

Proposed budget lower than regent request

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

ASU would receive nearly $173.4 million in state funds next year — about $30 million less than the Arizona Board of Regents had requested — under a budget proposal released Monday by the Joint Legislative Budget Committee.

The JLBC recommendation drew immediate criticism from Tempe lawmakers and ASU officials who say the JLBC budget is not enough to fund the University's operations next year.

Todd

The budget committee proposed that the University receive $173,388,500 from the state general fund in 1990, while an additional $54 million would be provided to the University from tuition revenues. ASU officials and the regents had requested $203.5 million from state coffers.

The JLBC budget proposal recommended that $486.5 million be spent for operations at the three Arizona universities as part of a $3.1 billion state spending plan in fiscal year 1989.

"It's a lousy deal," said Sen. Doug Todd, R-Tempe, and a member of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee that handles university budgets.

"We have a long way to go before we get the appropriations bill out," Todd said. "We are going to fight down to the bitter end."

Gov. Rose Mofford, in a budget plan released in January recommended that the University receive $187 million from the general fund, a 10 percent increase above the 1988 appropriation.

Monday, Mike McCormick, an education special assistant for Mofford, said he would have to look over the budget plan before commenting.

"I'm sure the University is disappointed," McCormick said.

Alan Carroll, director of ASU's Budget Office, said the University still is analyzing the recommendation.

"I wouldn't say it looks good," Carroll said. "We would obviously have to come up with a new spending plan."

Carroll said University budget officials plan to meet with legislators Feb. 17 to address the proposal.

He said he was not surprised by the budget committee's proposal.

"It's not unusual," he said. "The state's having revenue problems."

The JLBC also recommended that ASU West Campus receive $14.3 million, $3 million less than the regents had requested. UofA would receive $188.8 million, $30 million less than it had requested. NAU would be allocated $62.4 million, about $12 million less than requested.

In fiscal year 1988, ASU received $151.5 million for the Tempe campus and $7.5 million for ASU West. UofA received $171.4 million and NAU received $54.5 million.

ASU would receive an additional $2.8 million in special appropriations to offset past funding inequities between the University and UofA.

Another $658,500 would be appropriated for student financial aid at ASU.

Alan Price, a spokesman and chief lobbyist for the regents, said the budget is "a complicated deal and we haven't had time to analyze it."

Regents studying asbestos cleanup for ASU dorms

By ADRIANE HOPKINS
State Press

The discovery of asbestos material in six ASU residence halls has prompted the Arizona Board of Regents to initiate a study on how the cancer-causing material should be removed and at what cost.

Henry Mortarotti, ASU's director of planning and construction, said the asbestos has been found in Manzanita, Palo Verde East and West, Ocotillo, Mariposa and Sahuaro halls.

A building-by-building identification program begun in 1985 surveyed 75 of the 125 University-owned or operated buildings to check for asbestos materials. Eighteen of those buildings were identified as containing sprayed asbestos materials.

The removal of the asbestos is expected to cost about $3.3 million, said Bob Williams, associate director of capital improvements for the Arizona Board of Regents.

Williams said the regents' resource committee requested that a recommendation be presented at the board's March meeting, including the laws and requirements that must be followed during asbestos abatement.

Williams said the regents want to act now and make sure funds are set aside for the project before a federal law requires the board to act. Currently, there are not laws governing asbestos at colleges and universities.

Furthermore, Mortarotti said that by removing the asbestos now, the risk of exposing students will be lessened.

Asbestos contains silicate minerals that were used extensively in building materials until the mid-1970s. Buildings built after the mid-70s are considered asbestos-free.

A regents report released in January said: "Recent medical evidence shows some cases of asbestos related diseases have been caused by very low exposure to asbestos dust in the air."

But Alan Philipi, a doctor at the Student Health Center who also is responsible for monitoring occupational safety for ASU employees and students, said the asbestos in the halls will not make students sick.

"There are two main reasons why the asbestos does not pose a serious health risk to students," he said. "One is that the exposure to asbestos while students are in the residence halls is minimal."

Committee studies possible third ASU site

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

A newly formed Mesa Chamber of Commerce committee studying the need for an east Mesa university campus is looking at a third ASU campus or possibly luring a prestigious out-of-state school to the area.

Gene Meeker, president of the Mesa Chamber of Commerce, said the committee is studying the need for a 4-year institution in east Mesa and not limiting its choice to Arizona institutions.

"The purpose (of the committee) is to bring a 4-year university to the city of Mesa (such as an) east Valley campus of ASU or a 4-year private institution," he said. "Whoever we can attract."

Some out-of-state institutions that the committee is considering include Notre Dame, Brigham Young University and Stanford, Meeker said.

The committee is comprised of business people and educators from the east Valley and is chaired by former Senate President Carl Kunasek.

ASU is not represented on the committee, but Joe Matt, associate director for ASU's office of institutional analysis, will provide information to the committee.

ASU provost Richard Peck, chairman of an ASU committee studying the possibility of a third ASU campus, said he is willing to work with the Mesa committee in its study of expanding higher education in the east Valley.

Peck added that demographics need to be gathered to determine the location of another campus.

"Wherever we build it will have an impact on property values," he said. He added that an out-of-state institution would not be a threat ASU.

"I'm not concerned about it," he said. "It might help our enrollment by making it smaller."

Mesa Community College is represented on the committee by Larry Christianson, president of MCC.

Christianson said he supports an east Mesa campus because it will provide more possibilities for MCC graduates.

He added he is concerned that increasing enrollment at ASU will prevent community college graduates from attending a university.

"We want to be a supporting partner," he said.

Kunasek said ASU officials have expressed interest to him about constructing an east Mesa campus.

Bartosh

Associated Students' President John Fees said ASU needs to examine the possibility of an east Mesa campus.

"ASU should move toward that direction," he said. "The Valley is in dire need of educational services."

The committee had its first meeting on Wednesday and Kunasek said he hopes to have information about east Mesa's population and enrollment projections by March 8.

Dukakis' wife enters alcohol treatment center for problem

BOSTON (AP) — Kitty Dukakis, the wife of Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, has entered an alcohol treatment program in Newport, R.I., according to a statement issued by the governor's press office today that blamed the letdown on his failed presidential campaign.

Mrs. Dukakis, 52, has had a history of addictions and chemical dependency but was never known to be dependent on alcohol until the statement was released this afternoon.

In July 1987, Mrs. Dukakis announced that she had recovered earlier from a 26-year dependency on diet pills. The governor's wife said she had conquered her addiction to amphetamines, which she hid from her husband.

Dukakis said his wife entered the Edgehill Newport facility Sunday evening and will stay there for about 30 days.

"Until shortly after election day on Nov. 8, Kitty had never had a problem with alcohol," Dukakis said.

"Unfortunately, a combination of physical exhaustion, the stress of the campaign effort and the post-election letdown all combined to create a situation in which, on a limited number of occasions while at home, she has used alcohol in excessive quantities," the governor said.

Dukakis said Mrs. Dukakis decided to enter the well-known clinic voluntarily and said he and his family supported her decision.

Armenians arrive for medical treatment in U.S. hospitals

BOSTON (AP) — Victims of the recent Armenian earthquake, some so severely injured that their limbs, skulls and bones are crushed, are beginning to arrive in the United States this week for medical treatment.

Their stories are varied and tragic, doctors who participated in the relief effort said Monday.

For example, 15-year-old Lena has come to the United States for operations that may restore her paralyzed left hand. Doctors say she was trapped under the rubble for three days with her mother. Unaware her mother had died, the teen-ager clutched her so tightly that her hand was frozen into a claw shape.

Two American organizations, Project HOPE and Americares, are coordinating what are the first airlifts of Armenian earthquake victims to the United States.

Pentagon says illicit drug use in the armed forces declines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The illicit use of drugs in the U.S. armed forces has declined even more than had been indicated last summer by preliminary results of a worldwide survey, the Pentagon said Monday.

Use of marijuana declined from 6.5 percent in 1985 to 2.9 percent last year, while use of other illicit drugs dropped from 5.8 percent in 1985 to 3.1 percent in 1988, the Defense Department said in a statement.

The overall figure for the use of any drug dropped from 9 percent in 1985 to 4.8 percent in 1988, the Pentagon said.

Cigarette smoking and heavy alcohol use also declined, and the survey "found that almost 80 percent of military personnel took some action within the past year to improve their nutrition," the Pentagon added.

AIDS cases increasing in state's rural areas

Cases of AIDS are appearing with increasing frequency in Arizona's rural counties, although the vast majority of AIDS cases reported have been in the Phoenix and Tucson areas, a state health official said.

Steven Englander, assistant director of the Arizona Department of Health Services for disease control, told the Arizona House Committee on Health, Aging and Human Resources that the percentage of AIDS sufferers who are gay men appears to be declining. He added that the disease continues to spread among members of other high-risk groups, especially intravenous drug users.

Englander said there also has been a significant increase in the number of AIDS cases among the state's minority populations.

The number of AIDS cases reported in 1988 is estimated to be between 325 and 350.

