Board to vote on additional fee waivers

By SHERI JOHNSON
State Press

The Arizona Board of Regents is expected to approve a recommendation Friday that will provide 669 tuition waivers for ASU students during the 1989-90 academic year, 140 more than last year.

The additional waivers are based on a policy passed in 1985 by the regents that authorized a 25 percent increase in waivers over a three-year period. This year, ASU has given out 529 waivers totaling $676,062, while UofA has given 454 waivers totaling $523,980. NAU has given 209 waivers totaling $257,102.

Odus Elliott, the regents associate director for academic programs, said the universities receive waivers every year based on an enrollment formula established by the regents. The additional waivers, established under the 1985 policy, are strictly for student showing financial need, he said.

"Anyone who can show financial need and who can comply (with the University's codes) can qualify for the (new) waivers," Elliott said.

"We support the increased waivers. We think it will be helpful for the students."

Each of the 1989-90 waivers is valued at $1,434, the projected cost of tuition.

Elliott said it is hard to say where the money for the waivers comes from.

"It's a little complicated," he said. "It's just money we don't collect from students. We fund the budget from the money we do collect."

The waivers policy states that 50 percent of the waivers awarded must be for financial need. The additional 25 percent of the newly-approved waivers also will go to students demonstrating need, Elliott said.

Under the policy, students receive waivers to cover the cost of registration, laboratory and course fees.

Dirt patches on campus temporary, to be replanted

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

The dug-up patches of grass on the west side of campus are part of a landscaping plan for ASU, and officials said most of those now-dusty areas will soon become green again — as soon as the grass grows.

Described as being "an irrigation oasis in the desert," ASU must change its landscaping when vegetation changes, said John Meunier, dean of the College of Architecture and Environmental Design and chairman of the Design Review Board, an advisory body to the ASU president that reviews campus construction, destruction and landscaping.

"It is a place to retreat to," Meunier said of the grassy patches. "It's an important foil to the hard ... places."

Landscaping will be part of the agenda for a Nov. 9 open meeting of the DRB. The board will discuss the development of the University campus, including future beautification and landscaping projects.

A 1986 survey by the New York-based Carnegie Foundation found that 62 percent of the students who choose a particular college do so based on the appearance of the landscaping and buildings of the campus.

"As the landscape matures we have to make changes," said Val Peterson, director of the ASU Physical Plant. "The condition of the campus is what attracts new students."

New benches with bench pads were added to Cady Mall because the land in that area was sinking and it became dangerous, Peterson said. Landscapers are adding more dirt to the areas and replanting the grass.

"Because of the flood irrigation, the area is depressed," Peterson said. "It was a dangerous situation, so it had to be recontoured. It's not a change, it's a regrading."

One of the changes taking place is changing the area directly in front of the Language and Literature Building into desert landscaping. Peterson said the grass in the area was dying because it was constantly in the shade.

"The mulberry tree in front of the building provided too much shade," he said. "Trees are nice, grass is nice, but they don't always stay the same."

"It's a living, growing kind of thing."

The Physical Plant implements landscaping projects and has an operational budget that includes the maintenance of the green spots, Peterson said.

Others at ASU said they want to see the uprooted areas green again.

Associated Students President John Fees said students and faculty must make sure the grass is replanted.

"I'm a nut when it comes to keeping green space," Fees said. "I'm always concerned."

Jennus Burton, associate vice president for business affairs, said green areas are terribly important and "provide a humanistic angle to the campus."

Democrats question Dukakis' 'liberal' move

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Michael Dukakis' "admission" that he is a liberal is being viewed by Democrats as a high-risk move by a candidate who trails nearly everywhere and has little choice but to roll the dice.

★ THE RACE FOR THE WHITE HOUSE

The Democratic presidential candidate's concession Sunday that he is a liberal "in the tradition of Franklin Roosevelt" and other presidents was a statement that some Democrats have urged Dukakis should turn into a defense of values as well as a political point of view long associated with Democratic Party successes of old.

George Bush and the Republicans moved swiftly Monday to capitalize on what they depicted as a misstep.

"After months of denying he was a liberal, Dukakis conceded that he is one," Bush campaign manager Lee Atwater said. "This is worse than a flip-flop. This is a gaffe bigger than putting himself in that tank."

Bush sarcastically said: "Miracle of miracles."

"I'm a liberal," Dukakis said in California on Sunday, "in the tradition of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman and John Kennedy."

Dukakis spokesman Mark Gearan said Dukakis is merely advancing his "I'm on your side" argument, and asserting that it is he and not Bush who is in the tradition of those popular Democratic presidents.

Dukakis' statement was one he had seemed reluctant to make when given opportunities earlier in the campaign.

In his second debate with Bush, Dukakis quipped: "If I had a dollar, George, for every time you used that label, I'd qualify for one of those tax breaks for the rich that you want to give away."

Dukakis has repeatedly asserted that such labels are meaningless and said he has conservative instincts as well. He points to his balanced budgets in Massachusetts as proof.

In his interview on ABC's "Nightline" last week, Dukakis said, "Bush is trying to misuse that label in a way which suggests that I'm somebody who doesn't have a set of values."

Dukakis' reluctance to embrace what President Reagan has taken to calling "the 'L' word" was hardly surprising. Poll after poll suggest it's no longer fashionable to call yourself liberal.

Polls consistently show only about 15 percent of the electorate accept that label to describe themselves — even though many more may take "liberal" positions on specific issues.

A CBS-New York Times poll taken Oct. 8-10 was typical. It found 17 percent saying they were liberal, 34 percent saying they

Kidnappers release videotaped message from American hostage

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem kidnappers on Monday released a videotaped message from one of their two American captives, journalist Terry Anderson, a few days after he turned 41.

The tape was delivered to a Western news agency office in Beirut along with a statement in Arabic.

"My name is Terry Anderson," the captive began his message in English. "Once again I have been given the chance to speak to my government, my family and my people.

