

Police arrest man suspected in cop's death

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A 27-year-old Ahwatukee man was arrested Monday in connection with Saturday's hit-and-run death of a rookie Tempe police officer.

Robert Loren Brown, 11411 S. Bannock St., was arrested at about 12:30 p.m. and charged with leaving the scene of an accident that resulted in a death, said Sgt. Allan Schmidt, a spokesman for the Arizona Department of Public Safety.

Brown told police he is a part-time student at ASU, but an operator in the University's registrar's office did not have him listed as a student.

Schmidt said Brown gave investigators information that indicated he was involved in the accident that claimed the life of officer Robert Hawk, a one-year member of the force and the father of two young boys.

However, Schmidt would not say if Brown confessed or admitted guilt for Hawk's death.

Brown, who also works as an electrical installer for Johnson Controls, Inc. of Tempe, was charged after his attorney, Jim Martin of Tempe, called the Maricopa County attorney and met with DPS investigators, Schmidt said.

Police said Brown's arrest eliminates the possible involvement of a Phoenix man in Hawk's death.

Robert Brown

Investigators open the garage door at 11411 S. Bannock St. where a pickup truck that police believed was used in the hit-and-run death of Tempe Police Officer Robert Hawk was found.

Michael Ray Valenzuela, 18, had been arrested Sunday on charges unrelated to the officer's death, but Valenzuela's light-blue pickup was impounded for investigation.

Valenzuela is being held on $34,000 bail on charges of possession of a stolen vehicle and driving on a suspended license.

DPS Lt. David Gonzales said investigators determined

Sunday night that Valenzuela's truck could not have been involved in the hit-and-run that killed Hawk. But police said Valenzuela's arrest may have convinced Brown to contact authorities.

Brown, who officials said was emotionless when he talked to police, was booked into the Maricopa County Jail and later

Survey: Only half of 1981 grads would attend ASU again

By SHERI JOHNSON
State Press

Less than 50 percent of ASU's 1981 graduates "probably" would choose to attend the University again, and the alumni rated the quality of their education lower than did their peers at UofA and NAU, a survey has shown.

Kathleen Church, an ASU professor of zoology, surveyed 1,117 graduates of ASU, UofA and NAU who graduated in 1981

Survey

Arizona class of '81:

- ✓ NAU graduates were happier with their undergraduate education than ASU, UofA and minority graduates.
- ✓ ASU and UofA grads make more money than NAU grads. But alumni living out-of-state make more than those who stay in Arizona.
- ✓ Males and grads with science/engineering or business degrees are more likely to leave the state. Education majors are more likely to stay.

Source: 1988 survey by Kathleen Church.

as part of the Arizona Board of Regents' Excellence, Efficiency and Competitiveness task force.

"I don't know how much to read into this," Church said, adding that ASU's commuter-campus status may have affected the survey's results.

"Maybe commuter students don't develop the loyalty (that students at other colleges do)."

Church's report showed that NAU alumni rated the quality of their education higher than ASU and UofA.

"NAU is always ahead of the other institutions in (alumni) ratings," Church said. "The alumni are always more positive."

But the graduates from the three universities rated their schools lower than the national average in the amount of personal growth acquired to lead and guide others.

However, all agreed that their college education improved the quality of their lives.

The schools were rated above the national average in developing the students' understanding of the interaction between man and the environment.

Church cautioned that the national average was derived largely from smaller private schools and doesn't give an accurate comparison to larger institutions.

"We ought to have data from large, urban universities," she said.

The American College Testing Company provided the survey's questions and comparative data that was gathered from 101 colleges and universities throughout the country, Church said.

The survey also concludes that females and minorities with education degrees are more likely to remain in the state, while males with degrees in business and science/engineering are more likely to leave.

Tom Rex, manager of the ASU's Center for Business Research in the College of Business, said the center hasn't conducted any studies as to why business majors leave but suggested that there may not be enough jobs to keep them here.

Minority survey, page 7.

"Here at ASU we churn out thousands of (business) graduates," he said.

The survey also shows that ASU's alumni earnings in the $50,000 or above range was about 8 percent higher than the national average. This is about 5 percent higher than NAU alumni and about 3 percent higher than UofA alumni.

Also, 7.2 percent of ASU's alumni are self-employed, compared to the 4.9 percent national average.

Church said comparisons between the universities are difficult to analyze because ASU is a commuter school, UofA focuses on research and NAU is more of a residential, comprehensive university.

On-campus jobs paying higher salaries

By TERESA OWEN
State Press

ASU students who work on-campus jobs are earning more money this semester because their wages have increased 9 percent for the first time in two years.

"It's definitely going to benefit students," said Richard Cons, assistant director of student financial assistance in charge of student employment. "There is an advantage to working on campus, and we'll continue to encourage employment on campus."

ASU departments have either adjusted budgets or hired students through a work study program to pay for the wage hike. It is meant to encourage on-campus employers to become more competitive with off-campus employers, Cons said. The wage increase has been in effect since July 1, 1988.

But the real increase comes out to about 1 percent because inflation has averaged 4 percent in the past two years.

Students hired for positions that require little or no training can now earn a maximum of $4.02 per hour, compared with the previous maximum of $3.61.

Other positions that have enjoyed wage increases this semester: skilled positions pay up to $4.71, compared with the previous maximum of $4.25; specific skill positions pay $5.75, up from $5.25; and extensive technical skill positions pay $7.13, compared with the previous $6.80 maximum.

Cons said a new, highly-specialized category of on-campus student jobs has been added to the current list of jobs in the Financial Assistance office. The new positions pay up to $9.22 per hour.

Cons said the biggest advantage of on-campus student employment is the high retention of students who stay in school.

"Students get involved with their jobs and are awarded for their jobs," he said. "They identify with someone on campus who not only helps them with their current job but helps them prepare for the future."

Voter polls indicate Bush vs. Dukakis political debate a draw

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both political camps waved victory flags Monday in the wake of the Bush vs. Dukakis matchup, but polls indicated the debate was a draw in the opinion of many voters.

