Officials given Cards tickets worth $10,000

(AP) — The Tempe City Council and several key city officials have received $10,000 worth of Phoenix Cardinals tickets in exchange for the National Football League team's use of a city-owned parking lot west of Sun Devil Stadium.

Cardinals ticket manager Steve Walsh said the team needed the lot so members of the media and team officials would have a place to park.

The city took 20 tickets valued at $10,000 in return for use of the lot, Walsh said.

"I called Jerry Geiger (Tempe's Deputy City Manger) about using that lot because ASU told us we would need it for parking," Walsh said. "It was something we desperately needed. Who is using the tickets, I don't know. But at the time it seemed easier to make the swap than have both sides cut checks."

City Attorney Dave Merkel said in his opinion the exchange is not illegal.

However, he declined to comment on whether the arrangement for the 50-yard-line seats has the appearance of impropriety.

"There is no prohibition against that sort of thing," Merkel said.

Geiger said the council authorized the purchase of Cardinals tickets to entertain visiting dignitaries from Tempe's sister cities or to socialize with business owners who

Teacher salaries to top Faculty Senate agenda

Kristin Valentine

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

Teacher salaries top the list of priorities for the ASU Faculty Senate's 1988-89 agenda, according to its new president, Kristin Valentine.

The group's first monthly meeting is Sept. 19.

Despite a 3.5 percent increase in wages last fiscal year for all state employees, including all state university professors, Valentine said the rate of inflation is higher than the pay raises given to University teachers.

"It really isn't a raise," Valentine said. "We have lost buying power, so we have a decrease in money each year."

Valentine, who began her one-year tenure as Faculty Senate president June 1, said that because more money is taken out of paychecks for retirement and health insurance, the state-granted pay raise comes to 1.6 percent. The rate of inflation is about 4 percent.

If the coming state legislature does not agree to give Arizona's three universities more money, it will lead to less pay for fewer professors, who will end up teaching in crowded classrooms, Valentine said.

The average annual income for an incoming associate professor is $26,000 per year. There were 1,600 full- and part-time teaching faculty at ASU as of April 1988.

"I think (the Legislature) has to decide how important education is," she said. "If you've got classrooms in which ... you can't see the blackboard, or you can barely see the professor ... then what are we doing to (students') future?"

The 149-member Faculty Senate is the faculty's representative body made up of representatives from each college. It acts as an advisory body to the ASU administration and Arizona Board of Regents on University policy.

Valentine, who succeeds Michael Nielsen as the body's president, has her own personal agenda for the University.

Valentine won a representative seat in the senate in 1976. She is originally from Michigan and speaks Spanish. She said that the ASU faculty has to "wrap around the students" in the first week of a semester by learning students' names and taking roll call so that the "students will have a feeling that they matter."

Also, in order to retain minority students, she urges faculty to bring cultural diversity to the classroom by using ethnic figures in their teachings.

"(Ethnic) students will feel as though their people are being represented," she said.

Valentine also said professors should use their research in their courses.

"This place is very receptive to faculty government, unlike other institutions," Valentine said. "The more the faculty feels as part of what's going on and can make the changes that it sees necessary, the better it is for the students."

Nelson reviewing report on day-care

By ROBIE KAKONGE
State Press

A report that calls for improved day-care for student commuters' children is being reviewed by the president's office and is due to be released soon, according to Janet Steinkamp, the new program coordinator for commuter students.

Steinkamp said an improved program will not only meet the needs of students, but also the needs of faculty and staff.

The report was prompted after an ASU commuter student's 18-month-old daughter died this summer because the infant was allegedly mistreated by the only babysitter she could afford.

Christine Buffone died in July after suffering massive internal injuries which had been caused over a period of time. Carol Buffone, the child's mother, is an ASU freshman engineering major who also works as secretary at the University.

Richard "Ricky" Mellem, the child's babysitter, was arrested in connection with the death. He is scheduled to go on trial this fall.

"What happened to the baby is really sad. If something like that happens at ASU, then we need to make changes because the program we have now is too limited and does not meet the needs of everyone on this campus," Steinkamp said.

"The current program has 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. hours, so where does this leave the students who work at night? And why would a part time student want to have their child in the program full-time?"

Steinkamp said that after the report is reviewed by the president's office, a University-wide task force will be formed in an attempt to make the current day care program benefit more people at ASU.

Quayle denies Guard misconduct; former lobbyist says they 'flirted'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle, Tuesday denounced as "outrageous" new allegations about his entry into the National Guard and his involvement with a woman lobbyist.

Quayle, preparing for his first solo campaign trip, said voters "want to know about the issues. They are not interested in a bunch of rumor and gossip and half truths and . . . outright lies."

"This is just getting a little bit outrageous, and I'm getting a little bit indignant about just one bum rap after another," Quayle told reporters outside his home in McLean, Va.

Quayle denied using his family's influence to get into the Indiana National Guard during the Vietnam War.

"There was no influence used," Quayle said. "I didn't have to use any influence because before I applied there were openings, when I applied there were openings and after I applied there were openings."

But a retired Indiana Guard official acknowledged Tuesday that he asked the Guard personnel office to hold open a space for Quayle after receiving a call from a Quayle family employee in 1969.

Retired Major Gen. Alfred Ahner, former military support officer for Indiana and later head of the state's National Guard, said he was contacted by an old friend, Wendell Phillippi, a retired Guard commander who then worked for a newspaper owned by Quayle's family.

"Wendell Phillippi had called and said he had a good man and said he thought he'd make a good Guardsman," Ahner said in a telephone interview from Indiana. "That's when I went over to personnel. . . . I asked if they had any spaces for a good man."

"They said they had a couple spaces. I said hold one of them, there's a good guy coming over."

Meanwhile, Playboy magazine released an excerpt from an article in its forthcoming November issue in which one-time lobbyist Paula Parkinson said that Quayle once propositioned her, but she rebuffed him.

She said in the article that she and Quayle hadn't actually slept together during a 1980 golfing vacation in Florida, but: "We flirted a lot and danced extremely close and suggestively. He said he wanted to make love."

Quayle, who has been married since 1972, denounced the newspaper report.

"That is just an absolute, flat-out falsehood," he said. "I had nothing to do with her down there. I had nothing to do with her before, and I had nothing to do with her afterwards. I think y'all are going to have to be a little bit careful about this, because it's totally untrue. I've got a wife and three small children, and I hope there's some respect and dignity for things I did not do, before we go rushing off with all these so-called rumors."

Police begin earthquake recovery; death toll rises in India and Nepal

DHARAN, Nepal (AP) — Police bulldozed teetering houses Tuesday to keep people from returning to homes left unsafe by an earthquake that killed at least 731 people in India and Nepal.

Officials in both countries expected the death toll to rise as relief workers reached remote towns that have been inaccessible since Sunday's devastating quake.

Some roads were flooded by heavy rains that continued Tuesday, while others had 3-foot-deep cracks or were blocked by boulders the size of houses in the Himalayan mountains and valleys.

At least 531 people were killed in Nepal, said Tek Bahadur Thapa, additional secretary in the Home Affairs Ministry.

Prime Minister Marich Man Singh Shrestha visited Dharan, one of the hardest-hit towns, and surveyed heaps of bricks that were once three-story and five-story houses.

"This is the biggest calamity to strike Nepal," Shrestha said as he toured the town.

India reported an official death toll of 200, but the figure was disputed by news media and opposition politicians who put the Indian death count at anywhere from 400 to 1,500.

In Darbhanga, India on Tuesday, worshippers offered sweets, milk and coconuts to appease the Hindu god of destruction. Women dressed in colorful saris gathered at countryside temples in the quake-ravaged areas of eastern Bihar state to pray and present their offerings to Lord Shiva, the god of destruction in the Hindu trinity.

"If God is pleased, nothing will happen," said one woman, who declined to give her name.

The earthquake, which struck shortly before daybreak Sunday when most people were still asleep, registered 6.5 on the Richter scale. It was the deadliest quake in the region since 1950 when a temblor in the east Indian state of Assam killed 1,500 by official count and 30,000 by seismologists' accounts.

Reagan signs landmark trade bill, blasts 'third-string' Democrats

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan wooed blue-collar and conservative votes for Vice President George Bush on Tuesday, signing a landmark trade bill and deriding the Democratic presidential ticket as "third-stringers" playing a "curveball campaign."

In two Southern California appearances — a bill signing ceremony on a pier in Long Beach and a GOP fundraiser in conservative Orange County — the president touted the economic advances of his term and proclaimed Bush the man to carry his legacy forward.

He did not mention the record $170 billion trade deficit in 1987 that helped propel this version of the measure through Congress, nor its primary sponsor, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, who is paired with Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis against Bush and Quayle.

"We're here to sign a piece of legislation that will help our economy continue to grow and compete," Reagan told hundreds of dock workers and politicians as he spoke before a huge container ship in Long Beach, one of the world's 10 busiest computerized cargo ports.

The bill he signed — so thick he joked he couldn't pick it up — is seen as a landmark bipartisan attempt to deal with the nation's trade woes.

The bill is designed to battle the trade deficit by streamlining machinery for imposing import curbs, which would retaliate against international trade violations.

It expands job training for workers left unemployed by import competition and strengthens the administration's hand in the current round of world trade talks. It also repeals the windfall profits tax on oil and imposes sanctions against two foreign companies linked to sale of submarine-silencing equipment to the Soviet Union.

In remarks at a $500-a-plate luncheon in Irvine to boost the re-election campaign of Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., Reagan held to his theme of crediting Bush with helping paint the economy's rosy glow.

"Vice President Bush and I . . . have given America the longest peacetime expansion on record, the country has created over 17.5 million new jobs, inflation is low and employment is at an all time high," he told the 800 to 900 Republican loyalists.

"If our opponents are elected, this era of record prosperity will be over — but I've got news for the liberals: it's not going to happen," he said.

Indian School swap would rival sale of Manhattan

David Jordan
Columnist

Let me tell you about one of the most amazing swindles in years.

The scene is the Indian High School in downtown Phoenix. The cast of characters involves powerful and wealthy developers in Phoenix and in Naples, Fla., U.S. Congress (particularly Arizona's legislative delegation), certain coalitions and political action committees and a small group of Native Americans.

The curtain opens on the Indian High School which in three years would have celebrated its 100th birthday.

During the last century this school has served the noble cause of being one of the state's foremost secondary education institutions specifically oriented toward the needs of Arizona's substantial Indian population.

