

Money missing; computer thief sought

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

More than $6,000 in federal grant money apparently was stolen from the Office of Sponsored Programs after someone gained access to the funds through the main University computer system, ASU police said.

Police officials said the incident is the first time someone has been able to use a computer to steal money from the University.

The theft was reported Tuesday after Office of Sponsored Programs officials discovered missing money that could not be accounted for, said ASU police Sgt. Bob Jones, head of the department's detective squad.

"(The suspect) generated paper work for the issuance of two checks and then the checks were subsequently taken out of state and cashed," Jones said. "We are considering it a theft."

ASU officials said the University computer is protected by a security system, but would not elaborate on the features of the system.

Jones said ASU police are working with out-of-state lawmen in locating a suspect. There are several leads in the case, he added.

ASU police would not say what law enforcement agencies are assisting them in the investigation.

ASU Detective Dave Hays, who is working the case, said it is unknown if the suspect used a computer terminal in the Office of Sponsored Programs or if they "hacked" into the University's main-frame computer.

The Office of Sponsored Programs helps faculty identify sources of funding and apply for research grants in addition to administering the grants. The office is located in the Academic Services Building.

Police did not identify which grant program the money was taken from.

Hays said the suspect apparently used a password to log into a computer and created a voucher that went to the University Comptrollers Office from where the two checks were mailed.

"There's supposed to be a hard copy of the paper work,"

Hays said. "There wasn't any, and that's how they got suspicious."

The incident is the second computer-related crime on campus this year.

An 18-year-old busboy was arrested Jan. 20 after he allegedly used a homemade program to gain access to a large data base at the College of Engineering.

Richard Lee Morgan was arrested on felony computer fraud charges after he reportedly used the program to enter into 13 separate computer terminals at the college and bypass the regular log-on process.

Morgan, who worked at a Tempe restaurant and was staying with friends at an ASU dormitory, told police he created the program on his own and wanted to see if it worked.

There was no permanent damage done to the system, which involves student research. It is not connected with the University's main computer which contains payroll and student records.

In Arizona, first degree computer fraud is Class 3 felony and carries a maximum five-year prison sentence.

Public election of regents proposed by House member

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

A bill calling for a state constitutional amendment that would provide for the public election of members of the Arizona Board of Regents was introduced Thursday in the state House of Representatives.

Currently, regents are appointed by the governor with the consent of the Senate and serve 8-year terms.

The legislation, sponsored by Rep. John Kromko, D-Tucson, also would reduce the number of regents from eight to five, with one regent being elected from each of the state's congressional districts.

The regents would be elected to 8-year terms.

The bill would not affect the student regent, who would continue to be appointed by the governor to a one-year term.

'Students . . . would be better served by an elected board of regents.'
— John Kromko

Kromko said he introduced the legislation because he is angry about continued tuition increases, while the quality of undergraduate education at the state's three university declines.

Furthermore, he said the board has been approving substantial salary increases for top university administrators, while faculty and staff members only receive 2 percent cost-of-living adjustments.

"Students and people would be better served by an elected board of regents," he said.

A similar bill was introduced by Kromko in 1985, but died in the House Education Committee after it was shelved by then-committee chairman Jim Cooper.

Kromko said he is more confident that the bill will pass this session.

"This time it has a much better chance," he said.

But Regent Edith Auslander said that the current system of appointing regents benefits the universities.

"I think appointment leaves the regents free of raising money for campaigns and better able to concentrate on the problems of the universities," she said.

Mike McCormick, the special assistant to Gov. Rose Mofford who handles education issues, said electing regents would damage the board because members would lose their objectivity.

"It would not be a good move," he said. Kromko said the bill would allow current board members to serve out the remainder of their terms.

Vada Manager, Mofford's spokesman and a former student regent, said the governor opposes the bill because the current system has worked well and has produced a quality educational system in Arizona.

Student Regent Pat McWhortor said he doubts the bill will have support in the House.

"I think it's highly unlikely this bill will pass," he said. "The system we have has been very good for the universities."

ASU developing rape prevention programs

By STACY HAYMES
State Press

In the spring of 1982, Robbie Adler was preparing to graduate from Penn State. All she had on her mind was sending out graduation invitations and attending end-of-the-year parties.

But everything changed the night she was raped by a "friend."

"I (was) saying 'no,' but he was holding me down," Adler remembers. "He raped me . . . and for a long time I thought it was my fault."

Adler, who is now a 27-year-old doctoral student in counseling psychology at ASU, held the belief that she was to blame for the rape until last spring when UofA psychologist Mary Koss spoke at ASU on date rape.

"I didn't call it date rape, because if it's someone you know or someone you trust, you don't consider it rape," Adler said.

But acquaintance rape, according to a sex educator at Cornell University, is defined as "forced intercourse by someone the victim knows."

Adler was raped by a resident assistant she had socialized with frequently.

"On campus there are more opportunities (for it to occur) because you go to school with these people and they become your family," Adler said. "You never think about protecting yourself because you build a trust with these people."

Adler now knows that she is not alone.

Ms. magazine, the National Institute for Mental Health and psychologist Mary P. Koss surveyed 7,000 college students on 35 campuses in the 1985-86 school year and found:

- 1/4 of all women in college today have been the victims of rape or attempted rape.
- 52 percent of all women surveyed have experienced some form of sexual victimization.
- 1 in every 8 women were the victims of rape according to the legal definition.
- 3/4 of women raped were between the ages of 15-21, and the average age at the time of rape was 18.

State Department says Pan Am bombing remains unsolved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, responding to a news report linking Palestinian radicals to the bombing of a Pan Am jumbo jet, said Thursday the attack has not yet been solved.

"We are confident we will eventually find out who is responsible, but we should not expect a quick solution," spokesman Charles E. Redman said.

Asked about a CBS News report implicating Syria and Libya, Redman said, "The investigators have not yet reached any conclusion about who is responsible."

A total of 270 people died in the Dec. 21 crash, including 259 persons on the 747 jet and 11 persons in the Scottish village of Lockerbie, where the plane hit. The flight originated in Frankfurt, West Germany, and then went to London before taking off for New York.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Wednesday night that he could not confirm the CBS report. "I don't know that any responsibility has been determined," Baker said at a White House reception.

According to CBS, the attack on Flight 103 was in retaliation for the U.S. bombing of Libya in 1986 and was also spurred by the U.S. decision in December to talk with the Palestine Liberation Organization. The network quoted sources "deep within the terrorist movement."

CBS said the principle architect of the bombing was Ahmed Jibril, head of the extreme Palestinian group, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command.

Jibril, based in Syria, was working for Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, although he was also required to clear the operation with Syrian intelligence officials, the network reported.

Quayle criticizes Carter for meeting with Ortega

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle on Thursday criticized former President Carter for meeting with Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, saying such action "has a chance of complicating matters."

Quayle also criticized Carter for comments that reporters claim the former president had made urging the Bush administration to use economic persuasion in El Salvador to encourage the U.S.-backed government there to fight human rights abuses.

"If he's calling for economic sanctions against El Salvador, yes, he's complicating matters," Quayle said. "I don't think it's particularly helpful for a former president to make those kind of statements."

Asked if he has talked to President Bush since arriving Wednesday in Venezuela, Quayle said no, noting Bush has laryngitis and a cold.

Philippine vice president arrives for talks with exiled Marcos

HONOLULU (AP) — Philippine Vice President Salvador Laurel arrived Thursday morning — without the blessing of President Corazon Aquino — apparently to negotiate a return for exiled President Ferdinand Marcos.

Laurel went directly to St. Francis Medical Center, where the 71-year-old Marcos is listed in critical, but improving condition.

He was greeted at the hospital by more than 80 Marcos supporters, who crowded into its lobby and halls. Laurel refused to answer questions at the airport, saying he wanted to talk to Marcos first. He was expected to return to Manila on Friday.

John Bartko, an attorney for Marcos, said in San Francisco that Marcos was not in any condition to have a conversation but that his son, Ferdinand Jr., would try to relay his father's and family's feelings to Laurel.

After meeting with Marcos' doctors, Laurel was to talk briefly to the ousted president.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Charles LaBella, the prosecutor in the U.S. government's racketeering case against Marcos and his wife, Imelda, said even if Marcos works out a deal to return home, he and his wife would have to get permission from the U.S. attorney general and the U.S. District Court in New York.

Libertarians denied party status by Student Life

By SCOTT C. SECKEL
State Press

The Office of Student Life has denied re-registration to the Libertarian party at ASU on the grounds that the organization's statement of purpose was not serious.

