ASASU, Faculty Senate push for day to honor King

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

An ASU Faculty Senate committee has drafted a resolution that urges the Arizona Board of Regents to approve a paid holiday in January that would honor Martin Luther King Jr.

Meanwhile, the University's student body president has introduced a resolution calling for ASU to honor the slain civil rights leader on the third Monday in January. But the day would not be a paid holiday.

The resolution from the Faculty Senate's Martin Luther King Celebration Committee calls for ASU's two campuses to be closed the third Monday every January in honor of King.

The committee's resolution, which calls for the first holiday next January, must be approved by the ASU Faculty Senate before going to the regents. The committee will present the resolution to the Senate Sept. 19, the Senate's first meeting.

In the last two years, the Faculty Senate has passed resolutions calling on ASU President J. Russell Nelson to declare a holiday, but Nelson said he did not have the authority.

Juliette Moore, ASU's director of Intramurals who helped draft the committee's resolution, said the group consulted Attorney General Bob Corbin, who told them that only the regents have authority to declare a holiday.

Moore said she expects the Faculty Senate to easily pass the resolution. But she said a harder battle looms with the regents.

"As far as the Board of Regents is concerned, I think that it's going to be a real testy type of situation," Moore said. "I can't say that I have a real solid feel that they're going to pass it."

The committee's resolution states: "Be it resolved, that Arizona State University implement its ideals by celebrating the life and recognizing the contributions of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. through encouraging the Arizona Board of Regents to declare the third Monday in January as a Dr. Martin Luther King holiday for its faculty, staff and students."

The resolution of Associated Students President John Fees honors King with a day of events. But Fees said he is not against a paid holiday.

ASU receives $3.2 million to fund center

By TERESA OWEN
State Press

ASU was awarded $3.2 million over the next five years to fund a new Center for the Study of Early Events in Photosynthesis, Sen. John McCain's office said Wednesday.

The center, which will be funded by three different grants, is sponsored by the Plant Science Centers Program, a joint effort of the U.S. Department of Energy, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the National Science Foundation.

The photosynthesis center will not be located in a campus building but will be spread among ASU's laboratories, said the ASU center's director, chemistry professor Robert Blankenship.

"We are delighted that they have decided to do this here," he said. "It is a big development for ASU, and we feel honored."

The $3.2 million grant is a total of what the three different agencies will contribute. The DOE's grant of $2.5 million will begin Sept. 1 and last for five years, Blankenship said. The agency's contribution will help hire a research staff and pay salaries, he added.

The two other grants, totalling $731,000, will be used for buying scientific instruments, including picosecond lasers and a nuclear magnetic resonance spectrometer, Blankenship said.

Council under fire for football seats trade-off

By KRISTI ELLIS
State Press

Several top officials in Tempe have $9,600 worth of Phoenix Cardinal tickets.

The football team and members of the media have a place to park.

And problems are adding up quicker than NFL touchdowns in Sun Devil Stadium.

Vice Mayor Don Cassano, Wednesday said in "the private sector companies all the time trade their products for other products or services rather than cash money."

Cardinals ticket manager Steve Walsh said nothing was done wrong in the trade that gave the city 20 season tickets and the team access to a city-owned parking lot just west of Sun Devil Stadium.

"I have no reason to think that we should reconsider the deal," Walsh said. "It was pretty much a dollar-for-dollar exchange."

But David Bodney, an attorney with the Phoenix law firm of Brown and Bain who specializes in First Amendment issues, said Wednesday that the council may

Four student services at ASU under review by commission

By SHERI JOHNSON
State Press

Four ASU student services are targeted for drastic changes by the preliminary studies of a consulting firm that works for the Arizona Cost Efficiency Commission.

The commission, more commonly known as the "mini-Grace Commission," met Wednesday with a representative for Arthur Young & Co., a Phoenix-based consulting firm. The firm has been auditing state agencies for the commission. Its final report on student services at Arizona's three universities is due in late September.

The commission will then decide if it will forward the firm's report to the legislature for action.

After examining the services, the firm is narrowing its focus on the feasibility of contracting university bookstores to private management, contracting out health and emotional counseling services and establishing alternative dispersment of financial aid, possibly through a bank.

"It's a very complex situation, but there may be certain attributes of the financial aid system that lend themselves better to commercial administration rather than university administration," Arthur Young & Co. representative Nicholas Conway told the commission.

A final report of the firm's proposals is expected by the third week in September.

As for health services, Conway said student demand for the services is increasing at a rate that makes it difficult for the universities to keep up.

"We want to examine the cost of providing those services and also the policy requiring students to carry their own medical insurance," he said, adding that universities could charge students for the cost of medical services rendered.

Conway also said the universities' student services information systems could be consolidated.

Jackson ends fast protesting pesticides on table grapes

CHICAGO (AP) — Jesse Jackson ended a three-day fast protesting the use of pesticides on California table grapes Wednesday, and another leading civil rights figure picked up the fast "in the name of justice, equity and peace."

Jackson and the Rev. Joseph Lowery of Atlanta, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, stood outside a food store and urged consumers to boycott California table grapes.

Jackson had been on a water-only diet since Sunday when he attended Mass with Cesar Chavez, president of the United Farm Workers, as the union leader ended a 36-day fast in Delano, Calif.

The union is seeking to ban the use of five pesticides it claims causes cancer. California table grape growers have said the pesticides pose no danger and are needed to fight fungus and pests.

Wearing a suit and sandals with a small cross of vines hanging from his neck, Jackson said grape growers won't bend until they're hit in the wallet.

"We can do without the grapes," the former Democratic presidential contender said. "We cannot do without children, and we cannot put the nation's health at risk."

Jackson passed the cross, which was worn first by Chavez, on to Lowery.

Lowery said he would fast for three days and then pass the cross and the fast to actors Martin Sheen and Robert Blake in Washington, D.C.

"I shall fast in the name of justice, equity and peace," Lowery said. "This is our means of sharing the pain and strengthening the team."

U.S., Soviets agree to extend current grain purchase deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed in principle to extend for one year the current deal between the two countries for Soviet purchase of American grain, a U.S. official said Wednesday.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the terms were "essentially identical" to current arrangements, under which the Soviets must buy at least 9 million tons of U.S. grain annually. The five-year pact expires Sept. 30.

The official said the two sides reached a mutual decision to try to devise a new accord but to stick to the terms now in force. He told The Associated Press the deal was sealed last week through "diplomatic channels."

A second official said he hoped a pact between the two countries could be reached at the next negotiating session but said that no final agreement has been reached.

"We feel like we made some progress, but we're still far apart on pricing, minimums and things of that nature," Thomas Kay, chief of the Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agricultural Service, said.

Students fight to distribute information on legal abortion

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Students at Ireland's largest university said Wednesday they would fight an attempt by an anti-abortion group in order to keep them from distributing information on legal abortions.

Earlier this month, the High Court served non-criminal summonses on four student leaders and an officer at University College, Dublin, who had refused to agree not to publish the names and telephone numbers of legal abortion clinics in England.

Ireland, whose population is 95 percent Roman Catholic, made abortion illegal under a 1983 constitutional amendment after a campaign led by the Society for the Protection of the Unborn Child.

The four students said Wednesday they would fight the society's allegations that they were breaking a Supreme Court ruling that said it was illegal under the 1983 amendment for pregnancy counseling centers to provide women with information on how to get a legal abortion. The Supreme Court has power over the High Court.

The four students, elected to represent University College's 10,000 students, said they will distribute the abortion information in a manual to be published in October.

Bankruptcy Court rejects PTL reorganization plan

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A U.S. Bankruptcy Court judge rejected the proposed PTL reorganization plan Wednesday, saying it did not take into account the television ministry's poor financial health.

"This plan does not work," Judge Rufus Reynolds said. "It does not reflect the situation."

Reynolds gave bankruptcy Trustee M.C. "Red" Benton until Oct. 1 to prepare a new plan and until Sept. 10 to return with information on potential buyers of the ministry's assets.

Reynolds considered but rejected the idea of closing operations, saying that would kill PTL's source of revenues, which include donations from television viewers and proceeds from the Heritage USA Christian retreat near Fort Mill.