The U.S. Legislature, which in the past has taken delight in ranking Native Americans right after the Pop-Tart lobby in importance, has reaffirmed their general disregard for the needs of Indians by opting to close the school.

Actually this isn't surprising since the collective lust of Phoenix developers for this choice downtown address resembles a feeding frenzy in shark infested waters.

What is surprising is that the U.S. Legislature, always the paragon of wisdom, is trading a piece of property that insiders have estimated is worth up to $250 million for Florida swamp land.

Therein lies the swindle.

The swindle has been orchestrated by none other than our representatives in Congress. Mo Udall, who had the best chance to stop the proposal, actually has fully endorsed it. Jon Kyl, not only endorsed the proposal but also berated his constituents for daring to think that Phoenixians should have any say in the disposition of Phoenix property. Kolbe and Stump similarly rubber stamped the swindle.

Jay Rhodes has been oblivious to everything that has happened in Arizona for years and quietly decided that now was not the time to change course.

Although the issue has yet to pass the Senate, all indications point to the fact that there should be little opposition, from Arizona's senators or from anyone else. Deconcini has not opposed it, and McCain, the Perennial PAC-man of Politics, is in hock to so many political action committees that he is likely to give the relatively poorer (and often Democratic) Native Americans little more than a patronizing speech. (Maybe if they are lucky he'll tell them the flag story for the ten-thousandth time.)

The truth is, almost everyone wants to do something with the property and very few give a hang what the Indians think. The Baron Collier family (the swampland owners) desperately want to get their talons on it. Phoenix Mayor Terry Goddard wants to turn it into a city park. The Phoenix Indian High School Property Preservation Coalition wants to open a High Tech Center and a Convention Center on the property.

Only the 100-or-so students and the faculty and staff of the Indian High School still maintain the seemingly quixotic dream that this area could be used for education.

In the end two things doomed the high school. The first is that it committed the heinous crime of resting on property that has become extremely valuable. The second is that the Papago tribe sold out by signing an agreement which allowed the Federal Government to close the high school if they would build a high school on the Papago reservation.

John McCain

While this arrangement will serve the needs of the Papago, it leaves students from other smaller tribes with nowhere to go. In the end they will probably have to go to boarding schools in California or New Mexico.

Only in a politically loony year such as 1988 could such a swindle be pulled off. Tragically, few appear ready to try to stop the proposal. Our representatives seemed determined to allow the Florida swampland owners to rule the day. It is nearly useless to hope that congressmen from other states will stand in their way.

"The U.S. Legislature, which in the past has taken delight in ranking Native Americans right after the Pop-Tart lobby in importance, has reaffirmed their general disregard for the needs of Indians..."

The swindle was pulled off with such finesse that now it is unlikely that anyone will be able to stop it. The Senate will not consider the issue for at least another nine months but conventional wisdom now suggests that the so-called "land swap" is a done deed. Deconcini has remained quiet and McCain is far more concerned with his presidential prospects in 1992 than he is with a handful of Native Americans.

What the Florida landowners will do with the property is anyone's guess. Considering its location, it's an easy guess that this property will soon be the location of mighty buildings of steel and glass. (Perhaps President J. Russell Nelson can suggest a good architect.)

One thing seems certain, however.

The curtain is falling on the Phoenix Indian High School.

Righteous indignation

Editor:

As of the time I write this, I have gathered over 100 signatures on a petition urging a boycott of the theaters showing the film "The Last Temptation of Christ."

No, I haven't seen the movie, but the recent Time cover story makes me feel justified in my indignation over the film's portrayal of the Son of God as a weak and pitiful creature.

The media and the usual liberal pressure groups seem quite perplexed at the "Fundamentalist outrage" over the film. What a curious reversal! In the past it has been the "Forces of Progress" which have cornered the market on indignation.

But not in this case. Tom Pollock, an executive of MCA — which owns the company which produced the picture — has asked us to "make (the film) available to the American people and allow them to draw their own conclusions, based on fact not fallacy." It is almost as if the Ayatollah Khomeini had asked us to calmly weigh the merits and shortcomings of the Equal Rights Amendment.

When was the last time so many conservatives banded together in such a display of indignation, and more progressive souls asked us to "draw (our) own conclusions, based on fact not fallacy"? Traditionally, being on the wrong side of whatever happens to be the current cause du jour has made one the target of the kind of vitriol that made Joe McCarthy a pariah.

If you don't believe student funds should be set aside for the LGAU, you believe ipso facto that homosexuals should be loaded into cattle cars and shipped to the North Slope of Alaska.

If you dissent from one jot of the agenda of the NAACP, you want to revive slavery.

There is no difference between what America did in Vietnam and what Hitler did in Poland; the Beast of Belsen was recently ousted as governor of Arizona. It all becomes rather tiresome.

A little indignation, as expressed in the Declaration of Independence and the civil rights marches of the 1960s, is healthy now and then. What exasperates is when it ceases to be a legitimate petition for the redress of grievances and becomes an end to itself.

The indignation of Christians regarding the "Last Temptation of Christ" is a response to the attitude that the First Amendment and religious tolerance are ends in themselves and not means to the end of a good and moral society.

Jews rightfully seek to prosecute those who paint swastikas on synagogues; blacks do likewise to those who burn crosses on their lawns. No one thinks it the least bit odd that these groups seek restitution for such affronts to their dignity. Why should it seem strange that Christians should mobilize, if you will, against such a frontal assault on the very core of their faith as "The Last Temptation of Christ"?

No thru traffic

Editor:

As you must have noticed by now, the campus is torn up by ambitious construction projects that limit pedestrian access to narrow traffic corridors. Bicycle travel is a ticketable offense on many of the campus malls and skateboard transportation has been banned on campus. While we are fooled into accepting these inconveniences and restrictions, there are others who move about freely on this campus forcing us to yield our walkway space. They are the many motorized vehicles which operate on this campus.

The first day of class, I witnessed as several students were forced to yield their crowded walkway to a motorized cart bearing the markings of the Marriot

Corporation. This scene generated in me an ire comparable to a slap in the face. We have been regulated into submission while operators of motorized vehicles, often bearing the logos of profit-motivated corporations, have the assumed right to dislodge us from our much restricted walkways with their incessant buzzers.

The facts are clear, and so too our action must be clear. Students are well within their rights not to yield to these vehicles. The next time you hear a vehicle approaching, you have a decision to make: will you yield your rights or not? It is a decision as personal as your own freedoms.

Quayle turned chicken . . . winds up sitting duck

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

If it's not too late, the Republicans ought to add another plank to their party platform. It should read something like this:

"We believe in a strong military and are dedicated to stopping the spread of communism. We believe that if the circumstances become sufficiently grave, we should commit troops to this purpose, as we did in Grenada.

"However, there should be certain exceptions.

"We do not believe the son of a rich and prominent Republican should be required to take part in such dangerous military activities if he doesn't want to."

That would be appropriate, based on what I'm hearing Republicans say about J. Danforth Quayle.

It's now obvious that J. Danforth dodged the draft during the Vietnam War.

His induction number came up in 1969, right after he barely squeaked through college. But he avoided the Army through clout.

A former top executive in his family's newspaper empire has admitted he pulled strings to get J. Danforth into the Indiana National Guard. And a former commander of the Guard says there was a waiting list at that time.

Sure there was a waiting list. Thousands of young men across the country were trying to avoid being drafted. And the most respectable way to do this was to get into a National Guard unit. That way, they wouldn't have the stigma of running off to Canada or Sweden. Or, as some young men did, staying here, refusing to go and going to prison.

But by 1969, only a relatively few young men could get into the National Guard. In general, only those with clout made it: sons of politicians, professional athletes and others with power and influence. This was the ideal form of draft-dodging. You could go on with your life, your education, your career, not be separated from your loved ones and still duck the Viet Cong.

But to listen to the hypocrites at the Republican Convention defend Quayle, you bunk. It was draft-dodging pure and simple.

First, anybody who joined the National Guard in 1969 did so to stay out of Vietnam. And saying that is no insult to guardsmen who were called up and fought and died in other wars.

What makes their cop-out for Quayle even more hollow is the fact that the convention hall was loaded with former Vietnam hawks.

indignantly said: "Why single out Dan Quayle? Others did the same thing."

Right. It was a national disgrace. But most of the others weren't dodging Vietnam while supporting the war. Most of the others haven't built political careers by being gung-ho tough guys.

And none are running for vice president of the United States. Fancy that — a war wimp only a heartbeat away from being commander-in-chief of our military.

All those flag-waving Republicans are shaking their heads in wonderment that anybody sees the slightest impropriety in what J. Danforth Quayle did.

That's why I prefer talking to someone like Bill Fitzgerald, 43, a sergeant on the Joliet Police Force, ex-marine, Vietnam vet, bearer of a few shrapnel scars. Here's how Fitzgerald sees Quayle:

"He shouldn't be so aloof when people ask him why he went in the guard. He should just say someone pulled strings. Anyone my age can tell you that the only way you could get in was by pulling strings.

"He's insulting our intelligence. He should stand up and tell the truth. He should say: 'I didn't want to go, and Mummy and Daddy helped get me out.'"

And I'd rather listen to Robert Leo Jefferson, 40, of Wilmington, Del.:

"I'm a college grad. from Temple. But I went in the Marines. Some of us college boys went. I survived. My best friend was next to me when he got a grenade. Nothing left of him.

"What bothers me about Quayle is that he's one of those hawks who'd talk about sending us there, but he didn't go. I have no problem with people who were opposed to the war and were consistent. But for a guy to talk so bellicose, and then say he joined the Guard, that's hypocritical."

One final thought. When J. Danforth's draft number came up, somebody else had to go in his place. I wonder who that young man was? And what happened to him?

And I wonder how much clout his family had?

would think he's another Audie Murphy.

One politician said that he doesn't understand what the fuss is about since Quayle simply made a decision as to which branch of the military he wished to join.

Another said that criticism of Quayle is an insult to the honor of the National Guard and the many guardsmen who have died for their country.

Gentlemen and ladies, please, cut the

There were people in that hall who once ranted about the peaceniks and the draft resisters. I'm referring, of course, to the above-board draft resisters — not those who used family fortunes and influence to do their resisting for them.

But now they are charitable toward J. Danforth, who got the same draft-dodging benefits while staying home.

And there were people in that hall who might want to relocate to the city.