Several analysts said a tie actually worked in favor of one runner in this race: Michael Dukakis.

Their reasoning was that since the Massachusetts governor was less experienced and less well known on the national stage than George Bush, he gained credibility simply by holding his own against the vice president.

A few polling organizations hit the telephones as soon as the debate stage went black, seeking voters' opinions uncolored by the analysis of campaign officials or others.

The Gallup Organization surveyed 337 voters after the debate for Newsweek magazine and found 42 percent thought Dukakis came out on top, while 41 percent picked Bush as the winner. Twelve percent called it a tie and 5 percent had no opinion. The poll had a 6 point margin of error.

ABC News canvassed 639 voters immediately after the debate and found 44 percent felt Dukakis won the encounter, 36 percent picked Bush and 20 percent called it a tie.

The next debate will be held Oct. 13 or 14 in Los Angeles. Their running mates, Republican Dan Quayle and Democrat Lloyd Bentsen, get their turn in the debating ring Oct. 5 in Omaha, Neb.

Congress toughens law to save endangered flora and fauna

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bills to strengthen the effort to save endangered plants, animals and fish and to give special protection to African elephants and Pacific dolphins were passed by voice votes Monday in the House.

Dolphins are at risk because schools of yellowfin tuna are frequently found swimming beneath dolphins in the eastern Pacific. Congressional committees have been told that 115,000 dolphins died in foreign nets last year, compared with less than 14,000 in U.S. nets.

Week of combat in El Salvador leaves 160 killed or wounded

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The army said Monday that clashes last week between leftist guerrillas and troops of the U.S.-backed government killed 60 people and wounded 100.

It said that in a one-week span ending Saturday, 30 guerrillas of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front and 23 soldiers were killed in the fighting and 36 guerrillas and 54 soldiers were wounded.

A communique from the Armed Forces Press Office said two other people were killed by land mines planted by the rebels and accused the guerrillas of "assassinating six peasants."

Leaders search for answers to rising textbook price problem

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

During an informal breakfast meeting Monday morning, Faculty Senate Chair Kristin Valentine and Associated Students President John Fees cooked up possible solutions to the age-old problem of rising textbook costs.

In an attempt to pare down the cost of the new textbooks that annually broil the nerves of student leaders, Valentine and Fees have whipped up two ideas:

- The price of a textbook should be stamped in the free copy teachers often receive so that they have an idea of the financial burden students will have to bear.

- Include prices on the catalogs professors use in ordering books for the upcoming semester, which should make faculty members familiar with high textbook prices.

"It astounds me that the prices aren't included," she said. "If I knew that a book was $35, I would say 'Wow, let me look around for a book that is $15.'"

To bring prices before faculty members' eyes, Valentine said she will contact the ASU Bookstore and textbook publishers.

"I hope this will alleviate some of the problem," she said. Fees said he was happy with the ideas.

"It will force (faculty members) to become familiar with prices and see how expensive books get over the years," he said. "It will help them relate better to student needs."

Valentine said the Faculty Senate will not probe deeper into the textbook issue, at least for now.

"(But) I will do what I can. If something needs to be done, we (the senate) will do it," she said.

Similarly, Fees said he will leave things like they are.

"For now I think this is great," he said.

Fees had brought back to life last week the question, "Why are entry-level textbooks priced higher as a new version, even though there are usually very few changes from the old version?"

His prodding paid off, Fees said.

"This was exactly the response I was looking for," he said. "This will raise the consciousness of the faculty members because it places the responsibility on individual members."

While Fees centered on the faculty's role, Valentine said she understands the students' plight when they go to the bookstore and see the prices.

"Like John said, Shakespeare is Shakespeare," she added. "If there are no radical changes, textbooks should not be updated every year."

ASU Bookstore Manager Val Ross said the textbook issue is a valid one, and students and faculty should be educated on the high price of some textbooks.

"(But) the bookstore is not making money off of these high prices," he said. "Students need to learn the value of the textbook. There are a lot of costs that go into it."

Possible treatment developed to limit spread of AIDS virus

Scientists have developed a possible AIDS treatment that seeks out and kills AIDS-infected cells and limits the spread of the virus in infected people.

Scientists have altered a powerful poison that would become the possible treatment. Researchers said they are "encouraged both by the low amount of the drug which is effective" and its ability to ignore uninfected cells.

Senate panel approves bill for warning labels on alcohol

A Senate panel has unanimously approved a bill that would require warning labels on alcoholic beverages. The warnings would say alcohol consumption can impair driving abilities, cause birth defects and create other health problems.

The Senate's warning label would read: "Government Warning: According to the Surgeon General, women should not drink alcohol during pregnancy because of the risk of birth defects. Consumption of alcoholic beverages impairs your ability to drive a car or operate machinery, and may cause other health problems."

Scientist speculating on source of masculinity

Last winter, a scientist discovered what appears to be the male sex trigger — a bit of genetic material that determines masculinity.

Many scientists now believe a "maleness gene" is necessary to make all internal and external sex organs of males, but that only the absence of this gene is necessary to produce a female.

A debate also is raging in the scientific world on whether there is a gene that determines femininity. Researchers are studying the gene's possibility and predict they will be able to report their findings soon.

EPA official calls radon water's largest contaminate

The head of the office of drinking water for the Environmental Protection Agency said radon gas that evaporates out of drinking water could be "as large a contaminate as anything we're dealing with."

The agency reports that every year, water-source radon probably accounts for a few hundred fatal lung cancers caused by breathing radon indoors. This could total 20,000 deaths each year. It is estimated that nearly three-quarters of the areas in the United States have dangerously high radon levels.

Bolt from the blue: Patrick Buchanan and the Klan

Darrin Hostetler
Columnist

Is Patrick Buchanan a neo-Nazi?

Probably not. And the popular conservative syndicated columnist, former Nixon speechwriter, television personality and, most recently, White House communications director for Ronald Reagan, isn't likely to have any white robes and pointy hats stashed in his closet, either.

