

Architecture director plans to step down

By BEN McCONNELL
State Press

Roger Schluntz, ASU's director of the School of Architecture, has announced he will step down from his post next year, bringing to four the number of high-level administrators in the last two months who have announced plans to quit.

"I've pretty much accomplished everything I wanted to accomplish. Now I want to get back to design work," Schluntz said Monday.

He has been the school's director since 1980 and plans to return to the architecture faculty when he steps down at the end of spring semester 1989.

'Somebody told me I'm the longest-running department head currently at ASU. I feel very fortunate.'
— Roger Schluntz

"You have to juggle lots of competing interests and constituencies, and it's a time-consuming process to satisfy the needs of 700 students. Somebody told me I'm the longest-running department head currently at ASU. I feel very fortunate.

"I'm 44, so I'm not headed for retirement."

When Schluntz took on the director's job, the school had 17 faculty members. The school now has 27 full-time faculty and offers three degrees: a bachelor's of science in design; a master's in building design; and a master's of architecture.

He is credited with helping land the school's $11.5 million, 100,000 square-foot expansion project. Currently being built on the corner of University Drive and Forest Avenue, the building is scheduled to be completed in spring 1989.

Schluntz said he has been thinking of resigning for three years and said he formally notified Dean John Meunier in An urban design specialist, Schluntz is a consultant to the Design Arts Program of the National Endowment for the Arts and recently was a project director for a study on federal architecture conducted by the National Academy of Sciences.

Meunier said an international search will be conducted to replace Schluntz.

"Roger has established this post as one of the most important architectural leadership positions in the country," Meunier said. "We expect to develop a very strong field of candidates eager to build on his achievements."

Schluntz joins a growing list of University officials who have announced resignations.

President J. Russell Nelson nearly two weeks ago told the faculty of his plans to step down next year and return to the business faculty. Associate Vice President for student affairs Marvalene Hughes will become vice president for student affairs at the University of Toledo in Ohio next month. B. Dell Felder left his post as vice provost of ASU West this summer to become provost and vice president of Eastern Washington University in Cheney, Washington.

Interim vice provost named for ASU West campus

By SHERI JOHNSON
State Press

Charles W. Connell, former acting academic director for Arts and Sciences at ASU West, has been named as interim vice provost and dean of faculty for the westside campus.

"It's going to be great excitement and a lot of challenges," Connell said Monday, adding that he's pleased with the quality of faculty and staff who will be working with him.

Connell's term, which began Aug. 15, will extend through June 1989. But he said he is unsure whether he will remain in the position after June.

"I do have some concern about the ongoing development of programs in arts and sciences," he said.

Connell said he would know by the end of this year if he will be interested in staying with the position.

Connell said he plans to forward the agenda of former vice provost B. Dell Felder. Felder resigned this summer to become provost and vice president at Eastern Washington University in Cheney, Washington.

"It (the agenda) includes the ongoing process of hiring well-qualified faculty on a permanent basis on the west campus," he said.

Currently, full-time staff comprise about 50 percent of ASU West faculty, Connell said, adding that his goal is to raise it to about 80 percent.

"We'd like to be there by 1991," he said.

Connell said other goals set for the west campus include improving students preparedness for attending ASU West, expanding the relationship with community colleges and establishing a more concrete faculty and student minority recruitment and retention plan.

Connell said his duties will include working with the academic directors in developing academic programs to "maintain their sense of purpose and direction and to provide a balance within the program."

Three ASU professors bound for Olympics

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

Three ASU health and physical education professors will fly to Seoul, South Korea, next week to participate in the scientific portion of the summer Olympic games, an event that places them among the top scholars in the world.

Professors Jerry Thomas, Dan Landers and assistant professor Zung Tran will join more than 1,000 scientists and researchers from 80 nations in the Olympic Scientific Congress, which will present and discuss more than 850 research papers.

The week-long scientific event which begins Sept. 8, one week before the athletic games, is held every four years in conjunction with the Summer Olympic Games.

To select the scholars, the Scientific Organizing Committee asks for recommendations from different nations, then selects who it feels are the top scholars in the world.

Thomas said Monday that he will submit two research papers, one of which is a reaction to a genetics paper written by a Canadian researcher.

His other paper, "Knowledge Structure and Performance in Children's Sports," deals with how the knowledge of a particular activity, such as a sport, affects a child's ability to learn the physical skills required.

After the paper is presented during an interdisciplinary session, experts from other nations will react to Thomas' findings.

"I expect that it (their reaction) will depend on the perspective they're coming from," Thomas said.

He also said he expects arguments from those who believe that people learn in stages.

"They probably would try to show some evidence that my perspective is inaccurate," he said.

Tran's paper centers on evaluating three different methods for treating high levels of cholesterol: diet, exercise and a combination of both.

His paper, "The Effects of Diet and Exercise on Lipid Levels: a Meta Analysis," claims that a combination of diet and exercise is the most effective treatment, rather than one or the other. All methods are effective, but diet alone is the least effective, he said.

Tran said Monday that he expects to spend time with the other two ASU professors during his stay but said he doesn't expect to have much time for sightseeing.

"I just plan to attend the conference and sight see a little bit," he said.

Landers and ASU masters student Mark Broucek will present a paper on techniques for reducing and controlling pain through training. Landers also will present a paper on sports psychology, which includes biofeedback implications for training methods currently used by athletes.

Landers also is expected to address a German scientist's argument that all sports performance is based strictly on physiology.

Rehnquist criticizes Senate's judicial confirmation process

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist on Monday criticized the Senate's judicial confirmation process, saying that lawmakers expected judgeship nominees to give instant answers to complex constitutional questions.

Speaking before the Bicentennial Australian Legal Convention in Canberra, Australia, Rehnquist said nominees are not computers "all primed to spew out answers when the proper button was pushed."

The text of the chief justice's address was released by the Supreme Court.

Rehnquist said a judge "is not measured by his capacity to come up with instant answers to impromptu questions," but by his ability to make a decision based on "real life facts" and lengthy study of the law.

He said that process "is something which cannot possibly be duplicated in a committee hearing room, and since it cannot be duplicated, no nominee who is both prudent and honest can give categorical answers to detailed questions of Constitutional law."

Rehnquist, who appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee as a nominee for associate justice and chief justice, was especially critical of the process used to interrogate defeated Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork.

"I think I speak for a great number of my fellow citizens of the United States when I say there is a general feeling of dissatisfaction with the process attending Judge Bork's nomination — a feeling which is shared by many of those who were happy to see him denied confirmation," Rehnquist said.

Noriega extends cease-fire with Nicaraguan rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega Monday extended a five-month cease-fire with Nicaraguan rebels until the end of September.

He also called on the presidents of El Salvador, Costa Rica, Guatemala and Honduras to resume talks on a Central American peace plan. Ortega and the four other presidents last met in January.

"The Nicaraguan government extends until Sept. 30 the halt to offensive military operations . . . so the rebels can put down their arms and accept amnesty," Ortega said in a speech to a group of Indian leaders in Managua.

The rebels, known as Contras, and the Sandinista government first agreed to a cease-fire March 21. Two days later they signed a pact agreeing to negotiate an end to the 7-year-old war.

Bush: Quayle has endured 'tremendous pounding'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Vice President George Bush said Monday that his embattled running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle, has undergone "a tremendous pounding" but has "emerged to where he will be an asset" to the Republican presidential ticket.

Bush said it "doesn't bother me a bit" that the two men differ on some policy issues or that Quayle didn't know Bush has headed a presidential task force on drug interdiction since its creation in 1983.

"We're so much in sync on broad issues, you don't expect everybody to be in agreement on every single 'T' being crossed or 'I' being dotted," he said.

Bush also continued to charge that rival Michael Dukakis is soft on defense, saying the Democrat "gives me the impression he's against every new weapons system since the slingshot."

Taking questions from reporters during a tour of a defense contracting plant in a St. Louis suburb, Bush also said he's in no rush to debate Dukakis.

First recipient chosen for $750 ASU West Scholarship

Irene Estrada of Phoenix was presented last week with the first scholarship from the ASU West Scholarship Endowment Fund.

Estrada, 29, was awarded the $750 scholarship Aug. 23 at the ASU West Campus at 2636 W. Montebello in Phoenix.

Estrada, who has two children and is expecting a third in January, said: "I now survive on Aid for Dependent Children and food stamps. Although I'm not proud of it, it is necessary so that I can get the education which will make it possible for me to get out of poverty."

Irene Estrada

Estrada is expecting to graduate this spring with a degree in social work.

"It will take me five years to graduate — a little longer than I had anticipated — but I can't give up. I will be the first person in my family to receive a degree."