Rather than have the 20 tickets sitting around at City Hall, it was decided it would be better to assign the tickets to individuals and, if they were needed for entertaining specific individuals, ask for them back, Geiger said.

Mayor Harry Mitchell was given four tickets, the other seven council members were given two each, City Manager Terry Zerke has two tickets and Geiger has two. "In my mind, it would be damned embarrassing for the city of Tempe to have the Cardinals playing here and tickets not available to the city for dignitaries and others," Geiger said.

Screaming children preach, 'repent or you'll go to hell!'

MARION, N.C. (AP) — The preaching children who frequently were suspended from school last year for screaming Bible verses rather than enter class stayed home today while representatives of their parents and the school held a meeting.

Dan Rodden, president of the Chicago-based Caleb Campaign, a nonprofit Christian civil rights organization which has agreed to intercede on behalf of the Strode family, said the two sides were trying to work out a solution.

Duffey, Matthew and Pepper Strode's first day of school Monday at Eastfield Elementary lasted less than a minute, and Duffey was suspended again.

At the school gate, Duffey, 11, and Matthew, 6, began to shout Bible verses and Pepper, 7, yelled "Repent."

"We were there to welcome them to school," Eastfield Principal Jim Gorst said. "Duffey stuck his Bible in my face and he said 'You go to hell.'"

"I have trouble when a child says that to an adult and an authority figure."

All three children were suspended repeatedly last spring when they stood behind the school screaming Bible verses and refused to enter the building when asked. Their favorite verse is Hebrews 13:4: "Marriage is honorable in all and the bed undefiled. But whoremongers and fornicators God will judge."

Parents of other Eastfield children are angry.

"I think it's going to get worse," Linda Vaughn, whose two children attend Eastfield, said. "He ain't got no right to call our kids whores and whoremongers. That little stupid brat. I ain't seen no whores over here."

The school system "has basically violated these people's civil rights," Rodden said. "Although their methods are offensive to many people, I think the school system has overreacted."

"We have an attorney who is working on this case and we're paying their legal fees. We're not trying to bring a lawsuit, although we will if we have to."

McDowell Schools Superintendent David Ricketts responded: "I'm ready. Let 'er rip. I've had it with this thing. It's getting on my nerves."

Ricketts on Friday notified the children's parents, David and Robin Strode, that they would be barred from the school grounds Monday morning.

So the Strodes brought Duffey, Matthew and Pepper to the school gate where friends Barry and Dianna Weaver were to escort the children to the front door.

At the gate, Gorst told the Weavers they wouldn't be allowed on the school grounds and that he and Ricketts would take the children to class.

A McDowell County sheriff's deputy approached. Duffey held Matthew's hand and Pepper began to cry.

Duffey says he turned to Gorst and said: "You'll go to hell."

"That's it," Ricketts said. "You're suspended."

Gorst said Duffey told him: "You go to hell."

Duffey was suspended for 10 days for disruptive and disrespectful behavior, Shirley Ramsey said, the assistant principal at Eastfield Elementary. She warned that a long-term suspension that could last the entire school year "can be enacted at any point."

"Because they don't give you new music ..."

Forum brings state university students together

By SHERI JOHNSON
State Press

ASASU, ASA, BOR: In the state's university system, acronyms are a way of life.

ASASU is short for Associated Students of ASU, the University's student governing body. BOR is the acronym for the Arizona Board of Regents. But what is ASA?

It's the handle that's often confused with ASASU, the better-known group. ASA is short for Arizona Students Association, a non-profit organization that acts as an advocate for students at the state legislature, the Board of Regents and the state's three universities.

ASA includes the student body presidents from the three universities, two delegates from each school, the student regent and an executive director.

Brad Golich, ASA's executive director, is a 24-year-old 1987 ASU graduate with a bachelor's degree in finance.

The organization is funded by student government dollars which come from each of the universities, and its budget is approved each year by the regents, Golich said.

"This is a great indicator to students that the Board of Regents cares about student opinion," he said, adding that his group has a good relationship with the board.

Golich, who has been director since June, said that after student issues are discussed by his organization, a vote is taken, and a plan of action is formed.

ASA plans to lobby the legislature this session for a student regent vote and the passing of House Bill 2395, Golich said.

The bill calls for the state legislature to match any funds raised by an increase in college tuition and immediately offer 50 percent of the money to students needing financial aid.

The remaining 50 percent would be put in a trust fund, and eventually the interest earned on the fund would be offered as financial aid to students.

Golich said that in addition to lobbying the Legislature, the group plans to write letters to general election candidates for city and state government posts asking their views on student issues.

In order to get students more involved in choosing elected officials, ASA has launched a "Save 88" campaign encouraging students to register and vote.

"It is so important this year above all others," he said. "Students need to be aware of educational issues."

"We live in all their districts," he said. "We have to make the legislators feel we are important."

Mecham sends out letter requesting aid to pay legal fees

PHOENIX (AP) — Former Gov. Evan Mecham is back on the fundraising trail, this time with a letter seeking financial help in defending a civil suit over ownership of his "protocol fund."

The letter, mailed last week to the 687 people who bought tickets to the January 1987 inaugural ball, said that any aid in paying his fees would be "greatly appreciated."

The former governor said he has incurred more than $13,000 in legal fees so far in the protocol suit, on top of the $550,000 in fees for his defense in the impeachment and criminal trials.

The inaugural fund receipts were converted to a protocol fund in a June 1987 agreement with the Maricopa County Attorney's Office after questions were raised on whether the inaugural funds could legally be used to pay off Mecham's campaign debt.

Attorney General Bob Corbin filed suit on the state's behalf against Mecham on Aug. 11, asking that he be forced to turn the $80,000 remaining in the fund over to the state. Mecham instead mailed 687 checks to return the money to the original contributors.

But Valley National Bank, also a defendant in the suit, decided not to pay on the checks until a court orders it what to do.

In the new letter, Mecham said, "I never knew that this bank was such a dangerous place to keep an account."

He advised the contributors to keep their checks until the court suit is settled. In addition, he said they will soon be asked to fill out an affidavit stating how they had intended the money to be used when they bought tickets to the inaugural ball.

In the letter, Mecham said the "real reasons" behind the lawsuit by Corbin and Gov. Rose Mofford were that if the fund is proven to be private money, "the Senate will be shown to be clearly in error for convicting me on the impeachment count of 'misusing state funds.'"

The former governor was removed from office April 4 when he was convicted of loaning $80,000 from the fund to his auto dealership and of trying to thwart an investigation of an alleged death threat.

He was acquitted in criminal court on a third charge of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

Students must show proof of rubeola immunization to register

By MICHELLE ALLMAN
State Press

Incoming ASU students risk losing spring semester classes if they are not immunized against rubeola, an extremely contagious form of measles, within three to six months after registering.

ASU's fall 1988 student handbook states that "all students born on or after Jan. 1, 1957, must provide documentation of immunization or immunity to (rubeola) prior to registration. Any student who fails to do so will not be allowed to register for classes."

However, the handbook erroneously mentions rubella, a less serious form of measles, instead of rubeola. Student Health Center physician Dr. Dale Bowen said rubeola is the primary concern of health officials at ASU.

"Rubeola, or 'hard measles,' is the one we're really concerned with," Bowen said. "It is extremely contagious and potentially fatal."

Rubeola, a common childhood disease, is very dangerous in college-age young adults, often resulting in fatalities due to complications and side effects, he said. Rubella, which also is known as German measles, usually lasts about three days and is particularly dangerous for pregnant females and fetuses.

"A few years ago a large population of students entered college believing they were immune, but the vaccine they had been given as children was ineffective due to improper storage or use on children that were too young," Bowen said. "There were even some student deaths in the East due to this."

The University has not hesitated to drop several students since the policy, which is based on Arizona law, was implemented.

"We've had several (students) who've been dropped in the past," according to a registered nurse in the Student Health Center who asked that her name not be used. "Even though the (students) are usually reinstated, it's a real hassle."

She said there are some cases when proof of immunization is not required.

"We can't force it on anyone, obviously," she said. "Those who aren't acceptable candidates can get waivers. That includes those with a religious reason or a chronic illness that prevents them from responding well to the shot."

The Student Health Center offers the MMR, or mumps, measles and rubeola vaccination, free of charge. The Maricopa County Health Department also is offering the free diphtheria/tetanus and MMR vaccinations in several Valley locations.

Betty Finch, a spokeswoman for the Maricopa County Health Department, said the department immunization program is not just for children.

"We've seen several college students just at the first three days this year," Finch said. "A lot of them are just now coming back to school, so we expect to see more."

Because all students in Arizona public schools are required to be immunized, the county has been conducting an immunization service for several years. Finch said there has been an excellent turnout this year.

"Every year the total number of people coming into the centers increases a little more," she said.

For more information on the county's immunization locations and times, call 248-WELL.

Beware of wide spread contagious disease: memo-itis

Larry Smeltzer

By LYNN KALECTECA
State Press

An ASU associate professor said he has the cure for memo-itis, a contagious corporate disease that causes the overwriting of memos.

Larry Smeltzer, an associate professor and chairman of the department of general business, said that corporations just need to know when and when not to write a memo.

"As companies get bigger you see more and more memos all over the place," Smeltzer said. "It's not uncommon for top-level managers to get 12 or 13 memos a day."

"Some companies have almost a compulsion to write a lot of memos. It gets so contagious that it almost becomes a disease."

Smeltzer said that memos often are a waste of time and energy.

"A lot of people use memos for political or power purposes rather than strictly to inform people," he said.

Many companies, in an effort to improve communication within the company, have allowed Smeltzer to look at and trace internal memos.

He has found that problems arise when a person doesn't know how to communicate his message effectively.

"Writing can be a difficult process," Smeltzer said. "People usually know what they want to say in a memo, but they can't say it because they don't have the writing skills or communication skills and abilities. So a lot of times, memos will result in major problems because people have a hard time expressing themselves."

Sometimes what a person wants to communicate is entirely different than what they actually say, Smeltzer said.

"There was this insurance company manager who wanted to motivate her employees by writing a memo, but her memo had the opposite effect," he said. The memo ended with a stick-figure drawing of a person hanging from a noose, warning: "If you don't work, you're dead."

Smeltzer told of another memo involving a job fair in San Diego. The company memo told the employees to make reservations before attending the job fair. The employees made hotel reservations, but when they arrived at the fair nobody had reserved the booth. The unclear memo cost the company money and time.