Jerry E. Ellison Jr., head of the ASU Libertarians, received a letter from Paul Biwan, student programs and organizations coordinator, in January saying that the application form needed to be filled out "with a serious statement of purpose before it will be considered."

The group stated on its re-application form that its purpose was to "rid the country of useless bureaucratic forms such as this." Ellison said he received the original form torn in half and marked with red pen along with Biwan's rejection letter and a new form.

Biwan denied that he refused registration on political grounds.

"I think what I did was fair," said Biwan. "Usually if a registration is denied, it's done for pretty valid reasons." When asked if tearing up rejected applications and marking them in red pen was standard procedure, Biwan replied that "It all depends on the situation."

Student organizations are required to re-register every January, said Leon Shell, ASU Dean of Student Life. He said the organizations are required to register so that "violent" or "harmful" groups do not organize on campus.

Louis Rhodes, executive director of the Arizona chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, has sent a letter of protest to Biwan which stated that "this type of denial is a violation of First Amendment rights."

"Obviously, a lot of non-Christians would think that an organization that believes in God is silly, but that doesn't give them the right to deny these people the right to their beliefs, silly or not," Rhodes wrote.

"If you had a theater group of clowns, their purpose is to be silly. Surely, you can see how silly it would be to deny them on campus," Rhodes continued in the letter.

Biwan said he has not yet received Rhodes' letter.

Libertarians at ASU have been a registered campus organization for the past 10 years, according to Ellison, a former Associated Students of ASU presidential candidate. The group has about five active members.

Other third-party political organizations, such as the Young Communist League, are registered on campus.

Dale Moore, a 1986 ASU graduate who headed the party and a former candidate for the state Legislature, characterized the Libertarians as a party of minimal government who advocate less taxes and more social tolerance.

"It's a philosophy of maximum individual freedom and maximum self-government with the responsibility that accompanies that," he said.

Moore said that he didn't run into any problems registering the organization while he headed it.

Ellison said that he has been to the Office of Student Life to meet with Biwan, but his calls have not been returned and has been unable to schedule an appointment.

"I try to return all calls that I get by the end of the day," said Biwan.

Ellison said he wants to speak with Biwan before reapplying.

Display chronicles Mecham era

By MICHAEL VAN DYKE
State Press

ASU students and faculty will be able to relive former Gov. Evan Mecham's administration and the effort to oust him through detailed chronicles and memorabilia which have been donated to the Arizona Historical Foundation at Hayden Library.

The material was collected by the Mecham Recall Committee, which set out to expell Mecham from office shortly after he was elected in 1986.

Dick Lynch, foundation director, said the Recall Committee chose the Historical Foundation as the repository for its memorabilia because they were impressed with the foundation's facilities and plans for display.

The collection of newspaper articles, bumper stickers, T-shirts, hats, mugs, buttons and other paraphernalia will not be on display until this summer.

The collection will be displayed on the fourth floor of Hayden Library once the remodeling of the foundation's reading room is complete.

"What we have is more of a research collection than anything," Lynch said. "The Recall Committee kept a detailed record of everything that happened during the Mecham administration."

Lynch said the importance of the collection will be in aiding historians trying to re-create the Mecham era.

"The recall of the governor was a historic event in Arizona and will become more significant in a few years," he said. "This collection should help scholars to reconstruct the event in a comprehensive fashion."

"Between the state archives who have transcripts and videos of the trial proceedings and our collection, there is an excellent record of what happened during this time."

The Smithsonian Institution requested last year that items such as bumper stickers be sent to Washington, D. C., for national display.

Senate passes INFAC bill; plans to honor Goldwater

PHOENIX (AP) — The Arizona Senate voted 25-4 on Thursday to spend an extra $3.75 million over the next five years if Arizona State University wins a $37 million federal contract for high technology research on precision gears.

Senators also voted, 27-2, to award former U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater an Arizona Medal of Honor.

In addition, they gave tentative approval to three bills involving motorists.

The precision-gear bill now heads for the House and stems from efforts to win the Instrumented Factory for Precision Gears, or INFAC.

Arizona State and a coalition of high-tech companies are competing against similar groups from Georgia and Texas, Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania for a five-year INFAC grant from U.S. Defense Logistics Agency.

The grant would help fund an experimental factory for precision gears used in jet engines and other high-performance machinery.

Arizona has lost other high-technology projects such as Sematech and the Superconducting Super Collider to other states despite putting up money to lobby for them, and backers of the INFAC effort stressed that none of the $3.75 million would be spent unless Arizona actually lands the project.

Arizona State and a coalition of companies including McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. and Allied-Signal Aerospace Co. have already committed several million dollars more in hopes of landing INFAC this summer or fall.

Salary

Teachers' pay should reflect importance of profession

David Jordan
Columnist

(Second of two parts)

Teaching has been called alternatively the "highest calling" and "a career to be avoided if at all possible." If you were to ask the faculty at this great University what they thought of their profession, you would probably get mixed results. Unfortunately, the modern-day attitude toward teaching is that it is a great thing to do, but it doesn't pay much.

Yesterday I looked at many of the most important problems facing our faculty. Despite my belief that a large number of problems can be solved through existing mechanisms, one important fact remains: the most important issue today is compensation, and that is a problem that cannot be solved through University channels.

There is an initial consideration that must be addressed, namely, is the compensation issue real? Few employees are completely satisfied with the amount they receive for their services (attorneys are perhaps an exception), and professors have been accused of "never being satisfied." After all, the argument goes, over the last 10 years professors have received a pay increase every year, and few employees can say that.

So what is the truth about teacher compensation at ASU? I asked Jonathan Rose, associate dean of the College of Law, and he informed me that pay has not been a major problem in attracting entry-level professors to ASU, but it is a significant problem in terms of retaining and attracting experienced professors to our fair University.

Unfortunately, since 1981 ASU has fallen behind other universities in remuneration. Believe it or not, in the late seventies and early eighties, ASU was actually above the national average in salaries. According to Dr. Kristin Valentine, chair of the faculty senate, a series of years in which salary appropriations have been at or significantly below the rate of inflation has resulted in ASU falling behind the national average. This is a particular problem in fields which are attractive to the private sector (such as engineering), where quality scholars can easily be lured out of academia.

Take last year's appropriation, for example. The 'Faculty members shouldn't have to do this (job) out of the goodness of their hearts.'

Legislature approved a 3.5 percent raise for the faculty. The Board of Regents allowed a 2 percent raise for "satisfactory" and "unsatisfactory" professors and reserved the remaining 1.5 percent for merit professors. When you consider that the rate of inflation was about 4.4 percent last year, the teachers who were judged fully satisfactory at their jobs were rewarded with a 2.4 percent pay cut.

And what about the merit professors, the highest among equals, la creme de la creme? The remaining 1.5 percent only helped our University's best minimize their net cut in pay. Perhaps it doesn't sound like a big problem, but many of ASU's best professors get lured to other universities by salaries that are higher than their current job by tens of thousands of dollars.

Nowhere can the effect of this shortcoming be seen more clearly than in the classroom. The best professors are forced to excel more out of the "warm fuzzies" that they get from a job well done than out of anything else. Warm fuzzies are nice, and professional ethics could be repeated here, but I have to stress that this is a job. Faculty members shouldn't have to do this out of the goodness of their hearts.

I say this knowing that, in general, the Legislature has been generous in the past to education. However, if higher education is to mean anything in this state in the future, then we are going to have to pay more attention to the agents of higher education — the teachers. Their relationship with the students is the key to the educational experience. If that relationship breaks down, then education breaks down — no matter how pretty the buildings are nearby.

Regent Patrick McWhortor put it succinctly. "We have to take care of our faculty. If we don't, students suffer and the quality of our education is diminished. There may be a no more pressing issue before us than looking at how the faculty are paid and evaluated."

While I think that there is an excellent chance that some of the other problems facing our faculty can be solved, I am not as confident that the Legislature will be as attentive to the compensation problems facing our faculty. Prisons and health care have created such a crisis in our budget that education may be forced to bear the brunt of the cuts that are coming.

I am convinced that that would be a tragic mistake. The Legislature has to face the reality that if our state is going to maintain a system of higher education then it owes it to the public to do it right. Arizonans pay a lot for education and to give them anything less than the best education available would be a real mistake. I find it ironic that in a year where policy makers are highly concerned with making sure that higher education is accessible to all qualified students, few are as concerned with what kind of education they receive once they get there.

It is a large responsibility, but it is one that the Legislature cannot avoid. We need to maintain a well paid, quality faculty at the schools in this state, and it should be accessible to qualified students. Our citizenry asks for no more out of higher education. We can give them no less.