The scholarship was made possible from the first endowment to ASU West by the Arizona Greyhound Foundation.

"We want the fund to be flexible so that we can use the money where it is most needed," said Barbara Ridge, development officer at ASU West.

Estrada said that when she graduates, she wants to be able to help other mothers in the area who are in situations similar to hers.

ASU grad students make presentations in Texas

Three ASU graduate students in the Nuclear Sciences area made platform presentations at the World Congress on Medical Physics and Biomedical Engineering held in San Antonio, Texas, early this month.

Melissa E. Grupen, Elizabeth M. Kluksdahl and Scott E. Hill delivered their presentations to the World Congress, held from Aug. 6 through 12.

Grupen made her presentation on "Infrared Laser Heating of Thermoluminescent Plates for the Purpose of Spatially and Dosimetrically Characterizing Radiotherapy Beams."

Kluksdahl spoke on "Effects of Axial Resolution and Sampling on Image Contrast for Multiplanar Emission Tomographic Systems."

Hill made his presentation on "Relative Performance of Simulated Annealing and Traditional Iterative Method for a Miniaturized SPECT."

Abstracts of the papers were published in the Journal of Physics in Medicine and Biology.

ASU business professor wins national award

Martin T. Farris, regents' professor of transportation, has won the 1988 Joseph C. Scheleen Award for Excellence from the American Society of Transportation and Logistics, a professional organization that provides information and guidance in the fields of traffic, transportation, logistics and physical distribution management.

The award is presented annually to an individual whose innovations and contributions have advanced the entire transportation and physical distribution industry. It is named for the late editor emeritus of Traffic World and is the highest honor given by AST & L.

A faculty member in the ASU College of Business for the past 31 years, Farris has taught thousands of students, co-authored seven textbooks, written 148 articles, reviews and reports, and developed eight undergraduate and graduate courses. He has taught in the departments of economics, marketing and purchasing, transportation and operations.

Among the honors he has received are an ASU Regents' Professorship for his achievements in teaching and research and the "Transportation Man of the Year" award from Delta Nu Alpha International Transportation Fraternity. His name is included in 19 biographical listings, such as Who's Who in America, Outstanding Educators of America and American Men and Women of Science.

Dear George

The honeymoon is over for GOP candidate

Carolyn Höfig
Columnist

Dear George Bush,

It's over. I don't know how else to break it to you, George. It just won't work.

No, it's none of the things other young people and women have brought up since you announced you intended to fill Ronald Reagan's presidential shoes. I could have forgiven you for most of those; so much was simply idle partisan chatter. But at the Republican Convention you showed me a George Bush I don't even know. I'm not sure I want to know him.

I do know I don't want you to run my country.

And that's why I'm writing you this "Dear George" letter. I want you to understand why, barring the cataclysmic, I won't be accepting your invitation to dance in November.

The trouble can best be summed up in a name: Dan Quayle.

His problems are actually the least of your worries. I am less concerned with the whys of his actions in 1969 than I am with his refusal to come clean about it. Why can't you convince him to stand up once and say, "Yeah, that's what I did during the Vietnam war, and that's why. That was 20 years ago. Let's talk about the future?"

Of course, such an admission would border on sensitivity a la Alan Alda, which women say is decidedly "out," according to a story in a recent Cosmopolitan magazine. God forbid, you should make a Phil Donahue out of your Redford-esque running mate, just when his good looks have got voting-aged females swooning at the polling places, right, George?

See, that's an example of how Quayle is merely a symbol — or perhaps better, a symptom — of the bigger problem. When you decided to work on bridging the "gender gap," we all expected something reasonably solid. You know, about the size of a plank in the party platform.

Instead, you chalked up Michael Dukakis' 15-point lead among women voters to a hormonal imbalance. You gave us a pretty face and assumed we'd forget about reproductive rights and "new family issues."

With that as your "understanding" of feminine mentality, you have to wonder why you don't fare well with women?

And it doesn't end with that, George. Your choice of Dan Quayle calls up a few other disturbing questions.

You plugged away with some success at Dukakis' lack of legislative experience. You, yourself, cut a striking antithesis. You had clearly been around on Capitol Hill and you played in the big leagues.

Pat Oliphant/Universal Press Syndicate

But then you selected a running mate with all of 12 years under his congressional belt.

True, your record remains the same. But your argument is rapidly deflating and only hot air comes out.

Not even Dukakis would argue with you when you questioned the governor's background in matters of foreign policy. At least not four weeks ago.

But tell me, George, how much more does your Dan Quayle know?

In the end, it comes down to decision making, George. Yours. Not only is your decision here questionable, but how

'And that's why I'm writing you this "Dear George" letter. I want you to understand why ... I won't be accepting your invitation to dance in November.'

you arrived at it is somewhat dubious as well. With the number of other potential running mates who meet the same requirements as Dan Quayle does, and with the number of controversies that apparently came to light after you announced his selection, your decision seems to have been made hastily, even rashly.

And rash decision making is not a quality I associate with good presidents.

It's one thing if Quayle doesn't exactly conform to presidential standards. We'd all hope he'd never have to assume those duties if you're ticket won; history makes the odds fairly good.

But, like you keep suggesting to your opponent, if you lack the stuff of the nation's leader, then you don't belong in office.

Your selection of Dan Quayle as your running mate seriously challenges your qualifications.

At this point, it would do you more harm than good to drop Quayle from the ticket. That's a political reality I can accept. The fact is, Dan Quayle is a choice that never should have been made.

And that is a reality I can't ignore.

I know I promised to be true; in fact, I re-registered as a Republican in time to vote in the September primaries. But it looks like you've forced me to become one of those disturbing statistics, a party defector.

I doubt even you are surprised.

Parking, housing woes have easy solution

Editor:

Wednesday morning at 8:30 a.m. I had to drive around Parking Lot 40 for 15 minutes before a vacant space became available. One of my students has been told he had a dorm room but not until next semester. So I have a solution for hapless students without parking places or dorms: rent a mobile home and then you'll have a place to live while hunting for a parking space!

I heard of a student lying down on the curbside. A passerby accused him of being drunk. He replied, "I sent my roommate for our car and I'm saving this space 'til he gets here."

Hail Columbia! Beat the drums! And salute the flag!

Two, count them: two intelligent editorials on the same page, on the same day, Thursday, Aug. 25, 1988.

Hail and appreciation to Darrin Hostetler and Ed Schubert. Both of these guys thought — capital T — before they put those words on paper. This is simply recognition of their good work and thank God for it.

There had been an almost total absence of thoughtful, honest intelligence on the Opinion page for several prior semesters and, for starters, this semester too!

In the past, the light of intelligence would, if you were really looking for it — like a purposely very dimmed ray — prevail and shine through Darrin Hostetler's comments. Then, lo and behold, came a day when I heard him speak and thought: "I'll be — in spite of all the camouflage, this guy is intelligent! But I wondered if he had recognized it himself.

Intelligence, thank God, is a strong Force; as a matter of fact, it is The Force! All the darkness in the world cannot put out the light of one small match. But we all know that light can, and always does, eliminate darkness.

Except for rare instances, Ed Schubert's past editorial's gave evidence of in-depth observation and intelligent thought.

Now, again, today (Aug 26), there are two more intelligent editorials by the same two thinkers, on the same page. With intelligence on the editorial page, the State Press will no longer be a candidate for rejection.

It can never be forgotten that "editors" of the State Press are speaking in a publication at an institution of "Higher Learning" — where the purpose is not base, sub-gutter standards of thought; of rancid, mean-minded, unintelligent, blatantly inaccurate and dishonest use of words. The paper is representing an institution whose high purpose is to open, and to broaden, horizons of thought. And if, perchance, horizons of thought and word are substandard, to inspire to higher, more mature, intelligent awareness, honest thought-taking and civilized respect for all.

Again, yesterday's and today's editorials were mature and intelligent. And that is cause for joy!

But one more word — the Quotables — they usually aren't! Come on! There are better sources.

One nation, invisible . . . ?

Bulletin: Bush and his staff reject mandatory pledging

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

For a long time, I've advocated a law that would require all Americans to recite the Pledge of Allegiance when they go to their jobs and begin work. And before they pick up their paychecks.

And I've supported proposals that require the pledge to be recited at any and all public gatherings.

For example, why isn't the pledge required of movie audiences before a film is shown? Or at a play or sporting event? And why aren't restaurant diners asked to stand and recite the pledge when they are given their table?

My position on this issue is well known. I was the first journalist to urge laws that prohibit a bartender from serving a drink to anyone who hasn't stood at the bar and given the pledge.