"I love you, I miss you very much. I know of your continued strong efforts for me . . . the work and devotion of my friends and colleagues, and many people I don't know. I know I cannot repay you," said Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

Anderson was kidnapped March 16, 1985, in Beirut and is the longest-held of the 14 foreigners still missing in Lebanon and presumed captives of kidnappers. Nine of the 14 are Americans.

Islamic Jihad also holds Thomas Sutherland, an American who is acting dean of agriculture at American University. He was kidnapped on June 10, 1985.

Doomed plane's pilot says he hesitated in making decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pilot of Delta Flight 1141 told investigators he wishes he had applied full power immediately after the first sign of trouble and not 23 seconds later as his Boeing 727 was about to crash, documents revealed Monday.

The crash Aug. 31 at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport claimed 14 lives. There were 108 people aboard the jet, bound for Salt Lake City.

Seconds after liftoff, however, there was the sound of a "snap" and then the jet's control column began to shake, an advance warning that the aircraft was about to stall.

Then followed the sounds of what is believed to be five compressor stalls in the engines and the co-pilot announcing an "engine failure."

Imelda Marcos enters innocent plea on embezzlement charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos has returned to the city where she once threw lavish parties, this time to plead innocent to accusations that she helped embezzle $100 million from their homeland.

Dressed in an off-the-shoulder, full-length gown with puffy sleeves, she arrived at her arraignment Monday morning and was greeted outside the courthouse by a dozen demonstrators who chanted, "Justice, justice must prevail: send the Marcoses to jail!" As expected, she entered the innocent plea.

Defense lawyers had convinced U.S. District Judge John F. Keenan that the 71-year-old Marcos was too frail to make the trip to New York City for a court appearance.

The judge, however, ordered Mrs. Marcos, 59, to appear on the charges that she and her husband used the country's money to buy property including four New York buildings and artwork.

'59 minutes' forum will let students say their minds

By JOIE ANN LaPOLLA
Contributing Writer

Billed as more lively than "Morton Downey Jr.," a forum today called "59 minutes" will let ASU students tell University officials exactly what's on their minds.

Organized by the same group that brought media maven Jessica Hahn to campus earlier this semester, "59 minutes" starts at 4:31 p.m. today in the Business Administration Building, Room C-116.

High-ranking officials of Student Life, Associated Students, Residence Life, ASU police and the College of Business will field questions, suggestions and complaints.

"This is the one time that students can have an active voice in the school," said Business College Council Chairman Todd Samuels. "They have themselves to blame if they don't show up and then complain."

College of Business Dean John Kraft said the forum will give students the opportunity to ask questions and communicate directly with administrators.

"We will find out what students think is important, and they will find out what we think is important," Kraft said.

Council members have designed the format to resemble television talk shows like "The Oprah Winfrey Show" and "Phil Donahue." The guests will be seated on the stage while three students roam the audience for responses and questions.

"It will be just like you were in Chicago at 'Oprah,'" said Council President Richard Huxtable. "We'll have theme music, lights and an ongoing talk with the audience."

Huxtable and the business college were widely criticized for bringing Hahn to campus Sept. 1 to help recruit members for the council. Hahn has been photographed nude in Playbody magazine and was allegedly involved in a sexual tryst with former PTL head Jim Bakker.

ASU officials scheduled to make appearances on Huxtable's latest promotional effort are: Associate Dean of Student Life Art Carter, ASASU President John Fees, Associate Director of Residence Life Fred Najjar, ASU police Chief Russ Duncan, Kraft and his associate deans JoAnne Hennington and David Shrock.

Huxtable said parking, registration, rising tuition, overloaded classes and increasing enrollment problems will be among the controversial issues to be discussed and debated.

"This is the type of scenario where students can take on anything they want," Huxtable said. "There will be humor and good information. Overall, it's a well-rounded program."

In the streets

The abortion issue heats up with 'Operation Rescue'

Darrin Hostetler
Columnist

Things are getting a little hot out there.

You could hear the marching feet this past weekend, as thousands of anti-abortion activists hit the streets nationwide to protest what they term "legalized, state-sanctioned murder."

But "Operation Rescue," a national pro-life/stop-abortion movement that climaxed last week, was more than just a protest.

It was yet another indicator of the rising conflict surrounding the abortion issue — a conflict that may yet escalate into a national battle reminiscent of nothing less than a civil war.

No issue since the civil rights movement of the 1950s and '60s has divided the union so completely. And at no time since 1973, when the U.S. Supreme Court declared abortion legal in Roe v. Wade, has an issue threatened to ignite the bitter debate that is in the offing today.

Initially, it would be tempting to dismiss Operation Rescue as just another one of the periodic eruptions from the pro-life volcano — a few anti-abortionists spurt out some smoke and lava every few months, cause some problems for the police and make things messy at a few abortion clinics, but nothing substantive ever comes of it.

This time around, however, the anti-abortion forces produced a Mount St. Helens-style performance by bringing out serious numbers of people — many of whom were willing to go to jail to protest what one called "baby butchery."

Participants in Operation Rescue formed human walls around abortion clinics Friday and Saturday to prevent anyone from going in or out, an action that prompted the arrest of more than 2,200 people in 26 cities across the country — including 85 Phoenicians who were booked by local cops for tightly grouping themselves three-deep around Valley abortion facilities.

Since July, more than 7,000 pro-life sympathizers have been arrested nationwide for similar actions.

That's more than just a little disturbance and aggravation for the local constabulary.

That's a movement with a growing awareness of the winds of change in the air.

Supreme Court Justice William Brennan told an audience a few months ago at the University of South Carolina that he felt Roe v. Wade was going to be overturned — thus returning the determination of abortion legality to the states — during this term of the court.

Acknowledging several abortion cases currently at the state supreme court level and "in the pipe" for the Washington high court, Brennan — a staunch pro-choice advocate — lamented that "the votes are there (to overturn); count them yourself."

It is true that the Reagan court appointments have nudged the court to the right, and it may be that a 5-4 vote to toss the very hot abortion problem back into the laps of the 50 states could occur as soon as this winter.

Or maybe he was trying to get out the pro-choice vote for the Democratic nominee, who would undoubtedly appoint more liberal justices.

