

Minority plan needs honing, officials say

By VICTOR BARAJAS
State Press

PHOENIX — ASU has again asked for more time to review its $1.1 million plan for minority recruitment and retention, which was rejected last month by an Arizona Board of Regents committee.

Richard Peck, ASU's provost, told the 29-member ad hoc committee on University Access and Retention Monday at the state capitol that the University needs until Nov. 14, the next scheduled meeting in Tucson, to complete its revised plan.

"ASU has taken most seriously questions and suggestions offered when we initially presented our tentative plans," Peck said. "Because we are working carefully to make the programs which will be targeted by these monies . . . we have not yet completed its revisions."

Peck instead presented a 10-minute progress report, emphasizing that the University will continue working with local groups, students, faculty and community leaders for more suggestions.

ASU officials first asked for additional time to assemble the plan during an Oct. 6 meeting.

Under House Bill 2108, the states' universities will receive $2.5 million to spend on developing new minority recruitment and retention programs and expanding existing programs. The committee was created to evaluate the universities'

Police fear record crime rate in Tempe to continue

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A record number of murders is haunting Tempe, and police fear violent crime may increase as the city's population climbs.

"More people, more crime," Tempe homicide detective Sgt. Mike Palmer said bluntly. "I'm concerned about the increase in violent crime."

Nearly 146,000 people live in Tempe, an increase of 13,000 people from two years ago.

Palmer, who has investigated homicides in Tempe for eight years, said the city's population is continuing to grow while it is land-locked by Mesa, Phoenix, Scottsdale, Guadalupe and Chandler.

As people are forced to live closer together because of diminishing space, more opportunities for flaring tempers will rise, Palmer said. But murder occurs less often than any other crime, he added.

The city's record of seven homicides was set in 1980 and was matched in 1986.

It was equalled this year on Saturday when Andre Lamont Gardner, 19, was accidentally shot to death at an apartment at 6610 S. Lakeshore Drive. The suspect is the victim's friend.

He was released pending a manslaughter charge that will be filed by the Maricopa County attorney's office.

The record was eclipsed the next day when 50-year-old John D'Angelo shot his daughter Amanda, 11, and her playmate Toni Marie Mohline, 10, at his home at 6410 S. Dorsey Lane.

D'Angelo, who apparently was despondent about marital problems, shot his daughter in the head twice and her friend once before he turned the gun on himself. He had been arrested last week for making harassing phone calls to his ex-wife.

Police are still investigating the killings and do not know if D'Angelo had planned them or if he made a spur-of-the-moment decision. They found a note inside the house but would not discuss what it said.

Palmer said most murders usually are not planned and occur during heated moments between people who know each other.

"Of the nine (homicides in Tempe this year), seven are related to family or friend in a dispute," Palmer said.

Only one 1988 homicide remains unsolved.

Omar Aquil, 18, of Los Angeles was found stabbed to death Sept. 30 inside an apartment at 949 S. McClintock Drive.

The five other people who were murdered in Tempe this year were:

•William Brown, 26. He was shot to death Feb. 26 inside a trailer home at 400 W. Baseline Road. Brown's live-in girlfriend, Karen Ann Davis, 29, was recently sentenced to six months in jail and four years probation for the killing.

•Debra Sue Tomazin, 24. She allegedly was injected with a shot of lidocaine March 27 and died a few days later at a Mesa hospital. The lidocaine was part of a free liposuction surgery performed by her friend, who was later arrested in connection with the incident.

•John Allen Colyott, 27. He was found dead of a gunshot wound April 11 inside an apartment at 821 S. Casitas Drive. Duct tape also was wrapped around his head. A suspect was arrested a few months later in connection with the incident.

•Ernest Griego, 44. He was shot Aug. 4 at an apartment at 2319 E. McArthur Drive and died at a Scottsdale hospital 12 days later. His roommate was arrested in connection with the shooting.

•Paul Eugene Powers, 25. He was killed in September during a fight at the La Quinta Motor Inn, 911 S. 48th St. A co-worker was arrested on manslaughter charges that were later dropped.

ASASU swallows pride, beer, wine to help police

ASASU Campus Affairs Vice President Vince Macone is administered a breathalyzer test by Tempe police officer Randy Fougner Monday in the MU.

By MICHELLE ALLMAN
State Press

Five Associated Students officials staggered drunk into the MU Monday and sucked on some helium-filled balloons.

Soon, police arrived. But instead of being arrested, the student officials were commended for setting an example.

"We're here to prove a point," Tempe police spokesman Roger Clay said. "We found out a long time ago the way to reach people is to show them, not tell them."

The students demonstrated how reactions are impaired under the influence of alcohol, and the police arrived to help kick off Alcohol Awareness Week with the officials.

About 200 people gathered to watch the ASASU officials laugh, giggle, suck on the helium balloons and run into walls and each other.

The five ASASU officials who participated were: Vince Micone, vice president for campus affairs; Matt Niemeyer, executive vice president; Todd Martensen, activities vice president; Shannon Sellers, regent coordinator; and Beth Vialle, concerts director.

They began drinking beer and wine at 9:30 a.m. in the Best Hall lounge. By the time the impairment demonstration began, each had consumed from four to nine drinks.

Tempe police officers tested the students' eye movements and conducted a breathalyzer test. Three of the five volunteers had a blood alcohol level of .10 or higher, which is legal intoxication in Arizona.

"Even in this controlled environment you can see their loss of motor skills," Clay said. "Just imagine putting them behind the wheel of a car."

Police can arrest anyone whose blood alcohol level is as low as .06, depending on the arresting officer's observations and evaluation.

Police arrest 200 protestors blocking Pentagon entrance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of demonstrators gathered before dawn Monday, blocking entrances to the Pentagon in a rowdy protest against American actions in El Salvador. More than 200 were arrested.

Police, including one officer who was attacked by protesters, arrested one group that sat in a road to block a military bus from entering the huge south parking lot at the Defense Department headquarters.

The protesters succeeded in keeping the huge south parking lot of the Pentagon mostly empty as police diverted traffic.

The demonstrators oppose U.S. aid to the Salvadoran government, which has been engaged in a war against leftist guerrillas since 1980. An estimated 60,000 people have died in that conflict.

