Custodian shortage leaves profs in mess

By MICHELLE ALLMAN
State Press

ASU professors assigned to teach classes at the University's new Fine Arts Complex have had to do more than instruct students. They have had to take out the trash and clean the bathrooms.

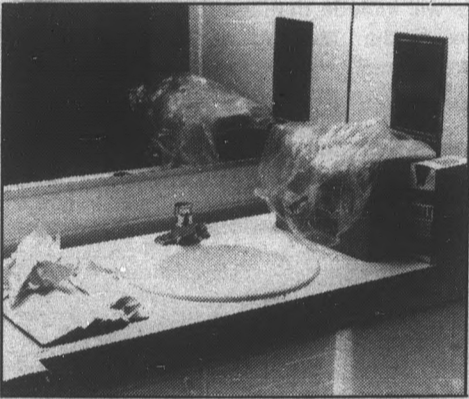

That's because there were no custodians assigned to the $16.4 million building, which has been used for classes since late September.

"It's a real problem when you go in the bathroom and finish your business and look up and see there is no toilet paper," theater Professor Bill Akins said.

Physical Plant officials said they were not given University approval to begin providing services to the new building until Monday.

About 25 dance, music and theatre classes have moved into the new building, which University officials say is 90 percent complete.

According to professors, when classes began meeting in the building, there was no toilet paper, trash receptacles, pay phones or even fire extinguishers.

"The floors were filthy," theater Professor William Dobkins said. "Any cleaning that was done was done by us (the professors)."

It is not known who is responsible for the oversight.

"We attempted to establish some cleanup but weren't provided with a schedule or other instructions (from ASU)," said David Brixen, acting director of the Physical Plant.

Dobkins said he believes ASU officials did not intend to assign custodians to the building until its completion.

"I doubt they could just forget something like this," Dobkins said. "I don't know where the fault lies. But along the way the bureaucracy or somebody screwed up."

College of Fine Arts Dean Seymour Rosen said last week that he "had no idea" there was no custodial system, and that he had assumed there was one. But on Monday he said that "there is now and will continue to be full-time custodial service."

"I have talked with business affairs and maintenance," Rosen said. "(The problem) is all taken care of now."

Akins said he was relieved that a maintenance service has been established.

"I am just absolutely delighted, as you can imagine," he said.

Affidavits filed in response to ex-employee's lawsuit

By SHERI JOHNSON
State Press

The contract of a former associate director of ASU personnel was not renewed because of poor work performance and not because she criticized ASU's minority hiring practices, University officials said in court affidavits.

The affidavits were filed Sept. 30 in response to a lawsuit brought against the University and the Arizona Board of Regents in August by former employee Gwendolyn Simpson.

Simpson, who worked for ASU from 1985 to 1987, stated in her suit that she was terminated because she brought unfair hiring practices to the attention of her supervisors.

Defendants in the suit are ASU President J. Russell Nelson; Susan Malaga, director of personnel; Jackie Weatherby, former assistant to the president for affirmative action and now assistant director of personnel at ASU West; and Victor Zafra, vice president of business affairs.

None of the defendants would comment on the suit, but each filed an affidavit in Maricopa County Superior Court.

In her affidavit, Malaga said Simpson was dismissed for "untimely completion and follow-through on assignments, inaccuracy and inattention to detail resulting in errors, inadequate managerial judgment and misrepresentation of credentials."

In her suit, Simpson charged: "The decision to give plaintiff her 'Notice of Non-Reappointment' of April 1, 1987, was motivated by ill-will and a desire to retaliate against plaintiff for exercising her constitutional right of free expression."

Malaga's affidavit disputes Simpson's claim, stating that Simpson's dismissal was made "in good faith, without malice or ill will toward plaintiff."

"I did not retaliate against her for any statement which she may have made, nor did I knowingly intend to violate her First Amendment rights," Malaga said in her affidavit.

Other claims listed in Simpson's suit include charges of sexual harassment by "supervisory personnel"; pressure to change her vote during termination and disciplinary hearings for employees; and falsification of affirmative action reports by University officials, including Weatherby and Zafra.

Simpson's suit charges that she told her supervisors of these areas of misconduct within the University, but nothing was done to correct the problems.

Affidavits from Weatherby, Nelson and Zafra, state that Simpson did not bring any of the alleged complaints to their attention.

"At no time during her employment at ASU did plaintiff ever communicate with me about any topic alleged in the complaint," Nelson said in his affidavit.

Zafra said in his affidavit that he received "no

Phoenix standard of living called 'average'

From staff and wire reports

Phoenix metropolitan area residents enjoy a standard of living near the national average, but Arizonans in other parts of the state have living standards significantly lower than the average for comparably sized places nationally, according to ASU's Center for Business Research.

"The cost of living in the Phoenix area is slightly lower than expected for an urban area of its size," said Tom R. Rex, Center research manager. "Chandler, Tempe and Phoenix have equivalent costs of living, but costs are much higher in Scottsdale, especially for housing and utilities."

Tucson's cost of living is lower than Phoenix's, but Tucson's standard of living is about 20 percent below the national average for mid-sized urban areas.

"The costs of living in non-urban areas of Arizona, however, are much higher than expected given their population," Rex said.

Rex partially blamed the difference on the great distance between most small towns in rural areas of the state.

"The very large distance between small towns means transportation costs are much higher," Rex said.

He said that many residents of the state's metropolitan areas would prefer moving to the smaller towns; but because of the higher cost of living, their standard of living would be dramatically reduced by making such a move.

In rural Arizona communities, living standards range from 10 to 25 percent below the national average for small towns, Rex said.

The standard of living is actually a measure of a family's disposable income, or what they have remaining from their income after costs have been factored in.

"Living costs vary both geographically and by the population of the place," Rex said. "In the Mountain region, which includes Arizona, costs are near the national average. Relative to the rest of the nation, living costs were higher in the Northeast in 1987 than in 1986."

Income levels vary directly with population in the same manner as living costs, he said, adding that incomes also vary geographically, but not in the same pattern as the cost of living.

The standard of living increases with the population of an area, varying from 6 percent less than the national average in small towns to 10 percent more in large urban areas. Geographically, adjusted income ranges from 10 percent less than the national average in the Southeast to 7 percent more in the Great Lakes states.

U.S. Supreme Court to decide in reverse paternity case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two men claiming fatherhood of a 7-year-old girl are asking the U.S. Supreme Court for a Solomon-like decision that could affect other fathers in so-called reverse paternity cases.

