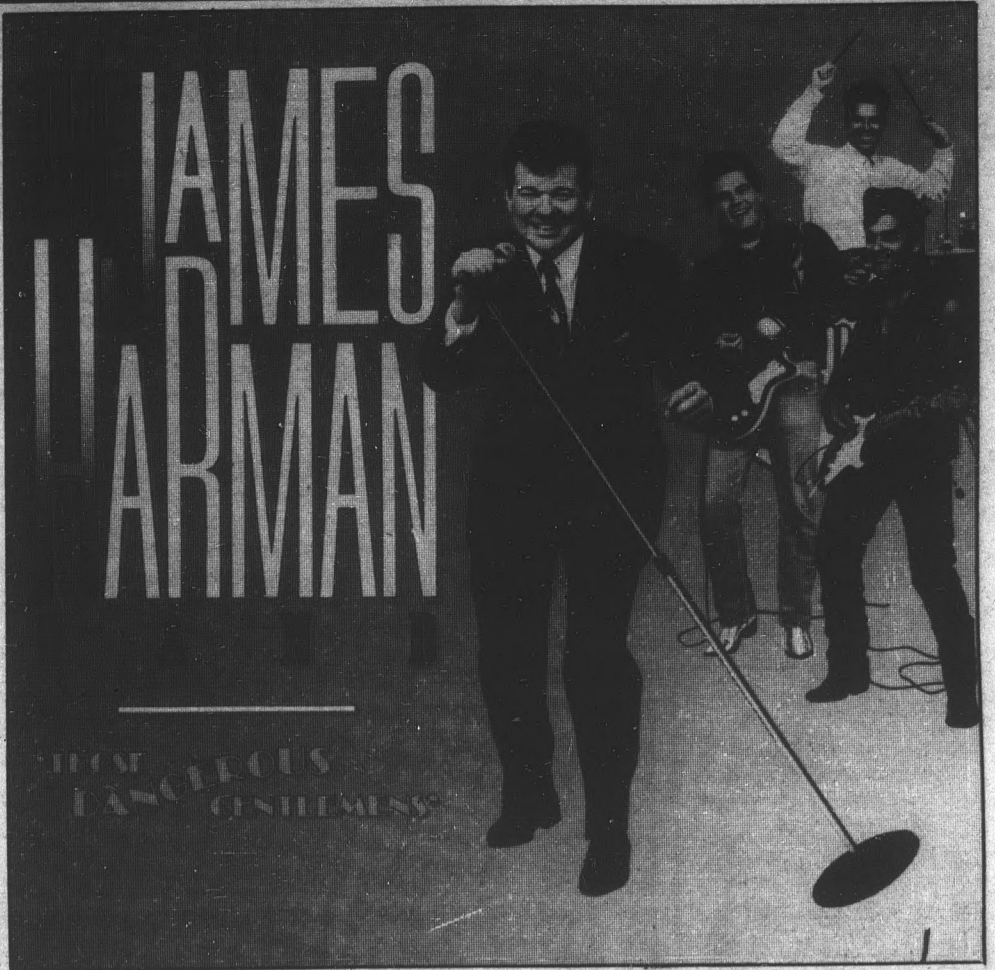

It takes you through "Find You a Love", an uplifting, Claptonish blues number, which unleashes the late Hollywood Fats (to whom the album is dedicated) and his searing guitar stimulant.

After an innocent fifties-bop number and the balmy, soft-spoken "I've Been Loving You," the side closes with Harman and company in full throttle as they tear through "Kiss of Fire," which invokes "rock and roll music with a Bo Diddley beat."

The second side wrapped up the infectious diversity of the first side with a more consistent, natural sound.

The side illustrates not only their control, but also their musical ingenuity.

Harman intentionally left the "Goatman Holler" as the final track for a purpose. This lazy railroader tune chugs along with all the grace of a steam roller and sneaks off the vinyl, signaling the end of an album, and the beginning of a new rock 'n' roll era.

Norman, teen combine to win Heritage Classic

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Greg Norman, accompanied by a gravely ill teen-ager whose wish was to watch him play, came from four shots back Sunday to score his first American victory in two years, a one-shot triumph in the Heritage Classic golf tournament.