Of the 667 AIDS cases reported in Arizona between 1981 and the end of 1988, 492 were in Maricopa County and 129 were in Pima County, Englander said.

The decline in cases among gay men is expected to be due to educational efforts promoting safe sex, he said.

AIDS cases among intravenous drug users continues to grow, despite efforts to warn against needle sharing, the leading method of transmission among that group, Englander said.

Health Center to present fitness assessment program

A health fitness assessment is being presented by the health education section of the Health Center offering complete fitness assessment and exercise prescription consultations.

Research institute seeks participants for study

The ASU Exercise and Sport Research Institute is seeking people older than 65 to participate in a study on energy expenditure during walking.

The study is being funded by the National Institute on Aging and is recruiting healthy men and women who fit into either of two categories: those who have maintained a regular regimen of exercise over at least the last five years and those who have not.

Subjects who are selected will receive free orthopedic and cardiovascular screening, including a treadmill stress test.

Mesa officials concerned by measles cases at schools

Mesa health officials say they are alarmed by cases of rubella or German measles, and are barring pupils from an elementary school and a junior high until the students are immunized.

Last week, 14 students had been restricted from Lowell Elementary School and 10 from Rhodes Junior High. Only one case of Rubella was reported at each school.

Rubella is a relatively mild disease posing no problem to children, but can do damage to fetuses whose mothers contract the disease, the officials say.

Mofford satisfied with current state ethics laws

PHOENIX (AP) — Gov. Rose Mofford said Monday she did not plan to press for changes in government ethics laws but would not oppose efforts by others if they materialize.

Speaking with reporters at a breakfast session, Mofford also said that she favored the death penalty in some cases.

Aides had said after Mrs. Mofford became governor last year that tougher ethics laws would be one of her administration's priorities.

Mofford, whose own financial disclosures were called into question shortly after she became governor, said Monday she would not object to toughening laws but thought they were fairly strong now.

Arizona Common Cause has been trying to strengthen several key ethics laws, and the non-profit group's executive director, Dana Larsen, disputed Mofford's assessment in a telephone interview.

"I would tend to disagree," Larsen said. "They are not tightly drawn, and so there are a lot of ethics problems that fall through the cracks."

Common Cause is working with several lawmakers on proposals to tighten laws governing public officials and lobbyists but has not heard from anyone in Mrs. Mofford's office, he said.

Mrs. Mofford's first chief of staff, Andy Hurwitz, had said soon after she took office that a revamp of ethics and disclosure laws would be one of the administration's priorities because she believed current laws were too weak.

And former U.S. Attorney Michael Hawkins, Mofford's personal attorney, promised a similar administration effort a few months later on the day that the Maricopa County Attorney's office announced that it would not file charges against Mofford even though she had failed for years to properly account for her own income, property and loans on the state financial disclosure forms.

Mofford was in charge of administering the disclosure forms during her 10 years as Secretary of State but took the position that her office simply received forms and did not check them or try to enforce the law.

Asked about the status of ethics reform on Monday, Mofford said she had no plans to ask for legislation.

As for the death penalty, Mofford said she favored it "for heinous crimes."

It was the first time Mofford or her aides had stated a position on the subject since the U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco ruled Arizona's current death penalty unconstitutional.

Eye of beholder

Much-maligned campus architecture worth closer look

Ed Schubert
Columnist

Let's begin with the premise that a building should be judged by two criterion. The first deals with its function: how well does the building do what it was designed to do?

Then comes the question of form: while doing its job, does the building also manage to be beautiful?

At ASU, we see buildings that abandon any attempt at beauty in the pursuit of their function — Language and Literature, for example, or the parking structures that ring campus.

Other buildings attempt elegance, but achieve its opposite — the gloomy atriums of the Social Science Building and Farmer Education Hall come to mind.

And other buildings succeed in combining beauty and grace with practicality — West Hall, Danforth Chapel, Noble Science Library and the new Student Services Building.

And to this list I would add the Fine Arts Complex.

The building has been much maligned on this page. Mike Ritter described it as a "lavender bunker." David Jordan called it "the ugliest thing to happen to ASU since USC shellacked us 50-0." And Darrin Hostetler, in a column written under obvious deadline panic, referred to it as an act of "architectural masturbation."

Curiously, all the negative reviews seem to focus on the Fine Arts Complex as viewed from the north — until recently, the only view we've had of it. The principle complaint we hear about the structure, apart from its color, is its "starkness." And from the north, we do see a lot of hard, austere lines.

But what we see from the north is the back of the building. This is where its service entrances and trash dumpsters are located, after all.

Try approaching the building from the south. Here you will see the building's height and mass tempered by a curving, brick aqueduct with a small fountain at either end.

Or enter the building from the west, and here you will indeed encounter a building that is stark and forboding. A stairway leads down to a dark, cool place of echoing water. In summer, it will feel like an oasis.

'... other buildings succeed in combining beauty and grace with practicality ... to this list I would add the Fine Arts Complex.'

I first explored the Fine Arts Complex one day over winter break. Standing on the building's south patio, I noticed in the morning light that the structure wasn't lavender, but a cloudy white with just a hint of blue. The actual color of the building seems to depend of the time of day and the quality of the light it reflects. On an overcast day, it is almost a dark purple.

I also noticed that two identical towers rising from the building had been left the dun color of raw concrete. On top of each tower two acute triangles rose at right angles to one another, pointing toward the sky. At the top, they held a metal bridge.

Inside the first tower, I noticed a metal ladder in one corner which led to a hatch on the ceiling. The hatch was open. Climbing onto the roof of the tower, I saw that another ladder led up the triangles to the bridge.

Crossing the bridge was exhilarating. In the first place, I knew I wasn't supposed to be there. And with a brisk wind whipping around me as I went across, it was just dangerous enough to be fun.

So before you make up your mind about the Fine Arts Complex, you might want to take a walk across the bridge. But you'd better hurry, before the authorities see this column and close the hatch.

That the Fine Arts Complex has come under attack is not so surprising. The architects were trying something innovative, and innovation always brings criticism. When people say "ugly," what they often mean is "different."

But more amazing than the negative reaction to the Fine Arts Complex are the gripes we've heard about the Hayden Library Expansion. There are loud complaints because the handicapped elevator was not complete at the same time as the main entrance — as if that was someone's intention. And there are complaints that the library has only one entrance. Don't most libraries have only one entrance?

So, to those of you who don't like the Fine Arts Complex, or Hayden annex, and who probably don't like much of anything here or anywhere else, all I have to say is this:

For two years our spirits have been cramped by that massive hole between Hayden Library and West Hall. And the peace and quiet of the campus has been constantly marred by the noise of construction. Now the worst is over, and we have West Lawn back, and two buildings long under construction are now open.

And all you can do is bitch?
To hell with you.

Ritter cartoons lack discretion

Editor:

I am a student here at ASU and in the morning I debate whether or not to pick up a copy of the State Press for fear of the insulting cartoons that Mike Ritter draws.

Your Jan. 17 issue which included the cartoon of Abraham Lincoln's portrait being thrown away while a portrait of Martin Luther King's is being placed on the wall is very offensive to me, and other members of my race. I am a black American with goals and ambitions for my future, and I find it very difficult to focus on these aspects when there are newspaper employees who poke fun at a holiday that is well deserved. I understand that the holiday has brought forth a very controversial issue, but the issue can be brought forth in a "not so offensive manner."

As for the rest of Mike Ritter's cartoons, they could also use a little more discretion.

Libertarian ideals not 'silly'

Editor:

The freedom to assemble has been a cornerstone right upon which the United States and its Constitution was founded. It assumes the individual has the responsibility, discrimination and intelligence to make decisions about beliefs, ideals and fellowship. I am deeply ashamed, shocked and outraged that the Libertarian Party has been banned from campus registration. It is a blasphemy against the principles of the Bill of Rights. The Libertarian principles were termed "not serious" by Paul Biwan; this determination is purely subjective and biased. His decision, and his reasons, echo frighteningly of a fascist dictatorship. Biwan's decision violates the right of every single student at ASU. The University should advocate freedom of thought and expression. But why have the freedom to assemble when it's "silly"? Why not ban all organizations unless they are completely sanctioned and controlled by the University? In fact, why even have any organizations at all?

The individual should have the freedom to choose the doctrines and ideals that best fit his lifestyles. When that freedom is removed individuality is lost. The Libertarian Party is founded on the principles of freedom of self-determination, freedom from taxation and freedom from tyranny and useless bureaucracy. These are some freedoms for which the Revolutionary War was fought: Libertarian ideals were certainly not considered silly by George Washington, Thomas Jefferson or Benjamin Franklin.

Maybe Biwan is threatened by the simple truth of the Libertarian Party. Free thought always frightens dictatorships. Hello, Big Brother!