But it seems that he's got a big following among those who do.

The Thunderbolt, a grimy little monthly tabloid with a bright red banner, billed as containing the "news suppressed by the daily press," first crossed my desk during Christmas 1987, when a fellow staffer brought me some copies as a noxious holiday gift. The publication, distributed out of Marietta, Ga., exists primarily to disseminate such pearls of wisdom as:

- The holocaust was a fabrication of Jewish conspirators, who represent a race that is brutal, devious and unclean.
- Jewish movie producers require starlets to have sex with them before granting film contracts.
- Jews were responsible for the downfall of former Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham, a "brave and undaunted Christian Warrior."
- Jewish voters have an iron grip on six states and threaten to rocket Mike Dukakis into the White House as a favor to his

"jewish" wife Kitty.

All this, my fellow Americans, points to the central truism of our times: "Jewish power is at its zenith over America," dominating our society and making the United States the world focus of greed, adultery and perversion.

Also, of course, we must never forget that we could "solve all of the racial problems we have in America today if we could return to (segregation) . . . as a way of life."

Welcome to Georgia, 1988. Meet the Ku Klux Klan.

It's true. You can get a lot more filth on your hands by picking up a copy of the Thunderbolt than you can by shoveling out the stables with a teaspoon.

But there is a certain seductive allure to this kind of a rag, the same kind of morbid attraction that draws your attention to a particularly messy tractor-trailer/motorcycle accident.

It is the realization that in your hands is hard evidence that a grotesque subculture that most people thought had been eliminated long ago still exists and is still festering and spewing filth from deep within its protective cradle — the deep south.

And it gets even more interesting when Buchanan appears on Page One of that hard evidence.

Buchanan pens a twice-weekly column with substance and tone that fixes the writer as an ideologue positioned just slightly to the political right of Attila the Hun. Every Buchanan column is a raging assertion of conservative doctrine presented in loud and dogmatic terms. For the past few months, that column has been prominently displayed in the Thunderbolt.

And that got me to wondering. Who puts out this paper? And why does a respected journalist like Buchanan — rabidly right-wing to be sure but not a bigot — choose to affiliate himself with it?

Luke Johnson, a reporter for the Marietta Daily Journal who has done stories on the Thunderbolt, said he would be glad to tell me a little bit about its editor, Dr. E.R. Fields.

"He's a kook, a bigot and a Klan leader," Johnson said.

far, but I would love to nail that racist eventually," Johnson said.

A spokesman for Tribune Media Services, the syndicate which distributes Buchanan's column, said they haven't sold any columns to the Thunderbolt and said that if "any newspaper is running a column that we handle without permission, they are asking for a lawsuit over copyright infringement."

I called Fields to ask where he was getting Buchanan's column, but our conversation was one-sided and brief: "I have no comment for you. Do you understand?" (Click.)

And Buchanan is unreachable — away from his Virginia home for "several weeks."

If Fields isn't buying the column, then he must be copying it out of another newspaper (most likely the Journal) and Buchanan probably doesn't know anything about it.

It appears Fields is using Buchanan to add a pinch of respectability to his racist propaganda effort.

That I hope Buchanan, Tribune Media and the Journal do — when they verify that Fields is heisting the words and reputation of the columnist — is sue the hell out of the Thunderbolt and bury the paper so deep in legal fees that it is forced to shut its doors forever.

That would be the best thing for Buchanan, the syndicate, the state of Georgia and everyone who is intent upon ridding the south of any vestiges of the old bigoted Confederacy.

Lightening never strikes twice. And the Thunderbolt needs to be prevented from broadcasting the same old racist rumblings every month.

'You can get a lot more filth on your hands by picking up a copy of the Thunderbolt than you can by shoveling out the stables with a teaspoon.'

What else do you need to know?"

Only that Fields is the leader of a small group of two or three dozen Ku Klux Klan members, the remaining descendants of turn-of-the-century Klan leaders who operate out of the Marietta area.

And the story in Marietta, unconfirmed so far, is that Fields and friends have been funnelling money out of Georgia to white supremacist paramilitary groups in Utah and Idaho. They are also rumored to have connections to other neo-Nazi/supremist groups like the Aryan Nations.

"We haven't been able to nail it down so

Creationism belongs in Sunday school

Editor:

This letter is in response to Stacy Coar whose letter was printed on Sept. 13. It is obvious that since she is a music major her exposure to the sciences has been inadequate. I am sorry that what little exposure she has had has been negative. However, one should expect that when you sign up for a 100 level class it is designed to give the students a very broad overview of what makes up a very diversified field.

The theory of evolution which she so boldly attacked has always been a very controversial area. However, the theory of creation has no place in the science department. There are plenty of literature courses and Sunday schools that will teach it to you. Be aware though that it is a theory which has absolutely no evidence of validity except what is written in a book which expects you to blindly believe in it.

If you become a little more open-minded and ever decide you would like to better understand how the theory of evolution was devised, take a course in genetics, animal behavior, ecology, organic evolution or even astronomy (to understand the theory of life.)

Don't let your inexperience cause you to have such a biased and invalid argument.

Football game is no place to be quiet

Editor:

I didn't realize the students of ASU had to be treated as if they were at Hayden Library instead of Sun Devil Stadium. At a recent game we were told by ASU security, University Police and Tempe Police to sit and watch the game. Where is it written that students have to sit? We pay for these seats and want to root our team on by yelling and cheering. Well it's kind of hard to do this when you can't see the game going on — if you are sitting in the first five or six rows — because all you see is the back of the football players.

As a student, I believe we should be able to stand and yell during the football games. That's why we're there, for spirit and to watch our team win. Coach Marmie, I'm sure you would like your students to stand and cheer instead of not coming at all.

The Green Bras

Liberated female-persons America's last hope for defense

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

In recent days, three draft-age, unmarried women have told me that if called to the Army, they will become pregnant. "And I'll stay pregnant," one of them said, "every year until I'm too old to go."

