

Virus infects ASU Macintosh computers

By JOIE ANN LaPOLLA
Contributing Writer

A computer virus has infected Macintosh computers at ASU, and some University officials are worried that the now-harmless virus may become deadly.

"It seems to be an infectious irritation rather than a deadly virus," said Chris MacCrate, manager of ASU's Microcomputer Resource Facility, also known as MiRF. "It may be benign now, but we can't be sure it will stay that way."

The virus, named nVIR, was first identified at the MiRF lab about two weeks ago, MacCrate said. The virus, the only one to strike ASU thus far, makes the computers beep three times when the operator opens a file. If the computer uses the Macintosh system, the virus makes the machine say, "Don't panic."

The appearance of the nVIR virus is an indication computer viruses can occur at ASU, MacCrate said. "There is always a potential that a dangerous virus could get in."

"This is all it's done so far," said Jim

Salverson, an ASU microcomputing specialist. "Most viruses have a time delay or a number of times you use the program before it becomes dangerous."

The virus infects the computer and the program disks when infected disks are inserted into the machine.

"Just sticking the disk in the machine gets it infected," Salverson said. "You don't have to do anything."

Willa Cree, a manager in ASU's Computing Services department, said

*New computer lab, benign viruses can be harmful. "A big problem is that viruses spread so quickly," she said.

So far, only the Macintosh computers staff and faculty use have been stricken with nVIR. But students probably have the virus on their diskettes too, Cree said.

"People need to be concerned because they are passing it without realizing it," she added.

A computer virus typically gets lodged in a host computer and temporarily takes over the disk operating system. When an uninfected disk is inserted into the machine, a duplicate of the virus attaches itself to the program disk. The infection can be spread by users who swap program disks or send programs to one another over telephone lines. More than 25 viral strains have been identified in the United States.

Last week the Computing Assistance Center, also known as COMPASS, started selling $2 "vaccination and immunization" diskettes to combat the virus. It destroys all viral infections and protects against new infections.

"Students should use the vaccine program on every disk, even if you don't have a problem," Salverson said.

The MiRF lab is issuing vaccination instructions to ASU faculty and staff, but users who do not correctly follow the complicated instructions may foul up their machines.

"If you don't know what you are doing, you can create problems for yourself," MacCrate said.

Arizona law states that "altering, damaging or destroying any ... computer software program or data contained in a computer," is a class six felony, which can mean 1½ years imprisonment.

"As long as there are people who think that doing this is fun, we will probably have some problem," Cree said. "Our larger concern is what will crop up next."

When other U.S. universities started showing signs of infection, Cree said she thought ASU had managed to avoid computer viruses.

"Now we know it is out there," she said. "It will probably be on campus for a long time."

Computer Virus Antidotes

1. Back up your data files
2. Erase the infected disk
3. Check master disks with a detection program
4. Restore system files and applications from original master disks
5. Restore your data files
6. Run a detection program again
7. Check other disks you've used recently
8. Buy a "vaccination and immunization" disk

Installation of supercomputer chauffers in new era at ASU

By KATIE OSTERMAN
Contributing writer

This month's installation of a Cray computer in ASU's Computing Services marks ASU's entrance into the era of amazing supercomputers; these super-fast machines can make calculations in seconds that used to take a team of researchers days to figure.

The Cray x-MP/14se, which specializes in speed, will be installed by the end of the month. A second supercomputer, the IBM 3090-500E/VF, will be installed in December and will complement the Cray. The supercomputers, considered to be among the most powerful in the world, cost $11.3 million.

"Because of its amazing capabilities, the supercomputer is no less profound than the microscope or the telescope were in their day," said Gerald Samchuck, the technical director for projects and planning at ASU's Computing Services. "Science researchers will be able to do calculations that are impossible without a supercomputer."

Neil Armann, director of customer support at Computing Services, said ASU will quickly become prestigious with the computers.

"The acquisition of these supercomputers puts us up in the top 10 or 15 universities in the country as far as computer capability," he said. "That definitely makes ASU even more unique."

He said much of the funding for the supercomputers is coming through $5.1 million in grants from IBM and Cray

Arizona AIDS cases double in past year

By MICHELLE ALLMAN
State Press

The number of people in Arizona with AIDS has more than doubled in the last year, and local AIDS officials are worried the worst is yet to come.

The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta reports that 311 new AIDS cases developed in Arizona in 1988, bringing the total number of people in the state who have the disease to 610.

Kathleen Barnes, director of the Arizona AIDS Project, said the sharp increase is similar to that seen in larger states.

"What we are seeing now is what California and New York experienced a few years ago," Barnes said. "These numbers indicate a growing problem, not a declining one as most people would like to believe."

Nationally, there have been 75,768 AIDS cases reported since 1981. But Barnes said those figures are deceptively low, including the new Arizona numbers.

"Those are just the full-blown AIDS cases," she said. "Those figures don't even include ... people who have tested HIV positive or who haven't been hospitalized yet. Also, because of Arizona's (public) testing laws, a lot of people don't even know they have it."

Barnes said she is not satisfied with the progress the medical community is making in the fight against AIDS.

"We're just at the tip of the iceberg," she said. "The worst is definitely yet to come."

Arizona is 21st in the country in the total number of AIDS cases, while it is the 29th largest state in terms of population. Barnes predicted that Arizona soon will surpass other states in its number of AIDS cases.

"We can certainly expect the Arizona numbers to double, or even triple, over the next year," she said.

Charles McDuffy, a spokesman for the Student Health Center, said it is estimated that there are from 500,000 to 10,000,000 people in the United States who have the AIDS virus but have not been tested for it. AIDS in Arizona is on the increase, he added.

"Arizona follows in the footsteps of the larger states," McDuffy said. "We reflect what is happening in the rest of the U.S."