"This case arises out of a societal phenomenon of men assuming the responsibility we've always told them to assume as parents," attorney Larry Hoffman said. The case is scheduled to be heard Tuesday by the high court.

In the classic paternity case, a man who denies fathering a child out of wedlock may be forced by the courts to take financial responsibility for the child.

"I consider this a double reverse paternity case," Hoffman said. "We have not one, but two, men coming forward wanting to support and care for this child."

Hoffman represents a married couple, Gerald and Carole Dearing, who are fighting a suit by Michael Hirschensohn, Mrs. Dearing's former lover.

Hirschensohn, who says he is the biological father of Victoria Dearing, wants visitation rights and "the opportunity to be involved in the child's life," his attorney, Joel Aaronson said.

"All he wants is to be able to visit with the child and give the child the warmth and nurturing a parent gives a child," Aaronson said.

Protesters plan demonstration due to lack of support for AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 300 AIDS protesters rallied outside the federal health headquarters building Monday in a warmup for a more intense demonstration planned Tuesday in which they will try to block entrances to the Food and Drug Administration headquarters in nearby Rockville, Md.

Leaders of the demonstrations have said they expect hundreds of arrests in what they bill as a civil disobedience action they hope will be the largest since marches on the Pentagon during the Vietnam War.

A small contingent of police watched as a series of speakers ridiculed the Reagan administration for what they said was a criminally inadequate response to AIDS and castigated the news media for not paying enough attention to the disease.

Thatcher returns to old hotel after IRA bombed 4 years ago

LONDON (AP) — Four years after the Irish Republican Army blew up her seaside convention hotel, Margaret Thatcher and her Conservative Party reassembled Monday in the same place with the political fundamentals unchanged.

Arriving in Brighton on the eve of the four-day convention, Thatcher gazed at the repaired facade of the Grand Hotel and said her strongest memory from the Oct. 12, 1984, bombing was that the day after, the convention started on time and "people flooded in. They weren't going to be defeated."

The IRA, in a statement to the Irish media, said it "takes great delight from the hysteria and the expense surrounding the security of Mrs. Thatcher and the Tories at their Brighton conference."

Thatcher said she chose to return to the graceful old Victorian hotel because "after the incident last time we could not possibly have stayed anywhere else."

Child study program accredited

By MICHELLE ALLMAN
State Press

The ASU psychology department's child study laboratory and preschool has become one of 12 Arizona child care programs to receive accreditation by the National Academy of Early Childhood Programs.

The accreditation comes after a mandatory year-long self study. The lab evaluated its ability to "meet all the needs of the children," Center Coordinator Zita Johnson said.

"The accreditation is a process where the school examines its program in the areas of staffing, nutrition, activities, etc. Following the self exam, the evaluators from the academy come and during a two-day process, see that what the program says about itself is true."

The national academy is a Washington, D.C., based group that is the first national evaluation system for child care facilities. The ASU lab also is licensed by the state.

ASU psychologists use the lab as a research center. Parents enroll their children in the center, which is the equivalent of a preschool, for a fee.

Johnson said the national accreditation helps establish the 16-year-old lab's credibility.

"This new honor validates our claim as the best child-care option in the community," Johnson said. "It really helps parents see that they have found the highest-quality program for their children."

More than 140 children up to 5 years old are enrolled in the program this year, according to Kathleen Ritchie, director of Children's Laboratory Programs for the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Johnson said ASU students from all academic areas are attracted to the program's volunteer and employee positions.

"Students are here for a variety of reasons," she said. "Many have or are planning to have children, many are education majors and some just like children."

"We get students from the psychology, education, architecture, English, business — just about all the departments at ASU."

The lab/preschool is planning an open house to celebrate the accreditation on Tues., Oct. 18 from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. The lab is located in the Psychology Building on McAllister Avenue.

Nevermind presidency, Quayle unfit for VP spot

Carolyn Höfig
Columnist

Last week's vice presidential debate fairly well drove the President Quayle non-issue ashore. Although it consumed plenty of media attention, it hadn't been holding much water lately anyway.

Why, indeed, is a contender for the office of vice president quizzed about his qualifications to be president? Particularly when the capabilities of a Vice President Quayle should be examined?

Three times during the debate, the not-so-sympathetic panel pressed the Republican candidate with "What if George Bush became incapacitated and you had to assume the presidency?" Three times, Sen. Quayle re-recited his political record and expressed his unease at responding in detail to theoretical situations.

Although Quayle's third time at bat gave Democratic contender Lloyd Bentsen an opening for the provoking — if premeditated — "You're no Jack Kennedy" line, the monotonous drumming of a dead horse being soundly flogged made for a poor mental exercise and a worse use of debate time.

But there was more to the debate than pat non-answers and rehearsed one-liners. George Bush's hopeful No. 2 couldn't have known how right he was when he said in his conclusion that the debate offered America a glimpse of the real Dan Quayle.

It smacks of Dorian Gray.

Quayle accomplished little of his unmasking with what he said. Both candidates were scripted to the teeth for the debate.

Once, however, Quayle was caught with his answers down. Early in the debate he was asked how he would explain to one of the millions of children living below the poverty level his votes against the school breakfast program, the school lunch program and a free vaccination program. He probably hoped the ensuing pause looked thoughtful.

He could bring a prepared response to bear — his work with the poor in his home state — but first he'd have to wade through un-coached territory. What did he come up with on his own?

"I did meet with those people," Quayle began. "I met with them at a food bank in Fort Wayne, Ind. And, you know, they didn't ask me those questions."

"They were just happy that I'd taken the time from my schedule to meet with them."

Since when does "Serving Your Constituents" fall under the optional functions listed in the senator's job description?

Do "public servants" accept non-engraved thank-you cards for, well, serving the public?

Sadly, the remark received little attention from debate analysts. It was probably eclipsed by Bentsen's "Kennedy" comeback, good news for the Republican camp. Now Quayle's coaches can portray their man as picked on instead of pompous.

That must be more vice presidential.

But a potential Vice President Quayle has got to know that, although he probably would have to spend less of his incredibly valuable time in food banks, his new job would be just as thankless.

