Officers from the Arizona Department of Public Safety investigate a roll-over accident involving a truck Monday on the Superstition Freeway near Price Road. Officials said the truck crashed into a concrete embankment after a rear tire blew out. There were no injuries, although the accident backed up east-bound traffic for about a mile.

Officials: Budget cuts hurting state schools

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

Some state lawmakers and members of the Arizona Board of Regents say a budget-cut proposal by Gov. Rose Mofford is a continuing trend to take from the universities when the state is hurting for money.

"It is not a negotiable proposition," said Jenny Norton, R-Tempe. "Our educational facilities deserve no cuts."

The proposal, released by the governor Thursday, calls for cutting $15 million from state spending, with $7 million coming from the universities' coffers.

Mofford developed the proposal to offset the projected year-end state budget deficit of more than $60 million.

Under the proposal, ASU's budget would be cut $2.5 million. NAU would lose $923,500 from its budget and UofA more than $3.4 million. The UofA would suffer more cuts because of cuts at its medical school.

But Vada Manager, Mofford's spokesman, said the universities are receiving fewer cuts than other large state institutions.

'I recognize that the governor has a very tough job to do. But I'm very concerned that such a large proportion is coming from the universities.'
— Pat McWhortor

"Most of the cuts range at about 2 percent of the appropriations," he said. He added that ASU would be taking cuts that are only 1.5 percent of appropriations.

Student Regent Pat McWhortor said ASU will be hurt by the cuts.

"This is particularly harmful to ASU," he said, adding that the 1.5 percent budget cut is like a 3 percent cut because half of the school year has passed.

ASU also will have a shortfall in tuition revenues because of the $84 tuition increase approved by the regents for the 1989-90 fiscal year, McWhortor said.

The Council of Presidents had recommended a $156 tuition increase, but the regents approved the smaller figure.

Regent President Herman Chanen said the board has not taken a position on the budget issue, but members are concerned about the possible cuts.

"We are concerned that we have had these cuts before," he said. But Chanen said the board wants to help the governor and the Legislature with the state's fiscal problems.

"We understand the fiscal problems of the state," he said. "We want to be as cooperative as we can."

Allan Price, the regents' associate director for public affairs, said budgets at the universities continue to be cut.

"This is the third time in three years and the fifth time in the '80s' that the universities have been cut, he said. Price said that details of the cuts' impact on the universities need to be assessed.

"If the cuts were to happen, we don't know in what form they would take," he said. He added that university spending cuts usually result in needed positions and equipment not being supplied.

McWhortor said he recognizes that Gov. Mofford must make cuts, but is concerned about the amount coming from the universities.

"I recognize that the governor has a very tough job to do," he said. "But I'm very concerned that such a large proportion is coming from the universities. Wherever it comes from, it will affect operations."

ASU police bugged by termites

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

These days ASU police are fighting more than just crime. They're battling termites.

The pesky critters have been bugging employees since before November when workers cut out portions of the ceiling and walls in the north wing of the ASU Department of Public Safety Complex. The two-story building houses the University Computing Services in addition to the police radio room and records division.

It also houses the police chief's office. "I have a panel out above my desk," said Acting Police Chief Doug Bartosh.

"It's kind of like a skylight," he added jokingly.

Physical Plant workers cut out the portions of the ceiling and walls so a structural engineer could determine the Officer denies threats made against Running

By MICHAEL VAN DYKE

PHOENIX — An ASU police officer testified Monday that campus police never recorded any death threats against former Sigma Alpha Epsilon pledge Greg Running.

Sgt. Keith Bailly also told jurors that no threats were made against Running in the presence of ASU police who were investigating the break-in and vandalism of Running's room at the fraternity house. Bailly was the investigating officer on the case.

Running testified Thursday that police heard a fellow fraternity member yell a threat and recorded the statement as a death threat in the Feb. 17, 1986, incident.

Jurors were hearing the fourth day of testimony in Running's lawsuit against the national chapter of SAE. He filed the suit in February 1987, claiming he was the victim of hazing in the fall of 1985 and later harassed by his fraternity brothers in the spring of 1986.

Bailly told jurors that he reported to the SAE house at 11:15 p.m. on Feb. 17, 1986, to investigate a reported break-in at room 218, Running's room at the fraternity.

Bailly said Running told him that someone had entered his room while he was gone for the weekend.

Bailly testified that he found a dead rat glued to the sheets of Running's bed and that empty food containers were scattered on top of a computer desk in the room.

Bailly said that he took photographs of the room during the investigation but that no evidence was taken and he did not check for fingerprints.

U.S. relief officials plan visit to rebel-held parts of Sudan

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Two officials of private U.S. relief groups will visit southern Sudan this week to advance plans for providing help to rebel-held areas, a rebel official said Monday.

That official and a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi declined to identify the officials or their organizations. However, the U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed the supplies would come from the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Richard Mula, secretary general of the rebels' Sudan Relief and Rehabilitation Association, told The Associated Press the officials plan to visit the rebel-held southeastern towns of Kapoeta, Ikoto, Pachala and Pibor.