The ministry, which entered bankruptcy proceedings in June 1987 after the resignation of founder Jim Bakker in a sex and money scandal, has been divided into the newly-named Heritage Ministries and a corporation holding PTL's assets.

The rejected reorganization plan would have given the trustee up to five years to sell assets and repay PTL's debts, which could be more than $130 million.

After the 75-minute hearing, Benton said he would propose to sell the assets over a shorter period of six to seven months to satisfy PTL's creditors and the court.

Chilean government calls end to states of emergency

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The right-wing government on Wednesday decreed an end to all states of emergency for the first time since military President Augusto Pinochet took power in a 1973 coup, the interior minister announced.

The action was taken less than a week before Chile's military commanders meet to nominate a candidate, expected to be Pinochet himself, for a presidential referendum planned for October.

Interior Minister Sergio Fernandez, in a late afternoon news conference at the government palace, told reporters that presidential decrees lifting the emergency states "have been issued today and will take effect upon publication in the official bulletin" within the next few days.

The states of emergency have empowered the authoritarian government to arrest and hold suspects without judicial authorization, to exile citizens considered dangerous to national security and to limit public gatherings and restrict the news media.

Two such states of emergency are now in effect: the formal state of emergency and the state of disturbance to internal peace. Fernandez said both had been ordered lifted.

According to Fernandez, the new decrees were issued because authorities had established order within the country.

Correction

In Wednesday's issue, it was reported that President J. Russell Nelson's office was reviewing a report on improved day care at the University. The report is still being prepared by a task force, which was formed last year and is due to be presented to the president's office early this fall.

Controversial Bush-Quayle ticket still holding narrow lead

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bush's boost from the Republican National Convention shows signs of decaying as quickly as it arose, a victim of the controversy surrounding running mate Dan Quayle, pollsters said Wednesday.

Bush rebounded to at best a narrow lead in public opinion polls this week after badly trailing the Democratic nominee, Michael Dukakis, last month. But new polls indicate that Bush's bounce may have peaked virtually as soon as it began.

Two polls Wednesday put Bush ahead by leads so slim they were within the margins of error — 44-39 in an NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll done Saturday through Monday and 49-47 in a Harris poll done Friday to Monday.

"I think he's been hurt in the long run for the race," Michael Traugott, a Gallup Organization pollster, said. "As this reporting takes hold, there has to be some negative consequence for the Bush-Quayle ticket."

News reports since the GOP convention last week have been dominated by questions about Quayle's entry into the National Guard during the Vietnam war and about a former female lobbyist's claim he propositioned her in 1980.

Those issues arose at a critical time in the campaign, when Bush needed to capitalize on the positive response to his acceptance speech by keeping attention focused on his themes, pollsters said.

"If you hit a high note you've got to keep hitting it because the public isn't paying attention, and it needs to have that constantly reinforced," Keating Holland, a CBS News pollster said. "The good news that Bush is trying to continue to pump out is getting lost in this Quayle thing."

The result: in a Gallup poll conducted Thursday and Friday, Bush led Dukakis by nine percentage points. But in a Gallup poll done Friday through Sunday, he led by just four points, a dead heat because of the margin of error.

Similarly, Bush led by six points, also within the error margin, in a CBS News poll conducted Friday through Sunday. Holland noted that Bush's support was strongest Friday and seemed to wane as the weekend progressed.

It was expected that Bush would receive a boost in popularity as a result of television coverage of the Republican convention, just as Dukakis won a bounce from the Democratic convention in mid-July. The partisan speechmaking and careful choreography of modern conventions reliably lift their nominees in the polls, albeit temporarily.

But Quayle questions arose even before the convention closed. Traugott likened the effect to the 1976 debate in which President Ford contended that Eastern Europe is not under Soviet domination; initial polls found no affect, but Ford soon suffered as news reports stressed the gaffe.

While Ford's misstatement reflected on himself, pollsters doubted that concerns about Quayle personally were harming the GOP ticket, because voters tend to decide exclusively on the presidential nominees.

Activism ASU student voter registration plan will help 'SAVE' 1988

Darrin Hostetler
Columnist

Consider the sorry state of student activism and political interest on the nation's campuses:

•The College Republicans, once the giant of campus political organizations, is in disarray, torn and tattered by internal squabbling among members of the national CR committee.

When this group of young conservatives had their act together in 1980 and 1984, they helped deliver the group of voters 18 to 24 years old to Ronald Reagan and established a GOP renaissance at many colleges. Now local chapters are split and at each other's throats in a dozen states, and the national chairman has been accused of threatening to kill opposition candidates in order to win his office.

•On the left, a group of students attempting to form a national student organization met in New Brunswick, N.J., earlier this year. Their goal was to form a campus alliance that would serve as the heir to Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), which fanned the flames of anti-Vietnam War sentiment and organized protests nationwide, but poor turnout and general apathy threaten to kill the group in the cradle.

SDS co-founder, Tom Hayden, commented that "today it's difficult to make the claim that students are an invisible force needing to be unified in one organization."

•In 1984, only 41 percent of those 18 to 24 turned out to vote in the presidential election, and in the off-year election of 1986, a mere 22 percent made it to the polls. Half of all of the 27 million young Americans in that age group aren't even registered to vote.

From this dismal inventory of student action, or rather, inaction, one can conclude that students nationwide have allowed their once potentially formidable voting muscle to atrophy; their historically well-toned political arms to go to fat.

On the right and on the left, student political leaders seem confused about the one direction that really matters: forward.

Internal squabbling and apathy have taken a heavy toll, and when the agenda of major student groups is combined with the mindset of the average late-'80s student, the lack of interest isn't hard to understand.

Students today are, as a group, reasonably placid and content. The economy, though showing signs of internal decay, is still fronting a smiling face. Students have a reasonably good prospect of graduating and getting a job — according to surveys, the No. 1 concern of college-age voters.

'On the right and on the left, student political leaders seem confused about the one direction that really matters: forward.'

And most importantly, young Americans aren't threatened by a gory death, at the hands of an enemy they fight seemingly without purpose, in a war-torn country they can't locate on a map. They have inevitable financial problems and normal tribulations of life, but no one is in danger of being machine-gunned to death in the jungle.

Student involvement was much stronger in the 1960s for a very obvious reason — nothing strikes home like going out to the mailbox to pick up your draft card and seeing the neighbor boy's coffin being carried up the stairs next door.

Without that kind of a threat, which is necessary to galvanize true national action, the offspring of the flower children have become more interested in home decorating than protesting and organizing.

The agenda issues being promoted by most national student organizations — anti-apartheid, end the arms race, support a presidential candidate, etc. — simply don't inspire like Vietnam did the previous generation; they don't touch the student close enough to home. All are admirable pursuits, but none of them have demonstrated the capacity to grab the attention and energy of today's students for more than a few months.

So what to do?

Well, a good start is to de-centralize and de-nationalize student groups. Student interests are local, and efforts to mobilize students should thus focus on matters of importance in the immediate area.

At ASU, a program that does just that has been launched by the Arizona Students Association and Associated Students. Named SAVE '88 (Students Are Voting Everywhere) the program aims to register new student voters to cast ballots in the November election by making them aware of three crucial education issues that state legislators will face next spring: a vote for the student representative to the Board of Regents, a comprehensive financial aid package, and equitable funding for all three state universities (UofA currently gets more state dollars per student than ASU or NAU).

The idea is to pin down legislative candidates on the issues, inform students of which legislators support the campus point of view, register the students and then get them to vote for the pro-student legislators. That way students can have a direct impact on small state elections and elect people who can have a direct effect on their pocketbooks.

Simple. Close to home. And while it won't save the world, programs like SAVE '88 just might do the trick when it comes to reigniting student activism.

Registering voters and convincing them to help themselves in small ways may encourage students to start flexing that political muscle again and have real impact on the national process.

Jessica Hahn: Bible-belt 'bimbo' wants best of both worlds

Ed Schubert
Columnist

By now we've all seen Jessica "I'm not a Bimbo" Hahn looking up at us from the cover of the current Playboy. She's been "remodeled" we are told, and now has improved breasts, teeth and a "new, cosmetically slimmed nose."

It also transpires that she's joining a local radio talk show team — Y 95's "Y-Morning Zoo."

Isn't it remarkable just how many people manage to claim fame, wealth and even power simply by being ridiculous?

