Former Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci discusses ways the United States can save money on defense spending in a speech he gave Wednesday night at the MU Arizona Room. A standing-room-only crowd of about 800 people attended. Carlucci, secretary of defense under Ronald Reagan, spoke for 25 minutes and then answered questions.

The United States could save $20 billion a year on defense spending if the military were granted a multi-year spending contract as opposed to its current one-year contract, a former Secretary of Defense said Wednesday.

Frank Carlucci, the secretary of defense under Ronald Reagan, also told a standing-room-only crowd of about 800 that he is doubtful about Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, saying, "The Soviet Union's policy is still to try and divide the U.S. from allies."

In reference to defense spending, Carlucci said that a yearly defense budget is unstable because of difficulty in estimating yearly costs.

"I can't tell you that there is no waste in a $300 billion military budget," Carlucci said. "There is waste in any business, university or social project."

Carlucci said that the American people putting pressure on Congress to develop a multi-year contract is the starting point of stabilizing any present waste.

In his 25-minute speech sponsored by the Associated Students of ASU, Carlucci said Gorbachev's motives are not to "make democracy in the Soviet Union."

"Part of what is causing the Soviet self-analysis is pressure from the West," he said.

The United States would be "foolish" to establish policy based on the actions of the Soviet president, Carlucci said. He added that Gorbachev is just one of many soviet officials and that it is difficult to determine his motives.

The Soviet military is more formidable than ever, Carlucci said, adding that there is an alarming Russian

Bill endorsed forcing regents to list finances

By TYRONE MEIGHAN

A bill forcing members of the Arizona Board of Regents to submit financial disclosure statements is necessary because the regents control millions of state dollars, an Arizona lawmaker said Wednesday.

"I have no evidence of wrongdoing," said John Kromko, D-Tucson. "But the purpose of (the bill) is to put the public's mind at rest that there isn't any wrongdoing."

Kromko introduced House Bill 2371, and it was unanimously endorsed by the House Judiciary Committee Monday.

The bill, which would force regents to publicly disclose their finances, will be sent to the full House for consideration later this session.

Also, the bill would require members of the state Board of Transportation and the Central Arizona Project Board to file financial disclosure statements with the secretary of state. State lawmakers are already required to submit the disclosure statements.

But Regent Jack Pfister said requiring regents to disclose financial statements is not necessary.

"The regents are (by law) required to designate any conflicts of interest they have," Pfister said.

Kromko

Kromko's bill will amend the statutory definition of a public officer to include the members of the three boards.

"I think those are three groups that should disclose because they have control over a substantial amount of money," Kromko said.

Regent Andrew Hurwitz said he has no problem with filing a financial disclosure statement, but it could be a cumbersome process for other members.

"It would not be a big burden for me to do it," Hurwitz said. Allan Price, regent associate director for public affairs, said the regents will lobby against the passage of the bill in the House.

"We will make sure that legislators understand the board's point of view," Price said. He added that the regents perform a public service and each member of the board receives only $30 a month. They also are reimbursed for expenses relating to their position, he said.

"These are people who are essentially volunteers," Price said, adding that current conflict of interest laws that govern the board are working well.

Creating a mandatory regent financial disclosure law could limit the number of people that will serve in the position, Price said.

Student Regent Pat McWhortor disagrees with Price. "I believe that we can attract quality people to the board with the disclosure law," McWhortor said. But he added that filing disclosure laws could become burdensome to some members of the board.

ASU prof delays student regent vote bill

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

A bill giving the Arizona Board of Regents student regent voting powers was removed from the state House of Representatives' consent calendar today after a protest by ASU professor, Rep. Heinz Hink.

"I am of the opinion that neither a student or professor should vote on the board," said Hink, a Scottsdale Republican.

Currently, there is not a faculty member on the Arizona Board of Regents, and the student regent has no voting powers and may be excluded from executive meetings.

But the House Education Committee unanimously passed the student regent vote bill on Feb. 1 and set the stage for discussion in the caucus meeting.

Hink said he doesn't like the concept of a voting student regent because it originated with student protests in the 1960s.

Student Regent Pat McWhortor said the nature of student leadership has changed since the 1960s, and student regents are concerned about the issues affecting faculty and students.

Hink said that he has been a professor at ASU for 30 years, and he thinks faculty concerns should be expressed on the board if there is a student voice.

"If a student is on (the board), a professor should be on it," he said. "But I think neither should be on it."

McWhortor said he thinks the University faculty should have a voice on the board.

"I support the position of a faculty regent," he said.

The Legislature created the student regent position in 1978 after a four-year legislative battle, but lawmakers approved the post on the grounds that students would not be allowed to vote.

In 1987, the Legislature approved a bill that made the student regent a permanent member of the board. The position has been subject to review every three years.

Hink said that because there are eight members on the board, the student regent vote wouldn't have a big impact.

"Whether the student has a vote or not, it doesn't make a difference," he said, adding that student regent voting power is just a symbol for the students.

McWhortor said he doesn't think Hink's comments about the bill will hurt its chances in the full House.

"I think we can still obtain passage in the House," he said.

McWhortor said the bill is on today's House agenda for a possible vote.

Scientists developing tiny robot to move inside the human body

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese scientists have begun developing a tiny robot to move inside the human body to treat diseased tissue, a professor said Wednesday.

The scientists eventually hope to produce a robot that can transmit its location and findings, and can cut or otherwise treat diseased parts, said Iwao Fujimasa of Tokyo University's Research Center for Advanced Science and Technology.

"Researchers for many years have sent probes to study the oceans and outer space. We hope to be able to study the inner world," Fujimasa said.

Fujimasa, an artificial heart specialist, said the goal is a robot less than 0.04 inches in size that will be able to travel through veins and inside organs.

The project will require that the smallest currently available parts, such as motors, gears and screws, be reduced to about one-thousandth their present size, he said.

Even with a robot that size, the team will need to study how to minimize problems created by its presence in the body, such as blocking blood flow, Fujimasa said.

The group includes scientists from schools such as Tokyo University and Tokyo Institute of Technology, and from companies such as Toyota, Hitachi and Sumitomo Electric Industries, he said.

Fujimasa said Japan's high level of semiconductor manufacturing technology, which is capable of producing components less than 1 micron in size, would aid the project.

Soviet Union ends nine-year intervention in Afghanistan

TERMEZ, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The Soviet Union ended its costly nine-year intervention in Afghanistan on Wednesday when the last soldier — the commander of the Red Army contingent — walked across a border bridge clutching flowers and accompanied by his teen-age son.

"I wasn't looking back," said Lt. Gen. Boris Gromov after leaving Afghan soil where 15,000 Soviets died in a civil war that still rages on.

The pullout through this border town — where many of the 115,000 Soviet troops had entered Afghanistan — closed a painful chapter in Soviet history that even Mikhail S. Gorbachev once called a "bleeding wound."

Tenure eludes female profs; policy change sought

By RICHARD VIGIL
State Press

ASU lags behind the national average for tenured women faculty, and an ASU Faculty Senate committee is considering a bill which calls for a study of a possible solution.