"They want to go and make initial assessment of the needs of the people," Mula said, adding that they plan to leave Wednesday and are awaiting clearance from the Sudan People's Liberation Army.

The army is the military wing of Sudan People's Liberation Movement. The rebels have been fighting the government since 1983, and U.N. officials say the war has caused a famine that killed more than 5,000 people last year.

Soviet President Gorbachev reschedules visit to Cuba

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who canceled a visit to Cuba after a devastating earthquake in Soviet Armenia, will travel to the island nation in early April, Pravda reported Monday.

The Communist Party daily newspaper did not give specific dates for the trip.

Gorbachev first planned to visit Havana in December after he traveled to the United States to address the United Nations and meet with outgoing U.S. president, Ronald Reagan, and then president-elect George Bush.

He cut short his U.S. visit and returned home upon learning that thousands of people had been killed in the Armenian earthquake that leveled towns and cities on Dec. 7.

Korean-American man accused of nerve gas plot released

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A Korean-American businessman charged in an alleged international conspiracy to illegally export nerve gas was ordered released Monday on $2 million bail.

U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin said the government failed to offer convincing evidence that Juhwan Yun, 48, of Short Hills would flee prosecution.

"Nothing is more abhorrent to our free society than the spectre of persons accused of crimes being confined in prisons before trial and conviction," Sarokin wrote in an opinion ordering Yun's release. "The right to be free on bail before trial is what distinguishes our democracy from totalitarian governments."

Dick Lavinthal, a spokesman for U.S. Attorney Samuel Alito, said the government may seek to postpone Yun's release until more arguments can be made before an appeals court.

An article in Friday's State Press incorrectly stated that ASU Vice President for Student Affairs Betty Turner Asher denied knowing of an Associated Students of ASU request to relocate the archery range for safety reasons. Asher, in fact, has been involved in negotiations to move the range. She said Monday her office has recently requested revised cost estimates of relocating the range.

Health Center begins new no-show appointment policy

The Student Health Center has started a new no-show appointment policy for students, which only honors appointments for five minutes after the time scheduled.

Failure to keep the appointment or cancel it 30 minutes prior will result in marks against the students' record. After two marks in one semester, the student will lose Health Center privileges until speaking with the Counseling and Health Advisory Committee.

The committee will discuss the problem with the student, alternatives in dealing with appointments and whether to re-establish the student's Health Center privileges. For more information call 965-3349.

Herpes, AIDS viruses may join to kill blood cells

A recently discovered Herpes virus may activate and join with the AIDS virus to kill critical disease-fighting blood cells in the human body, a study from New York has found.

The British magazine, Nature, reported Thursday that blood cells infected with both viruses died faster than those infected with just the AIDS virus. Herpes virus-6 could make the AIDS virus more active in cells and activate a segment of genetic material in the virus that regulates reproduction.

Cocaine users more apt than heroin users to catch AIDS

Drug abusers who inject cocaine are more likely to catch AIDS infections than those who shoot heroin, researchers in San Francisco said Thursday.

The injection of cocaine promotes more sharing of hypodermic needles than heroin injection because cocaine's briefer euphoria requires more doses — up to 10 a day, researchers said.

Multiple sclerosis linked closely to AIDS virus

A genetic test of cells in the blood of patients with multiple sclerosis suggests that the crippling disease is closely associated with a virus that is similar to the AIDS virus, researchers in Philadelphia said Thursday.

Members of the Wistar Institute found that both the human T-lymphotropic (HTLV-I) and the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes AIDS are retroviruses and appear to infect immune cells in the blood. Although the two viruses do not cause the same disease, their basic mechanisms of infection are similar.

Company to offer insurance for unapproved drug treatment

John Hancock, one of the nation's biggest private health insurers, will offer coverage for a not-yet-approved drug treatment that is thought to prevent a deadly form of pneumonia in AIDS patients.

The drug therapy, aerosolized pentamidine, has not been cleared for preventive use as an aerosol by the Food and Drug Administration, but many doctors and AIDS patients say biweekly doses prevent pneumocystis carinii pneumonia, an infection that kills 80 percent of AIDS victims.

Has U.S. overstayed its welcome on Asian peninsula?

Brian Tassinari
Asst. Opinion Editor

Koreans, especially students, are back in the streets and back in the news, with violent protests against the American military presence in their country and what they perceive as American interference in their internal affairs.

It seems to be an almost routine, daily occurrence; students clash with police, throwing rocks and bottles as they storm some government office. The police retaliate with tear gas, water cannons and beatings.

Eventually, the students fall back, chant "Yankee go home," and burn the sitting American president in effigy. (Since the end of Ronald Reagan's tenure, I wonder if "Effigies R Us" will be coming out with a George Bush line.) Bush is going to visit Korea on Feb. 24 — this would be an excellent time for him to announce the withdrawal all U.S. troops from the Korean Peninsula. The time for us to leave Korea has already passed, but each year we stay we alienate more and more of the Korean people.

For many Koreans, the symbol of American abuse and indifference is the tragic massacre at Kwangju. In 1980, Korean troops fired into a civilian crowd, killing hundreds of protesters. Although no U.S. troops were involved, the Korean soldiers who participated in the slaughter were under the command of an American general. The United States has denied any prior knowledge of what these troops intended to do, but in the eyes of many Koreans, America is morally — if not directly — responsible.