Carrying candles and signs in the darkness, the protesters are reminiscent of those who rallied against the Vietnam War in the same place 20 years ago, although their numbers were far smaller.

Along with the candles, the demonstrators carried crude wooden crosses, each lettered with the name of someone who has died in Central America.

Trapped whales suffering as helicopter rushes to scene

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Three young whales trapped by ice were battered and bleeding and appeared to be weakening Monday, while a huge military helicopter prepared to tow an ice-breaking barge hundreds of miles in a last-ditch effort to free them.

Rescuers used chain saws to keep two small breathing holes open in the six-inch thick Arctic Ocean ice, but freezing temperatures threatened to close them. The whales became trapped nearly two weeks ago while migrating south to warmer waters.

The endangered California gray whales, about 24 to 30 feet long, were bleeding and battered from continually bashing into the jagged ice and were exhausted from swimming against the ocean current to remain in place.

Uganda Airlines jet crashes in fog while on landing approach

ROME (AP) — Uganda Airlines jet with 52 people aboard crashed, broke into pieces and burned early Monday while trying to land in heavy fog at Rome's main airport. Officials reported 30 people were killed.

All of the surviving 22 people on Flight 775 from London's Gatwick airport to Entebbe, Uganda, via Rome, apparently were injured, said Carlo Iovinella, director of the airport police.

The Boeing 707 tore through the side of a wooden house, clipped a garage, demolished an unoccupied brick house and then barreled through the parking lot of a rental car agency.

At that point, an engine and part of a wing fell off and the impact started a fire that destroyed about 75 cars.

The rest of the plane slid across a road, through a fence and knocked down trees before it broke into pieces and burst into flames about a half-mile south of the runway at Leonardo da Vinci airport, 15 miles southwest of Rome.

Roach terrorist's note says bug happy, safe, good pet

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

Almost two weeks after a fake, giant cockroach was abducted from its home at the Tempe Arts Center, there are signs that the big bug hasn't been squashed.

"We've heard from our roach terrorists," said Dawne Walczak, the museum's exhibition coordinator. "It hasn't been mutilated."

Walczak said a woman hand-delivered a letter to a museum employee shortly after the museum opened Sunday. Along with the note there were two photos.

The photos showed two small children with the 2½ foot arthropod, which was wearing a yellow ribbon. In one photo, a boy and girl were wearing what appeared to be Halloween costumes.

The note said the roach was happy and safe from "offensive art."

"Honeybee (that's what roach's captors call it) remains plump and nibbles sugar and spices and cakes," the letter said. "It 'beeps' a contented 'beep' after a fulfilling brunch or dinner."

The letter said the roach was "raggedly tired of being touted as a low life and makes a gracious and harmonious pet with us where it is better off."

It is signed: "Sincerely, The roachnappers."

The note was written with a thick black magic marker on a piece of white construction paper. It was turned over to Tempe police.

Walczak said the woman left before the museum employee realized what the note was about. The employee was able to get a description of the suspect and her car.

The suspect was described by Walczak as being in her mid-20s, with an olive complexion, a thin build and dark shoulder-length hair that was parted in the middle. She was seen wearing a black tank top and jeans.

Her car was described as a late-model metallic blue Honda Civic hatchback with Arizona license plates.

The roach was taken Oct. 4 from a $700 panorama exhibit called Something Big and Bad in the Kitchen. It is made of polyurethane foam and pipe cleaners and was created two years ago by Phoenix artist

Happy is the public unconforted by, offensive "art", so we took the roach with zero intentions of returning it.
we used gloves-not for fear of leaving incriminating evidence-for we are proud of our deed-we used gloves because we could not bear-to touch the horrible thing.
But it turns out HoneyBee (that's what we call it around here) has an amiable and enchanting personality once it comes to trust you.
HoneyBee remains plump, nibbling sugars and spices and cakes and beeps a contented sort of beep after a fulfilling brunch or dinner.
The poor creature is raggedly tired of being touted as lowlife and makes a gracious and harmonious pet here with us where it is bathed and never feels the need to "beep" through the cupboards in painted little feet like those no good maverick roaches we all know and loathe and who give HoneyBee's everywhere an odious name,
sincerely,
the roachnappers 3

Roach terrorists sent a note to Tempe Arts Center stating they have zero intentions of returning the roach they call Honeybee.

Paul Wilson, an ASU art graduate.

The roach and its home were being displayed during the Tempe Art Center's "Humor in Art" exhibition. Before it was abducted, the roach was ransacking a scaled-down kitchen in search of food.

The roachnapper left a bottle labeled "roach remover" in its place.

"At this point (the roachnapping) has gone a little far," Walczak said.

She said the museum will press charges if the critter's captors are caught.

Researchers discover AIDS does not live in sperm cells

Researchers have discovered that the AIDS virus does not live in sperm cells but instead in cells of the seminal fluid in which sperm are suspended. This discovery may mean that it will be possible for men infected with the AIDS virus to father children safely through a form of artificial insemination.

To do this, the sperm of the men would be separated from the rest of their seminal fluid and placed directly in the uterus of their sexual partner to impregnate her.

Proposition 106

Idea of 'official language' not racist... but final product is

Mike Ritter
Opinion Editor

They're dropping like flies. First, Walter Cronkite — veteran newsman and benefactor to ASU's own school of journalism — resigned last week from the advisory board of U.S. English.

On Monday, former White House aide Linda Chavez followed suit, stepping down as president of the Washington-based organization dedicated to limiting the use of foreign languages in government and promoting English proficiency. U.S. English is also the main financial backer of the controversial Arizona Proposition 106, a proposed constitutional amendment which would establish English as the official language of the state.

Their reasons for quitting?

Racism.

The exodus of reputable persons began after the revelation that co-founder and chairman of U.S. English, John Tanton, issued a memo decrying the dangers of an influx of non-white immigrants during a 1986 "immigration conference." The memo paints a cataclysmic picture of a nation rife with prolifically procreating ethnic groups over-running a woefully sparse white population. As Tanton crudely projects in his memo: "Those with their pants up are going to get caught by those with their pants down."

Chavez said that the memo struck her as "anti-Catholic" and "anti-Hispanic." News of the memo was compounded by further reports that other backers of U.S. English have been involved in generating racist literature and "eugenics research." She finally concluded that further affiliation with the group would be inconsistent with her views.