A CDC report this month found that the AIDS fatality rate for July through Oct. 17 was a record-low 14 percent, compared to 92 percent for the last six months of 1981. The average fatality rate for the seven years since the diagnosis of the disease is 56 percent.

McDuffy said it is hard to determine when the number of people with AIDS will level off and begin to decrease.

"The biggest fact is going to be whether or not people adopt safe sex practices," he said.

"People still don't seem to understand that the person with AIDS could be anyone they come into contact with. Interveneous drug users aren't just in the inner city anymore. They are lawyers and businessmen and can be anyone in the general population."

U.S. group intended recipient of hostage's pictures and letter

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Police said today a U.S. organization was the intended recipient of the photographs of American hostages in Lebanon that were found in a Lebanese woman's luggage at Milan's airport.

The woman was supposed to deliver the pictures and a handwritten letter bearing hostage Alann Steen's name to an Italian arms trader, Aldo Anghessa, police said. The photographs were of Steen, American reporter Terry Anderson and a third man.

"Anghessa acted as a go-between, between the two parties. One party was a Lebanese organization," said Achille Serra, head of Milan's anti-terrorist police.

He said the other group was American, but refused to elaborate on the identity of either organization or say if the U.S. government was involved.

The newspaper Il Giornale of Milan reported without attribution today that Anghessa was to give the photos and letter to U.S. diplomats, but the arrest of the woman spoiled the operation. The U.S. Embassy declined comment on the report.

Cartoonists dedicate their day's work to tragedy of homelessness

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tragedy of homelessness will be featured in graphic style in the nation's newspapers today, as more than 100 cartoonists dedicate their work to that national problem.

Both comic-strip and editorial cartoonists are joining the effort, including some of the best-known panels and strips, said Barry Zigas of the National Low Income Housing Coalition.

"The goal of the project is to tug at America's heart strings through its funny bones. Tomorrow's funny pages are not going to be so funny," said Zigas at a news conference announcing the project.

Similar news conferences were scheduled in 22 other cities across the nation in an effort to focus attention on hunger and homelessness, Zigas said.

"Hunger and homelessness are not partisan issues, they are human tragedies that deserve our immediate attention," he said.

"There is a shameful level of hunger in the United States, although it is not as visible as homelessness," added Robert Fersh of the Food Research Action Center.

Debate stirs political interest in students

By KRISTI ELLIS
State Press

About 200 people on Cady Mall, some holding campaign signs, cheered on two elected officials Monday who debated on the policies of presidential candidates George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

The number of students who listened surprised Associated Students leaders.

"I have never seen so much political activity at ASU," said Jennifer Martin, ASASU Political Union director.

Scottsdale City Councilwoman Susan Bittersmith, who supports Bush, and State Corporation Commissioner Renz Jennings, who backs Dukakis, debated the economy, abortion and national defense.

Bittersmith said the most important issue in this year's presidential election is the economy.

"Only under the Bush administration am I going to be employed, be able to feed my family and keep myself in the same condition that I am currently," she said.

But Bittersmith disagreed with Bush's stand on abortion, saying that the decision should be left to the woman.

"Abortion is a very important issue in this campaign, but it is not the only issue," Bittersmith said. "It is an issue that you as individuals need to look at and decide which side you agree with."

Jennings agreed with Bittersmith's pro-choice stance.

"I think that ultimately it ought to be left to a woman and her family to make those kinds of decisions, but George Bush doesn't and she (Bittersmith) doesn't agree with him on that," Jennings said.

The debate was part of "Voice on the Mall," a week-long political forum featuring candidates and their supporters. It was sponsored by the Associated Students Political Union.

Students and spectators, most of whom seemed to support Bush, also asked questions about the presidential candidates and voiced their opinions.

"When is the Democratic party going to realize that liberal candidates will not be elected to president of the United States anymore?" asked 24-year-old Robert Davis, State of Arizona youth director.

Jennings said that Republican and Democratic governors once selected Dukakis as the most effective governor in the United States. Dukakis is not as liberal as some Republicans have labeled him, Jennings added.

Another spectator, Stockton Wingo of Phoenix, said he was dissatisfied with both candidates.

"If the Republicans and Democrats are doing such a good job with the government then why can't they get more than 40 percent of the people to go out and vote," asked Wingo, the state coordinator for Eugene McCarthy for President.

"I think that both of your candidates are bad candidates and bad government. A vote for McCarthy is a vote for good government," he shouted.

Jennings, who worked for Eugene McCarthy as the state coordinator in 1968, said McCarthy used to be a very curious figure, but people should "disregard him today" because he is unpredictable.

Stephen Munteer/State Press

Democratic Arizona Sen. Dennis DeConcini, campaigning for re-election, addresses about 20 ASU students in the College of Law Monday. He blamed Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis for starting this year's abundant negative campaigning. "If you're going to play tough and rough, you'd better know what you're doing. The Democrats started negative campaigning at the convention that was really dumb," DeConcini said.

Babbitt blasts Bush's ads

PHOENIX — Former presidential candidate and Arizona Governor Bruce Babbitt joined in criticism of Vice President George Bush on Monday, saying the Republican "has been walking on the edge of the gutter" in campaign ads.

Appearing at a news conference sponsored by Arizona supporters of Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis, Babbitt said some of the Bush campaign ads are "getting awfully close" to being racist.

"They dishonor the political process," he added. "They dishonor the American people."

Babbitt acknowledged that Dukakis faced an uphill fight and declined to say whether he'd have done anything different against Bush if he had beaten Dukakis for the Democratic nod.

"I had my chance at the plate and, obviously, I got an early ticket out of the race," Babbitt said.

"The Dodgers to me stand for the proposition that sometimes you come from behind," Babbitt said in a reference to this year's underdog World Series baseball champions. "Campaigns are a two-way street. We can't sit and wait for the candidate to stir things up. We have to stir up the candidate."