It is easy for us to dismiss the incident at Kwangju as an unfortunate mistake. However, Americans would do well to remember that our own country's struggle for freedom began with the Boston Massacre of 1770, when British soldiers fired into a mob, killing five colonists. Outrage over this killing fanned the flames of popular discontent and helped lead to our own War of Independence. A few zealots incited the people to revolt against what was actually fairly benign British rule. Should we expect the Koreans to be any more forgiving than we were?

Certainly our Korean policy has to be regarded as one of the most successful in the post-war period, and it was — to a certain degree — motivated by altruism. However, in return for our help we have also demanded a little bit of Korea's sovereignty. Perhaps in the past this was a reasonable demand — as Korea at the time was a devastated, war-torn nation unable to defend itself. It is unacceptable to the Koreans of the '80s.

'The time for us to leave Korea has already passed, but each year we stay we alienate more and more of the Korean people.'

Their country has progressed in the past 20 years from an economic basketcase to one of the most dynamic economies in the world. They are maturing politically as well. After years of military-backed government, Korea recently held democratic elections.

The Korean people are proud of these accomplishments and of what their country is becoming. They feel proud to be Koreans.

The recent protests in the streets of Seoul are a powerful expression of resurging nationalism. The United States has overstayed its welcome on the Korean Peninsula. It's time for us to leave and let the Koreans run their own affairs.

But our country has been reluctant to give up its role as Korea's guardian; even though they no longer need our protection.

Over the years Washington has repeatedly blocked efforts by South Korea to obtain advanced conventional weapons, keeping the country dependent on U.S. military assistance.

In 1975 we convinced the South Koreans to cancel their nuclear program. With nuclear weapons they would no longer have been dependent on the U.S. for protection. This was not done to protect the South Koreans from the perils of nuclear war because the United States already maintained nuclear warheads in that country. What it does mean is that the United States feels it is better able to determine if and when nuclear weapons should be used on Korean soil than the Koreans themselves.

The conditions in the past which made North Korea a threat to South Korea no longer exist. Mikhail Gorbachev seems unlikely to risk his programs of perestroika and glasnost by supporting a North Korean invasion of the south. Nor would China — with its increasing ties to the West — have much to gain from backing South Korea's communist neighbor. Without such support it's very unlikely that North Korea poses any present threat to the south.

It is absurd for the United States (which has a $10 billion annual trade deficit with South Korea) to be spending billions of dollars a year to defend that nation while they build more Hunda's and burn more effigies.

South Korea is like a teenager which has come of age. As a child we cared for and protected it, but now we must let it go.

It's time for the United States to stop acting like an over-protective parent — give ourselves a pat on the back for a job well done — and get out of Korea.

'Kingdom within'

Editor:

Right after I read Professor Lynn Nelson's essay in your paper (Jan. 26) I happened to drift out toward Packard Stadium where the ASU team plays baseball. On the outfield fence are the names of those ASU baseball players who have gone on to the big leagues. This is a sad and offensive fence.

It seems to me that the object of a baseball program is not to celebrate a few players who win fame, but to help many people to play the game well and to enjoy it, and in their turn to teach other people to play it well and to enjoy it, too. This is Prof. Nelson's idea, "a kingdom within you," as opposed to success measured only in money and one's name on a fence.

Yes, we ought to be teaching more diligently the connection between the "American Dream" and the general pollution.

"Acid rain is falling on our parade," Prof. Nelson writes. I congratulate your newspaper for printing his important and perceptive essay.

Ritter cartoon hits 'bull's eye'

Editors:

In response to the Jan. 26 edition of the State Press, I would like to add my comments to Mike Ritter's cartoon of the guy who murdered the five kids in the Stockton, Calif., schoolyard.

Mr. Ritter, you really hit a bull's eye this time. Everyone seems outraged by the Stockton murders, as well they should be! Five innocent, unsuspecting young children ... dead. They never had a chance to grow up, go to school, get jobs and raise families.

But what about the 1.6 million unborn children that die by abortion each year, 4,384 each day, three each minute? Somehow Americans don't get so upset about these innocent, unsuspecting young victims. These aborted children never had a chance to grow up, go to school ...

Today, in this Valley alone, there are at least four options to put an end to these slayings:

- The Crisis Pregnancy Center (966-5683).
- Adoption agencies. There are many couples who are infertile and would love to adopt a child.

•A monogamous sexual relationship with a lifetime partner, which should eliminate a large number of unwanted pregnancies.

•"Safe sex."

Capital punishment

Case against death penalty found by looking to neighbors

Jeff Greenfield
 Univeral Press Syndicate

NEW YORK — Ted Bundy is dead, and who dares light a candle for him? Who dares argue that the execution of a handsome, personable, bright man who killed and mutilated for fun somehow makes the world more barbaric?

Not me; but for all that the Ted Bundy case hammers away at the anti-death penalty argument, it still leaves standing one reality that ought to give even the most fervent supporter of capital punishment a moment of pause: Why do almost all free societies save ours ban the death penalty while every dictatorship uses it enthusiastically?