In his letter of resignation, Cronkite simply said the use of his name in the Proposition 106 campaign in Arizona had become embarrassing due to the allegations of racism.

And who can blame either one of them? After all, opponents of official language legislation have been screaming all along that such laws are inherently racist. The Tanton memo and the subsequent resignations appear to substantiate their claims.

"Her (Chavez's) resignation confirms what we have been saying," said Perry Baker, spokesman for opponents to the Arizona amendment. "It is hard for anyone to support John Tanton and Proposition 106 when the facts are known. One shadowy figure from Michigan is pushing his grisly vision upon the people of Arizona."

But interestingly, Chavez said she still supports the idea behind U.S. English. This exemplifies an interesting fact about many proponents of an "official language." It is possible to believe that every American should be proficient in the English language without being a racist.

Unfortunately, some very reputable citizens who share this belief have unwittingly cast their lots in with some... well... fascists. Upon realizing this, many of these same citizens are pulling out, leaving the honorable "idea" of English language proficiency in the hands of Tanton and similar nuts who are using the movement for their own racist agenda.

Richard Walsh is one of those retreating citizens. Walsh, a Phoenix member of U.S. English, stated Saturday that although he supports the idea, he may not vote for Proposition 106 this November because the amendment is lengthy and poorly worded, leaving an opening for abuse.

Indeed, Proposition 106, and similar legislation in other states, should be defeated because it is prohibitive in nature and wording — outlawing the use of foreign languages by the government except in all too restricted areas. What is needed is useful English legislation which would make it possible for all citizens to have access to English education, regardless of age or native tongue.

Walsh is right about Proposition 106.

Chavez is right about Tanton.

They're both right about the idea.

Talkin' 'bout my generation

Editor:

Arizona State Sun Devils... what a perfect mascot for the students of this school. The sun has obviously played a major part in the deterioration of the political mind of students here. Colleges and universities across the world are serious bastions of liberalism. Where is it at ASU? From what I've seen, I think it has gone down the old fascist toilet. I saw for the first time the face of ultra-right, close-mindedness fadism in the TV lounge of Manzanita during the presidential debate. Mind you, of course, we were freshmen, but freshmen with voting privileges. And yes, my fellow debate couch potatoes were offering enlightened pro-Bush tidbits such as, "Yea, Dukakis has a Jew for a wife," which was followed by low gutteral anti-Semitic remarks — to my bile-raising surprise, some of which came from Jews. This is my generation. A generation who thinks Washington, D.C., is in Washington state. A generation who thinks a marine named Ollie North is a hero. A generation who feels corruption is cool. A generation who will one day be the power class of this nation. When I think about our country and its future, I shudder at the thought that "the best is yet to come."

Comics page needs new strip

Editor:

We can't take it anymore! We have tried to be kind and give it a chance, but the comic strip "Melonhead" must be put out of its (and our) misery. This cartoon never ceases to amaze us as it constantly redefines the meaning of the words "how bad can it be?" It's constantly stupid, boring and unamusing style makes it a disgrace for "Melonhead" to appear on the same page as "Bloom County" and "Doonesberry."

We suppose that the State Press likes to give budding cartoonists an opportunity to be noticed, but please choose one who knows the definition of the word FUNNY. If you can't find one, then replace "Melonhead" with a nationally syndicated comic strip such as "Calvin and Hobbes," "Garfield," "Mother Goose and Grimm," etc. You could replace it with your own favorite comic strip. You could bring back "Ivory Towers." We don't care which option you choose! Whatever you pick can't be any worse than "Melonhead!"

We hope you will understand our plight and give humor a helping hand by replacing this cartoon.

Pledge

Original author closer to 'radical red' than 'true blue'

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

As a newborn Republican, I recently attended my first meeting at the local chapter of the Bush-Quayle, hot dogs, apple pie, motherhood and God society.

The meeting began with our chairman, my conservative friend Grump, asking everyone to rise and recite the Pledge of Allegiance.

I remained seated with my arms folded across my chest.

"Didn't you hear me?" Grump asked.

Loud and clear.

"Then why aren't you standing so we can begin?"

Because I am not, never have been and never will be a socialist.

"What are you talking about?" Grump said. "We are loyal Republicans, not socialists."

Then why do you want to recite words written by an avowed socialist, a man who urged the downfall of capitalism?

"You're insane!" Grump shouted.

No, I have done some research. So let me ask you this: Who wrote the Pledge of Allegiance?

His brow furrowing, Grump said: "George Washington?"

Wrong.

"Jefferson?"

Wrong again.

"Uh, Lincoln?"

Not even close. It was written in 1892 by a young man named Francis Bellamy who was a devout socialist and considered capitalism an evil system.

"I don't believe it," Grump said. "You are trying to spread liberal, pinko propaganda."

Wait, there is more. He was a member of an organization that wanted the federal government to nationalize our entire economy. How do you like that, McDonald's being run by bureaucrats?

"Lies!" Grump shouted, his eyes bulging.

And there's even more. This Bellamy was a preacher. And do you want to know what he used to preach?

"I'd rather not."

Ignorance is not bliss, so I'll enlighten you. One of his sermons was called "Jesus the Socialist."

"Careful," Grump said, "or you'll be struck by lightning."

But it's true. He considered Jesus a socialist. And when you think about it, Jesus wasn't all that fond of the fat cats of his day.

"In his original version, he wanted to use the words "fraternity" and "equality." But they were left out . . . In those days, a lot of people didn't believe in equality. Not like today, when maybe 50 percent believe in it."

"I refuse to believe that our sacred Pledge of Allegiance could have such unsavory roots."

Well, that's history for you. Full of surprises. And do you know how the socialist happened to write it?

"He must have reformed, mended his ways and become a decent Republican."

Not at all. See, there was this family magazine. And in those days, magazines didn't depend on advertising to make money. One of the things they did was peddle products, like today's mail order houses.

"Free enterprise. Good show."

Right. Anyway, this magazine came up with the idea of selling flags to schools. In those days, most schools didn't have flags. So when Bellamy was booted out of his church for his socialist ideas, the magazine hired him to write the pledge. They printed it in their magazine as a gimmick to help them sell their flags. And the flag business boomed. They sold thousands. And that's when the tradition started of having flags in classrooms and kids saying the pledge.