"Companies will never be able to eliminate memos altogether because they are needed. But people need to learn how to write them correctly," Smeltzer said.

Since memo-itis is a major problem for most corporations, including ASU, he said, the general business department offers courses in memo writing at the undergraduate and graduate level.

SUB STOP

IMPORTED BEER · JAZZ · SUBS · SALADS · GOURMET COFFEE

Marty Katz was a twenty seven year old tuba player in 1980, when he left the old country, New York, to seek his fame and fortune in the desertlands of Arizona. He had heard that the streets were dusted with gold and that there was uncharted territory for the submarine.

It was pure destiny that led Marty to the location across the street from Arizona State University. It was instinct that caused him to set up SUB STOP, a cozy restaurant featuring the finer things in life: jazz... imported beers... jazz... gourmet coffees... jazz... fresh baked muffins... jazz... salads and sandwiches piled high with the finest cuts of meats and cheeses served in a smoke-free environment, with of course, jazz.

Evolution was responsible for some of the changes at SUB STOP. The drinking age was raised and so was our consciousness about drunk driving. We eliminated any fashion of happy hour. To further reduce overconsumption of alcohol, we eliminated selling pitchers, first during the live jazz concerts on the patio, and then entirely.

World attention was drawn to the critical famine in Ethiopia during the 80's. SUB STOP began sending a percentage of its sales to Ethiopia and continues to donate a percentage of the profit to various causes.

Many students have commented that they made it through their college education partially due to the coffee and the atmosphere at SUB STOP. The line to order food may sometimes be out the door during lunch rush, but it moves quickly and is worth the short wait.

We appreciate our customers and invite you to pick up a free back-to-school Sub Stop pencil with your next purchase.

Young carpet cleaning magnate charged with fraud

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The search for jurors started Tuesday to hear the securities fraud case against Barry Minkow, a whiz kid who turned his after-school, garage-based carpet cleaning business into a multimillion-dollar operation.

Prosecutors say his fraud and deception cost banks and investors more than $24 million.

A panel of 200 prospective jurors jammed the courtroom when U.S. District Judge Dickran Tevrizian opened Minkow's trial by reading the 57-count indictment against him.

Minkow, now 22, who at age 15 began turning his after-school business into a $100 million carpet cleaning empire, has asserted innocence. He claims he was a victim of organized crime figures who manipulated him and his business affairs.

He is accused of multiple securities fraud, credit card fraud and mail fraud counts. On trial with him is accountant

Norman Rothberg, accused of taking a bribe to retract his warnings to others that ZZZZ Best was involved in fraud.

Minkow originally was indicted with 12 others, 10 of whom have since pleaded guilty to various charges stemming from the alleged fraud scheme.

At the heart of the indictment is the charge that Minkow fabricated building renovation deals to defraud investors. His ZZZZ Best Co. actually did no renovation work, the indictment claims.

Investors who handed over millions were taken on tours of phony renovation sites, the document alleges.

Jury candidates were given a questionnaire to examine their knowledge of the widely publicized case, their ability to be fair and impartial and their willingness to serve on a trial expected to last three months.

David Kenner, attorney for Minkow, contends his client was forced to stage the elaborate fraud scheme by organized crime figures who allegedly wrested control of his business and silenced him with threats.

Minkow's youth combined with his apparent runaway success made him famous. He was billed as the rags-to-riches American dream incarnate and was said to have amassed more than $100 million by age 21.

Minkow, who remains in custody at Terminal Island federal prison, has been described as a hard-driving, fast-talking boss who had no patience with employees who dared to disagree with him.

"My way or the highway," was Minkow's pet motto, said associates who added that he demanded they refer to him as Mr. Minkow.

But Minkow's empire collapsed in the summer of 1987 when allegations of fraud and impending bankruptcy forced his resignation from the company he started in a garage in the suburban San Fernando Valley.

ZZZZ Best filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection within days.

A 4-year-old boy drowned Tuesday after he was left unattended at a swimming pool at a Tempe apartment complex, police said.

Police said Mark Valdez, 1542 E. Drake Drive, was airlifted to Phoenix Children's Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Valdez, who did not live at the complex, was found lying face down in the swimming pool at the Mill Avenue Place apartments, 5101 S. Mill Ave., Detective Hal McCormick said. He was found at about 2:49 p.m. by a resident.

McCormick said the child, who had been playing with a friend and the friend's grandfather who lives at the apartments. Valdez had been in about three feet of water for about five minutes before the neighbor pulled Valdez out.

Two police officers conducting vehicle inspections near the apartment arrived at the scene and performed cardiopulmonary resuscitation but could not find a pulse.

McCormick said Valdez had been swimming earlier with the friend and his grandfather and wanted to go swimming again, but the grandfather told him to wait awhile.

But McCormick said Valdez disappeared and entered the swimming pool area through an unsecured gate.

The child's mother was at work at the time of the drowning, McCormick said.

In other incidents:

• More than $24,000 worth of landscaping machinery and tools were stolen sometime between Friday and Monday morning from a Tempe business, police said.

Police said someone cut a chain and broke into a fenced yard at T.R. Dunlavy and Associates, 1200 N. Willow Drive, and removed the equipment.

• An ASU student was arrested Tuesday and charged with disorderly conduct, police said.

Police said Anthony David Palmeri, 22, 701 Alpha Drive, was arrested at about 1:05 a.m. at The Bandersnatch, 125 E. Fifth St., and booked into Tempe City Jail.

State pays $12.8 million to three molested Tucson teens

PHOENIX (AP) — The state has agreed to pay more than $2.8 million to three Tucson teens who were molested by their stepfather after the state put him on probation for previous sex offenses.

In a previous settlement, the state paid more than $850,000 to other families whose children were molested by the same man in a later incident.

Lawyers for the stepchildren claimed in a Pima County Superior Court suit that the state was grossly negligent in its supervision of the man, who was accused of brutally abusing the stepchildren from 1976 through the summer of 1978 while on probation.

The man was placed on 10 years' probation in Cochise County Superior Court for molesting his daughter and stepdaughter in Douglas in 1974, records show. As a condition of his probation, he was told he must move to Pima County to live with a sister and was ordered to have no contact with children under 15.

But Richard Gonzales, an attorney for the stepchildren, claimed that the probation department, which is under state control, virtually forgot about the man after "shipping him off" to Tucson in 1974.

Gonzales said the probation officer, Dorothy Yuncevich, did not tell the man he had to register with the Pima County Sheriff's Department as a sex offender, did not tell Pima County officials he was living there and did not check on the man to ensure he was having no contact with children.

While on probation, the man visited Mexico, also a violation of his probation and met a recently divorced woman with four children, Gonzales said. The man married the woman and brought her and her family to Tucson in February 1976.

The man had "honed his skills with charming children" and within a few months began molesting the three oldest boys, who were 7, 6 and 3 years old at the time, the suit says.

Within a short period of time, the man, known to the children as "Papa," began fondling them and engaging in oral and anal sex. The boys also were "made available" to the man's friends at work for their sexual gratification, Gonzales said.

The man attempted to entice the boys to bring their friends to him for sexual activities and offered to pay them for each friend they brought, Gonzales said.

The molestations were stopped when the man was arrested after the oldest boy told his mother about the assaults on July 6, 1978. The children have not seen the man since.

The suit claimed the boys could have been "spared a lifetime of agony" had the probation department supervised the man as they should have.

Under the agreement, the oldest victim will receive tax free monthly payments over the next 40 years or until his death. The middle boy will receive lump sum payments over 35 years and the youngest will receive the money over 38 years.

The state agreed in 1986 to pay $854,000 in an out-of-court settlement to the three families whose children were molested.

The oldest boy will receive at least $1,254,805, the middle child will receive $894,000 and the youngest child $729,000, the lawyers said.

After the man was sentenced to two years in jail and 20 years probation for the molestations of his stepsons, he was allowed to live in a home where other children lived, court records show. He molested six of those children and was sentenced to life in prison after those molestations.

Round one

Investigation of past leaves KUPD struggling for air space

By MATTHEW LINDENBURG
State Press

Popular rock station KUPD-FM along with its affiliate, country music station KUKQ-FM, lost their operating licenses in a decision that was issued July 27 but released only last week.

The stations' owners were cited for misrepresentation, withholding facts, record shredding and other discrepancies since 1974.

The stations' co-owner and general manager, Robert Melton was unavailable for comment.

According to FCC Administrative Law Judge Edward J. Kuhlmann, "other Tri-State (a broadcasting firm) employees repeatedly lied to the Commission in order that Tri-State might retain its broadcast licenses and to avoid scrutiny of Melton's actions."

•Payola and Drugola: rumours and suspicions run rampant about something that happened over a decade ago . . .

In his 57-page report, Kuhlmann also wrote that investigators "believed that the station's logs had been falsified . . . and that there was evidence of payola and drugola."

Joe W. Milner, professor of journalism and telecommunication in the Walter Cronkite School of Journalism, said such harsh FCC actions are rare. "It happened to a station in Alabama once that wasn't adequately covering the minority community."

There is an involved appeals process that is already beginning for the stations' owner. "It will first go to the full FCC commission," explained Milner, "and if it goes another step it will go to the circuit court in Washington, D.C."

"The estimate," said Phoenix attorney Barry Leverant, who represents the station, "is from three to 10 years."

The stations are expected to continue to operate throughout the appeal, but they stand to lose a lot.

"Obviously," Milner said, "if they uphold the appeal, that would be the end of the license."

And the licenses aren't cheap. The estimated Valley market value is estimated at least in the several millions.

Until the end of the appeals, the licenses have been awarded to another firm who filed for them five years ago. This application began the investigating process.

•Longtime fans may fear a change of format; according to Leverant, those fears are unfounded . . .

There doesn't seem to be any plans to change KUPD's format or any of their DJs. "To the best of my knowledge it had nothing to do with the on-air personalities," Leverant said.