And I was also the first to demand a law making it mandatory for passengers on airplanes to recite the pledge before the plane takes off. Or lands. And to expand this law to cover subway trains, buses, cabs, amusement park rides and other forms of public transportation.

But I've noticed something very troubling about this presidential campaign.

Vice President George Bush has not said one word about this issue.

Oh, sure, he's gone on and on about wanting children to recite the pledge in school, but that's an easy cop out. Everybody knows that kids enjoy the pledge. Anything to delay the moment the teacher says, "Hand in your homework."

Besides, most kids don't even know what the pledge means. Most of them say "invisible" instead of "indivisible." Who knows how many kids grew up confused about why a teacher would want us to be one invisible nation.

But to get back to Bush and his lack of a strong stance on the pledge. I have looked moment, have you ever heard of American children selling secrets to the communists? Of course not.

But there has been many a secret sold by military personnel and other government employees.

Yet Bush has not uttered one peep about the pledge being given every morning in all military mess halls, orderly rooms, barracks and latrines and on all ships at sea. Or even those docked.

Secrets have been sold by traitorous CIA men. Yet Bush, who once ran the CIA, hasn't demanded that CIA employees give the pledge.

In fact, I have it on good authority that when Bush was head of the CIA, he failed to issue an order that the pledge be recited by look good on television. But it is strictly for public consumption. It conceals a shocking omission on Bush's part.

I have discovered that Bush's own senior staff does not recite the Pledge of Allegiance when it meets with him.

Actually, it is worse than that. When it has meetings, the senior staff never recites the pledge, with or without Bush.

Nor does Bush's junior staff or even his in-between staff.

And they don't even try to conceal this lack of patriotism. When one of Bush's press aides was asked about the pledge, she matter-of-factly said:

"At their meetings? No."

Well, do they at least say a prayer?

"No."

How about the National Anthem. Do they sing it?

"No. Why are you asking this?"

The fact that she had to ask why she was being asked makes me ask whether they realize how grave this situation is. If they don't, they should ask.

Someone might wonder why I don't put these same questions to Michael Dukakis and his staff.

Why bother? He's a Democrat, suspected of being a liberal, and we all know what they're like.

But I would expect more of Bush, a Republican and a close and dear friend of Bob Hope.

Incidentally, I asked Bush's old New England prep school if the students there recite the pledge. They do not.

I just don't know what to believe in anymore.

'Besides, most kids don't even know what the pledge means. Most of them say "invisible" instead of "indivisible." Who knows how many kids grew up confused about why a teacher would want us to be one invisible nation.'

over all of his position papers and news stories going back years and years.

Not once have I seen anything that indicates he supports anyone but children being required to recite the pledge.

In other words, it seems that Bush doesn't even care if adult Americans are ever asked to do what he asks of children — to stand up and be counted, even if they think they are in favor of being invisible.

Isn't that rather odd? Consider for a his many agents.

My sources also say that Bush himself, as head of the CIA, was never once seen standing with his right hand over his heart, except when he had indigestion.

Lately, Bush has started asking audiences at some of his political appearances to join him in the pledge, as he did at the Republican National Convention.

That might impress the audiences and

Trams may take pre-recorded messages for ride

Garth Heckel/State Press

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

The Associated Students activities office is working on a plan to broadcast pre-recorded messages on the University's trams.

According to Todd Martensen, activities vice president, the messages would advertise upcoming activities in hopes of persuading the University's 39,000 commuter students to become more involved with campus events.

"The main thing I want to do this year is involve a broader base of students," Martensen said. "I want to target commuter students."

The five-minute revolving ads would be changed and updated weekly in an effort to tag students going to and from class, he added.

Martensen said he is working on a cost study to determine how much the idea will cost. Then, a prototype tram, one that runs to and from Lot 59, would likely be designated in December to find out how the recording is received by students, he said.

The idea may be fully implemented by next fall, he added.

"Hopefully this will get more students involved."

Martensen also is working on publishing an activity calendar.

Campus organizations such as Residence Life, MUAB, Student Life and Student Publications were asked by the activities office this summer to compile a list of upcoming activities.

Next week, Martensen said he will plan the calendar month-by-month. He said the publication should reach students by November.

"One of the purposes of the calendar is to help organizations not plan events on the same day," Martensen said.

In addition, Martensen said he hopes to hold between three and four activities a month.

"I want major activities and events on campus that students can enjoy," he said.

'No pass, no play' rule tentatively adopted by education board

PHOENIX (AP) — School students with failing grades would be barred from extracurricular activities starting in fall 1989, under a statewide rule tentatively adopted Monday by the state Board of Education.

"You're telling students, 'You want to participate, then you're going to pass every course you're taking,'" board member Ray Borane said.

The "no pass, no play" rule, mandated by a law passed by the state legislature this year, now must undergo a public hearing before the board takes a final vote in several months.

The standard would affect students in grades 7 through 12 and also sixth graders who attend middle schools.

The rule, tentatively adopted on a voice vote, is stricter than the Arizona Interscholastic Association's standard which requires students to be passing at least five classes before they may join in extracurricular activities. Under that rule, a student could be failing one or two classes and still participate in outside activities.

The rule voted Monday is aimed principally at students who want to play sports, Borane said. Those with failing grades would not be barred from outside activities that are part of a credit class, such as after-school band or drama performances.

House Education Committee Chairman Jim Green, R-Tucson, who pushed for a statewide standard, said he was glad the board decided on a stricter policy than the AIA rule.

"It's a start in the right direction," said Green, who added that he still would prefer that students be required to have a "C" average. "I salute the board for finally doing what they should have been doing."

In 1986, the Board of Education voted to let school districts set their own "no pass, no play" rules, and last year the board reaffirmed its decision not to set a statewide minimum standard.

But many state education officials and lawmakers said they were disappointed with the standards set by many districts, and the legislature decided to require the state board to set a minimum statewide standard.

"This policy isn't about sports. It isn't about grades," said state Education Department staffer Bernie Ronan, who drafted a proposed set of rules. "It's about young people and what they're doing in the school system."

State Schools Superintendent C. Diane Bishop said she was concerned the policy, tentatively passed Monday, would encourage children to simply drop classes they were failing. But Borane said school districts have their own policies on how many classes a child may take and when they can be dropped, adding that the state should not interfere with those policies.

A student could be banned from sports for no more than nine weeks at a time. Board members rejected a proposal under which students could have been barred for an entire semester.

The law passed earlier this year required the Board of Education to finalize the rule by Sept. 1, although the law itself doesn't take effect until Sept. 30.

Video store owner sued over camera in bathroom

CASA GRANDE (AP) — Three female former employees of a video store are suing the store's owner for allegedly placing a concealed video camera in the employees' bathroom and filming them as they used the toilet.

The suit, filed Thursday, accuses Dennis Freyermuth of invasion of privacy and intentional infliction of emotional distress and seeks unspecified general, compensatory and punitive damages to be proven at trial.

Casa Grande attorney Scott F. Sulley, who filed the suit in Pinal County Superior Court, said the camera was discovered by one of the women in February, and four separate tapes of the women have since been discovered.

Court records indicate Judge Robert R. Bean granted Sulley's motion to waive the statutory requirements of naming all parties. The motion said naming the women would subject them to future emotional distress and embarrassment.

Casa Grande Police Lt. Leo Hall said his department has investigated the charges for any possible criminal violations. "Basically what we have is we cannot find any applicable statute that exists. The only recourse we can see is the girls filing a civil suit," Hall said.

Hall said Freyermuth justified the placing of the camera in the bathroom by saying he suspected one of his employees of using cocaine. Hall, however, said he found nothing to substantiate that.

Freyermuth, who was named as a defendant along with his wife, said he will "vigorously oppose this all the way."

"I think you'll find the final outcome will show there's no merit to those charges. I'm really shocked that it's going to go all the way to this (a lawsuit)," said Freyermuth, who has owned the video store since 1980.

Leaders of Indian tribes meet over water issues

WHITERIVER (AP) — Leaders from five western Indian tribes met to discuss what they say are ongoing efforts of non-Indians to seize Indian water rights in the western United States.

White Mountain Apache Tribal Chairman Reno Johnson Sr. called the tribes together Friday to draft a joint letter to Sen. Daniel Inouye (D-HI), chairman of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee.

The letter said that water is the key to economic development on all western Indian reservations.

It said local water users associations, cities and towns, federal agencies and private citizens are opposing Indian efforts to use their own water for economic development.

The White Mountain Apaches, in east-central Arizona, are opposing the right of the state to adjudicate water on its reservation in state courts.

"It is fundamentally incomprehensible to allow Indian water rights issues to be forced into state court proceedings when the Secretary of the Interior and the attorneys who represent him have demonstrated in the past, and continue to demonstrate, their willingness to assume an adversarial posture against Indian tribes," the letter said.

