

Reagan waives fee for ASU lecture

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

Former President Ronald Reagan has decided to waive his usual fee for a scheduled lecture at ASU next week, a spokesman for Reagan said Monday.

"The president does not intend, nor has he ever intended, to accept any form of honorarium for his appearance at ASU," Mark Wineberg, a Los Angeles-based Reagan press secretary said. "He believes in college-age Americans, and he wants them to be able to attend without expense."

Reagan

Associated Students President John Fees said Monday night that because of Reagan's decision, all tickets sold for the lecture will be refunded and entrance to the event will be free. Refund information for ticket holders will be released this afternoon.

The announcement follows days of confusion surrounding a $50,000 speaking fee that Reagan's agents requested from the Insuring Tomorrow Student Leadership Conference for the scheduled hour-long appearance.

The Insuring Tomorrow conference will bring together more than 200 students from 13 universities around the country to discuss issues facing the nation with prominent professors, journalists and political leaders. The event is held yearly at ASU. Reagan will deliver the conference's keynote address March 20 at 11 a.m. in the University Activity Center.

The Washington Speakers Bureau, which coordinates the former president's public appearances, had originally requested the $50,000 from conference organizers during preliminary negotiations in February.

On March 2, Fees announced during a press conference that Reagan would speak at ASU, but said that a final dollar amount had not yet been agreed upon.

Although an official amount was never released, tickets went on sale the following day to finance the event at a price of $10 for students and $15, $25 and $50 for the general public. However, only 2,200 tickets had been sold in the first week of availability.

Concerns regarding the undisclosed fee amount and the secrecy surrounding the contract negotiations prompted an Arizona Republic reporter to file a request under the Freedom of Information Act asking that the fee amount be disclosed. Event organizers countered that if the amount were revealed, Reagan would cancel his appearance.

Wineberg said Reagan decided personally Monday to appear free at the University, and worked on his ASU speech for several hours Monday afternoon and evening.

Wineberg would not comment on why the president decided to waive the fee.

Committee OKs student regent voting powers

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

PHOENIX — The Senate Education Committee voted unanimously Monday to approve a bill that would give voting powers to the student member of the Arizona Board of Regents.

The stage was set for the Senate committee by the House, which overwhelmingly voted in February to pass House Bill 2021.

The 7-0 vote by the Senate committee passes the measure to the Senate Rules Committee, which examines legislation for constitutionality.

Rep. John Wettaw, R-Flagstaff and co-sponsor of the bill, told the Senate Education Committee that the student regents have been responsible members of the board.

"The program has worked incredibly well," he said. "The student members over the years have played a role."

"It's a matter of fairness based upon 10 years of active, fair, decent and constructive participation on the board."

Currently, the student regent is the only non-voting member of the board. The position was created in 1978 and approved by lawmakers on the grounds that there would be no voting privileges for the student member.

Sen. Lela Alston, D-Phoenix, said the time has come for a voting student member of the board.

"I've been here since this position was created and it's been a very exciting and positive addition to the Board of Regents," she said. "I think the individuals that have served in that capacity have done an outstanding job."

Current Student Regent Pat McWhortor told the committee that he considers himself a regent who is a student, instead of a student who is a regent.

"Just as any member of the board brings their particular background and experience to the position as a member of the Board of Regents, I bring mine as a student," he said.

But McWhortor told the committee that the role of a student regent goes beyond being a student representative.

"I am truly concerned about education in Arizona," he said. "I look at all the issues before us with the perspective of an Arizonan who cares about our universities and not just as a student advocate."

If passed by the full Senate and approved by Gov. Rose Mofford, HB 2021 would give the student regent the power to vote and attend executive meetings without exceptions.

Time constraints worry candidates

By MICHAEL VAN DYKE
State Press

Candidates for Associated Students of ASU executive offices expressed concern Monday about a lack of time to campaign and encourage students to become involved in the elections process this year.

Campaigning officially began Sunday morning, but Monday was the first chance candidates had to solicit votes from students. The ASASU general election is March 21 and 22, leaving candidates just one week to campaign.

The official campaigning period for ASASU elections has decreased each of the past two years.

ASASU executive and senatorial candidates have one school week to campaign this year while three school weeks were allotted in 1987 and two weeks in 1988.

ASASU Presidential candidate Paul Larson said the shorter campaign period will make it more difficult to reach students and will lower the voter turnout for the general election.