Babbitt, now a lawyer in private practice here, dropped out of the Democratic campaign for president after losing in Iowa and New Hampshire earlier this year.

North cancels appearance

By The Associated Press

PHOENIX — A paid, fund-raising appearance by former Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North on behalf of Republican U.S. Senate candidate Keith DeGreen was cancelled Monday amid disagreement over who was responsible for security.

DeGreen said during a news conference that Phoenix police had refused to let its officers protect North, on duty or off, adding that he believed the decision was "politically motivated" because Phoenix Mayor Terry Goddard and Arizona Gov. Rose Mofford are both Democrats, as is incumbent Sen. Dennis DeConcini.

"It sounds to me like they didn't sell enough tickets and are looking for excuses," DeConcini spokesman Bob Maynes said.

DeGreen disagreed, but he and his aides declined to say exactly how many tickets had been sold for Tuesday's planned $1,000-a-head reception and $250-a-plate dinner.

Phoenix police spokesman Andy Hill said a long-standing departmental policy last revised in January 1984 forbids use of officers as bodyguards except at the request of agencies such as the Secret Service or in the case of a local threat. The policy permits use of off-duty officers only for such things as crowd control and traffic control, Hill added.

Are bigots lurking among campus Bush supporters?

Darrin Hostetler
Columnist

Arizona is the Death Valley of presidential politics. George Bush and Michael Dukakis aren't willing to even break a sweat under the desert sun in an effort to harvest our anemic total of electoral votes.

But in the absence of national candidate campaign stops, ASU has been blessed with an abundant crop of state and local campaigns and healthy discussion of the presidential race among students and party officials.

Indeed, thanks to the Associated Students Political Union, which is bringing state Senate and House of Representatives candidates to ASU all week, this apathetic campus is turning into pretty fertile ground for political discussion. Some seeds of student involvement and activism are being planted — in both Republican and Democratic camps — that will hopefully sprout and continue to grow after the election.

But like in any patch of moist earth — out of which good things can grow — there are also all kinds of slimy creatures wiggling around.

Worms, for one example.

Robert Davis and "ASU Students for Bush," for another.

A colleague and I dropped by a meeting of "Students for Bush" in the MU yesterday afternoon, following a debate on the mall between Bush and Dukakis supporters. Presiding over the meeting was a familiar face — Robert Davis.

Davis is tall and heavy-set, with short black hair, a fondness for blue suits and red ties and a manner of speaking that reminds one of the captain of a high school cheerleading squad. Here are some excerpts from his opening comments to the 75 Bush supporters who had gathered:

"Hey guys, let's get on a real high . . . (on election night) we're going to have a hospitality suite downtown, we'll all be college students and we'll all be happy . . . I just want you all to say 'Yeah!' for George Bush . . ."

"I can sense a lot of energy in this room, and I want us to just feed off each other . . ."

Well, you get the idea. He's young and syrupy, — like a cast-off from an "Up With People" commercial.

Davis is a man who exudes arrogance. Billing himself as "Arizona student coordinator" for Bush/Quayle, he calmly informed the roomful of students that he was "appointed by the Washington office," to assume control of the "Arizona situation."

My, how quickly times change. It seems like only last year (by God, it was last year) that Davis was a simple ASU political science major and president of the College of Liberal Arts College Council, famous only for his reputation as the biggest egomaniac in student government.

But now here he was, invested by the wise men in Washington with the great responsibility of directing the student vote in a non-crucial backwater western state where polls are predicting an oh-so-narrow 65-35 percent Bush victory.

Mindful of his holy mission, Davis says: "I was put on this Earth by God for a purpose — to work in politics for the Republican party and for the good of the country."

Yuck.

In short, Davis is the ultimate example of the opportunistic junior politico — the one know, there are two sides to Michigan, the WASP side and then there is the side with those others . . . we Republicans come from my side."

Both these comments were met with loud applause and cheers all around.

And afterwards, I wanted to know why.

I wanted to know why a student chose to identify herself as a White-Anglo-Saxon-Protestant who came from a "good," non-minority part of Michigan, and why another said she moved to Arizona to get away from homosexuals.

I wanted to know why intolerance and thinly veiled racial slurs were funny; if the campus Bush campaign was a kind of 1950s southern lunch counter where you can still tell a "nigger" joke and everyone will wink and smile knowingly.

And I wanted to know if all the campus Bush supporters sanctioned such ideas and behavior.

Davis and "Students for Bush" chairman Andrew Bishton explained it this way:

"I think that conservatives in general did not like the social changes of the last 20 years," Davis said.

"There is a little bit of anger on the right." Davis and Bishton stressed that they themselves aren't bigoted, and that they desperately want more minorities in the Republican Party.

Yet they weren't willing to expel those who had made the offending remarks from the Bush group.

"This is America, and even racists have the right to say what they think," Davis said.

"I would just pull them aside and tell them to be . . . I hate to use the word 'discreet,' but . . . just tell them to keep their views to themselves next time," Davis said.

You see, it's an election year. And to the campus Bush supporters, bigots are funny — and essential — as long as they will vote for their man.

"There wasn't a black face in the crowd today," I said. "But if there had been, how do you think the person would have felt?"

"How can you increase the number of minorities in the party if you won't expel those who offend them?" I asked.

"And how can you sanction this kind of thing as a group? Are there that many rednecks and radicals supporting Bush on this campus that cracking down on a few of them will drive them all away?"

"Look," Bishton sighed, "I despise racism and I found that comment (about non-minority Michigan) to be offensive, too. But that's off the record."

Davis nodded and smiled in best student politico manner.

"I wish to echo that completely," he said. Well guys, everything is on the record. And for once, I feel sorry for George Bush. He deserves better.

'In short, Davis is the ultimate example of the opportunistic junior politico — the one kid in every class who brings a briefcase to third grade and is foaming at the mouth for a career in government before he is done teething.'