But whether or not Roe v. Wade is reversed this term, a victory by George Bush on Nov. 8 practically assures that it will go down eventually.

To put it indelicately, several liberal members of the court — notably Thurgood Marshall and Brennan — are on life support pending the outcome of the presidential election. They are hoping to be replaced by Mike Dukakis appointments. But their age and failing health dictates that they can't wait out another four years if the Duke loses — and he probably will.

Thus, Bush appointments will probably take their places on the High Court. And they will in turn boot Roe v. Wade out the door . . .

. . . and under the copper dome into the Arizona legislature.

Like it or not, we live in one of the most conservative states in the union. You can bet that within hours of a Supreme Court anti-abortion decision, Rep. Jim Skelly will be on the floor of the state House of Representatives introducing a bill that would make abortion illegal in Arizona.

The bill is already written, and when Skelly introduced it last session it failed by only one vote — because some House members didn't want to challenge the Supreme Court.

But without the barrier of Roe v. Wade, the bill will pass — by a substantial margin.

The same process will occur in Florida, Utah and a half dozen other conservative states within days.

And what happens after that is anyone's guess.

But you can be sure that the streets will be filled again, and with more angry bodies that were out this weekend.

I don't agree with the politics or the methods of all the Operation Rescue supporters. Most of them seem to be right-wing fundamentalists and crazies, seething with hatred as they condemn abortionists to an eternity of fiery damnation.

But I do agree that abortion is wrong.

My arguments — both scientific and philosophic — behind the belief that abortion is simply murder have been explicated in detail in this space over the past few semesters, so there is no reason to go over it again.

But while I look forward to the coming day when legal, state subsidized abortion is ended, there is reason to be cautious as events unfold. The matter can no longer be discussed purely in the hypothetical, with hate or vindictiveness. It is probable that the day is coming soon.

And look out when it does.

One unidentified abortion clinic worker was quoted Saturday as saying: "(The pro-life faction) is pushing us. Eventually we will just have to go out there and deal with them physically (if protests continue)."

As passionate as the pro-life supporters have been, the pro-abortion camp may show them a thing or two about protesting if abortion is declared against the law. They certainly will not roll over and disappear.

And the result, if we're all not careful, might be the very things that the pro-lifers say they desperately want to prevent any more of.

Violence and bloodshed.

John Salvatore, the director of Phoenix Operation Rescue, will be speaking and fielding questions at 12:30 p.m. today in the MU Cochise Room. The event is sponsored by the Associated Students Political Union.

Students bled for administrative folly

Editor:

The presidents of Arizona's three universities just approved an increase in the tuition rate — to over $1,400 per year for in-state students. This comes as some university officials are pushing for mandatory health insurance for students, claiming that they are concerned that we may be unable to continue school work upon being injured or becoming ill. Other proposals, such as charging $5 per visit to the health center, also seek to relieve students of their money.

Making a college education more and more expensive with annual tuition increases and other charges would not be so bad if any of the student population had more to show for it. Will the additional fees mean more sections of overloaded classes? No. Will there be more student services? No. More advisers? No. Higher salaries for professors so Arizona universities can lure the best faculty nationwide? No. Unwarranted raises for the presidents themselves? Yes.

If the benefits reaped from last year's increase are doubled by this one, we can no doubt look forward to twice as much of nothing.

A study conducted by an ASU graduate student found that very few students had to quit school because of an uninsured illness. How many will be forced out because of new "revenue enhancement" strategies? Too many.

Let's tell the regents and other Arizona boards to stop approving inordinate tuition hikes before none of us can afford the education we deserve.

Hostetler makes 'ass' out of self

Editor:

I'm writing in regards to Darrin Hostetler's article in the Oct. 25 State Press regarding "bigots" lurking among campus Bush supporters. In his article, I was greatly misinterpreted, and now would like to make my statement more clear.

My comment concerning Michigan and its "two sides" was in no way a racial statement. Not taking into account the lack of knowledge (or interest) of most people regarding Michigan and its distinct areas of party affiliation, my statement appears to present the idea that one side of Michigan is "non-minority" and the other distinctly minority. That is not the case. The term WASP, used for labeling purposes in many political science textbooks, is used as a generalization for a group most affiliated with the Republican Party. I am a white Anglo-Saxon Protestant (WASP) of Dutch origin and my use of this term was to categorize myself as a Republican. My thoughts, expressed out of context, were meant to explain two distinct areas of party domination — Republican and Democratic. In eastern Michigan, four counties of the 83 in Michigan are distinctly Democratic and are the deciding factor in most state elections. Yes, there is a large minority population as in most large cities, but the presence of unions, specifically the UAW-CIO, strengthens the Democratic stronghold in this area.

In contrast, western and central Michigan is comprised mostly of farmland and small rural communities. Its citizens are predominately of German, Dutch and British ancestry and are primarily Protestant . . . White Anglo-Saxon Protestants.

I am offended by Mr. Hostetler's assertion that I am a bigot. I advise that in the future Mr. Hostetler ask first before making incorrect assumptions. You know what they say about assuming — it makes and ass out of u and me!

Mudslinging

Democratic ticket fails to deal with GOP propaganda

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says he's fed up with the nasty Republican mudslinging and negative campaigning.

In an angry outburst this week, Bentsen said:

"What has happened, almost without notice, is an utterly vicious onslaught of distortion and character assassination.

"They don't seem to mind if what they are saying is untrue. They don't seem to worry if it's misleading.

"They don't seem to care that what they do is downright mean. If it sounds good, say it. If it sells, package it. If it looks good, nominate it.

"We've been a little too flabbergasted sometimes to make a proper response. But I don't think we ever imagined that George Bush and the Republicans would be so willing to debase that precious current of democracy."

Bentsen is correct. The Republicans have, at times, been showing sharp fangs.

For example, I have a slick pamphlet on my desk that is being mass-mailed to voters in Illinois by the Illinois Republican State Central Committee.