The only constitutionally provided duty of the vice president is to preside over the Senate. Does Quayle suppose those folks would be nicer to him than Tom Brokaw was Wednesday night? Than Lloyd Bentsen? The Texan senator may even be there if the Republicans take the White House. Any "Kennedy" cracks in the Senate would not have to be kept to one minute.

Could Quayle develop some composure in the 73 days between election day and Jan. 20?

Or would he revert to the pout-and-glower approach he broke out during the debate everytime a question — or a response — came up that didn't please him?

A Vice President Quayle could also face a diplomatic mission or two. Has his performance at the debate indicated that he can react coolly under pressure?

During the debate, Quayle sought repeatedly to separate his youth from suggestions of inexperience. He may be a (relative) youngster, but he's certainly no newcomer on Capitol Hill, he maintains.

But even if he convinces the voters, he may not convince some of the more senior members of the National Security Council and the Cabinet, on both of which the vice president sits. Did the debate's Quayle evince a dynamic personality capable of instilling respect in even the skeptics among his own party?

As Quayle tried to point out in the debate, the President Quayle question is irrelevant. Whether he is qualified to take command of the country has little to do with the campaign at hand.

However, the debate failed to show conclusively that the 'real Dan Quayle' would make a good Vice President Quayle. George Bush wants the voters to believe he made the right choice; the voters would like a little evidence.

John Nance Garner said: "The Vice Presidency of the United States isn't worth a pitcher of warm spit."

The candidate to the office, however, should be.

Bike cop displays arrogance, disregard for rules

Editor:

I would like to express my anger and disappointment with bicycle patrolman Al Campoy and his regard for public safety and the law. On Sept. 29, I noticed Officer Campoy issuing tickets to illegally parked bicycles situated in front of the MU. He had his bicycle parked among them, further congesting traffic and adding additional hazard, not to mention that it was a no-parking area. Out of interest for the public's safety, I approached Officer Campoy and expressed my concern. He replied in a very arrogant tone: "Where should I park it?" I then simply suggested the use of the bike racks and his answer was, "yeah, sure... thanks!" He then proceeded to laugh as a comrade patted him on the back for this fine act of arrogance.

It has always been my opinion that the purpose of a police officer is to enforce the law, maintain public safety and serve as a user friendly resource for citizens. In order for a police officer to effectively enforce the law, he must also obey the law — a requirement Officer Campoy clearly overlooked when he parked in a no-parking zone. To add insult to injury, he had the nerve to ticket other bicycles that were parked in the same illegal zone. There is no reason for officer Campoy to disobey the law when he could have parked in the bike rack no more than five feet away.

Secondly, Officer Campoy was supposedly issuing tickets in the interest of public safety. He contradicted these terms by parking his bicycle in the center of a highly congested area. This action makes me wonder whether he was really concerned about public safety, or if he was issuing tickets purely as a source of revenue.

In regard to being a user friendly resource, Officer Campoy was arrogant, obnoxious and insensitive to a concerned citizen's viewpoint, qualities that clearly eliminate him from the category of user friendly. I fail to see how a citizen who has a problem could feel comfortable approaching someone who possesses these qualities. I also find it disheartening when I see an individual of authority abuse their rank and use it to make other's feel inferior, especially in the case of a police officer.

The students of Arizona State need to know that their police force is working for them, and that they uphold all that their badge represents.

'Card-carriers' abound; where's McCarthy when you need him

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

In a praiseworthy outburst of patriotism, Sen. J. Danforth Quayle III has challenged Michael Dukakis to renounce his membership in the American Civil Liberties Union.

So far, Dukakis has arrogantly ignored Quayle's challenge. Thus, he remains a card-carrying member of this notorious organization.

Which is just further evidence that what this country needs is a rebirth of something that used to be called the House Un-American Activities Committee. HUAC for short.

This was a congressional committee made up of good, patriotic rustics from places like Bigbelch, Ark., and Kickstump, Okla.

They pursued liberals, pinkos and others they suspected of being card-carrying commies or wearing pointy shoes, knowing how to order from a French wine list, having a foreign sounding name, looking Jewish or taking the abolition of slavery too seriously.

They didn't catch many card-carrying commies. But they let a lot of professors, writers, bookworms and other suspected subversives know that they had better be danged careful about what they thought or said.

Unfortunately, the committee faded away in the 1960s, after a Chicago lawyer named Albert Jenner, representing a prominent heart surgeon who was known to wear pink ties, rudely told them they were boobs and to bug off.

But until they disbanded, they performed a great patriotic service. As I said, they caught a few card-carrying communists. But who knows how many people they frightened into not carrying any kinds of cards in their wallets?

So now that the issue has been raised that Dukakis is a card-carrying member of the ACLU, it might be time to resurrect the old House Un-American Activities Committee to hold hearings and find out just how many others are carrying the card.

Suspects could be called before the committee and asked: "Do you now or have you ever believed in civil liberties?"

"Yes, when I was younger and more foolish."
"Did you belong to any organization that advocated civil liberties?"
"Yes, God help me. I was once duped into joining such an organization."
"And what was the name of this organization?"
"It was called (sob, blubber) the American Civil Liberties Union."
"And you admit that you were a card carrying member of this organization?"
"Yes, as I sit here weeping in shame and tearing out my hair in remorse. I confess, I confess."
"While a member, did you advocate free speech?"
"Damn my soul, I did, yes I did."
"Did you engage in a conspiracy with other card carrying members of this organization to oppose censorship, to defend the Constitution and the Bill of Rights?"

"To my everlasting shame, I did."
"Did you funnel money to this organization for the purpose of furthering its subversive goals?"
"Yes, every year, I sent a check when I would renew my membership."
"Your card-carrying membership?"
"Yes I carried it, I carried the card."
"Where did you carry it?"
"I carried it behind my driver's license. In my wallet. Right hip pocket."
"Did you carry it at all times?"
"Yes, except when I took a shower or went to bed."
"Now, tell us this. Did you ever recruit others to be card-carrying members of this organization?"
"Yes, as I hang my head in shame, I admit that I did. I recruited."
"Will you give us the names of the people you recruited to be card-carrying members?"