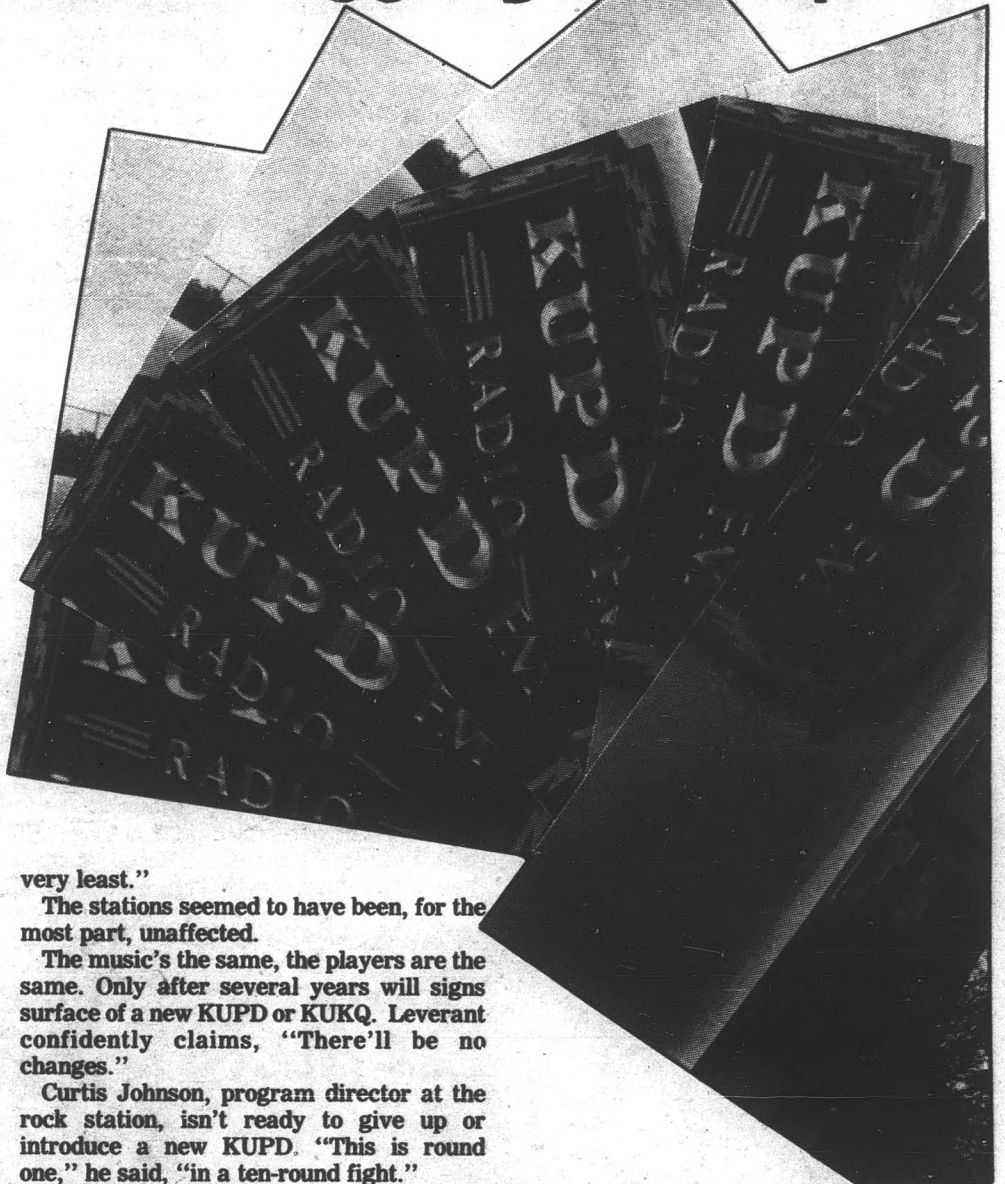

Leverant didn't directly handle the case in Washington, D.C. but acts as the stations' spokesman on legal matters.

"To the best of my knowledge every radio station and TV station has on retainer an attorney in Washington just in case you step in something you shouldn't," he said.

Robert Melton, owner and general manager hasn't stepped down and isn't expected to.

"Please remember everything that is alleged to have occurred is alleged to have (happened) more than 10 years ago," Leverant said.

"It was like rehashing the old stuff that had been buried for five or 10 years at the very least."

The stations seemed to have been, for the most part, unaffected.

The music's the same, the players are the same. Only after several years will signs surface of a new KUPD or KUKQ. Leverant confidently claims, "There'll be no changes."

Curtis Johnson, program director at the rock station, isn't ready to give up or introduce a new KUPD. "This is round one," he said, "in a ten-round fight."

Meanwhile, in the ratings game . . .

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS overwhelmed its rivals in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings on Sunday night, but it wasn't enough to overcome a bad start earlier in the week during the Republican National Convention.

CBS' Sunday night lineup of "60 Minutes" and "Murder, She Wrote" tied for first place and the movie "Outrage", starring Robert Preston and Beau Bridges placed fifth, but NBC still won the week with an average rating of 8.3. CBS was second with 8.2 and ABC was third with 7.8.

On Sunday, CBS averaged 15.2 compared to 9.2 for ABC and 8.3 for NBC.

The rest of the top 10 included "The Cosby Show" on NBC in third, NBC's "Golden Girls" in fourth, NBC's "Different World" in sixth, followed by NBC's "Amen," NBC's "Hunter" and a tie between NBC's "227" and ABC's Sunday movie, "Letting Go."

Each rating point represents 1 percent of the nation's 86.6 million homes with television.

Ratings were depressed by four days of prime-time coverage of the Republican National Convention, which attracted an even smaller audience than the Democratic convention.

The three networks had only 47 percent of the television viewing audience last week, down from an average of 67 percent for the season.

NBC won the first night of the convention, but ABC ran well ahead in the next three nights to average a 6.6 rating. NBC followed with 6.4 while CBS, whose best showing was a second-place tie Wednesday night, averaged 5.7.

Stealing audiences; Mark Harmon can't save this film

Mark Harmon draws box office crowds for "Stealing Home."

By LAURIE B. SMITH
State Press

Advertisers for the film industry know exactly what they are doing. They take a hopelessly dispassionate film and dress it in previews studded with steamy scenes and beautiful, well-known faces.

The previews magically conceal the actual quality of the movie and lure filmgoers into the theaters like a giant magnet aimed at their wallets.

But the true test comes after everyone has spent his quota at the box office and the snack bar.

What do you do when the film you've paid to see isn't as good or as well directed as the preview that enticed you into the theater?

What do you do if that film is "Stealing Home," and you were looking forward to an intelligent, original film about real people and with real wit and emotion?

That's right — the previews look good, but the movie needs to go back to the lab. How could you go wrong with Mark Harmon and Jodi Foster? How could you go wrong with a story based on a man remembering his first love and his reckless days as a teenager?

Easily — directors Steven Kampmann and Will Aldis have ruined a story with enormous potential because they have been blatantly lazy.

"Stealing Home" is lacking in everything except cliché. It has no passion, no emotion and no established character or purpose.

The plot, if you can call it that, has the potential to entertain and to make both humorous and serious statements about human relationships.

The directors must have ignored this potential, however, when they decided to paste together a bunch of ill-connected scenes in which the dialogue is virtually meaningless and the characters, shamelessly shallow.

Mark Harmon is Billy, a traditional, washed-up baseball player with the same set of childhood memories as the people who make corny teen-flicks for summer audiences — a best friend who can't get dates and watches from the bushes while women undress, a father who could do absolutely no wrong, a non-descript mother and the perfect first love.

Jodi Foster is Katie, the girl who taught Billy about women and then became his lover. Her death is the reason Billy comes back home and her character is the foundation of the plot.

Both Harmon and Foster work well with what they have to work with — which is next to nothing at all. Billy's character is lazily developed and never fully convincing. It is difficult for the audience to really believe he was ever capable of love or any emotion at all.

Katie's role is stronger and Jodi Foster is electric in each scene she appears in, but those are far too few. Why the directors chose to place the only character with any

Recalling the immortal Sam Spade: Revelations of a part-time gumshoe

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Professor Josiah Thompson is an expert on such noted philosophers as Kierkegaard, Nietzsche — and Sam Spade.

Spade? What in the name of Humphrey Bogart is going on here? A career change, that's what.

In 1976, Thompson, driven by a "thirst for experience," left his tenured position as professor of philosophy at Haverford College — a prestigious Quaker school in Pennsylvania, came to San Francisco and became a private detective.

He couldn't have picked a better city in which to set up shop.

San Francisco's hills are steeped in the lore of Dashiell Hammett and his legendary sleuth, Sam Spade, the "blond Satan" whose hair darkened when brought to the screen by Humphrey Bogart in "The Maltese Falcon."

There's even a bronze plaque on a San Francisco street, recalling a murder that took place only in Hammett's mind: "On approximately this spot Miles Archer, partner of Sam Spade, was done in by Brigid O'Shaughnessy."

Thompson, whose previous writings were mostly limited to the academic world, has recounted his metamorphosis in a book appropriately called "Gumshoe: Reflections in a Private Eye" (Little, Brown, $17.95).

He was born 53 years ago in East Liverpool, Ohio, where his father sold dishes. During World War I, his father took a pair of field glasses from a dead German and gave them to the youngster.

Thompson, whose nickname is Tink, still uses the glasses on cases. He keeps them hanging over his desk and has used them on stakeouts.

Though slightly built, he played halfback in high school, closing his eyes "on every play." Later, he was under fire in Lebanon as an ensign with a Navy Underwater Demolition Team, the elite Frogmen.

Why did he become a professor in the first place, going from football bruises and the sound of warfare to the safety of a college campus?

"I had plenty of money when I got out of the Navy, with demolition and combat pay,"

There's even a bronze plaque on a San Francisco street, recalling a murder that took place only in Hammett's mind . . .

he said. "I was a good student in high school so I went to Oxford and from there took the line of least resistance."

When that line became a cul-de-sac, he took a sabbatical and grabbed a job with an established detective agency in San Francisco.

During his apprenticeship and as his own boss, Thompson has worked on such headline cases as the defense of Black Panther Huey Newton on assault and murder charges, and the defense of William and Emily Harris in the Patty Hearst case.

There were also other, less publicized capers, ranging from recovering $30,000 from under the floorboards of an attic in a

A brief examination of UB40's contaminated minds

By MATTHEW LINDENBURG
State Press

No one would think to question UB40's social-consciousness. The band has often concerned itself — directly or indirectly — with the plights of the needy and troubled.

Their new self-titled album might have been called "Party Music with a Message." The message, however, isn't contained within the lyrics of any of their songs. The message, though somewhat nebulous, is on the album cover.

One has to assume that with a lofty quote by Walter Benjamin concerning the fate of the Angel of History and the damaging effects of progress, there is some equally lofty intention.