Program of study

Editor:

Have you ever tried to graduate from ASU? I have. For the last year I've tried. When it is your time, I wish you luck.

My complaint? The infamous program of study. What started out as a good idea has become my own personal Vietnam. All the advisers should be renamed Col. Kurtz for splitting from the program and waging their own war in Laos.

Filing a program of study under the oppressive threat of "no early registration" is completely unnecessary. It is supposed to help you graduate expediently, but actually succeeds only in delaying graduation. This makes absolute sense . . . this way ASU can bilk you for another semester of funds.

Rules are meant only as guidelines to help people get by. When they become oppressive they should be "edited."

Hey, administration, don't ever forget who you work for. You work for us. And when you cease to work for us then you should be edited with a blunt object.

Divorced man's vengeance shows cruelty... but with imagination!

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

By writing this story, I am not condoning what Gerald did. His conduct was nasty, cruel and vindictive. But it was also funny, and with most of today's news being about the frantic babbling of politicians, anything with a chuckle is welcome.

Gerald lives in a suburb of St. Paul, Minn. He's divorced and it is an understatement to say that he doesn't think much of his ex-wife.

That isn't uncommon, of course. Many divorced people loathe their former spouses. That's one of the reasons I almost never write about divorce disputes.

It's my experience that if you ask a divorced person whose fault the breakup was, about 99 percent of the time the man will say "hers," and the woman will say "his." Depending on who you talk to, in every shattered marriage there was one saint and one fiend.

Or, as an old divorce lawyer once told me: "They all lie. The secret of success is to get your client to tell better lies."

But to get back to Gerald and the nasty thing he did, as reported in the St. Paul Post-Dispatch.

Gerald wasn't violent, as some ex-husbands are. There are countless cases of men beating up boyfriends of their ex-wives. And, although it is most rare, ex-wives have been known to pluck a few tufts of hair from an ex-husband's new flame.

There are tire slashings, obscene late-night phone calls, and occasionally a guy will get sloshed and drive his car onto his old front porch.

Gerald, to his credit, showed a bit more wit and imagination.

After Gerald was divorced by Sharon, she packed up and moved to another state, while he remained at their old address.

This person was putting together a newsletter that was to be sent to the other members of the class, bringing them all up to date on what their old classmates were doing 30 years later.

Those readers with a malicious nature have already guessed what Gerald did.

Yes, Gerald filled in the answers to the questionnaire.

Then he signed Sharon's name and returned it to the person putting together the newsletter.

And a few months later, more than 100 members of the class received the newsletter and read about each other. When "Achievement most proud of?"

The answer: "My three divorces and how each time I married into more money to the point where I am now living on the $400,000 settlement and interest from my third divorce."

Another question asked for an "outrageous, unusual or interesting experience."

The response: "Going out to Virginia... on my job and having an affair with two different guys while my third husband was back in Minnesota working two jobs."

But Gerald hadn't even hit his stride. For the question about hobbies, he wrote:

"Night clubbing, partying and looking for new and wealthier husbands."

And for "Secret ambition or fantasy," he wrote:

"Seeing if I can't get married as many times as Liz Taylor and gain my riches through divorces, not work."

When Sharon finally saw the newsletter, she said "eek," or something to that effect. Then she called her lawyer.

And now Gerald has been slapped with a $50,000 lawsuit by Sharon. She says that's what it will cost to soothe her embarrassment and mental anguish.

I suppose that if there is a moral to this story it is that it's a good idea to let sleeping ex-wives lie.

And Gerald had better hope that when this $50,000 case comes to court, he draws a judge who either has a wicked sense of humor or a nasty ex-wife.

'It's my experience that if you ask a divorced person whose fault the breakup was, about 99 percent of the time the man will say "hers," and the woman will say "his." Depending on who you talk to, in every shattered marriage there was one saint and one fiend.'

One day a letter came addressed to Sharon. The decent thing would have been for Gerald to send the letter on. But Gerald had bitterness in his heart, as many divorced people do.

So he opened and read the letter.

It turned out to be a questionnaire from someone in Sharon's old high school class of 1958.

they got to Sharon's response, their jaws dropped.

There could be little doubt that Sharon sounded as if she had the most interesting 30 years since graduation day.

In answer to "Occupation," the answer was: "Retired on 3rd husband's divorce settlement."

There was a question that asked:

Stabbing leaves Tempe man in serious condition

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A 30-year-old Tempe man was in serious condition Monday at a Scottsdale hospital after being stabbed at a local apartment complex.

James R. Bradley was stabbed once in the chest at about 9:55 p.m. Sunday when he got out of a woman's car at his apartment complex at 855 E. Apache Blvd.

Police arrested the woman's live-in boyfriend in connection with the incident.

George Fred Allen, 50, was booked on suspicion of attempted murder. He lives at the same apartment complex as Bradley.

Police also reported the following incidents:

- A 55-year-old Tempe man was arrested Friday night after he allegedly shot his son in the hand with a .22-caliber rifle. The son did not want to prosecute, but his father was arrested because the two men gave officers conflicting statements.

- Jimmy Hall, of the 2200 block of East Maryland Drive, was arrested on suspicion of aggravated assault. James Hall, 24, was treated at Desert Samaritan Hospital in Mesa.

- A 27-year-old man was arrested Friday afternoon after he allegedly stole goods from a Tempe grocery store and threatened an employee with a screwdriver. The employee had taken the suspect's car keys.

The incident occurred at about 2:28 p.m. at the Safeway store at 926 E. Broadway Road.

- Two men were arrested Saturday afternoon in connection with the burglaries of four Tempe homes. They were arrested near Dateland Drive and Broadway Road.

- An ASU student suffered a 5-inch gash to his head Sunday when he slipped and fell while trying to climb into his bed at Irish Hall. He was treated at Tempe St. Luke's Hospital.