"Must I?"
"If you don't, we can hold you in contempt."
"Then I'll tell you. I recruited my wife."
"Your own wife was a card carrying member?"
"Yes, she carried it in her purse."
"And who else?"
"My brother-in-law, my upstairs neighbor, my secretary, my proctologist, and . . . and . . . I can't go on."
"You must. You will feel better. Cleansed."
"I recruited my son."
"Your own son? Mr. Chairman, may I say that this man is a cur."
"You may, although I think he is a swine myself. Continue the questioning."
"Yes. Now, did you and those you recruited discuss civil liberties, free speech and how you may conspire to spread these concepts?"
"We did."
"In other words, you had a cell made up of card-carrying members."
"I suppose you could call it that, yes."
"And where did you meet?"
"I would often meet with my wife and son in my home. I met with my upstairs neighbors on the stairs. My secretary in my office. And my proctologist in his office."
"In other words, you shifted your meeting places with these card carrying members around, on the move, making detection difficult? You were always sneaking around, right?"
"In the summer, I even wore dark glasses."
"My final questions. You have renounced your membership, have you not? You are no longer a card carrying member?"
"Yes, I am proud to say that I did. I tore the card into itty-bitty pieces and flushed it away like doo-doo."
"And you did that because you realized you were a dupe of the civil libertarians, free speakers and other subversives?"
"Absolutely."
"Any other reasons?"
"Yes, I'm running for public office, and I wanted to get out before my opponent did so I could accuse him."
"You're a fine American and will make a great public servant."
"I will if this gimmick works."

Computer scientist given $1.2 million in research grants

ASU computer scientist Robert Barnhill has received $1.2 million in research grants from the U.S. Department of Energy and the National Science Foundation.

Barnhill, who is head of the ASU department of computer science, will use the funds to conduct research in computer-aided geometric design. The research is used to convert numerical data into computer-generated images. It is a relatively new field of science that Barnhill helped found in the early 1970s.

The five-year, $1 million DOE grant will be used to refine research techniques and to train doctoral students in the field for U.S. government and industry laboratories.

Associate business professor awarded Bower Fellowship

Charles Manz, an associate professor of management in the College of Business, has been awarded the 1988-89 Marvin Bower Fellowship from the Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration.

Manz will spend a year conducting research at Harvard. The Ivy League school will match the salary and benefits he receives at ASU, and in addition, Harvard will pay ASU $10,000 for his work.

The award typically goes to an assistant or associate professor who has demonstrated outstanding achievement in business-related academics and who shows exceptional promise of continuing scholarly productivity through published works.

Manz, an assistant professor at the University of Minnesota before coming to ASU this fall, received his doctorate from Pennsylvania State University in 1981. He already has started his work at Harvard.

Alumni, community invited to 'Come Home' lectures

ASU will open its doors to alumni and the community with a "Come Home to ASU" lecture package that spans the disciplines of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

The six lectures will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3:10 p.m. Oct. 22 in the Social Science Building.

Lectures include "Voter Behavior in Presidential Elections," "Marking the Millennium of Christianity in Russia, 988-1988: The Orthodox Church in a Changing Society," "American Women in Transition: Changes and Challenges," "The Exploration of Mars," "Islamic Perspectives of War, Violence and Peace" and "Navajo Weaving in Cultural Context."

The fee for three lectures and a luncheon is $25 a person or $15 without the luncheon. The registration deadline is Oct. 18. For more information, call 965-3391.

Seminar to focus on growth in urban areas of Arizona

"Urban Growth in Arizona" will be the subject of a seminar offered by ASU's Advanced Public Executive Program and the Morrison Institute from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Friday at the Tempe Embassy Suites Hotel.

The seminar will cover a variety of issues that surround Arizona's urban growth.

Topics to be discussed include who pays for urban growth, how growth impacts the quality of life, whether regional authorities are needed and whether Arizona can live with growth.

Registration is $85, which includes all materials and lunch. The Embassy Suites Hotel is located at 4400 S. Rural Road in Tempe.

Justice Studies school to host biannual Internship Fair

ASU's School of Justice Studies will host its biannual Internship Fair from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Oct. 26 in the Arizona Room of the MU.

Students can meet with Valley justice agency representatives and explore internship possibilities for the spring 1989 semester.

New director becomes third woman in Tempe city government

By KRISTI ELLIS
State Press

Shirley Kanode has been hired as Tempe's human resources director, making her the third woman to become a department director in Tempe city government.

"Tempe human resources has the best staff in the state, and we are on the edge of everything progressive," Kanode said.

The two other women department directors in Tempe city government are Dorothy Weiler, who served as library director from 1967 to 1979, and Virginia Thompson, who has served as city clerk for over 17 years.

Kanode was selected over 270 applicants and began duties Oct. 4. Her salary will be $58,000, pending City Council approval.

"I know that Shirley will be an excellent director who will bring both professional expertise and experience to the job," Deputy City Manager Jerry Geiger said.

Human resources used to be a division of management services, but with Kanode's appointment, it will become a separate department.

"We'll become more pro-active in helping management (as a separate division)," Kanode said.

Some of the major goals of the department are to provide services to other departments, such as evaluating, disciplining and hiring employees.

Tempe will sell 62-year-old historic train depot to developers

By KRISTI ELLIS
State Press

Tempe will sell its historic train depot for $560,000 to developers of the new Depot Cantina Mexican Restaurant, the depot's tenants.

The City Council decided Thursday to sell the 62-year-old depot to former councilman Richard Neuheisel and John Bebbling. The depot, located two blocks west of Mill Avenue on Third Street, was built in 1926.

But the sale of the land was not approved until a "historical easement" stipulation was added. The stipulation forbids all future owners to tear the building down and requires them to ask the city for approval of any alterations.

Councilman Barbara Sherman opposed the sale, arguing that the city should retain ownership and continue leasing the land.

"Suppose we sold this and then the present owners sold this; what kind of protection would we have?" she said.

Sherman said she wants the historical part of the depot to remain everlasting.

Two years ago, the city had refused to sell the land to the developers. Instead, they awarded the developers a contract to renovate the building.

The council had been hesitant to lease the land because there were a number of unresolved issues related to public access for AMTRAK and future transportation needs, as well as parking needs for workers and shoppers of Old Town Square.

Bebbling and Neuheisel spent more than $1 million to remodel the building and create the Depot Cantina restaurant.

"We feel that we can sell the land now because we can protect the public's transportation needs by placing restrictions on the public's uses," said David Fackler, deputy director of long range planning and housing and redevelopment.

Police trying to identify man found unconscious

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

Tempe police are trying to identify a man who was found nude and unconscious Saturday with severe head injuries.