Oliphant misses target

Editor:

The Oliphant cartoon on page five of the Jan. 30, 1989, issue of the State Press strongly distorts the truth about private ownership of certain types of firearms. This cartoon scenario implied that firearms designed for full-automatic discharge can be purchased by the general public without any waiting period. This is false. These guns, categorized by the federal government as Class III firearms, have been severely restricted and registered for over 50 years.

A prospective owner of a Class III firearm is photographed, fingerprinted and subjected to an investigation by either local police authorities or the state's attorney general. Upon completion of this local process, the photos, fingerprints and local investigation results are then forwarded to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for further review. At this point, the FBI conducts a national-level investigation of the applicant. The purchaser also must pay a $200 federal tax at the time ownership application is made. Assuming the applicant has an unblemished record, the ownership transfer is approved and only then may he or she take possession of the firearm. The application process requires a de facto "waiting period" of two to six months.

Strident, misinformed or hysterical voices too often emanate from both second amendment advocates and the gun control lobby. The Oliphant cartoon is an illustration of this type of misinformation. If public policy decisions are to be made on second amendment issues, then they must be based upon factual information.

Pay for play

College athletes should be paid for their services

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

It seems to me that there is a simple solution to the controversy about letting athletes go to college, even though they can barely read and write.

Obviously, they haven't been recruited by these universities because there is any chance they will become Rhodes scholars or Nobel Prize scientists.

They are in demand because they can dribble a ball behind their backs, slam dunk, leap over a hulking lineman, catch a long pass and perform other physical feats that thrill American sports fans.

Despite what some academic purists may say, these are valuable skills. Sports fans spend hundreds of millions of dollars a year to watch a 7-footer drop a ball through a hoop or a 300-pounder terrorize quarterbacks. They fill the schools' gymnasiums, the stadiums and bring in the big TV contracts.

So they don't read too good. Has a scalper ever charged $50 for a seat in the library? The universities use the money the athletes generate to finance golf teams, tennis teams, soccer teams, volleyball and other sports programs that fans wouldn't spend a nickel to see.

It's a business deal, pure and simple. But it's an unfair deal because the athletes aren't properly compensated.

As the critics point out, after four years, many of the athletes have little to show for their efforts. They don't earn degrees, and they haven't made it to pro sports where the real money is.

But is that any reason to keep them out of college? Of course not. The solution is to be realistic and fair.

And the first step would be to admit the obvious: that these undereducated athletes aren't students. They are employees. Their jobs are to entertain the sports fans, to fill educations and have nothing to show for their four years.

There's a solution for that problem — a good payroll savings plan. When the college athlete is paid, half of his earnings should be deducted and put into a safe, interest-bearing fund.

That way, when he finishes his four years, he'll have a tidy sum stashed away and won't have to go out and start robbing gas stations right away.

Now I'm not saying that the academically of the people they hang around with.

And they go to schools that are relieved if a graduating senior can read his diploma. If not, they'll settle for his being able to spell the name of the school and the street sign outside.

One of the many reasons the schools are bad is money, or lack of it. That's not the only reason, but it's one of the major ones.

So I offer a modest proposal to help alleviate this problem.

There are schools all over America in cities and states that have little or no black ghetto population. So what do they do when they need a running back, a tall center, a point guard, a 280-pound lineman? They turn to the ghettos of Chicago, Detroit, New York and other big cities.

I mean, what kind of team would the University of Nevada in Las Vegas have if it had to depend on home-grown talent? They wouldn't win one game with a lineup composed of the stubby offspring of casino pit bosses.

So when these universities come poaching in our big city ghettos, they should have to pay us a fee. You want a 7-foot center? Fine, drop $50,000 into our school fund. You want that 270-pound nose tackle? It'll cost you another $50,000. If they make all-conference, we get a $25,000 bonus. All-American? That's $100,000.

The whole dispute is ridiculous. As proof, I ask you how many points a game Michael Jordan scores. Right, about 35. Every basketball fan knows that.

But does anyone in America know what his final grade average was?

I wonder if Michael knows.

'When an academically hopeless student is recruited, he should be paid a fair salary, based on how big a box office draw he is.'

the seats and bring in the big-money TV contracts.

The fans know it, the alumni know it, as do the TV announcers, the sports writers and the athletes. So why do we pretend that it isn't so?

Once we stop pretending, we can establish a system that is fair.

When an academically hopeless student is recruited, he should be paid a fair salary, based on how big a box office draw he is.

After all, many of their coaches are the highest-paid members of the faculty. If they can make big bucks by sending some kid onto the field to get his knee torn up, why shouldn't the kid turn a profit?

One of the big complaints about the present sports program is that many of these lads finish their college careers, fail as professional athletes, don't get deficient athlete should do nothing but engage in sports. During the off-season, he should be taught to read, write, do arithmetic and take some speech courses.

That might not sound like much. But that's really all you have to be able to do — read, write, handle simple numbers and utter a coherent sentence — and you can get some very good jobs. You can be a TV anchorman, sell just about anything, run for public office or even become a rich trader in pork bellies.

Obviously, my plan doesn't get to the root problem: why these athletes get through eight years of elementary school and four years of high school without learning much.

The answer is that most of them are black and come out of the poorest of the big city ghettos. Chances are that their parents are also illiterate or close to it. And so are most

Safety of ASU archery range misses the mark, DPS says

By KATHLEEN WINSTEAD
State Press

The ASU Department of Public Safety is concerned that a deteriorating backstop at the campus archery range has been a safety hazard for more than 10 years, ASU fire marshal Andy Anderson said.

Most recently, former ASU Police Chief C. Russell Duncan wrote a letter to ASU archery coach Sheri Rhodes on Sept. 6, 1988, asking that the archery range be closed until the backstop is repaired.

In the letter, Duncan also asked that the range be moved to a safer location, and specified that minimum safety requirements for the athletic department be followed while the range remains in its present location.

The range, located on the intramural field directly south of PEBE, borders Lot 41, prompting concerns that a stray arrow could strike someone walking in the lot.

The Recreation Board of Governors, the organization that oversees campus recreation, also has requested that the archery range be relocated. The recreation board estimates that it will cost $25,000 to relocate the range.

But Anderson said ASU police have been concerned that misfired arrows that could strike someone since 1974 when an ASU graduate assistant was struck in the cheek by an arrow. The man lost two molars in the incident.

"Every couple of years, it's been brought up, but there haven't been enough funds or we didn't put enough pressure on" the athletic department to move the range, Anderson said.

Assistant Athletic Director Tom Collins said the athletic department has not been a "proponent" of moving the range.

"What we've tried to do is make that range as safe as possible," Collins said. "I don't think that it's unsafe."

"We lock the gate, we have picture identification for all the student athletes. If someone wants to get in, they're going to get in. I don't know if moving the archery range is going to solve the safety problems."

Duncan, who retired as police chief in January, requested in his letter that "the range should be closed to all use until the backstop is repaired."

Duncan said the new backstop will need to meet a series of safety requirements, including:

- Repairing of the plywood backstop at the east end of the range to a height of eight feet and the entire width of the fenced area.

- Extending the 8-feet of plywood for at least 20 feet to the west on both sides of the range from the backstop.

- Restacking of the bales of straw to a minimum of four feet tall across the east end of the range.

- Proper support and supplement of the existing safety net in front of the plywood.

- Repairing of the fence at the southeast corner of the range.
- Maintaining proper security for the gate at the north side of the range and the continuing usage of gate key cards.

"Any incident of arrows penetrating the enclosure will result in our immediate closure of the range," Duncan said in the letter.

The Athletic Department immediately repaired the plywood backstop after receiving Duncan's letter, Rhodes said.

But Sylvester "Andy" Anderson, coordinator of health and safety for DPS, said that the plywood the Athletic Department used is now deteriorating.

Furthermore, the archery range is not properly supervised, especially on evenings and weekends, Anderson said.

He added he is not concerned that the ASU archery team will misfire arrows, but is worried that local hunters who use the range for target practice will miss their mark.

Jay Barrs, an assistant archery coach and a silver medalist in archery in the 1988 Summer Olympics, said there has not been an injury incident connected with the range for the past 15 years.

Anderson said that on Jan. 13, 1988, Carol Patterson, a former ASU employee, reported that she was walking in Lot 41 with two other ASU employees when an arrow flew through the chainlink fence surrounding the range and landed in the lot. No one was injured in the incident.

The arrow was fired by an archer who was not a student and not authorized to be on the range.

On April 26, 1977, an arrow nearly struck an ASU student as he walked through Lot 41.

Anderson said that space confinements on campus are at the root of the delay.

"Space is at a premium everywhere," he said.