The album is, in fact, referred to on the cover as a project that UB40 collaborated on with a visual artist named Steve Masterson. The cover artwork is his, a collection of portraits called "Surrogate Memorial Heads" that represent people of especially troubled times and places. These faces are, according to the jacket, the "substitute for all those who have died in other people's battles fought for other people's profits."

There also seems to be a message in the cover's discussion of the meaning of the word "signature" and how an artist becomes bound, through his autograph, to "galleries, publishers (and) record companies."

But if these messages are meant to be conveyed with any great force, they aren't pushed through the music. The album has an encompassing theme — pessimistic love plays a part in at least half of the songs — but it has very little to do with the written words on the cover.

There was a time when a BMX Mongoose was enough

Howell J. Malham Jr.
Arts Reporter

By HOWELL J. MALHAM JR.
State Press

There was a time when buying a bicycle was the easiest thing in the world. As a child, I would merely accompany my father and mother to a mall of their choice, pick out the nearest Huffy Thunder Road, and after some casual financial transaction, the bike would be mine. Although the teen years introduced peer pressure, a new yet relatively uncomplicated challenge, to the realm of bike buying, the process still remained somewhat simplistic.

While some kids my age were being forced to smoke, drink, and wear their sisters clothes in order to be accepted, I was busy trying to be cool with a Huffy bike.

Not an easy task, especially with spoke reflectors.

So after months of unrelenting pressures from every kid in the neighborhood, I finally persuaded the folks into shagging me a streamlined, BMX Mongoose, complete with alloy forks and mag wheels.

The only difficult part in this assignment was assuring my parents that this Mongoose I spoke of was a means of transportation and not something that would harm the family dog.

Nearly ten years ago this month, that bike was stolen, and with it went not only the simplicity of consumer bike-anomics, but also the lousiest bicycle chain that ever existed.

It wasn't until recently that I decided to fill the void of bikelessness that had become increasingly prevalent in my years at ASU.

Unbeknownst to me, peer pressure had been replaced by trendiness, which would eventually prove to be my first and foremost lesson in bike consciousness at Arizona State.

That was the least of my worries, however. Aside from the fashionable transportation hang up, I also was forced to accept the fact that the bicycle marketplace had undergone a radically expansive transformation, one that assured me instant bankruptcy.

Therefore, being a man of heroic sacrifices, I realized that my only alternative was to call my parents and ask for their American Express card number.

I could only accomplish this by proving myself worthy and in need.

Since the photographs of me wearing a hefty bag and newspaper shoes were sent back with the words "nice try" scribbled across them, I decided a more daring, pragmatic approach — I called them ... collect.

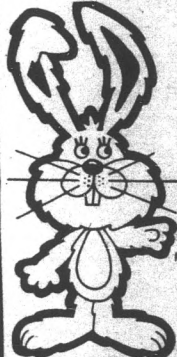

My parents are fair people, except when you spill Pepsi on the piano. When it comes to the needs and wants of any of their seven children, they know no limits to generosity.

I spoke with my mother and explained that the time had come for me to have another bike. I stressed the necessity for a bike in a college town and argued that it was

UB40

"Contaminated Minds" on the album seem in any way socially aware. The first is a song about the temporary positive effects of drugs and their permanent negative effects. The drug man will "make your dreams real today/ and steal your minds tomorrow." The second tune attacks self-righteousness and extreme ideology ("contaminated minds speak with the loudest voice, oh no/ but not everybody has the luxury of choice/"). The album is dominated by self-deprecating, hopeless-love love songs. "You're Always Pulling Me Down" tells of a love gone wrong with a "let's hang on anyway" attitude. The coarse and airy saxophone riff in "I Would Do for You" lend to the song's near-hopeful tone. "I would do for you/ all you'll have me do/ all you have to do/ is ask me to." None of the band's love songs achieve anything above an air of half-hope or soured romanticism. They sound happy and soulful even as they sing about the end of love or sorrow of being trapped in a not-so-worthy relationship. Pure joy is expounded in "Music So Nice" and the unencumbered racous reggae of "Cause it Isn't True," and the album is full of horns, soulful vocals and thick harmonies. Despite the dichotomy of messages, this work is characteristically UB40 — in other words, brilliant fun.

drug case to retrieving a kidnapped child from India.

Thompson's wife, Nancy, sells real estate. They have two adult daughters and a son who plays soccer in college. He never carries a gun and he thinks the most dangerous part of his job is "mistaken identity."

"I was taken for a spy on a case in Morocco," he said. "And one time in Canada, while working on a drug case, word got around that a hit man was being brought in. When people heard I was from California, some of them thought I was the guy. The bars would clear when I came in."

While honing his skills as a gumshoe, Thompson has become fascinated by Hammett and Spade, so much so that on one case he took the time to interview some of Hammett's relatives.

"The ability to lie effectively, to appear different than one really is, all the disguises essential in the world of power, become, in the world of love, temptations, artful excuses to avoid the nakedness love requires, to avoid love."

Hammett knew this, he said.

"That's why in the last line of The Maltese Falcon he makes Spade 'shiver' as he looks down the cold barrel of his future."

certainly more practical than a car. I also mentioned that I still was playing the part of the prototypical student, which entails being broke.

She listened and then acquiesced, on the condition that I would call my father at his office and get his approval as well.

My father instantly agreed to help out, yet he asked if I would first do him a simple favor: He requested that I shop around the different bicycle shops and compare merchandise before I make a decision.

Fair enough, I thought, especially since it's been a good five years since I spilt the Pepsi. How shocking can picking out a mountain bike be? It might even be fun playing a smart shopper for a change.

Little did I know my father's request would turn into the most frightening awakening I've had since I found out Alex Karras could in fact act.

It had been a good ten years since I last set foot in a bike shop. That, perhaps is the reason for the open-mouthed dismay and unspeakable awe I experienced as I strolled into the local Schwinn store.

This was no ordinary bike shop. No, this was something far beyond the usual Sears sports department inventory. I was in for some fun.

As I slowly regained my consumer senses, a balding salesman with a semi-vacant look approached me, clad in a shirt I could have sworn was made from our family room couch.

"How you doin'? Need a bike? Hey, this ones a beauty? Ya like aqua-marine?" he began.

Ignoring his verbal assaults, I, in my best foreign accent, appealed to receding behemoth to point me in the general direction of the now infamous Schwinn Varsity.

His hand cupped his mouth, and tears swelled in his eyes. There was silence. I checked my fly and then my flank.

What the hell was wrong?

"We discontinued that line about eight years ago. We have no more," he said.

He then tried to sell me something called a Schwinn Cerebral, for the thinking biker, but I'd seen enough.

I was confused. What did I need? Why have things changed? Should I just transfer to Mesa Community and forget the whole thing?

All valid questions, but the deciding conflict lay between heading to K-Mart and snatching an upgraded big wheel or sliding into the nearest import bike shop and investing in a 18 speed European aluminum wonder.

What a relief K-Mart doesn't welcome American Express, huh?

New Fine Arts Lounge is cultural escape

By LAURIE B. SMITH
State Press

Remember the Memorial Union Art Gallery? You know, that tiny room that was always stuffed solid with pieces of interesting exhibits. Space definitely took second place to art and many students weren't even aware it existed.

But there's been a refreshing change in the Art Gallery which should now be properly addressed as the Memorial Union Fine Arts Lounge. It has taken over Residence Life's former office space and created a gallery that promotes browsing and contemplation in one of the few quiet places on campus.

The lounge is a perfect way to escape from the crazed traffic that passes in and out of the MU. It is fully-equipped with couches, changing art exhibits, a piano and even a fireplace that has been hidden behind storage panels for over seven years.

•Red Hot Chili Peppers: challenging tranquility
The "Hot Stuff!" exhibit currently on display in the lounge is accurately titled. It is a colorful burst of texture and images created by Susi Lerma and Larry Yanez.

Both artists are graduates of ASU and both have very unique expression through their art.

Lerma is known best for her work with chilis. Her paintings are spicy and bold portrayals of chilis against different backgrounds and bright combinations of color.

"My Chili Valentine" features three enormous tomato-red peppers resting dramatically on a colorful checkerboard background. "I've got the chili Blues, two" keeps the same pepper theme, only this time in blue with dramatic shadows and brilliant variation on the color blue.

Yanez blends harmoniously with Lerma's chilis with his work in ceramics, handmade paper, xerography and sculpture. His pieces are small and delicate and convey the image of constant movement and thought.

"Hot Stuff!" will be on display through September 16. The Fine Arts Lounge will host a special closing reception on Sept. 15 in honor of Mexico's Independence Day. Lerma and Yanez will be at the reception along with music from the group, Jackalope.

With a unique exhibit and a refreshing new look, the Fine Arts Lounge is on its way toward success.

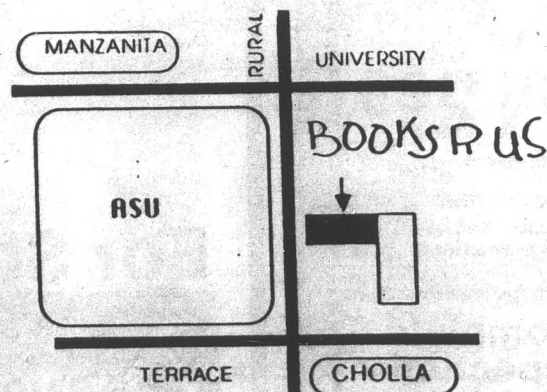

The "Hot Stuff" exhibit adds spice to the new Memorial Union Fine Arts Lounge.

dimension in the background remains a mystery.

Perhaps they used the same reasoning that allowed extremely hackneyed cliches to move freely throughout "Stealing Home." The film is so blatantly unoriginal that it is insulting. How many times do we have to watch an awkwardly inexperienced guy lose his virginity to a sex-starved older woman? Let's try something new for a change.

The film is full of conflicts that are never resolved and scenes that are over as soon as a cool summer breeze. Speaking of summer, the entire movie — which spans close to thirty years — takes place in the summer.

Apparently the directors aren't aware that winter comes every year on the New Jersey coast, and life doesn't stop when the sun disappears. But then again, if nothing else in this film flirts seriously with reality, why should the weather!

The truth is, "Stealing Home" was made to sell tickets by employing good-looking stars and a simple plot. It will probably succeed.

But film-goers who enjoy a movie with substance should be warned that this movie doesn't ever plunge below the attractive facade designed by the advertisers.

It is a picturesque film with enchanting beach scenes and romantic visions, but the characters are weighted down by far too much cliché and never gain any true personality.