It also said the procedure would have disastrous consequences for the Indian tribes.

"It was one of the most productive meetings I have ever attended," said Philip W. Olney, chairman of the Yakima Nation. "We found out we are facing many of the same problems."

Those signing the letter included Johnson, Olney, and Doren L. Morris Sr., chairman, Omaha Tribe; John Weskackie, chairman, Shoshone Arapaho Nation; Mel Tonasket, chairman, Colville Confederated Tribes; and Charles Murphy, chairman, Standing Rock Sioux.

The tribal leaders plan to meet again in September to discuss strategy.

29 arrested for feeding homeless

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police in riot gear arrested 29 people Monday as they tried to give food to the homeless in Golden Gate Park, prompting jeers and taunts from supporters.

The arrests were made after about 100 members of the group called "Food Not Bombs" marched through the Haight-Ashbury district to the park and set up tables with plates of beans and melons just before noon.

"By sending the police here, the mayor's saying it's illegal to feed people," said Stephanie Hedgecoke, an organizer for a group called "All Peoples Congress."

Hedgecoke, also a candidate for the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, stood behind two tables of food and held a five-foot yellow banner proclaiming, "Stop city attacks on the hungry and homeless."

She was later arrested.

The city had warned the group its members would be arrested if they attempted to give away food in the park, something they had done for several months. The group said the police crackdown was the result of complaints from local businesses.

Those arrested for investigation of violating various park and health violations went peacefully into police wagons. As they were taken away, they chanted, "Food not bombs" and "Arrest hunger, not free food."

"We don't want to have a confrontation," said Keith McHenry, spokesman for Food Not Bombs. "We have been doing this for eight years in other cities."

A bystander who said she supports Mayor Art Agnos said she could not understand why he allowed the crackdown.

"I was shocked by the attitude and the riot gear," said Marjorie Antenore, a teacher and 12-year resident of the neighborhood.

The mayor's office did not immediately return telephone calls for comment.

New student organization may ease library budget crunch

By ROBIE KAKONGE
State Press

A new student organization has been formed to support ASU's libraries, and the University's director of research and development said the group can help ease a library budget crunch.

Herman Goldner praised ASU Library Associates. "If this program is a success it could help the library out a lot because when it comes to library funding they (libraries) are not the most vocal," Goldner said.

"I am in favor of this program as long as student participation is on a voluntary basis because, after all, they are students."

The organization was founded by Dave Sempien, a graduate student. Sempien, a graduate assistant in library development, said the chapter offers members many benefits.

"Student members will have a number of discounts at Valley bookstores, an exciting lecture series at ASU's Kerr Cultural Center in Scottsdale, a fall luncheon and a spring dinner," he said.

Dave Sempien

Sempien said the tax-deductible membership donation for students is $15, "$5 of which is used for club operations and $10 for the library's book endowment fund."

Joyce Foster, director of library development, said the new organization will give students a voice in the library.

Goldner said students who become involved with the new student chapter of ASU Library Associates will have a feeling of participation and input at the library.

Donald Riggs, dean of university libraries, said he welcomes the student support.

"Libraries are central to academic enterprise, and the financial support realized from the student membership will enable us to purchase more books and assist the preservation center," Riggs said.

"ASU libraries now have 2.3 million volumes, but to remain in the forefront of academic excellence, the total should be at least 4 million."

Riggs added that on the average a book costs $35 and journal subscriptions are approximately $121 each.

ASU Library Associates currently is sponsoring a contest to come up with a design and name for a mascot for the organization.

"We have 20 entries, but we are looking for a lot more and we want people to know that we are open to any suggestions," Sempien said.

"We are looking for really creative things. This contest should not be limited to ASU or bookworm-related things." Sempien said entries will be accepted until Sept. 9 at Hayden and Noble libraries on campus and at Fletcher Library at ASU West campus.

The first prize will be $100 and a year's free ASULA membership. Second prize is $50, and third prize is $25.

Meanwhile, another student organization already has given funds to ASU Library Associates. Phi Kappa Phi, an honor society, has given the group $200 and plans to give it $600 more in the next year.

The money is given in the name of Phi Kappa Phi members, said James Carman, a member of the honorary.

Construction worker collapses, dies after fight with co-worker

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A worker was killed Monday apparently after fighting with another worker about a construction job at a west Tempe hotel, police said.

Paul Eugene Powers, 25, of Cedars Grove, Tenn., had difficulty breathing after the fight and collapsed. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Maricopa County Medical Center in Phoenix.

Powers and another man had been remodeling a room at the La Quinta Motor Inn, 911 S. 48th St., at about 8:50 a.m. when they got into an argument that developed into a fist fight, said Tempe police spokesman Roger Austin. There were no weapons involved in the fight, he said.

"It started as playful then got more serious," Detective Hal McCormick said.

Police arrested Michael John Beauchamp, 30, 911 S. 48th St., Room 247, in connection with the incident. He was charged with manslaughter and booked into Tempe City Jail.

McCormick said investigators don't know how Power died and are waiting for an autopsy.

The death is the city's fifth homicide of 1988, according to police statistics.

In other incidents:
• Tempe police on Monday still were searching for a Denver man who investigators believe kidnapped his ex-fiancee Saturday from a Tempe home.

"We haven't got anything," Sgt. Mike Palmer said. "We don't know where they are at."

Palmer said Tempe investigators are working with Denver police to see if the man and woman are in Colorado.

Police are looking for Jose Benavente, 26, of Denver, who police believe dragged Saskia Urdanivia from a home at 2611 E. Geneva Drive.

Benavente and his father, Guillermo, 54, had flown to Phoenix on Saturday to try to get Urdanivia to return to Denver with them, police said.

Guillermo Benavente was arrested at Sky Harbor

International Airport about an hour after the incident and charged with kidnapping. He was apparently trying to purchase a plane ticket to Denver.

Police said Urdanivia had lived in Denver and planned to marry the younger Benavente, but she changed her mind and moved to Tempe where she was staying with a friend.

• A Mesa woman was arrested Sunday on a first-degree murder warrant, police said.

Tabitha Marie Inglett, 21, 960 W. Southern Ave. No. 209, Mesa, was arrested in connection with the shooting death of 44-year-old Ernesto Griego of Tempe, police spokesman Roger Austin said.

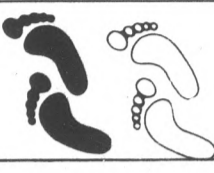

Griego was shot in the chest Aug. 4 during an argument in his apartment at 2319 E. McArthur Drive. He died of complications 12 days later at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital-Osborn.

Griego's roommate, Daniel Lee McElhaney, 37, also has been charged in shooting.

'Good chance' for $20 million financial aid fund

By TERESA OWEN
State Press

A financial aid trust fund that could raise about $2.1 million in its first year has a good chance of being passed this legislative session, according to the chairman of a task force who is pushing for the fund.

"It had a lot of interest last year, and I'm optimistic this year," said Allan Price, chairman of the Arizona Board of Regents' Student Financial Aid Task Force.

The fund would be funded partially by students at the three Arizona universities. Full-time students would be assessed a $6 surcharge on tuition and part-time students $3.

The state would equal students' contributions.

The fund would disperse 50 percent of principal collected each year for immediate aid in the form of grants, Price said.

Each university would determine the use of the remaining 50 percent of the fund available for immediate aid, and that could include loans or work study enhancement.

Meanwhile, the remaining 50 percent of the fund and 100

'It's not that it isn't a priority. We ... may have to make some compromises.'

— Bev Hermon

percent of the interest would be directed to an endowment that would build and eventually support the fund, Price said.

Rep. Bev Hermon, R-Tempe, who introduced the idea as a bill in the legislature last year, echoed Price's comments, but said the success of the proposed fund depends on state revenues.

"It's not that it isn't a priority," Hermon said. "We just may have to make some compromises due to the deficit of the state budget. We need the bill regardless."

The bill was voted down because legislators said the state was too strapped for extra funds.

ASASU President John Fees said he supports the fund.

"We hope to make some progress this year to make this a reality," he said.

Fees said the state "has chosen to do nothing" about financial aid in the past, and the fund is one effort the state could make to meet the financial needs of students.

"This has to be a priority," he said, adding that students need additional state support because of the rising costs of college. "It is a small step, but a needed one," he added.

Fees said the forum at ASU Thursday for legislative candidates should contribute greater awareness to the fund.

"We need to start addressing this now so that it can be on line for next year," Fees said.

'Night riders' brought back to daylight with help of clinic

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — If you're ever in a hospital, keep an eye out for the "night riders" because they've stopped watching out for themselves.