Oral Roberts can raise millions of dollars simply by making an ass of himself in public.

Jimmy Swaggart and Jim and Tammy Bakker keep themselves in the limelight by their ludicrous behavior.

It is even possible to wield political power through sheer outrageousness. Consider Lester Maddox, Robert K. Dornan, Gary Hart and Ev Mecham . . . or Caligula, for that matter.

And now it's Jessica's turn again. As it transpires, she's currently residing at the home of perhaps the most ridiculous man in America: Hugh Hefner, the aging libertine who still putters about in his bathrobe, proclaiming his archaic "Playboy Philosophy" of sexual liberation and knee-jerk liberalism.

Playboy informs us that it was Jesus who led Jessica to Hefner. An article that accompanies Ms. Hahn's pictorial describes her religious pilgrimage to Hefner's Playboy Mansion West:

"Lying in bed on her 28th birthday, she contemplated suicide. She says she spoke with God and asked for a miracle.

"The next day Playboy called," she said. "That was the miracle."

Although Jessica now has it made — having been living with Hef and his "ladylove" Kimberley Conrad ("We're like sisters," says Jessica) — she nevertheless remains true to her spiritual calling. She is contemplating starting a ministry and has a plaque on her wall which reads Jessica, trust me. I have everything under control. Signed, Jesus.

She even listened to gospel music during her "arduous" Playboy photo session.

None of this is new, of course. Perhaps the earliest Christian heresy involving sexual practices popped up in the time of the original apostles.

Carpocrates and his followers, the Carpocratians, represented an offshoot from Gnosticism. They taught that to escape the gross realm of the material world, one must seek salvation through the forgiveness of sin. But in order to be forgiven, one must first sin. And the more sin, the better, as it would lead to greater forgiveness and salvation.

They were especially interested in sins of the flesh, and Carpocrates was perhaps the first person ever to claim that Jesus was a homosexual.

The Carpocratians were stomped out rather unceremoniously by the early church.

While Jessica Hahn's brand of sexual heresy differs somewhat from that of Carpocrates, she's still in the same ballpark. And both Hahn and Carpocrates (too bad they never met) illustrate how heresy performs an interesting service on behalf of orthodoxy.

Heresies help to define orthodoxy by telling us what traditional Christianity is not. If there were no basic, commonly held beliefs that united Christendom, there would be no heresies; heresy would be impossible. When heresies pop up, they point to the existence of correct belief.

So Jessica, it's like this: If you want to be a sex-goddess, and pose for Playboy, and even have major plastic surgery in order to fulfill those fantasies, that's fine.

On the other hand, if you want to preach the gospel and become a Christian role model, that's fine too.

But you can't have it both ways.

There are certain basic premises of Christianity that act to prohibit combining the two roles. There is the notion that sexual relations should only be consummated within marriage, for example. There is also an emphasis on modesty, e.g. wearing clothes. That sort of thing.

To try to blend the two only renders you more and more ridiculous. Perhaps that's what you want. We have already observed that there is much fame and fortune to be had in playing the fool.

And that brings us to another question. Either:

A) You understand all this and know that in combining religion and pornography you're making a fool of yourself and profaning your religion in the process, but you're doing it anyway for the money and recognition. If this is the case, you're every bit as cynical as Jim and Tammy Bakker. Or:

B) You really don't understand that you can't be a Christian role model and a porn star at the same time, in which case you're a bimbo.

Like the computers sometimes tell us: DECIDE.

quotable

*"I have never made but one prayer to God . . .
'O Lord, make my enemies ridiculous.'
And God granted it."*

Hong Kong

Crown Colony prepares for reunion with People's Republic

By SCOTT SECKEL

State Press

HONG KONG — All over the 410 square miles of the island Hong Kong, there are signs of the issues most pressing on the minds of the 6 million inhabitants. A glove floats in Aberdeen Harbor, either looking for a home or perhaps in transition from serving the hand of its owner to serving the hand of the people.

The lease on the British Crown Colony runs out on July 1, 1997. The United Kingdom has held the lease since 1842, as a concession from the mainland Chinese in the Treaty of Nanking, which concluded the opium wars of that period. The property will become a "Special Administrative Region" of the People's Republic of China in nine years. According to the terms of the Sino-British Joint Declaration, the region will continue operating as it previously has for the next fifty years.

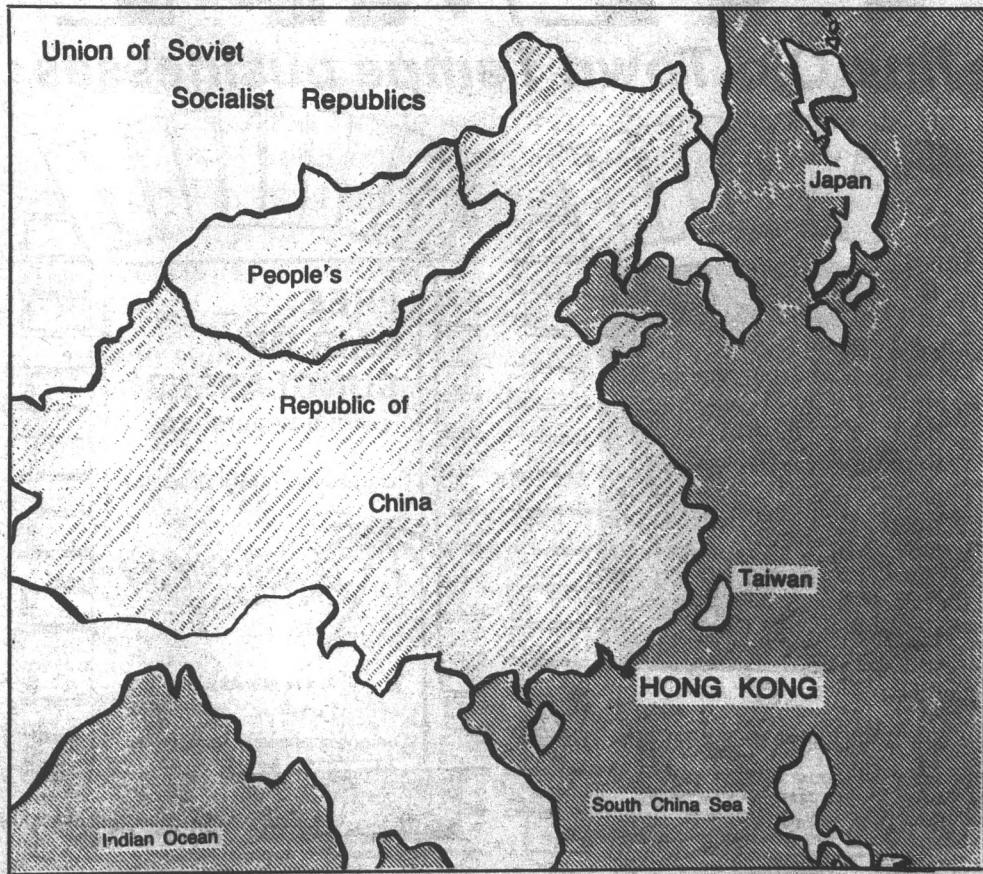

The legal framework under which this region will be administered is called the Basic Law, which was drafted from 1985 through 1987 by Chinese legislators working with a committee of Hong Kong businessmen and lawyers. A draft of the law was issued in late April and soon came under fire from residents for its apparent restrictions on the Hong Kong legal system.

Saw Khain Hway, an employee of the Bank of China, said, "This is a very sensitive subject for the people of Hong Kong." The Bank of China represents the People's Republic of China in the city-state.

While the law allows capitalistic business and lifestyles to continue, all foreign affairs, defense, and the selection of a chief executive will fall under the jurisdiction of the Central People's government. Hong Kong citizens will elect the legislature.

Ancient Chinese junks scurry in the shadow of Hong Kong's ultra-modern high rises, symbols of the Crown Colonies' capitalistic lifestyle.

Garth Hecker/State Press

Scott C. Seckel/State Press

Poverty and opulence coexist in Hong Kong on the eve of its reunion with mainland communist China.

Graffiti on the Peak Road Wall reads "Babe, don't worry." But that advice seems to be largely ignored. The sections of the new law that have people worried are those which readily acknowledge that the new government will be under tight central control from the mainland.