ASU police reported the following incidents during the Phoenix Cardinals-Cleveland Browns game Sunday at Sun Devil Stadium:

- A man was escorted out of the stadium after he was seen throwing dog bones on the playing field and at people.

- A man was escorted out of the stadium after he was seen instigating a fight.

- Two juveniles were arrested for felony theft at a concession stand and were released to their parents.

- A man was seen spraying water at a woman. He was warned and his water bottle was taken away.

- A man was arrested for criminal trespassing and resisting arrest. He was police report

booked into the Maricopa County Jail in Mesa.

- A man was arrested, cited and released for possession of marijuana.

- A man was escorted out of the stadium for throwing a football.

- A man was escorted out of the stadium for disorderly conduct and alcohol possession.

Man with AIDS assaults woman

Tempe police are looking for a man who abducted a pregnant woman from a local supermarket parking lot, sexually assaulted her at knife point then told her he had AIDS.

The incident began at about 4:30 p.m. Saturday when the 23-year-old Tempe woman and her 4-year-old daughter were getting out of their car in front of the Fry's store at 3115 S. McClintock Drive, Tempe police spokesman Roger Clay said. They were approached by a man with a knife, who forced them back into the vehicle, Clay said.

The suspect, who was wearing rubber surgical gloves and called himself "Ricky," drove the car to an area near 35th Avenue and Dobbins Road in Phoenix where he sexually assaulted the woman, who is nine months pregnant, Clay said.

After the assault, the suspect told the woman he had AIDS and was going to drown her in a lake but was scared off when a Phoenix police car drove by, Clay said.

The suspect stole food stamps from her purse and drove her car to 40th Street and Southern Avenue in Phoenix where he jumped out of the vehicle at about 11:30 p.m., Clay said.

Tempe Police Composite Drawing

The woman's daughter was not harmed. Police described the suspect as black, approximately 19 years old, 6 feet 1 to 6 feet 2 inches tall, 150 to 160 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. He had a tattoo on his shoulder with the word "Ricky," a gold front tooth and a scar on his stomach.

He was last seen wearing a red plaid shirt, shorts, white tennis shoes and surgical gloves, police said.

Goldwater Center to add needed research space

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Construction will begin in December on the $25 million Goldwater Center for Engineering and Science, which will give ASU 200,000 square feet of the half million square feet of space it needs for research.

The six-story center, named for retired U.S. Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, will be built at Tyler and McAllister malls across from Noble Library. It will house research labs for the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

"The center will be great because we're extremely tight on space," said Ronald Barr, assistant vice president for research.

Victor Zafra, vice president for business affairs, said: "This is very important because it will provide more room for research. Anything we do will augment research."

Groundbreaking for the complex will begin during the semester break when excavation work begins.

Zafra said a semester break start is planned so that construction "won't impact too much on the University environment."

The actual design and construction of the research center will begin in June 1989 and end in September 1990, said Henry Mortarotti, director of planning and construction.

So far, everything is right on schedule, he added. Barr said three-fourths of the building's space will be used by engineering.

"It will be mostly computer research and design," said Charles Backus, assistant dean of engineering. "It will be an extension to the growth in engineering. In the last seven to eight years, the increased activity in this area has been tenfold."

"Hopefully this building will accommodate future growth."

The college's computer program also will move into the Goldwater Center.

In addition to the computer facilities, there will be research laboratories and administration and research offices, Mortarotti said.

New computer lab installed in ASU's College of Business

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
Contributing writer

A computer lab has been installed in ASU's College of Business to help faculty and doctoral students solve complex problems in business.

The lab, located on the fourth floor of the business administration complex, has three computer work stations that feature high-powered, high-resolution graphics and fast processing.

Andrew Philippakis, director of computer resources in the college, said ASU will provide a laser printer, a large screen projector and software.

The lab will be completed in January and will be the basis for research in how collaborative computer networks can support business decision-making.

More than $45,000 in equipment was donated for the lab by Sun Microsystems Inc. of California, a computer manufacturer considered to be a leader in designing and assembling work stations.

Business professors Craig Kirkwood and Michael Goul will assist the doctoral students, and Philippakis will supervise the activities of the lab.

Philippakis said collaborative computing is the next frontier in organizational uses of computers.

He said the computers will make ASU a leader in the use of advanced computer work stations for group problem-solving.

"It is rare to have this kind of equipment," he said.

Philippakis said the computer users will study the problem-solving and develop software tools to solve problems that have uncertain outcomes. The users will also measure the impact of machine-learning on decision-making.

The college will "eventually hook up these machines to a large screen so they (researchers) can have a common view of data or charts," Philippakis said.

"Calculations can take days to figure out," he said. "With a supercomputer, it takes minutes or seconds. It is definitely worth the investment."

"The Cray . . . can handle many highly complex calculations at one time at a very high speed," he said.

Marmie praises all aspects of win over Cougars

ASU quarterback Paul Justin was named Pac-10 Offensive Player of the Week for his 321-yard passing effort during Saturday's 31-28 upset victory over Washington State. The Devils have another tough task Saturday when they play 20th-ranked Oregon at Eugene, Ore.

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

ASU's first Pac-10 Conference win and 31-28 road victory against Washington State was a result of a team effort, with top-individual performances, Coach Larry Marmie said Monday.

Quarterback Paul Justin, who made his first start of the season for ASU and the second of his career, was named the Pac-10 Offensive Player of the Week.

"It was pleasing to all of us to see how Paul handled his first start," Marmie said.

Justin directed ASU to 321 yards passing, the most this season for the team. In the process, Justin threw 34 passes and completed 22 for Sun Devil bests in both areas.

Marmie said Justin progressively became more comfortable and played with confidence in the second half. Justin completed 12 of his last 15 passes for 183 yards.