They're doctors who work long hours at unusual times of the night, often winning the admiration of their peers. But they are really out of control, overly dedicated to work, obsessed.

Dr. Charles Boren, medical director of The Institute of Living, a renowned psychiatric hospital, is lassoing night riders and other professionals who are running on empty, becoming inefficient and isolating themselves from their colleagues.

The institute, one of the nation's oldest and largest private psychiatric hospitals, has established a program called "The Retreat" to treat the businessmen, doctors, priests, lawyers and others who are losing their ability to function because of the stress of their careers.

The program allows up to 28 professionals at a time to live together, talk to each other, share their common problems and put their lives back together.

In the two years since it was created, it has been so successful that it now has a waiting list.

A stay can be as short as one week or as long as six months, but the average stay is about 62 days, said Dr. Walter A. Kekich, the institute's director of the acute, specialty and ambulatory services unit.

During that period, the professionals receive individual counseling and group therapy. They also have free time for reflection, travel and other recreations.

One participant in the program who has spoken publicly about his experience is Archbishop John Quinn, who tenders to 375,000 Roman Catholic parishioners in the San Francisco area. Quinn, 59, spent four months at the retreat earlier this year, before returning to his job in April.

A former president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, he said he entered the program because of stress, exhaustion and depression.

"I was finding I wasn't measuring up and wishing I could do better dealing with the problems of people around me," Quinn told reporters when he returned to work. "You feel disappointed in yourself that you're not doing more, and yet you're doing so much you're at the point of exhaustion."

After the retreat, he decided to make some changes in his life to include more relaxation. He said he planned to buy a dog, to play some golf and to end his isolation by opening his residence to two other priests.

Quinn's case fits the pattern that the experts at the institute have seen repeated over and over again.

"These people are often used to having the answers, used to giving help, used to being looked to as someone who can ease the pain. When they reach a point when they're in need, they really don't know how to go to someone else," Boren said.

"Often they have sort of kept it together and continued to function, albeit with great pain and some disability, until generally there is some kind of situation where their colleagues see that they're having trouble. ... They may have trouble with drug abuse or alcohol. ... The greatest problem is depression."

The institute, founded on 35 acres in Hartford in 1822, is a 400-bed general psychiatric hospital. In the 1930s, it built a reputation as an exclusive center that catered to the rich and famous. Patients were considered guests and they were offered limousine service and such leisure activities as golf, swimming and shuffleboard.

The institute today continues to maintain an aura of exclusivity and remains sheltered from the bustle of the city by a surrounding brick wall and steel gates. But it has broadened its services to include outpatient treatment and schools for troubled children, while offering traditional psychiatric services.

Kekich said that he realized years ago that there was a need for a special program for professionals because they are highly motivated, successful individuals who have an outlook on life different from others, that only other professionals can appreciate.

Listener response to Hahn's radio debut positive

PHOENIX (AP) — Jessica Hahn's debut on Phoenix radio Monday was praised by her boss but panned by a newspaper media critic as a "bust."

Jay Stevens, KOY-FM program director, said listener response to Hahn was all positive.

But Bud Wilkinson, radio-television critic for The Arizona Republic, writing for Tuesday's editions, said that Hahn's presence brought down the momentum and mirth of the entire "Y-95 Morning Zoo," as the radio station's morning show is known.

The station announced last week that Hahn, 29, had been signed to a 30-day contract with options for renewal.

Hahn became an overnight celebrity in 1987 when revelations about a sexual liaison with television evangelist Jim Bakker caused the near-collapse of Bakker's PTL religious programming network.

The former $80-a-week church secretary from West

Babylon, N.M., sold her story to Playboy magazine, posed topless for the publication's November 1987 issue and moved into the Playboy Mansion in Los Angeles.

She appeared in Playboy a second time in the magazine's September issue in semi-nude photographs showing off her recent cosmetic surgery.

Although Stevens denied that the station's hiring Hahn was a publicity stunt and said that both she and the station "want to make this a long-term agreement," Wilkinson advised her not to unpack her bags.

"What she needs are a few nips and tucks in the area of spontaneity," Wilkinson said, adding that "as an air talent, Hahn isn't a sleeper, a wit awaiting harvest, but rather a bust."

Wilkinson said Monday's show touted an interview with George Michael and wangled through Hahn's Hollywood contacts. The weak payoff, he wrote, was that the phone number she supplied turned out to be for the singer's facsimile machine.

Stevens, however, said listeners reacted positively to the Hahn.

"Believe it or not we didn't get any negative calls at all," he said. "The people in Phoenix were happy to have her here. Some (of the callers) welcomed her to Phoenix and some offered dates."

Stevens said mail to the station was heavy. "I couldn't believe the fan mail that this girl got. Most of it is in support of her. There's a few little nasty ones, but it's probably three-to-one in favor of her," he said.

Stevens said that prior to this morning's show there was some anxiety among the cast of the "Morning Zoo."

"There was lots of preparation. They got together Saturday night, and again Sunday, so it wasn't like we just threw her on the air."

FAA regulates U.S. air stunts; none allowed above crowds

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the U.S. military's aerobatic stunt teams have suffered fatal accidents in the past, they have never killed a spectator and routinely face scrutiny from a federal agency that limits the maneuvers they perform.

"We control the airspace, so it is up to us to make sure that all operations in that airspace are conducted properly and safely," John Leyden, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said Monday.

"The (Air Force) Thunderbirds and the (Navy) Blue Angels put their shows together, but we decide on a show-by-show basis whether there is airspace to accommodate the maneuvers safely."

Leyden and Defense Department officials declined to speculate on the cause of a spectacular crash Sunday during an air show at the U.S.-operated Ramstein Air Base in West Germany. Three Italian air force jets collided during a high-speed maneuver and one fell into the crowd, killing at least 45 people and injuring about 500.

According to eyewitness accounts, however, the Italian air force team's 10 jets were flying about 180 feet off the ground and intersecting over the field from three different directions when the accident occurred. The maneuver put some of the jets on a course directly toward the crowd.

"We wouldn't allow aerobatic maneuvers above the crowd," Leyden said. "Our minimum flight line for jets is 1,500 feet from the crowd, and we require all maneuvers be performed along that line."

In Santa Barbara, Calif., White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters, "We're reluctant to pass judgment on this episode or on air shows in general. It certainly does, however, emphasize the need for vigilance and safety."

Tom Poberezny, an official with the Experimental Aircraft Association who is also a stunt pilot with the civilian Flying Eagles team, said the FAA rules made an accident like the one in West Germany unlikely here.

Indeed, the Italian Frecece Tricolori team involved in Sunday's crash was required to alter its flying routine at the FAA's 1986 airshow to keep the stunt pilots from flying toward the crowd, Poberezny said.

"Overall, the safety record for air shows in this country is really outstanding," said Leyden, adding that more than 200 such shows take place annually.

The Blue Angels and Thunderbirds have appeared at many of those shows for decades.

The Blue Angels was formed in 1946 and has performed before more than 200 million people. The Thunderbirds was organized in 1953 and has appeared before more than 170 million.

The season for both teams normally begins in March and extends to mid-November, featuring anywhere from 70 to 90 performances.

Both teams have known good times and bad. Last year, the Blue Angels suffered a training accident in El Centro, Calif., that destroyed a plane, although no one was killed. In July 1985, however, a pilot was killed during a Blue Angel demonstration over Niagara Falls, N.Y.

The last fatal accident involving the Thunderbirds — and the worst in their history — occurred on Jan. 18, 1982, during a practice session in Nevada. Four pilots died as a team followed its leader into the ground.

All told, the Blue Angels has lost 22 pilots and the Thunderbirds has lost 19, the services said.

"Neither we nor the Blue Angels have ever harmed a spectator, and that shows how well thought out our maneuvers are and our compliance with the FAA guidelines," said Lt. Col. Steve Trent, leader of the Thunderbirds.

Trent said the Air Force does not allow any crossing maneuver that puts formations of planes against each other — only individual planes — and that any such crosses must be performed beyond the end of the crowd.

Pentagon officials consider the teams as great for recruiting and an important tool for showing the public what its tax dollars are buying.

The Navy, for example, determined last year that 63 percent of the students entering Navy flight school had seen at least one Blue Angels performance and that of those, almost 40 percent cited the team as a direct influence on their decision to join the military.

The mirrored windows on a building in Hayden Square in Tempe reflect the sunlight onto a pair of shoppers earlier this week.

Dukakis cancels conference; asked if campaign confused

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — For Michael Dukakis, it was a bizarre Monday in which he first canceled a news conference after aides complained network television was ignoring his speeches but later met with reporters armed with questions about whether his campaign was in a state of confusion.