Anderson added that he does not believe the cost of moving the range will be as expensive as a lawsuit against the University should someone be injured.

Rhodes said the athletic department is working closely with the DPS to make sure that accidents do not happen, but said she would like the range to remain where it is.

She said unauthorized use of the range is the main problem.

Gustafson was injured when he was driving north on 48th Street and crashed into a southbound Toyota pickup that was making a left turn onto Alameda Drive, police said.

The driver of the truck, 59-year-old Lonnie M. Hanks, of Phoenix, was uninjured, police said.

The accident is under investigation and no citations have

Date rape

•More than 1/3 of women raped did not discuss their experiences with anyone; more than 90 percent did not tell the police.

Perhaps more than any other crime, date rape often goes unreported. ASU Department of Public Safety Sgt. Keith Bailly said that in 1988 only 11 sexual assaults were reported to ASU police, and none of those resulted in convictions.

"We know of others that have occurred but weren't reported," Bailly said. "We have actually heard that it happened, then gone to the victim and they haven't wanted to talk."

Because date and acquaintance rape is a problem which seems to be going on unreported at ASU, students and faculty have joined together to educate men and women on the problem.

In October ASU's Residence Life received a year-long, $20,000 grant from the Arizona Department of Health Services to develop and implement date and acquaintance rape prevention programs.

The grant money has been used for presentations and programs in classrooms, residence halls and among the sororities and fraternities.

Cynthia Gorton, the program coordinator said: "I am sobered because every meeting we go to, women indicate they have been sexually assaulted. It is a real problem and it is not just with the students, it occurs among faculty also."

The program is titled "No means Know." The Dating Game: Know the rules before you play, is the title of the presentation teaching sexual and social survival skills.

Peter Russell, a hall director in Manzanita who is implementing the program in the Greek system said: "When we do programs we have evaluations filled out. We get wonderful feedback and I was surprised at the response we received."

Russell, a graduate student in liberal arts, is focusing on the Greek system because "they have more pressures put on them to be sociable and they are very socially active on campus."

Russell said they are focusing on communication between the sexes and addressing the dating scene.

"We view it as a men's and women's issue where in the past it was strictly a female issue," he said.

Pat Linderman, a graduate assistant who is working for his master's degree in social work and has worked with battered women, said, "We are not there to put blame on anyone. As a society we blame the victim. There is always a perpetrator and it is never the victim's fault."

Adler is now working with kids who have been physically or sexually abused. She often speaks to groups about her experience, and said she is often approached after she speaks by women who have also been raped by an acquaintance.

"It happens all the time," Adler said. "I've done programs and we ask how many people have had to do something against their will and we have found that more than half say yes."

"It's not the rare thing, it's the norm," Adler said.

"It's hard to get over it. It took me five years to realize it wasn't my fault."

Mother Teresa tells of hope to help 'poorest of poor'

By STACY HAYMES
State Press

Mother Teresa of Calcutta told a congregation of about 500 invited guests at the SS. Simon and Jude Cathedral in Phoenix Thursday that "today in opening this house we will give love and joy to the poorest of the poor."

The 78-year-old nun was in the Valley to open the country's 16th Foundation House, a mission aimed at helping the poor, the sick and the homeless.

The 1979 Nobel Peace Prize winner said the house, located in central Phoenix, is the 401st opened by the Missionaries of Charity, a group she established in 1948.

"The sinless mother of God," as she was called by Bishop Thomas O'Brien, began her sermon at 4:20 p.m. by thanking God for his love and the gift of being together in order to share that love.

Her sermon topics ranged from abortion to peace.

"Terrible things happen to the unborn child, and abortion has become the greatest destroyer of love and peace in the family," she said. "We must bring that love, peace and joy back into our homes."

"Hunger is not only for bread, it is the need to be loved by someone. Naked is not just to be clothed but to be pure. Homelessness is not only not having a home but being unwanted and unloved."

The sister of charity recalled an incident where she ran into a man on the streets in London. She said she shook his hand and gave him a smile, which he returned.

"I have never seen such a beautiful smile because he felt love," she said. "It was such a small action but he felt joy and love in his heart. Jesus came to love us and teach us how to love one another."

She also stressed the importance of prayer.

"It is important for the family to pray together," she said. "(They) may be poor materially but are rich in the love of God. The family that prays together stays together."

She said a recently married couple in India once offered her money, and she asked them why. They told her that instead of buying wedding clothes or a feast they wanted to give her the money.

"They said, 'We love each other so much we want to give our love,'" she said.

The 4-foot-7-inch Mother Teresa told those gathered, "It is how much love we put in the giving, not how much we give. The joy of loving is to bring love to those who have forgotten love."

Ending with "God bless you," Mother Teresa received a standing ovation.

"From the bottom of our hearts we thank you for your presence," said Bishop O'Brien. "Your words have inspired us in our mission. Thank you for your time and your sisters who remain among us in ministry."

the church she was surrounded by security guards and excited followers who longed to touch her in hopes of being blessed.

Novelist finds love between lines in 'Alibi'

By LISA HORBLIT
State Press

A murder has been committed. The suspect is a Romanian beauty. Her alibi is a novelist who has been in a writing slump for the past four years.

What does all this mean? It means that Tom Selleck's new humorous movie "Her Alibi," may actually be a box-office hit.

Phillip Blackwood (Selleck) hasn't written a book worth reading since his wife left him for a literary critic four years ago. If his inspiration isn't revived soon, both he and his editor, Sam (William Daniels), will be booted from the industry.

In a desperate pursuit to find inspiration, Blackwood decides to gather research in a courtroom, where he thinks he can find some innovative ideas.

Into the courtroom walks his story line, angelic-looking Nina (Paulina Porizkova), who is arraigned in court on a murder charge. Blackwood is so taken with her he makes up an alibi saying that the two of them are lovers and they were together the night of the murder. Blackwood successfully convinces Nina that she needs to move in with him to reinforce his story.

Now the fun begins.

The police lieutenant never bought Blackwood's story. He decides to warn Blackwood that if Nina is guilty, then all that stands between her and jail is her alibi. In other words, if Blackwood is dead then her alibi will stand, but as long as he is alive, there is the possibility he could change his mind.

Eventually Blackwood falls in love with Nina. Even though he is completely in awe of this beautiful foreign woman, he is also completely terrified of her; he believes she is trying to kill him.

Most of the movie is hilarious, probably due to the unpredictability of the slapstick scenes. Many times during the movie you expect something to happen and it usually does — it's just not what you thought was going to happen.

Throughout the movie, we hear Selleck writing his book. In his mind he believes himself to be his book character, Peter Swift. Although this method reminded me a lot of "Magnum PI" I thought it was a good humorous addition to this bizarre script. For instance, there is one scene where Blackwood is pouring himself a glass of chocolate milk. In his mind we hear:

"Swift poured himself a bourbon."

This is a perfect example of the difference in Blackwood and his invented character, Swift.

Selleck's actual performance was predictable, but it

Nina Ionescu (Paulina Porizkova) comes to the rescue of novelist Phillip Blackwood (Tom Selleck) as an arrow misses its target but hits the spot in Warner Bros.' comedy-thriller 'Her Alibi.'

works. His down-to-earth, easy-going personality makes you like his character from the beginning. So who cares if he seems to act the same in every role, as long as it's enjoyable?

As for Paulina Porizkova, her performance was actually believable. I expected her acting ability to be comparable to that of a James-Bond-model-turn-actress type, but instead, she pulled her character off quite well.

The only weak point of the film came about the last quarter or so of the movie. It seemed the ending was just thrown together. For such a well written, unpredictable beginning, the writer, Charlie Peters, should have produced an ending that wouldn't let the viewer walk away feeling cheated.

But besides that one factor, the film is definitely worth seeing. If you're tired of the same old predictable humor flick, then "Her Alibi" should be a welcome change.

Duran Duran hopes comeback will be 'big thing'

By KEITH POND
State Press

Remember Duran Duran? The ultra-hip, ultra-successful, techno-pop band that almost single-handedly launched MTV? They're back, only this time with less of an Anthony Price attitude and a new commitment to more substantial music.

One could be forgiven for expecting the normal teeny-bopper scream fest. I know I did. But, thankfully, the Duran Duran boys gave a frenetic and upbeat performance, and they let their music stand on its own merits.

Wednesday's show at the University Activity Center started with the warm-up band, The Pursuit of Happiness, playing an excellent set that concluded with their "I'm an Adult Now" that has seen some local airplay.

When Duran hit the stage, however, the crowd responded with a roar. The relatively simple stage set of raised platforms with a large background screen emphasized the group members. The three original members of the band; lead singer Simon Le Bon, keyboardist Nick Rhodes and bassist John Taylor were accompanied by a drummer, saxophonist, trombonist, guitarist and two female back-up vocalists. This diversity gave them a full sound that accurately reproduced their songs.