Honors students deserve 'special treatment'

Editor:

We feel insulted by the article in the Feb. 1 edition of the State Press claiming that honors students are pampered. We both are honors students and have worked very hard to attain that position. Many of us could have gone to smaller, private colleges, but we came to ASU because we were offered an opportunity by the Honors College to receive some of the benefits we deserve. It is true that McClintock has created a lounge for us and that we have a study room in Hayden Library, but we deserve them. The classes we must take to accumulate the required amount of honors credits ask much more from us than the regular University courses. In order to do this work to the best of our ability we need quiet areas to study.

We will not deny the fact that we may have special treatment, but this is what the University feels is an appropriate reward. "Pampering" refers to coddling and indulging. Rewarding refers to acquiring through earning. In our minds there's no question which one we, and the rest of the honors program, receive.

New York mugger got exactly what he deserved

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

New Yorkers love to debate, argue, quarrel and — most of all — psychoanalyze themselves and each other.

In what other city would the leading movie critic jump all over Woody Allen for making a movie that was simply funny, rather using his gifts of insight to tell New Yorkers about their inner selves?

That actually happened. And Woody Allen apparently took the critic seriously and stopped making funny movies. Now he makes dour movies that are viewed only by his fellow neurotics.

What New Yorkers enjoy most, though, are guilt trips. They like experiencing that and, even more, they enjoy sharing the guilt with others.

One of the all-time great New York guilt trips occurred almost 25 years ago when a young woman named Kitty Genovese was murdered on a street in Queens.

More than two dozen people heard her screams, but only one called the cops and none left their homes to help her.

That became known as the "Genovese Syndrome," and more than 1,000 articles and books were written on the case, asking the question: Why didn't anyone help?

The question was never fully answered. Some of the do nothings were afraid of getting involved. Others weren't sure what was happening. A few were callous. But it made New Yorkers feel guilty and many of them said it reflected a national indifference to the suffering of others.

Which was nonsense then and is nonsense now. Every day all over America, ordinary people help strangers, often at their own risk. What made the Genovese case news, something unusual, was that no one did anything.

Now New Yorkers are wrestling with another ethical and moral issue. Or at least that's the way it is being presented. A live many Hasidic Jews. And when they hear someone yell "chaptzum" they react.

So dozens of them came running out of their homes, shouting "chaptzum" and chased the elevator mugger.

They caught him and were apparently zealous in making sure he didn't get away.

By the time they finished restraining him, he was real restrained. When the cops and medics arrived, he was unconscious and at the hospital the doctors put him on the critical list.

The New York Times, which has a

'By the time they finished restraining him, he was real restrained. When the cops and medics arrived, he was unconscious and at the hospital the doctors put him on the critical list.'

headline in the New York Times described it as: "A Mugging and a Mob Evoke Debate."

What happened was that a 67-year-old man got on an elevator in a housing project in Brooklyn.

Also on the elevator was a much younger man, age 24, who drew a knife and demanded the older man's money.

Before the robbery was completed, the younger man had slashed his victim in the face with the knife.

When the elevator stopped and the slasher got off, his victim began screaming the word "chaptzum." In Yiddish, this means "grab him" or something to that effect.

In that particular part of Brooklyn, there dignified style, didn't come right out and say it, but it appears that many of those who caught the man gave him one hell of a beating. He was in far worse shape than the old man who was knifed, who had his facial wounds stitched and went right home.

But there is a debate over whether it was right or wrong for the crowd to take it upon themselves to try to stomp the mugger into the pavement.

Most of the Jews who live in that project — at least those quoted in the New York Times — say they think that while the crowd might have been overly enthusiastic, what they did was basically just and proper.

However, in the black neighborhood a few blocks away, where the young man lives as an unemployed street person, they think the crowd was unnecessarily brutal.

"It was outrageous," one man was quoted. "Fifty people beating up on one dude."

And others, of all races and religious persuasions, are chiming in.

I phoned a friend of mine in New York and he said: "Yes, some people are saying it means we are going to have an outbreak of vigilante behavior, and they are worried. Some of them say that if he wasn't poor and homeless, he wouldn't have to steal, that society drove him to it. Then there are those who say that poverty is no excuse, and he deserved what he got. And you hear some people say they should have caught him, but they shouldn't have worked him over. So once again New York is in a dither, its favorite condition. When nobody helped Kitty Genovese, society was callous. When an angry mob jumps a knife-wielding mugger, maybe that's callous."

That movie critic could be right. Maybe Woody Allen should be New York's official shrink.

Myself, I take a simplistic view. When somebody pulls a knife on a law-abiding old man, he does so at his own peril.

The fact that he's still alive makes him a lucky young man. And it means that the crowd either showed some restraint or they all had small fists and feet.

I guarantee that if 50 people from my old neighborhood in Chicago had chased him down, by the time the cops arrived, they wouldn't have found enough of him to take a fingerprint.

Who's Who Among Students in American Universities!

The 1989 edition of WHO'S WHO AMONG STUDENTS IN AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES will include the names of 58 students from Arizona State University who have been selected as national outstanding campus leaders.

Campus nominating committees and editors of the annual directory have included the names of these students based on their academic achievement, service to the community; leadership in extracurricular activities, and potential for continued success.

They join an elite group of students selected from more than 1,400 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and several foreign nations.

Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1934.

Students named this year from Arizona State University are:

4 new construction projects slated for near future

University continues on-campus expansion

By RICHARD VIGIL
State Press

Cady Mall is nearly navigable and construction is underway on parking structures four and five, but ASU students will find a new set of construction projects to cope with this spring.

Four new construction projects will be undertaken beginning this semester or early this summer, including expansions of the Physical Sciences building and the Memorial Union.

Construction on the MU expansion will begin in June and should be completed in June 1990. The project was approved by the Arizona Board of Regents in 1980, said MU Director Floyd Land.

"It's nice to see it finally happen," Land said.

The expansion is to be built in the L-shaped section on the southeast side of the MU, and will be three-stories tall with a basement.

Land said all of the student organizations which are currently scattered throughout the MU, such as the Student Legal Services, the Memorial Union Activities Board and Associated Students of ASU, will be consolidated in the expansion and will be able to share resources.

The expansion also will include conference and meeting rooms and dining space which will be occupied by the campus food service contractor.

This is the second expansion to the MU, which opened in 1956. The first expansion doubled the size of the facility, adding the entire south end of the building.

But University officials advise that the construction will pose some inconvenience for students.

During the MU expansion, 20 disabled parking spaces from Lot 21 will be moved to Parking Structure One and Lot 8. Furthermore, all pedestrian traffic between the MU and PE West will be closed from June 1989 to August 1990.

Vance Linden, associate director of planning and construction, said construction on a 123,000-square-foot expansion of the Physical Sciences building should begin in March.

The expansion, which will be built on the north end of the existing building where lot 46 is now, will house new classroom and laboratory space for the chemistry, physics and geology departments. Also in the expansion will be a museum and four lecture halls.

Excavation has already begun on the Barry M. Goldwater Center for Science and Engineering, which will be located to the east of the Physical Sciences building on Tyler Mall. Construction will begin in June and the building is scheduled to be completed in November 1990, Linden said.

The center will house research facilities for both the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences, as well as additional classroom and office space.

The two projects will force the University to close Lot 46 and relocate the visitor and motorcycle parking spaces to other lots. Pedestrian traffic will be rerouted to Palm Walk, University Drive and McAllister Avenue.

Construction also will start in April on a 400-bed residence hall on the south side of campus, east of Sahuaro Hall.

The hall, which will include a swimming pool and an all-purpose meeting room for residence hall activities, is to be completed in May 1990.

The new tennis courts along Rural Road will be accessible only from the Rural Road entrance.

Superstition Mountains hide another Dutchman

APACHE JUNCTION (AP) — There's another Lost Dutchman in the Superstition Wilderness Area east of here, but U.S. Forest Service officials aren't amused at the prospect of extending a legend.

"The national forest does not exist to promote legends, and we're not going to promote it," said Don Van Driel, head ranger in the Tonto National Forest's Mesa office. "I don't know exactly what we're going to do, other than try to work with the woman to try to get that statue out of there as soon as possible."

The woman is Patricia Kuhl Murray of Scottsdale, a gallery owner who hid a bronze sculpture of Jacob Waltz in the Superstition Mountains in an attempt to sell copies.

According to legend, Waltz found a gold mine in the Superstitions but died without revealing its location. The sculpture, by Scottsdale artist Harland Young, depicts a rifle-toting Waltz leading two pack mules.

Mrs. Murray failed to obtain a permit for a commercial venture in a protected area, Van Driel said.

If you're trying to mold yourself into society's idea of perfection, you could be playing with more than your life.

FREE EATING DISORDERS SEMINAR:

"Diets of Self-Destruction"

This Thursday, February 9th

7:00 to 9:00 PM

Tempe Mission Palms Hotel
60 East 5th Street

For more information:
239-4100

You probably know starving yourself, or purging food from your body, is extremely dangerous. But did you realize you could be losing more than weight in your quest for perfection? Like someone you love.

This Thursday, the Samaritan Center for Eating Disorders is sponsoring an important seminar about eating disorders and their effect on relationships. It's for anyone who's become so obsessed with their weight, that it has taken control of their life.