The introduction to the Basic Law states that "of the laws enacted by the National People's Congress of China or its standing Committee . . . which are outside the limits of the high degree of autonomy of the HKSAR (Hong Kong Special Administrative Region), a small number shall be applied in the HKSAR." Some of these laws are specified in the draft but not all. In other words, it is possible that more restrictive measures may be administered at a later date.

Hong Kong is a freewheeling, unabashedly capitalist enclave. The strong hand of a communist government is clearly not welcome, and there is a concerted effort to make the transition gently.

Article 169 of the new law states that the power of legal interpretation belongs to mainland China's Standing Committee of the National People's Congress. When an interpretation is made by the Committee, HKSAR courts shall follow that ruling.

In other words, if an ambiguous case comes up before the Hong Kong courts, a ruling must be sought from Beijing before a decision can be made.

Various officials are unhappy about this provision. Representatives have criticized Beijing as well as the British government for the "one country, two systems" plan.

Speculation and uncertainty about the future has led to a revival of an old method of turning a profit in Hong Kong. There are over 14 Immigration and Naturalization "specialists" who will help citizens move overseas for a fee. This is an old profession in the city-state, dating back to the 1800s and the heyday of Chinese immigration when "patrons" arranged paperwork and transport to the rest of the world.

Countries such as British-administered Belize and the African island nation of Mauritius are selling passports to Hong Kong citizens who are willing to invest heavily in these countries. Hong Kong's fellow members of the British Commonwealth — a federation of former British colonies and protectorates — such as Australia, Canada and South Africa have also entered the passport-for-investment trade.

Unlike the "colored" status appointed to Indians, Malays, Pakistanis and other Asians, South Africa has changed the racial status of Hong Kong Chinese to "white" in order to attract wealthy businessmen. All the privileges of Anglo and Teutonic South Africans will be granted to former residents of Hong Kong.

Business is not bad for the immigration specialists, and it may get better before even they have to apply to exit from the People's Republic of China in 1997. Possibly, mainland China will unveil more of its intentions toward the island in the future and give uncertain residents a hint at what is to be expected in what will become one of the most politically-unique territories in all the world.

may have acted illegally when it decided in an executive session to make the trade.

Under state law, a public body in an executive, closed session cannot take legal action, Bodney said.

Under state law, a public body in an executive, closed session cannot take legal action, Bodney said.

"As I understand it, this meeting was not properly noticed, and the city, in contravention of the law, took legal action on this matter," he added.

"They need to ratify what they did in an open meeting, so the public can attend it and discuss the issues."

Cassano, who received tickets but gave them away, said the council never made a deal with the Cardinals.

"To my knowledge, we never asked for tickets, we never cut a deal as a council, and if anything we took the stand that there would be no purchase of tickets with public money," Cassano said.

The vice mayor said he thought the tickets were a gift from Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill.

"It would be nice if Mr. Bidwill would send us a check for the parking and we would return the tickets," he said.

Cassano also criticized the Valley media, which have reported the trade and who will receive free parking.

"That's who is going to be using that parking," Cassano said. "I don't see the media paying for the parking. I don't see the media paying for tickets to get into the game, and I find it kind of ironic that they would take the approach that we did something that was not above board."

"It was a set of circumstances that occurred, and it wasn't done for personal gain by any of the council members."

Meanwhile, the council and the state attorney general's office are planning investigations to find out if the state Open Meeting Law was violated.

Student services

"Student services really has the guts, if you will, of student information," he said. "It helps you register, it keeps track of your transcripts at the registrars office. . . . Essentially it is your diary."

Because a centralized service does not exist, Conway said each university is spending a lot of money on their own systems.

"Each of the campuses is investing their own resources in building their each individual systems," he said. "We think that there is significant opportunity for the three to get together and look at a system that is flexible in meeting their individual needs, but at the same time provide system-wide information."

The commission was formed by former Gov. Evan Mecham to identify areas of wasteful spending in state government.

Arthur Young had submitted a draft of an audit of the state to the commission in April. Nearly 300 recommendations were made that projected to save the state $250 million.

The firm also is studying administration at the state's community colleges.

ASASU Senate ready to tackle issues, 'nightmares'

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Some are dreaming and some already are having nightmares, but new and old members of the Associated Student Senate appear ready to tackle the issues that will be placed before them this year.

The ASASU Senate held its first general meeting Tuesday night, and Yousef Hashimi, the veteran senator from the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences, said he was pleased with the orientation-like meeting.

"It was a feel-out period, so that they (the new senators) could learn about each other and how meetings are actually run," Hashimi said. "And a lot of them were overwhelmed."

ASASU Executive Vice President Matt Niemeyer, who heads the student Senate, said Hashimi will be his nightmare this year. He said the senior senator knows more than he does about the Senate's bylaws.

Niemeyer said he is optimistic about the new Senate, even though he has not yet had much contact with some of the senators.

"I can't predict what the senators will do," he said. "(But) I think I have a real good bunch."

He admitted that he was "sweating bullets" before the Senate meeting.

Stacey Vogel, a new senator from the College of Fine Arts, said the Senate is strong and apathy will not be a problem this year.

"I'm really excited to be here," she said.

One of the major issues facing Vogel and the rest of the senators this year is the future of West Hall, which houses the School of Social Work, Niemeyer said.

Last semester, the ASASU Senate took up the issue of preserving historic buildings on campus, especially West Hall, a historic residence hall turned office and classroom building.

"If student government hopes to make a difference, this is an issue that should be dealt with," he said.

Hashimi agreed with Niemeyer and said the Senate will most likely hammer away at this issue all year.

"After all, this issue will be here after we are, and it needs to be addressed," Hashimi said.

Another important issue facing the Senate this year will be the student recreation center, which is under construction north of Apache Boulevard and east of Parking Garage No. 1, Hashimi said.

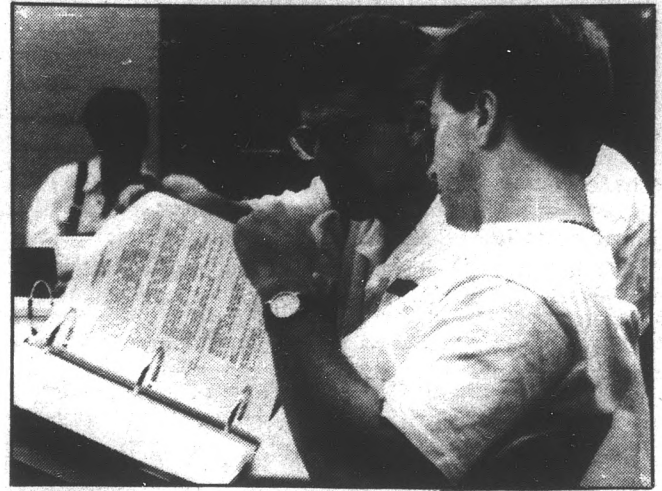

ASASU President John Fees said last week that he will make sure that the center will be completed on its scheduled date — August 1989.

Hashimi said he will stand by Fees and keep an eye on construction.

Another priority this year will be the Phoenix Cardinals, Monday night football and parking near Sun Devil Stadium.

"There are tons of bugs that need to be worked out," Hashimi said.

Hashimi said he will work with Richard Landreth, the director of parking services, and Leon Shell, dean of student life, on a parking plan.

The Senate also will continue its emphasis on ASU club and organizational funding, Niemeyer said.

"I really feel we are here for the students — for the clubs," he said.

It's old home week on Mill Avenue!

Gee, it's that time of year again...when school starts and everyone is scrambling to get organized for another fun year in academia.

We'd like to offer you a simple solution to scrambling: downtown Tempe. It's just a few blocks northwest of campus...a ten minute walk or five minutes by bike. With over three hundred retail businesses to serve you, you'll find everything you need to get ready for school...from fresh baked cookies to personal computers...and everything in between.

You probably want to decorate your new abode. Do it with style and imagination...do it downtown. Start with a few posters and finish it up with a new desk...or even a new bed!

What about your new fall wardrobe? From shoes to sandals; from shorts to formal; from T-shirts to bathing suits to the latest fashions; from sunglasses to jewelry; from private labels to designer gear...and best of all, a great selection. Just try it once...downtown will become a habit.