The Democratic presidential nominee, trying to end the aura of confusion that has beset his campaign in recent weeks, struck back at Republican attacks on him and countered George Bush's assaults on the Massachusetts prison furlough program.

"Back by popular demand," he said jokingly as he walked into a rescheduled news conference. Reporters had been told by senior Dukakis adviser Kirk O'Donnell that Dukakis was canceling Monday and Tuesday news conferences to force television coverage of Dukakis' speeches.

The confusion comes at a time when many Democratic strategists inside and outside the Dukakis campaign are concerned that the Massachusetts governor has allowed Bush to seize control of the debate with attacks on the Democrat's patriotism, views on defense and gun control and a Massachusetts' furlough program.

Dukakis told reporters he was "trying to get this campaign up where it belongs" by discussing his economic positions but indicated he was prepared to fire back at Bush — when he decides it is time to do so.

The governor said face-to-face debates were the best place to respond to Bush's attacks but then offered a preview by countering the vice president's attacks on the furlough program, which until amended last year, extended eligibility to first-degree murderers.

Dukakis said he wanted to ask Bush about the 16,000 furloughs granted to federal prisoners last year, "some lasting 45 days and many to convicted drug pushers Mr. Bush says he wants to execute."

In a speech before the news conference, Dukakis also attacked Bush's support for a reduction in the capital gains tax.

"We're not going to accept Mr. Bush's suggestion that the way to build opportunity for our citizens is to cut taxes for the wealthy again, this time with a $40 billion handout, 70 percent of which would go to those making $200,000 a year or more," he said.

Dukakis did not dispute assessments from reporters that his message has been lost in recent weeks but laughed at comments that his campaign was floundering and attributed the recent problems to the abundant coverage of Bush and his controversial running mate, Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle.

He also called for an end to questions about Quayle's military and academic records in favor of issue-related media coverage.

"Let's put the last few weeks behind us," Dukakis said. "The dog days of August are almost over. The curtain is going up on the greatest exercise of political freedom the world has ever known."

Dukakis said it was time the campaign debate moved to higher ground.

"Ten weeks from tomorrow, America will choose a new president," he said. "The campaign is a golden and historic moment to define our nation's future. My friends, let us not waste this opportunity."

"Because the issue in this campaign is not how well Mr. Bush did one night in New Orleans or how well I did one night in Atlanta.

"The issue is not whose speechwriter should get an Emmy. The issue is whose values should get into the White House.

"The American people aren't interested in the grades that some of us might have gotten while we were in college; they care about whether their children will have the chance to go to college."

He also countered Bush's recent allegations that Dukakis is soft on crime and unpatriotic for vetoing legislation requiring teachers to lead the recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance.

Voters "aren't interested in a debate over which one of us loves his country the most — we all love this country, there should be no debate over that," he said.

The criticism of the Bush stance on the capital gains tax came during an economic development speech in which Dukakis noted the resurgent western Massachusetts economy as an example of the partnership and investment approach he promised to bring to the White House.

Ironically, the campaign's own confusion over whether Dukakis would meet with reporters tended to obscure the message Dukakis wanted to deliver much like the Bush-Quayle coverage has in recent weeks.

Ross Anderson. Neil Cochran. Paul Easter. Paul Howe. Andy Jameson. David Le Blanc. They all are names to look for in the swimming events at the Seoul Olympics later this month. All are also affiliated in some way with the Arizona State swim program.

ASU swimming coach Ron Johnson is going to have a difficult time deciding who to cheer for when the swimming events take place in Seoul. Three of his current swim team members are competing, as well as three former members who already have graduated.

Howe, Jameson, Cochran and Easter all will represent Great Britain, with Anderson competing for New Zealand and Le Blanc swimming for his native France.

Howe and Anderson will return for ASU's 1988-89 swim season, with Le Blanc, one of the 11 freshman entering ASU's swim program, a highly-touted addition to the Sun Devil squad. Johnson said Le Blanc is the highest-ranked freshman in the world in the 100- and 200-meter breaststroke.

Johnson said his loyalties lie with the U.S. Olympic swim team, but when the competition starts, look for Johnson to be rooting for some of his swimmers.

"It's going to be interesting," Johnson said. "Of course, I'm going to be pulling for the Americans, but when some of our guys are in there, it will be tough."

Two other former ASU swimmers came very close to making the Olympic squad. Graduates Peter Boden and Scott Brackett were finalists at the U.S. Olympic trials in Indianapolis two weeks ago. Johnson said

'It's going to be interesting. Of course, I'm going to be pulling for the Americans, but when some of our guys are in there, it will be tough.'

— Ron Johnson

both swimmers "just missed" clinching a spot on the Olympic team.

Johnson said Jameson has the greatest chance of winning a medal. He is ranked No. 1 in the world in the 100-meter butterfly and is the favorite going into the Olympics.

"He has the best chance of being an Olympic champion," Johnson said.

For Johnson, the thrill of watching some of his swimmers in the Olympics is two-fold. Each of the British swimmers has spent four years in the Sun Devil program or is in the process of doing so, meaning Johnson has been their coach for much of the year.

While he is excited that some of his former and present swimmers have made it to Seoul, Johnson said he also is proud that some of his coaching techniques have helped get them there.

"I'm very happy they've achieved this level of success," Johnson said. "The Olympics are the pinnacle of amateur sports — it's very satisfying to me to see them there."

Along with the prestige of participating in the Olympics, it also means a milestone in a swimmer's career. Johnson said the returning ASU Olympians, especially Howe, will add leadership to the Sun Devil squad.

"It is a tremendous growing experience for him," Johnson said. "It will help him a great deal."

With 16 returnees, mostly sophomores, and 11 freshman joining the Sun Devils,

Neil Cochran

Johnson expects the upcoming season to be one of rebuilding. He is not painting ASU out of the NCAA Championships picture, although he said he needs some of the younger swimmers to be leaders.

"We're looking for some leadership," Johnson said. "With so many young guys, some of them are going to have to step forward. We have the chance to have a very fine year. We just have some young guys who are unproven at the NCAA level."

Intricacies of American football brought into classroom

Dave Hodges
Sports Editor

The college football season is upon us. It's a time when many students, especially males, spend Saturday afternoons watching football games on television, then going to Sun Devil Stadium to root for ASU at night. Now, with the Phoenix Cardinals landing in Tempe, there is another entry in the football-crazed Valley of the Sun. The topic of conversation on the weekends is usually football... American football. But students from foreign countries and many female students have been left out of many of these conversations, simply because they do not understand the intricacies of American football.

Now, with the help of an ASU physical education professor, students will have an opportunity to take a crash course in football, in time for ASU's Sept. 10 season-opener with Illinois.

Ed Trexler has several foreign students in his classes who do not know the difference between a sideline and an end zone.

"It had come to my attention that they did not understand anything about American football," Trexler said. "I was a little shocked, but I shouldn't have been. I don't know the first thing about cricket."

Trexler will be offering a course titled "Understanding American Football" at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 5 (Labor Day night) in Room 218 of the MU.

He said the course is designed to teach the basic guidelines of American football to whoever wants to attend the course. "It will be a one-night shot," Trexler said, "but if students felt they wanted more, I could teach them the Xs and Os."

And understanding football is almost mandatory at a school where football is king and in an area where East Valley high-school football games often draw crowds near 10,000.

Trexler said the idea for the presentation is good but not original.

"It's just to introduce American football," Trexler said. "I'm not going to go over the rules. When they (fans) see a yellow flag, they need to know that a penalty has been committed."

The course is not just for foreign students. Trexler said it also is aimed at female students.

How many times have you seen a female ask her boyfriend or husband, who's winning or who has the ball, yet alone details?

Now females will know what someone is referring to when they're talking about a tight end and a right guard.

"You know how wimpy they (some females) are when it comes to football," Trexler said.

USOC upholds removal; swimmer can't compete

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although Angel Myers' supporters insist that taking birth control pills caused her to test positive for a steroid, the U.S. Olympic Committee Monday stood firmly behind its drug testing and the decision to remove her from the U.S. Olympic Swim Team.

"We have total confidence in the integrity and validity (of the drug testing process)," USOC spokesman Mike Moran said.

He said substances which birth control pills produce are very easily detectable and can be recognized immediately.

"We have tested hundreds of women who had taken all sorts of birth control pills," Moran said. "The level of substance which birth control pills produce is very easily detectable. We know exactly what we're looking for, what level."

"Birth control pills produce characteristics of a disqualifying substance, but the level and dosage (of the substance) is where it (disqualification) occurs."

Although the USOC will not identify the banned substance involved in Myers' case, a statement released by her family said she had been informed that it was a steroid.