ASASU Presidential candidate Sal Rivera said the problem of apathy for student government elections needs to be confronted and agreed that shortening the campaigning period only makes the matter worse.

Candidates are pressured to pick up the pace of their campaigning, Rivera said.

"Hopefully no students will be left out of the process," Rivera said. "Having less time intensifies the week for candidates making them do a whole lot more."

Larson said he has had difficulties scheduling speaking arrangements with organizations that only meet once a month because of the campaigning time restraints.

Mike Pressendo, ASASU executive vice president candidate, also noted an increased difficulty in reaching organizations.

Pressendo said he probably will not be able to reach as many clubs as he had hoped.

"Signs and fliers do not encourage students to vote," Larson said. "What gets people to vote are candidates who meet people in the malls."

Pilots union meet to plan strategy for Eastern strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pilots of the nation's airlines on Monday discussed plans for supporting Eastern Airlines' pilots, including a possible refusal to fly planes or routes that might be sold by the strike-bound airline.

John Mazor, spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association, said 46 pilots met in a closed-door session to set the level of strike benefits for 3,600 pilots who have been honoring the 10-day-old strike by Eastern's Machinists union. Results of the meeting are to be announced on Tuesday.

The group also is setting up interest-free loans for paychecks which members should have received from Eastern for their last week of work before the strike, Mazor said. Eastern filed for protection under bankruptcy laws Thursday, and the unions have appealed to the bankruptcy judge for the pay.

The pilots, meeting as a board made up of top elected union leaders from each airline, discussed plans to refuse flying Eastern planes or routes purchased by their airlines, unless enough Eastern pilots also are hired to fly them, Mazor said. To cover all shifts, that could include from six to 12 crew members for each plane, he said.

Eastern has announced it will run a scaled-down airline and officials have said they may be forced to sell off some assets if pilots refuse to cross picket lines. A $365 million sale of the airline's Northeast shuttle operations to New York developer Donald Trump was pending before the strike.

Mazor said Eastern has been able to slightly expand operations in recent days because it finally has been able to deploy more of its management pilots, not because of union defections. He said that although a few union pilots have crossed the lines, more from the other side have joined the walkout, resulting in a net loss of pilots available to the airline.

Senate Committee announces Cheney confirmation underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Armed Services Committee announced Monday that confirmation hearings will begin today on Rep. Dick Cheney's nomination as defense secretary, and one Democratic panel member expressed hope that the process could be wrapped up by week's end.

Meanwhile, Bush administration officials played down published reports about Cheney's two draft deferments during the early stages of the Vietnam War, and the fact that the defense-secretary designate never served in the armed services.

Cheney, R-Wyo., requested and obtained two student deferments while studying at the University of Wyoming, where he received a bachelors degree in 1965 and his masters in 1966. Cheney also was married and had a small child in 1966, making him eligible for a Class 3 hardship deferment.

Two men seen in area weeks before captain's van bombed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Two men of Mideastern appearance were seen in the neighborhood of the commander of the USS Vincennes in the weeks before the Navy captain's van was destroyed by a bomb, a law enforcement official said Monday.

Sharon Rogers, wife of Capt. Will Rogers III was alone in the van when the bomb detonated Friday while driving to work. She got out of the van moments before it caught fire, and was not injured.

Rogers gave permission last summer to shoot down a plane over the Persian Gulf that was presumed from radar data to be a fighter, but actually was an Iranian civilian passenger jet.

The official, who disclosed the information on condition of anonymity, said it was not clear if investigators had been able to piece together detailed descriptions of the two men. The information was based on interviews with neighbors, the official said.

The official spoke after a report in Monday's New York Times that one man of Middle Eastern appearance had asked passers-by: "Where does the captain live?"

FBI spokesman Gary Laturno said he could neither confirm nor deny the report.

The FBI said it was chasing hundreds of leads as it tried to determine if the bombing was a terrorist act in retaliation for the shooting down of the airliner. All 290 people aboard the airliner were killed.

Wellness Week, sponsored by Counseling and Health Advisory Committee and Student Health, begins April 3. Throughout the week students can participate in various fitness and health assessments on campus.