Frankly, this attitude disappoints me. Despite what some shrill female fanatics may believe, I have long admired the new, modern, liberated women and have supported their goals. Although they rejected my suggestion, I once outlined how ERA could be passed in Illinois: by bribing the state legislature like everyone else does.

And I had assumed that as female-persons sought and won equality, they also would be willing to accept the same responsibility as men.

So I'm surprised to hear liberated women now saying that if the need ever occurs, they don't believe women should be drafted. Or, if drafted, they should not be required to do anything but the safe jobs.

I just can't believe that able-bodied female-persons are now saying they don't want to serve as GIs, that they will have babies to avoid going.

Especially, those women who so splendidly swear and drink and talk mean and jog and slam the racquetball around and learn karate. These, as I used to say before I became enlightened, seem to be very tough broads.

I had imagined an entire special forces army unit made up of the toughest of women. Something like the Green Berets. It could be called the Green Bras.

And I saw myself baking cookies and fruitcakes and sending them off to Private Pam and Sergeant Jan and Lieutenant Tammy. Or standing at the dock, waving goodbye to their troopship, while singing "Over There, Over There," and "I Won't Sit Under The Apple Tree With Anyone Else But You," and shouting: "Give 'em hell female-persons!"

I was even planning to volunteer to work at a local USO, serving coffee and cookies and little nips of bourbon to the female GI-persons.

Instead, I now have a frightening vision of millions and millions of young women, ages 18 to 26, tummies protruding with draft-dodging pregnancies. An entire new baby boom, brought on by the fear of being classified 1-A. Total collapse of pharmaceutical companies that make the Pill.

Oh, I'm disappointed. I hadn't imagined that the same female-persons who lops so aggressively down the street, jaws jutting, boot-heels and voices snarling, could now be saying: "I'm going to stay pregnant."

John Wayne never said that. But more than being disappointed, I'm now worried. Although I don't expect this country to get into a shooting war, you never know. And I had counted on today's modern young female-persons to pull us through to victory, or at least to a draw.

'I had assumed that as female-persons sought and won equality, they also would be willing to accept the same responsibility as men.'

The reason I was counting on the female-persons is that I don't have much confidence in the young male-persons.

My final, flickering hope that American's young males could defend this country against an invasion by, say the Cuban army, faded a few days ago.

That was when I picked up a newspaper and saw a picture of a group of students at Yale who were holding an anti-registration rally.

And in the front rank of the demonstrators was a young man holding a sign that said:

"Nothing Is Worth Dying For."

During the anti-war days of the 1960s and '70s, I saw a lot of placards bearing slogans like: "Don't Nepal Babies," "Make Love Not War," "Hell No, I Won't Go," and hundreds of others.

But I never saw one that put it as bluntly as: "Nothing Is Worth Dying For."

In a way, I respect that young man. He's not trying to kid anyone about moral issues, idealism, a love of peace, a hatred of aggression.

He just doesn't want anybody shooting at him, and that's that.

Had this kid lived more than 200 years ago, he might have stood up at the Virginia Provincial Convention, as Patrick Henry did, and shouted:

"Is life so dear or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take, but as for me, give me liberty, or . . . uh . . . or if you can't give me liberty, OK, then I'll take chains and slavery, you know?"

Or in 1776 he might have stood on the British gallows, as Nathan Hale did, and said, as the rope was placed around his neck:

"I only regret that I have but one life, to, uh, to uh — actually, what I regret is that I'm here. How about probation?"

And in 1961, he might have stood through a chilly inaugural address, as John Fitzgerald Kennedy did, and said:

"And so, my fellow Americans, ask not what your country can do for you; and ask not what you can do for your country. What I wanna ask is, will somebody please go do it instead of me, huh?"

I thought that maybe the liberated female-persons would do it instead of him.

But now I'm convinced otherwise. So, with the new threat of mass pregnancy, I hope this country doesn't have to start up the draft again. It was bad enough last time, with thousands of young men saying: "I'm going to Canada."

Now we'll have thousands of young women saying: "I'm going to bed."

Mike Royko is on vacation. The preceeding is a reprint of a previously published column.

ASU Library Associates selects mascot for group

Student receives $150 for design

ASU Library Associates has named a winner for a contest to design and name a mascot for the group.

Matthew Steinkamp submitted the winning entry and will receive $150 and a free year's ASULA membership for both him and his wife.

Although the contest response was not as good as expected, Steinkamp's logo has given ASULA "a good stepping stone," said the contest coordinator, Dave Stempien.

"What he has given us is a logo representing a personified stack of books. This is OK, but we want to work on it some more and try to tie in the new library," he said.

"We only had ten entries and we were surprised because we had about 30 calls asking about the contest, so we expected at least 25 entries," Stempien said.

Matthew Steinkamp won the ASU Library Associates design contest with this entry. His efforts earned him $150 and a free year's ASULA membership for both him and his wife.

Sears chairman to address Valley business executives

Edward A. Brennan, chairman and chief executive officer of Sears, Roebuck and Co., will speak to the ASU College of Business Dean's Council of 100 at its annual fall luncheon at noon today at the Camelback Inn.

The topic of his address will be "Short-Term Performance and Long-Term Growth: A Delicate Balance."

Edward Brennan

Brennan will be presented the council's 1988-89 Business Leadership Award, given annually to a businessperson whose lifetime contribution is recognized as significant to the nation and whose presence creates a model for future business leaders.

The Dean's Council of 100 is a group of the Valley's top business executives who serve as advisers to the dean of the College of Business.

Brennan joined Sears as a salesman in 1956. After becoming manager of a Baltimore Sears store in 1967, he quickly rose through management ranks to become president of the world's largest retailer in 1980. He was elected chairman and chief executive officer of the Sears Merchandise Group in 1981, following corporate restructuring. Brennan has been chairman and chief executive officer of the corporation since Jan. 1, 1986.

Scholarship established for real estate students

A memorial scholarship has been established at ASU to honor Dick Baxter, a former vice president and designated broker at Realty Executives.

The scholarship, which was initiated by Jacqueline Baxter and Richard Rector of Realty Executives, will be available to undergraduate students planning a career in real estate.