Beginning with a few cuts off their new album "Big Thing," Duran launched into some of their old hits, and the crowd obviously appreciated the memories. The smaller venue of the UAC allowed for a more intimate view of the band members (and an anorexic-looking John Taylor).

The back-up vocalists, dressed in tight, plastic tube dresses, danced in time when not singing and offered a shadow dancing striptease behind a ceiling-high screen. While they were entertaining in the background, the music kept coming. With Taylor's unmistakable bass punctuating Warren Cuccurullo's very competent guitar work and Sterling Campbell keeping the beat on drums, Duran played non-stop for an hour and a half and seemed to enjoy themselves.

The concert went smoothly, with only a few instances of feedback and high-end distortion to mar the sound quality.

With "Big Thing," Duran Duran hopes to show the music world they are returning from their various splinter projects as a legitimate crossover band. The concert supported this contention to a certain extent, with a broad range of ages represented but there still was a good percentage of the younger female contingent.

Although their projects in various bands such as Le Bon's "Arcadia" (with Roger Taylor and Nick Rhodes) and the "Power Station" (with John Taylor, Andy Taylor, Robert Palmer and Tony Thompson) tended to confuse their standing with longtime fans, the "new" Duran Duran is trying to make a musical statement.

With material that has a harder edge and a more mature delivery, Duran Duran could succeed in broadening their horizons without ignoring their past.

Stryper will not be performing tonight due to a sudden case of acute laryngitis striking Michael Sweet, the band's lead vocalist.

The group canceled all tour dates for the next two weeks including their "homecoming" show in Los Angeles. Stryper will schedule a return date probably sometime in March. However, tickets purchased for this show will be honored for the concert when it is rescheduled.

When they finally reach the Gammage Center stage, headbangers will be screaming "hallelujah" when Stryper hits the platform.

Touring in support of their recent "In God We Trust" LP, Stryper's theme is quite contrary to the media stereotype of heavy metal music.

"Stryper has always been a Christian band, but we haven't," Robert Sweet, drummer, said about himself and his brother, Michael, vocalist for the band. "We haven't always been Christian or involved with the Christian group. (But) Stryper has always sang about their beliefs in Christ from day one, and we've been together for about 4 years," Michael said.

Is it a hoax? Could this band possibly be using a religious base to laugh all the way to the bank? After all, why not go to the opposite of extremes from what rock 'n' roll has always been accused of . . . satanic messages.

"It wasn't a situation where it was a great idea or a great gimmick to do or we thought it would be the next phase," Michael Sweet said. "It was pretty much becoming a Christian.

"When you become a Christian, some things in your life change — but we knew we didn't have to stop playing rock music or give up our careers or anything like that," he continued.

"We just knew we had to change what we sang about, the message behind the music and what we stood for," Robert Sweet said.

Though the lyrics of Stryper's music convey personal attitudes of the members, their goal is to spread a positive influence among their followers.

"We also feel music in general, not just rock music, seems to always have a certain message to it, whether it's to do with drugs or women or party or whatever it may be," Michael Sweet said. "We wanted to show the world that it doesn't have to be that way. You can bring new ideas into music, yet the music can still speak for itself."

Debuting in 1984 with their mini-album, "The Yellow and Black Attack," the group, displayed in bumble bee colors, has seen the rise of four LPs and two full length music video recordings. Their previous album, "To Hell With the Devil" sold over one-million copies as well as a number one video hit on MTV called "Honestly." And Stryper went on its way. Respectively, "To Hell with the Devil" was also nominated for a Grammy Award.

The latest release, "In God We Trust," proves to be a bit controversial, combining U.S. currency on the front cover with the basic religious theme of the band.

But the band doesn't seem to be worried. "It just so happens that we are singing about something that is a little bit different than what most rock bands sing about. How can being positive create so much controversy?"

Celtic harpist to serenade audiences at Kerr tonight

By JENNIFER LYNN JOHNSON
State Press

Songs, stories and silver strings will fill Kerr Cultural Center when Patrick Ball, a storyteller and harpist in the tradition of the Irish minstrels, performs tonight at 8.

Ball's concerts are comprised of ancient tunes and stories from Ireland and Appalachia. He accompanies himself on the Celtic harp, a 32-stringed instrument that has a sweet but resonant sound. The wit and enchantment of the old tales blend with the song of the harp to create a warm and magical performance. Ball earned a master's degree in British history in his native home of San Francisco. While attending a craft school in North Carolina, he began hearing the Appalachian folk tales from the ancient oral traditions.

Fascinated by the stories, he traveled to Britain to attend the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Arts, where he studied old dialects and learned more stories. He decided to become a professional storyteller after living for a time in West Ireland and absorbing the tales and traditions of the people there.

Of his beginning with the Celtic harp, Ball will admit only that he learned from a musician he met "along the way." He had perhaps seven lessons, after which he had to develop his own technique. His mastery of the harp comes through in his performance; the wire-stringed lap harp has a delicate but powerful sound in Ball's hands.

Celtic harpists are few and far between in the United States, but Ball has made the instrument more accessible through recordings and concert tours. He has produced three solo albums: "Celtic Harp" volumes one, two and three, as well as a soundtrack album of the children's classic, "The Ugly Duckling," performed with Cher.

The Louise Lincoln Kerr Cultural Center is located at 6110 N. Scottsdale Road, just south of The Borgata. Tickets for the performance are $8, on sale at Gammage Center, all Dillard's box offices and at the door. For more information, call 965-5377.

Apartheid not toughest bridge to cross in 'Rivers'

By JENNIFER YEE
State Press

"That's what ignorance is — being offered the chance to be enlightened and refusing it." — Billie Harris as Robert Mimbaktu, in "Many Rivers to Cross."

Quite an enlightening statement in itself, when you think about it. In fact, the whole play is enlightening. Amanda Jobe's Master's project, "Many Rivers to Cross," successfully deals with Apartheid in a humanistic way that anyone can relate to.

Simply stated, this original play is a social/political love story. Set in the highly tense country of South Africa, a white woman, Jennifer Wilson (played by Jobe herself), and a black man, Robert Mimbaktu (Billie Harris), meet and fall in love. Consequently, they are forced to deal with the social and political aspects of racism. No one wants them together — not friends, not family, not the government. While it may sound typical, there's a creative twist that gives this piece its impact: music.

Jennifer and Robert meet through their mutual interest in music. He is a songwriter, and she is a singer looking for inspirational music to record. Ballads of friendship, love and the obstacles that are encountered in life enhance the message that this piece is sending out. Simple lyrics such as "Many rivers to cross," and "I can't see to find my way over," are sung by both characters with an emotion that strikes the heart.

The performers are strong, talented and exude a great deal of understanding about Apartheid. As well they should, since Jobe spent two weeks in New York researching for this project.

There is no hidden meaning in this play. Practically every instance in dealing with Apartheid is portrayed realistically. Nothing is over-dramatized, nothing left to the imagination except that this is reality being acted out. Jobe's intentions of presenting the news in a way that people will feel for it is highly successful.

Left, C.C. (Katie McFadzen) warns Jennifer (Amanda Jobe) about the wrong kind of love in 'Many Rivers to Cross,' an ASU Theater Scholarship production.

In order to better understand our world, we need to be exposed to scenarios that will enable us to relate. If we avoid this exposure — these chances to be enlightened, then as the character states, we are being ignorant.

Isn't that what Apartheid is? "Many Rivers to Cross" is playing at 8 p.m. nightly through Sunday at Drama City, located in Tower Center. Tickets are $7, $5 for students.

Close cuts her hair to avoid people

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "Fatal Attraction" star Glenn Close says she had to change her appearance because of the recognition she received after her performance in the film as Alex, the enraged jilted lover.

"I was surprised the picture became the phenomenon it did," Close said of the film in a recent interview in the Sunday Tennessean. "It was amazing."

"I even cut my hair because people were jumping out of my way. My hair stylist says people come in wanting their hair 'done like Glenn Close's.'" Her blond hair was in a distinctive curly style for the film.

"I am kind of an average-looking woman and, until recently, I've been able to travel around pretty much without hindrance. Alex has changed all that, too.

"I don't think any of us realized how emotional people would be about 'Fatal Attraction' and how much they'd hate my guts and want to see me blown away."

"I was very upset when I heard that people applauded when the faithful wife said, 'If you come near my family, I'll kill you.' To me, as I knew the Alex character, she was extremely tragic. All that was taken away in the final version."