It is a shame such good talent has been wasted — and that film-goers have to pay $5.50 to discover that.

Intramurals program begins with badminton tournament

By CHRISTINE PIRKEY
State Press

Bored? Looking for some fun and exercise this weekend? How about chasing some birdies?

Badminton birdies, that is. The ASU intramurals program kicks off its fall season this weekend with a badminton tournament, the first of 12 activities planned for this semester.

Bob Gildersleeve, assistant director of the men's and official's programs, said students who wish to participate in the tournament have until 4 p.m. Thursday to sign up at the intramurals office, in P.E. West.

Gildersleeve said intramural sports provide students with a chance to participate in athletics without having to try out for a team. He said the program is geared towards participation and making sure the student plays as much as possible.

"Only a small percentage of athletes make it to a (collegiate) varsity team," Gildersleeve said. "It (intramurals) gives them a chance to participate."

Flag-football, volleyball and three-man basketball are a few of the standards the intramural program offers, but students can also find pool, powerlifting and golf on the schedule as well.

Prizes are also an incentive to the 15,000-plus students who participate each year. Awards are given out to the champions as well as the runners-up in each division. Gildersleeve said the prizes usually consist of T-shirts, mugs and visors — items that are very popular with the winners.

"The championship T-shirts are the most coveted awards," Gildersleeve said. "Students want to be seen walking around campus with the championship T-shirts on. People like to be recognized — they like to be awarded."

"Sportsline," a listing of all the intramurals events for the 1988-89 school year, is available to students at the intramurals office in P.E. West and in the MU.

"Sportsline" is unique, Gildersleeve said, in that it offers students a chance to have the complete intramurals schedule in one place, so they can check upcoming activities they want to participate in.

Gildersleeve said intramurals are important in the respect that they are available to any student with seven hours or more and at any skill level. Teams are either in class A or B, depending on their experience. Class A teams have more experience than the class B teams do, he said.

Although some sports such as golf and bowling charge a nominal fee, the rest of the sports are free, unlike parks and recreation activities where enormous amounts are charged to participants.

"When you look at parks and rec, they charge you $100 to $200 to play on a softball team. Here it's free," Gildersleeve said.

Serenity

The cool pines of Mount Kush offer a peaceful setting for the not-so-peaceful action on the gridiron at Camp Tontozona Saturday. The Sun Devils are practicing nightly in Tempe in preparation for the season opener on Sept. 10.

Gildersleeve is entering his 15th year as one of the directors of intramurals and has seen many changes occur. One of the biggest and most obvious of those changes has been enrollment.

In 1973, when Gildersleeve started, enrollment at ASU was 23,724 students. The enrollment has now exceeded 43,000 students. He said the intramurals program has grown with the student population, expanding and encompassing more sports to accommodate the students.

More scholarships mean return to prep recruiting for Brock

Jim Brock

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

Last season's ASU baseball team fell just short of the summit, losing to Stanford in the championship game of the College World Series. But this is a new year, with new recruits, and Coach Jim Brock is happy.

This is the final year of probation which the NCAA inflicted upon the Sun Devils for violations in 1984.

The punishment was a reduction in the number of scholarships the Devils had to offer. Last year they had eight to give, this year 11 and next season back to the full 13.

"We have recruited on short scholarships for the last time," Brock said.

With fewer scholarships to give in recent years, the baseball program was forced to look to the junior college programs for talent. This year, they went back to the high schools, battling professional scouts for the best of the prep.

"Delving back into high school recruiting is tougher than I remembered it," Brock said. "It's really a continuous process because you're dealing with people the scouts just don't give up on.

"We're happy because it all came out well, but until they all went to their first class, you never knew."

The Devils did lose a couple to major league dollars. Austin Manahan of Phoenix Horizon High School decided against joining his brother Anthony at ASU and opted for $115,000 from the Pittsburgh Pirates. Eric Brooks, another touted high schooler, bypassed college for $105,000.

But not all of them got away. Newcomers include Tommy Adams and Jim Austin, both outfielders from California who chose to put their professional careers on hold.

"The two that turned down the most money are both kids that would have been drafted extremely high," Brock said. "Probably first-, second-, or third-round people."

Brock also spoke highly of Shawn Rees, a pitcher from Mission Bay High School in San Diego.

"He was as good as there was on the coast," Brock said. "There was clearly nobody better."

Fall workouts begin Sept. 6, signalling the start of eight weeks of practice and exhibition games.

"We really felt this was the year to do it, to get back on track and get the young people back in the program," Brock said. "Even though the great JC experiment worked out better than anybody could possibly imagine, it's still not what we really want. We needed to get back to a good solid freshman class."

"The great JC experiment" came within one game of the national championship in 1988. It won Brock the National Coach of the Year Award from Baseball America, his fourth such distinction.

It also was a team Brock will not soon forget, calling it the "most special" team he has ever coached.

"The thing I saw all year long was that they just believed in themselves and their coaches," Brock said. "It was just an unbelievably responsive group of people. You can't ask for any more than that as a coach."

Gretzky trade generates hockey interest throughout West

Jeff Shain
Asst. Sports Editor

Wayne Gretzky has always been considered an impact player in hockey circles. But only a very few may have realized the impact he would wind up having on the entire realm of the sport in the United States.

For the most part, the amount of interest generated in hockey is directly proportional to the amount of snow that falls on the ground in a particular geographical area. That may all change now with the trade of Gretzky to the Los Angeles Kings.

All of a sudden, Gretzky has opened up new doors for hockey in sun-loving areas, particularly the Southwest, where interest generally stems from transplants from the East and Midwest.

To measure the impact of the trade, consider the fact that Gretzky made an appearance this week on "The Tonight Show."

It's not that unusual for a sports celebrity to appear on the show, but they usually represent a sport that nearly all America has an interest in. Putting Gretzky on the show is a symbol that perhaps hockey is becoming part of the American consciousness.

Americans in warm-weather states generally take an interest in hockey once every four years — when the U.S. Olympic team takes the ice. Since the 1980 "Miracle on Ice" in Lake Placid, N.Y., Americans have had this strange fixation with Olympic hockey but rarely follow it up.

The American public usually expresses optimism and hope about the American chances for a medal, gets disappointed when the U.S. loses to Czechoslovakia or Norway, wonders why the team didn't do better and forgets about it for four years.

These are the same people that think cross-checking is how you balance a checkbook and icing is something you put on a cake.

But with Gretzky playing his home games in the United States, and more importantly in the Glitz Capital of the World, he can be the same type of ambassador for the sport that Magic Johnson is for basketball.

If ever a deal could make hockey work in Los Angeles, this is the one.

Since the inception of the Kings, the Los Angeles public has thought of the franchise as some sort of weird stepsister of the Dodgers, Lakers, Rams and Raiders. Enthusiasm ranked somewhere between that for pro wrestling and T-Birds roller derby.

There have been arguments in the past that perhaps the Kings should move to a place where they would be appreciated, like somewhere north of the Mason-Dixon line. But the National Hockey League resisted, knowing it needed to be established in a major market like Los Angeles to help its already-troubled image.

In fact, when reports of the proposed deal first surfaced, it sounded like something orchestrated by the NHL to try to help the struggling franchise.

In short, hockey cried out for this trade like cornflakes cry out for milk.

Within 24 hours of the announcement of the trade, the Kings' offices were flooded with calls for season tickets. The cable channel that televises the Kings increased its television schedule for next season from 33 to 60 games. Hockey, that was once an icy Siberia in Los Angeles, suddenly was vogue.

That interest could have a trickle-down effect here. Kings telecasts are carried in the Phoenix area on Channel 27, and that might lead to some tourist dollars from Arizona at the Kings' box office. There always has been a small pocket of die-hard hockey fans in Phoenix and many of them could be expected to take in a Kings' game once in a while.

The trade also could be good news for the ASU Ice Devils, as increased interest in hockey could lead to increased attendance for the club sport.

Games at Tower Ice Plaza consistently have drawn small, enthusiastic crowds, but it's not always clear whether the enthusiasm stems from the hockey being played or the liquor being consumed. Perhaps a greater awareness of hockey will draw a more discerning fan to the Ice Devils.

Who knows, maybe it will be the final piece in the puzzle to draw a minor-league hockey team to Phoenix. However, it probably would take another Gretzky to make it a success.

Olympic flame begins 7,000-mile trip to Seoul

ANCIENT OLYMPIA, Greece (AP) — The Olympic flame began its 7,000-mile trip to Seoul Tuesday, sparked by a blazing sun in a ceremony featuring folklore from Korea and Greece.

As temperatures reached 100 degrees on the floor of the stadium where the first Olympians competed 2,700 years ago, an actress dressed in the robes of a Greek high priestess lit the first of some 3,100 torches that will carry the symbol of the Games to Asia for only the third time.

"It was fantastic," said Kim Chong-ha, the president of the South Korean Olympic Committee and a leader of the Seoul delegation to the flame lighting.

The public portion of the ceremony was held before more than 5,000 spectators, who sweltered through a half-hour delay and sought shade under umbrellas, wide-brimmed hats and the cypress trees that ring the ruins.

"All of these people came out in this heat," Kim said. "It shows that people have helped us all along as we prepared for the Games. Today was a moment we had waited for a long time."

Katerina Didaskalou, portraying the priestess, lit the torch from a small black bowl carried to the stadium from the neighboring Temple of Hera, where it had been ignited in a concave mirror by the rays of the sun.

"God of sun and light, Apollo, send your rays and light the sacred flame in the hospitable city of Seoul in Korea," Didaskalou said in reciting a prayer to the Greek god of fire. "Give peace to all the peoples of the world and crown the winner of the sacred contest."

As she handed the torch to middle-distance runner Thanassis Kaloyannis for the first leg of the relay, a Korean folk dance group paraded into the stadium, the sounds of its drums mingling with the "Olympic Anthem" played by a Greek Army brass band.

South Korean and Greek Olympic officials appeared overcome by the ceremony. Kim Ock-jin, secretary general of the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee, seemed to be near tears as he embraced Lambis Nikolaou.

"It was a wonderful sight," Kim Ock-jin said.

Conner says controversy has been boon to yacht racing

NEW YORK (AP) — The lengthy court battle over the America's Cup confused the public and shook up the tradition-bound sport of sailing. But skipper Dennis Conner said the controversy may be the "best thing that's ever happened" to yacht racing.