You'll learn from professionals how to face the fact that you're really suffering from a serious problem. And how to get professional medical attention.

Introducing the seminar will be TV newswoman Mary Jo West. You'll see excerpts from her acclaimed TV documentary, "Dying To Be Thin." Followed by an insightful presentation by noted sex therapist, Roz Meadow, Ph.D., on eating disorders and intimate relationships.

So please, come to this seminar. Because trying to live up to society's unrealistic expectations and losing the ones you love, could leave you with a very artificial life.

5-year-old girl molested during church service

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A 5-year-old Tempe girl was molested Sunday afternoon during a church service, police said.

The girl was attending a service at the Mormon Church at 1871 E. Del Rio Drive about 2:15 p.m. with her 12-year-old sister when she was approached by a man who asked her to follow him, Tempe police spokesman Sgt. Al Taylor said.

Taylor said the man, described by the girl as a white male with curly brown hair, led her behind the stage of the auditorium where the service was taking place.

The suspect then molested the girl before fleeing when someone turned on the lights behind the stage, Taylor said.

Tempe police also reported:

•Two Chandler residents were arrested Saturday night after they allegedly dragged a Tempe police officer about 50 feet after the officer tried to take the keys out their truck's ignition. The officer was not injured.

Bernard T. Lyon, 32, and Kimberly Jo Garden, 24, were arrested on suspicion of aggravated assault, endangerment and possession of drugs after the 11:30 p.m. incident in the parking lot of Hammerheads Bar, 955 E. University Drive.

police report

Officer Jeff Craft was doing a security check in the parking lot when he went to talk to the pair, who were sitting in a parked Toyota pickup. Craft asked them to get out of the vehicle, and Lyon allegedly told Garden to drive off.

Craft then tried to take the keys out of the ignition when the pair took off dragging the officer and allegedly trying to shove him out the window.

•Two men, one of whom was armed with a small handgun, robbed a Tempe hotel of $343 Saturday night.

The suspect with the weapon confronted the female clerk at Lexington Suites, 1660 W. Elliot Road, and demanded cash while the second suspect waited in a 1970s white Cadillac. They were last seen driving north on Interstate 10 from Elliot Road.

•A burglar broke into a Tempe home in the 1100 block of East Knight Lane Saturday night and stole more than $7,300 worth of weapons.

ASU police reported the following incidents ending at 7 a.m. Monday:

•Arrest/minor in possession of alcohol: 11:34 p.m. Sunday, south of 609 Alpha Drive. Two students were cited and released.

•Criminal damage: between Sunday and Monday, University Activity Center. Vandals caused $430 in damages to six glass windows.

•Criminal damage: sometime prior to 5:40 a.m. Monday, Student Services Building. A vandal used a black magic marker to cause $200 in damages to two doors.

•Theft: between last Wednesday and Saturday, Classroom Office Building. A thief stole a $100 black-and-white television.

•Theft: 10:30 a.m. Monday, Physical Science B-100. A thief stole a student's black and gray Liz Claiborne purse containing $320 cash and $180 worth of contents.

•Criminal damage: between 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Monday, Lot 59. A vandal caused $100 damage to a gray 1985 Ford Bronco by breaking the driver's side window.

Asbestos

Secondly, Philippi added, most of the asbestos is contained or sealed.

"It is when the material crumbles or becomes wet and falls, then it poses a risk," he said. "It poses a risk if loosened and airborne."

Deon Rasmussen, Student Health Center nursing supervisor, said for any risk to be present, a student must be exposed to the asbestos for a very long period of time.

Doug Bartosh, acting director of ASU's department of public safety and assigned with overseeing asbestos safety and removal regulations, said it is crucial that the University minimize the amount of asbestos inhaled by students.

"Asbestos is still used in car brakes and if a person stands on a busy street corner there is the potential of inhaling asbestos," Bartosh said. "The more asbestos you breathe in, the more chance there is of a person having asbestos-related diseases."

Philippi said the residence halls are inspected twice each year to insure that the levels are not dangerous.

"The danger, especially for Manzanita, is that the ceilings are six to eight feet high from the ground, which might pose a risk if a student jumps up and hits the ceiling and loosens the material," Philippi said.

Philippi said maintenance workers are at a greater risk because they actually come in contact with materials that contain asbestos.

The regents report states that many of the asbestos-containing materials in the residence halls are accessible to students and other materials are disturbed during maintenance or remodeling.

Smokers also are at greater risk than non-smokers of damaging their lungs should they come in contact with asbestos, Rasmussen said.

Heather Montgomery, an ASU freshman who lives at Manzanita, said: "It does worry me that we are exposed to this, but what can you do. I'm glad they (the administration) are removing it."

"We really don't have a choice except to find an apartment ..."

The removal of the material will take place in phases, Mortarotti said. The material is only extracted during the summer when the residence halls are not occupied.

It will take three summers to remove the asbestos from Manzanita and Palo Verde halls.

One-half of Manzanita was completed in the summer of 1986. The completion of Manzanita's removal will be done in blocks of four floors at once.

Philippi says that while ASU is not required to remove the asbestos, the material will be removed before the federal Environmental Protection Agency and the Occupational Health and Safety Administration orders the University to remove the substance.

Only public and private schools that serve kindergarten through 12th grade are required to test suspect materials for asbestos content under federal law.

The process for removing the material involves sealing off the area with heavy-duty plastic where air can not escape and workers wear special plastic suits while using a respirator. The material must be wet during the process as not to allow asbestos particles into the air.

The study on the halls should be completed by the end of this week, said Mortarotti and the University will take the recommendation to the board of regents to discuss at their meeting in March.

Mesa

Meeker said he thinks the increasing population of east Mesa warrants the need for a university.

If it is determined there is a need for an east Mesa university, the committee hopes to have a proposal completed by June 1, Meeker said.

The proposal would include selection guidelines, recruiting procedures and incentive packages to lure a university to the area.

Funding for an east Mesa university would depend on whether the institution is private or public, Kunasek said, adding that a private school would provide its own funding.

Some possible sources of revenue for a public university could be endowments, private foundations and fund raising, Meeker said.

"We're not really looking at the government (for funding)," he said.

The committee's next meeting is Feb. 22 at the Mesa Chamber of Commerce building.

Sleeping patterns of 'cavewoman' change dramatically

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — An Italian woman living in total isolation in a cave is doing what scientists thought she would do — dramatically changing her sleeping and waking patterns.

Stefania Follini has been living in her Plexiglas quarters in Lost Cave since Jan. 13 with no clocks and minimal contact with the outside world. She can't see the sun. She can only hazard guesses as to the passage of time. She is scheduled to stay in the small cave on the outskirts of Carlsbad for at least four months.

Follini, of Ancona, Italy, has been sleeping about 10 hours and staying awake for 20 hours, according to the Italian researchers performing the isolation experiment.

Those times probably will lengthen, said Maurizio Montalbini, the research team's leader.

Montalbini, who once spent seven months isolated in a cave, said Follini's ability to concentrate appears to have sharpened, rather than weakened, during her first three weeks of isolation.

The attention-span tests are part of a slew of experiments U.S. and Italian scientists are performing. Montalbini selected a cave in the United States because he wanted to be close to researchers from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and universities.

One U.S. scientist working with the Italians, Dr. Jon DeFrance of the University of Texas Medical School in Houston, said the Follini study will help researchers design a study in which astronauts will go on a mock space voyage to Mars.

NASA is particularly interested in the Italian study because previous experiments have suggested prolonged isolation weakens the body's resistance to disease, which DeFrance said could bode ill for astronauts on long voyages.

DeFrance's specific interest is in attention disorders. Follini periodically attaches electrodes to her head for brain scans, and she takes tests on a computer to gauge her attention span.

A person's attention span "may be disrupted in a number of different ways," DeFrance said. "Each disruption may have its own pattern or signature. The disruption may be unique. It may be able to pinpoint what brain pathways are weakened.

"We may be able to develop methods for refreshing attention, so that astronauts can conduct their activities at a high level and very competently."

Student organization returns to fight alcohol abuse

By JOANNE ASQUITH
State Press

A student organization aimed at reducing alcohol abuse on campus is re-forming at ASU after a five-year absence.

BACCHUS, which stands for Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students, is a national organization with more than 350 groups on campuses across the country. The organization offers peer counseling for students with alcohol problems.

Carla Fortunado, substance abuse counselor for Student Health and the BACCHUS adviser, said alcohol abuse is the top substance abuse problem at all U.S. universities.

"It's the number one drug abuse on campuses," Fortunado said. "Both at ASU and nationally."

Russell C. Richard, director of the counseling and health advisory committee, said BACCHUS will deal only with alcohol-related problems and how students can handle those problems.

"Our main objective is to promote responsible alcohol consumption," Richard said. "We will deal with alcohol's (effect on) the individual, those who immediately surround the individual and the community."

"It's not just saying no to alcohol, it's saying yes to responsibility."

Richard added that students are more open about their problems when they are talking to other students.