Grump shook his head. "The story doesn't hold up. Why would a no-good socialist write such patriotic prose? He had to have become a good Republican."

Not at all. He considered his pledge a statement of socialist values. In his original version, he wanted to use the words "fraternity" and "equality." But they were left out. Too radical. In those days, a lot of people didn't believe in equality. Not like today, when maybe 50 percent believe in it, unless they're worried about real estate values or who their daughters will marry.

"Don't be a smart aleck. And are you done with your vile story so we can get on with our meeting?"

Wait. There's one more interesting tidbit. The guy who came up with the idea of selling all those flags. I hate to break the news, but he was a liberal.

"Liar, scoundrel."

No, it's true. Even worse, he was from Boston. Just like that little liberal Greek.

"I refuse to listen anymore to this subversive nonsense."

OK, but I have to wonder why George Bush is going around telling everybody that they should recite a pledge written by an anti-capitalist socialist who was an employee of a liberal publisher. Seems mighty suspicious to me.

"Enough, I say. Now everyone rise and recite the pledge."

I got up and left. And at the first phone booth, I phoned in a tip to the FBI. My friend Grump, a socialist mouthpiece. Who would have believed it?

Victim's parents spread story about tragedy of drunk driving

By MICHELLE ALLMAN
State Press

It was four years ago that Joe Middleton's daughter was killed by a drunk driver. But to him, it seems like yesterday.

Middleton chooses to relive the tragedy every chance he gets so that he may save a life. He brought his story and the blue light pickup his daughter Sherri died in at the hands of a drunk driver to the MU Monday as part of Alcohol Awareness Week.

"Murder by drunk driving is the only socially acceptable form of murder in the U.S. today," Middleton said. "We can't just watch as our nation's young people are killed off this way."

The drunk driver who killed Sherri Middleton never spent a day in jail or paid a cent in fines. But Middleton said that he feels no animosity toward the man, whom he declined to identify.

"I don't hate him," Middleton said. "But I sure hate the sin that caused this and the 'justice system' that let him off scott-free."

Sherri Middleton's mother, Sula, said working to help people learn from the tragedy, rather than hating the drunk driver, is the best way to overcome the grief.

"I feel nothing toward him," she said. "That's good. Otherwise, it would eat me away inside."

Sherri, who was 20, was returning home with friends from her part-time job at Burger King in Phoenix on Dec. 2, 1984. A 28-year-old drunk driver, who had two small children with him, crossed over five lanes of traffic at about 80 mph before careening into Sherri's pickup. His blood alcohol level was .28, almost three times the legal limit.

Sherri, her fiance and another co-worker were killed. A third passenger was crippled for life.

"The sirens woke us up," Joe Middleton said. "The accident was only about a half mile from our house."

"When we found that she wasn't home yet, we went to the scene. I guess by that time we already knew. When we got there, a helicopter was lifting off the ground with the last victim."

Sherri was their only daughter. "She was my pride and joy," Sula Middleton said. "She was my life."

After Sherri's death, the Middletons took to the road with a message: "When you mix good people with alcohol and a car, you get killers."

"We go to schools, parades and churches," Joe Middleton said. "We'll go anywhere we can get our foot in the door. The reality of drinking and driving is not a good time — it's death."

Although he gets frustrated when the fruits of his work bud slowly, Middleton said he is encouraged when his message affects someone. The memory of his daughter keeps him going.

"I've tried to imagine what went through their minds (just before the accident)," he said. "Here were these kids, so happy and carefree, and in one second there was nothing. Absolute, complete silence. Forever."

participated in the demonstration said they would probably feel safe driving a car after drinking four or five beers. Clay said that attitude is common and dangerous among college students.

"Some people think the most dangerous drunk is the one who's falling down all over the place," Clay said. "Actually, the most dangerous person is the one whose BA is .10 or .12 because they think they're in command when they're really not."

Tempe police officer Randy Fougner, who assisted Clay during the demonstration, said Tempe police arrest about 30 to 40 people for drunk driving on an average weekend. Many of them are college students, he added.

"We can tell who they are," Fougner said. "They are the ones who are weaving, riding their brake lights, making wide turns, stopping at green lights, driving without their headlights — any number of things."

Fougner said when he stops someone he believes is drunk, he is right "about 85 percent of the time."

In Arizona, a person arrested on a drunk driving offense for the first time usually is penalized $250 plus court costs, one day in jail and a 90-day suspension of driving privileges.

"It's not worth it," Clay told the audience. "If you're in a situation where you question your ability to function, call a friend to take you home. That's what friends are for."

Advertising Sales Reps . . .

The State Press is looking for several new advertising sales reps to begin training now to work next semester. The rewards are many . . . you'll gain valuable experience in sales, layout, design, production and communications. This job is not for everyone, however. It's highly demanding and requires every spare moment of your time . . . 25 to 35 hours per week. And you must be an advertising or marketing major with an incredibly strong desire to learn about advertising and the insight to understand the benefits of this pre-professional opportunity. If you have a demanding class schedule or lots of extra-curriculars, this job's not for you.

BUT . . . if you have a sense of pride in doing a good job; are creatively inclined; feel you can handle 30-40 local accounts, as well as your classes and a not too wild social life; don't need anyone to get you going every morning and above all, operate well under the pressure of a daily deadline . . . Tempe teen confesses to accidental shooting death of friend

State Press

An 18-year-old Tempe man has confessed to police that he accidentally shot his friend to death while they were playing with guns, police said.

Tarron Holmes turned himself in to police Sunday and was released pending the filing of manslaughter charges by the Maricopa County attorney's office.

Police said Holmes allegedly shot Andre Lamont Gardner, 19, in the head with a .357 Magnum about 10:00 a.m. Saturday at 6610 S. Lakeshore Drive, Apt. A.

Gardner was taken to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital where he died about 2½ hours later.

Holmes originally told investigators that Gardner was holding a .357 Magnum in one hand and a shotgun in the other when the handgun went off, Tempe police spokesman Roger Clay said.

police report

Clay said Holmes told police that he was scared and didn't tell police earlier about the incident.