In big black type, it says:
"ALL THE MURDERERS AND RAPISTS AND DRUG PUSHERS AND CHILD MOLESTERS IN MASSACHUSETTS VOTE FOR MICHAEL DUKAKIS."

"WE IN ILLINOIS CAN VOTE AGAINST HIM."

And a little farther down it says:
"DUKAKIS GETS THE VOTE OF ALL THE CONVICTS IN MASSACHUSETTS' PRISONS."

The pamphlet says that if mass-murderer John Gacy, a Chicagoan, was in Boston, Dukakis would probably let him roam the streets on weekends.

It referred to the now-famous case of Willie Horton, a convicted killer who committed a rape while on weekend furlough in Massachusetts.

Thanks to the Republicans, this has become one of the most notorious rapes in history. Before this campaign is over, many Americans will believe that Dukakis himself did the dirty deed.

And, I'm sure, this is what Bentsen is Illinois Republicans have a sense of what grabs votes.

And Willie Horton, the rapist, is probably good for 1 percent or 2 percent of the lead that Bush has over Dukakis in the polls.

The silly flaps over the Pledge of Allegiance and the ACLU — which are also mentioned — are good for another point or two.

It might make Bentsen feel good to be indignant. But right or wrong, the Republicans know which emotional buttons to push. And they've been pushing them.

They know that just the mention of a Willie Horton (ah, such a convenient black-sounding name) is enough to send white ethnic urban dwellers to trembling.

Sure, the pamphlet is misleading. How do Illinois Republicans know how "murderers and rapists and drug pushers and child Horton crawl through your window," than Dukakis will get by droning on about how his ma and pa came here from the Old Country on a leaky boat.

Bentsen's problem isn't that the Republicans are kicking them in the shins. It's that the Democrats don't know how to respond with a knee in the groin.

While Republicans have been gouging their eyes, Democrats have been thumbing through the Marquis of Queensberry Rules.

The moment Republicans mentioned Willie Horton, the Democrats should have zapped back with California having a prison-furlough program when Ronald Reagan was governor. And how Reagan's furloughed convicts went beyond rape. They did at least two murders.

But what did they do? Dukakis grinned and played the good sport. The emergency rooms are filled with good sports. The muggers are counting their money.

When the Republicans mentioned Willie Horton, the Democrats should have jogged Bush's memory. Hey, Georgie Boy, didn't you help found and sponsor a Texas halfway house? And didn't one of your halfway lads celebrate his freedom by raping and murdering a minister's wife?

Is that fair to Bush and Reagan? Of course not. Almost every state has a furlough program and halfway houses. Most work well, but all have failures. But if you are going to knee groins, you don't think fair. Bush doesn't. Illinois Republicans don't. Why should Dukakis and Bentsen?

Despite Bentsen's bleatings, if the Republicans win, they deserve it.

They found the Dark Side of America. And while they may be preppies, Bush and Quayle weren't afraid of the dark.

'The Republicans know Bush will get a bigger share . . . by saying, "Boo! Dukakis will let big, black Willie Horton crawl through your window," than Dukakis will get by droning on about how his ma and pa came here from the Old Country on a leaky boat.'

talking about. We're well into the nuclear age, global chaos makes us dizzy and domestic problems are piling up.

But the Republicans are hammering Dukakis because a creep named Willie Horton committed a rape while on weekend furlough.

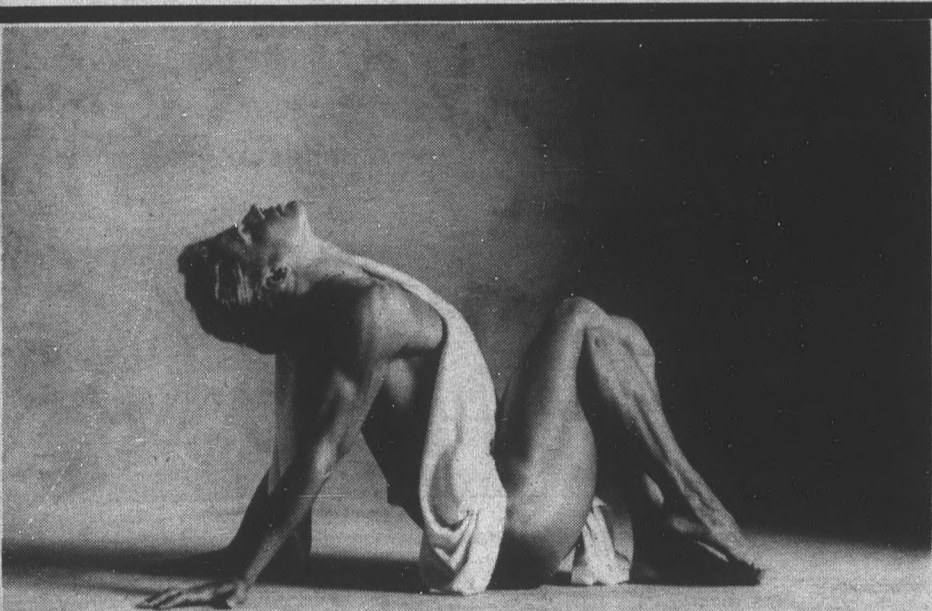

What probably bothers Bentsen most, though, is that it's working. It's effective.

molesters in Massachusetts" vote? Do they hang around dark alleys with them?

But the pitch works. Every presidential election begins with 40 percent on this side, 40 percent on that side, and the fight is for the 20 percent in the middle.

The Republicans know Bush will get a bigger share of that 20 percent by saying, "Boo! Dukakis will let big, black Willie

New program allows ASU students to study in Italy

By ROBIE KAKONGE
State Press

A new University program will allow students to study in Siena, Italy, during spring semester 1989 and earn 21 credit hours.

ASU Italian professor Ted Cachey, who will be the director-in-residence in Italy, said the program is receiving lots of interest.

"We've had summer programs in Florence for the last seven years, but this program will allow for students to experience a different part of Italy," he said.

Cachey said the program will allow ASU students to mix and meet with their European peers, since Siena is a university city.