ASU wrestlers intend to pin No. 1 ranking

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

The two superpowers are about to collide and the results will affect the nation and a group of 20 men.

This confrontation is not the classic U.S. and Soviet Union matchup, but a battle closer to home.

The second-ranked ASU wrestling team (13-2-1) will play host to the top-ranked Oklahoma State Cowboys, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the University Activity Center.

The matchup is the third meeting of the two squads. In the two previous contests the Cowboys (18-0) have outdueled ASU by scores of 22-13 and 23-10, respectively.

But the Sun Devils have the upper hand on OSU in this meeting.

These warriors of the mat are familiar with each other and for the Sun Devils it is obvious what is needed for a victory.

"I feel we're psyched up for the match," ASU 190-pounder John Ginther, "but I don't feel we're full strength."

Senior Jim Gressley, 177 pounder, will miss the OSU contest due to a herniated disk in his neck.

"We need to wrestle with intensity," ASU coach Bobby Douglas said.

Douglas' grapplers have not achieved the number one ranking this season. Prior to their national title last season, ASU held the top billing for five weeks before being knocked off by Iowa State.

However, it will be the Sun Devils who look to dethrone the best team in the country.

The momentum of the meet will be set in the 118-pound matchup between two All-Americans: ASU's Zeke Jones and OSU's Cory Baze.

Jones (25-5), is currently ranked eighth while Baze holds down the seventh-place slot.

The Sun Devil is coming off of a win over Baze, which was the first victory of the year over the Cowboy for Jones.

"It is a pivotal match, even though it is the first one of the night," Jones said. "Whoever wins the first one will tell the story of the whole night."

Paired up in the 126-pound matchup will be ASU freshman Marco Sanchez (13-12-1) and OSU junior Kendall Cross. Cross is ranked second in his weight class and boasts an undefeated 20-0 record. In those 20 wins, Cross has recorded 10 major decisions and six falls.

In the 134-pound match, Sun Devil Andy McNaughton (15-12-1) will wrestle Cowboy Chuck Barbee.

Another close match is expected in the 142-pound weight class, Sun Devil Junior Saunders is ranked seventh with a

ASU goes down in defeat; Anderson contributes 21

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

When the Sun Devil basketball team lost center Mark Becker to a broken wrist, the future appeared bleak.

But one man shined for a crowd of 3,613. Making his first collegiate start, Matt Anderson excited fans by scoring a career-high 21 points in the Sun Devils' 75-60 loss to 20th-ranked Stanford (16-5, 8-3).

Anderson, a sophomore, pumped in 19 second-half points, including a run of nine points.

"In the second half things started clicking for me," he said. "I wished that I had 20-30 more minutes to play. When you get that feeling, you never want to stop."

The Sun Devils (10-9, 3-7) could not rely on Anderson alone. Their leading scorer Trent Edwards, who averages 17.5 points a game, finished the night with 14 points and played only 28 minutes as he sat down late in the second half with four fouls.

ASU jumped out to a 6-3 lead at the 17:17 mark in the opening half but the Cardinal express behind All-America candidate Todd Litchi took control.

Litchi scored 17 of Stanford's 25 first half points.

But he was the only Cardinal that had a good shooting night. As a team, they shot 39.1 percent from the field in the first half.

ASU coach Steve Patterson saw his Sun Devils keep up with Stanford as they trailed by four points, 25-21, at intermission.

"We played the first half how we wanted to," Patterson said.

"Litchi, is this guy unbelievable or what? What can he not do? He had a super performance."

The senior contributed 30 points in the winning effort and moved into sole possession of third place with 2,102 points, in the Pac-10 all-time leading scorer list. Litchi trails Arizona's Sean Elliott and UCLA's Lew Alcindor (Kareem Abdul Jabbar).

"One-on-one, I feel pretty confident," he said. "If they double team me, it is my job to get the ball to an open man."

The second half was all Stanford as it outscored the Sun Devils, 50-39 en route to a Pac-10 win.

ASU trailed by 20 points twice in the second half, but a depleted Sun Devil bench cut the advantage to 13 before a last-second shot made the final margin 15 points.

While Anderson was the star of the show, freshman Ron Waller put in 34 quality minutes. Despite scoring only four points, the guard hauled in a team-high six rebounds and recorded three blocked shots.

"For the relatively inexperienced freshmen, they did a good job," Patterson said. "They are still a little green, but they are showing progress."

Waller's colleague Adrian Brown, a freshman, scored three points and added three rebounds.

ASU shot 50 percent from the floor in the second half and 48.9 for the game, but was plagued with 23 turnovers, most coming in key moments. Stanford capitalized from the Sun Devils' mishaps and stole the game away.

"We need to try to execute patience," Patterson said. "You never want to get beat like this, but we made real progress."

The Sun Devils play host to California, 4 p.m. Saturday in the University Activity Center.

Top-ranked teams contend with ASU in Devil swim meet

By CHRIS NACKINO
State Press

Three of the nation's top-10 men's swimming teams will highlight action against 10th-ranked Arizona State this weekend at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

On Friday, the Sun Devils play host to eighth-ranked California (1-1) at 3:00 p.m. and continue action on Saturday against fourth-ranked Stanford (0-1) and seventh-ranked Nebraska (6-1) at noon.

"We have been training very hard and the team is a little tired," ASU head coach Ron Johnson said. "But we expect an outstanding weekend and we are hoping to get a few new NCAA qualifying marks."

The Sun Devils have already qualified five swimmers for the NCAA championships including Rich Shinnick (200-meter butterfly), Ross Anderson (butterfly), Paul Howe (freestyle), Yan Cardineau (1650-m distance freestyle) and freshman David LeBlanc (breaststroke).

"LeBlanc is probably the fastest and best freshman prospect that we've had come in," Johnson said. "I think he could be one of the top breaststroker figures on the team and a great figure for the future."

All five, with the exception of Shinnick and Cardineau, qualified at the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul and became eligible to swim with the Sun Devils in the fall.

"We are a much stronger team with the new swimmers," Johnson said. "I think if we can get everyone well by the end of the season we can place the best we ever have at the NCAA and the Pac-10s."

Senior distance swimmer Shinnick will lead the squad in the distance and butterfly events, two areas Johnson feels ASU should dominate this weekend.

"Shinnick is our ironman — he swims the 1,000 and 500-meter freestyle and 200-meter butterfly . . . probably the toughest program you can have," Johnson said. "I can't say enough about Richard except that he's a tremendous example for the team."

ASU swimmer Rich Shinnick, Ross Anderson, Yan Cardineau, Paul Howe and David LeBlanc have already qualified for the 1989 NCAA championships. They will lead the men's swimming team this weekend against California and Nebraska.

Also expected to provide depth are freshmen Richard Tapper and David Noble, sophomores Anderson, Eric Wilhelm and David Burgess and juniors Cardineau, Howe, David Fix, and Chris Jantz.

"We have the best group of distance swimmers in the nation right now," Johnson said. "They are a red hot group with a lot of depth."

Although the Sun Devils consist primarily of underclassmen, with only three seniors on the roster, Johnson said this year's team is the best he has coached at ASU.

"In my 14-years of coaching, I have enjoyed this group the best . . . they all have great discipline and energy," Johnson said. "Considering it's a very young group, we have great leadership from every angle, even from the younger guys."

Providing the weekend's toughest competition are the defending Pac-10 Conference champions Stanford, who are led by 1988 Summer Olympics three-time gold medalist Jay

Mortenson, along with teammate John Witchel, who also participated in Seoul, Korea and took first in the 500m freestyle.

"They have great depth in almost every event and are very experienced," Johnson said. "They really do not have a weakness on the paper."

1988 Big-8 titlist Nebraska, with the assistance of current 50m freestyle world-record holder Peter Williams, will provide tough non-conference competition for Sun Devils.

"They come in with a vastly improved program that is definitely on the rise," Johnson said. "With Williams, who could be consider the fastest human in the world, they will provide great competition."

"I believe this team is one of the most underrated in the country," Johnson said. "We should have a close meet against all three teams. Nebraska and California should provide comparable competition, however, Stanford should be a little tougher."

Ron Kamaugh, the nation's No. 1, 200m individual medalist and 200m breaststroker, will also provide strength for the Bears.

Sun Devils to make first road trip of young season

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

This infant season has the Sun Devil baseball team undefeated, but there may be a troubled adolescence this weekend when they travel to face Florida State for a two-game series.

The Devils (4-0) are currently ranked No. 5 by Baseball America and No. 10 by Collegiate Baseball. The Seminoles are rated 16th and 3rd by the two polls.

ASU coach Jim Brock said it is always his intent to schedule a road series against a tough opponent before the conference season begins as part of the "getting ready process."