The man, who is described by investigators as a Native American, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 140 pounds with black hair and brown eyes, is listed in serious but stable condition at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital-Osborn, said Tempe police spokesman Sgt. Al Taylor.

Taylor said a passerby found the man at about 9:40 a.m. lying in a vacant lot in the 1700 block of East Larkspur Drive in north Tempe.

The victim told police that he was assaulted by two other Native Americans. Taylor said the man was hit in the head several times with some sort of sharp object.

"He's in pretty bad shape," Taylor said, adding that police are unable to get any further information from the man because he was so badly beaten.

In other incidents:

•Police are looking for a man who wore a Los Angeles Dodgers hat when he robbed a motel clerk at knife point Friday. The suspect reportedly sped off on a bicycle.

The robbery occurred at about 7:07 p.m. when the suspect entered the Regal 8 Motel, 1720 S. Priest Drive, with a six-inch hunting knife and told the clerk: "Gimme your cash."

police report

The clerk complied and the suspect stuffed the cash into a pant pocket before fleeing, police said.

Police described the suspect as Hispanic, 5 feet 9 inches, 160 pounds with brown hair. He was last seen wearing the blue baseball cap, a blue T-shirt and faded jeans.

•A hungry thief stole three pizzas and a 16-ounce Coke Sunday from a Marriot Pizza Place cart that was parked on the south side of Palo Verde West Residence Hall, police said. There are no suspects and the loss is estimated at $25.

•Police interviewed a man Sunday who was seen dancing in circles on a grassy area north of Sahuaro Hall, police said. The man told police he had an exam in the morning and was trying to clear his head.

•A men's light blue Takara 10-speed bicycle was stolen Friday from the north side of the Aquatic Center, police said.

•A metal "Defense Intelligence Agency" sign was stolen sometime between late Friday and early Saturday from a room at Irish Hall, police said. Loss is $20.

ASU police reported that the following incidents occurred Sunday at Sun Devil Stadium during the Phoenix Cardinals-Pittsburgh Steelers football game:

•Someone stole $1,745 worth of property from a vehicle parked in Lot 59.

•Police briefly chased fans who tossed around the game ball after it was kicked into the stands.

•A woman, who police said was intoxicated, was interviewed after she squirted water at an usher who said he did not want to be squirted.

•Two men were ejected after they were seen spraying people with water.

•Two men were involved in a fist fight and one man got a bloody nose. The injured man did not want to prosecute.

•A man was arrested and charged with trespassing after he refused to stop scalping tickets on ASU property.

•Two men were ejected for swearing at women and stadium security.

•A man was ejected after he yelled obscenities when his friend was ejected.

•A man was ejected after he dropped a beer bottle on fans.

•A man was ejected after he was seen with fake binoculars that contained alcohol.

•Four men and a woman were ejected for alcohol possession.

•After the game police found: a white change purse, a pair of reading glasses, a pair of brown sunglasses, a blue eyeglass case, two sets of five keys, a Marriot worker badge and binoculars.

Education professor dies of heart attack

By TERESA OWEN
State Press

Services were held Monday for Roger D. Farrar, an ASU associate professor of education administration who died last week of a heart attack.

Mr. Farrar, 52, had been an ASU professor in the educational leadership and policy studies division since 1974.

Nicholas Appleton, director of educational leadership and policy studies, said Mr. Farrar was feeling ill Thursday and admitted himself to Desert Samaritan Hospital. He died later that day.

Mr. Farrar, who was an expert in site selections for public schools, had been developing a new computer application course for school administrators. He also conducted many educational surveys in Arizona, Nebraska and Ohio.

Two years ago, after recovering from a previous heart attack, Mr. Farrar had quit smoking and started exercising to improve his health, Appleton said.

Mr. Farrar's death was a shock to Appleton and the department because he seemed to be in good health, he said.

During his spare time, Mr. Farrar was an amateur photographer and tennis player. He also was an avid ASU booster, especially when his son, Brett, played ASU baseball.

"He was a good and decent human being," said Tom Metos, one of Mr. Farrar's colleagues. "He was a good family man."

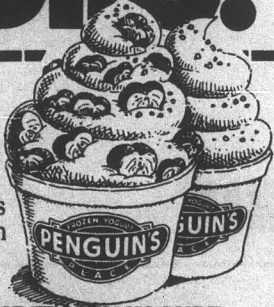

Mr. Farrar is survived by his wife, Patricia, and his three children, Brett, Shelley and Jaala.

Marmie says improvement key for Devils

Offensive balance needed as ASU begins road trip

By GARY JACKSON
 State Press

Improvement in performance is a necessary ingredient on the Sun Devil football team, Coach Larry Marmie said Monday at his weekly football luncheon.

"We are not getting the job done as a team," Marmie said. "I think we need to execute better. We've just got to go back and do things better than we're doing."

ASU travels to Palo Alto, Calif., to play Stanford in the first of a three-game road trip. The last time the Sun Devils played the Cardinal was in 1985, Marmie's first year as an ASU assistant coach.

"We feel like we've got to throw the football to win," Marmie said. "On the other side we have to run the ball to be successful. We have to have some balance."

But ASU was ineffective in both areas Saturday against Washington. ASU quarterback Daniel Ford had 10 completions in 27 attempts for 102 yards. The rushing attack only produced 68 yards.

Marmie said he would not point a finger at any individual that needs improvement because it is a flaw that runs throughout the team.

The quarterback has to be able to throw under pressure, the receivers have to catch the ball, and the running backs have to make things happen, he said.

Ford had two interceptions on the day. Not that the reasons are excusable, but Marmie said the first came on a tipped pass and the second, Ford got hit while attempting to throw the ball out of bounds.

Marmie said ASU's backup quarterback needs some playing time to gain experience, but he is not implying that Ford is not doing the job.

"We want to play Paul Justin," Marmie said. "I'm not trying to put anything between the lines."

The starting tailback has not been chosen for Saturday's

Turn to DEVILS, page 14.

Washington tight end Mark Kilpack prepares for a hit by ASU's Rodney Dillard during Saturday's 10-0 loss to the Huskies. ASU coach Larry Marmie said the Sun Devils' offense must improve and present a balanced attack when ASU plays Saturday at Stanford.

Young baseball players lead Devils to victory over Arizona

By DEAN GYORGY
 State Press

By all accounts, the "new kids" passed the test.

The ASU baseball team enters the 1988-89 season with an unusual mixture of seniors and freshmen. The veterans proved themselves last year with a second-place finish at the College World Series, and the new blood was flowing during the weekend.