"There are lots of Italian students and other students from all over Europe, so students will also have a chance to experience other cultures," he said.

The ASU program, which is being coordinated in cooperation with the Scuola di Lingua e Cultura Italiana per Stranieri, will allow 15 students to live and study in medieval Siena from Jan. 10 to June 20.

Cachey said the 18 to 21 credit hours offered include courses in Italian language and culture. No previous experience is required.

The fee for the program, which includes tuition and housing, is $4,100. Students pay for transportation, meals, insurance, books, supplies, personal expenses and independent travel. Some may apply for financial aid.

Application deadline for the program is Nov. 15.

Federal judge blocks state law banning network exit polling

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A federal judge Monday blocked a state law that would have banned the three major television networks from conducting exit polls just outside voting places to predict winners on election night.

U.S. District Judge David Doty, saying the law is likely to be found unconstitutional, issued a preliminary injunction against its enforcement.

The 1984 law prohibits voters from being asked how they voted within 100 feet of the polling place. Nearly half the states have some limits on exit polling, in part because of fears that voter turnout will be hampered by early predictions of results.

The networks targeted Minnesota along with six other states where they successfully challenged restrictions they considered so stringent they would effectively ban exit polls.

Floyd Abrams, a New York lawyer representing CBS, ABC and NBC, had argued that the Minnesota law violates free speech and would prevent family members from asking each other how they voted if they were within the zoned area.

"We're delighted," Abrams said of Doty's ruling. "It's a First Amendment right that the public have that information.

"If the voter doesn't want to answer questions he doesn't have to, but if th voter is willing to answer the questions, he should be able to be a part of the process."

Doty said that one of the principal concerns of the First Amendment is the free discussion of governmental affairs. He also said the First Amendment protects the news media's right to gather information.

"Thus, exit polling, which involves gathering and disseminating information on governmental affairs, is protected by the free speech clause of the First Amendment," Doty wrote.

The state had argued that the law was passed to preserve the sanctity of the polling place, to prevent harassment of voters, to prevent congestion and confusion around the polling place, and to encourage voter participation.

Doty said legislators who wrote the law were primarily concerned with "alleviating the threat that people might be discouraged from voting if a projection indicates that a particular outcome of an election is almost a certainty."

"Such a purpose is not a sufficient basis for restricting otherwise constitutionally protected speech," Doty wrote.

'Vampire' beats clerk with wooden stake, robs mart

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

Tempe police are looking for a man who was dressed as a vampire when he beat a convenience store clerk over the head with a wooden stake and robbed the store of cash.

The treacherous trick-or-treater entered the Circle K store at 729 E. Broadway Road at about 1:55 a.m. Sunday and asked for change, police said.

Police said the suspect went around the counter and hit the clerk over the head four times with a wooden stake as the clerk opened the register. He grabbed an undetermined amount of cash and fled east from the store on Broadway Road in a black Ford Ranger.

The suspect is described as Caucasian, 25 years old, 6 feet 2 inches tall and 175 pounds.

police report

Police also reported the following incidents:

•An 18-year-old Tempe woman was robbed of her purse Sunday night while she was walking near Tempe High School, 1900 S. Mill Ave.

The suspect ran up from behind the woman at about 7:45 p.m. and bolted off with the purse after a brief struggle. The purse contained about $50.

•Someone discharged a fire extinguisher in the the stairwell of the fifth floor of the Cholla Apartment Complex D-Wing. Damage is $50.

•An ASU student was arrested Sunday for driving with a suspended license at Tyler Street and Rural Road. He was cited and released.

•Someone stole a men's blue Huffy 10-speed bicycle from the southeast corner of Mariposa Hall sometime late Saturday or Sunday morning. Loss is $80.

•Someone stole a purple Fuji 10-speed bicycle from the bicycle racks at Hayden Hall sometime between Friday and Sunday afternoons. Loss is $250.

•A man unaffiliated with ASU was questioned Sunday after he was seen walking through the Farmer Education Building without a shirt. He was warned about trespassing and told to leave campus.

Campaign

were conservative, and 43 percent identifying themselves as moderate.

Also telling was a Louis Harris poll taken Oct. 14-17, in which 49 percent of those surveyed agreed with the statement that Dukakis is "too liberal to get my vote." That's a big chunk of the vote to give away.

President Reagan, whose eight years have seen a growth in voter identification with conservatives, has been hammering Dukakis with the liberal cudgel. In three speeches in Ohio one day recently, he used the word 50 times.

"From top to bottom, the election this year is a referendum on liberalism," the president said, confident who would win if the contest were so clearly drawn.

The Republicans have used a handful of assertions to associate Dukakis and liberalism with a negative connotation. They have asserted he is weak on defense, permissive toward crime, likely to raise taxes.

"George Bush succeeded in defining what a liberal is, in the most unflattering light possible," said Mark Mellman, a pollster for Democratic candidates. "Unfortunately to a lot of people right now to be a liberal means to be in favor of furloughs and in favor of higher taxes and so on.

"Those of us who call ourselves liberals, I think, would suggest that has nothing whatever to do with being a liberal and that's very much a distortion of what that ideological perspective is all about," Mellman added.

Dukakis on Sunday defined it differently. He said his liberalism means "standing up for average Americans" while also balancing budgets.

As a three-term governor of Massachusetts, Dukakis in fact was not known as a liberal. He was a moderate and a reformer in a state with a long liberal tradition. Liberals there assailed him for not doing enough on welfare, social services and the homeless.

Former House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., former leader of liberal Democratic politics, last month disputed Bush's charge that Dukakis was liberal. "Absolutely not," O'Neill said. "He's progressive."

But Massachusetts politics is not the standard for politics elsewhere, and even Massachusetts liberals acknowledge that.

"Being a centrist in Massachusetts makes him a liberal in general," said Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., who often opposed Dukakis from the left in their own state.

Customs service seizes $61.5 million in cocaine, marijuana

TUCSON (AP) — Cocaine and marijuana valued at about $61.5 million has been seized, and three men arrested, on the Tohono O'odham Reservation west of Tucson, in what authorities say reflects a changing drug-trafficking pipeline.