The national average for tenured women faculty members is 10 percent of a university's faculty. ASU has 72 tenured women — about 5 percent of the 1,391 University faculty members, according to the ASU Institutional Analysis Office.

The measure, sponsored by faculty senator Georgianne Baker, an ASU professor of family studies, would create the committee to study increasing the amount of time faculty members with child-rearing responsibility have to serve in order to receive tenure.

One solution the committee would study is altering University policy to allow women and men who care for children to accumulate tenure-track time while working part-time at ASU.

Kristin Valentine, chairwoman of the Faculty Senate, said women are currently given reduced-time tenure "on a case-by-case basis," but no policy exists on the issue.

She said there are current studies which could result in the University creating a maternity leave policy. She added that a comprehensive extended-care policy could result.

Valentine said the University does not give its professors sick leave, and teachers are expected to cover for each other.

"Maybe that's not such a good situation," Valentine said.

Baker said one reason there are so few tenured women professors at ASU is that women traditionally take the child-rearing role, which means taking time off from their careers when their children are very young.

But Baker said the bill is specifically worded to include men who care for children, as well as faculty members who are caring for aging relatives.

"Obviously, men are parents as well as women," she said. "It (extension of tenure time) should pertain to men also."

Valentine said the ideal policy would allow faculty members time to care for "any relative or significant other who needs intensive long-term care."

Similar studies are being conducted at UofA and NAU, Baker said.

The Senate proposal has been forwarded to the Senate personnel committee, which will review it before it goes to the full Senate.

The proposal also calls for ASU administrators to set up a committee to investigate the possibility of increasing tenure-clock time.

The Arizona Conference of the American Association of University Professors has sent letters to the Arizona Board of Regents to call the board's attention to the "striking under-representation of faculty women at each of Arizona's universities in all but entry-level positions."

The letter also called for the formation of an "Inter-university Committee on the Status of Women."

Regents OK plans; ASU West construction resumes

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

ASU West officials are proceeding with construction plans at the West Campus after approval by the Arizona Board of Regents Friday.

The remaining five buildings, part of Phase I construction, include: a 70,000 square-foot Classroom Laboratory/Computer Classroom Building; a 123,000 square-foot University Center Building; a Faculty and Administration Building and a 13,000 square-foot Campus Service Complex.

Fletcher Library and a classroom building, which also are part of Phase I, have already been completed.

The final project in the first phase of construction will provide additional parking, roads, sidewalks, malls, landscaping and such amenities as drinking fountains, information kiosks and trash containers.

Phase I also will include three entrances to the ASU West Campus in addition to the existing two.

Jim Knothe, director of facilities development for the West Campus, said after this phase is complete, the 300-acre campus will be equipped to serve 10,000 to 12,000 students.

Knothe said the remaining construction for Phase I should begin by the end of this year.

"The schedule calls for next fall," he said, adding that the first phase should be complete by January 1991.

The Laboratory/Computer Classroom Building will contain computer rooms, research laboratories, darkrooms, a television broadcast studio and other facilities to support the ASU West Campus' academic programs.

The University Center Building will include the registrar's office, financial assistance and career services.

Also located in the University Center building will be food services, student government, the bookstore, meeting rooms and student and faculty lounges.

The Faculty and Administration Building will include faculty, administrative and staff offices.

The Campus Service Complex will include campus security, general stores and a mail service.

Knothe said Phase II, which is scheduled to begin in 1993, will include additional classrooms, a research laboratory, a building for faculty and administration, a gymnasium and an auditorium.

But Knothe said the construction of Phase II could be delayed.

"It all depends on enrollment," he said, adding that if enrollment is down, there will be no need to begin the new phase.

Heinz Hink, the terrible tunnels and nuke-free Tempe

Darrin Hostetler
Columnist

Notes:

Hink's paranoia

ASU political science professor Heinz Hink, a state representative from Scottsdale, must lay awake nights having had flashbacks from the 1960s. Mobs of students, coming to get him!

Hink announced Wednesday that he opposes granting a vote to the student member of the Arizona Board of Regents because he feels the whole idea of granting such power to a student is rooted in the radical protest movements of the '60s. Hink faults groups like Tom Hayden's Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) for selfishly pursuing youth agendas in the past, and doesn't want to see students gain a voice on a board controlled by our elders in the 1980s.

Hink, a fixture on campus for decades, has evidently spent too much time locked in a classroom and not enough on campus, observing students.

We no longer take over administration buildings by force. Or conduct sit-ins. Students today, when they care about public affairs at all, take a mature, well-rounded approach with everyone's interest in mind — not just their own. Student regents past and present have proven this to be true. As a result, even the "adult" regents favor enfranchising the student representative.

What is Hink afraid of? That granting the student regent a vote on a board that establishes policy for state universities will throw students into a power frenzy and set them rioting on the malls, drooling for yet more control? Ridiculous.

It is high time students had input into the decisions that affect them. And it is too bad that a professor/lawmaker is as out of touch with his students/constituents as is Heinz Hink.

Tunnel vision

They're part of ASU history and lore, but soon the University's extensive subterranean tunnel system may become permanently off-limits to those who enjoy it most — intoxicated students.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of us over the past 30 years have come to grips with our fear and claustrophobia — both usually overcome with a mixture of drink, peer pressure and curiosity — and descended into the 6.2 miles of underground labyrinth that links the physical plant with campus buildings.

But now Doug Bartosh, associate director of public safety, says the University is looking into installing an alarm system in the tunnels, which would be activated any time an unauthorized person went below ground. The system would also let police know where the intruders entered the tunnel and could track them throughout the underground passageways.

If caught, offenders would be arrested and "disciplined" by the Dean of Students.

Hot water and steam pipes — filled with scalding liquid and gas — and electrical lines pulsating with high voltage fill the underground chambers. It's not hard to burn or electrocute oneself — as one would-be thief attempting to break into a building from the tunnels found out two years ago.

And cancer-causing asbestos has been discovered lining pipes in the tunnels.

So it looks like the groups of bizzare, socially retarded "role-playing" game aficionados who climb down into the tunnels to act out their Dungeons and Dragons fantasies by searching for the evil slime monster Dworg and by battling each other with plastic swords will be driven above-ground.

And the eager freshmen who hear about the tunnels and decide, usually right after their first-ever beer, to "go exploring," will be shut out, along with the fraternity members who sometimes use the tunnels as part of initiation rites during "hell week."

It's too bad they're so dangerous, because like most things that are bad for you, the tunnels are also a lot of fun and should be experienced: once.

And their closure will represent the end of a freshman tradition at ASU.

Nuclear-free Tempe

The drive to make Tempe a nuclear-free zone has hit a stone wall in the form of Mayor Harry Mitchell, who says he will bring the issue to a vote at the city council only if four of the seven councilmen voice support for the issue.

ASU Education Professor Roger Axford, who led efforts to officially eliminate nuclear products in Tempe, says Mitchell sent letters to the council members informing them of his intentions. Several councilmen had agreed to at least discuss the issue, but Mitchell's move effectively kills any possibility that the issue will advance to a vote.