Jamie Hutton, a 17-year-old leukemia patient whose wish it was to see Norman play, walked every step and watched every stroke as Norman emerged from a four-man scramble with a bogey-free final round of 5-under-par 66.

Hutton was given the trip to this resort island by a charitable group, Thursday's Child, which attempts to grant wishes of seriously ill youngsters.

Hutton, from Madison, Wis., sat with his idol on the player's bag beside the 18th green after he had completed play and waited for the final groups to finish.

The two sat and watched as David Frost of South Africa, the last man on the course and the only one with a chance to catch Norman on the final hole, missed a 20-foot birdie putt that would have forced a playoff.

"I just want to thank Jamie," Norman said. "He showed me inspiration and courage. He told me he wanted me to shoot 64 and win I shot a 66 and that was enough."

Starling retains WBA title after draw with Breland

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Marlon Starling and Mark Breland both thought they won. Neither of them boosted his stock.

At the end of a rather dull 12 rounds Saturday night at the Las Vegas Hilton, Starling still was the World Boxing Association welterweight champion by virtue of a draw.

"Mark (Breland) maybe won three rounds," said Starling. "Mark was never in control of the fight."

"I felt I came on in the late rounds," Breland said. "I thought I won."

Two of the three judges gave Breland three of the last four rounds and the third called the last four 2-1-1 in favor of Breland. But the 1984 Olympic champion fell just short of regaining the title he lost to Starling on an 11th-round knockout last Aug. 22.

Navratilova beats Sabatini for Bausch & Lomb title

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Martina Navratilova used a strong serve-and-volley game to defeat Gabriela Sabatini 6-0, 6-2 in just 53 minutes Sunday and win the $300,000 Bausch & Lomb Championships.

For the second-seeded Navratilova, it was her fifth straight tournament title this year and the second time in as many weeks she has defeated Sabatini in a final.

"I played well and she didn't. It's as simple as that," said Navratilova, 31, of Fort Worth, Texas.

Sabatini's performance did not match her effort in the semifinals Saturday when she rallied from a 3-0 deficit in the final set to beat top-ranked Steffi Graf of West Germany, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

"I was expecting the worst," Navratilova said. "I was thinking she'd play great and she'd be on a high from yesterday."

Farmer leads ASU to 23rd straight win

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

First place in the Pac-10 Southern Division now belongs solely to Arizona State.

The Sun Devils (43-8 overall, 14-7 in the Six-Pac) completed their fourth straight sweep of a conference opponent this weekend, taking California by scores of 6-4, 12-9, and 3-1 in Berkeley.

In recent weeks, ASU has gone from a hapless last-place team with a cloudy future to the club in control; a metamorphosis that would make the Incredible Hulk proud.

The winning streak now stands at 23, the second longest in school history behind the 1972 team's 32. The NCAA record is 34 by Texas in 1977.

On Sunday, Gordy Farmer went home and pitched possibly the most satisfying game of his ASU career.

With family and friends in the stands, Farmer (5-0) pitched eight innings, allowing one run on three hits, striking out seven and walking six as ASU completed the sweep with a 3-1 win.

"We've always been concerned," ASU coach Jim Brock said, "because Gordy is from this part of the country, and his brother went to Cal. Gordy is a little bit of an emotional guy, and we were afraid that against Cal he'd try a little too hard. I thought he pitched an absolutely miraculous game."

The Devils scored two of their three runs in the first inning. Pat Listach led off with an infield hit, and Kevin Higgins was hit by a pitch. Steve Willis then sent one through the legs of Cal shortstop Jeff Kent, scoring Listach. Dan Rumsey delivered Higgins with a base hit down the right-field line.

It was Rumsey's seventh RBI of the series, and 57th on the year, surpassing Ricky Candelari for the team lead.

In the Devil third, Kevin Higgins doubled and scored on a Steve Willis single as ASU took a 3-0 lead.