"The America's Cup is bigger now than it's ever been," he said Tuesday. "We've been on the front page of USA Today 37 times in the last year.

"Sure, there has been controversy and bizarre twists. And sure, sometimes it was like a soap opera. But like Harry Truman used to say, 'I don't care what you write about me, just spell the name right.'"

When the best-of-three series between Conner's Stars & Stripes and Michael Fay's New Zealand boat begins Sept. 7 off the coast of San Diego, it will spell relief for both sides. After Fay issued his challenge to the San Diego Yacht Club in July 1987, it took a year for a judge to settle a rules dispute.

Tyson breaks hand during street scuffle

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson broke a bone in his right hand during a street fight early Tuesday with former boxing opponent Mitch Green, the champion confirmed Tuesday night.

During a news conference at which Tyson appeared wearing a cast on his right hand, the champion said the injury was a hairline fracture of the third metacarpal of the right hand.

Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, said he didn't know yet whether Tyson's Oct. 8 fight against Frank Bruno in London, England would have to be rescheduled because of the injury.

The cast, stretching from the hand to within about four inches of the elbow, is to be on for three weeks. It will be determined after that if there will be sufficient time for Tyson to train for the bout, Cayton said.

The break in Tyson's hand was described as minor and the boxer said he felt no pain.

There were conflicting reports of what occurred.

Tyson claimed that Mitch Green, a one-time Tyson opponent, ripped his shirt and started the fight as Tyson was getting into his car early Tuesday morning. The pair exchanged punches, with Tyson injuring his right hand, Tyson said.

Tyson said the fight occurred around 4:30 a.m. outside a 24-hour clothing store, where he had gone to pick up a jacket.

Green's version, according to police, was different.

According to police spokesman Sgt. John Clifford, Green told investigators that the fight took place outside an after-hours club in Harlem. Green said that during the argument "Tyson popped him on the bridge of his nose," Clifford said. The injury required five stitches, he said.

Police were investigating and no charges had been filed.

Green, 31, couldn't be reached for comment.

Tyson said that Green "hit me on the chest. He was upset. I guess I hit him over the eye. I was nervous. I hadn't had a street fight in seven years. I was scared."

Baseball

"I felt really bad for the kids. It was almost like a team of destiny, and you're not supposed to mess with a team of destiny. We had some people who really rose to the occasion, so it would have been nice to win the last (game)."

Although many names are gone from last year's ballclub, a strong nucleus remains: Steve Willis, Kevin Higgins, John Finn, Dan Rumsey and a trio of southpaw hurlers in Brian Dodd, David Cassidy and Rusty Kilgo.

Sprinkle in the new talent, with which Brock is well pleased, and the forecast for the future is mostly sunny.

"I feel really good about the long range," Brock said. "For the first time I think the NCAA problems are now completely behind us and taken care of. I was worried about getting back to where we had the good young players coming up, and I think we now have that. I'm very happy about it."

Cardinals waive 2, put 4 more on injured reserve

PHOENIX — The Phoenix Cardinals reached the NFL preseason roster limit of 60 by releasing two players Tuesday and putting four others on injured reserve, following an earlier trade with the Buffalo Bills.

Waived were kicker Jim Gallery and quarterback Sammy Garza, both second-year pros.

Placed on injured reserve were defensive end Chris Spachman, offensive guard Mike Morris, linebacker Tyrone Jones and running back Robert Mimbs.

Phoenix had cut 14 players Monday, reducing their roster to 65 before acquiring defensive end Sean McNanie from Buffalo in exchange for a middle-round draft choice next year.

Garza, signed as a free agent in 1987, played in three games for the Cardinals last season but did not play a down during the preseason this year.

Gallery, picked up on waivers in 1987, kicked nine field goals in 19 attempts and 30 of 31 extra-points last season before being replaced by Al Del Greco in the final three games.

Gallery missed a 28-yard field goal in Phoenix's first preseason game Aug. 4 at Seattle and didn't kick again for the team, with Del Greco handling all conversions and field goals.

Del Greco kicked three field goals in four attempts in Sunday night's 19-16 overtime loss to the Minnesota Vikings at Sun Devil Stadium.

"We weren't going to carry two kickers," Cardinals coach Gene Stallings said. "I want one guy to handle everything.

With all things being close, accuracy was the thing I was going to keep."

The waiving of Garza meant rookie Tom Tupa, a third-round choice out of Ohio State, will likely be kept as the third-string quarterback and backup punter.

Tupa, who led the nation with a 47-yard average last year, has averaged 34.4 on 11 preseason punts and lost the starting job to incumbent Greg Horne, a second-year pro with a 43.2 average on five preseason punts.

At quarterback behind starter Neil Lomax and veteran backup Cliff Stoudt, Tupa has completed 2 of 3 preseason passes for 21 yds with one interception — all coming in the 21-7 loss in Seattle.

"If we're going with three quarterbacks now, we're going with Tupa," Stallings said. "Tupa's not doing it right now with his punting."

Spachman ruptured his left Achilles tendon against Minnesota Sunday night. He underwent surgery Monday night at Phoenix St. Joseph's Hospital and probably is out for the season, team officials said.

Jones, a former Canadian Football League standout, suffered a badly-sprained left ankle in the Vikings game and is out for one to four weeks, according to team trainers.

Morris tore ligaments in his right knee during training camp last month in Flagstaff and is out for the year after undergoing reconstructive surgery.

Mimbs, bothered by leg and back ailments, has not played in the preseason so far.

Veteran defensive end David Galloway was scheduled to

It is not yet known how long he will be sidelined, but it's the second straight year Galloway has gone down with a preseason injury. A fractured left forearm in training camp last year kept him out of all but four regular-season games in 1987.

To bolster their defense, the Cardinals traded for the 26-year-old McNanie, who played two years at Arizona State. He finished his collegiate career at San Diego State, where he was a teammate of Cardinals tight end Robert Awalt.

The 6-foot-5, 270-pound McNanie was the Bills' third-round draft pick in 1984 and has started every game the past two seasons. He had 58 tackles and 6½ sacks in 1986 and 39 tackles and 2½ sacks in 1987.

"He's a veteran defensive lineman who has been productive and can help against the run and pass, both as an end and a tackle," Erik Widmark, the Cardinals assistant pro personnel director, said.

Stallings said McNanie "should pick up our system a lot quicker than someone who hasn't played at all."

Until McNanie is ready, however, the Cardinals will shift third-year pro Ron Saddler from right end to right tackle to replace Galloway, with third-year pro Steve Alvord becoming the starting right tackle.

Veteran defensive end Curtis Greer, who has a bulging disc in his back, was too sore to practice Monday after playing in the Vikings game and may miss Thursday night's preseason finale at Kansas City.

Running back debate in state of Florida: Smith or Smith?

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — In Florida, where football spawns enough arguments to last a lifetime, there's an ongoing debate about a pair of running backs named Smith.

Smith, as in Emmitt Smith, the Florida Gators' superb tailback, leading rusher in the Southeastern Conference and ninth in last year's Heisman Trophy voting as a freshman.

Smith, as in Sammie Smith, the Florida State Seminoles' blend of speed and power who led the nation in yards per carry last fall and draws comparisons to Herschel Walker and, well, Emmitt Smith.

"I think we've got two of the best backs in the nation right here within our own borders," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said.

"Emmitt had a great season last year and our guy had a good one," he said. "This year is really a great opportunity for our state. I think we have two guys who are bona fide Heisman Trophy candidates."

There is one hitch, though. Emmitt and Sammie, who are not related, are both underclassmen. History says the odds are against either one of them winning the award in 1988.

"Even if I have a great season I don't think I'll get it because I'm a sophomore," said Emmitt, a 5-foot-10, 205-pounder who ran for 1,341 yards and scored 13 touchdowns last year.

Sammie is a junior who may be able to buck the odds, just as Ohio State's Archie Griffin did in 1974. Florida State is ranked No. 1 in the preseason, and if the Seminoles live up to expectations, Bowden can see it happening.

"If we have a pretty good season and he stays healthy I won't be surprised if he wins it," Bowden said. "His key is health."

When Sammie plays, there's no questioning his ability. Red-shirted early in his freshman year after suffering a leg injury, he was hampered by shoulder problems when he returned the next season.

Although his statistics were impressive enough as a second-year freshman — 611 yards on only 103 carries — it wasn't until last year that the 6-2, 220-pound speedster from Zellwood, Fla., began to emerge as one of the nation's top runners.

On 47 fewer carries than Emmitt had as a freshman, Sammie gained 1,230 yards. His average of 7.2 yards per carry led the nation and the 123 yards per game he averaged ranked ninth — just ahead of Emmitt's 121.9 yards per game.

"Everything they say about Emmitt Smith is true," Bowden said. "He's a great one. But our guy is 20 pounds bigger, four inches taller and faster."

Still, as the star tailback at the state's largest school, Emmitt received more recognition for his accomplishments on a 6-6 team than Sammie did for an 11-1 offensive juggernaut that came within one point of a national championship.

Emmitt, of Pensacola, rushed for 100 or more yards in eight games, and Sammie did it seven times. Emmitt caught 25 passes, none for touchdowns, while Sammie had six receptions for an average 21.3 yards and two TDs.

Comparisons of the two are essentially unfair, though, because their teams ask them to play different roles.

Emmitt, who rushed for 8,804 yards scored 106 touchdowns in high school, carried the Florida offense about as far as he could before defenses, no longer fearing the Gators' passing attack, slowed him down late in the season.

After rushing for 1,000 yards faster than any freshman in NCAA history, he was held to 82 per game in Florida's last four regular season contests.

By that time, however, Emmitt had become the subject of one of the most intense media assaults ever launched on a Florida player.

The Gators began the year hyping senior quarterback Kerwin Bell for the Heisman, but the focus of the campaign shifted after Smith gained a school-record 224 yards in his first start and eased over the 1,000-yard plateau with his sixth consecutive game of 100 yards or more rushing.

Through it all, Emmitt seemed to handle success well. "I've been given a lot of attention, but I'm the same person. I don't plan to change," he said.

"I've never seen a young man come in and handle the pressure the way he did," said Florida coach Galen Hall, an assistant at Oklahoma for 18 years before joining the Gators in 1984.

Florida intends to ease the burden on Emmitt this year. Hall is determined the Gators will not be a team that relies on its star carrying the ball 30 times a game, and a new offense Florida has installed stresses using the pass to establish the run.