"The Baxter Memorial Scholarship is an ideal way to honor an individual who shaped the real estate industry in Arizona and to ensure the future of the industry by attracting talented students to the industry," Rector said.

Baxter, who had a 14-year career with Realty Executives, died on May 24. In addition to his real estate career, Baxter served as a city councilman for the town of Paradise Valley for three years and also served as a member of the Paradise Valley Board of Adjustments.

ASU Library designated as early English books center

University Microfilms International has designated the ASU Library as an early English books research center.

The firm, based in Ann Arbor, Mich., cited the ASU Library for its support of UMI's 50-year-old Early English Books Series.

It involves microfilming the 26,500 titles in "Pollard and Redgrave's Short-Title Catalog," which includes nearly every English language book printed in Great Britain from 1475 to 1640.

The series also includes the 50,000 titles in "Donald Wing's Short-Title Catalog" of English language books published in Great Britain and British North America from 1641 to 1700.

The ASU Library owns the entire available collection. It is one of a select group of North American institutions offering this resource to advanced degree candidates.

UMI presented the ASU Library a plaque commemorating its designation. The plaque will be on permanent display.

Survey shows minority grads earning less than others

By ROBIE KAKONGE and MICHELLE ALLMAN
State Press

Minorities who graduate from Arizona's three universities earn less than their non-minority counterparts, however, the choice of careers plays a major part in earnings, an ASU professor's report indicates.

Sixty-seven percent of 1981 minority alumni who responded to a survey conducted by ASU zoology professor Kathleen Church reported they earn less than $30,000 a year.

Church also found that 34.2 percent of the minorities who responded to the survey tend to concentrate their careers in education. Almost nine percent of non-minority alumni work in education.

The percentage of non-minority business professionals is 30.2 percent, compared to 18.4 for minorities.

Church's findings are part of a survey she conducted for an Arizona Board of Regents task force. She said 1,117 1981 graduates of Arizona universities responded to her questionnaire.

The results of Church's survey didn't surprise two men who are considered minority leaders.

Rick Martinez, a 1981 ASU graduate and spokesman for Sky Harbor Airport, said: "It's been known for a long time (that) it's a white man's world."

"A good thing is that now minority problems are discussed in terms of earning power, whereas before we were talking about whether minorities would even be considered (for employment) in the first place."

"It's not a matter of brain power but of culture shock."

There's a hell of a difference in coming from the (Phoenix) Roosevelt School District to Arizona State. The ASU bureaucracy was tougher than that of the U.S. Navy."

Manuel Medina, the mental health project manager for the Arizona Department of Health Services and member of the Arizona Chicano Coalition, said of the report: "That's not surprising. Minorities are still catching up."

"My biggest concern is the national attitude that people no longer seem to believe that by working hard and applying yourself, you can get ahead. They (minorities) have long seen education as the vehicle to level differences in society."

"When the University won't (help) why should we expect the rest of society to respond? They are where it all starts; they are supposed to be the leaders."

Officer

released on his own recognizance. His preliminary hearing will be set sometime this week.

He applied for an Arizona driver's license last week, police said, and also was in the process of obtaining Arizona registration for his pickup.

Brown's roommate, Jeffrey Dean Taylor, said Brown had lived in North Dakota and moved to the Valley a few years ago. He said Brown was shaken up by the accident.

"He's bothered by it, but he's holding up pretty good," Taylor said.

Taylor described Brown as a quiet "salt-of-the-earth guy." Neighbors also described Brown as quiet.

"He was real quiet. I've seen that truck, but it never clicked," neighbor Glenn Wallis said.

Brown's arrest came after a three-day search for a light-blue pickup with North Dakota license plates that witnesses said struck Hawk in the emergency lane on the Superstition Freeway near Rural Road. Hawk had pulled over a motorist for a speeding violation and was walking back to his patrol car when the pickup struck him.

Brown's truck, which was impounded late Monday, had front end damage and North Dakota plates, police said.

"We have no doubt that this is the vehicle involved in the accident," Gonzales said.

Investigators found hair and scuff marks on the right side of the truck and recovered a wallet inside the pickup that may belong to Brown, Gonzales said.

"There's a little bit of relief that this may be coming to a close," Tempe police spokesman Sgt. Al Taylor said.

A Bob Hawk Memorial Fund has been established for Hawk's family. Contributors can place donations with the Pima Savings at 1840 E. Warner Rd., Tempe.

Wages

In addition, Cons said the number of students working on campus has been rising during recent years.

For example, last year there were 1,442 students on on-campus payrolls. This year there are 1,756, or 334 more.

Paul Barberini, director of student financial assistance, said 6,600 students were employed on campus during 1987-88, earning $19.6 million. During the 1986-87 academic year, 6,281 students were hired and earned $17.1 million. Figures for 1988-89 are not yet available.

"(But) it's a pretty big increase," Barberini said.

Cons said most departments are not suffering financially to pay for the wage increases. In the work study program, the University pays 30 percent of students' wages and the federal government pays 70 percent.

"It is a very attractive program for on-campus employers," Cons said.

Cecilia Winnegar, who helps hire students for the engineering computer services, said her department has not suffered from the wage hike.

"We did have to let go about 10 students this summer because our budget was cut, but we did offer to hire those students back this fall," Winnegar said.

Johnson tests positive for steroids; medal taken away

Lewis awarded 100-meter gold

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Three days after standing on top of the world, Ben Johnson is fleeing from it, caught using steroids and forced to relinquish his throne to his most bitter rival.

The gold medal won by the Canadian sprinter in a world record-setting 100 meter dash was stripped Tuesday and awarded instead to American Carl Lewis.

The affair blackened what had been the brightest moment of the Seoul Games.

"This is a blow for the Olympic Games and the Olympic Movement," said IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch in a statement. "However, it shows that the IOC was right in the firm stand it has adopted to keep the Games clean."