Saturday's passing performance was the first time ASU threw for more than 300 yards since 1986 by Jeff Van Raaphorst, who registered 437.

Seven receptions is the highest for ASU receivers this season. That mark was reached by both split end Tony Johnson and tight end Ryan McReynolds. Johnson also accumulated 115 yards during the day for a Sun Devil best.

"Tony made some big catches and also played a fair amount of the second half with a couple of nagging injuries," Marmie said of Johnson, who endured a sore knee and ankle during the game. "That really makes you feel good to see somebody that knew how much it meant to win that football game."

McReynolds gained 78 yards on his receptions, including an eight-yard touchdown catch that ended ASU's 10-quarter drought for not crossing the goal line for a score.

"Ryan McReynolds seems to be a young man that's getting better and better every week and had his best ball game overall," Marmie said.

A shuffling of starting tailbacks will not be made this week, Marmie said.

"Both tailbacks did some good things," he said. "We started (Bruce) Perkins and brought (David) Winsley in off the bench."

At fullback, Marmie said Kelvin Fisher was productive for the team with and without the ball. The line also provided a solid performance in making holes in the Cougar defense and protecting Justin, who was not sacked nor intercepted, he said.

"When your offense plays the best it's played all season, then certainly you would expect some good performances all the way around," Marmie said.

On the defensive side, Marmie said the Sun Devils performed well against an exceptionally good football team.

Linebacker Mark Tingstad made 16 solo tackles, the most this season for ASU defenders and 19 total.

Safety Nathan LaDuke's interception of a Timm Rosenbach pass in the end zone stopped the Cougars at the ASU 11 with a minute to go in the game.

"Defensively, overall, we were pleased that we were able to come up with some big plays in critical situations," Marmie said.

HiBall combines trampoline, basketball skills

By CLAY TUCKER
State Press

If you like playing basketball and enjoy jumping on a trampoline, then there is a new sport you may want to try. It's called HiBall, and it's quickly becoming one of the most popular sports around.

HiBall, which can be played at Casey at the Bat, 1605 N. Hayden Rd., is a modern mixture of the skills and agility of basketball with the balance and stamina of jumping on a trampoline.

The game is played in a cage 20 feet high by 10 feet across. The cage is divided into four equal sectors by two 11-foot high walls. Each sector has enough room to hold one player. But the most interesting thing about HiBall is that it isn't played on a wooden or concrete court, it is played on a trampoline.

The ball used in HiBall isn't your regular bouncing round, leather basketball either — it somewhat resembles a round stuffed pillow. In the corner of each sector, placed about eight feet off the trampoline, is a goal, which is just slightly wider than the ball.

The object of the game is to jump high on the trampoline, shoot or throw the ball in the goal to score or pass it to your teammate to have him score. You get two points for scoring a goal, and one point if the other team lets the ball touch the ground. A game is over when the first team reaches 21 points.

The most unique characteristic about HiBall is the trampoline. To score in this game you must know how to jump up and down and to get high enough to throw the ball over one of the walls and into the other teams goals. This may sound easy, but it's not!

review

The other players can jump on the trampoline in different sequences, which creates a situation in which you cannot jump any higher. Teamwork is very important as well, if you learn to pass and jump together, scoring will come a lot easier.

"HiBall takes a lot of teamwork — more so than other sports," Casey At The Bat worker Jeff Cagan said. "You have to build endurance for this game as well, it's pretty tiring."

The sport has become very popular for the college crowd, as well as high school students. Equipment is not required for HiBall, but after spending an hour bouncing around in the cage, you may want to bring some elbow and knee pads.

HiBall is pretty inexpensive, a group of four costs only $12 per half hour, $10 per half hour for 3 people, and $8 for a two-player game. A half an hour may seem like a short time, but HiBall is very tiring, and many beginners may not last 15 minutes.

Casey At The Bat is planning to have a HiBall tournament for all those interested on Nov. 7. Teams should consist of two to three players, and there will be a $60 entry fee. The tournament will consist of eight games, including playoffs for qualifying teams. The winners will receive free playing time and other prizes.

Quarterback Justin proves he's worthy of starting assignment

Dave Hodges
Sports Editor

It was a busy weekend in sports at ASU and around the state, and here's some questions, comments and opinions to satiate the quest for trivial knowledge in all of us:

In case you didn't hear, the ASU football team came from behind and upset Washington State, 31-28.

The Devils actually looked good at times. Paul Justin, in his first start since the disaster in Washington last year, played "adequately," in the words of Coach Larry Marmie. But it was adequate enough for Justin to earn Pac-10 Offensive Player of the Week honors.

I'd say he deserved it, too. Justin led an offense that only scored three points in the previous two games to 31 points against Wazoo — the highest offensive output of the year for ASU.

Justin's total of 321 yards was the highest by a Sun Devil since Jeff Van Raaphorst threw for 437 yards against Arizona in 1986.

There could be an argument that the WSU defense was the poorest in the league, but Washington shut out the Devils when it was ranked last in defense (the shutout catapulted the Huskies to fourth).

Perhaps Daniel Ford can release another press statement saying he's the best quarterback on the team. But that would be false.

The Phoenix Suns' Steeeeeeeve Kerrrrrrr, the inspirational leader of Arizona's trip to the NCAA Final Four last year, made a successful return to McKale Center Sunday night in Tucson.

Kerr, who started and played 32 minutes in Phoenix's 138-117 victory over Sacramento, scored 13 points (including three three-pointers) and tallied two rebounds, five assists, two steals and only one turnover.

What was disappointing is the crowd the Suns drew in Tucson — that basketball-crazed place Tucsonians like to call a city. Only 5,748 showed up to see Kerr's homecoming. And if that crowd wasn't enough, there were 5,000 empty seats Saturday in Arizona Stadium when the Wildcats played top-ranked UCLA.