The last 20 years have not been kind to the abolitionist cause. Toward the end of the 1960s, a majority of Americans actually opposed the death penalty; today, more than two-thirds support it.

There's no mystery behind this change of heart. The soaring crime rates of the 1960s and '70s, and the astonishing rise in the remorseless savagery of killings and assaults, has enraged the public, and properly so.

The arcane arguments about whether the death penalty deters, complete with mathematical formulas decipherable only by a graduate student, have given way to a much more basic conception: that society has a right to express its outrage and its horror by depriving the killer of his own life.

A popular slogan of abolitionists reads, "Why do we kill people, to teach that killing people is wrong?" In fact, there is no paradox at all in such a policy. The severity of a punishment for doing wrong may be the best way possible to show how highly we hold the value that has been betrayed by the wrongdoer: the value of life.

condemned to die because of the color of his skin.

Well, then. For a moment, assume that all of the arguments of the abolitionist have been settled by the Bundy case. Let us assume that there is no chance that an innocent man will be executed; let us assume that the courts will guarantee that race, class, access to wealth and influence will have no bearing on who lives and who dies.

We are left, then, with this disturbing fact: If you cast your eyes around the world and want to know the most infallible way to judge whether a nation is free or oppressive, all you have to know is whether that nation imposes the death penalty.

United States, none.

(It is true that there are technical exceptions: Israel, for example, still has the death penalty for "crimes against mankind," but in that troubled nation's 40-year history, only Adolf Eichmann has been executed. Other nations have abolished capital punishment in fact, although it remains on the books for crimes such as treason.)

What does this suggest? In my view, it tells us that, even though liberals tend to oppose the death penalty, the most powerful argument against it is conservative in nature: The state should not have the ultimate power over any individual, no matter what.

A government that assumes the right to take life is saying something about the range of its dominion; it is saying to its citizens that it regards itself, in some sense, as the judge of who shall live or who shall die.

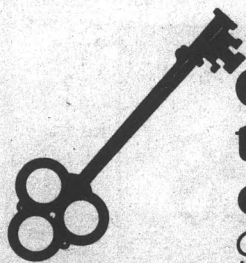

A state that shuns such power is also saying something; it is saying that no government can be so sure of itself that it can take this ultimate step of wiping out life. As long as there is any chance of misjudgment, it should stay its hand.

This is a far less sweeping, far more modest argument against the death penalty than those usually made. In my view, it has the virtue of being right.

'The last 20 years have not been kind to the abolitionist cause. Toward the end of the 1960s, a majority of Americans actually opposed the death penalty; today, more than two-thirds support it.'

In this sense, Ted Bundy was a poster boy for capital punishment. He did not kill in the heat of anger; he did not kill while stealing money to feed his family; he did not kill out of hopelessness spawned by the mean streets of his childhood. And he was not extent of infestation. The engineer was brought in after Computing Services employees reported the floor was "kind of spongy", said Vance Linden, associate director of ASU Planning and Construction.

When workers pulled back the carpeting they found the wood-eating insects.

"They were pretty much everywhere," Linden said.

Linden said his department hired the structural engineer to study options of what to do with the building.

The engineer's recommendation is expected to be submitted to DPS, Computing Services and Business Affairs Vice President Victor Zafra within two weeks, Linden said.

He said one of the recommendations might be to vacate the building if the cost of repairs exceeds the building's worth.

"That's a remote possibility," Linden said. "DPS needs the space."

Linden said if the University decides to renovate the building, occupants would have to be relocated until the project was completed.

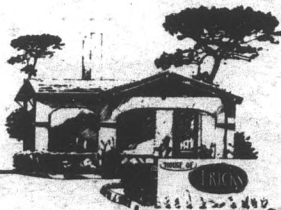

The termite problem in the building is not new.

When DPS moved into the three-building Campus Inn complex in 1986, the Physical Plant had to spray for termites, Linden said. The building is sprayed regularly, he added.

The building was purchased in 1985 and was originally a privately owned apartment complex. DPS had been housed on the second floor of the Physical Plant building before moving into the former Campus Inn.

Meanwhile, the 50 ASU employees who work in the building are learning to live with the termites.

"We don't pay attention to it," said Madelyn Dull, the police dispatch supervisor. "It's been this way so long we are just waiting to see what happens."

National civil rights activist to lecture on race relations

By ROBIE KAKONGE
State Press

Tony Brown, a national civil rights activist and television commentator, will lecture at 7:30 p.m. today in the MU about race relations.

"No White Lies, No Black Lies — Only the Truth!" and a race-relations plan for the 1990s will be the themes for Brown's speech, said David Symns, director of the Associated Students Lecture Series. Brown's speech is sponsored by the Lecture Series as part of Black Heritage month.

"White people cannot free black people, and that's what black people don't understand," Brown told The Charleston Gazette in 1983.

"You can help me have access to a school but you can't study for me," he added. "You can allow me entrance into a hotel, but I have to have the money to pay my own bill. The white liberal doesn't understand that blacks need to help themselves."

In a fall 1988 statement in his self-titled journal, Brown said there is a substantial difference in how whites and blacks combat drug abuse.