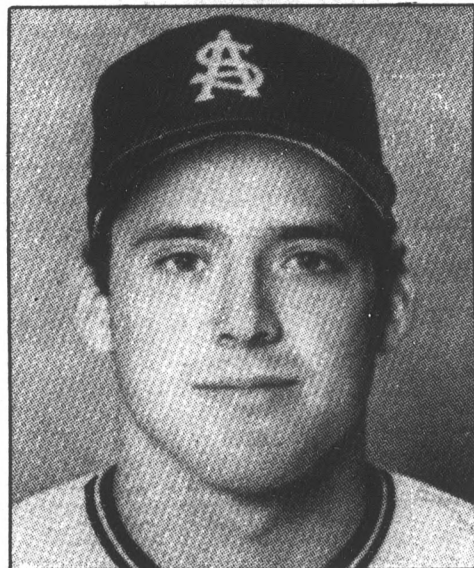

Farmer faltered in the fourth, loading the bases on a walk and two singles. He then walked Brian Scott as the Bears pushed across their only run of the game.

After giving up a base hit to lead off the Cal ninth, Farmer yielded to Blas Minor, who retired the side in order for his sixth save of the year.

"We made a lot of mental mistakes today, missed a lot of signs," Brock said. "We got away with it. In the past, we've been able to learn from that. The nice thing about this ballclub is you can get on them a little bit, indicate what went wrong, and hopefully get some things turned around before you pick up a loss."

"You're always looking for a psychological or mental edge over the other team," Brock said, "and it becomes increasingly important when you go into their park. I saw it done better today than ever."

For some reason, they do not play the national anthem before games at Berkeley. So the Devil fans provided their own version, with a lone trombone player accompanying Ernie, the omnipresent baritone known for his "Go, Devils, Go" cheer.

The rousing rendition left the Cal players, who were warming up at the time, bewildered.

"I could never give our ballclub a speech, in any situation, that would fire them up like 'hey, we just took over your ballpark.'"

Women's track team beats NAU; men lose 2

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

In a double dual meet, the ASU track team suffered narrow defeats Saturday to Arizona, 84-79, and Northern Arizona, 83-80, at Sun Angel Stadium.

ASU senior David Barlia earned a bid to the NCAA Championships with a 229-1 first-place throw in the javelin. Barlia is the first Sun Devil to qualify in that event since Eddie Williams in 1977.

"I finally got some good marks," Barlia said. "I've been looking for a good throw all season, I haven't had one yet. This one was it."

Barlia also out-distanced all competitors in the triple jump with a 50-8¼ leap. Although he took top honors in the two events, Barlia said he is hoping to better his marks during the Mt. SAC Relays this weekend at Walnut, Calif.

Sun Devil David Bickel threw the hammer 188-11 to beat all competitors, giving ASU strength in another field event.

The ASU women's team scored a victory over NAU, 80½-55½, without All-America Lynda Tolbert, who felt a slight muscle pull during warmups.

"We get a whole lot of punch from Lynda and without her we were hurt," teammate Jacinta Bartholomew said.

The 4x100-meter and 4x400-meter relay teams finished third in each event, which is usually one of the Sun Devils' strengths.

Bartholomew used a 20-10½ leap in the long jump to give her a win on her first attempt. She was scheduled to jump sixth in the rotation, but was allowed to jump second so she could run in the 4x100-meter relay.