Health departments to offer free anonymous AIDS tests

Beginning March 15, anyone can receive an AIDS test anonymously at any of the county health departments. The state health department has changed a communicable disease ruling stating a person no longer must give his or her name when receiving an AIDS test. The tests are free of charge. For more information contact Doug Hirano at 230-5819.

FTC warns of dangers of cancer from sun tanning

As the weather warms and beaches beckon, thoughts may turn to getting started on that summer tan. Government health experts say that may be an idea worth reconsidering.

In recent years a tan skin has gotten a reputation for appearing healthy, despite the increasing evidence to the contrary.

Skin cancer, premature wrinkling and aging, skin rashes and eye damage are all potential dangers of tanning, whether tanning outdoors during the summer months or indoors exclusively, the Federal Trade Commission warns.

The FTC has available a folder detailing the problems of indoor tanning. It can be obtained for 50 cents from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. Ask for item 420V, "Indoor Tanning."

Tanning salons have become widely popular in recent years, offering customers a chance to relax on lighted tables and get a tan all year.

Following initial reports of the dangers of the short wave ultraviolet-B light used in these tables, many switched to longwave UVA lights, which they contend are safer.

The FTC noted that UVA rays can also be harmful to the skin because they penetrate so deeply.

In addition, ultraviolet light from the sun or other sources can damage the eyes. People who seek a tan need to wear protective goggles; ordinary sunglasses or cotton wads are not sufficient.

In addition to cancer and eye damage, the FTC points out that tanning dries the skin and makes it aged and leathery. Plus, officials say, the combination of ultraviolet radiation and some medicines-including birth control pills- can result in skin rashes and other reactions.

Deadline nears for states to dispose radioactive waste

The economics of Beatty, Nev., a little desert town near Death Valley, are suddenly of interest as a 1993 deadline nears for states to dispose of their own low-level radioactive waste. Under a schedule set by Congress, most states have formed regional compacts and now are seeking places to put their dumps.

States are banding together in compacts and developing dump sites for the materials that won't be safe for a century or more.

The debate that follows any specific site proposal often turns to Beatty, which for 27 years has been neighbor to the nation's oldest low-level radioactive waste dump, one of only three in the country.

Future medical students face 'streamlined' exam

WASHINGTON (AP) — A streamlined medical college admission test, stressing thinking and communication skills, will be introduced in 1991, the Association of American Medical Colleges said Monday.

The new test, to be taken by all people seeking to enter a medical school, will replace six sections on biology, chemistry, physics, science problems, reading skills analysis and quantitative skills analysis with four tests in biological sciences, physical sciences, verbal reasoning and a writing sample.

At least 80 minutes should be shaved from the average current test day of 9.5 hours, the association said.

The group said the new test will be the first professional school admission test to use essays and score them to evaluate applicants' writing skills. The changes are meant to improve the test's predictive value and encourage students to pursue broad undergraduate studies in natural sciences, social sciences and the humanities.

"The new test signals the importance of critical thinking, logical reasoning, problem-solving and communication skills to medical education and medical practice," Dr. Robert Petersdorf, the association's president, said in a statement.

Columnist Buchanan laments sacrilege of free press

Ed Schubert
Columnist

The Ayatollah Khomeini, in his campaign of death against novelist Salman Rushdie, has received aid and comfort from an unexpected quarter.

New York's Cardinal John O'Connor, who has not read "The Satanic Verses," is counseling his fellow Catholics not to read it either.

And columnist Patrick Buchanan, in defense of Cardinal O'Connor, has made some observations regarding the freedom to think and write that would be taken as common sense in present-day Teheran.

Buchanan describes Rushdie as "... a literary vandal who engages in the fictional equivalent of defiling churches and desecrating synagogues. His counterpart in the Old West was the white settler, contemptuous of Indian culture, who ran his cattle across their sacred burial grounds, and then is horrified that 1,000 braves in war paint would show up outside his stockade to demand his scalp. As soldiers would not give up that settler, to the point of fighting to defend him, so we do not give up Mr. Rushdie, or his rights." (The Arizona Republic, March 2)

There are several analogies in this passage, all with dire implications for freedom of thought.

There is the analogy of the western democracies with the stockade of the Old West, in which the wicked settler finds protection from the consequences of his sacrilege. But clearly, the settler deserves to lose his scalp.