You're wondering about entertainment. The free entertainment lies in the beauty of downtown. Period. It's newly bricked streets, facelifted exteriors and new buildings give downtown the "Old Town" Tempe quality. Sort of a homey feeling...something you don't get at a mall a shopping center. After a few visits downtown, you'll probably get to know a few of the shop owners... what a great way to meet new people!

Back to the part about entertainment. There's a lot of it. Especially jazz. There are also a few watering holes and nite clubs. You can even do happy hour on a patio. Just keep your eyes and ears open to what's happening downtown...and enjoy it.

When the old tummy is screaming for some nourishment; head north. Downtown offers a fabulous variety of good food...from a Jumbo Jack to a fresh deli sandwich to fresh seafood... and a lot in between. Try lunch downtown today and get acquainted with your neighbors.

And don't forget the service retailers...banks, copy centers, travel agents, lawyers, salons, etc. They're waiting to serve you.

The Mill Avenue Merchants Association would like to invite you to visit convenient downtown Tempe and meet some friendly faces.

See you soon!

ASU office plans to revamp ride share program

By ROBIE KAKONGE
State Press

The coordinator for the Commuter Students' Association said ASU needs to be committed to the University's thousands of commuter students.

"We face a phenomenal task, and it's going to be a real challenge to make the effort and try to make the more than 37,000 commuting students connect off campus," association coordinator Janet Steinkamp said.

Of the University's nearly 43,000 students, about 5,000 live on campus.

Steinkamp, who worked in the ASU Resident Life office for two years before taking on her position with the association, said that ASU plans to improve its ride share program so that students will become "connected."

"Last year the Student Tenant Association used a new computer system to match students who wanted to drive and those who needed rides," she said.

The association hopes to plug into Maricopa County's and the state's ride-sharing computers in September, Steinkamp said.

With all of the construction at ASU, Steinkamp said ride sharing would help reduce parking problems, save gas, avoid parking tickets, eliminate some need for parking decals and help reduce car insurance costs.

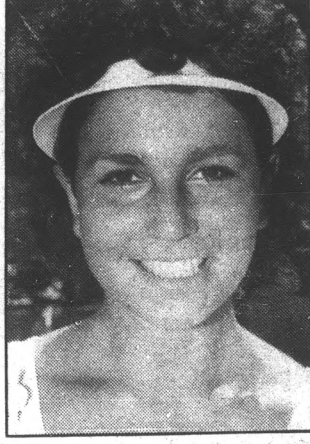

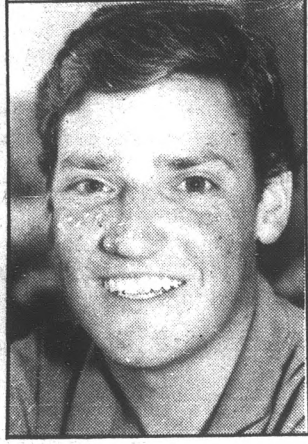

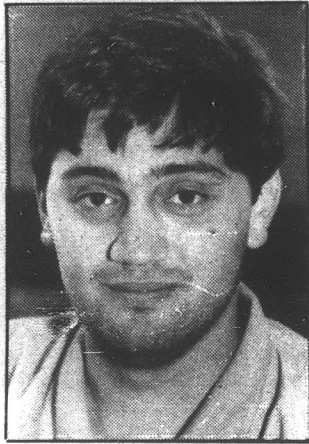

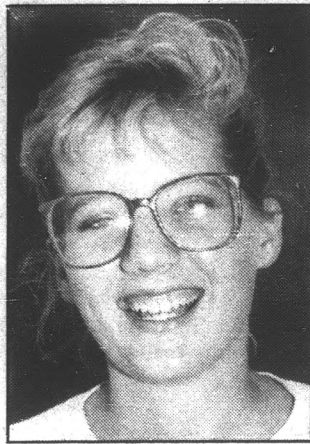

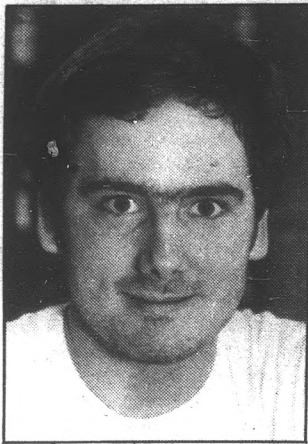

"And you would have someone to chat with in the morning."

In addition to improved commuter services, Steinkamp said the University wants to involve more commuter students in community volunteer programs.

"There are a lot of good panhellenic events taking place on campus, but there are a lot more people out there who need our help than just on Christmas," she said, adding that she wants to go beyond the scope that the Greek system donates to charities.

"And it would be nice if students were able to help out in their community, in areas like the homeless, centers for abused women, and Valley Big Brothers and Sisters," she said.

ASU student 'critical but stable' after two-car collision

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

An ASU student was injured critically Wednesday in a two-car collision at Jentilly Lane and Broadway Road.

Robert Morris Spicer, 20, 2728 E. Pierson St., Phoenix, suffered head injuries and was airlifted to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital-Osborn, where he is listed in critical but stable condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Police said Spicer, a senior zoology major, was injured at about 7:34 a.m.

police report

His car, which was traveling west on Broadway Road, was struck by another car as Spicer turned north on Jentilly Lane, Sgt. Al Taylor, a Tempe police spokesman, said.

Taylor said the driver of the other car, 42-year-old Sharon Marie Rayman, 1207 E. El Parque Drive, Tempe, was taken to Desert Samaritan Hospital where she was treated and released.

No citations have been issued, and the accident is still under investigation, Taylor said.

In other incidents:

•Two construction workers were injured, one critically, when a wood-framed wall fell on them.

John Gentry, 29, address unknown, suffered a severe back injury and was airlifted to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he is listed in stable condition. Steve Baker, 25, address unknown, suffered minor injuries and was taken to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released.

Tempe Assistant Fire Chief Jim Gaintner said the men were injured at about 8:20 a.m. at 115 W. Calle de Caballos, while remodeling a house.

Gaintner said other workers pulled the wall off the men before firefighters arrived at the scene. He did not know what the men were doing at the time of the accident.

•Someone put a firecracker in Deputy City Manager Jerry Gieger's mail box Tuesday, police said.

Police said the firecracker, which did not explode, was put in the mailbox at Gieger's home in the 9000 block of South Kachina Drive at about 10:20 p.m. A witness saw a compact car leaving the scene with its lights off, police said.

•An ASU student was arrested, charged and released Tuesday for driving on a suspended license, police said.

Police said Danny P. Adams also was arrested for a contempt of court warrant from Globe City Court. He posted $161 bond and was released.

•Two bicycles were reported stolen from the southwest side of Manzanita Residence Hall, police said.

Police said a 27-inch Scott Boulder 10-speed mountain bicycle was taken sometime between Monday and Tuesday. The bicycle was worth $387.

A silver 27-inch Ross 10-speed was stolen sometime between Aug. 19 and Aug. 23, police said. Loss is $110.

•Someone stole a student's wallet and contents from Room 101 in Murdock Lecture Hall Monday, police said. Loss is $310.

•Police said someone stole a $200 Pioneer recorder from Room A-18 in the Language and Literature Building.

Women entering construction field flooded with well-paying job offers

By TERESA OWEN
State Press

An ASU department chairman said he has a career for women that has largely remained a secret.

Construction.
Of the May 1988 graduates from the University's Department of Construction, 16 percent were women. All the women were flooded with job offers with good pay, department chairman William Badger, said.

"We're delighted," he said.
Women are becoming more computer literate as well as taking more science and math courses, Badger said, adding it opens opportunities in construction's managerial and engineering departments.

Arizona also generates better-than-average career opportunities for construction graduates. Fifty-one percent of the top 100 firms in Arizona are construction-related.

In addition, the ASU department has intensely recruited women, Badger said. "We look for good students," he said.

More women are beginning to realize that there is a future in the construction business because of high pay and prestige.

The demand for construction graduates, not only in the Valley but nationwide, continues to grow, Badger said. ASU construction science graduates rank in the upper 10 percent of beginning salaries for University graduates.

Civil engineers earn an average of $24,000 annually and the constructors earn $26,900, Badger said.