It revived Lewis' hopes of another four-gold sweep: the 100 and 200-meter dashes, the long jump and the 400-meter relay. But at the same time it ensured that even that unparalleled feat would live in infamy as well as history.

International Olympic Committee spokeswoman Michele Verdier said traces of Stanozolol, a water-based anabolic steroid generally thought almost impossible to detect, were found in Johnson's urine sample after Saturday's race. The IOC executive board unanimously approved its medical commission's recommendation that the medal be withdrawn.

A dazed Johnson flew to New York, his medal left with countryman and IOC vice president Richard Pound and the dignity of the Olympics left in shambles.

"He appeared to be in a complete state of shock and not comprehending the situation and not comprehending the information," said Carol Anne Letheren, head of the Canadian delegation. "Ben was not able to discuss or articulate anything at that moment, so exactly what of the information affected him in what way we do not know. He just was not able to speak, and it was a very difficult moment for all of us."

Johnson was automatically suspended from international competition for two years.

"The case of Ben Johnson is extremely grave," said Arne Ljungqvist of Sweden, the medical committee chairman of the International Amateur Athletics Federation, track and field's governing body.

Johnson's manager, Larry Heidebrecht, said the positive test was the "the biggest shock" of Johnson's life.

"The only thing we can say at this stage is that it is a tragedy, a mistake or a sabotage," Heidebrecht said. "Up to five days before the race, Ben was in perfect condition. Something has happened in those days."

"We do not know what happened and how it happened, but apparently somebody has sabotaged Ben and we will find out who it was and how it was done."

Heidebrecht said someone — an official or volunteer — gave Johnson a bottle of a Gatorade-like drink before the semifinals or final — he was unsure which — and Johnson drained it.

His doctor later saw a "yellow goopy substance" at the bottom of the bottle, noticed it smelled odd and rinsed it out, Heidebrecht said.

"I think he's a very trusting young man who put himself in a spot where perhaps he's created a lot of problems for himself," Heidebrecht said.

Verdier, however, said: "The steroid profile is not consistent with such a claim."

"I think when someone is accused, he tries to defend himself," said Alexander de Merode of Belgium, chairman of the IOC medical commission. "It is his duty to defend himself."

Dr. Robert Dugal, a Canadian member of the IOC medical commission, called the drug "one of the most dangerous anabolic steroids. It has the effect of leading to a number of disturbances of the liver, including cancer."

Dugal and Merode both said stanozolol had the reputation of being undetectable.

"But since 1980 we have been able to detect it very well," Merode said. "Science makes progress, and day after day we are able to close the gap."

Marmie wants consistency from recovering Devils

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

Larry Marmie said he is still searching for consistency from his football team.

In ASU's 47-16 loss to Nebraska on Saturday, the Sun Devils looked impressive at times, but they could not hold together long enough to seriously threaten.

Marmie used the words "sloppy" and "flounder" Monday in describing his team's second-half collapse.

"We're not pleased with the way we played," Marmie said. "We're still a football team looking for our identity on both sides of the ball."

The defensive side was the one most exploited on Saturday. The Cornhuskers rushed for 441 yards, the fifth-highest total against ASU in school history. Three players (Steve Taylor, Ken Clark and Terry Rodgers) each gained over 100 yards.

"People are able to rush the football on us with far too much success," Marmie said. "We've got to find a way to correct that."

The ASU-Nebraska game was spirited at times, but the end result came as no surprise to many fans.

"We just didn't play as well as we would have to play to beat a team like Nebraska," Marmie said.

Ok, enough said.

The Devils have passed the Nebraska hurdle and now must regroup in preparation for their next opponent, the Lamar Cardinals.

Lamar University is a Division I-AA school located in Beaumont, Texas, with an enrollment of 13,000. Its first football game this year, against West Texas State, drew a crowd of only 962; the game was played in miserable weather conditions.

The Cardinals are coming to Tempe to collect the $150,000 opponent purse so they can balance their athletic department budget, Coach Ray Alborn said.

Games against Division I-A schools are the necessary "salvation" of I-AA programs, Alborn said, so they can offset losses throughout the athletic program.

"You've got to get your program in a position to compete with these people (I-A schools) if you're going to stay in business," Alborn said.

Lamar uses a run-and-shoot offense, something Alborn

feels can be an "equalizer" against bigger and better football teams.

"They have the kind of offense that scares defensive coaches to death because of all the things they do with their passing game," Marmie said. "If they get their running game going, they can create problems for you."

Senior quarterback Shad Smith has completed 48 of 96 passes this season for 662 yards and seven touchdowns. He has not been intercepted.

But their pass protection is vulnerable. Lamar quarterbacks have been sacked 15 times this season. Alborn is worried that the problem will not get any better this week, as ASU's defensive line should win the line of scrimmage.

Delta Sig, Los Prados earn golf titles

By CLAY TUCKER
State Press

There were no gophers and no flower-hacking course attendants Sunday at the Camelot Golf Course in Mesa, but there were 100 ASU golfers competing for the men's class B intramural golf championship.

Under the hot Arizona sun, Doug Lukasik, of the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity, out-shot all competitors to take the individual golf title, with a score of 70.

Lukasik said the greens were extremely inconsistent, but he still managed to shoot well and was excited about the win.

"It feels really good. I didn't expect it," Lukasik said. "I just shot really well because I never knew how I stood with the other golfers. It (the championship) was the icing on the cake for shooting a good round."

The team competition, which consisted of four players per team, was won by Los Prados. This is the same Los Prados team which won the intramural softball tournament two weeks ago.

The team members: Gary Glorio, Kevin Clements, Allan Vertin and Jim Hoover all scored well, and finished with a score of 317.

Finishing only two strokes behind Los Prados were the Greek teams of Phi Delta Theta and Phi Kappa Psi. The second-place Phi Deltas shot a well-rounded 319, while the Phi Psis missed first place by only three shots with a score of 320.

As well as giving team and lowest-score awards, two other individual awards were given out — the longest shot of the day and the shot closest to the pin. Tripp Ridge of Theta Chi had the longest drive of the day, and Wayne Cochran had the shot which was closest to the pin.