"This is a peer-to-peer counseling group," Richard said. "One's peers have more influence than an individual counselor from the outside."

He said BACCHUS wants to bring the problem of alcohol abuse to the forefront of campus issues.

"We want to put it in a highly visible area and make it OK to talk about," he said. "It's a great opportunity for individuals to voice their opinion."

"A lot of times they feel there is a problem, but there is no group to go to."

The ASU chapter of BACCHUS was formed five years ago but dissolved when the organization's founders graduated, Richard said.

Susan Crum, a student organizer for BACCHUS, said the organization's membership is open to all ASU students.

"We need an emergence of members and leaders for the group," Crum said. "A base foundation for the group to grow."

Richard added, "We want a lot of different voices; Greek, multi-national, freshman, sophomore, junior and senior voices. A collection from across the campus of different individuals."

"There should be multi-linguistic and cultural individuals that reflect what the campus is."

BACCHUS will hold open meetings in the Graham Room of the MU Fridays from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. through the month of February.

Trash on London streets creates 'obstacle course'

LONDON (AP) — There's no way of getting around it anymore — London has become a filthy city.

And this, despite its manicured gardens, carefully preserved historic monuments and architectural treasures.

Some of the capital's littered streets have become obstacle courses of trash bags, fast-food wrappers, beer cans and dog droppings.

British VIPs are forever returning from abroad saying how littered London looks compared with shiny Zurich or spotless Brussels.

"Too much of London has become dirty, degrading and depressing," says the latest report on the city's litter scourge.

London, with nearly seven million residents, generates about 14 million tons of waste annually, says Jeff Cooper of the London Waste Regulation Authority, a watchdog body. New York City, with a population of more than 7 million, collected 8 million tons of trash last year, according to the city's sanitation department.

A lot of London's garbage becomes litter.

To reach the trendy restaurants and West End theaters of Soho or Covent Garden, patrons often must dodge overflowing garbage bags heaped on curbs and around lampposts.

At subway stations, commuters tread gingerly over slippery potato chip bags and cellophane wrappers and step around wads of gum that cover stairways and escalators.

In London's financial district, stockbrokers and bankers leave a daily 90-ton trail of newspapers, coffee cups and fast-food wrappers.

"London is well on the way to gaining an unenviable distinction of being the most littered and cluttered capital of any advanced country in the world," said Lord St. John of Fawsley, chairman of the Royal Fine Art Commission, which released the latest litter report.

"Our streets are disfigured by rubbish."

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has threatened tougher litter laws and some communities are trying to clean up their sidewalks.

The problem is that many Britons simply believe it's someone else's job to pick up after them, say Judy Hillman, who wrote the report, and Graham Ashworth, director general of the Tidy Britain Group.

The litter threatens London's tourist industry, says Michael Medicott, chief executive of the British Tourist Authority.

"We have a bad reputation and a bad image," he said. "London is one of the dirtiest cities in the world."

The Tidy Britain Group, a charity, has produced a television ad showing central London's Oxford Street crowded with pigs — of the two-legged and four-legged varieties.

A man is seen sprouting a pig's tail through his trousers as he opens a letter and discards it in a hedge. A woman at a bus stop tosses a used tissue under her seat, and her hand becomes a pig's hoof.

"Lack of personal discipline is undoubtedly largely to blame," Ms. Hillman says.

"Whether or not this decline in standards out of the home stems from the permissive society, lack of parental control, bad manners or overexpectation with regard to the ability of 'them' to create and maintain a clean environment for 'us,' the result is plain to see."

There are other factors, too.

Few London boroughs have "pooper-scooper" laws, so pet owners don't clean up after their animals.

Recycling isn't common and cans and bottles carry no refund. Most Londoners live in apartments with little kitchen or communal storage space, and many must put their trash bags on the curb days before it is collected.

Some businesses, reluctant to lose selling space, dump empty crates and packaging outside their doors.

Ms. Hillman's report, "A New Look For London," was commissioned after Mrs. Thatcher, accompanying French President Francois Mitterrand from Heathrow Airport to central London in 1986, was angered by the litter she saw from her limousine.

She "blew her top," St. John said. Earlier this year, she said stiffer laws might be in order.

The current law carries a maximum fine of about $700. But authorities say the average fine is only about $50, and prosecutors must prove the accused had no intention of coming back later to collect the litter.

The borough of Kensington is fighting back by looking through illegally dumped trash for something that might identify the culprit. If the trash-sifters find a clue, such as an addressed envelope, they send the owner photocopies of the evidence and a warning.

'Bridge to the future' offered by today's Peace Corps

By CAROLYN HOFIG
State Press

Looking for new post-graduate experiences? For an opportunity to see some of the world and to experience other cultures? For a way to postpone student loan repayment for two years?

The Peace Corps offers college graduates all that, plus plenty of experience that can open doors in the job market, said Charna Lefton, public affairs manager for the organization.

"It's a lifetime experience," said Heather Compton, Peace Corps campus representative at ASU and a former Corps volunteer. "It'll change your views and values."

Images of the young and hopelessly idealistic Peace Corps volunteer need some updating. Although the average applicant of a decade ago fit that description, the times — and the trainees — have changed, Lefton said.

The average age of Peace Corps volunteers has risen to 30, Lefton said. Twenty years ago, the average age was 24.

More retirees and people looking for a change of careers are volunteering for the Corps, Lefton said.

Lefton said host countries also are requesting Corps volunteers with more specific skills or educational backgrounds. She said applicants today have either a four-year college degree or three to five years of technical experience.

Compton said more people with specific math or science backgrounds are signing up.

"The generalists are still needed," she said. "But you need something more than a good heart."

But Lefton said a "good heart" still brings applicants to the Corps.

"Our marketing research shows that the No. 1 reason (for joining the Corps) is altruism," Lefton said, adding the volunteers of today are "realistically idealistic," as opposed to the "just idealistic" version of the sixties.

Compton, a graduate student in elementary education who served in Ecuador from 1977 until 1980, said the adventurous "Kennedy spirit" of the sixties has given way to the view that the Peace Corps will serve as "a bridge to the future."

Lefton said the Corps volunteers find themselves in positions of much more responsibility than they would normally encounter fresh out of college. That experience often proves invaluable in the job market once the volunteers return to the United States, she said.

Another enticing aspect, repayment of student loans is deferred until the volunteer has completed his project, usually about two years. Furthermore, a lump-sum "re-adjustment allowance" of about $5,000 is paid to each returning volunteer, Compton said.

The Peace Corps, which will celebrate its 28th anniversary March 1, enjoyed its heyday during the late sixties and early seventies. Lefton said its ranks swelled to nearly 15,000 then.

But funding grew scarce in the mid-70s and Corps enrollment began to decline, she said.

But recently, the Corps has seen some "nice bipartisan congressional support," Lefton said, and, once again, enrollment is on the rise.

Almost 6,000 people are currently active as Peace Corps engineers, Lefton said, up a little from last year at this time. She said the Corps hopes to number 6,600 in 1989, if it is allowed to begin operations in China.

In the 1986-87 academic year, Lefton said 33 ASU students applied to the Corps, 16 were nominated to participate in specific programs and seven became trainees. In 1987-88, 47 people from ASU applied and 27 were nominated.

So far, nine of those students have begun their training programs, but Lefton said some of the nominees from last spring have not yet been placed.

Lefton said the Peace Corps received the most requests for experts in the areas of agriculture, forestry, health and nutrition, general construction and mechanics and education.

In fact, the first group that will go to the proposed sites in China will be English teachers, Lefton said.

The Peace Corps will be conducting an information campaign on campus Feb. 13-15.

Revelers 'let loose' around the world prior to Lent

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Rio's carnival climaxed Monday with the traditional samba school parade, with thousands of people in plumes and sequins dancing through downtown on the third day of the annual pre-Lenten revelry.

In West Germany's Rhineland, more than 2 million people swarmed carnival routes, but leftist extremists marred one celebration by shattering windows with rocks and hurling paint-filled balloons at buildings.

In Trinidad and Tobago, calypso songs lampooned the government during carnival celebrations that drew tens of thousands.

Millions of Brazilians shed their worries and inhibitions and take part in the four-day festival of drinking, dancing and sexual abandon that ends Ash Wednesday.

But the high point is the two-night exhibition of the samba "schools," actually neighborhood groups from poor, mostly black districts. The top groups have more than 5,000 members, decked out in glittering rhinestone bikinis or luxurious costumes in a king-for-a-day fantasy.

The parade began Sunday night along the six-block-long grandstands known as the "Sambadrome" and built specially for the carnival event. After a brief pause Monday, the exhibition resumes at night.

The 18 top groups compete for a cash prize based on costumes, floats, rhythm and the special samba written especially for each school's theme of the year. This year's themes range from "S.O.S Mother Nature," an appeal for environmental protection, to a tribute to singer and songwriter Milton Nascimento.

About 150,000 spectators were expected at the sambadrome, paying up to $213 for a seat or $12,000 for a box where tuxedoed waiters served gourmet food and drink to dignitaries and businessmen.