U.S. Customs Service officials announced the weekend seizures Monday, involving 671 pounds of cocaine and 681 pounds of marijuana.

"This is the first large cocaine seizure ever out there in Sells," said E.K. Vaubel, Customs assistant special agent in charge in Tucson. "and it sends a message to us that the pipeline has now shifted and the conduit is coming through there."

Customs patrol agents, acting on a tip, stopped a four-door auto heading east on Arizona 86 about 6:30 p.m. Saturday near Three Points, about 25 miles west of Tucson. Vaubel said.

In the trunk and on the floor of the back seat they discovered eight duffel bags containing 600 pounds of cocaine, wrapped tightly in bundles with surgical-type gauze, he said.

Vaubel said William C. Johnson, 28, and Gordon Lopez, 27, were arrested and a .38-caliber revolver seized, and agents developed leads that resulted in an all-points bulletin for Stanley Salazar, 40, of Sells.

Tohono O'odham police arrested Salazar about 11:30 p.m. Saturday near Sells. Vaubel said Salazar's auto, a .22-caliber rifle and ammunition were seized, and the next day Customs officials found 71 pounds of cocaine and 681 pounds of marijuana, and a .357 magnum revolver, in searching a mobile home two miles west of Sells, believed to be Salazar's residence, he added.

In Houston, Customs spokeswoman Judy Turner said authorities estimated that the cocaine was worth $60,926,800 and the marijuana had a street value of $612,900.

Vaubel said the three men were charged in a federal complaint with possession, possession with intent to distribute and conspiracy, and were held at the Federal Correctional Center in Tucson pending arraignment.

"I think that in any of these kinds of cases, there are a multitude of people involved," Vaubel said. He added that officials are "attempting to go as far as we can."

"I do not believe it was solely a smuggling venture on the part of the three," he said.

Home sweet home?

Devils find success on road but happy to return to ASU

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

The ASU football team may have gained some credibility during a successful 2-1 road trip, but head coach Larry Marmie said he is looking forward to playing Saturday at Sun Devil Stadium against the Oregon State Beavers.

"We're excited to be back home," Marmie said. "I think our fans, for the most part, always respond well for the Sun Devils. Hopefully they'll be glad to see us back."

"For the second week in a row we were able to go on the road and win against a good football team."

ASU cornerback Eric Crawford was named the Pac-10 Defensive Player of the Week. It was the second week in a row that a Sun Devil earned Player of the Week honors.

With the Sun Devils leading 21-14 over Oregon in the third quarter Saturday, Crawford recovered a Latin Berry fumble at the ASU 21 yard line to stop the Oregon drive. He also had six tackles and three pass breakups on the day.

"Certainly the turnover factor was the key to the ballgame," Marmie said.

ASU blocked an Oregon field goal attempt, sacked quarterback Bill Musgrave twice, intercepted three times and recovered four fumbles in the 21-20 victory.

However, two Sun Devil starters were injured during the game and both may be out for the season. Fullback Kirk Wendorf suffered a broken left tibia and definitely will not return. Depending on the severity of knee damage suffered Saturday, right cornerback Lawrence Hubley may also miss the remainder of the season.

Either Crawford, a sophomore, or senior Jeff Joseph will start at cornerback in place of Hubley against the Beavers.

Freshman Kelvin Fisher, who has been productive for the Sun Devils at fullback, will start Saturday in place of Wendorf.

Although Fisher (5-foot-11, 188 pounds), does not possess the size of most fullbacks, Marmie said he has the desire to make an impact for the team.

"There's a physical aspect there that sometimes presents a problem, but he's also been very willing and very aggressive," Marmie said.

Freshman Keith Bowen, the No. 2 fullback, has gained 20 yards on three attempts in two games this season. Despite his youth and inexperience, Marmie said he will have to be ready to perform.

A beneficial factor for ASU is that the offensive line has been the most physical in recent weeks against opponents than it has been all year, Marmie said. Because of this and the emergence of tailback Bruce Perkins, he said the running game also has been more productive.

"It was encouraging to be able to rush the ball with some degree of success, particularly in the first half," Marmie said. "I was a little bit disappointed that we weren't able to take it in the latter part of the ball game and get a couple first downs and put the game out of reach."

With ASU leading by one point in the final four minutes, the Sun Devils had possession twice but punted after three downs on both occasions.

"I don't think there's any question that Bruce ran the football with more authority," Marmie said. "There were a couple times when he turned it up inside and broke some tackles and ran over some people the way that we think he should and could."

Although punter Mike Schuh did not kick the ball his usual 45 to 50 yards on each attempt, Marmie said he did place it inside the 20-yard line on two occasions.

Kicker Alan Zendejas missed a 44-yard field goal attempt but was effective in minimizing long kickoff returns, Marmie said.

Eric Crawford

"We wanted to change our kickoffs up against Oregon," he said. "They were second in the country in kickoff returns — that's why we squib-kicked a couple, kicked across the field and kicked straight down the field."

Coach, former Sun Devil find success, wild times 'Down Under'

By CHRIS NACKING
State Press

When men's head swimming coach Ron Johnson and former ASU swimmer Sam Jones went to Brisbane, Australia, to compete in the World Master's Swimming Championship, they brought back wild tales and some heavy medals.

For his work in the Oct. 10 to 15 competition, Jones won three gold medals while Johnson left the land Down Under with one gold and three silver medals. Both also won bronze medals in two relay events.

"It is great to see so many people interested in this sport because in swimming you can't really go to another level," Jones said. "This was competitive, but it still managed to be fun."

Jones competed in the 25 to 29 age division and left the event with gold medals in the 50-meter freestyle, 100-meter freestyle and 50-meter backstroke.

Coach Johnson, competing in the 55 to 59 age group, left with four medals: a gold in the 50-meter butterfly, and three silver medals in the 50-meter backstroke, 50-meter freestyle, and 100-meter butterfly.

"The uniqueness of the event is the mix of people who love the sport," Jones said. "We were able to meet a lot of people and establish a lot of friendships around the world."