The men's class A and the women's overall golf championships took place Sept. 18 at Camelot. The Sigma Nu's turned in a fine performance, taking both the individual and team titles.

In the men's class A competition, the day belonged to Kirk Kokoska of Sigma Nu. Kokoska won two of the three individual awards for the day, as well as being a member of the winning Sigma Nu team.

Kokoska showed everyone how to play golf by placing first in two individual events. He shot a day-low 67, which won him the individual title, as well as the lowest score of the day award. His final triumph was the closest shot to the pin, which took place on the 15th hole.

The third award was for the longest drive, which was won by Dan Isaacson of Phi Delta Theta.

The four-player team championship was won by Sigma Nu. The four players: Kokoska, Jeff Harris (68), Mark McVey (73) and Kevin Kuhner (76) scored a combined winning score of 284.

In the women's team finals, which consisted of two players per team, the independent team Paradise won the title. Lisa Griff Kull of the Lambda Chi fraternity chips a shot out of the rough during an ASU intramural golf tournament at Camelot Golf Course in Mesa.

Stallings says Cardinals should be considered contender

PHOENIX (AP) — The Phoenix Cardinals are in a four-way tie for first place in the NFC East and Coach Gene Stallings said his club should start being considered a serious contender in the NFL.

Sunday's 30-21 win over defending Super Bowl champion Washington was the Cardinals' second straight after a 0-2 start and left Phoenix, Dallas, Washington and the New York Giants all with 2-2 records.

"It looks pretty good," Stallings said

Monday. "To be a real contender, you have to be able to come from behind and beat a good football team, and you have to be able to stay ahead of a good football team. We've done both now with Tampa Bay (a 30-24 win) and Washington.

"Our football team is continuing to improve. We've played pretty tough in all the games and we've played some pretty good teams. It's a very tough division. It's still early and anything can happen. But I'm glad we're one of the ones on top."

Stallings said the key to Sunday's upset was holding the Redskins to 53 yards rushing. Washington had entered the game as No. 2 in the league in total offense.

"Whoever wins the line of scrimmage usually wins the ballgame. We did it on both sides of the ball," Stallings said. "We shut down the run and that's what won the ballgame."

"Overall, I was really pleased with the way the defensive front played. And in the secondary, the longest pass we gave up was 27 yards. We made the big plays and didn't give up that many. We caused a few turnovers and could have had a couple more.

"About the only negative thing you can say is we 'held' them to 300 yards passing. But very seldom do you play the perfect game."

Johnson takes spotlight from Louganis' 4th gold in 2 Olympics

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Ben Johnson was caught cheating, and the Olympics was cheated of one of its greatest moments. He took steroids, so Carl Lewis got the gold medal — and the world's fastest 100-meter dash was a 10-second sham.

"This will change the history of the Olympics," American hurdler Edwin Moses said. "This will change a lot of people's lives."

So it was that, while Greg Louganis won an unprecedented fourth diving medal in two Olympics, the attention focused on shame rather than heroics.

"This is a blow for the Olympic Games and the Olympic movement," International Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samarach said.

Johnson, 26, of Canada, was banned from international competition for two years by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, and Canadian sports minister Jean Charest said Johnson also was kicked off the national team for life, pending appeal.

"We feel sick about it," Pat Reid, a Canadian coach, said. "The whole world feels sick about it."

"We are acutely aware of how devastating this news will be to millions of people," Canadian chef de mission Carol Anne Letheren said.

Lewis, meanwhile, may once again go after an unprecedented repeat of his quadruple gold medal performance of 1984. He won the long jump Monday and still has the 200 meters and 400-meter relay coming up.

Louganis, who won the springboard event last week despite cracking his head open on the board during qualifying, won the platform on Tuesday with 638.61 points. He needed 835.57 points on his final dive to win.

He got 86.70 with a reverse 3½-somersault, the most difficult in platform diving, his head missing the board by inches.

"I knew I had to hit the last dive," Louganis said. "I knew it was going to be tight. ... Like in '84, I reminded myself that my mother's still going to love me no matter what happens, which makes it easier."

Louganis is the first man to sweep the two diving events in consecutive Olympics. Pat McCormick, mother of springboard bronze medalist Kelly McCormick, swept both events in the 1952 and '56 Games.

At the same time, the U.S. women's basketball team defeated the Soviet Union 102-88, moving into Thursday's gold medal contest against Yugoslavia. Cynthia Cooper had

Dodgers clinch West division crown for 4th time in 8 years

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers clinched their fourth National League West title in eight years as Mickey Hatcher's RBI single broke an eighth-inning tie in a 3-2 victory over the San Diego Padres Monday night.

After reliever Jay Howell got Marvell Wynne on a pop out to second to end the game, the Dodgers rushed to the mound, mobbing their bullpen ace.

Los Angeles will meet the New York Mets in the National League playoffs, which start at Dodger Stadium on Oct. 4th. The Dodgers lost 10 of their 11 regular season games to the Mets and were 0-6 at Los Angeles.

The Dodgers' Fernando Valenzuela, making his first since July 30, worked three innings, allowing two hits, striking out three, walking two and throwing a wild pitch.

Valenzuela, who had been on the disabled list with a shoulder injury, was on a 60-pitch limit.

Alejandro Pena, the fifth of six Dodgers pitchers, allowed one hit in three innings and improved his record to 6-7. Howell pitched a perfect ninth to earn his 21st save.

The Padres were held to four hits.

Alfredo Griffin led off the eighth against Dennis Rasmussen, 15-10, with a sharp grounder to shortstop Dickie Thon, whose throw skipped past first baseman Keith Moreland for a two-base error.

Griffin advanced to third on a sacrifice bunt and came around on Hatcher's sharp single to left.

Plesz and Rebecca Russell combined for a total of 213.

In the individual category, Marmi Zoeller captured both the closest to the pin and the longest drive in the tournament awards. Zoeller was half of the Sun Birdies team, which placed second in the competition, two strokes behind Paradise.