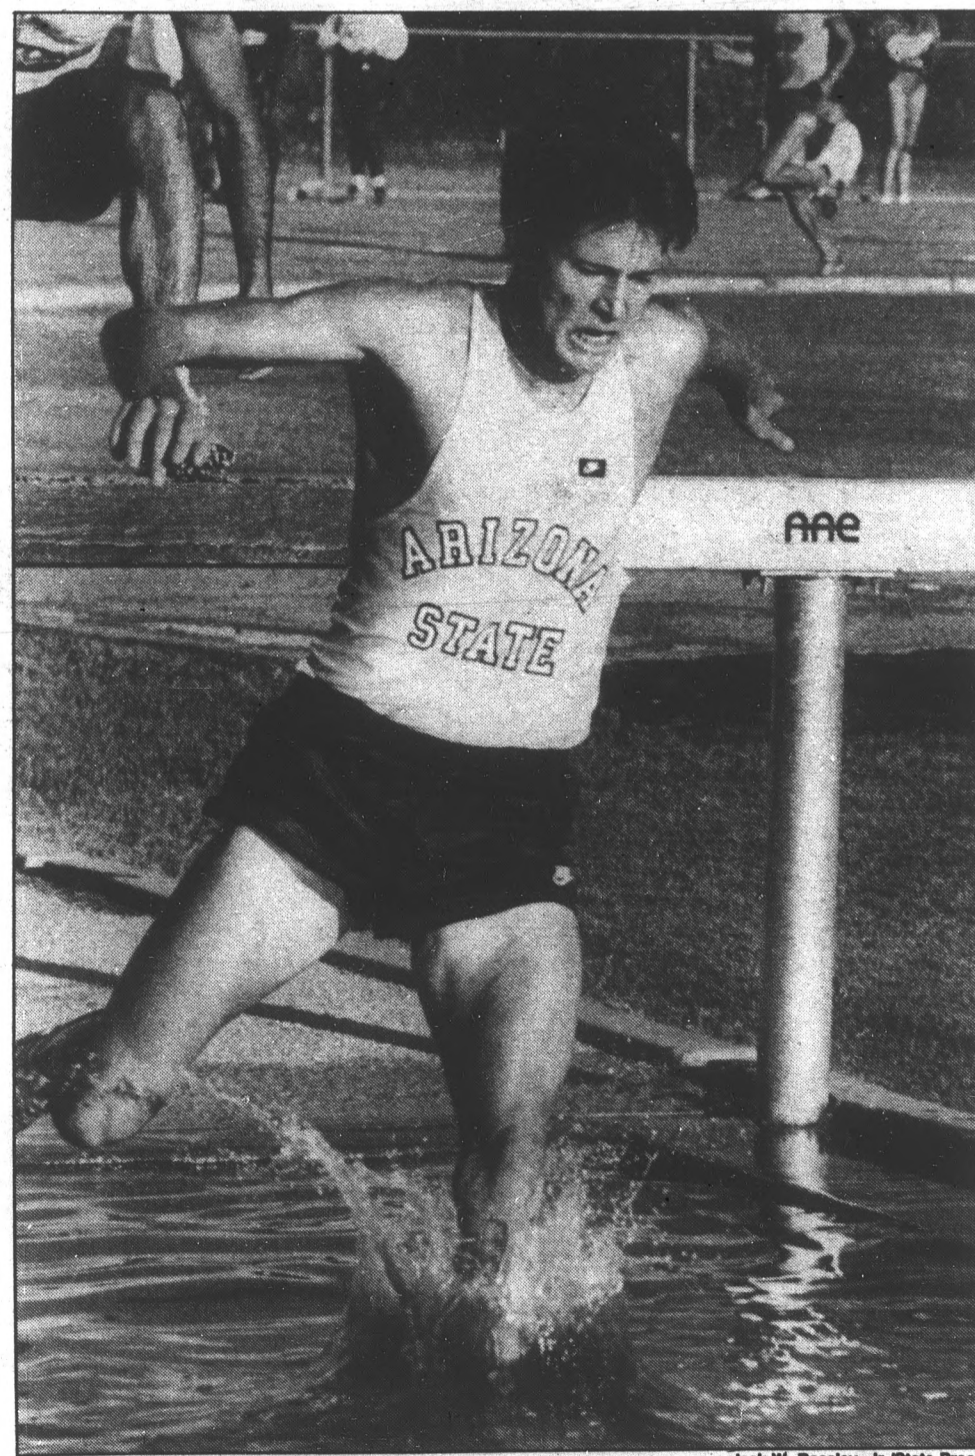

"I only had two good jumps," Bartholomew said. "I had to leave after my first jump to go to the 4x100 relay."

Bartholomew followed up her long jump victory with another first in the 200-meters, with a 23.76-second time.

"I compete in the 200 whenever I don't have to run the 4x400," she said. "I probably won't focus on the 200 until next year."

In her second week back competing with the Sun Devils, Maicel Malone won the 400-meters with a 54.46-second time. Although she produced top results, Malone said it was not an easy victory against a competitive field.