The competition featured more than 3,700 athletes from 25 countries.

The event is held every two years and participants range from former Olympic gold medalists to men and women who enter and compete just for fun.

"The nice thing about the event is there is a really good feeling about competition — everyone there is mature enough to handle their wins and losses," Johnson said. "Some are just there for fitness, but whatever they do they are there to have fun."

Johnson said the competition helped him to better understand his athletes.

"Swimming is hard, both mentally and physically," he said. "With me being involved, it helps me see what they are going through and also be more sympathetic towards training."

Jones competed at ASU from 1976 to 1980. His achievements include the 1980 Pac-10 championship in the 100-meter freestyle and a first-place finish the same year as a member of the 400-meter relay team.

Both Johnson and Jones won bronze medals in the 200-meter freestyle relay and the 200-individual medley relay.

Although Jones has been out of competition for several years, he stayed fit by participating in other activities.

"I just started training this past summer but I was only able to spend about 20 percent of the time I used to spend while I was at ASU," he said. "But I have kept in shape through different sports."

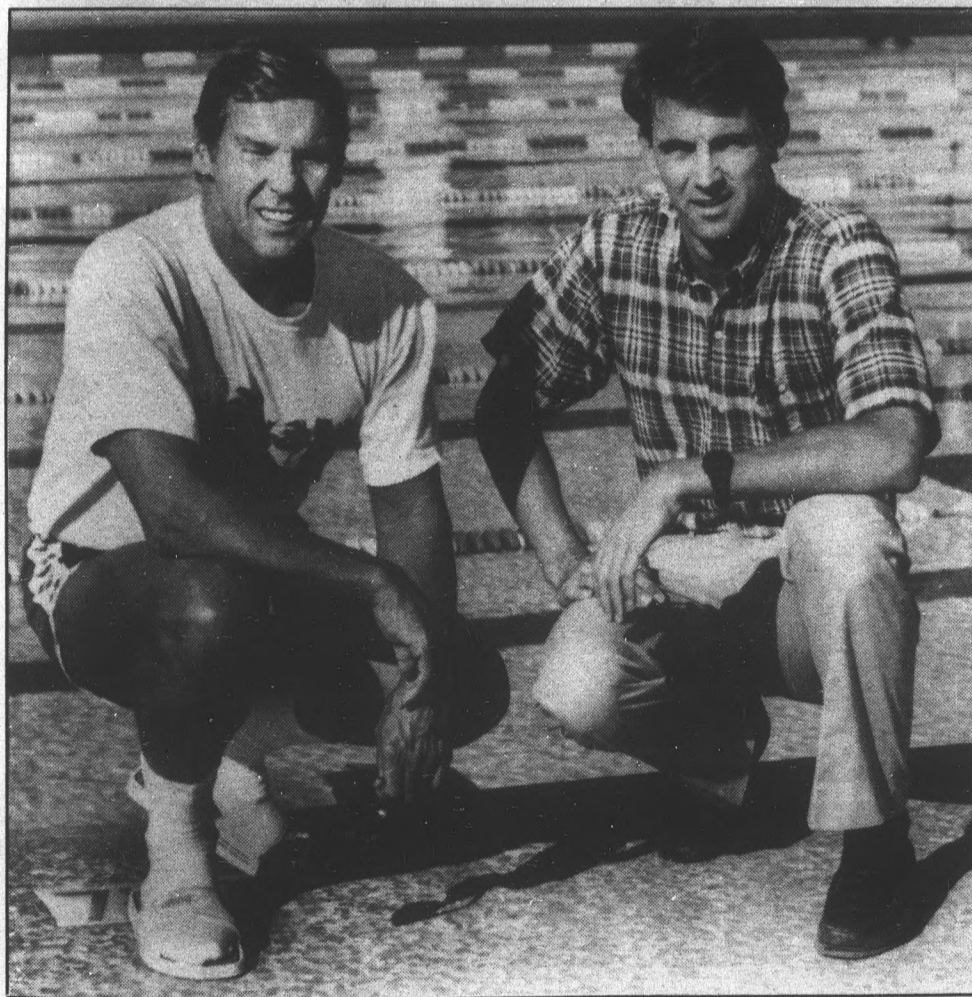

Jones also had the opportunity to offer advice to his former coach.

"I had to coach him sometimes because it is hard to know what you are doing wrong when you're in the water," Jones said. "It is kind of like a doctor operating on himself."

However, Johnson said the small bit of advice that Jones offered turned out to be more useful than expected.

"He helped me the last day before the competition," Johnson said. "I'm usually the guy who does most of the coaching, but he made some great observations and I feel that they helped me to win."

Golf team rebounds for 4th place finish

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

Few celebrations are held for a fourth-place finish, but ASU's women's golf team should be in a holiday mood after last weekend's work.

The Sun Devils rebounded with a vengeance after a poor first day, shooting a near course record in the final round Sunday, and tied for fourth at the Stanford Invitational Tournament in Stanford, Calif.

Twenty-one teams made for daily rounds lasting up to six hours on the par-73 course. ASU shot 314 and was in 10th place at the end of the first round Friday.

"It was difficult to get used to the conditions," ASU coach Linda Vollstedt said. "It was real slow play and the girls just didn't play well."

"You can't keep a good pace when you're always waiting on every shot."

The Sun Devils made both physical and mental adjustments, and shot a better second round (303), but were unable to move up in the standings.

Going into the final day, Vollstedt said the team had set a goal to break 300, which meant everyone would have to shoot 75 or better.

Everyone shot their best rounds, and the Devils came away with the low score of the tournament. Shooting 289, they also came within one stroke of matching the course record, 288.

"It was just an awesome round," Vollstedt said. "It was one of those coach's dreams — I mean just a great round of golf."

The National Championships will be held on the Stanford course in May, so the importance of putting together a strong round went beyond this particular tournament.

"It boosted everybody's confidence," Vollstedt said. "Now they know that they can play that golf course, and that's one of the things we wanted to accomplish. Now they know what they can do."