BULIMIA

Some meals always include a laxative. Bulimics understand why. Fortunately, so do we. We know life doesn't have to revolve around endless bingeing and purging. To regain control, call the people at Arizona's only facility dedicated exclusively to the diagnosis and treatment of eating disorders.

Jessica Hahn more than just another Valley radio voice

By HOWELL J. MALHAM JR.
State Press

Tired with scandal and in search of a change of pace, former PTL secretary and current Playboy covergirl Jessica Hahn announced Wednesday that she will become a member of KOY-FM's morning radio team.

Hahn, whose alleged sexual liaison with PTL founder Jim Bakker launched her into controversial stardom, said her new career will give her a chance to "be a part of something good."

"I want to show people that there's more to me than scandal and show that I have something more to offer," the 29-year-old Hahn told a group of reporters in Phoenix.

"It's brought me great joy to be a part of this team," she said. "This is going on with my life, and I'm really happy to get the opportunity.

"I hope that I can do a good job, make people happy, make people laugh — and lighten things up."

KOY operations manager Jay Stevens said Hahn has been hired on a 30-day renewable contract and will be part of the station's morning drive team known as the "Y-Morning Zoo" from 6 a.m. to 10 a.m. on 95.5 FM.

Stevens said the idea to hire Hahn stemmed from Hahn's successful appearance on the station earlier this month.

"We called Jessica in Los Angeles to do a telephone interview with us and after the phone interview she told these guys (the morning team) that she had so much fun doing it, that she'd like to come to Phoenix and do the show live on the air," Stevens said.

The station brought Hahn to town Aug.

18th as a guest disc jockey on the morning show.

"The response, I've got to tell you, was unbelievable. The phone lines were jammed with the callers," Stevens said. "And to be quite honest with you, the response was overwhelmingly positive."

Stevens said hiring Hahn is not a publicity stunt.

"We feel that Jessica has the potential to be a strong radio personality on Y 95."

Hahn has posed nude twice for Playboy. The magazine's current issue focuses on her extensive cosmetic surgery, which included a breast-enlargement.

A devoted Christian, Hahn said her appearances in Playboy are not sacrilegious.

"I know that God understands, and that's just a special relationship — and he loves me."

The photosynthesis center's mission is to train graduate as well as undergraduate students in botany and chemistry sciences, he said, adding that about 50 students, faculty and staff will work at the center, along with visiting scientists from other universities.

"It (the center) will draw students from many interests," he said, adding that the center's diverse staff will provide a number of approaches to studying photosynthesis.

"We can come at it from many directions," he said.

In addition, the center will study how plants store the sun's energy, Blankenship said. Although there is much information already about photosynthesis, "there is still a tremendous amount to be learned," he said.

Because this is basic science research, the center will not develop new products. Rather, the center will study what happens during the first phases of photosynthesis, Blankenship said.

There are possible future applications involving photosynthesis processes, including applications with agriculture and solar energy, he said.

"The ideas we uncover will be valuable (to agriculture and solar energy). Once these principles are understood, other scientists may be able to utilize them to develop useful applications."

Investigation of Ford seat belts opens; suit settled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal engineers have opened an investigation of claims that the rear seat belts on 1.7 million Ford Escort and Mercury Lynx cars can cripple passengers in a crash, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Wednesday.

But the agency said the belts, which have an unusual design, comply with federal standards.

NHTSA granted part of a petition by a La Plata, Md., couple, Larry and Patricia Garrett, whose son was crippled in a 1985 accident while riding in a Ford Escort.

The Garretts, through their attorneys, alleged a strap retainer causes the rear seat belts on the Escort and Lynx cars to ride up on the passenger's waist rather than settling around the hips, greatly increasing the likelihood of serious injury in accidents.

In the event of a collision, they said, a seat belt over the waist cuts through softer parts of the body to the spinal column, while the hips provide a large mass of bone that enables a belt to hold a passenger in place without serious injury.

The Garretts last December won a $3.3 million judgment against Ford Motor Co. for their son's injuries.

NHTSA in a letter said: "Based on the limited information gathered in our technical review, we are unable to conclude that the strap retainer has had an adverse effect on the performance of the system."

"However, testing did indicate that the Escort and Lynx rear safety belts with and without the strap retainer fit differently on test subjects compared to rear safety belts in some other cars."

The agency said its investigation was needed "to understand the safety effects of the different fit of these belts."

NHTSA's engineering analysis, a mid-level investigation, covers 1984 to 1988 Escort and Lynx cars.

Ford said after the petition was filed that the seat belts were positioned properly during the Garretts' accident and it attributed their son's crippling injury to the force of the crash.

The automaker on Wednesday vowed to cooperate with NHTSA's investigation and expressed confidence the agency would find no safety-related defect in the belts.

The belts "meet or exceed all federal motor vehicle safety standard performance requirements, including those for location, fit, strength and ease of use," Ford said.

A Washington attorney for the Garretts, Harold Sakayan, accused NHTSA of trying to put the case "on the back burner for awhile" in response to congressional critics.

"The letter they sent us today acknowledged there was a problem," Sakayan said. "They acknowledge that the belt didn't fit the way it should. They didn't tell us what the problem was. What are they waiting for if there was a problem?"

James Garrett, then 11, was buckled into the back seat of the Escort when it crashed into a tractor-trailer truck near Annapolis, Md.

Two front-seat occupants were hospitalized but were spared crippling injuries, despite the crumpling of the passenger compartment in the head-on crash.

James became a paraplegic as a result of injuries in the crash.

Ford tries to draw from 1987 learning experience

By JEFF SHAIN
State Press

After the nightmare that was 1987, Daniel Ford wasn't about to let all those hard knocks go to waste.

Ford spent most of last season in the hot seat or on the bench, the leading scapegoat in last year's quarterback derby that produced no clear-cut winner, a lot of bruised egos and a 7-4-1 record.

It was Ford's ego that likely was the most bruised. He drew the starting assignment for 10 of the 12 games but was benched for two big meetings against Pac-10 Conference foes: Washington and UCLA.

He came back with a stellar Freedom Bowl performance against Air Force, throwing for 272 yards and a touchdown in Arizona State's 33-28 victory and earning Most Valuable Player honors along the way.

With the season completed, Ford had the option of letting his eligibility expire and finishing his college career on a high note or petitioning for an additional year and going back into the fire.

Nobody would have blamed Ford if he had packed his bags and never given another thought to Arizona State. But he chose the second option.

"It was kind of a thing where it almost was an option for me," Ford said. "But once I learned everything, it really meant a lot to me to get back my senior year. I feel like a lot of my goals that I set for myself can come true now. I learned a lot of things the hard way. I know very well what kind of quarterback I can be."

Ford had lost a year of eligibility involving his transfer from Minnesota to Tulsa to Arizona State but successfully petitioned for his senior year during the off-season. With that cloud gone from over his head and a new head coach and offensive coordinator, the enjoyment of football has returned for him.

"It's a lot of fun just getting ready for your opponents instead of being hassled about your own teammates," Ford said.

That was a large part of the problem last year, as former Coach John Cooper declared the quarterback position open competition between Ford, Paul Justin, John Walker and Kent Kiefer.

"I don't know why they decided to do it the way they did," Ford said.

The situation never really changed, although Ford's number was the one most often called.

But along with the job came heaps of criticism, not all of it from the fans. Former offensive coordinator Jim Colletto was on record as saying that Ford's job was, not to win games, but "not to lose games." Cooper called one poorly-thrown ball against California the "worst pass I have seen in my coaching career."

The criticism took its toll on Ford, who chose to endure the criticism in silence even while being benched for Justin against Washington and in favor of Walker against UCLA.