A largely symbolic gesture supported by nuclear disarmament proponents, the nuclear-free campaign has enjoyed success nationwide, as city councils in urban areas as large as Chicago have announced their intentions to disallow any nuclear weapons or waste in their areas.

The biggest snag in the local nuclear-free drive was the wording of the proposal, which technically called for the elimination of all nuclear substances — including those used in research at ASU.

Mitchell and the Tempe council were besieged with calls from concerned ASU researchers who were afraid that radioactive isotopes used in medical and biological studies would be affected.

Backers of the nuclear-free proposal plan to try again in the future — this time specifying that only weapons and waste should be excluded from Tempe. With that alteration made, Tempe police may one day find themselves stopping trains or trucks loaded with nuclear items at the city limits.

Wine, women and song: John Tower loves them all

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

"If there's anybody I can't stand," Slat Grobnik said, "it's a snitcher, a tattletale." Most people would agree. But what brings on that observation?

"I'm reading about this little guy John Tower, the politician who President Bush wants to make secretary of defense."

Ah, yes, Washington is all atwitter about his past indiscretions.

"From what I've seen, Washington gets all atwitter pretty easy. Is that all those people do out there, get in atwitter?"

It's a very emotional city, filled with thousands of politicians and journalists, and it takes very little to set them to frantically twittering.

"Well, this stuff about Tower is about as dumb a thing as I've ever read."

I've read dumber, but what is it that bothers you?

"How old old is Tower?"

He'll be 64 on his next birthday.

"How tall is he?" He's over 5 feet, but not by a great deal, I think he might almost qualify as the missile in a dwarf-throwing contest.

"Have you ever seen him in person?"

Once, at a political convention.

"What's he look like? Good looking?"

Far from it. He dresses well, but he has beady eyes, a pudgy face and he favors the slicked-down wet look in his hairstyle.

"So he ain't no pretty boy?"

Well he might be a turn-on in a retirement home, but I doubt if Cher would dump her boyfriend for him.

"So with all that, am I supposed to believe he's one of the great lover boys of our time?"

That's what's being said.

"Yeah, because of a snitcher, one of the lowest forms of life."

You're referring to Mr. Weyrich?

"That's what it says in the paper. Paul Weyrich, some kind of right-wing wheeler and dealer in Washington. Did you see what he did?"

Yes, he appeared at a Senate confirmation hearing on Tower and revealed shocking information about the little fellow's personal life.

"I read it. It says here exactly what the fink told them: 'Over the course of many years, I have encountered the nominee in a condition, a lack of sobriety, as well as with women to whom he was not married.' Now, percent and they'd have to use football stadiums for divorce courts."

But Weyrich said that this wasn't just one isolated incident. He said that he saw this occur over the course of "many years." I assume that this was while Tower was a senator.

"And that's something I don't understand either. How come he was snooping around, like he says, over the course of many years. Doesn't he have anything else to do over a course of many years? What is this guy Weyrich, one of those voyages?"

You mean voyeur, a peeping Tom.

"Whatever. I think they ought to investigate this guy Weyrich. They ought to ask him: 'When you observed Tower, where were you, crouching under the table in his booth in the bar? Were you looking through You're missing the point. The question has to do with Tower's character and stability. The Senate wants to know if he drinks to excess and cavorts with women.

"That's pretty stupid. If he was cavorting, his best bet would be a woman. I mean, any of the other options could really mess up his reputation."

It sounds to me as if you approve of Tower's alleged behavior.

"Well, if I was Republican, I'd be proud of him."

What is there to be proud of?

"I'll tell you what. Who was the best-known politician lover boy we've heard about recently?"

That's easy. Gary Hart, of course.

"Right. And before Gary Hart, who was the biggest lover boy of them all?"

By all accounts, it was John F. Kennedy, the Hefner of American presidents.

"OK, what did these guys look like?"

I'm no judge of that, but most women tell me that they were handsome, dashing, suave, tall and lean.

"Exactly. So when you look like a Kennedy or a Hart, and you got power and fame, it ain't hard to persuade some fluff that you ought to — and I use the words of the Stupid Generation — get it on. Right?"

Based on their track records, it was obviously easy enough.

"So now the Republicans have a lover boy. But look at him. A stubby, aging character with BB eyes, a 1910 haircut and a puffy face. He looks like the kind of guy you see sitting alone in a hotel bar, who has spent all day seeing customers, and now he's going to have dinner alone, go to his room, phone his wife and wonder if his life is turning into Death of a Salesman."

You exaggerate.

"Maybe so, but if I was a Republican, I'd point to Tower and come up with a slogan."

What slogan?

"We try harder."

what kind of thing is that to say about a guy?"

Well, maybe Weyrich felt it was his civic duty.

"His civic duty is to testify that he saw the guy have a few pops too many while he was with a stray chick? Listen, if everybody thought finking like that was their civic duty, domestic homicides would be up 1,000 a keyhole or do you prefer standing on a ladder and peeking through a transom? Confess, Mr. Weyrich, did you ever hide under a bed or in somebody's laundry hamper? Have you ever put on a false mustache and a beard and posed as a bartender? Or did you put on a bellhop's uniform and pretend to be delivering room service?"

Cartoon unfairly stereotypes fine arts majors

Editor:
I found the editorial cartoon drawn by Mike Ritter on Jan. 30 to be in very poor taste. He seems to think because he does not like or understand the new Fine Arts Complex, it gives him the editorial license to ridicule and stereotype an entire group of students. If everyone were to stereotype people like Mike Ritter, most editorial cartoonists would be thought of as ignorant, narrow-minded morons. I find it very sad that a paper that is intended to be for the student chose to publish a cartoon that denigrates a large portion of the student body. The poor choice made by the State Mess to print this has only helped to promote narrow-minded attitudes toward a group of very talented individuals. Especially sad is the fact that it is a group of individuals devoted to something they believe in and enjoy. Individuality naturally follows a truly creative mind and those who criticize such people obviously have not taken time to look beyond appearances and rumors. I feel that a published apology is owed to the College of Fine Arts from Mike Ritter. Do we not have enough prejudice and misunderstandings in the world without the help of Mike Ritter?

Club Ed

Editor:
We laud your "Students feel cheated by 'pampered' honors students" article of Feb. 1. Melissa Michael has succeeded in besting the Arizona Republic in digging for that all important delicacy every reporter longs to feast on — a real scoop.
What Ms. Michael failed to discover in her extensive interview and research period — which we heard lasted nearly five months — was that each honors room in McClintock Hall is really like a large house. Some of the benefits the Honors Residence Hall will allow us to mention are that each honors room contains one or more of the following: futon couches, bunked waterbeds, full-sized refrigerators, jacuzzi-equipped bathtubs, MacIntosh computers with full color LaserWriters, washers and dryers, cable television with VCRs and stereo entertainment centers. Other commodities of the Honors Residence Hall include maids, chauffeured beeping cars which take us to classes (these include our choice of three pleasant beeping tones), covered parking places with brass name plates next to our hall and the key to the top-secret honors swimming pool and spa. The hall is so wonderful, in fact, that only a small percentage of the male honors students will be living in McClintock Hall next fall (less than 2 percent).