The Sun Devils competed in the second annual Compadre Fall Tournament in Chandler, and won it again, going 2-0-1. ASU defeated Grand Canyon, tied Wyoming and beat the University of Arizona.

"The main thing we were looking at were the young guys," ASU coach Jim Brock said.

The lineup that Brock has settled on contains two freshman outfielders, a transfer catcher and an inexperienced sophomore shortstop.

Not to mention a slew of freshmen pitchers who should make a significant impact.

Two of those, Kip Yaughn and Sean Rees, faced Wyoming last Friday.

Yaughn started the game and struck out

15 batters in his five-inning stint. Rees followed with three shutout innings in the shortened eight-inning contest. The Sun Devil bats were relatively quiet, however, and the game ended in a 2-2 tie.

Saturday against Arizona, senior Brian Dodd pitched the first five of the eight-inning game, and left with a 5-2 lead. He was relieved by David Cassidy, who has been battling injuries and had not pitched in a while. Brock said Cassidy was not hit that hard, but took the brunt of an Arizona rally, as the Wildcats took a 6-5 lead.

It was at this point that perhaps the story of the weekend took place.

Cassidy left the game in the bottom of the seventh, with ASU down by a run, and Wildcat runners on first and third with one out.

Enter another newcomer, Dave Alexander. The right-hander from Harbor Junior College promptly picked the runner off first base and struck out the man at the plate, ending the threat.

The Devils scored four runs in the top of the eighth, and Alexander struck out the side in the bottom half to collect his first

ASU offense needs improvement in order to avoid losing record

Dave Hodges
 Sports Editor

It now is apparent that the ASU football team is in a rebuilding year, but it is not quite time for ASU fans to panic.

After the Sun Devil offense was shut out 10-0 Saturday by 16th-ranked Washington, it became obvious there will be no Rose Bowl for ASU this year.

Marmie's Army was ambushed by the Huskies, who entered the game as the Pac-10's worst defensive unit.

The Sun Devil defense, however, played well. The defense kept ASU in the game, but the offense could not put anything together.

The fans did their part, with the noise being as loud as past years at the Devil House, but ASU gave nothing for the fans to cheer for.

You know it's a long day when the biggest cheers were for a punt and a quarterback sack.

But that's the type of game it was.

If there was a game MVP, it would have to be punter Mike Schuh . . . again. Schuh punted nine times for an average of 44.3 yards. One punt was beautifully placed inside the 5-yard line, and one he aired 65 yards.

But that and a sack by Saute Sapolu inside the Washington 5-yard line was all that could be put on the highlight film.

What went wrong? Just about everything. Quarterback Daniel Ford did not have a good day. His first two complete passes were hauled in by the Huskies. On the day, Ford was 10-27 for 102 yards, with the two interceptions.

The boo birds chirped in the second half, and chants of "Justin, Justin, Justin," wafted through the student section. But the worst thing ASU coach Larry Marmie could do is put Paul Justin at quarterback. And I don't think he will.

Ford is looked up to as the leader and any change probably will rattle any confidence the team has. And the Sun Devils will need all the confidence they can get as they head into a three-game conference road trip, beginning Saturday at Stanford.

The running attack almost was non-existent Saturday (68 yards) and Marmie must decide on a unit that will work for the rest of the season. His present "musical chairs" system of rushers with David Winsley, Vic Cahoon, Bruce Perkins, Kelvin Fisher and Kirk Wendorf all seeing playing time, does not seem to be allowing one player to become a real dominant force.

The Devils have a lot of work to do before meeting the Cardinal Saturday. The Devils already are in a must-win situation, as two losses will virtually eliminate ASU from Rose Bowl contention (believe it or not, the Sun Devils are still a realistic contender).

ASU still has a legitimate chance of receiving a bowl bid if it can win three or four of the six remaining games. But the Devils will lose all six if the offense plays the way it did Saturday.

The Sun Devils have been under .500 only three times since 1948. The '53 Devils were 4-5-1, the '76 team was 4-7, and the '84 squad was 5-6.

It will take a much better effort to avoid another losing season.

The weather took its toll during Sunday's Cardinals game.

but more so on the crowd than the players.

Only 53,278 fans showed up to see the first-place team in the NFC East. There were 9,305 no-shows.

Why would almost 10,000 people buy overpriced Cardinals tickets and then not use them?

Well, the answer is quite simple. An estimated 70 percent of Cardinals season-ticket holders also own season tickets to Sun Devil games.

Most of the fans chose to go see the ASU/Washington game instead of the Cardinals because Pittsburgh entered the game with a 1-4 record, while Washington was ranked 19th in the nation.

It was so hot over the weekend that it would not be a wise choice to go to both games without getting sunstroke or a severe sunburn.

As many of you who went to Saturday's ASU game (you can tell who did because the left sides of their bodies are sunburned) can attest, it is very exhausting sitting (or standing) in the sun for two or three hours.

But that's the drawback of playing back-to-back day games in the Arizona sun.

The playing surface of Sun Devil Stadium also took a beating. Stadium groundskeepers worked all night Saturday to get the field ready for the Cardinals.

It looked pretty good at the beginning of the game, but by the end, the different sets of hash marks were equally torn up, you could read both "Sun Devils" and "Phoenix Cardinals" in the end zones, and the Cardinals logo in the middle of the field blended in with the "ASU."

But the groundskeepers have some time to get the field in good shape again. The Sun Devils are on a three-game road trip, and the Cardinals are playing Sunday at Washington.

LA's 'dream team' can wrap up berth in World Series today

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Lasorda's "dream team" needs one more victory to win the National League pennant but may have to do it without one of the dream weavers.

Rookie Tim Lincecum won his second game of the playoffs and Kirk Gibson hit his second homer in a little more than 12 hours as Los Angeles beat the New York Mets 7-4 in Game 5 Monday, moving the Dodgers to within one game of their first NL championship since 1981.

But Gibson, who singled in the ninth inning, reinjured his left hamstring on a steal attempt, and his status for Game 6 was uncertain.

"It's my dream team, my team of destiny," Lasorda, the Dodgers manager, said.

"We'll know more about Gibson tomorrow, they're giving him a shot.

"I hope he can play, he's just starting to hit the ball like he can again."

Gibson, who signed with the Dodgers last winter as a free agent, said he knew something was wrong right away.