ASU athletic director Charles Harris announced Monday the Sun Devils' Nov. 12 game with third-ranked Southern Cal will be televised by ABC.

It will be ASU's second ABC appearance this year. The Sun Devils' record on ABC since the network began broadcasting Pac-10 games in 1987 is 0-4-1.

Lomax hopes to play Sunday despite injury

PHOENIX (AP) — Phoenix Cardinals quarterback Neil Lomax, who suffered a contusion on his arthritic left hip in Sunday's loss to Cleveland, was limping noticeably Monday but said he's hoping to play this week against Dallas.

"We still have eight games left. I'm trying to get this team into the playoffs," Lomax said. "I think I can play this week. I hope so. I'm very optimistic."

Lomax, an eight-year veteran and two-time Pro Bowler, was forced to leave the game with 3:59 remaining in the third quarter after getting sacked for the fifth time.

Phoenix trailed 20-14 at the time and wound up losing 29-21 to lower its record to 4-4 and fall out of a first-place tie in the NFC East.

"We were trying a flea-flicker, and I got a good shot from somebody," Lomax said of linebacker Eddie Johnson's tackle for an 11-yard loss. "It just stimulated the pain. It was already hurting before that. I came out because I couldn't take the drop anymore."

Lomax said his hip started hurting after Browns cornerback Frank Minnifield hit him as he was running out of bounds off a second-quarter scramble.

Minnifield appeared to throw his body at Lomax on the play with his helmet hitting Lomax directly on the ailing hip.

Several Cardinal players called it "a cheap shot" although no penalty was called.

"I thought I was going out of bounds. I see other quarterbacks are protected really well. Why not me?," Lomax said after the game.

"I don't think the guy that tackled him was aiming at his hip," Phoenix Coach Gene Stallings said. "Neil was scrambling. He was just trying to get some yardage. Neil may have been headed out of bounds, but he hadn't quite made it (when the hit occurred). I'm not going to say that (it was a cheap shot)."

"Lomax's injury was a freak thing," Browns linebacker Mike Johnson said. "Things happen."

Cardinals physician Dr. Russell Chick said Lomax's hip "can only absorb so much trauma" and Lomax was scheduled to be X-rayed Monday morning.

"No X-rays. Dr. Chick didn't think it was necessary," Lomax said before the team's afternoon meetings. "I had a bad night, but I bathed the hip in a cool pool this morning to keep the inflammation down."

"I'm sore. I've just got to wait. So far, the trainers have been treating it the best way they can. We'll see how it feels Wednesday."

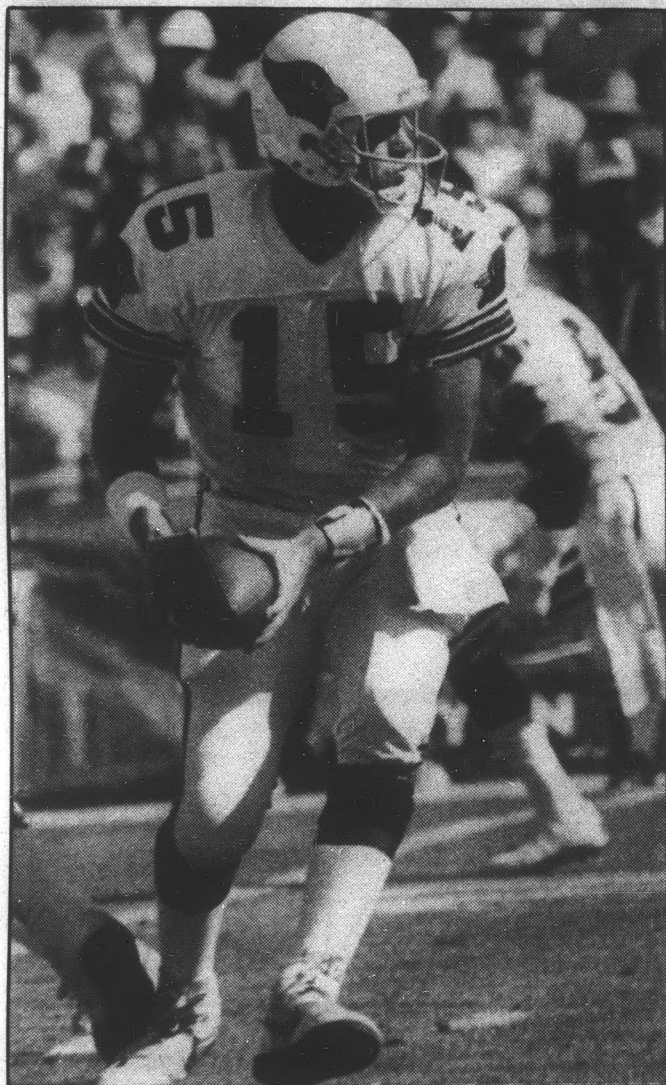

Lomax, who said he has been previously diagnosed as having "a chronic degenerative condition" from "years of playing on artificial turf and getting hit on the hip," took his first cortisone shot Sept. 19 and said it would be his last.

"Dr. Chick does not recommend a shot right now. If he does, we'll discuss that when the time comes," Lomax said. "I've been through this before. It's nothing new. It's a recurring problem I have."

Lomax also said he doesn't like to call his condition arthritis "because I've received so many letters from old ladies telling me how I should treat it."

However, the 29-year-old Lomax has said he won't take any more cortisone shots for fear of permanent damage.

"Your body will tell you when you can't play anymore," he said.

Rumors fly about Gastineau's claim of Nielsen's cancer

PHOENIX (AP) — Despite published skepticism about whether Brigitte Nielsen has cancer, the actress' publicist said Monday "real reason for concern" prompted her decision to enter a hospital.

Nielsen told the New York Times last week she had cancer of the uterus and planned to enter an unspecified Arizona hospital Monday for a biopsy, but publicist Joel Brokaw said he did not know whether she had done so.