In the same statement, Brown said he believes blacks fail because they have low self-esteem.

"A white child may fail because of low esteem due to sexual, physical or psychological abuse, but not because he/she is systematically taught that being white is a burden," he said.

Brown, who also is a film producer and writer, is best known for his work as a journalist. Black Enterprise magazine once called him "television's civil rights crusader."

Brown's syndicated column is carried in more than 100 newspapers.

His television series, Tony Brown's Journal, is the nation's longest-running and top-ranked black-affairs series. The weekly show is viewed by about 5 million people and airs on 240 public television stations.

Brown's first feature motion movie will be released this spring.

The movie, "The White Girl," a $2-million project is about drug use and self-respect.

The plot involves a young black woman who is hooked on cocaine.

The motion picture, which has been shown for anti-drug fund-raising events, has raised $40,000 for the Chicago Mental Health Council.

Importance of early financial aid application stressed by fair

By LORI ZUBALIK
State Press

ASU's Student Financial Assistance Department will hold a fair from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. Thursday on Cady Mall, encouraging students to apply now for financial aid.

"The most critical thing is to apply by March 1," said Paul Barberini, ASU's director of student financial aid.

He added that because many students wait until the last minute to complete their application they miss out on grants and scholarships.

"Some funds will be completely exhausted," Barberini said, re-emphasizing the necessity of applying early.

Financial assistance programs offered at ASU include grants, scholarships, loans and student employment.

Barberini said that applying early also helps ensure that students granted financial aid will receive it early enough to meet fee payment deadlines. It will also be available on the first day of classes for books and supplies, he added.

The fair will help students understand the financial aid process, and the importance of financial planning, Barberini said.

"Suprisingly enough, a lot of students don't budget their money, and they get in trouble before the semester ends by running out of money," he said.

ASU's Career Services plays a key role in determining how much debt a student will be able to manage after graduation, Barberini said.

"Career Services will help students determine how much they'll be making after graduation to determine if they'll be able to pay the loan back," he said.

Seniors that borrow from financial aid monies are required to have an "exit interview" before they graduate in order to help them budget their money.

Clerk calls gun fake, gets shot in robbery

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A convenience store clerk suffered minor injuries during a holdup early Monday after he reportedly told a masked bandit holding a gun that the weapon wasn't real. It was.

The suspect fired a single shot from a revolver at the clerk, who was injured by fragments from a cash register that was hit by the bullet, said Officer Roger Austin, a Tempe police spokesman.

Austin said the robbery occurred about 3:30 a.m. at the 7-11 store at 5125 S. Mill Ave. The suspect made off with an undisclosed amount of cash.

Police described the suspect as a black male, 24-years old, 5-foot-6 and 150 pounds with a thick mustache. He wore a handkerchief over his face, a blue ski cap and a dark leather jacket.

Tempe police also reported:

A 60-year-old Tempe woman was sexually assaulted early Monday by a suspect who entered her home through an police report

unlocked patio door, police said.

Police said the suspect entered the home in the 3300 block of South Parkside Drive about 2:05 a.m. and went to the woman's bedroom where she was sleeping.

The suspect sat on the end of the woman's bed and she awoke thinking the figure was her mother, police said.

The woman asked the figure what was the matter and the suspect answered, "nothing" then assaulted her, police said.

The woman could not give police a description of her attacker, police said.

ASU police reported the following incident ending 7 a.m. Monday:

•Three men unaffiliated with the University were arrested for skateboarding on campus. They were cited and released.

Lawsuit

In the official police report on the incident, Bailly said he wrote that $168 worth of belongings had been taken from the room.

Running testified Thursday that his waterbed also had been contaminated with human excrement.

However, Bailly said, there was no mention of that damage in the police report on the incident.

"I didn't see any human fecal material in the room nor did I smell anything when I investigated the room," Bailly said.

Bailly said he recorded in the police incident report that Running seemed to be scared while the investigation was being completed.

"People were running up and down the hallway, banging on the door, and making noises like mice and pigs," Bailly said. "They were disturbing the investigation."

Bailly said that he did not recall hearing a death threat and that he did not tell Running his life was in danger.

Nore ends career among elite ranks

By JOAN MCKENNA
State Press

The spotlight seems to have all but gone out on former Sun Devil Christy Nore . . . just the way the captain of ASU's 1988 volleyball team wants it.

Nore recently reaffirmed that she has no plans to try out for the U.S. National team in San Diego. The outside hitter finished her college eligibility last season.

No plans, that is, despite being considered by ASU coaches as one of the premiere defensive players in the country.

. . . despite having led all college players last year in digs averaged per game (4.96).

. . . And despite former ASU head coach Debbie Brown's plans to be assistant to the U.S. team starting Jan. 31.

But Nore had said midseason all she hoped for after 1988 was to be normal, go to school and earn her degree in education.

And she is standing by those words.

"Maybe I'll play club ball or something," Nore said. "But for now that's it."

It's a lifestyle that seems a stark contrast to her career finale in December when she took the spotlight alone at a banquet full of U.S. coaches to receive All-America honors.