Other revelers packed private clubs for the steamy carnival balls, such as the Grande Gala G (for Gay) and the Bum Bum Ball, which features the painting of the backsides of young women. The goings-on are transmitted live on network television, but Justice Minister Oscar Dias Correa warned that networks that show too much would be punished.

Carnival also spilled out into the streets, especially in Brazil's Northeast region, where elaborately decorated sound trucks known as "electric trios" drove through city streets, blaring out samba and frevo music as crowds of revelers danced along behind.

This year's carnival was less violent than usual, health officials in Rio said. Jose Noronha, the Rio de Janeiro state health secretary, said hospitals reported a 10 percent drop in violence-caused injuries compared with 1988.

Most of the cases treated were for drunkenness and alcohol-caused accidents, he said.

West Germans dressed as clowns, Arab sheiks, American Indians, musketeers and other creations for Rose Monday celebrations in Cologne, Dusseldorf, Mainz and Bonn.

Bush looks for Soviet cooperation in Latin America

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Monday there is a chance for "a new spirit of cooperation" between the Soviet Union and the United States in solving Central American problems.

Bush was asked at a news conference if he foresees a deal with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to resolve the region's problems, which include a superpower dispute over leftist-ruled Sandinista.

The Soviets help supply the Sandinista while the United States provides aid to the anti-Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Bush said he would not make a deal on Contra aid, but added, "I can see a possibility of cooperation in Central America."

The Soviets don't have "substantive interest in that part of the world, certainly none that rival ours. So I would like to think they would understand that," Bush said. "And there are so many areas where we could demonstrate a new spirit of cooperation and this would clearly be one of them."

The United States has an "unshakable" commitment to democracy, freedom and free elections in the five-nation region, he said.

Bush has not spelled out his Central American policies, particularly the Contra aid question and the fighting in neighboring El Salvador between the U.S.-backed government and leftist rebels.

Bush said he is reviewing the policy of his predecessor Ronald Reagan, which involved unwavering support for military aid to the Contras.

But officials have said no Contra aid will be sought in the near future and the administration is willing to support regional efforts toward a diplomatic solution to the Contra war.

Bush and Secretary of State James Baker have not yet named a new assistant secretary of state for Latin America.

Baker has settled on Bernard Aronson, a Democrat who helped the Reagan administration win Contra aid, but the appointment has not been announced, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The previous holder of the post, Elliott Abrams, discussed Nicaragua during several meetings with Soviet officials, but no substantive action ever came of the meetings.

The United States has continually objected to the Soviet supply of weaponry to Nicaragua's leftist government, saying the shipments continued through 1988, even after U.S. arms to the Contras were stopped.

Vice President Dan Quayle visited the region last week and met with presidents of the four Central American democracies — El Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Guatemala.

The United States refuses to meet with Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega on the grounds that he should conduct talks first with the Contras.

Quayle said the administration supports the regional effort by the five presidents to reach a diplomatic solution.

Bush sent a message last week to the Salvadoran military and the government, urging human rights improvements. Quayle deplored human rights violations from the leftist guerillas and the right wing factions, and indicated that unless El Salvador improves its record, U.S. aid to the country would likely be jeopardized.

Two women injured in hot-air balloon landing

PHOENIX (AP) — Two Atlanta women were injured Monday when the hot-air balloon in which they were riding landed roughly in a vacant field, a Phoenix Fire Department spokesman reported.

Mary Wilkinson, 30, suffered an ankle injury and Michelle Kogler, 32, suffered a back injury when the sight-seeing balloon made a hard landing after taking off from a Scottsdale hotel, department spokesman Steve Jensen said.

Both were hospitalized in good condition in Scottsdale, Jensen said.

He said the pilot, Bruce Kimurd, and two other passengers were not injured.

Jensen said the injured women bounced out of the balloon when it hit the ground as Kimurd made an emergency landing after high winds blew him off course toward a residential area.

Apache Junction sings its way into Guinness

APACHE JUNCTION (AP) — Eighteen choir members at Apache Junction High School have claimed a world's record for marathon singing — more than 80 hours non-stop.

"People later on in life will ask me what I ever did, and I can say, 'I'm in the Guinness Book of World Records,'" said John Weiscotten.

Organizers said the reference manual listed a previous record of 78 hours, 28 minutes, set by a youth operatic society in Barnsely, England. The Apache Junction choir surpassed that at 8:30 p.m. Sunday and continued singing until 10:10 p.m., or 80 hours, 1 minute.

Guinness officials have been notified and will check out the claim, school Principal Jack Larson said.

The choir was trying to raise $10,000 for a trip to Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla., in March. Officials said pledges amounted to about $6,400 Sunday night. Local businesses also donated food, Larson said.

ASU gymnast in stride for All-America accolades

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

In April 1986, ASU women's gymnastic coach John Spini produced four All-Americans from a team that finished second in the country.

One month after Spini's crew earned its accolades, Colette Anderson graduated from high school in Osseo, Minn., and made her way to the Valley of the Sun.

It is now three years later and the junior is off to her best start in gymnastics since coming to ASU.

The talent of this year's Sun Devils could match or better the number of All-Americans produced in 1986, with the highly improved Anderson, the likes of honorees Karli Urban and Suzy Baldock. Adding strength for the Sun Devils will be All-Pac-10 performer Michele Colavin.

"I feel like I'm starting out the best I ever have for this time of year," Anderson said.

The scores back up her statement. In five meets, she has recorded career-highs of 9.4 on the vault, 9.65 on the uneven bars and a 9.45 on the floor exercise.

When these scores improve the all-around score is also boosted. Last year Colavin averaged 36.26 in the all-around, and her career-high was a 37.10. This year she topped that mark. Anderson posted a 37.30 early in January.

"Each event has gone up (her scores compared to last season) two or three-tenths, which affects my all-around," Anderson said.

Prior to the start of the season, Spini and assistant coach Lisa Zeis, one of the 1986 Sun Devil All-Americans, inserted new skills into Anderson routines. The results have proved successful for ASU.

"We added some difficulty to my floor routine," she said.

But with this new prosperity, Anderson has remained the same quiet and shy person. Another aspect of her personality that has not changed is her confidence.

"The scores haven't affected my confidence," she said. "I started the year out with more confidence."

The new transformation has been noticed by Spini and her teammates. All agree that Anderson is in line for post-season honors.

"Her efforts are showing," teammate Molly Carpenter said. "You can see the results of her hard work."

Anderson likes the idea of earning national recognition, but her personality does not allow her to go around informing everyone of her plans.

"That would be nice (All-America accolades)," Anderson said. "It sounds good, but it will be challenging because there are so many good girls out there."

However, while the scores continue to go up, the modest Anderson feels her performance is the same.

"I don't feel I'm doing anything different," she said.

One major feature that contributed to the turnaround is giving all she has during every performance.

"I am more aggressive," Anderson said.

Since her freshman season, Anderson has been performing for the Sun Devils. At the NCAA Championships in 1987, she recorded a 15th-place finish on the uneven bars.

While her teammates continue to compliment her on her achievements, Anderson still shies away from the attention.

"She is very quick to compliment people," Dusserre said, "but when given (a compliment) she is quick to shy away."

Emotion is something Anderson keeps to herself. After a quality performance she savors the moment without gloating or coming across the wrong way. This is usually done by just smiling and sharing the moment with teammates.

"When she is excited about something, it is held more within," Carpenter said. "You can see it in her eyes."

But when the going gets tough, Anderson jumps to the occasion. This she has proved through her work habits and competitiveness.

"Something can affect her and she will use it to her advantage," Carpenter said.

With one month remaining in the season, Anderson can use all her resources and abilities to put her name in the Sun Devil annals.

Junior Colette Anderson has been one of the most consistent gymnasts for ASU this season.

Seventh-ranked ASU returns home to face Grand Canyon

By TOMI McELROY
State Press

The seventh-ranked ASU women's tennis team is hoping to extend its winning streak to seven games Wednesday when it plays host to Grand Canyon at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday.

ASU, who returns home after a successful four-game road trip, will play at the familiar surroundings of Whiteman Tennis Center before taking off again to compete in the National Team Indoors tournament this Thursday through Sunday.

"After the Grand Canyon match on Wednesday, we go on to nationals to play nine matches against top-15 schools," ASU coach Sheila McInerney said. "This weekend will really help give us the confidence. We know that if we get into a tight situation we can hang in there and compete really well."

ASU already demonstrated this aspect on Sunday during the Arizona Invitational in Tucson.

The Sun Devils defeated the No. 17 Wildcats, 5-4, to win the tournament. ASU advanced to the championship game after defeating Southern Florida, 9-0, Friday and downing San Diego, 5-4, in the semi-finals Saturday.

"I'm pleased with the way our team has responded so far," McInerney said. "We've played three teams ranked in the top 20 on the road and won. Hopefully, this will take a little pressure off as we enter conference play."