"Actually, I think the race felt hard, but it gave me a point to start from," Malone said. "It was because of the rivalry, I wasn't

Women's tennis team crushes New Mexico, 9-0

By DAVE BIGOS
State Press

The 19th-ranked ASU women's tennis team ended its season in strong fashion Sunday as it downed New Mexico, 9-0, at Whiteman Tennis Center.

The Sun Devils, 16-10, can now look forward to the Pac-10 Conference Championships Thursday through Sunday at Ojai, Calif. The tournament is the oldest in the United States and will give the Sun Devils a good opportunity to gear up for nationals.

"Ojai's great," ASU coach Sheila McInerney said. "There's no pressure on us because it's an individual tournament. It's a fun and relaxing time for the team."

In Sunday's action, 75th-ranked Jennifer Rojohn defeated 61st-ranked Chris Hoffee, 6-3, 6-0 at No. 1 singles; Laura Glitz downed Jennifer Toomy, 6-3, 6-3; Barbara Thompson defeated Inger Sanderud, 6-3, 6-4; Karen Bergan defeated Rachel Wilson, 6-3, 6-4; Kristi Jonkosky defeated Rachel Hustuttler, 6-3, 6-1; and Paola Conte took care of Susie Weiser, 6-0, 6-1.

In doubles play, Lisa Haldas, returning to the lineup after various injuries throughout the season, teamed with Rojohn to defeat Weiser and Sanderud, 6-2, 6-1. Glitz and Bergan downed Hoffee and Wilson, 6-4, 6-3, and Jonkosky and Jill Hamilton defeated Toomy and Hustuttler, 6-4, 6-0.

McInerney said the season has been a surprise, considering her squad is made up of five freshmen, two sophomores and a junior.

"No question about it," she said. "I never thought we would get this far. This team is close to the best I've ever coached and we're only going to get better down the road."

McInerney said she is looking forward to the conference finals because all the teams are so closely matched. On April 9, ASU defeated fourth-ranked UCLA, who just downed second-ranked Stanford this weekend. For the first time, all the teams in the Pac-10 are going to nationals May 11 through 19.

"We feel pretty good," McInerney said. "We can play with any of these teams (in the Pac-10). We're just going to take it one match at a time."

"At nationals, I think we'll be a little nervous, but certainly not overwhelmed. All these girls have played in national tournaments before."

The Sun Devils' match against Arizona on Friday was rained out.

Softball squad splits 2 games with Oregon St.; 2 rained out

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

The results of a two-week layoff showed Sunday afternoon when the 20th-ranked ASU softball team split a doubleheader with the Oregon State Beavers, losing 4-0 and winning 1-0.

The Sun Devils were sluggish and had a difficult time mounting an offensive attack, and could only muster 11 hits and one run on the afternoon.

The games were originally scheduled for Friday night but were postponed due to rain. Saturday night's games with Oregon will be played at noon today at Sun Devil Club Stadium.

ASU (24-17, 7-7 in Pac-10 play) was unable to score a run in the opening game. Coach Mary Littlewood's squad scattered six hits while Sun Devil starter Donna Stewart (10-8) allowed nine hits.

"We haven't played for two weeks," Littlewood said, "and I think that hurt us. We haven't spent much time hitting live pitching."

Stewart went the distance for the Devils in the first game, striking out three batters and giving up four earned runs. It marked the second straight defeat for the All-America candidate. Entering the contest, the junior touted a 0.72 ERA.

Her problems came in the sixth and seventh innings when OSU rallied with two outs. The Beavers rocked the Sun Devil right-hander for two runs and one run, respectively.

The only bright spot for ASU at the plate came in the sixth inning after loading the bases. But the hopes and wishes were spoiled after Sheila Winchell hit a pop-up to Beaver first baseman Patti Russell.

Centerfielder Yvette Baltazar, who went into the game hitting .167 (12-72), led the Devils offensively, getting two hits in three plate appearances.

In the second game, as in the first, neither team scored a run until the third inning. This time ASU came out on fire.

Rightfielder Becky Davis singled to right-center and was advanced to second on a sacrifice by Joelle Wilkerson, who laid down a textbook bunt. Then the team's leading hitter, Karen Fifeild (.319), delivered, sending the ball to right field.