ASU Assistant Director of Recreation and Intramurals Bob Gildersleeve said participation in this year's intramural golf tournament was tremendous.

Gildersleeve said applications were up 15 percent from last year and is expecting even more players next year.

27 points for the Americans, who already have beaten the Yugoslavs once in the tournament.

Johnson left Seoul Tuesday morning aboard a Korean Air Line flight destined for New York, unable or unwilling to explain himself.

Letheren said when she spoke with Johnson, "he appeared to be in a complete state of shock and not comprehending the situation and not comprehending the information."

On Monday, Lewis not only won the long jump, leading the first U.S. sweep of the event since 1904, but he also qualified for the 200 meters on Wednesday. He will anchor the 400-meter relay beginning on Friday.

Lewis ran two 200-meter heats to qualify for Wednesday's final, then had to come right back in the long jump an hour later. He argued with track officials over his jumping times. He was hopping mad, and he took advantage of it.

Kingdom became only the second man to repeat in the 110-meter hurdles, successfully defending his 1984 championship with the third fastest time in history. Lee Calhoun, another American, was the first man to win two in a row, in 1956 and '60.

"When I stood on the podium, I thought how much sweeter it was this time," Kingdom said. "I let people see that my win in 1984 wasn't a fluke."

In the 11th day of Games, the medals count looked like this: Soviet Union 75 total, 33 gold; East Germany 69 total, 28 gold, and United States 46 total, 16 gold.

More U.S. medals were sure to come from boxing, diving, tennis and basketball, where the United States and Soviet Union will meet in the Olympics for the first time in 16 years in Wednesday's semifinals.

The United States has nine of its 12 boxers still in action. On Tuesday, two of them advanced to the semifinals. Michael Carbajal scored a unanimous decision over Scott Olson of Canada in the 106-pound division, and Romallis Ellis eked out a 3-2 decision over Emil Tchuprenski of Bulgaria at 132 pounds.

Carbajal, of Phoenix, has fought his way into the Olympic semifinals.

The 106-pounder jabbed and counter-punched his way into his divisions boxing semifinals Tuesday with the victory over Olson.

The 5-0 decision assures Carbajal of at least a bronze medal.

Danny Manning's 18 points led the U.S. basketball team over Puerto Rico 94-57 and into the semis against the Soviet Union, where the two teams will meet in the Olympics for the first time since America's one-and-only loss at the 1972 Munich Games. The Soviets earned their berth with a 110-105 victory over Brazil.

The last time it was U.S. vs. U.S.S.R. the Soviets won 51-50 when three seconds were twice added to the clock and Aleksander Belov scored on a full-court inbounds pass.

It was the United States' only Olympic loss in 86 games, and it was so controversial, America refused to accept the silver.

Cardinals

The Cardinals travel to Los Angeles this week to play the Rams, who are 4-0 and the surprise team of the NFL so far. Los Angeles beat the New York Giants, 45-31, Sunday at East Rutherford, N.J.

"I can't imagine anybody scoring 45 points against New York," Stallings said. "They really grind it out. I remember they kept the ball on us 14 minutes on one drive last year."

"And whoever's carrying the ball for them, they always seem to lead the league. They had (Eric) Dickerson, then (Charles) White and now a new guy (Greg Bell). Plus they have a tough defense and they're rushing the passer a lot this year."

Stallings said his club can't afford a letdown now after their big win.

"There won't be any letdown. If there was going to be one, it would have been at Tampa Bay. We had played two tough games (Cincinnati and Dallas) and lost them both. We went to Tampa on a short week and we won," Stallings said. "Letdowns are not the makeup of this team. We may not play very well every week, but we're going to play hard."

"Our guys are not lackadaisical. That's not their style. They work hard and it's more enjoyable now that we're winning. If we were 0-4, nothing would be enjoyable — even me."

HAVE YOU seen the ASU Student Handbook and Calendar? It's a handy pocket-size book, filled with everything you ever wanted (or didn't want to) know about college life. It's even got a daily reference calendar! The really neat thing about the Handbook is that it's produced by ASU students. That's right. Students gather the information, write and edit the copy; shoot the photos; design the cover and inside pages and last, but certainly not least, they design and sell the advertising that supports this annual event. Students spend long hours with creativity flowing, ideas exchanging and the fulfillment of producing their very own handbook. We'd like to offer you the chance to join this team and gain invaluable experience while you're in college. We need several advertising sales representatives to create, design and sell advertising to local retail businesses. If you have a strong commitment to excellence and pride in a job well done, we'd like to speak with you. You must be self-motivated, punctual, a good time manager, own a car and be a people person. Please call today and join a team of dedicated ASU students who are committed to making the 1988-89 ASU Student Handbook and Calendar the best. Call Dan Ellstrom at 965-6555 today! P.S. If you are wondering what in the heck a Student Handbook is, stop by Student Publications in Matthews Center and get a free copy!

Help create the first 21st century company.

Apple has always been a little ahead of its time. From the introduction of the first popular personal computer, to the first system to use graphic user interface, to the first desktop publishing system, our goal has always been the same: to change the world with computers.

That goal results in a company that is every bit as advanced as its products. In many ways, Apple is well on its way to becoming the first 21st century company in the Fortune 200.

Where the typical company emphasizes hierarchy, at Apple we stress networks. Instead of mandates coming down from the top, ideas percolate throughout the organization. We give our people unusual amounts of responsibility. Extraordinary tools to let them do their best work. And an eclectic environment conducive to changing the world.

Add to that unusual environment all of the resources a major corporation can provide. Sophisticated management. Astute marketing. International distribution. And you have the elements of the first company of the next century: Apple.

If you're ready to lead the way beyond the year 2000, and you're about to receive a degree in engineering or computer science, why not join a company as eager to see what you can do as you are—Apple.

Come hear our engineers and MIS managers talk about our future and your future with us.

We'll be on Campus:
Monday, October 3
Memorial Union, Rm 222
6 p.m. - 8 p.m.

Also, see us at the Career Fiesta
Tuesday, October 4