Kirt Myers, who coaches his daughter, released a statement Monday afternoon from the family's home at Americus, Ga., saying that she will appeal her removal from the U.S. team.

"Administrative appeals are being conducted in order to reinstate Angel Myers as a member of the U.S. Olympic team," Kirt Myers said in the statement. "Appeals are in progress through U.S. Swimming Inc., the swimmers' sanctioning organization, and the U.S. Olympic Committee."

She tested positive during the recent trials at Austin, Texas.

● OLYMPIC TORCH GOES OUT — An Olympic torch flickered out on the first leg of the torch relay and the angry Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee plans to make sure it doesn't happen again. "It's bad luck to have it happen anytime," a spokesman for SLOOC said Monday. "But on the first leg — ouch! Everyone's hopping mad."

● JUDGE SUSPENDS KIMBALL'S DRIVING PRIVILEGES — Saying "the whole country in a sense is watching him," a judge Monday suspended Bruce Kimball's driving privileges but refused to impose travel restrictions on the former Olympic diver while he awaits trial on alcohol-related manslaughter charges.

● SEAHAWKS SOLD TO CALIFORNIA DEVELOPER — The Nordstrom family, choosing to play store over football, has sold the Seattle Seahawks to a California developer who "isn't going to come running in here and make a lot of changes," family members say. Kenneth Behring, 60, of Danville, Calif., reportedly will pay about $80 million for the 13-year-old NFL franchise. John Nordstrom accepted the offer in principle on Saturday.

Suns put final piece in place by signing Perry

By JEFF SHAIN
State Press

PHOENIX — The last puzzle piece of what the Phoenix Suns hopes will be their nucleus for the next decade fell into place Monday with the signing of rookie forward Tim Perry. "We're excited about getting all of our people together," Suns president Jerry Colangelo said at a news conference to introduce Perry. "I can't wait for (the start of training camp on) Oct. 7."

Perry, who was taken as the seventh pick of the draft, and the Suns agreed on a five-year guaranteed contract 10 days ago, but waited until Monday to make the signing official.

Financial terms of the deal were not released, in keeping with Suns' team policy. The contract reportedly is worth more than what the Suns paid Dan Majerle, their other first-round draft pick who signed for $2.2 million over five years.

The Suns is the first team in the NBA to sign all their high draft picks. Majerle, who was taken as the 14th pick of the first round, signed earlier this month, and second-round picks Andrew Lang of Arkansas and Dean Garrett of Indiana also are under contract.

"We just set out to get the work done and get people signed," Colangelo said. "We're taking care of business. It's important to do that. It's part of our commitment to get this franchise where it should be."

The only players yet to sign with the club are guards Steve Kerr of Arizona and Rodney Johns of Grand Canyon. Kerr was taken late in the second round, while Johns was the Suns' third-round draft pick.

Suns coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said he expected both Kerr and Johns to sign contracts by Labor Day, and the team would begin informal workouts next week.

Colangelo said Perry's signing completes the overhaul of the Suns, who was one of the NBA's dominant teams in the late 1970s and early 1980s before going through a four-year decline. The Suns has missed the playoffs in each of the past three seasons and won just 28 games last year.

The player on the Suns roster with the longest tenure in Phoenix is guard Jeff Hornacek, who has been with the club for two seasons.

Since February, the Suns has added guards Kevin Johnson and Craig Hodges, center Mark West and free-agent forward Tom Chambers.

"I see this team as the foundation of our team for the next decade," Fitzsimmons said. "I can't say this team will be great, but these young people give enthusiasm and effort. Experience — they need that still. But I know what to expect and I'm excited."

Perry, a 6-foot-9 forward from Temple, was the Atlantic 10 Conference player of the year last season, as the Owls held the top spot in the weekly college rankings for much of the season.

He finished his career as Temple's all-time leading shot-blocker with 392 and fourth-leading career rebounder with 985. He averaged 14.5 points and 8.0 rebounds last season.

"I still need to develop my offense a lot," Perry said. "I'm going to try to develop it as soon as possible — every aspect. What brought me to the pros was defense."

Defense suffers as Cardinals place 3 players on disabled list

By JEFF SHAIN
State Press

The Phoenix Cardinals was forced to further deplete its pass defense Monday when three defensive players were placed on the disabled list.

The club also placed 10 players on waivers as it got down to the NFL limit of 47 players.

The toughest loss for the Cardinals was that of rookie cornerback Michael Brim, a fourth-round draft pick out of Virginia Union. He suffered cracked ribs in the Cardinals' 41-21 victory over Kansas City on Thursday to close out the exhibition season.

Brim was expected to back up starters Cedric Mack and Carl Carter at the cornerback position. After Brim went down Thursday night, free safety Lonnie Young stepped in at cornerback and was replaced at safety by Tim McDonald.

The Cardinals also lost two pass rushers, including veteran defensive end Curtis Greer, who has been troubled all summer by a disc problem in his back which has caused him to miss all four preseason games.

Also placed on the disabled list was defensive end Colin Scotts, who is suffering from a shoulder injury. Scotts also recently switched back to the defense after starting the preseason working out at tight end.

Three draft picks were among the 10 players placed on waivers by the Cardinals on Monday, including two who were vying for the long-snapper position vacated by the injured Mike Morris.

Linebacker Chris Gaines, a fifth-round pick from Vanderbilt, and safety Chris Carrier, a 12th-round selection from Louisiana State, lost out to free agent Mark Walczak for the long-snapping duties.

The other draft pick let go was offensive guard Jon Phillips, a sixth-round pick from Oklahoma.

The club also released four veterans, including running back Derrick McAdoo, who played well in the preseason opener against Seattle before leaving the game with a knee injury. He saw little action after that.

The Cardinals also cut offensive tackle Gene Chilton, linebacker Ilija Jarostchuk and wide receiver Troy Johnson.

Also cut by the team were defensive tackle Michael Simmons, defensive back Junior Thurman and center Vince Rafferty, all free agents.

Rain washes away 1st day of 1988 U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1988 U.S. Open started the way last year's tournament ended — with rain.

Steady showers washed out play Monday at the National Tennis Center 90 minutes after the tournament began.

Only five matches were completed and only one of those involved a seeded player, No. 11 Zina Garrison's 6-0, 6-3 victory over Nicole Provis.

Second-seeded Mats Wilander was leading former NCAA champion Greg Holmes 6-2, 6-1, 1-2 when play was halted.

No other men's seed got to play a single point.

The wet scene was reminiscent of the end of last year's Open, when rain forced the men's final between Ivan Lendl and Wilander to be delayed from Sunday to Monday.

Garrison beat the rain by beating Provis in just 59 minutes.

"I was really nervous to play the first match on the first day of the tournament," she said. "I didn't want to be the first seed to go out."

Garrison had reason to be wary of Provis, an 18-year-old Australian who reached the semifinals at the French Open this year. But Provis, ranked 34th in the world, barely avoided a shutout.

Garrison won the first 11 games before Provis staged a mini-rally and pulled to within 5-3 in the second set. But Garrison broke back in the next game to end the match. Although she lost three of the last four games, Garrison wasn't disappointed.

"I don't like to win zero and zero," she said. "It's like a jinx going into the next round."

Garrison, who was ranked as high as No. 5 in the world three years ago, has dropped to No. 12 and hasn't won a tournament this year.

"I've been playing some really good tennis, although my ranking doesn't show it," she said. "I've reached the semis or quarters of most of the tournaments I've played in."

"For the first time in my life, I'm totally committed to being a professional tennis player. I feel good about that and I feel good about myself."

Wilander, who won the 1988 Australian and French Opens, also was feeling good after demolishing Holmes in the first two sets.

But rain halted play after Holmes, ranked 159th in the world, held serve to take a 2-1 lead in the third set.

The match will be completed Tuesday, weather permitting. The forecast calls for cloudy skies with a 50 percent chance of rain.

Also slated to play Tuesday are third-seeded Stefan

Ederberg, No. 5 Boris Becker and No. 16 John McEnroe.

Ederberg plays Libor Pimek of Czechoslovakia, Becker faces American Todd Nelson and McEnroe meets Leonardo Lavalle of Mexico in matches that were washed out Monday.

The headline women's match will feature defending champion Martina Navratilova against Catarina Lindqvist, who has reached the fourth round at the Open the past three years.

Because of the rain, top seeds Lendl and Steffi Graf won't begin play before Wednesday.

Wilander, beaten by Lendl in last year's marathon final, has never won the U.S. Open. But his chances of winning this year are as good as they've ever been.