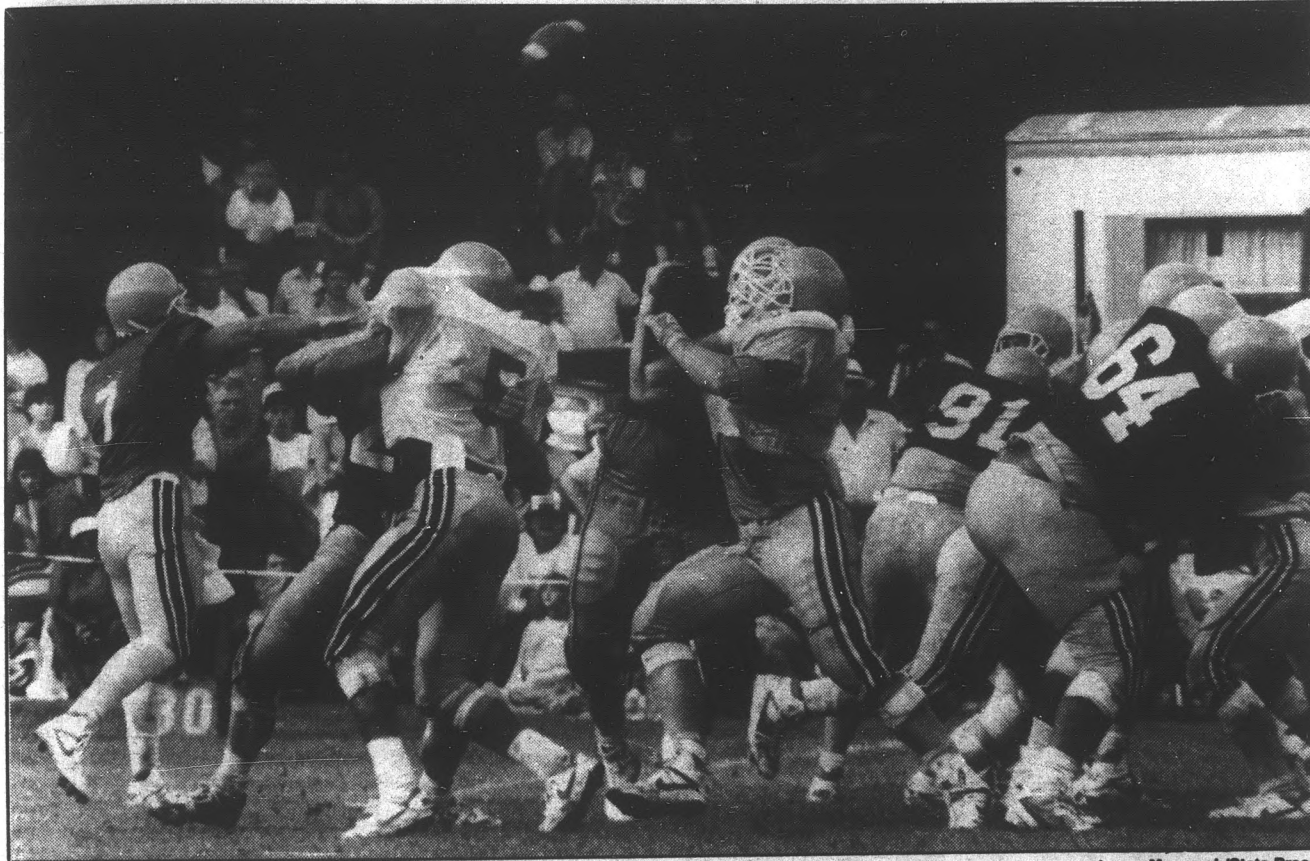

"A lot of people who didn't know we're getting involved and sharing opinions," Ford said. "If you're not out there and haven't been in it, it's hard to know what's going on. I knew I was going to be back in in a couple of series, but no one else knew. It was kind of embarrassing walking around and having everyone say something about you that you know is not true."

So Ford suffered the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune but now believes he has grown from the experience.

"As bad as it seems, I'm stronger for it," he said. "Now that sounds like some sort of hokey-pokey bunk, but it's true. I'm stronger for it."

"Now, I wouldn't recommend it for the average person to

ASU defensive coaches play game of 'What's My Line?'

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

When opposing offensive linemen look across the line of scrimmage during Sun Devil football games, they will be greeted by unfamiliar faces.

All four of last season's ASU starting defensive linemen — defensive tackle Shawn Patterson, defensive end Trace Armstrong, defensive end Pat Taylor and nose guard Mark Duckens — are no longer on the team.

But defensive line coach Mike Ackerley said he is confident his players will present a threat to opposing quarterbacks.

"The defensive line is as physical as any that I've been around," Ackerley said. "We can't wait to line them up against other teams and see what happens. We're excited; they're a great bunch of guys. They're young but they work really hard."

In fact, Ackerley is looking beyond simply filling gaps and is expecting the youths to set an example for the entire team.

"We're expecting the line to set the tempo for the whole defense," Ackerley said.

"We're looking for the four guys who really want to play."

Redshirt freshman defensive tackle Shane Collins has the job of replacing Patterson, who signed with the Green Bay Packers this season.

"Any time you lose a Shawn Patterson there will be a big hole to fill," Ackerley said. "Patterson is gone. Shane Collins is going to be as good. He's only a freshman; he has four years ahead of him. He just needs to get into the heat of the battle and get some experience."

Sophomore Andre Lacey, who Ackerley said has improved tremendously over the summer, will back up Collins at tackle.

"We are positive this fall," Ackerley said.

Whistle blown on Rote, Cardinals in inaugural 'Penalty Box'

Dave Hodges
Sports Editor

Welcome to the Penalty Box — a weekly assortment of people, places and things that deserve to be in, well, a penalty box. So without wasting any time, let's blow the whistle on the first inductees of the fall.

TWO MINUTES FOR HOOKING — Rock Rote, that sportscaster with the rugged good looks for KTVK-TV, was fired from his job in July after he allegedly shared some alcoholic beverages with underage females during one of the station's "Arizona USA" tours.

The good news is that we don't have to put up with the "Ray, Rock and Ronnie" commercials that are choreographed like a Broadway production. The bad news is we had to endure Ray Scott, Frank Kush and Ronnie Duncan on Phoenix Cardinals preseason games.

The solution: turn the volume down on the television and listen to Tom Dillon and KTAR on the radio.

As for Rote, one would think an incident like this might jeopardize his journalistic career. But lo and behold, Rote was hired by giant WCBS in New York. I wonder what Rote's next stunt will be. Is there any justice?

TWO MINUTES FOR ROUGHING AND A FIVE-MINUTE BENCH MISCONDUCT — Sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom were indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury on charges of racketeering and extortion.

The Chicago Sun-Times also reported that a New York gangster is expected to be accused of attempting to physically force athletes into signing contracts with certain agents.

Don't collegiate athletes have enough to worry about with academics and athletics? They do not need money-grubbing agents and gangsters parading around for contracts. What happened to the good old days when the athletes contacted prospective agents?

TWO MINUTES FOR CHARGING AND A GAME MISCONDUCT — Sports fans in St. Louis already are laughing at Phoenix.

The knowledgeable fans beneath the Gateway Arch grew very tired of having a mediocre football team in their city, so they ceased to support it and channeled their money to the baseball Cardinals and the hockey Blues.

So what happened? Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill packed up all of the team's belongings and moved to the land of opportunity — the Valley of the Sun.

In an attempt to quickly recover some of the money the team lost while in St. Louis, Bidwill decided to charge exorbitant ticket prices and premiums that discriminate against the average football fan in order to make an extra buck... a lot of extra bucks.

Although premiums have been attached to season ticket prices at Sun Devil Stadium for years, Bidwill's price for the average ticket is $38 a game, including exhibitions.

An average ticket for a Major League Baseball game is about $9.50 and an average seat at a Phoenix Suns game will run $12 to $14. An entire season at ASU football games runs $26 for students.

So what does that mean? Well, while Bidwill's knowledge of the free enterprise system appears to be working in his favor, he already has alienated many potential fans.

To charge a minimum of $25 a seat for two exhibition games is outrageous. Surely Bidwill had to realize that it would be good publicity to charge a nominal admission fee for the two games so that as many people as possible could experience an NFL football game, although half the game would be played by second- and third-string players.

Bidwill must have known that if the two games were sold out he could have reached 2 million people in the Phoenix metropolitan area on local television broadcasts.

But with the team 0-3 going into today's final preseason game, fans will have to make a choice at the end of the football season. Will it be the excitement and spectacle of the college game or the big money and names of the NFL? Only time will tell.

FIVE MINUTES FOR FIGHTING — Heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson proved he was mortal Tuesday when he broke his hand during a street fight.

The scuffle between former boxing opponent Mitch Green and Tyson may have jeopardized the champ's Oct. 8 fight against Frank Bruno.