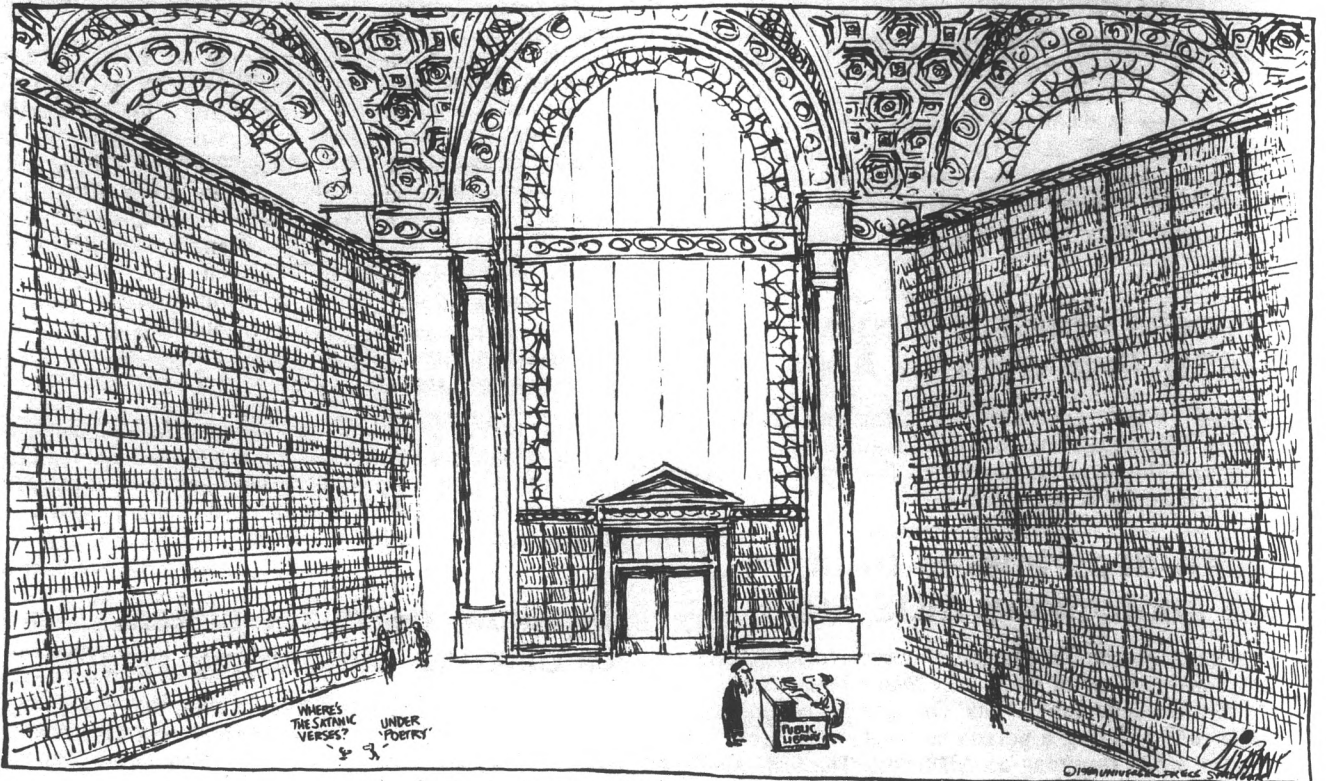

So, by comparison, Salmon Rushdie deserves to be gunned down by Khomeini's assassins. His right to freedom of expression is only grudgingly conceded.

Buchanan also employs three analogies of desecration. Rushdie's writing is the equivalent of: A) "defiling churches," B) "desecrating synagogues," and C) running cattle over a "sacred burial ground."

One wonders why Buchanan supports the First Amendment, even grudgingly? If freedom of speech has resulted in such obscene acts of defilement, desecration and violence, then perhaps the time has come to curb it.

The problem with Buchanan's analogies is that Rushdie's novel exists on the level of imagination, thought and discourse.

The desecration of a church, synagogue or burial ground, by contrast, is a physical act against which the Christian,

"BURN THEM? YOU MEAN ALL OF THEM?"

Jew or Native American has a defense. Our laws prohibit vandalism.

But when publishing a controversial book is equated with an act of physical vandalism, we step back into a pre-democratic view of society. It is precisely the distinction between thinking and acting which makes free communities possible.