Police reported these other incidents:

- About 250 gallons of gasoline accidentally spilled from a truck that was loading gasoline Sunday night at a Tempe convenience store, police said.

Police said the gasoline seeped into the ground and possibly into the city's water table after the 10:59 p.m. incident at the Circle K store at 6356 S. Price Road.

Chemists and city field service workers are testing the area.

- A Tempe police car was destroyed early Sunday after a car accidentally skidded into it, ramming the police car into a light pole, police said. No one was injured.

Police said officer Vince Boerbon was standing near his car at about 1:29 a.m. at Baseline and Rural roads after he responded to a shooting at Earnhardt Dodge that later turned out to be a hoax.

A person driving a Corvette west on Baseline Road hit an oil spill, lost control and hit the police car. Both cars were a total loss, police said.

- Two ASU students detained a juvenile Sunday after they reportedly saw him take an unattended purse from a room in the Business Administration Building, police said.

The victim did not want to prosecute and the juvenile was warned about trespassing and released to his father.

- A student was seen checking out car doors early Monday in Lot 53, police said. The student told police he was getting coupons off car windshields.

Greek Review Board determines fraternities' fates tonight

The Greek Review Board will meet at 7 p.m. tonight in the MU Gila Room to determine the fates of two ASU fraternities that were involved in alleged hazing incidents two weeks ago.

The GRB, a judicial committee, will hear from members of Delta Tau Delta, 406 Adelphi Drive, and Sigma Phi Epsilon, 615 Alpha Drive about their actions.

The fraternities could face probation, suspension of social privileges, a fine or be required to perform community service.

About 15 Delta Tau Delta members allegedly grabbed a pledge, handcuffed him and forced him into the back of a Blazer parked in front of Stabler's Market in Tempe Center.

ASU and Tempe police responded to 911 emergency calls about a kidnapping and seven police cars were dispatched to the shopping center.

Members from Sigma Phi Epsilon allegedly abducted a fraternity member from behind the Physical Education East Building and carried the man into a truck. Witnesses called police.

No one was injured in the unrelated incidents. The fraternities have said the incidents were pranks.

Fraternity members' GPAs rise above other male undergrads

By TERESA OWEN
State Press

The grade point averages of undergraduate men at ASU have declined in the last year while those of fraternity members on campus have improved, according to University statistics.

The average GPA for undergraduate men decreased from 2.60 for fall 1987 to 2.52 for spring 1988, said Billie Bogart, a research assistant for Institutional Analysis at ASU.

In the same period, the average GPA for fraternity members increased from 2.34 to 2.54, said Greek life coordinator Vicki Hersh.

But Hersh said one reason fraternity member GPAs increased in the spring was that they were calculated incorrectly during the fall 1987 semester.

Kelly Farland, Interfraternity Council scholarship chairman and a member of Sigma Nu, said the number of hours each fraternity member was taking during the fall 1987 semester was omitted when the GPAs for each house and the overall GPA for fraternities were calculated. For example, some members were taking only six credit hours while other members were taking 12 credit hours, and this was not considered, he said.

Mary Neary, assistant registrar, said the registrar's office calculates GPAs for individuals, and each house must have used an incorrect formula to figure its own house GPA.

"You would have to take into consideration each student's course load," Neary said. "(Otherwise), they would come up with a discrepancy."

Hersh said the houses discovered the error when they were calculating their houses' GPAs last spring.

Hersh said the increased GPA for fraternities also could be attributed to other factors.

Although each house operates differently, many houses enforce mandatory study hours, she said. Houses also encourage fraternity members to get a tutor if they are doing poorly in a class, and many houses may revoke an individual's fraternity membership if he has poor grades for several semesters.

Fraternity members also could have been studying more in the spring semester, Hersh said.

"I think it could have been that," she said. "I am hoping it will be that way again. That is their mission."

Farland said that "most people do better in the spring."

But while Farland said fraternity members strive for good grades, that is not their main goal. "We're just students," he said. "We're not trying to be superstars."

programs and recommend changes or methods of implementation.

The committee unanimously approved $679,400 for UofA's minority plan, adding to the $289,900 approved last month. NAU received an additional $386,300 for its plan, which was allocated $171,701 last month.

Committee member Sen. Pete Rios, D-Hayden, who has openly criticized ASU's efforts to recruit and retain minorities, said he was not disappointed by ASU's delay.

"I would rather ASU present a worthy plan that they can sell instead of a plan that would have a lot of holes," Rios said.

ASU's original plan was rejected by the committee because members said it did not contain specific numbers on how many minorities would be helped.

Peck assured committee members that the delay would not harm current minority programs, nor would it affect Project Prime, a recruitment program that involves the combined efforts of the three universities.

"The center of our plan remains Project Prime," Peck said. Since there was concern that ASU would miss the recruiting season due to the delay, the University has added two admission counselors, he added.

Just-in time Justin replaces Ford as starting quarterback

Paul Justin, shown in here in action against Washington State last year, will replace Daniel Ford as starting quarterback in Saturday's game against the Cougars, ASU head coach Larry Marmie said Monday.

By DAVE HODGES and CHRIS NACKINO
State Press

ASU head coach Larry Marmie announced Monday that Paul Justin will start at quarterback during Saturday's game at Washington State.

Justin replaces Daniel Ford, who threw four interceptions during Saturday's 24-3 loss at Stanford.

"I think Dan's performance through the past six games were adequate, if not better," Marmie said. "But Paul, when he got the opportunity, did some good things."

"I guess the best explanation to give at this time, is that it is the best thing for our football team. Hopefully the change will provide some kind of spark."

The Sun Devil offense has been sputtering during the last two games, as ASU has scored only three points — the first time since 1946 that the Devils have gone two games without scoring a touchdown.

Ford, who was 8-21 for 96 yards against the Cardinal, asked to be excused from Monday's practice after hearing the news and would not comment on the switch.

"He just needs time to think about things and collect his thoughts," Marmie said. "Daniel's quite a competitor. I think he was hurt and upset, but he took it like a man."

But Justin, making his first start since a disastrous outing at Washington last year — when an interception was returned for a touchdown on the second play from scrimmage, said he is excited to be starting.

"I'm excited and shocked," Justin said. "I thought it might happen but I didn't know. I just wanted to hear it from their mouths."