In all honesty, it appears that Ms. Michael talked to four residents, one administrator and a housekeeper. That is hardly a large enough group of people to make the broad conclusion she makes. Ms. Michael may have students all over campus wondering, "Just what do those bookworms have over there anyway?"

Students: Don't take her word for it. Don't even take our word for it. Come see it for yourselves; it's more than you'd expect.

Gun control column misses target

Editor:
The rantings of Mike Ritter on the subject of gun control have become somewhat tiresome. His latest editorial (Feb. 14) is not only biased and inaccurate, it is full of the same type of illogical hysteria that caused the passing of Prohibition. Blaming an inanimate object for the ills of society (or even for a small part of that society) is simply hiding one's head in the ground, refusing to face the realities of life upon which Mr. Ritter professes to have such a firm grasp.
It is all too easy to say: "It's the fault of the guns. Ban them, and everything will be all right." I honestly wish that it could be that easy. The truth, however, is much harder to face, because it is a mirror that shows us all the ugliness and horror that we have brought upon ourselves. We are to blame, because we do not provide adequate mental health funding, because we warehouse criminals for a few years and turn them loose on society without a serious effort to help them adjust to society's norms.
As for the Second Amendment, I do not know if Mr. Ritter has actually bothered to give it more than a cursory glance, but it does bear further thought. Consider for a moment the phrase: "A well regulated militia being necessary for the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

First of all, what sense does it make to believe that a Constitutional amendment is necessary to allow the army to have weapons? If that were the case, the amendment would also be expected to require the maintaining of an army. Instead, that matter is taken care of within the Constitution itself. Think for a moment about the people who wrote that phrase. They were statesmen, yes, but also warriors who had recently thrown off the yoke of British imperial rule and tyranny. The entire Bill of Rights was intended to make sure that such an event never happened again in this country, that the rights of the people would never be taken away by the government. The Second Amendment itself is meant to insure that should all else fail, and the people of the United States should ever find themselves in such a situation again, they would have the means to restore their own rights, by force if necessary.

A more correct interpretation of the wording of the Second Amendment would be: "We have to have an army to remain free. But to insure that the army will never again be able to take over the country, the people shall always have the right to defend themselves against such tyranny." The same sentiment is expressed in the Declaration of Independence and in the personal writing of many of the framers of the Constitution.

If you still believe the Second Amendment refers only to the army, I urge you to consider the phrase, "... the right of the people ..." then look through the entire Constitution to attempt to find a single instance where those words are used to mean "the army." Trust me, you won't be able to. The words, "the people," mean just that. All the people. As in "We the People ..." — remember that part?

Think about it.

Opinion Editor's Note:

Just as the word "army" is not found in the Second Amendment to the Constitution, neither is it found in the aforementioned column of Feb. 14.

Man flees on motor scooter after robbing Tempe bank

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A bandit who said he had a weapon robbed a Tempe bank Tuesday afternoon then fled on a motor scooter, police said.

The suspect entered the Valley National Bank branch at 2528 W. Southern Ave. about 1:51 p.m. and handed a teller a note demanding money, said Officer Roger Austin, a Tempe police spokesman.

Austin said the man claimed he had a weapon inside his jacket, but none was seen. He then left the bank with an undisclosed amount of cash and rode off on a scooter.

Police described the suspect as a black male, 30 to 35-years-old, 5-foot-8 with a thin build. He wore a brown sweater and jacket and a flat dark-colored hat.

Tempe police also reported:

A 27-year-old Tempe man was arrested on Valentine's Day after he allegedly bound and gagged his ex-girlfriend and threatened to cut her up with a knife.

The man was arrested on suspicion of aggravated assault and imprisonment about 4 p.m. at an apartment in the 900 block of East Vista Del Cerro Drive. He allegedly kept the 24-year-old woman in the apartment for about three hours, but she was only tied up for about 15 minutes.

ASU police reported the following incidents ending at 7 a.m. Wednesday:

A man and two women were warned about trespassing Tuesday after their hot air balloon landed in a field near the ASU West Campus. The trio said they had an emergency and needed to land.

•Burglary: between 5:50 p.m. and 6:45 p.m. Tuesday, Cholla apartments. A burglar stole two purses and their contents valued at $295. The dormitory room was left unlocked.

•Arrest: 12:35 a.m. Wednesday, Manzanita residence hall. Two male students were cited and released for minor in possession of alcohol.

•Bike theft: between 2 p.m. and 9:20 p.m. Tuesday, southeast side of the Classroom Office Building. A thief stole a $250 mens blue Peugeot 12-speed bicycle.

•Criminal damage: Tuesday, University Activity Center. A vandal caused $200 in damages to two windows by smashing them.

City Council to vote on 'Tempe 2000' zoning plan today

By MICHELE McDONALD
State Press

The Tempe 2000 General Plan, which would include combining residences and businesses in the same neighborhoods, will be voted on by the Tempe City Council today.

Councilman Frank B. Plencner said Wednesday the plan aims at "solidifying and trying to increase the quality of life in our city as we have in the past."

If approved, the plan will replace the General Plan accepted by the council in 1978, said Atis Kriger, an employee of Tempe's Community Development.

Krigers said the council has followed 90 percent of the original plan, and said he expects they will adhere to the new plan if it is adopted.

The city has not zoned residences and businesses together before because of tradition, Krigers said.

"Traditional planning here has been to separate uses," he said.

Krigers said the plan emphasizes four important aspects: growth nodes, mixed use corridors, neighborhood stability and the "quality of life."

"We want to enhance the quality of life . . . as perceived by a variety of individuals," he said.

Growth nodes are segments of land that combine residential, service, commercial and industrial properties together.

Mixed use corridors will be made up of residential, service and commercial properties built in the same area.

Both growth nodes and mixed use corridors are additions to the 1978 plan, Krigers said. They are designed to "get people out of their cars" because work, shopping and residential areas are located near each other, Krigers said.

Hayden Square, located in downtown Tempe, is a prime example of a growth node because it combines residences, restaurants and businesses, Krigers said.

The proposed Rio Salado Project, which, in concept, is designed to turn the dry Salt River bed into a multi-recreational facility, is another example of a growth node, Krigers added.

The area along Apache Boulevard will be targeted for a mixed use corridor, Krigers said. Presently, small businesses dominate the area, but the plan can break the barrier between mixing residences and businesses, he said.

Also, Krigers said neighborhoods and their stability play a significant role in the plan. The residents are assured that their area will not be swallowed up by industry, he said.

Kriger said land is a valuable commodity in Tempe, and upkeep of the neighborhoods is essential. The City will maintain the streets, gutters and street lights, but the residents are responsible for their lawns and overall appearance of the neighborhood. If the standards are not met, Kriger said the residents could be fined.

Krigers said wide sidewalks and trees along the streets will entice people to walk or bicycle to the nearby shopping mall instead of driving.

The council may make some changes to the plan, Krigers said.