"They left feeling good about the golf course and good

Cross Country teams falter; Barrios 4th at Pac-10 meet

State Press reports

A fourth-place finish by Teresa Barrios highlighted the Sun Devils' cross country performances in the Pac-10 Conference Championships Monday at Stanford.

"She ran great — she finished fourth, 15 seconds behind the winner," Coach Ken Lehman said.

The women's and men's teams finished eighth and ninth, respectively, in the championships.

"I was a little disappointed in the women," Lehman said. "I thought we could place better."

Because of youth and inexperience on the squad, the results could be expected in a big meet such as the conference championship, he said.

Lehman said he was happy with the performance of Sun Devil Mike Frick, who led the men's team with a 39th-place finish in the competition.

"They all went out and tried — that's what counts," Lehman said.

about themselves. That's always one of our goals."

Senior Heather Hodur said she felt the last round of the invitational will definitely pay dividends when the Devils return for the Championships in May. They will be more familiar with the course, she said, and they now know the course record is within reach.

"We have something to shoot for when we go back," Hodur said.

Hodur added that the final round was satisfying, but would have been more so under slightly different circumstances.

"It was exciting because we really played well," Hodur said. "But I think it would have been better if we had been in fourth place to begin with and then shot a round like that to win it. But we definitely walked away with a positive feeling."

Although Jones has been out of the collegiate swimming circle for more than eight years, he said the best advice he could offer to athletes would be a warning about the uncertainty of sports.

"When I was at ASU we always stressed education," Jones, who has a master's from ASU, said. "Swimming is not like the other sports where you can hope to turn professional. Hopefully, athletes will realize that they may not be doing this for the rest of their lives."

Notre Dame No. 1 for 1st time since 1981

By The Associated Press

For the first time since early in the 1981 season, the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame are on top of the college football world.

And since Monday's Associated Press poll finds Southern California right behind Notre Dame, it sets up what would be the 24th meeting between No. 1 and No. 2 when they meet on Nov. 26 in the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Before that can happen, however, Notre Dame, 8-0, must defeat Rice on Saturday and Penn State on Nov. 19 while Southern Cal, 7-0, has to beat California, ASU and UCLA, the former No. 1 team, which slipped to sixth in the wake of Saturday's 34-30 upset at the hands of Washington State.

Notre Dame, a 22-7 winner over Navy, received 44 of 58 first-place votes and 1,144 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and sportscasters. The Irish had been second behind UCLA the last two weeks. Southern Cal, a 41-20 winner over Oregon State, received 11 first-place votes and 1,097 points in climbing from third place to second.

Since the AP poll began in 1936, Notre Dame has won seven national championships, more than any other school. But the Irish haven't won a national championship since 1977 and were last ranked No. 1 after opening the 1981 season and the Gerry Faust era with a 27-9 victory over LSU. Notre Dame lost to Michigan 25-7 the following week and hasn't been higher than fourth until beating Miami two weeks ago.

Notre Dame became the fourth team to be ranked No. 1 this season. Florida State was No. 1 in the preseason poll but lost its opener to Miami 31-0. Miami became No. 1 for six weeks before losing at Notre Dame 31-30. That made UCLA No. 1 for two weeks.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz was something less than ecstatic to learn his team was No. 1, although he probably suspected as much after UCLA lost.

"Being number one wasn't very good luck for Florida State, Miami or UCLA," he said. "I'm worried about beating (winless) Rice, and that's the truth. Every week in this crazy game you'd better be ready to play."

"I think the poll is great and it creates a tremendous amount of interest, but I only pay attention to the last one. I'd rather be number one on Jan. 2, but I'm glad we weren't number one on Sept. 1."

Following the sluggish victory over Navy, Holtz said Notre Dame was "not a really good football team right now."

"This team has done an incredible job this year but it's like building a house — it looks good and it hasn't fallen down yet, but it hasn't had a big storm yet, either."

Although the Top Ten in this week's poll are the same 10 teams as last week, there was considerable shuffling.

Miami's defending national champions moved from fourth place to third with one first-place vote and 1,041 points following a 31-7 triumph over East Carolina.

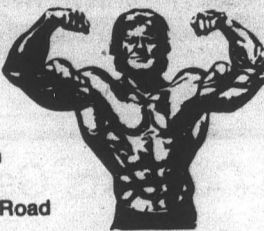

West Virginia leaped from seventh to fourth by routing Penn State 51-30. The Mountaineers, 8-0 for the first time in their 97-year football history, received the other two first-place votes and 950 points. West Virginia was as high as No. 4 twice during the 1983 season.

Florida State was idle but rose from sixth to fifth with 886 points, followed by UCLA with 847 points. Nebraska dropped from fifth to seventh with 835 points after struggling past Missouri 26-18.

The rest of the Top Ten remained the same.

ARTIST WORKSHOP with Wilfred Stedman, MD. Anatomy for the Artist, December 5-9, 1988. It is a thoroughly modern approach to learning the essentials of classic anatomy. A fascinating experience for the beginning artist as well as the experienced professional. Special attention is given to details of the anatomy of the eye, ear, head, and neck, as well as the problem areas such as the back of the shoulder, spine, and hand. Balance, proportion, age changes, and structural differences between the sexes are included. Sketches may be in pencil, pastel, acrylics, or plastine clay, according to the student's preference. Doctor Stedman is a gifted teacher as well as a full-time figure sculptor. His knowledge of anatomy is the result of his medical studies combined with years of experience as an orthopedic surgeon. Open enrollment, no prerequisites. For further information call Scottsdale Artists school, 990-1422.

ARTIST WORKSHOP with Joseph Sheppard, Oil Painting: Still Life, December 5-9, 1988. In his book, Bringing Textures to Life, Joseph Sheppard states the important thing is not your finished picture, but the knowledge and experience you gain from working through the techniques, and the same approach will govern this class. The specific technique to be taught is known as the Maroger technique, which is named after the great M. Jacques Maroger under whom Sheppard studied. Open enrollment, no prerequisites. For further information call Scottsdale Artists School, 990-1422.