Doesn't Tyson realize that you always protect your prime investment, in his case his punching hand? Maybe he missed that scene in Bull Durham.

Coe can't run in Seoul; 'wild-card' entry pulled LONDON (AP) — Sebastian Coe's flickering hopes of a third straight Olympic 1,500-meter title were extinguished Wednesday when the head of the IOC abandoned efforts to seek a special wild-card entry for the middle distance star to compete in Seoul.

IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch said he was very, very sorry about withdrawing his suggestion but said he had to abide by the Olympic charter and the wishes of Coe's fellow athletes.

Samaranch announced his decision after returning to IOC headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland, following a vacation.

"Sebastian Coe is a very special athlete and a very special person also," Samaranch said. "The Olympic movement is in debt to him. (But) the Olympic charter is very clear. It says only three athletes per country" can go to the Games.

Granting Coe a special invitation to run in Seoul, Samaranch added, would be quite impossible under the rules of the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

Samaranch first revealed his wild-card plan last weekend, two weeks after Coe performed disastrously in the British Olympic trials and was left out of the team for Seoul.

The 31-year-old runner — 1,500-meter Olympic champion in 1980 and 1984 — failed to reach the final of the 1,500 and completely skipped the 800 meters, for which he still holds the world record.

● AGENTS, FOOTBALL PLAYER INDICTED FOR RACKETEERING — Several agents and Cris Carter of the NFL's Philadelphia Eagles were indicted Wednesday on charges ranging from racketeering to perjury following an investigation of illegal payments and threats used to sign dozens of athletes. Agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom are accused of offering athletes cash, cars, clothing and trips in exchange for agreements allowing Walters and Bloom to represent them in professional contract negotiations.

● HOCKEY PLAYER GETS DAY IN JAIL FOR SWINGING STICK — Warning that professional athletes are not above the law, a judge sentenced Minnesota North Stars forward Dino Ciccarelli to one day in jail and fined him $1,000 Wednesday for hitting another player with his stick. He is believed to be the first NHL player to receive a jail term for an on-ice attack of another player.

● GRETZKY GIVEN BLANK CONTRACT — Wayne Gretzky, told by Los Angeles Kings owner Bruce McNall to write his own contract, is asking for a four-year deal that will pay him $2 million a year plus bonuses, the London Free Press reported Wednesday. Gretzky was traded to the Kings by the Edmonton Oilers Aug. 9.

● McKNIGHT CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY WITH MEDAL AT AMATEUR — Tom McKnight celebrated his 34th birthday Wednesday with a 4-under-par 66 that earned him the qualifying medal at the 88th U.S. Amateur Championship at Hot Springs, Va. Defending U.S. Amateur champion and former ASU star Bill Mayfair carded a 70 at the Cascades and was at 141, four shots behind McKnight.

● GREEN CALLS TYSON 'SISSY' — Mitchell Green says he will not drop charges that heavyweight champion Mike Tyson hit him with a sucker punch outside an after-hours Harlem haberdashery. Green said Tyson "hit me and ran like a sissy."

"There are a bunch of guys who are really working hard."

Senior Saute Sapolu, who played nine games at the nose guard position, will return to the lineup at defensive end.

"Sapolu has played a lot of positions," Ackerley said. "All fall and spring he has played defensive end. I think he has found the spot he can play best. He is comfortable with this position."

Ackerley said Sapolu's quickness will be an advantage in the pass rush. Although Sapolu twisted an ankle at Camp Tontozona last week, Ackerley said he would be at full strength in a couple of days.

First-team nose guard Derek Zazueta redshirted last year after transferring from Northern Arizona, where he was named Most Improved Player in 1986.

Ackerley said he is expecting Zazueta and junior Don Chuhlantseff to alternate at nose guard during the season.

Chuhlantseff, who is currently out with a fractured finger, may move into the starting role within three weeks.

Chuhlantseff recently transferred from Fresno City Community College, where he earned first-team Northern California and first-team all-Central Valley Conference honors last year.

Ackerley said sophomore defensive end Jeff Johnson, who suffered a fractured hand during the summer, will miss action early in the season.

go through. This isn't the straight-arrow way to make it to the top or anything. It's definitely no fun going through something like that. I can't recommend it for anybody."

This year he enters the season as the undisputed starting quarterback, and it will take more than one bad pass before the coaching staff decides to make a change.

"I don't think there is any question that he's more comfortable and shows more maturity," Sun Devil coach Larry Marmie said. "He feels good knowing he's the quarterback. He doesn't have to worry that if he throws an interception, he's lost the job."

Ford also is drawing a lot of confidence from Mike Martz, who replaces Colletto as offensive coordinator after coaching quarterbacks under Cooper. With a change in personnel came a change in style from the scream-till-you're-hoarse Colletto.

"For me, it's been a world of difference," Ford said. "Coach Colletto's style was . . . well, it was Coach Colletto. I'm not saying his style is wrong — he's a great offensive line coach. I just didn't feel as good as I do this year."

"When I go out now, it's a situation where me and Coach Martz work together. It's a teaching situation. I come out, I have a lot of fun at practice. I really enjoy being out. I'm not just saying that — I enjoy the practice and trying to get better each day. I'm thinking about improving instead of saying, 'God, I don't want to make a mistake.'"

Ford calls the 1988 Sun Devil offense "multiples" better than last year's, a pretty bold statement considering Randall McDaniel and Aaron Cox were first-round draft picks and three more from 1987 are playing professionally.

"We reloaded very well," Ford contends. "What we replaced them with were juniors and seniors — people that have understudied and have a good knowledge of the offense. It's not a situation where we have to play freshmen that don't have a good understanding of it."

He adds that Arizona State's program is just beginning to enter an era where the Sun Devils should be able to replace its top people with quality understudies every year.

"People always panic in college football," he said. "They think, 'Oh God, they've graduated.' But everybody graduates. (Oklahoma) graduates every year and every year OU is good. That's the kind of program Arizona State is approaching — one that's top of the line. We're reloading with some great athletes."

Ford was especially laudatory towards the running backs, saying he might wind up having it too good.

"With all those great running backs, I just hope that they don't switch to the wishbone," he said. "I'm having too much fun throwing. Being in command of all this offense has to offer me, I'm having such a good time playing ball."

Cardinals attempt to win 1st game at KC

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Phoenix will attempt to avoid a winless preseason Thursday when the Cardinals meet the Kansas City Chiefs in their first return trip to Missouri since moving from St. Louis.

Phoenix, 0-3, and Kansas City, 2-0-1, are each coming off less than inspiring performances. The Cardinals had trouble holding on to the ball in a 19-16 overtime loss to Minnesota Sunday while the Chiefs blew a lead and allowed themselves to be tied 21-21 by the Green Bay Packers.

The game also marks a homecoming of sorts for Tony Jordan, the fifth-round draft choice of Phoenix from Kansas State who has begun to inspire comparisons with former Cardinals' back Ottis Anderson.

"It's a good compliment to me," said Jordan, who led

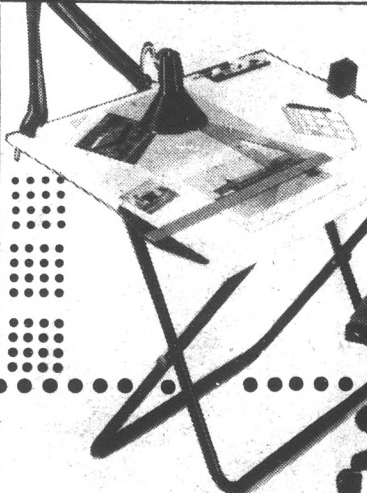

Kansas State in rushing his last two seasons and who now wears Anderson's old No. 32. "I don't think I'm as good as he is right now, but hopefully in the next couple of years or so, I can get as good as he was. It's a compliment to be talked about in the same sentence as him."

Jordan leads Phoenix with 162 yards on 22 carries. He gained 90 yards in a game against Seattle and 72 yards against New Orleans, scoring three touchdowns.

A sore knee kept Jordan out of the game against Minnesota in which Cardinals quarterbacks Neil Lomax and Cliff Stoudt each threw two interceptions.

Lomax was two of 11 for 25 yards in the first quarter and left the game in the third quarter after completing 12 of 30 passes for 128 yards.