In singles competition, No. 1 Sun Devil freshman Krista Amend won all three of her matches to boost her record to 6-0. Amend entered the 1989 season ranked 41st nationally in the ITCA (Volvo tennis rankings).

In high school she was ranked seventh for girls 18 and under, and earned All-America distinction in 1988.

"Krista is a great competitor," ASU coach Sheila McInerney said. "She plays exceptionally well."

Amend earned the No. 1 seed when senior Laura Giltz opted to redshirt this season after having surgery for a nagging shoulder injury.

The second through fifth Sun Devil singles players were not as successful as Amend.

Kristi Jonkosky, Barb Thompson, Karen Bergan and Paola Conte were defeated by their UofA opponents.

However, sixth seed Jennifer Rojohn downed Wildcat Nancy Breen in two sets. Rojohn returned to the ASU lineup after suffering a knee injury Jan. 28 while playing against San Diego State.

With the Sun Devils trailing 4-2 after the singles competition, the team needed victories in its final three matches to win the tournament.

"With San Diego we would be basically be experimenting with our doubles, but I feel we have found the right combinations," McInerney said.

In the number one doubles spot, Sophomores Bergan and Rojohn defeated Betsy Sommerville and Banni Redhair of UofA and moved their record to 3-0.

Amend and Jonkosky downed Henriette Knols and Danielle Scott in the number two spot and at number three, Conte and Jill Hamilton defeated Breen and Danielle Klurman.

With the Sun Devils sweeping the Wildcats in doubles play, McInerney said, "It was about as close a match as you're going to get. In a rivalry like that you want it to be close."

Freshman Krista Amend will be counted upon heavily this season as she fills the No. 1 spot for the injured Laura Giltz on the ASU tennis team.

sports briefs

PHOENIX (AP) — Tom Chambers scored 11 of his 24 points in the fourth period as the Phoenix Suns averted a second-half collapse and beat the Utah Jazz 104-87 Monday night.
 The victory was the Suns' 28th this season, matching their total of last year.
 Phoenix, 20-4 at home, led 52-38 at halftime behind Kevin Johnson's 13 points and Armon Gilliam's 12. Six points from Gilliam in an 8-2 run put the Suns ahead 66-45 with 7:02 left in the third quarter before the Jazz rallied. Karl Malone scored six points and Thurl Bailey had a layup, jumper and slam dunk in a 20-6 run that cut Utah's deficit to 72-65 with 39 seconds left in the period.
 The Suns, ahead 74-65, opened the fourth quarter with an 8-0 run, with Chambers hitting four free throws. Chambers added a three-point play, a layup and a jumper before Gilliam's stuff with 3:42 left made it 97-75. Utah never got closer than 20 in losing for the sixth consecutive time here.
 Gilliam had 22 points and 11 rebounds, Johnson 19 points and 12 assists and Mark West 12 rebounds as Phoenix won for the 17th time in its last 19 home games.
 Malone led the Jazz with 19 points, Bailey had 17 and John Stockton 12. Utah's All-Star center, Mark Eaton, was held to five points and six rebounds.
 The victory left third-place Phoenix three games behind the Los Angeles Lakers and one-half game behind Seattle in the NBA's Pacific Division. Utah trails first-place Houston by one game in the Midwest Division.

ASU Baseball

The ASU baseball team (4-2) opens a two-game series with Chapman College at 2:30 p.m. today at Packard Stadium.
 The Sun Devils are returning after a two-game sweep by Florida State suffered over the weekend at Tallahassee. Today's starting pitcher for ASU will be senior lefthander David Cassidy.
 All ASU baseball games are free to students with a validated ID.

Ice Devils

The ASU Ice Devils hockey club split a pair of exhibition games with an Albuquerque all-star team in New Mexico over the weekend.
 The Devils lost Saturday's contest, 8-5, but came back to win Sunday, 2-1.
 ASU is scheduled to play host to a Phoenix all-star team at 5:30 p.m. Saturday in Phoenix.

Pac-10 Player of the Week

Todd Licht of Stanford was named the Pacific-10 player of the week on Monday for the third time this season.
 Licht, a 6-4 senior from Concord, scored 57 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and handed out 10 assists in road victories over Arizona State and Florida. He shot 58 percent from the floor and 83 percent from the line. It was the fourth time in his career that Licht won the award.

Hey Charles, consider me for coach

Chris Dorsey
 Asst. Sports Editor

Who is Charles Harris going to name to succeed ASU basketball coach Steve Patterson?

Well, this question is driving everyone crazy. Names like Purdue's Gene Keady and Michigan's Bill Frieder have come to mind.

And then again, there is Larry Brown. The NBA coach always has his name come up when a position is open.

But in all honesty, are these the quality individuals that this program needs? I say thee nay. Forget it, no way, negative, denied.

Let me throw out a couple names.

Evangelist Jerry Falwell is a good choice because he has already proven that he can perform miracles. Another big name that could take the basketball world by surprise is Michigan football coach Bo Schembechler, who is coming off his second Rose Bowl victory in nine tries. Come on, Bo is a proven winner. How hard would it be to change his football philosophies to basketball?

OK, these possibilities are a joke, but another name to put on the ballot is mine.

Yes, Chris Dorsey should be the eighth head coach for the Arizona State basketball team.

Let me justify my decision.

The sign of a good coach is having quality assistants, which I can name at this time.

First of all my full-time assistant will be Dick Vitale. He has been out of coaching for several years now and the urge to get back in the business is in his eyes.

Dick has a great basketball mind. The commentator for ESPN and ABC is constantly second guessing coaches around the country. So I feel it would be in the best interest of ASU to have him on our bench assisting Coach Dorsey — nice ring to it, huh?

Another great thing about emigrating Mr. Vitale to the Valley is he can fill the vacant Activity Center seats. Everyone from miles around will come to see Dick scream, "Chris, bay-bee, you need a T.O., call the timeout bay-bee."

During the Iowa-Illinois broadcast Sunday, Dick said he would take the job so I have the edge already.

Plus, the General, Robert Montgomery Knight, is a close personal friend, which says enough in itself.

The next order of business is to fill the assistant job. This decision was a difficult one. I was torn between two people but after hours of deliberating went with George Raveling.

Illinois coach Lou "Doo" Henson is a styling type of guy with his obnoxious toupee, but there is only room for one hearthrob to pace the sidelines. And I don't like competition.

Raveling's job is in jeopardy at USC, so just a quick plane ride to Phoenix is what the doctor ordered. He is an excellent recruiter, which is the key to the success of a good program. But his downfall is coaching these exceptional athletes to winning seasons — that's where Dick and I come in.

George's past history speaks for itself. During a three year stint at Iowa, he had a losing record in the Big Ten conference, 26-28. And in the Pac-10 during his tenure at USC, he has only accumulated nine wins compared to 37 losses.

His recruiting is awesome: next season's class of high school seniors has been touted as the best in years at USC. Also at Iowa, Raveling's tradition is still breathing in Roy Marble, Ed Horton and point guard B.J. Armstrong, who Dick says is one of the best in the country.

That is why Mr. Raveling is my second choice, plus he is also a close, personal friend of the General.

Next on the list is the part-time assistant. I have a basketball genius, a recruiter, now I need a motivator.

This decision was a little tougher and at presstime has not yet been decided. However, I will reveal two names: Pat Robertson and Oral Roberts.

The graduate assistant position will not be filled until Dick arrives, he has many friends in the world of college basketball who he can bring in to give ASU more recognition.

And now my qualifications.

I have no coaching experience whatsoever, but I am a member of the press and I can relate to the writers in the the Valley, and they can stay off my back. I have also brought together one of the best staffs in the nation. I promise results within 10 years and if I can not fulfill this I will step down.

The temper is something I'll have to work on, I am a mellow type of guy. However, I am willing to learn how to get technicals and throw chairs at officials, via Mr. Robert Montgomery Knight.

Who knows, maybe in years to come I can become good friends with the General like my assistants. Dick and I can put the Sun Devils back on the map in college basketball.

I can hear him already, "This is a P.T. (prime time) program bay-bee" as we carry off the national championship trophy in 1990.

Arizona Wildcats voted to AP's topbilling

(AP) — For the fourth consecutive week a new team claimed the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press college basketball poll. Arizona went to the top of the rankings on Monday, a position the Wildcats held for six weeks last season.

Carolina — all lost at least one game while the Wildcats were beating California and Washington.

Oklahoma, which also jumped from No. 4 to No. 1 when it assumed the top spot, held the post for just last week as the Sooners fell to Oklahoma State on the road.

Arizona, 17-2, received 30 of the 65 first-place votes cast by the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters and 1,226 points to reclaim the No. 1 ranking it held for six weeks in a seven-week period in the middle of last season.

The Wildcats will be put to the test right away as the No. 1 team as they play a Pac-10 conference game at Oregon on Thursday before travelling to Oklahoma for a nationally televised game on Sunday.

ASU badminton player Liz Aronsohn lunges to return a serve during practice last week. She has won national titles in the sport, and hopes to participate in the Olympics someday.