Nore and the other 11 first team All-America selectees had been flown to Minnesota for the NCAA Final Four Championships (won by Texas) and annual coaches convention.

They were given VIP treatment throughout the weekend but their moment of recognition came at the banquet, according to Brown.

Brown said Nore was called up individually, as each player was, and stood while a list of her accomplishments was read.

"They read quite a bit," Brown said, adding the announcer closed with "1988 first team All-America Christy Nore."

And Nore's reaction?

"(She was) beaming," Brown said. "I mean it was great. It was so much fun to watch her. I think maybe she was overwhelmed by the whole thing. She was smiling just as big as life. I had so many people say to me afterward, 'Jees it was so neat to see her up there. I enjoyed every second.'"

Apparently Nore was not only overwhelmed but surprised.

"It doesn't seem real," she said. "It doesn't seem like I should have gotten it. We're talking Daiva Tomkus (Pac-10 Player of the Year) and Ann Boyer (both of UCLA)."

Typical Nore comments.

Last season, the senior earned three Pac-10 Player-of-the-Week awards, an All-Pac-10 selection and two tournament most valuable player honors — and never failed to be surprised at each.

Not that she never thinks of such things. Nore said her original goal was to make the All-America team both her junior and senior years.

But she said, "I'm very happy to finish like this, to get this honor as a senior."

Assistant coach Steve Schlick said Nore may have been overlooked earlier, ironically, because she played on such a strong team.

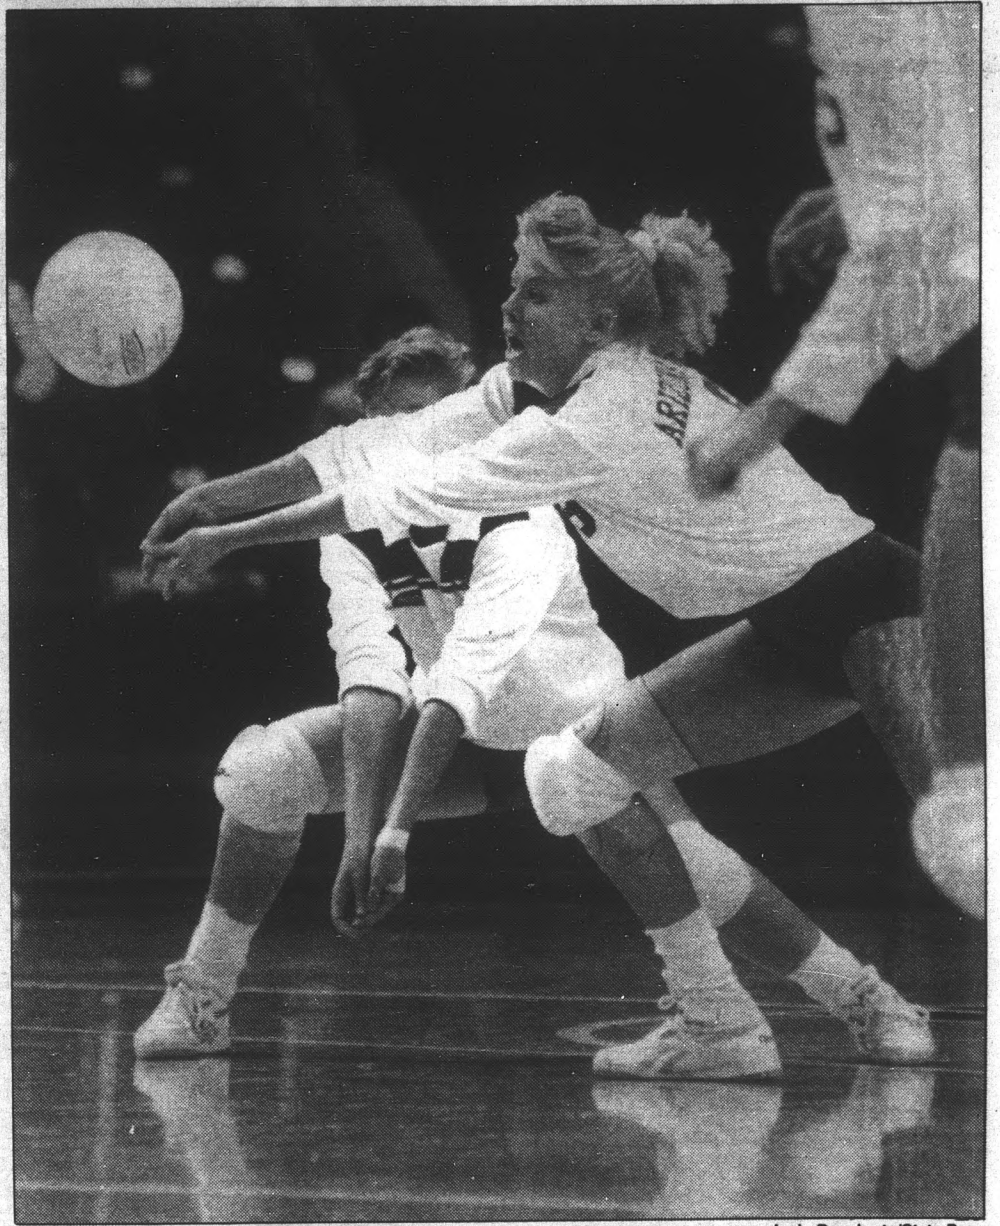

"Throughout her career she was playing with a number of people that gathered more limelight," he said. "It started out with Tammy (Webb, 1988 Olympian and two-time All-American), then Reg (Regina Stahl, 1986 All-America) and Tracey (Barberie). They gathered the notoriety.