But whenever a member of a community can say of an idea: "This constitutes vandalism against my cherished beliefs," and have his claim taken seriously, then all discourse is threatened. There is no idea that will not be an act of vandalism to someone's cherished beliefs.

Two centuries ago, Thomas Jefferson invented what has since been called The Jefferson Bible. A religious skeptic, Jefferson "deconstructed" the Gospels. He edited them together into a single book, deleted any references to the miraculous or divine, and produced an account of Jesus' life and teachings which ends thus:

"Now in the place where he was crucified there was a garden; and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid.

"There laid they Jesus.

"And rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed."

Desecration? Defilement? Vandalism?

By Buchanan's standards, sure.

But by Buchanan's standards, even the Declaration of Independence would have been unacceptable — for certainly the Declaration defiled the cherished beliefs of those who revered the British monarchy.

These standards hold not that people should be free to speak, but rather that they should be free from the fear of ever being offended.

In a community governed by such standards, in which thought = action and controversy = vandalism, only one means exists for any discourse to take place — an authoritarian power must determine which books, ideas and opinions are legitimate, and ban the rest.

In medieval Europe, this power was the Catholic Church.

In contemporary Iran, it is the Ayatollah Khomeini.

In the United States, perhaps it will one day be Pat Buchanan.

Pro-choice advocates not 'macho women's libber'

Editor

Mike Ritter's cartoons of March 2 and 3 missed the point in trying to depict the loons of the abortion issue. Ritter depicted the pro-choice advocate as what can only be interpreted as a 1960s macho women's libber. As a member of the ASU Right to Choose, I can honestly say that no one in the organization resembles the caricature. As an example, I am a WASP, retired Army officer, NRA member, politically moderate middle-class male. The March 2 cartoon doesn't fit.

The ASU Arizona Right to Choose is a conglomerate organization made necessary by recent events to oppose the zealot extremists lobbying to force their beliefs on the rest of America. They want abortions stopped, period. I believe that this concept is too radical. Every abortion case is not black or white, wrong or right, each case needs the application of judicious reasoning. It is because of this gray area that I have to support the idea that the right of option to have an abortion should remain open.

The fascist pro-lifers want to force their Victorian views on us. As an American, I have to stand up and voice my opinion that these Mechamites should not be allowed to dictate a woman's right to obtain a legal abortion. My state legislator, Jenny Norton, wrote to me that she believes HB 2006 (House bill to make abortion illegal in Arizona) is too liberal by allowing abortions to be performed if the life of the mother will be at risk if the pregnancy is brought to term. Norton would rather see a rapist's child come to term and have the 12-year-old mother die of complications in childbirth than allow an abortion.

Making abortions illegal will not stop abortions any more than prohibition stopped alcohol consumption. Your voice can be heard in the U. S. Supreme Court by signing the Right to Choose petition to keep abortion safe and legal. Stop by our booth on Cady Mall. Only through everyone's participation can the right of free choice be preserved.

Low turnout

Americans are eager to sit down and not be counted

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

When the votes were counted after Chicago's primary for mayor a few weeks ago, about one-third of the registered voters were elated. Another one-third were disappointed. And the final third didn't give a hoot.

Those who didn't give a hoot are the half a million or so who didn't vote.

That's about the pattern you'll find in most city, state and national elections. At least a third of the voters sit it out.

Now, don't worry, this is not going to be a civics lecture on why people should exercise their precious right to vote.

I've never written such a column and I never will. Actually, it has always been a dream of mine that on election day, everybody decides to stay home — except me.

Then I would be the only voter and that would make me what politicians call "a king-maker."

If that happened, I'd have candidates flocking to me with offers of big jobs and consulting contracts.

Candidates would tell me: "If you get me elected, you will always have my ear."

Not that I'd want a candidate's ear. Even if the ear was sealed in plastic or dropped in a jar of embalming fluid, what would I do with such an object? As a knickknack or paperweight, it would be unsightly.

So I never urge people to get out there and exercise their right to vote.

After all, not voting is also a citizen's right, although I've never heard anyone talk about the many brave men who gave their lives for the right not to vote.

Actually, I don't believe many soldiers have laid down their lives for the right of others to vote. If you took a survey of combat troops and asked them about it, I'm sure I know what their answer would be.

'It's possible that if more people voted, we might have fewer inebriated congressmen and cliché-spouting presidential candidates.'