"There are some things you learn by being on the road — just by being on the road," Brock said. "You can't just tell them the night before 'Well, this is how it's going to be.'"

"Your operation has to be much more efficient."

Brock said the players must experience and get used to pitching in front of a hostile crowd and on a different field.

Given the youth of this year's team, the FSU trip should provide needed experience and stability later in the year.

"It'll be a different level of emotion," Brock said. "It will be the first time for a lot of these kids, going into a ballpark where everybody's against you."

Sunday's game will be televised nationwide on ESPN, adding to the heat of the spotlight.

"For the young guys, as soon as they see those cameras, I'm sure it will be a scary time for them," Brock said.

Sun Devil catcher Tucker Hammargren, who was injured in a play at the plate in Wednesday's game, has a strained ligament in his right knee. ASU trainer Bruce Kalish said Hammargren is probable for the weekend, but even if he can not play, it is not a lasting injury.

Hammargren had been splitting time with sophomore Jim Henderson in the absence of Eric Helfand, who is out with a broken bone in his wrist.

But Henderson is also out now for an indefinite period of time due to recurring arm trouble.

"His arm is definitely sore," Brock said. "The more he throws the worse it gets. I don't think he's ready to play right now."

The catching depth chart looks like a missing in action list: Helfand, Henderson and possibly Hammargren for the weekend.

If Hammargren cannot play, the job will go to Dave Robson, a freshman from Tempe High School.

Although Robson needs more work defensively, Brock said his offensive skills are promising.

"He's a real gamer, he rises to the occasion," Brock said. "He has the potential to be the best hitter of the bunch."

Having inexperienced catchers force the coaching staff into calling pitches from the dugout, a situation which Brock does not like at all.

Last Tuesday, Cal-Poly Pomona was stealing pitches somewhere in the transition. Brock said it was "more than just guessing," and added he would like to get away from calling from the dugout as soon as possible.

Pitching for the Devils this weekend will be Brian Dodd (1-0) on Saturday and Rusty Kilgo (0-0) on Sunday.

City Council agrees to lure professional teams to Tempe

By BEN McCONNELL
State Press

Buoyed by the success of landing the Phoenix Cardinals, the Tempe City Council approved spending $125,000 Thursday night on a project that aims to attract professional baseball and basketball teams to its sports-oriented city.

The money will go toward studies that will assess what kind of economic impact that Major League Baseball and the National Basketball League would have on Tempe. Touche Ross, a Tempe accounting firm that completed a similar study on the Cardinals, will conduct the project.

In its study on the Cardinals, Touche Ross found the professional football team's fans added $440,000 to city tax coffers.

In the new study, Tempe will spend $105,000 to find out how much revenue a professional baseball team would bring in. It will also be used to lure Phoenix Firebirds owner Martin Stone to build a stadium in south Tempe. Stone is also negotiating with Phoenix officials for a stadium.

A Tempe official said that Stone will be forced to decide soon between Phoenix and Tempe because Phoenix has until the end of the year to issue tax-free bonds for a new stadium.

"Martin Stone realizes he's going to have to reach a decision point," said Jerry Geiger, a Tempe deputy city manager. He said Stone should decide his plans by late spring.

Stone could not be reached for comment.

"The major goal of the Phoenix Firebirds organization is to be in a good position to capture expansion teams," said Gary Brown, Tempe's deputy city manager.

Brown said Major League Baseball plans to create two expansion clubs in the next two years.

Tampa, Fla. and Denver reportedly top a short list of cities in the running for expansion teams, he added.

Tempe's $105,000 study should tell professional baseball officials that Tempe wants to be a top contender, Brown said.

"Now we can get into serious talks and negotiations," he said.

At the same time, Tempe will direct $15,000 toward studying the effects of a professional basketball team on the city's economy.

Tempe officials have said they want to stand poised in bringing the Phoenix Suns to ASU's 14,000-seat Activity Center if talks between the basketball club and the city of Phoenix collapse.

But the city does not intend to interfere with the negotiations between the Suns and Phoenix, a Tempe official said.

"We understand the integrity of those negotiations," said Patrick Flynn, Tempe's director of management services.

Under its tentative plans to lure a professional baseball team to Tempe, the city would give Diablo Stadium and the surrounding land in west Tempe to SunCor Development Co., which would hand over 120 acres it owns near Elliot and Kyrene roads in south Tempe as a stadium site.

Stone has offered to build a 14,000-seat stadium at the property, Brown said. If he lands a major league team, Stone would expand the stadium to 45,000 seats, Brown added.

Top-ranked teams contend with ASU in Devil swim meet

By CHRIS NACKINO
State Press

Three of the nation's top-10 men's swimming teams will highlight action against 10th-ranked Arizona State this weekend at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

On Friday, the Sun Devils play host to eighth-ranked California (1-1) at 3:00 p.m. and continue action on Saturday against fourth-ranked Stanford (0-1) and seventh-ranked Nebraska (6-1) at noon.

"We have been training very hard and the team is a little tired," ASU head coach Ron Johnson said. "But we expect an outstanding weekend and we are hoping to get a few new NCAA qualifying marks."

The Sun Devils have already qualified five swimmers for the NCAA championships including Rich Shinnick (200-meter butterfly), Ross Anderson (butterfly), Paul Howe (freestyle), Yan Cardineau (1650-m distance freestyle) and freshman David LeBlanc (breaststroke).

"LeBlanc is probably the fastest and best freshman prospect that we've had come in," Johnson said. "I think he could be one of the top breaststroker figures on the team and a great figure for the future."

All five, with the exception of Shinnick and Cardineau, qualified at the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul and became eligible to swim with the Sun Devils in the fall.

"We are a much stronger team with the new swimmers," Johnson said. "I think if we can get everyone well by the end of the season we can place the best we ever have at the NCAA and the Pac-10s."

Senior distance swimmer Shinnick will lead the squad in the distance and butterfly events, two areas Johnson feels ASU should dominate this weekend.

"Shinnick is our ironman — he swims the 1,000 and 500-meter freestyle and 200-meter butterfly . . . probably the toughest program you can have," Johnson said. "I can't say enough about Richard except that he's a tremendous example for the team."

Also expected to provide depth are freshmen Richard Tapper and David Noble, sophomores Anderson, Eric Wilhelm and David Burgess and juniors Cardineau, Howe, David Fix, and Chris Jantz.

"We have the best group of distance swimmers in the nation right now," Johnson said. "They are a red hot group with a lot of depth."

Although the Sun Devils consist primarily of underclassmen, with only three seniors on the roster, Johnson said this year's team is the best he has coached at ASU.

"In my 14-years of coaching, I have enjoyed this group the best . . . they all have great discipline and energy," Johnson said. "Considering it's a very young group, we have great leadership from every angle, even from the younger guys."

Providing the weekend's toughest competition are the defending Pac-10 Conference champions Stanford, who are led by 1988 Summer Olympics three-time gold medalist Jay

Mortenson, along with teammate John Witchel, who also participated in Seoul, Korea and took first in the 500m freestyle.

"They have great depth in almost every event and are very experienced," Johnson said. "They really do not have a weakness on the paper."

1988 Big-8 titlist Nebraska, with the assistance of current 50m freestylist world-record holder Peter Williams, will provide tough non-conference competition for Sun Devils.

"They come in with a vastly improved program that is definitely on the rise," Johnson said. "With Williams, who could be consider the fastest human in the world, they will provide great competition."

"I believe this team is one of the most underrated in the country," Johnson said. "We should have a close meet against all three teams. Nebraska and California should provide comparable competition, however, Stanford should be a little tougher."

Ron Kamaugh, the nation's No. 1, 200m individual medalist and 200m breaststroker, will also provide strength for the Bears.

Sun Devils to make first road trip of young season

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

This infant season has the Sun Devil baseball team undefeated, but there may be a troubled adolescence this weekend when they travel to face Florida State for a two-game series.

The Devils (4-0) are currently ranked No. 5 by Baseball America and No. 10 by Collegiate Baseball. The Seminoles are rated 16th and 3rd by the two polls.

ASU coach Jim Brock said it is always his intent to schedule a road series against a tough opponent before the conference season begins as part of the "getting ready process."

"There are some things you learn by being on the road — just by being on the road," Brock said. "You can't just tell them the night before 'Well, this is how it's going to be.'"

"Your operation has to be much more efficient." Brock said the players must experience and get used to playing in front of a hostile crowd and on a different field.

Given the youth of this year's team, the FSU trip should provide needed experience and stability later in the year.

"It'll be a different level of emotion," Brock said. "It will be the first time for a lot of these kids, going into a ballpark where everybody's against you."