Marmie said he doesn't expect Justin to feel any added pressure during Saturday's game.

"It's like any other job. A guy just has to perform," Marmie said. "I don't see his (Justin's) performance any different from the rest of the other players on the team."

Justin, who was 14-25 for 152 yards and one interception against Stanford, said he has matured since last season's Washington game.

"Last year I put a lot of pressure on myself," Justin said. "This year I don't do that. I'm further ahead from last year. I didn't know the offense as well and I wasn't as comfortable."

"I'm sure he's matured as a football player and I think he'll handle that job well," Marmie said.

Marmie said the decision to start Justin was a tough one.

"All decisions are hard," he said. "You have a feeling for your players. It's not easy to tell a guy you have to make a change — especially someone who works hard and gives effort."

Marmie says ASU's performance 'inadequate'; Perkins to start

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

Coach Larry Marmie began his weekly luncheon speaking about the inadequacy of the ASU football team, the same topic he has addressed the previous two weeks.

"Certainly last week against Stanford, I think we had a number of things that contributed to the loss," Marmie said. "I guess we could start with our offense, which for the second week in a row has failed to score a touchdown."

Marmie said turnovers were a major factor in the loss, with ASU (3-3 overall, 0-2 in the Pac-10) throwing the ball into the hands of Stanford defenders on five occasions. But quarterback Daniel Ford was hit while throwing the ball on two of his four interceptions, he said.

"When you turn the ball over that many times, certainly you're going to have a difficult time winning the ball game," Marmie said. "Also, the fact that we didn't rush the ball with any great degree of consistency, which again, has kind of been our problem all year long, really."

Marmie said the offensive linemen did not block well enough, and at times when they did provide some openings, the running backs did not take advantage of the opportunity.

"We're going to start Bruce Perkins this week," Marmie said. "I think by doing that we will have made the roundtrip."

The battle for starting tailback has continued between Perkins, Vic Cahoon and David Winsley since the season began. Cahoon was listed as the No. 1 tailback for the first three weeks, but Winsley earned that role for the last three.

"We haven't gotten out of our tailbacks what we need to get, what we want to get or what we thought we could get," Marmie said. "But am I disappointed? No."

With Perkins knowing he will start against Washington State, Marmie said he hopes he will respond by performing to his potential.

Marmie said Perkins also has the ability to catch the ball effectively, even though it was not a major part of his running back duties last season at Butler County Community College in El Dorado, Kan.

The injury-ridden receiver corps suffered another setback Saturday, when split end Leland Adams strained the quadriceps muscle in his left leg.

Marmie said he may have to play freshman Eric Guliford and walk-on Jim Breeze, who has been hampered by shin splints in recent weeks. Marmie said he had hoped to redshirt Guliford, a split end, and Andy Ingram, a freshman tight end, but would use them if absolutely necessary.

"Offensively, it was just a day when we didn't get any production — we didn't get anything accomplished," he said. "Defensively, I thought there were times where we played very well in certain series, but again our biggest problem was too many long drives."

Marmie said Cardinal drives of about 10 plays should not have lasted so long, and Stanford gained first downs on third-and-long situations where the defense should be at an advantage.

"Overall, we didn't truly get the job done on either side of the ball in what you would refer to as a winning performance," Marmie said.

The kicking game produced mediocre results, he said. Alan Zendejas kicked a 49-yard field goal, which Marmie said was encouraging after last week's performance, but missed on a 35-yard attempt.

Women's golf team places 2nd at Tulsa tournament; men falter

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

The men's and women's golf teams returned from the Tour Tulsa Invitational Tournament with mixed results.

One of the toughest fields of the year was a good early season test. The women scored an A- with a second-place finish, the men a D+ with a tie for sixth.

"It was probably one of our worst outings as a team since I became coach," men's coach Steve Loy said. He has been at the helm since Jan. 1, 1987.

"We just got behind and played poorly and didn't fight back like we should have," Loy said.

They shared sixth place with Arizona with a three-day total of 909, 23 strokes behind champion Oklahoma State.

The bright spot was the individual play of freshman Phil Mickelson, who shot rounds of 75-71-71 to finish in third place, three strokes back. It was his second top-10 finish in three tournaments this year.

"It was not a surprise," Loy said. "He's a super player with unbelievable talent, and he'll do it again and again."

Mickelson is a three-time National Juniors champion who said he feels the experience gained and the relationships started in those ranks have helped his adjustment to major college golf.

"I knew most of the top players," Mickelson said, "so it wasn't as intimidating as it would be to a freshman who didn't know them. I felt more comfortable."

He said the second round at Tulsa was his best in a long time. In past weeks he has been collecting new experiences as a collegian, and finally was able to play his own game without distractions. He said he "showed signs of playing good," but added there is room for improvement.

'Fortunately we've got a month (before the next tournament) to get better, and we're going to take advantage of the time to get back on track.'

— Steve Loy

His teammates were nowhere to be found, however, as the second-highest Sun Devil finished in a tie for 32nd place. Loy said his team was not playing as one, but he is not overly concerned.

"Fortunately we've got a month (before the next tournament) to get better and we're going to take advantage of the time to get back on track."

Women's coach Linda Vollstedt fulfilled her prophecy of a top-three finish with a second-place 925, nine shots behind Tulsa.

Standouts included senior all-world Pearl Sinn, who finished just two strokes behind the champion in second place, Lynne Mikulas and Missy Farr who finished 10th and 11th, respectively.

Vollstedt said 50-mph winds the first two days made play more difficult. The Sun Devils had a tough time the first day but adjusted better on the second and shot the low round.

"We're not used to playing in wind like that, so it did take a little bit of adjusting," Vollstedt said.

Vollstedt said the team's "sharing of ideas" as to how to play the wind was helpful.

The women play again Oct. 28 to 30 at Stanford, and Vollstedt said she is happy with the team's progress to this point.

"It was nice to finish second in such a tough field," Vollstedt said. "Seven of the top 10 teams were there, so we're right on target."

Cross country team runs well at ASU Invitational

By GARY JACKSON
 State Press

A successful performance for the Sun Devil cross country team in Saturday's Arizona State Invitational will hopefully be a positive influence in preparation for the Pac-10 Conference Championship, Coach Ken Lehman said.