Jack W. Bosley, Jr./State Press

ASU's Donna Stewart dives around Oregon State's Mary Pietrok during Sunday's doubleheader at Sun Devil Club Stadium. ASU lost the first game, 4-0, but won the second, 1-0.

Davis scored on Beaver Lisa Woods' throwing error. The run marked the first time in 17 innings that ASU had scored a run.

The lone run in the third would be all Devil pitcher Michelle Gravatt (8-3) would need for the victory. She also went the distance, giving up four hits.

But in the seventh, it looked like trouble was approaching for ASU. The Sun Devils had two outs and had two OSU players on base.

With the same player responsible for the ASU run at the plate, ASU made a perfect ending to an unperfect game. Woods struck out, giving Gravatt the victory.

Capitals demand respect as NHL's 2nd round begins

(AP) — The Washington Capitals used to be called chokers. If they win their next playoff series, they'll be known by another title — Patrick Division champions.

The Capitals open their best-of-seven series against the New Jersey Devils Monday night at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md. Washington advanced to the divisional final Saturday with a 5-4 overtime victory over Philadelphia in Game 7 of their opening-round series.

The Capitals, who had been haunted by past playoff failures, became only the fifth team in NHL history to overcome a 3-1 deficit in the playoffs.

The Adams Division final also opens Monday night, with Montreal hosting Boston. On Tuesday night, it's St. Louis at Detroit in the Norris and Edmonton at Calgary in the Smythe.

The Devils' high-scoring line of Pat Verbeek, Kirk Muller and Aaron Broten was kept in check by the Islanders, but Washington defenseman Scott Stevens said the line is "one of the best in hockey."

If history is any guide, the Canadiens will beat the Bruins in the Adams final. The last 18 times the teams have met in the playoffs, Montreal has won the series. In three of the last four, the Bruins have failed to win a game.

But Boston enters the series in better physical shape than the Canadiens, who must play Game 1 without left wing Mats Naslund and center Shayne Corson, who are out with strained knee ligaments. Montreal left wing Bob Gainey is bothered by a tender ankle, but he is expected to play Monday night.

Detroit and St. Louis have met only once before in the NHL playoffs, with the Blues winning that 1984 series.

The Edmonton-Calgary series features one of the NHL's hottest rivalries. The Oilers won playoff series from Calgary in 1983 and 1984, but the Flames came back to eliminate the Oilers in 1986 and halt their bid for a third straight Stanley Cup.

going to settle for anything less than a good performance." Laura LaMena, whose strength is the 10,000-meters, took first-place honors in the 3,000-meters.

"It was an easy win for me, I didn't have to push to hard to do it," LaMena said. "It's really not my race."

Lennon Gardener (38-7½) and Jackie Belzner (37-1½) finished first and second, respectively, in the triple jump.

The Sun Devil men proved their dominance in the sprinting events, with top scores over the other Arizona schools.

All-America Gordon Bugg took first in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles with a 50.90-second time.

In the 400, Chip Rish topped all times in his 46.48-second run.

Mark Boyd (14.13 seconds) and James Liddell (14.25) finished first and second, respectively, in the 110-meter high hurdles.

Although UofA traditionally sports the most strength in distance running, ASU provided competition in the events.

Senior Jeff Smith (3:48.0) came within .01 seconds of taking first-place honors in the 1,500 meters.

Freshman Todd Lewis, who competed in the steeplechase for the second time, improved his time by 19 seconds to finish fourth.

"I had my technique down and had a little more experience under my belt," Lewis said.

TOO BAD SHE DIDN'T KNOW WHAT TO DO.

Too bad she didn't know that 9 out of 10 sexually active women, not using contraception, will be pregnant by the end of one year.*

That includes those who thought it was a "safe" time of the month, who didn't want to ruin the moment, didn't want to see a doctor.

And those relying on the effectiveness of a last minute prayer.

If you could imagine a method of contraception without the interruption of the diaphragm, the mandatory office visit required by the Pill, and the mess of some other methods, you might be able to imagine using it. Consistently.

The Today® Contraceptive Sponge. The safe, effective, over-the-counter contraceptive that doesn't get in the way of your love life.

Use it. Because birth control is more than just a really good idea. It's a fact of life.