A group of mobile home owners who live near Kyrene Road want a special designation for all trailer parks that would prevent their park from being demolished from the proposed extension of Kyrene Road, he said.

However, in order to accomplish this, apartments, townhomes, condominiums and single family homes would have to be identified in the same manner, and the council would be unable to rezone those areas, he added.

Women's issues featured at conference

By STACY HAYMES
State Press

ASU's College of Business is hosting the "National Network of Business School Women Conference," Feb. 17-19, which will address issues relating to women's success in business.

"The purpose of the conference is to highlight women in business and focus on the skills that make them successful," said Janet Reck, president of the National Network of Business School Women.

Diane Flickinger, 1987-88 national network president, said ASU was one of the three schools that submitted a proposal to host the conference. Because of the strong support the University offered, ASU was chosen, she said.

Teri Dixon, accommodations director for the conference said, "We are doing this conference for the MBA program and trying to make it a more credible degree."

"We want people to realize we have a good program at ASU," Dixon said, adding that ASU's College of Business hopes to become a top-30 school.

Nancy K. Austin, author of "A Passion for Excellence: The Leadership Difference," will explain the need for excellence in business Sunday at noon at the Sheraton Tempe Mission Palms.

Reck said, "We tried to find people who have had experience that they can share and that they've found to be successful."

The conference committee raised $18,000 over the past 12 months for funding the conference.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson will be at the opening address Friday at 7:30 p.m. to welcome about 160 guests.

Pauline Lyttle, president of GenderCorp, a nationally known consulting firm, will give the opening speech titled, "Understanding the Male Dominant System."

The conference fee is $120 for the public and $95 for members of Graduate Women in Business. For more information call the College of Business, 965-1738.

'SunRaycer' makes stop on campus

General Motors' "SunRaycer," an exclusively solar-powered car, was on campus Wednesday in front of the Physical Sciences Building.

By SCOTT SECKEL

State Press

It doesn't have a great stereo or a back seat, so it probably wouldn't suit most ASU students.

But, on the other hand, it doesn't need any gas, and it hits a top speed of 83 mph.

General Motors' "SunRaycer;" an exclusively solar-powered car, was on campus Wednesday in front of the Physical Sciences Building, making a stop on a cross-country tour.

The svelte prototype uses no gas at all, sucking in the power of the sun through a mosaic of black solar cells.

ASU's Center for Energy Systems Research (CESR) will submit a design proposal next month to enter a GM-sponsored race, according to Byard D. Wood, CESR director.

The race is open to universities, community colleges and technical schools. Out of all proposals entered, 30 will be chosen for the July 1990 race from Orlando, Fla., to Warren, Mich.

"SunRaycer's" sister car won a 2,000-mile race down the length of Australia to Adelaide last year, beating its closest competitor and 23 other cars by 600 miles, according to Andi Liebenbaum, assistant team leader.

GM built the car specifically for the race. The model exhibited Wednesday lacks the bugs that plagued the winner of the race "down under" and will compete in the American race.

The California-registered "SunRaycer," with a license plate that reads GM SUN 88, only produces enough electricity, 1500 watts, to run a hair dryer and is remarkably energy-efficient. It can store three to four hours of full running power for night driving.

"If you ran slow enough, you could drive all night," said George Ettenheim, a team member and ASU undergraduate majoring in industrial design.

The car can achieve a speed of 60 mph from a standing start in 30 seconds and is street-legal, said Liebenbaum.

It has a communications radio, turn signals, a horn and hazard lights. The rear viewing system works by "seeing" the view through a lense. Images pass into a prism and then through a fiber optic bundle to the driver's eye.

"SunRaycer," which has made 200 stops at auto shows, conventions and elementary schools, only weighs 390 pounds. The tires can be changed simply by lifting up the car.

build-up of nuclear and chemical weapons in Third World countries.

"While arms reductions are welcome, the Soviets are still placing a heavy emphasis on tanks and artillery in their military doctrine," he said.

Carlucci said it will be necessary for the Soviets to change their doctrine before the United States can take reduction discussions seriously.

Carlucci also emphasized the importance of maintaining a strong military.

He outlined his formula for a successful military, which includes involvement in countries susceptible to Communist overthrow, partnership with allied countries and general maintenance of strength by recruiting quality individuals and buying quality equipment.

Carlucci defended the U.S. policy of supporting freedom fighters in Cambodia, Afghanistan, Nicaragua and Angola. He insisted that the freedom fighters are important in sustaining a balance of power in the world.

He also supported current spending on nuclear weapons.

Tempe plant fires 27 workers

TEMPE (AP) — Twenty-seven workers at the Tempe plant of Allied-Signal Aerospace Co., a defense contractor, have been fired following an internal drug probe, an official said.

Lawrence Hurst, spokesman for the fluid-system division from which they were fired, said they were notified Monday.

"We have done an in-depth investigation," he said. "We've solved all the visible problems and are attempting to ensure we have a drug-free workplace."

He said the internal investigation turned up no defects in product work and no breaches of security.

Hurst declined to identify the people fired and citing the confidentiality of employee records, would not say that those fired were involved with drugs, only that they had violated company policy.

The probe, which reportedly revealed drug use and drug selling among workers at the plant, was begun several weeks ago.

Tempe police said they have been given information and small quantities of illegal drugs gathered by company security. Police also said there have been no arrests.

The plant manufactures hydraulic components for aircraft, including military jets.

Los Angeles City Council delays ban on assault rifles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city agreed Wednesday to a one-week delay in its ban on possession of assault rifles while a federal judge decides whether he has jurisdiction in Colt Industries' lawsuit challenging the new law.

The city's ban on the sale of the rapid-fire weapons will remain in effect, however, while the lawsuit filed Monday by Colt Industries Inc. is considered.

The City Council on Feb. 7 banned the sale of semiautomatic weapons including Colt's AR-15, the AK-47 and the Uzi. The law also bars possession of such guns after Feb. 22 unless they have been modified so they cannot fire.

New York-based Colt, makers of the legendary Colt .45-caliber revolver and the AR-15 — a civilian version of the military's M-16 — contends in its lawsuit that the law will harm the company's finances and its image.

A court hearing was postponed Wednesday because of the jurisdiction issue.

"By making one of our firearms illegal by specifying in an ordinance that it's an apparently bad or unuseful weapon not (intended) for sporting is bad for our reputation," Colt attorney Harry G. Melkonian said after Wednesday's court session.

"Colt is making a fine and precision weapon and firearm used for target shooting and competition. It's a sporting rifle and not a Saturday Night Special. We're really offended that we're thrown into this category," he said.

City officials said Colt was ignorant of the dangers of firearms in Los Angeles. There were 452 gang-related slayings in Los Angeles County in 1988, most of which were committed with guns and many with semiautomatic weapons.

Guns sales have become an emotional issue statewide since a schoolyard massacre Jan. 17 in Stockton in northern California. A gunman using an AK-47 assault rifle killed five children and wounded 29 other students and a teacher.

"Obviously, the Colt executives don't walk the streets of Los Angeles and experience the violence we have here," said Councilman Zev Yaroslavsky, who introduced the ordinance.