The women's team captured first-place honors, and the men took second, highlighted by sophomore Todd Lewis earning his first collegiate victory.

ASU senior Teresa Barrios, who took second for the women, was closely followed by freshman Kelly Cordell, juniors Amy Komitzky and Monica Marquez, who finished third, fourth and fifth, respectively. Trish Huffmaster contributed with a ninth-place finish in the nine-team field.

Lewis beat Cal State-Long Beach runner Dave Schumacher by 10 seconds. At the three-mile point in the 4.4-mile race, Lewis took a 15-yard lead and ran away with the victory.

"Everything came together at once," Lewis said. "It was pretty even. We were side by side for the first three miles -- then I made my move."

Junior Mike Frick finished eighth and freshman Troy McKay took 10th for the men. Senior Dave Spargo added to the score with a 15th-place run and was followed by junior Paul Bourdreaux, who took 16th in his first race as a Sun Devil.

Although Saturday's meet was scheduled to take place at the South Mountain Golf Club, ASU was informed at 8 a.m. that it would have to find a new location. Because of the rain Friday, Lehman said the club was worried the sod would be torn up by the runners.

An alternate course was set up at South Mountain Park, where the Sun Devils frequently practice.

ASU will compete against a high caliber of Pac-10 teams during the Oct. 31 conference meet at Stanford. In previous years, ASU has finished among the top-five in the conference, and Lehman said he hopes to do the same this season.

Welch, Tudor to try to dispel postseason blues

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Bob Welch and John Tudor are big winners with a lot of experience in big games. Nobody would know it by looking at the results.

Welch and Tudor, the starters for Tuesday night's Game 3 of the World Series, have been among baseball's most successful pitchers in regular seasons but flops in the postseason.

"I don't think that really plays a role," Tudor said Friday of past problems. "There are a lot of big games throughout the season, and I've done well in them."

"Sure, it crosses your mind," Welch said of his failings. "But it's something I can't dwell on."

The Oakland Athletics need Welch to reverse the pattern Tuesday night against his former team. Oakland trails the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-0 in the series and no team has ever rallied from a 3-0 deficit.

"I'm sure it will be a tense situation," Welch said. "That's a simple fact."

Welch's greatest moment in the postseason provided the picture most fans know him by. It was the 1978 World Series, when the 21-year-old rookie reliever blew a fastball past Reggie Jackson for the final out to save a one-run lead.

But Jackson homered off Welch later in the Series and it has been downhill — quickly — since then.

Welch is 0-1 with a 10.39 earned-run average in four World Series games and 1-2 in seven playoff outings, giving up 13 runs in 11 2/3 innings. He's much wilder than usual, too, walking 11 in 17 postseason innings.

This year, his first in the American League after 10 seasons with the Dodgers, Welch won a career-high 17 games. Yet in Game 3 of the playoffs against Boston, he did not survive the second inning and allowed five runs on six hits.

"Bobby can't change anything in the past. The only thing he can control is now," Oakland pitching coach Dave Duncan said.

Welch won 117 games for Los Angeles before being traded during the winter meetings. He got a lot of attention with the Athletics, even though the hyperactive Welch tried to avoid all the commotion.

"When he's out on the mound, he's going in a million different directions," said his former catcher, Mike Scioscia of the Dodgers. "Bobby's problem has definitely been one of keeping him under control out there. I think it's probably still the case."

Scioscia now works with Tudor, who has won 105 games but hasn't been able to win the big one.

Tudor's latest postseason trouble came in the playoffs against the New York Mets, when he was tagged for four runs and eight hits in five innings.

He was shelled in Game 7 of the 1985 World Series as St. Louis lost to Kansas City 11-0. Last year, he failed to hold a three-run lead in Game 6 of the World Series as the Cardinals lost to Minnesota.

Tudor is 3-2 with a 4.03 ERA — about three-quarters of a run higher than his career average — in the World Series. He is 2-2 in the playoffs.

Elbow and hip problems have limited Tudor's appearances lately.

"That does put some doubt in my mind," he admitted. "But I'm not hurt right now. I'm ready."

Pressure shifts from Dodgers to Oakland

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — After playing all season without facing a "must" game, suddenly the Oakland Athletics must win four out of five games against the Los Angeles Dodgers in the World Series.

Pressure game No. 1 comes Tuesday night, six months after the A's got a running start and breezed to the American League pennant.

Manager Tony La Russa employed reverse psychology on his hitters Monday in hopes of breaking a 16-inning scoring drought. But even with an unplanned day off before Game 3, the A's had some sobering memories to ponder from their lost weekend in Los Angeles, where they dropped the first two games of the best-of-seven series.

La Russa made sure of that after Sunday night's 6-0 loss to the Dodgers. A trained lawyer, he made a brief discourse to the team that was not suitable for use in any courtroom.

"What he said wasn't printable," said Dave Parker, who had the only three hits off the Dodgers' Orel Hershiser in Game 2. "Let's just say he wasn't happy."

About a third of the team showed up Monday and worked out in shorts and T-shirts in the 90-degree heat at the Oakland Coliseum. Dave Henderson said the players weren't worried about the sudden lack of hitting.

"We just lost two games, that's all, and tomorrow night we can win a game," he said.

The disappearance of their bashers wasn't the only cause of the A's problems in Dodger Stadium. They were outplayed in virtually all facets of the game.

Oakland, second in the majors with 156 home runs, was outscored 3-1 by the team that finished 22nd of 26 teams in that category. The A's were outscored 11-4 and outthit 17-10. They stranded 12 runners to the Dodgers' 10.

"We're making too many mistakes," La Russa said. "It's either don't make them or start getting away with them."

Stallings says letdown contributed to Cardinals' loss to Washington

PHOENIX (AP) — Phoenix coach Gene Stallings said Monday that his Cardinals might have been due for a letdown and the end result was Sunday's 33-17 NFL loss to Washington.

The defeat snapped Phoenix's four-game winning streak and left the Cardinals in a three-way tie for first place in the NFC East with the Redskins and New York Giants — all with 4-3 records.

"We're still tied for first place. We played six pretty good games. This wasn't one of them," Stallings said. "For whatever reason, we just didn't play well. There isn't any such thing as not being ready to play."