"I felt a severe pain and I knew I had to come out," Gibson said. "I wish I had a crystal ball, but I guess I have to be optimistic.

"Right now, I don't think I could play, but the doctor said we wouldn't know until I get back to California. As much as I want to play, I might help the club more by sitting out."

The teams headed for Los Angeles, where the Dodgers can wrap up the best-of-seven series today when former Met Tim Lincecum opposes David Cone, the loser in Game 2.

"I think we're in great shape going back home with Leary and (Orel) Hershisier pitching," Belcher said.

During the regular season, the Mets won 10 of 11 games from the Dodgers and won 56 games at home, including their last 11 at Shea Stadium. But the Dodgers came into New York and won two of three to take a 3-2 series lead.

"I'm still very confident," Mets manager Davey Johnson said. "This team has come back all year long and now we have to again."

The Dodgers won Game 4 in 12 innings on Gibson's homer shortly before 1 a.m. EDT Monday. Less than 12 hours later, the two teams were back on the field for the fifth game with the series tied at two games apiece.

"Kirk has provided this team with leadership all year, and now he's showing what winning spirit is all about," Lasorda said.

The Mets and Dwight Gooden were three outs away from taking a 3-1 lead in the series when Mike Scioscia tied the score with a two-run homer in Game 4.

Johnson said the Mets were a little down coming to the park Monday, but not out.

"We have Cone tomorrow and Darling the next day," Johnson said. "I look for us to explode."

Gibson, who ended a 1-for-16 slump with his game-winning homer in Game 4, hit a three-run shot in the fifth inning of Game 5 to give the Dodgers a 6-0 lead.

"We were concerned about a letdown today," Gibson said. "Last night was a very emotional game because obviously it was very important for us to get back to Los Angeles. The game took a lot out of all of us and we wanted to make sure we didn't have a letdown. I don't know why we win."

In all five games the Dodgers have scored first, this time breaking through for three runs off loser Sid Fernandez in the fourth inning on 39-year-old Rick Dempsey's two-run double and an RBI double by Alfredo Griffin.

"It's very important to make the Mets play catch-up baseball," Dempsey said. "We've done it five games and we've been in it all five."

Dempsey said Gibson's injury may be serious. "Kirk isn't feeling too good," Dempsey said. "I think he pulled it worse than before."

Gibson struggled early in the series but found his stroke just in time.

"I didn't feel like I let the team down," Gibson said. "We believe in ourselves and it's a team effort. I was giving the best I had."

Gibson said hitting is sometimes like hunting and fishing, two of his favorite hobbies.

"Sometimes it takes 36 hours to catch that one fish," Gibson said. "And sometimes, it takes time to get that hit."

The Mets were favored to win the series but now must sweep the Dodgers in Los Angeles.

"I think we realize we are not the best team in baseball," Dempsey said. "We make mistakes, and we talk about them. We just keep coming, keep pushing hard to get it done."

Belcher, who won Game 2, set down nine straight before Len Dykstra led off with a walk in the fourth and Gregg Jefferies singled.

Belcher, who won nine of his last 11 decisions, allowed seven hits and struck out six as he became the first rookie to win two games in the playoffs since the format was adopted in 1969.

In Game 2, Belcher allowed five hits in 8 1/3 innings as the Dodgers beat the Mets 6-3.

Marshall led off the fourth with a single and, after a walk to John Shelby, Dempsey doubled down the left-field line on a high fastball.

Dempsey was signed as a non-roster player last spring by the Dodgers after hitting .177 for Cleveland in 1987. He missed the last half of 1987 after suffering a broken thumb in a collision at home plate with Kansas City's Bo Jackson.

As a catcher for Baltimore in 1983, Dempsey was the World Series MVP and is 20-for-61 in 21 postseason games.

Griffin, a .167 batter hitting right-handed, followed Dempsey's hit with a double to left-center field.

Steve Sax led off the fifth with a single and moved to third on Mickey Hatcher's hit-and-run single to right field. Gibson, who led the Dodgers with 25 home runs, then hit a drive into the right-field seats to chase Fernandez.

Fernandez, who won his last six games to finish 12-10, allowed seven hits and six runs in five-plus innings. During the season, he was 8-4 at home with a 1.83 earned-run average.

Fernandez was given a start in the playoffs because of an injury to Bob Ojeda, whose left middle finger was almost severed in a gardening accident 10 days before the end of the season.

The Mets got back in the game in the fifth when Howard Johnson led off with a single to snap an 0-for-14 streak in this series and 0-for-22 overall in postseason competition.

Wally Backman followed with an infield single and, one out later, Dykstra homered into the right-field bullpen.

New York chased Belcher in the eighth. Dykstra led off with a double and scored on Jefferies' single, his seventh hit in 19 at-bats in the series. Left-hander Ricky Horton relieved Belcher and struck out Keith Hernandez, then yielded a single to Darryl Strawberry and right-hander Brian Holton was called in to face Kevin McReynolds.

McReynolds hit a slow grounder to short and Jefferies was called out when the ball hit him as he ran to third. McReynolds was credited with a single, but the out cost the Mets a scoring opportunity. Gary Carter ended the inning by flying to left.

Spikers play Nevada-Reno tonight

By JOAN McKENNA

State Press

The ASU volleyball team's motto for the year has been "Don't overlook anyone."

The definitive test may be tonight as the Sun Devils play host to Nevada-Reno at 7:30 in the University Activity Center.

The Wolfpack finished fourth in last year's Big Sky conference, posting a 17-13 record overall, 10-6 in conference play.

But the team is 4-17 this season (through Sunday). "They're not having much success," ASU assistant coach Steve Schlick said, fishing for diplomatic words. "They're a pretty young team."

Young and inexperienced, that is. Nevada-Reno returns only one letter winner and no starters from 1987 . . . all of which is why the Sun Devils (11-4, 5-3) have the new motto.

Last year they had a tendency to play flatly against such apparent underdogs.

And no doubt the ASU players have other things on their minds as the Arizona Wildcats come to town for a 7:30 match Wednesday night — the same Wildcats who defeated 10th-ranked USC Friday in four games.

"(The Wolfpack matchup) is not something we went out of our way to schedule," Schlick said. "They were going to be in the area" for an NAU match Monday night in Flagstaff.

"I'm not sure if it's good or bad. It may take away from our preparation for UofA."