About 30 states, including California, are considering some sort of control or ban on semiautomatic weapons.

U.S. District Judge William Gray delayed a hearing on Colt's request to issue a temporary restraining order to block the ordinance.

Gray said he must decide if he has jurisdiction in Colt's lawsuit or if it should be sent to state court. He scheduled a hearing for Feb. 22.

City attorneys agreed that enforcement of the possession ban would be suspended until March 1 pending the outcome of the next hearing before Gray.

"We're very pleased with the results," Melkonian said. "As far as we're concerned, this is the beginning of the end of this ordinance."

City Attorney James Hahn predicted otherwise. "We're going to prevail in this issue. What happened today keeps our ban against sales in effect," he said.

Colt Industries wants the ordinance barred on grounds that it illegally preempts state law regarding the sale and possession of weapons and would force a hardship on the company.

Deputy City Attorney Byron Boeckman said he would argue that state law does not bar cities from regulating weapons.

Options multiply for teen math whiz

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — As thousands of American teen-agers struggle with the complexities of basic algebra, a 17-year-old English girl is being wooed by Harvard and several other universities to lecture and continue her mathematical research on such subjects as quantum groups and statistical mechanics.

Ruth J. Lawrence, of Oxford, England, is manipulating some of the most complex concepts in mathematics. Her work has taken her to the outer fringes of theoretical physics and mathematics, such subjects as knot and string theory, and the connections between the world of particle physics and mathematics.

She entered Oxford University six years ago and by age 13 had her degree. Today she is working on her doctorate and has long since caught the attention of the world's top mathematicians.

Lawrence has already taught students at Oxford on a tutorial basis. If she accepts a position at an American university it will be mainly to conduct research. But she said she might lead a seminar or deliver an occasional lecture. In addition to Harvard and Berkeley, Princeton's Institute for Advance Study is interested in bringing Lawrence in for a year.

It all began not in some exclusive British school but in Lawrence's own home in Oxford, where her father, Harry, a computer consultant, gave Ruth her entire pre-Oxford education.

"I was always dealing with adults so when I got to Oxford I fitted into the atmosphere. . . . He didn't use any textbooks. He taught me totally himself," she said Wednesday while visiting Harvard with her father.

Lawrence got top scores on her Oxford entrance exam. It was at that point, her father said, "it was obvious to me that she was a little better than most."

Once at Oxford, Lawrence studied under Sir Michael Atiyah, Royal Society Research Professor at Oxford and "one of the great mathematicians of the world," according to John Addison, chairman of the mathematics department at the University of California at Berkeley, one of the schools recruiting Lawrence.

Lawrence seems to have taken her rapid rise in stride. She is much more interested in talking about the vast unknown in the world of mathematics than dwelling on her accomplishments.

"When I was taught mathematics in the beginning I was interested in it. I just liked it. I didn't think it was anything special," Lawrence said.

Now, Lawrence says, "The age thing really does not matter for more than the first two seconds. . . . I talk to mathematicians as mathematicians and I think they talk to me in the same way."

Addison, Berkeley's math chairman, has been tracking Lawrence's career for the past seven years. "Word was certainly getting around in the mathematical field that there was this very unusual prodigy," Addison said.

Lawrence just spent four weeks in California attending a prestigious mathematics conference at the Mathematical Science Research Institute, also in Berkeley. The discussion among scientists and mathematicians from around the world focused on the relationship between physics and mathematics, Lawrence's area of concentration.

Addison interviewed Lawrence for a possible research position at Berkeley and found her "a very nice person. Sometimes prodigies end up being kind of strange or egotistic. I didn't sense that."

Harry Lawrence said he taught his daughter at home so she could reach her highest potential. He is using the same method in teaching his other daughter, Rebecca, 15, who is something of a piano prodigy, with one British Broadcasting Corp. concert under her belt.

To the inevitable question of whether Ruth feels she has missed out on childhood she answers unequivocally: "I've had a very enjoyable childhood. I've had so many opportunities I wouldn't have had if I'd gone the ordinary route."

Planned Parenthood opens new location close to ASU

From Staff Reports

Planned Parenthood, a nationwide family planning and counseling center, opened an office near ASU Tuesday to "better serve and improve relations with the University."

Cheryl Swain, chief operations officer, said the new location will be more convenient for ASU students.

"We've recently relocated so we can better serve the needs of the ASU community," Swain said, adding that Planned Parenthood has maintained an office in Tempe since 1975.

The building, a multi-million-dollar 2,400-square-foot facility at 1250 E. Apache Blvd., was dedicated during a ribbon-cutting ceremony and will replace the location at 49 E. Broadway Road.

"Planned Parenthood is an old, established, trusted facility in Tempe," City Councilwoman Barbara Sherman said during the ceremony.

Sherman represented Tempe Mayor Harry Mitchell, who could not attend.

Swain said ASU was a major factor in determining possible locations for the facility.

"We have more than 5,000 patients and more than half of them are ASU students," she said.

Swain said many patients come in for consultation on family planning, birth control and sexually transmitted diseases.

But one of the main problems in the teenage population is unwanted pregnancies, and the situation is not that different among ASU students, she said.

The most controversial area, in which Planned Parenthood is involved is abortion.

Although the Tempe office does not perform abortions, Swain said the organization does receive some opposition from anti-abortion groups, but added there have not been any protests at the Tempe office since she has worked in the Valley.

Jody Horn, a justice studies doctorate who manned an Arizona Right to Choose table on Cady Mall, said the new location will be more accessible for ASU students, and added that the ASU chapter of ARC has a good relationship with Planned Parenthood.

"It's an old, old organization," Horn said. "We have the same goals. If there is more support for family planning, there will be less need for abortions."

Members of an anti-abortion group at a booth on Cady Mall declined comment.

Overall, Swain said ASU and Planned Parenthood have gotten along well and often work together.

"We've had a good relationship with ASU and the Student Health Center, and we believe it will continue," she said.

Sun Devil shortstop Ann Rowan played a crucial role in ASU's 4-2 victory in the first of two games Wednesday.

Softball steals a win; thrown out at second

By KYLE D. ENG
State Press

The ASU softball team split a pair of games last night against Toledo in front of a crowd of 100 at Sun Devil Club Stadium.

ASU captured the first game of the twinbill, 4-2, and the Rockets shutout the Sun Devils in the second game, 5-0.

In the first game, ASU did not hesitate to put points on the board.

Centerfielder Cheryl Smith began the first inning with a walk and advanced to second on an error. Leftfielder Natalie King hit toward third base, but outran the throw to first. Smith advanced to third on the play.

King proceeded to steal second base, and ASU second baseman Karen Fifield flared a drive to centerfield, scoring Smith and advancing King to third.

The Devils continued to circle the bases as King scored on a wild pitch by Rocket pitcher Patty Barrett, which allowed Fifield to advance to third. Designated player Melinda Cook then singled to right to score Fifield.

In the inning the Devils scored three times, on three hits.