"We had a good week of practice. I thought we were in good position. The bottom line is we didn't make the plays in this game. When that happens, our chances of winning are slim."

Stallings said his club hurt itself with turnovers and mental mistakes.

Al Del Greco missed two 47-yard field goals, Neil Lomax threw two interceptions and was sacked five times including one for a safety and the Cardinal secondary was burned for four touchdown passes.

"We said going into the game that we had to eliminate the big plays, and we didn't do that," Stallings said. "We'd give up a 40-yard gainer, a 45-yard gainer, a 60-yard gainer. That's what we were doing in preseason. It cost us touchdowns."

Stallings said cornerbacks Cedric Mack and Carl Carter "were out of position" on a couple of the touchdowns.

"They just got to play better. We just got to get them to play better," Stallings said. "We played good pass defense the last three ballgames and won all three games."

"This game was very reachable. It was 16-10 at one time. Then we threw an interception and Washington scored again right before halftime. . . . It wasn't a good game for us."

"We had a little bit of an out. We knew we could lose one and still be in first place. The Redskins didn't have an out. They knew they had to win."

The loss made some fans recall Cardinal defeats of the past and had many wondering if the club's four-game winning streak was a fluke.

"Everybody's entitled to their opinion," Stallings said. "The last four weeks were enjoyable weeks because we won. People say good things when you're winning. We had a great opportunity to do something for ourselves Sunday and we didn't do it. We have to live with it until we do something about it."

"Some of the players might think this wasn't meant to be our week. I don't want them to think that. I think every week is our week."

This Sunday, the Cleveland Browns went to Tempe and Stallings is hoping for a win to end the season's first half with a 5-3 record.

"That would be a pretty good first half. I still think we got a good chance to get to the playoffs. That's what we started out to do in training camp," he said. "We were in a position to help ourselves last week and we didn't take advantage of it. We have to this week."

"But I've said all along that it's going to be a struggle every week. There are no easy games on our schedule. Every game is going to be a tough game."

UCLA No. 1 for 1st time in 21 years

By The Associated Press

The UCLA Bruins are the No. 1 team in college football for the first time in 21 years, followed by Notre Dame, Southern California and defending national champion Miami.

Notre Dame's 31-30 victory over Miami knocked the Hurricanes from the top spot after a six-week stay. The Fighting Irish, meanwhile, moved up from fourth place last week to their highest ranking since they were No. 1 on Sept. 14, 1981.

UCLA, 6-0 after a 38-21 victory over California, received 33 of 60 first-place votes and 1,169 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. The Bruins had been ranked No. 2 for five weeks.

The last time UCLA was No. 1 was on Nov. 13, 1967, when the Bruins had a 7-0-1 record. But UCLA lost its next two games and finished 7-2-1.

"I actually feel it's too early to determine who the best team in the country is," UCLA coach Terry Donahue said Monday. "We're just over 50 percent done with our schedule, and how do you judge anything on 50 percent?"

"It just doesn't make sense, but it'll all come out in the end. It's not time for Christmas yet."

The Bruins play Saturday at Arizona in a nationally-televised game.

Notre Dame, also 6-0, received 22 first-place votes and 1,142 points. The remaining five first-place ballots went to Southern Cal.

Donahue happy with No. 1 ranking

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA coach Terry Donahue was happy Monday, but not ecstatic, about the Bruins first No. 1 national ranking in more than two decades — because of what it will take to preserve their poll prominence.

UCLA vaulted over Miami to earn the top spot after Notre Dame's 31-30 upset win over the Hurricanes Saturday. The previously second-ranked Bruins remained unbeaten in six games this season with a 38-21 pasting of California.

But Donahue, in his weekly meeting with reporters, said it's far too early to relax and enjoy the moment.

"It's unfortunate that the season isn't ending today and I could go on vacation," he quipped.

"I'm proud of it, but football brings the realities of life back real quickly. In a few days, we'll be playing Arizona, so you don't get too excited."

"If this was after a bowl game, I might get up on this table and do the dance I do for our players after a win, (but its not), so I'm safe."

6-0, which defeated Washington 28-27 and received 1,091 points in holding onto third place.

The rankings are bound to change later in the season, since UCLA meets Southern Cal on Nov. 19 and USC plays Notre Dame the following week.

Miami, 4-1, received 1,001 points in dropping from first to fourth.

Nebraska jumped from seventh to fifth with 879 points following a 63-42 triumph over 10th-ranked Oklahoma State. West Virginia remained sixth with 974 points after an open date and Florida State slipped from fifth to seventh with 872 points despite a 45-21 victory over East Carolina.

Oklahoma's 70-24 rout of Kansas State pushed the Sooners from ninth to eighth with 777 points while South Carolina fell from eighth to 18th by losing to Georgia Tech 34-0.

Clemson, No. 11 a week ago, moved up to ninth with 700 points by defeating previously unbeaten Duke 49-17. Auburn rounded out the Top 10, climbing from 12th to 10th with 656 points after a 42-0 trouncing of Akron.

The Second 10 consists of Georgia, Wyoming, Arkansas, Indiana, Oklahoma State, LSU, Washington, South Carolina, Syracuse and Michigan.

Last week, it was Clemson, Auburn, Georgia, Wyoming, Michigan, Washington, Arkansas, Indiana, LSU and Florida.

Florida dropped out by losing its second straight game, 24-9 to Vanderbilt. Syracuse, which finished No. 4 last year, moved into the rankings for the first time this season.

The Bruins moved into the top spot for the first time since November of 1967, when their reign atop the collegiate rankings was brief.

Cross-town rival Southern Cal defeated the Bruins 21-20 the same week, en route to a national championship.

So Donahue isn't overly soothed by capturing the No. 1 ranking.

"I'm worrying about it one way or another," Donahue said. "We have the meat of our schedule coming up. The proof is in the pudding. We control our own destiny."

And the possibility the Bruins could be without four starters for Saturday's Pac-10 Conference game at Arizona Stadium helped temper Donahue's emotions.

Tight ends Corwin Anthony and Charles Arbuckle were listed as questionable with a sprained ankle and sprained knee ligaments, respectively. Receiver Reggie Moore, suffering from a separated shoulder, linebacker Carnell Lake and offensive guard Rick Meyer, each nursing a sprained ankle, could "go either way," Donahue said.