Lendl is seeking his fourth straight Open title, but he is having an off year. If he doesn't win here, it will be the first time since 1983 that he has gone through a year without winning at least one Grand Slam title.

While Lendl would settle for one major title in 1988, Graf wants to win them all.

If she wins the Open, the 19-year-old West German will become the first player since Margaret Court in 1970 to sweep the four Grand Slam events in the same year.

Meeks not surprised after victory in U.S. Amateur Championship

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — It took eight different survival tests over the course of nearly a month, but golfer Eric Meeks said he wasn't particularly surprised by his victory in the 88th U.S. Amateur Championship.

"I've played well the past year. I kind of felt like I was going to do something," Meeks, 23, of Walnut, Calif., said Sunday after he won the U.S. Amateur with a 7-and-6 victory over Danny Yates.

Meeks, a recent graduate of Arizona, had failed to qualify for the U.S. Amateur in his four previous attempts.

But at the beginning of August, he and 4,311 other golfers with handicaps of 3.4 or lower began sectional qualifying at 66 sites around the nation. Their goal was to make the 291-golfer field that would advance to The Homestead, a mountain resort in the George Washington National Forest where this year's championship was held.

Because of past accomplishments as amateurs, nine golfers were exempt from sectional qualifying, so the 4,312 were vying for 282 spots in Hot Springs.

Meeks had somewhat of an advantage, as his sectional was held at his home course, the Friendly Hills Country Club near Los Angeles.

Once Meeks made it to The Homestead, the next test was 36 holes of stroke play to trim the 291 golfers to a 64-man grid for four days of match play. Meeks finished the on-site qualifying one shot away from winning medalist honors.

In order to get to the final, a player had to win five matches. Meeks disposed of his first two opponents by scores of 1-up and 4-and-3, setting the stage for what proved to be his stiffest challenge of the tournament.

That came from Jay Sigel, a Philadelphia insurance executive who was playing in his 22nd U.S. Amateur and who in 1983 became the last man to successfully defend his title. Meeks needed 21 holes, but he met the challenge, defeating Sigel 1-up.

After that, Meeks had 1-up victories over Robert Gamez, his former Arizona teammate, and David Toms, a Louisiana State junior and the reigning Southeast Conference champion.

Then it was on to Sunday's scheduled 36-hole final against Yates, 38, an insurance agent from Atlanta who was playing in his ninth U.S. Amateur.

Nebraska gains on Florida State in football poll

(AP) — Following Nebraska's 23-14 victory over Texas A&M in the Kickoff Classic Saturday night, Coach Tom Osborne was asked if he thought the second-ranked Cornhuskers deserved to be No. 1.

"I'll let the voters decide," Osborne said. The voters in The Associated Press' first regular-season college football poll decided Monday that Nebraska is still No. 2 — but by a much closer margin than in the preseason rankings.

Florida State remained No. 1 by receiving 41 of 53 first-place votes and 1,032 of a possible 1,060 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Nebraska received four first-place votes and 939 points.

In the preseason poll, Florida State led 44-2 in first-place ballots — 60 voters participated — and 1,161-952 in total points.

"It's something I've always wanted — unbeaten, untied, unscored upon, No. 1 in the nation," said jokingly Florida State coach Bobby Bowden, whose team opens next Saturday night against defending national champion Miami, ranked No. 6 this week. "If I didn't have to play that schedule (the Seminoles also face nationally ranked Clemson and Michigan State in September), I would be happy. If it wasn't for the games, I'd have it made."

By losing the Kickoff Classic, the only game played thus far, Texas A&M fell out of the Top Ten, slipping from 10th to 11th.

This week's 20 ranked teams are the same as in the preseason poll, but there was some minor shuffling in the order.

Oklahoma held onto third place with one first-place vote and 845 points, Clemson remained fourth with three first-place ballots and 832 points, and UCLA is again No. 5 with two first-place votes and 754 points.

Miami jumped from eighth to sixth with one first-place vote and 714 points, Auburn remained No. 7 with 707 points and Southern Cal dropped from sixth to eighth with one first-place vote and 687 points.

Iowa held onto ninth place with 619 points and Michigan replaced Texas A&M in the Top Ten, climbing from 11th to 10th with 562 points.

The Second Ten consists of Texas A&M, Georgia, Notre Dame, Alabama, Michigan State, West Virginia, LSU, Tennessee, South Carolina and Penn State.

In the preseason poll, it was Michigan, Georgia, Notre Dame, Alabama, Michigan State, West Virginia, Tennessee, LSU, South Carolina and Penn State.

Thirteen members of the Top Twenty will be in action this week: No. 1 Florida State at No. 6 Miami, Utah State at No. 2 Nebraska, Virginia Tech at No. 4 Clemson, San Diego State at No. 5 UCLA, No. 8 Southern Cal at Boston College (Thursday night), No. 9 Iowa at Hawaii, No. 11 Texas A&M at No. 17 LSU, No. 18 Tennessee at No. 2 Georgia, Bowling Green at No. 16 West Virginia and North Carolina at No. 19 South Carolina.

New York Giants' Taylor suspended 30 days for substance abuse

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Seven-time All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, who had vowed to make this his best season, was suspended for 30 days Monday for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy for a second time.

Coach Bill Parcells and NFL spokesman Joe Browne both said Taylor was suspended after testing positive following "a recent" mandatory preseason drug test. They declined to disclose what substance Taylor was abusing.

Taylor had acknowledged that he underwent treatment for a cocaine problem in 1986.

He followed with his finest season as the Giants went on to win the Super Bowl, becoming only the second defensive player in league history to be named the NFL's most valuable player and setting a club record with 20½ sacks.

The suspension means Taylor will miss four games, including the season opener next Monday night against the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

"Obviously when you lose a player of that nature, it will have an effect," said Parcells, who learned later that his other All-Pro linebacker, Carl Banks, signed a four-year contract, ending a holdout.

"However, that player could have been hurt in the first play of practice Wednesday and we'd have had to make an adjustment."

"I am a little surprised," said Parcells, a hard-liner on drug problems. "You don't expect these types of things. I had every reason to believe everything was all right with Taylor."

Taylor, 29, is the ninth player suspended this summer for substance abuse problems.

One, Tony Collins of the Indianapolis Colts, was suspended for the season for a third violation.

Seven others, including Dexter Manley of the Redskins, were suspended for 30 days in training camp after failing preseason drug testing. All will be back for the regular-season, including Manley, who reported to the Redskins Monday.

That appeared to be a clear inequity, both to teams and players, although the league said that was because some teams were tested before others.

Manley and the others lost $500 a week in training camp pay; Taylor stands to lose $62,500 a game from his $1 million salary.

Parcells, however, wasn't claiming foul.

"They can't do it at every time for everybody," he said. "Teams report to training camps at different times. They have their veterans in at different times. The league has a problem structuring all those things."

Parcells would not comment on whether the Giants plan to pay Taylor or on the changes the Giants planned for weakside linebacker.

"There are a lot of things you have to overcome every year in this business, or you have to attempt to do that," he said.

Parcells also did not know whether Taylor would undergo rehabilitation during his suspension. Gary Kovach, Taylor's agent, was not taking telephone calls from the media.

Taylor was not available for comment. He must stay away from the Giants training facilities during his suspension.

Parcells said he spoke with Taylor earlier Monday but would not disclose what was said.

Most of Taylor's teammates declined to talk about the suspension.

"In practices and games I couldn't see anything," cornerback Perry Williams said. "He was the same way he has always been, enthusiastic. He was giving his all."

Student Publications GUIDE TO GRAPHICS SERVICES for ASU Departments

Graphics Services

is a service of Student Publications, housed within the STATE PRESS in Matthews Center basement.

We are versatile professionals eager to work on your special project.

Working with your original artwork, photographs and/or copy, we will assist you with layout and design to produce camera-ready art for printing purposes. This includes brochures, posters, fliers, newsletters, charts and graphs, letterheads, envelopes and business cards.

Composition

Composition includes design, layout, typesetting, camera work and pasteup. Feel free to contact us concerning these services.

Camera

Various camera processes are designed to reproduce your graphics to your printing specifications. Our capabilities include PMT line shots, halftones, posterization and reverses. Film sizes for reproduction are 12 x 18 for PMTs and 20 x 24 for film negatives. Original art work can be reduced to 25% or enlarged to 300%.

TYPESETTING

We have typesetting facilities that offer more than 100 different type styles in sizes from 5½ to 74 point.

ART WORK

We have a large library of clip art available for your use. We will also work with your original art or logo art.

Payment

Issuing of blanket requisitions for the entire fiscal year is encouraged. If you do not have a blanket requisition, a specific requisition is needed for each job. We will bill requisitions monthly on approximately the 23rd of each month.