"Christy fulfilled her role, but maybe didn't get as many awards.

"I think it's tremendous how she was able to take over the leadership responsibility this year and really extend herself."

Schlick credited Nore's off-season work on offensive skills for making her a complete and dynamic player.

"Back row, her skills have always been phenomenal," he added. "She's as good of a player as any in the U.S." — a sentiment echoed last season by almost every Pac-10 visiting coach when discussing Nore.

Irwin Daugherty/State Press

Former Sun Devil outside hitter Christy Nore goes for a dig last season. Her defensive skills helped her garner All-America accolades.

But All-America recognition goes well beyond the conference. It is left up to a five-member committee of Division I coaches.

Brown, on the committee (but unable to participate in Nore's selection) said the judging is "pretty sophisticated," with each player's coach having to submit complete statistics of the season, plus a videotape containing 10 minutes from two matches.

The judges picked 24 to be 1988 All-Americans, dividing them between first and second teams. A player's position made no difference and schools could nominate any number of qualified athletes.

Nore's selection gave Brown her fourth and final All-American as ASU's coach.

And for Nore, it seems to have been a final honor as well.

Injury-plagued Ginther yearns for All-America honors

By CHRIS NACKINO
State Press

The road to success has been a rocky one for ASU senior John Ginther, however, the obstacles of injuries have not stopped him from achieving his wrestling goals.

After overcoming an injury that prevented him from contending in the national championships, Ginther is back on track to becoming one of the top collegiate wrestlers in the country.

The Sun Devils won the National Championships last season without the services of the two-time All-American, who suffered a groin injury during practice two weeks before the NCAA contest. The mishap disabled him from competition in the Pac-10 tournament, which served as a qualifier of the NCAA championships.

The Muncie, Ind., native is currently ranked seventh in the nation at 190 pounds and boasts a 12-3-2 record.

"I was very frustrated with my injury because I had come so far along," Ginther said, who was 24-4-1 before the injury. "There was so much team unity and I thought that I had let the team down."

His list of collegiate achievements includes an eighth-place finish at the 1986 and 1987 NAAs while also earning second at the Pac-10 Championships in 1987.

"This season I hope for both team and individual titles," Ginther said. "Jim (Gressley) and I are the only seniors on the team, so it puts a lot of pressure on us, but I am very enthusiastic with finishing up this year as national champions."

Despite missing the national championships, Ginther won the Oregon Wrestling Classic and placed third at the Las Vegas Invationals, during the 1988 season.

As a sophomore, he missed half of the season because of another injury, but still posted a 14-5 record.

In high school, Ginther was undefeated and touted an impressive 106-0 record.

He chose to attend Louisiana State University where he red-shirted his freshman year. However, Ginther never competed for the Tigers because LSU dropped its wrestling program in 1984-85.

Before attending college, Ginther had only been instructed by his father, his high school coach. In 1985 he transferred to ASU and studied under the highly acclaimed mentor Bobby Douglas.

"It was a tremendous transition . . . the style changes to a degree, the game plan changes, but you also have to change your own style," Ginther said. "It was like learning to walk all over again."

One quality Ginther believes has helped him throughout his career is his perseverance. Despite a defunct LSU program and several injury-ridden seasons, Ginther has never lost his optimistic attitude.

"My hopes and dreams were focused on being a four-time All-American, but that didn't happen because I was injured," Ginther said. "However, one quality I have is my intensity, both in my personality on and off the mat."

With an injury-free year, Ginther could become the fourth three-time All-American in the Sun Devils' history.

Although he has wrestled at 177 pounds for three years, Ginther moved up a weight class.

Experience along with team unity are two elements that Ginther said he believes will lead the Sun Devils to another national title.