Toledo returned fire in the second inning, with one out. Rocket shortstop Lydia Keresztesi tripled to left and then scored on a wild pitch by Devil starting pitcher Terri Carnicelli.

ASU came back with another run in the six when rightfielder Yvette Baltazar singled in first baseman Michele Gravatt who was aboard on a three-base error.

Toledo squeezed out one more run in the last inning with the bases loaded and no outs, but the Devil defense quickly put an end to the Rockets' threats.

ASU's Gravatt made a crucial play at first base and then threw Toledo rightfielder Deanna Fong out at home.

Fifield turned a routine one-out grounder into a double play to end the inning and the game.

The ASU victory was Carnicelli's first win. "It was a great feeling," said Carnicelli, who lost her first outing against Oregon. "I really got a lot of help from my defense."

"I could really tell I had good stuff tonight. It was just one of those feelings you get when you go out there."

Carnicelli went the distance giving up nine hits and striking out one for ASU.

"I thought it was a stronger performance by Terri tonight," ASU head coach Mary Littlewood said. "She had a lot better stuff tonight."

ASU shortstop Ann Rowan played a supporting role in Carnicelli's first win. In the sixth inning with a runner on third and no outs, Rowan made three outs throwing to her right and her left, and put an end to the inning without allowing the Rockets to score.

In the second game Toledo scored in the first inning. Rocket Leigh Ross scored on a wild pitch from third base by Melinda Cook.

They then exploded for four runs in the third inning, with the big blow coming when catcher Lynn Szczypka tripled in two, to make the score 3-0. Toledo went on to score two more runs, taking a 5-0 advantage.

Schermerhorn prepares Devils to face No. 20 UCLA

By CHRIS NACKINO
State Press

The ASU men's basketball team will play host to UCLA tonight in the University Activity Center in an effort to advance its overall record and seventh-place Pac-10 standing.

The Sun Devils (11-11, 4-9 Pac-10) will try to improve their record at the expense of the Bruins (16-5, 10-2), who hold second-place honors in the conference.

Tip-off is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. and interim head coach Bob Schermerhorn said he expects a tough battle from the 20th-ranked Bruins.

"UCLA has exceptional personnel," Schermerhorn said. "All five of their starters were top recruits coming out of high school."

The Sun Devils have installed an offense that Schermerhorn calls a "power" offense, in which the ball is quickly forced in during the run rather than slowly maneuvered into the paint.

"I'm not a statistic guy, but if you looked at our outside players as compared to our inside players, I imagine they're pretty close in the number of shots attempted. I imagine the inside players have a little better percentage."

"It doesn't take any genius to figure out that it's easier to shoot closer to the basket than it is further out... we're going to take the ball inside until that is taken away."

ASU freshman Ron Waller and sophomore Matt Anderson will start in the backcourt, while the starting forwards will be senior Trent Edwards and junior Alex Austin.

Junior Torin Williams will start at center, a move Schermerhorn said is a major part of the new offense.

"Torin may be the guy who benefited from the reconstruction the most," Schermerhorn said. "He has slow feet, but he has been given great skills in shooting."

The Sun Devil guards have helped ASU's offense with Anderson scoring a career-high 22 points and Waller dishing off a career-high seven assists against Oregon State.

"Ron Waller had an excellent game (against OSU),"

Schermerhorn said. "He had only two turnovers in 30 minutes and he'll obviously have to have the same type of performance against UCLA."

Edwards and Austin have also aided in the scoring drive that had allowed the Sun Devils to advance its 78.5 points per-game average to 90.5.

Also providing depth for ASU will be reserve guard Adrian Brown and center Emory Lewis.

"Adrian Brown really performed well off the bench at Oregon and Em (Lewis) is not quite there but he is getting close," Schermerhorn said. "I feel comfortable with the starting five, but I am not really into who starts, but who finishes."

Schermerhorn said the Sun Devils will execute the same offensive patterns as the last match-up with the Bruins, but this time with a smaller lineup.

"Last time we did good man-to-man," Schermerhorn said. "We'll start off man (-to-man), but we'll have to play man-to-

Klimchock opts for ASU; boost for tennis program

By KRISTI HOWELL
State Press

The newest and youngest member of the ASU women's tennis team, Luann Klimchock, graduated from Corona del Sol High School just one month ago.

She left her high school years behind, bringing to ASU experience and talent that earned her a 31-0 prep record and a place on the ASU tennis team.

During her four weeks with the Sun Devils, Klimchock has achieved a record of 3-0 in singles and 2-0 in doubles.

Klimchock said she decided to graduate early because she was ready to move on as a tennis player and a student.

"Tennis was the main reason I graduated early, but I was just ready to start college," she said.

Klimchock has been ranked as high as seventh in the southwest region. While in high school, she captured the state doubles title as a freshman, won the Southwestern championship in 1987, the Phoenix Adult Open in 1988 and was named a Prince All-American honorable mention.

Many eastern colleges recruited Klimchock, but she said she selected ASU because of her familiarity with the location and the team.

"I chose ASU because it is close to home and I grew up playing with many of the girls from the team," Klimchock said.

Talent runs in Klimchock's family. Her father played baseball for the Cleveland Indians and the New York Mets and passed down his athletic abilities to his daughter.

"I'm a natural athlete," Klimchock said. "I've always played sports, but eight years ago I took up tennis."

Klimchock is the only left-handed player on the women's tennis team, which gives her a definite advantage. Besides being a "lefty," Klimchock possesses a powerful forehand and strong endurance. All these qualities add up to a winning combination on the court for Klimchock.

"I think one of my strongest points is that I can outlast my opponents on the court," she said.

The ASU women's tennis coach, Sheila McInerney, said Klimchock has done a super job for the team.

"She is one of the hardest workers you'll ever find," McInerney said. "We were going to redshirt her, but because of injuries she was thrust in. She is a good athlete, and she

Keady a possibility for basketball coaching vacancy

(AP) — Purdue basketball coach Gene Keady could be among the candidates to become Arizona State head coach in the wake of the resignation of Steve Patterson, a Phoenix newspaper said.

The afternoon Phoenix Gazette said in its Wednesday editions that Keady "flirted with ASU" in 1985, and it quoted an unidentified source as saying Keady had removed himself from consideration at Texas last year because he felt the Arizona State job would become open eventually.

The possibility also had been mentioned on network television on two occasions since The Sun Devils' position became open.

Keady was in Ann Arbor, Mich., where his team plays Michigan on Thursday so he couldn't be reached immediately for comment, but Purdue sports public relations director Jim Vrugink said Keady wasn't a candidate so far.

Arizona State Athletic Director Charles Harris, who signed a new three-year contract last week, said he knows what he wants, what everyone else wants and what he has to get: "a good coach."

Patterson, 40, resigned Feb. 4 in his fourth season with a 48-56 record.

Bob Schermerhorn, 44, a second-year assistant who has been named interim head coach for the rest of this season, says he wants the job in his own right.

Harris, who set up a search committee with an eye to having a new coach in place before the Final Four playoffs in early April, said he hopes to hire a big-name coach with major college experience.