But the Sun Devils spent Monday's practice working on some of their offensive and defensive weak points against other Pac-10 rivals.

And the ASU coaches traditionally have held that so-called mismatches make good practices, not only as opportunities for trying out new things, but as chances for non-starters to see action.

The question is, will the Sun Devils convert their motto into quality match play against the Wolfpack to be primed for the real threat (UofA) when it comes?

Rugby club begins season with 53-6 rout

By CHRIS NACKINO

State Press

The ASU Rugby club earned its first conference win Saturday in a landslide victory against the Embry Riddle Aeronautical University, 53-6 at Prescott.

The Sun Devils scored 10 tries, 5 conversions and a drop kick by Bob Brockly for three points.

"It was a really good day for us," president Luis Castano said. "Each and every player had a chance to participate in the game and almost everyone scored."

Castano said the game was a good opportunity to show the strength of the new players on the team.

"The rookies did an excellent job — they all played with a lot of heart," Castano said.

When comparing this year's team to last year, several positive differences appear, he said.

"We have a lot of new players, and many of them come with experience gained in high school," Castano said. "Another big change in the team is our attitude. It has drastically improved, and we have more discipline."

The rugger will be preparing in the coming weeks for the Tucson Classic in November.

"I feel that we will do well this year — we have a very positive outlook and a lot of great players," Castano said.

Stallings says Cards ready to shake 'loser' label

PHOENIX (AP) — Phoenix Cardinals Coach Gene Stallings, his NFL team off to its best start since 1976, said Monday that the franchise may be ready to shed its image as a perennial loser.

Sunday's 31-14 win over Pittsburgh improved Phoenix's record to 4-2, and its winning streak to four straight — the longest since 1984.

The Cardinals, who haven't qualified for the playoffs since 1982, find themselves in the rarified air of first place in the NFC East.

"That's four weeks in a row we've enjoyed a good Monday and that's a good feeling. That's one of the advantages of winning. I want to be smiling when it's over, though," Stallings said. "We've won four. That's a long way from 10."

"Our goal is to make the playoffs this year. I've said all along that it's going to be tough, but it's a realistic goal. We have to play hard and keep the mistakes to a minimum, and that's what we're doing. It comes from confidence."

"We've won some games, but it doesn't get any easier now. It gets tougher every week. You want to be in the hunt at the halfway mark. At the end of eight games, if you're 2-6 or 1-7, you're out of the hunt. I want to be in the hunt, and we are in the hunt. But it's a long way before the season's over."

The Cardinals haven't had a winning season since they went 9-7 in 1984.

They were 4-11-1 and 7-8 in Stallings' first two years and lost their first two games this season before turning things around and beating Tampa Bay (30-24), Washington (30-21), the Los Angeles Rams (41-27) and now Pittsburgh.

"It's not a matter of a loser's mentality," Stallings said. "You have to win a few games before you lose the feeling of something bad's going to happen to you. I think that happened after we beat the Rams. But that could happen again in this week's game with Washington."

Phoenix faces the defending Super Bowl champion Redskins on Sunday afternoon in RFK Stadium, where the Cardinals haven't won since 1978.

"We've played them pretty close even though we haven't won many games there," Stallings said. "That's a good stadium and a good place to play a ballgame. They have rabid fans. They're 100 percent behind the Redskins. I don't mind going there at all."

"But every game is a crucial game for Washington (3-3) now. There is no such thing as playing Washington with them looking past you. They're a good football team. You don't win the world's championship without being good in all areas of the game."

Phoenix, with the NFL's second-best offense, held Pittsburgh to only 10 first downs Sunday and 66 yards total offense in the second half.

"We're playing awfully tough right now," said Stallings. "I like the effort. And we've got a lot more players contributing — more guys making plays — and that's a plus."

"We've improved a lot the past three games, especially in pass defense. Part of that may be because Washington and Pittsburgh didn't have their No. 1 quarterback. That helps."

"I think we're getting better. But we're going to be struggling every week. If we play up to our capabilities, we got a chance. If we don't, we don't."

first ASU win, 9-6.

Alexander possesses a wicked slider, and with a Devil pitching staff loaded with lefthanded starters, he could be a valuable commodity.

"We think he has a chance to be really important because of all the lefthanders," Brock said. "He was just overpowering . . . just ate 'em up. It wasn't even close."

"We were pleased with the way the weekend was pitched all the way."

The game-winning rally was ignited by freshman outfielder Mike Kelly, who hit a home run on his first collegiate pitch against Grand Canyon last Thursday.

Brock said Kelly reminds him of a freshman Barry Bonds — good outfield instincts. He is clearly the center fielder of the future, he said, but may not yet be ready to be dominant there.

The other freshman outfielder is Jim Austin, who played left field all weekend.

Brock is going to experiment this week with an outfield jumble. He will move right field senior stalwart Dan Rumsey to center, Austin to right, and Kelly to left. Rumsey has never

"It's a big switch," Brock said. "We're not sure it will work."

Rumsey is one of this year's captains, along with second baseman Kevin Higgins and pitcher Rusty Kilgo.

With the make-up of the team the way it is, Brock feels senior leadership is a must.

"If it's not there in a big way, a productive way, then we're in trouble," Brock said.

Any success the Devils are to have is "giantly tied into what the freshmen do," he said.

That leadership was evident against Arizona. If the freshmen were trying to decide what frame of mind they should be in, all they had to do was look at the seniors. Even though it was early fall, it was still UofA.

"The intensity that our seniors brought to that game was just outstanding," Brock said. "You could see practically no difference between that and the spring."

"It's awesome. I always like playing UofA," Rumsey said. "It kind of let the new people know what kind of rivalry it is. It's not as dramatic as it is in the spring, but at least they got a taste of what it's going to be like."

game, and Marmie said the decision probably will not be made until later this week.

"I thought we'd be able to rush the ball better than we have," Marmie said. "I've said that since the first game."

Sophomore Vic Cahoon started the first three games, but junior David Winsley has taken over for the last two.

"Our kicking game didn't help us any," Marmie said. "For the first time this year I think our kicking game was inadequate."

ASU missed three field goal attempts Saturday. While one kick did not clear the uprights, the first was blocked and the third was tipped.

However, Marmie said punter Mike Schuh had an outstanding day. Schuh booted a 65-yard kick, which is five yards short of his personal best. He also landed a punt on the 5-yard line against Washington.