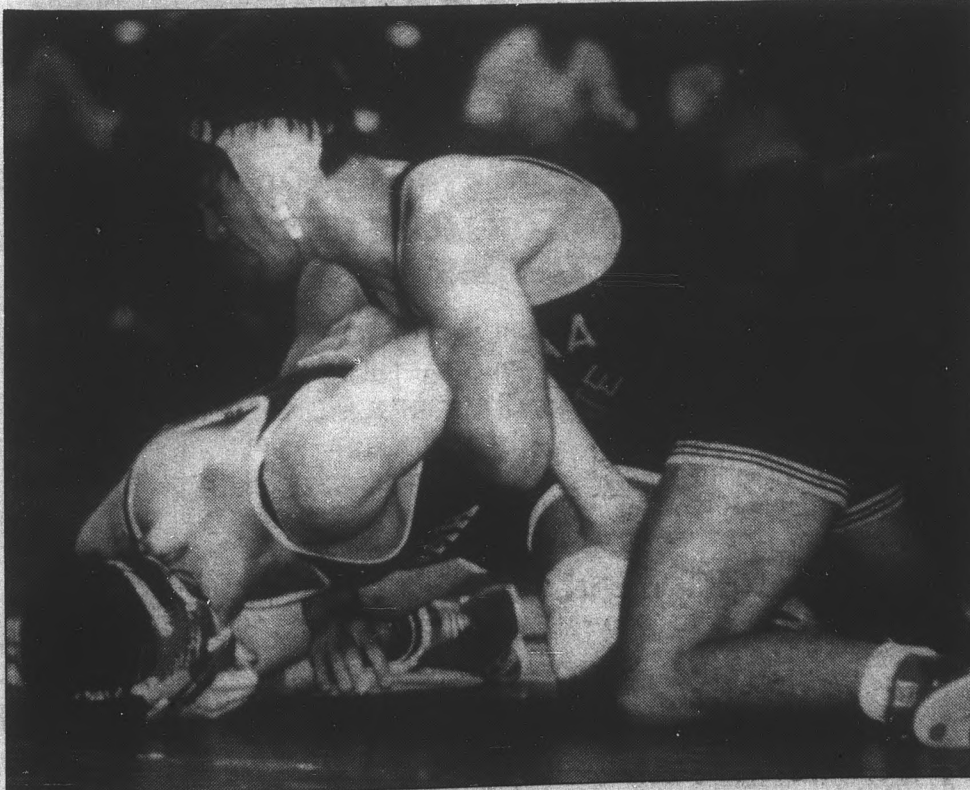

"I think that being only one of two seniors leadership must be set through our actions, and hopefully this will be seen through our actions on the mat," Ginther said.

The Sun Devils will face top-ranked Oklahoma State this Saturday night in the UAC. Ginther will match-up against Cowboy Randy Couture, who sports a 20-7-0 (as of Jan. 22).

In the last meeting, Ginther defeated Couture 3-2.

Although Ginther has been a driving force in the success of the Sun Devils, he said his determination to do well lies within his duty to ASU.

"One thing that has motivated me is my devotion to the school," Ginther said. "As an athlete, I believe that I have a responsibility to do the best I can for my school."

Senior ASU wrestler John Ginther is looking to earn All-American status for the third time in his four years as a Sun Devil.

Roadtrip unfriendly; ASU to travel again

By KYLE D. ENG
State Press

The road has not been kind this year to the women's basketball team, and last weekend's game against Arizona in Tucson was no exception.

"It's the same old story — we're in the game in the first half and then we're outplayed in the second," ASU head coach Maura McHugh said. "It's nothing new, but I wish we could change it somehow."

ASU dropped a 77-70 heartbreaker to the Wildcats on Friday, extending its losing streak to five games. The Sun Devils (7-10, 1-6 Pac-10), have now fallen into a last-place tie with Arizona (6-11, 1-6).

ASU had dominated throughout the first half, and led by as many as 16 points, before taking a 38-28 advantage into the locker room at halftime.

But in the second half the Wildcats took control of the game, outscoring the Devils, 49-32, and were out-rebounded by a margin of 21.

ASU head coach Maura McHugh said the Devils have been in every contest until the later minutes, but the opponents have prevailed because they play hard throughout the game.

"The girls have to learn a game is not made up of just 20 minutes," McHugh said. "We have to learn to play a full 40 minutes, night in and night out."

McHugh said an improvement on defense would be an asset for the Devils' offense.

"If we could play defense for the entire 40 minutes our offense would eventually come around when we're shooting cold," McHugh said. "At least you can play defense even when you're cold, that's what the girls have to realize."

The Devils were led by junior center Fran Ciak who scored a career-high 24 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. Guard Karen O'Connor contributed 14 points, which is below her season average of 22.1 points a game.

This weekend the Devils return to the road to face their biggest challenge of the season. Friday ASU plays Stanford, which is ranked fifth in the nation and is undefeated in the Pac-10. Saturday the team will contend with California.

Sport Shorts

Men's baseball

The ASU baseball team (2-0) opens a two-game series with Cal Poly Pomona (0-1) at 2:30 p.m. today at Packard Stadium.

Starting pitcher today for the Devils will be senior left-hander Rusty Kilgo. In last Friday's rain-halted game against UC Riverside, Kilgo pitched four shutout innings. ASU coach Jim Brock said he wanted to give Kilgo more work before the team travels to Florida State this weekend.

David Cassidy will be the starting pitcher for Wednesday's game. All ASU baseball games are free for students with a validated ID.

Men's basketball

Starting center Mark Becker fractured the navicular bone on his right wrist Saturday during the first half of the basketball game against NAU and is not expected to return to the Sun Devil lineup for the remainder of this season, team physicians said Monday.

Although Becker injured the wrist trying to break a fall during the first half of the game, he continued to play until fouling out with 4:41 left in the second half.

The 6-foot-9 junior contributed 11 points and six rebounds, comparable to his 12.4 and 5.4 average, before leaving the court.

ASU lost junior guard Tarence Wheeler to a season-ending knee injury Jan. 5, and backup sophomore center Emory Lewis, who suffered his third stress fracture in three years before the season began.