Her fiancé, New York Jets star defensive end Mark Gastineau, last week announced he was quitting football because he wanted to help Nielsen through her illness. He and Nielsen last week flew to Arizona, where his family lives.

Gastineau's estranged wife said Sunday she didn't think her husband was quitting football because of Nielsen's illness, and a newspaper quoted two friends of Gastineau as saying Nielsen did not have cancer.

"She's not gravely ill," Lisa Gastineau, who has been separated from her husband since 1986, told the New York Post. "He's using it as an excuse — it's typical of Mark to exaggerate things."

Newsday wrote that two of Gastineau's closest friends, who have knowledge of the original diagnosis, said Nielsen's condition "certainly is not cancer" and could not be described as life-threatening.

The New York newspaper also wrote that another past intimate of Gastineau's said Nielsen's concern was caused by "an abnormal Pap smear," but the condition was not serious.

Brokaw said from Los Angeles, "I certainly hope that that's the situation, but I don't think she would submit to a hospital procedure if there wasn't real reason for concern."

"Perhaps the media (coverage) has been blown out of proportion, but I do think that there's no comment on that until an extensive medical procedure ... can determine that, and certainly I don't want to go into medical histories, but there is significant reason for concern based on her and her family's medical history with this problem."

WORKSHOP FOR artists with Wilfred Stedman, MD. Anatomy for the Artist. December 5-9, 1988. It is a thoroughly modern approach to learning the essentials of classic anatomy. A fascinating experience for the beginning artist as well as the experienced professional. Special attention is given to details of the anatomy of the eye, ear, head, and neck, as well as the problem areas such as the back of the shoulder, spine, and hand. Balance, proportion, age changes, and structural differences between the sexes are included. Sketches may be in pencil, pastel, acrylics, or pasteline clay, according to the student's preference. Doctor Stedman is a gifted teacher as well as a full-time figure sculptor. His knowledge of anatomy is the result of his medical studies combined with years of experience as an orthopedic surgeon. Open enrollment, no prerequisites. For further information call Scottsdale Artists school, 990-1422

WORKSHOP FOR artists with Joseph Sheppard, Oil Painting-Still Life. December 5-9, 1988. In his book, Bringing Textures to Life, Joseph Sheppard states the important thing is not your finished picture, but the knowledge and experience you gain from working through the techniques, and the same approach will govern this class. The specific technique to be taught is known as the Maroger technique, which is named after the great M. Jacques Maroger under whom Sheppard studied. Open enrollment, no prerequisites. For further information call Scottsdale Artists School, 990-1422.

Wyoming cracks Top 10 for 1st time in 21 years

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming's meteoric rise in The Associated Press college football poll is a tribute to the turnaround that has the Cowboys riding the nation's longest regular-season winning streak.

A 500 team two years ago, Wyoming cracked the Top Ten on Monday for the first time in 21 years, following Saturday's 61-18 rout of Utah. UCLA, Notre Dame and Southern California held onto the top three spots.

"We're certainly happy about it," Wyoming coach Paul Roach said. "It's good for our state, our program, the university. And it's good for the WAC (Western Athletic Conference) to receive some recognition."

"However, for our players and our coaches, it's a peripheral thing. We still focus in on our No. 1 goal, and that's to defend our (WAC) championship."

Wyoming is 8-0 overall, 5-0 in conference play and has won its last 17 regular-season games.

The No. 10 ranking marked Wyoming's fifth consecutive week in the poll and was the highest since the Cowboys were No. 6 in the final 1967 listings with a 10-0 record.

"We don't use it as incentive," Roach said of the rankings. "I'm sure that pleases our players to receive that recognition. But we're not defending a ranking. We're defending a championship, and therein lies the difference."

Roach couldn't single out anything that has transformed the Cowboys from a 6-6 team in 1986 to an undefeated powerhouse, other than to point to his players' and coaches' dedication and ambition.

"We just happen to have enough of the right things and the right chemistry, at least up to this point," he said. "All those things (rankings, winning streaks) at some point in time come to an end. Cinderella takes her wand and goes home."

UCLA, which became No. 1 last week after Miami lost to Notre Dame, defeated Arizona 24-3 Saturday and received 35 of 60 first-place votes and 1,171 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Notre Dame, a 41-13

winner over Air Force, was second for the second week in a row, with 19 first-place votes and 1,144 points. UCLA and Notre Dame are 7-0-0.

Southern Cal, 6-0-0, was idle over the weekend. The Trojans received five first-place votes and 1,086 points. UCLA plays Southern Cal Nov. 19 and Southern Cal meets Notre Dame Nov. 26.

Miami remained fourth with 1,024 points, following a 57-3 rout of Cincinnati, and Nebraska held onto fifth place with 893 points by trouncing Kansas State 48-3.

Florida State crushed Division I-AA Louisiana Tech 66-3 and moved up from seventh place to sixth with 889 points. The Seminoles slipped from fifth to seventh a week ago when one voter inadvertently left them off his Top Twenty ballot.

The other first-place vote went to 7-0-0 West Virginia, which dropped from sixth place to seventh despite a 59-19 rout of Boston College. The Mountaineers received 885 points.

Oklahoma edged Colorado 17-14 and remained No. 8 with 762 points. Clemson lost to North Carolina State 10-3 and fell from ninth to 15th, while Auburn's 33-0 victory over Mississippi State enabled the Tigers to jump from ninth to eighth with 706 points.

Wyoming rounded out the Top Ten with 653 points.

The Second Ten consisted of Arkansas, Oklahoma State, Louisiana State, Michigan, Clemson, Syracuse, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Oregon.

Last week it was Georgia, Wyoming, Arkansas, Indiana, Oklahoma State, LSU, Washington, South Carolina, Syracuse and Michigan.