Sunday's game will be televised nationwide on ESPN, adding to the heat of the spotlight.

"For the young guys, as soon as they see those cameras, I'm sure it will be a scary time for them," Brock said.

Sun Devil catcher Tucker Hammargren, who was injured in a play at the plate in Wednesday's game, has a strained ligament in his right knee. ASU trainer Bruce Kalish said Hammargren is probable for the weekend, but even if he can not play, it is not a lasting injury.

Hammargren had been splitting time with sophomore Jim Henderson in the absence of Eric Helfand, who is out with a broken bone in his wrist.

But Henderson is also out now for an indefinite period of time due to recurring arm trouble.

"His arm is definitely sore," Brock said. "The more he throws the worse it gets. I don't think he's ready to play right now."

The catching depth chart looks like a missing in action list: Helfand, Henderson and possibly Hammargren for the weekend.

If Hammargren cannot play, the job will go to Dave Robson, a freshman from Tempe High School.

Although Robson needs more work defensively, Brock said his offensive skills are promising.

"He's a real gamer, he rises to the occasion," Brock said. "He has the potential to be the best hitter of the bunch."

Having inexperienced catchers force the coaching staff into calling pitches from the dugout, a situation which Brock does not like at all.

Last Tuesday, Cal-Poly Pomona was stealing pitches somewhere in the transition. Brock said it was "more than just guessing," and added he would like to get away from calling from the dugout as soon as possible.

Pitching for the Devils this weekend will be Brian Dodd (1-0) on Saturday and Rusty Kilgo (0-0) on Sunday.

City Council agrees to lure professional teams to Tempe

By BEN McCONNELL
State Press

Buoyed by the success of landing the Phoenix Cardinals, the Tempe City Council approved spending $125,000 Thursday night on a project that aims to attract professional baseball and basketball teams to its sports-oriented city.

The money will go toward studies that will assess what kind of economic impact that Major League Baseball and the National Basketball League would have on Tempe. Touche Ross, a Tempe accounting firm that completed a similar study on the Cardinals, will conduct the project.

In its study on the Cardinals, Touche Ross found the professional football team's fans added $440,000 to city tax coffers.

In the new study, Tempe will spend $105,000 to find out how much revenue a professional baseball team would bring in. It will also be used to lure Phoenix Firebirds owner Martin Stone to build a stadium in south Tempe. Stone is also negotiating with Phoenix officials for a stadium.

A Tempe official said that Stone will be forced to decide soon between Phoenix and Tempe because Phoenix has until the end of the year to issue tax-free bonds for a new stadium.

"Martin Stone realizes he's going to have to reach a decision point," said Jerry Geiger, a Tempe deputy city manager. He said Stone should decide his plans by late spring.

Stone could not be reached for comment.

"The major goal of the Phoenix Firebirds organization is to be in a good position to capture expansion teams," said Gary Brown, Tempe's deputy city manager.

Brown said Major League Baseball plans to create two expansion clubs in the next two years.

Tampa, Fla. and Denver reportedly top a short list of cities in the running for expansion teams, he added.

Tempe's $105,000 study should tell professional baseball officials that Tempe wants to be a top contender, Brown said.

"Now we can get into serious talks and negotiations," he said.

At the same time, Tempe will direct $15,000 toward studying the effects of a professional basketball team on the city's economy.

Tempe officials have said they want to stand poised in bringing the Phoenix Suns to ASU's 14,000-seat Activity Center if talks between the basketball club and the city of Phoenix collapse.

But the city does not intend to interfere with the negotiations between the Suns and Phoenix, a Tempe official said.

"We understand the integrity of those negotiations," said Patrick Flynn, Tempe's director of management services.

Under its tentative plans to lure a professional baseball team to Tempe, the city would give Diablo Stadium and the surrounding land in west Tempe to SunCor Development Co., which would hand over 120 acres it owns near Elliot and Kyrene roads in south Tempe as a stadium site.

Stone has offered to build a 14,000-seat stadium at the property, Brown said. If he lands a major league team, Stone would expand the stadium to 45,000 seats, Brown added.

California: last stop for ASU

By KYLE D. ENG
State Press

The ASU women's basketball team will play its final two games of a seven-game Pac-10 road trip tonight at Stanford and Saturday at California.

ASU (7-10, 1-6 Pac-10), which has not won any of its five previous away games, will begin the California swing against fourth-ranked Stanford.

The Cardinal (15-2, 7-0), which is enjoying a nine-game winning streak, has lost only twice this season — to No. 1 Tennessee and No. 13 North Carolina State.

The Cardinal's leading scorer is junior forward Katy Steding, who averages 15.7 points and 6.3 rebounds per game. Steding is one of eight players on the team who clears the 6-foot mark. Senior center Jill Yanke (6 points, 2.9 rebounds) towers over opponents at 6-foot-5.

"The thing about them is that they are just so big," said ASU head coach Maura McHugh, whose Devils are 1-6 in their last seven meetings with Stanford. "They control the boards (and) play well at home. They're just so deep on the bench."

On Saturday, ASU will travel to Berkeley, Calif., to face the California

Bears. The Bears (7-10, 2-5) are currently in seventh place in the Pac-10, but suffered major injuries that might affect their game this week.

Last week California lost the services of 6-foot-1 freshman forward Trisha Stafford, and 5-foot-11 senior guard Mia Kuusisto. Stafford (11.3 and 5.9) and Kuusisto (7.5 and 3.8) will both be lost for the season after they suffered torn knee ligaments in a game against Oregon State last Friday.

"I'm not taking it (the injuries) for granted," McHugh said. "I know that we're going to have to go out and play a solid 40 minutes of basketball — not the 20 minutes we have been playing."

Ice Devil trip ends idle period

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

After a two-week layoff, the ASU Ice Devil hockey club resumes action in New Mexico Saturday and Sunday with a two-game series against a team of Albuquerque all-stars.

The Ice Devils (2-8) have been idle since Jan. 20-21, when ASU lost a pair of games to powerhouse Arizona, 4-3 and 5-1.

Ice Devils coach Dan Murphy said the close losses served as moral victories at the time, but also said he was unsure to what extent the long layoff will affect the team.

Murphy said that since this weekend's games are just exhibitions, the club decided to save money and did not conduct its usual Tuesday practice, but did have practice Thursday.

"They will be a little rusty but a lot of them skate on their own," he said.

Murphy said the Albuquerque team is helping the ASU club with its expenses and will cover the cost of the team's stay in New Mexico as an incentive to travel.

But ASU can be thankful the weekend series is only for exhibition as the club will be leaving behind its top players.

Murphy said the team will be without the services of junior forwards Kevin Gallassini and Kevin Hicks, both of whom can't make the trip because of other commitments.

The duo combined for three of the Devils' five goals against Arizona.

But Murphy said the exhibitions are mainly for experience and to prepare his club for upcoming games that will count in the standings.

"Our big thing is going to Colorado and returning home to try and beat USC and UCLA," he said. "We want to win those games."

The Ice Devils will play the University of Colorado Feb. 17 and Colorado University Feb. 18 before returning to the Valley to play UCLA March 4-5 and USC March 17-18.

"We're on the road and it may be tough, but I'm very encouraged with what we've done with limited resources," Murphy said.

Wrestling

25-4 record and is to duel with Mark Toarmina, the nation's six-ranked grappler who holds a 16-4-1 mark.

"He's defeated me twice already," Saunders said. "I'm really looking forward to wrestling him again. I have been watching the tapes and I'm ready for him."

One wrestler will go home with four losses as the 150-pound match has Sun Devil Thom Ortiz, 25-3, going against Todd Chesbro, 23-3. The Cowboy is ranked fifth while Ortiz, the Midlands 150-pound champion is ranked sixth.

"It is going to be a battle," Ortiz said. "We need the crowd support."

National champion contender Dan St. John, 31-1, holds the upper hand over his OSU opponent. The junior is on track for post season accolades and has gotten the best of Cowboy Jeff McAllister twice this year.

While St. John should dominate his match, the 167-pound duel could tout surprises as ASU's G.T. Taylor (11-4-1) will take on top-ranked Mike Farrell.

Gressley will be on the sidelines watching Travis Fagen wrestle the second-ranked Cowboy Chris Barnes.

Manning the upper weight classes for the Sun Devils are Ginther and freshman Mike Anderson, HWT.

Ginther (12-3-2) will face Randy Couture an opponent he defeated in the last meeting. Anderson wrestles Don Frye in the final match of the evening. Anderson will carry a 13-6-2 mark into the match.

Taylor said, "it's going to be a barn-burner."