Hard work propels No. 1 badminton player to top

By CHRIS PIRKEY
State Press

When Liz Aronsohn decided to go away to school, she knew it was going to take more than $1.25 in quarters to call home — especially when home is Angelholm, Sweden, more than 4,000 miles away.

Making her way to ASU, Aronsohn has become the No. 1 women's badminton player, winning collegiate national titles in both singles and doubles play. Her coach, Guy Chadwick, has nothing but praise for the junior, who hopes to participate in the Olympics some day. So far this season, she has placed first in two major tournaments and Chadwick said he expects her to keep up her winning stride.

"Liz really couldn't have done any better this season than she has," Chadwick said. "She has beat her opponents both physically and strategically. She has, more than anything I think, made them frustrated."

Hard work and confidence in her abilities are important to Aronsohn, who said she really does not think about being No. 1. She said she concentrates on playing her own kind of game and keeping in shape — two important elements in her game strategy.

"I'm feeling stronger physically and I'm doing more running," Aronsohn said. "When I'm stronger I'm much more confident. I'm keeping my play the way it is supposed to be."

"I don't think about being No. 1. I just want to do as well as I can and see how far I can go. It never really worries me."

Aronsohn, who has been chasing birdies for 14 years, said she sometimes has to remind herself to stay calm during a match. She said it is difficult holding her emotions in check when she is playing.

"I try to stay calm and not get frustrated ... even if I miss a couple of shots," Aronsohn said. "I know I can still get back to my game instead of following the other person. As long as I can keep my game, nothing else bothers me."

With her family thousands of miles away, Aronsohn said she finds herself sometimes wishing she was still at home. The youngest of five children, Aronsohn said she gets along well with her brother and three sisters and manages to keep in touch with them.

Aronsohn said her parents have always been supportive of her and have encouraged her to try different things. They have also given her the gift of emotional strength, which was put to the test last year when her mother died.

"When my mom died last year, it really affected me," Aronsohn said. "Both of my parents were always supportive of me having the chance to go somewhere and do things. They have always been there when I needed them."

Coming to a foreign country was easy, Aronsohn said, because she likes to travel and see new places. She said when she came to ASU, everyone was very helpful and friendly toward her and made her feel like she belonged. But she said she still misses Sweden a lot.

"You miss people," Aronsohn said. "But I like it here. I really feel good about being here. When I first got here everyone was really was really talkative to me and wanted me to do things with them. Here I have people that always care about you, like on the team. There are times when I think I should be at home, but being on the team makes it easier."

"But I still miss my family." Spending more than 18 hours per week on badminton leaves Aronsohn with little free time. When she does have a few extra minutes, she said she likes to read a good book or go somewhere with her friends.

Coach smiling after first Pac-10 road win

By KYLE ENG
State Press

ASU women's head basketball coach Maura McHugh was smiling from ear to ear Monday, and she had some good reasons to.

Maybe it was because her Devils defeated California, 81-78, to pick up their first road Pac-10 win of the year.

Maybe it was because of the play of star center Fran Ciak, who scored 30 points and grabbed 20 rebounds, becoming the second player in Pac-10 history to accomplish those marks. USC's Cherrie Nelson, who was the first to reach that plateau, scored 32 and grabbed 21 against BYU in 1986.

Maybe it was the fact that the Devils have found that the bench has two more players who can really contribute. Freshmen center-forwards Dawn Bantum and Shannon Gridley each started one game over the weekend and contributed to the team's performance.

Or just maybe it was because the win against California, which puts the Devils at 8-11 overall and 2-7 in the Pac-10, was McHugh's 150th career victory.

For whatever reason, ASU finally ended a seven-game Pac-10 road trip with a victory — the only win of the series. The Devils now can settle down for the next month; they will tip off a seven-game home stand when they play host to Oregon State at 7:30 p.m.

Thursday in the Activity Center.

Friday the Devils traveled to Palo Alto to play the fourth-ranked Stanford Cardinal. The Cardinal (17-2, 9-0) buried ASU with a balanced attack, putting five players into double figures in scoring.

Stanford came out strong and led by eight at halftime. They went on to win by 19.

Although the Devils lost the game by a disappointing margin, Gridley came off the bench to score a game-high 21 points and grab a game-high 11 rebounds.

ASU traveled to Berkeley on Saturday to take on the Golden Bears. California was without the services of two of its starters, due to injuries.

ASU came out strong, but were challenged by the Bears, who kept the game tight in the first half. The Devils escaped with a 35-34 lead at halftime.

ASU went on a 15-2 run in the first 4:12 of the second half to take a 50-36 lead. Starting guard Karen O'Connor (13 points and four rebounds) fouled out with 3:49 left and the score standing at 74-66.

The two teams traded baskets for the next minute, but with the score 77-67 and 1:49 left to play the Bears went on a nine-point run to close the gap at 77-76 with 29 seconds left.

Devil guard Rosiland Senior was then fouled, and made both free throws, as did guard Carolyn DeHoff, who was fouled with 15 seconds remaining.

"That's why I think this win was so important for us," McHugh said. "The fact that we could bear down and play tough down to the wire for the win."

McHugh said she found two other players who can play for the Devils, either in a starting role or coming off the bench.

"I think the play of both Shannon (Gridley) and Dawn (Bantum) showed us that we have a deeper bench," McHugh said. "I was very pleased with the way both of them played over the weekend. I think this really gives us another option to go with."

Bantum, who started against Stanford, scored four points and grabbed eight rebounds. Coming off the bench against California, Bantum scored six points.

Gridley, who started the California game, scored 10 points and grabbed five rebounds; against Stanford she had 21 points and 11 rebounds.

McHugh now has to decide which of the two will start.

"The decision will come out in practice," McHugh said. "The girls know they can't just walk into practice and think they will start, but they have to work hard in practice."

McHugh, who initially downplayed the 150th-game milestone, later said, "Now that I think about it, 150 was pretty satisfying because of the way we won and the time that we pulled it off."

Badminton

"I like to spend time with my friends — hang out with them and do things with them," Aronsohn said. "A lot of times you have to get your mind on something else. I like to do things other than school and practice. You really need to take time to relax."

Although her dedication to her sport is obvious, Aronsohn said sometimes she wonders why she is participating in athletics. But she said despite the instances when she becomes frustrated, she knows why she keeps playing badminton.

"Sometimes I think, 'Why do I spend so much time with this, this is painful and a lot of hard work,'" Aronsohn said. "I wouldn't do it at all if I didn't enjoy it. I love the traveling, meeting people, going to tournaments. It is rewarding. I really love it."

Aronsohn would like to teach after she receives her degree in physical education, she said. Coaching and teaching at the high-school level is what she wants to do, because she feels there is a demand for female badminton coaches.

"I would like to combine teaching and coaching at a high school," Aronsohn said.

"I think there is a need for badminton coaches who are women. I also like to help people; it's something I know how to do.

Enjoying what she is doing is of the utmost importance to Aronsohn, who said she otherwise would not continue her career in badminton.

"As long as I enjoy it, I'll keep on playing."

Spring baseball tickets become hot item

PHOENIX (AP) — Unprecedented demand for tickets to spring baseball games in Arizona has stadium managers scrambling to keep pace with orders, they say.

Although the games don't begin for nearly three weeks, the sponsoring club for Chicago Cubs spring games has sold out 40 percent of its stadium in Mesa to season-ticket buyers.

The sale of 3,500 season tickets is symptomatic of feverish interest in the Cactus League, a group of seven major league baseball teams who train in Arizona, plus the California Angels, who split the mid-February-through-March season between Arizona and Palm Springs, Calif.

"Demand has been very heavy. There's been a lot of interest created this year," parks director Jim Ronstadt said in Tucson, where the Cleveland Indians play. "There's an overall awareness by the people in the city and state of the Cactus League."

The city sold 7,000 single-game tickets in three days last week, Ronstadt said.

In Yuma, where the San Diego Padres train, ticket sales are running 50 percent ahead of last year, said Dan Dorn, a city administrative assistant.

"It's been unbelievable," Dorn said. He said the team began selling tickets in September and had recorded two sellouts — March 18 and 19. The sellouts do not include 900 tickets set aside for sale the day of each game.

Fears that Arizona could lose one of the teams — the Cubs, Indians, Brewers, Padres, San Francisco Giants, Oakland A's, Seattle Mariners and California Angels — have prompted formation of a Cactus League task force and widespread publicity.

The fears were generated by Florida's heavy involvement in building new stadiums for spring ball.

Stadium manager Frank Pezzorello in Chandler said group sales to Milwaukee- and Chicago-area travel agencies were ahead of last year, and the Brewers were selling advance tickets for the outfield lawn seating areas for the first time.

However, other statistics pale by comparison with Mesa's HoHoKam Park, where the Cubs have trained since the 1950s and averaged 7,912 per game last year.

This year, the HoHoKams are expanding the stadium by 400 seats. The seats are still under construction and haven't been put on the market yet.

The Giants are adding 100 seats this year to raise capacity to 5,600, Anderson said.