Keady, in his ninth season at Purdue, has compiled a 10-13 record so far this season, 3-7 in the Big Ten.

man, a little zone and a little combo — we'll have to keep them off-balance."

The Bruins will be led by freshman forward Don MacLean, who leads UCLA in scoring with 19.1 points per game and senior point-guard Jerome "Pooh" Richardson, who is shooting 55.9 percent from the field this season.

MacLean will add both size and strength inside the paint, while also shooting outside.

"That is one 6-foot-10 or 6-foot-11 guy who can shoot the ball on the perimeter," Schermerhorn said. "It's tough to pressure him because he's up there when he's shooting."

Inside scoring leader junior Trever Wilson, who is averaging 19.0 points and 9.0 rebounds per game, along with freshman guard Darrick Martin and junior center Kevin Walker will comprise the starting line-up.

"MacLean scares me to death, Pooh scares me to death . . . they all scare me to death," Schermerhorn said. "Trever Wilson can be as good as he wants to be and beat us by himself — player for player they are as good as anyone in the Pac."

After the battle with the Bruins, the Sun Devils will face Southern California at 3:00 Saturday in the UAC.

The Trojans, who have not won a Pac-10 game this season, will be led by sophomore forward Ronnie Coleman and junior guard Anthony Pendleton.

Coleman is averaging 15.2 points and 8.1 rebounds per game to Pendleton's 14.5 and 1.7.

"I think that they have fine personnel," Schermerhorn said, "but they just can't find the tangibles to win a game." Senior forward Chris Moore is also scoring in double figures and will provide depth on the front line along with center Chris Munk.

"Munk is a real power player and Coleman is a good, young player in the conference," Schermerhorn said. "They are very, very due to win a game and I just hope that it isn't against us."

Stewart's injury a severe blow to Sun Devil softball

By KYLE D. ENG
State Press

The ASU softball team is like a car running on only three wheels.

The Sun Devils are without the services of senior pitching ace Donna Stewart, who broke her foot two weeks ago against Mesa Community College.

Stewart was playing first base and came down on her left foot wrong on a high throw to the bag. The incident occurred with two outs in the seventh inning, but Stewart remained in the game because she was unaware of the extent of the damage.

"The throw to me was high and over my head and I just came down on it wrong," said Stewart, who fractured her fifth metatarsal bone. "I came down on both feet, but I guess that part of the foot takes a lot of stress."

She anticipates to be out until the first part of April, but hopes to have her cast removed within in one week.

"I'm hoping to get it off this week or next hopefully," Stewart said. "Our trainer tells me realistically it'll be a couple of weeks before I can get it off."

Stewart was being looked upon as this year's pitching ace for ASU head coach Mary Littlewood's staff.

"When you lose a player of the caliber of Donna, it's a real blow of course," Littlewood said. "We were looking to Donna this year for pitching stability."

A native of Peoria, Ill., Stewart had an off year last season with a record of 11-14 and a 1.42 ERA. Her sophomore year brought her much acclaim as she went 24-7 with a 1.07 ERA, while guiding the Devils to a College World Series seventh-place finish.

"I think last year was a down year for everyone," said Stewart, noting the 26-25, 8-12 Pac-10 record. "Going from being so successful the year before, my sophomore year, (41-15, 6-4 Pac-10) to being so bad made it doubly tough on everybody."

This year the Devils will be forced to go with pitchers Melinda Cook and Terri Carcenelli, two freshmen hurlers. Senior Michele Gravatt will be ASU's main reliever out of the bullpen.

In their first outing Monday in a doubleheader against Oregon, Carcenelli went the distance in the first game giving up six hits and three runs, while Cook pitched the second yielding five hits and giving up one run. Carcenelli received the loss in the first game, while Michele Gravatt took the loss in relief of Cook in the second game.

"The two are really going to have to come through for us," Stewart said. "I remember my freshman year wasn't so tough because we had three freshman pitchers."

"Comparing this team to previous teams, I think that this one has a lot of character and a lot more confidence than other teams. Every year of course we want to make it to regionals, I'd say this year we have a good chance."

Stewart is projected to graduate next fall, but the broadcast major could redshirt this year and play a full year next year. But she said she has ruled out that possibility.

"I always wanted to finish playing with the three other seniors, Michele (Gravatt), Karen (Fifield) and Yvette (Baltazar), Stewart said. "We came in together as freshmen, it would be nice to leave together as seniors."

Stewart also says that it is time get on to something else.

"I think it may be time to move on," said Stewart, who plans to use her degree and work in some form of Public Relations before earning a Master's in Business. "I think it's time to get on with life in another aspect."

Looking back, Stewart has begun to realize that many of her goals will be unattainable.

"I think when you reach your final year you realize that a lot of your goals are going to be unattainable," Stewart said. "I still think we can go to regionals though, this year that would fulfill one of my goals."

"In the west you always have the five strongest teams that are a shoe-in to make regionals, what we have to do is fight hard enough to make it to one of the open spots. I hope I can come back fast enough to make a difference"

Playing in Sun Devil Club Stadium, ASU often plays to empty stands, but that fact does not bother Stewart.

"We've never had really big crowds," Stewart said. "I think that every athlete dreams of playing to a huge crowd."

Stewart laughed and said, "It would be nice to fill up those stands. We have all those bleachers and we don't even know why sometimes."

With intentions of making this her final season, Stewart said she would like to go out in style.

"We would like finish as winners — not only us four seniors, but for coach as well," said Stewart, noting that Littlewood is retiring after 20 seasons at the Devils' helm. "It would be really nice to go out as winners."

Stewart sighed, smiled and said, "Yeah that would really be a nice ending to my career."

has had some big wins for us."

However, college is not all tennis for Klimchock. Like her teammates, she must concentrate on academics.

"School is very important," Klimchock said. "We take it seriously, and our team GPA goal is 3.0."

McInerney said that because Klimchock is a "smart girl," she has made the transition to college fairly easily.

"She came to ASU with a 4.0 GPA," McInerney said. "She is very committed and has great dedication to academics as well as tennis."

The seventh-ranked Sun Devils are not only talented on the court, but according to Klimchock, they are "a great bunch of people."

"Our coach, and everyone is very supportive both on and off the court," she said. "That is very important."

The challenge of playing collegiate tennis is one that Klimchock said she was eager to accept.

"Playing on a college tennis team is much more intense," Klimchock said. "I love the team aspect, and it is a lot of fun."

Along with the fun and excitement of college tennis comes a lot of hard work and dedication, and the Sun Devils have their work cut out for them.

"With eight very talented girls, there is a lot of pressure to improve and play your best," Klimchock said. "We all push each other very hard."

The added pressure has paid off for the ASU squad. So far, the 1989 season has brought the Sun Devils two home-court wins and four on the road, including three against top-20 opponents.

In upcoming weeks, ASU plays host to three Pac-10 foes, the initial encounter being Southern California. The match will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

Klimchock said she hopes to play in the Pac-10 matches, but that she must push herself in the next couple weeks to prepare to face the tough competitors.

"I'm just going to work really hard and try to improve so that I can play," Klimchock said.