"Hi there, soldier. In about one minute, you will catch a bullet. That will be the end of you. But because of your sacrifice, future generations will have the right to vote. How do you feel about it?"

Most would respond: "If it's all the same to you, pal, I prefer avoiding that bullet. Can't we skip the voting and just pick out leaders' names out of a hat?"

But to get back to those who don't vote and why.

Some won't vote because they are finicky and don't like any of the candidates. They are waiting for Mr. Perfect to come along. Which means they can live to be 125 and they'll still be waiting.

Others don't bother because they have become disillusioned. Many of them are poor and live from hand to mouth, rent day to rent day. Some voted in the past, believing that a candidate would make their lives fuller and richer. Instead they are still poor and miserable. So they figure it's a waste of precious shoe leather to get conned again.

Still another group that sits out elections in great numbers is the young. Most studies show that those between the ages of 18 and 25 are most likely to be indifferent to politics. That's because they aren't married, don't own homes, pay no property taxes and don't have children of school age. So the candidates seldom address issues that are vital to young voters. Think about it — when was the last time you heard a candidate say: "If I am elected, I promise all you young voters that I will do everything in my power to introduce new programs that will help you get it on."

And there are always some who have the misfortune to be incapacitated on election day. I'm not referring to those who have permanent disabilities, since they can get absentee ballots. I mean those who were hit the night before by a flying grape. If a person has a hangover so severe he can't go to work, it is inhumane to ask him to go to a polling place, when there is probably a bar even closer.

Finally, there is a group, probably the biggest, that doesn't bother to vote because . . . how can I put it diplomatically? Well I suppose you can say they're just dumb. Chances are, they can't tell you who the candidates are because they don't read anything and watch only soap operas, wrestling and Geraldo. If anything, we're better off if they don't vote. Every voter doesn't have to be a political science graduate. But the least they should know is who they hate and why.

There are those who will disagree with me — do-gooders who believe it is disgraceful that Americans don't exercise this (they always call it "precious") right.

Maybe they're correct. It's possible that if more people voted, we might have fewer inebriated congressmen and cliché-spouting presidential candidates.

But if they want a big turnout, they won't get it by preaching and yammering about "your responsibilities as a good citizen." No, if they want 98 percent of the eligible voters to go to polls, I'll tell them how to do it.

Combine election day with a national lottery. Give every voter a chance to make a few million dollars if his lucky number comes up. It would not only bring out the voters, it would be fair.

After all, why should the candidate be the only ones with a chance to hit the big jackpot?

Men posing as DEA agents torment, rob foursome

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

For an ASU student and his three friends, Saturday night was supposed to be a quiet evening of MTV and a few beers. Two of the student's friends had just gotten jobs in Ohio and the foursome was spending time together before they had to move.

But the calm in the living room of the Tempe apartment was shattered by pounding at the front door. When the student opened the door he faced the barrel of a gun and two men with badges who claimed they were agents with the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

They weren't.

Tempe police said two men posing as agents forced their way into the apartment in the 1200 block of West Fifth Street about 2:30 a.m. Sunday, made the residents lay on the floor, then covered each of the victims' heads with blankets and tied them up with belts and tape.

As the men ransacked the apartment they terrorized the foursome by throwing darts at them and threatened to castrate one of the men.

The suspects finally left after taking a 1985 Ford pick up, about $700 cash, credit cards, jewelry, a television set, stereo equipment and clothes.

"It was like a nightmare," the 23-year-old senior zoology major said Monday. "I definitely have a greater appreciation for being alive. I was very fortunate."

The student, who will not be identified because the suspects still are at large, said he feared for his life as the suspects forced the victims one by one into a bedroom at gunpoint.

"I was waiting to hear the click," the student said.

He also said his girlfriend, who lives in the apartment, has since moved out and is staying with friends.

Police described the suspects as white males in their 20s. The suspect with the weapon, possibly a .357 or a .44-caliber handgun, is 6-foot and 180 pounds with brown hair. The second suspect is 5-foot-9 and 150 pounds with brown hair.

"I wasn't sure about the guy and then he flashed a badge and said 'DEA' and told us to get down on the floor because we were under arrest," the student said. "It was obvious pretty soon they weren't cops."

Bill Ruzzamenti, a spokesman with the DEA's Phoenix office, said agents operate during the day and don't enter a residence unless they have a search warrant.

He said in addition to badges, agents also carry identification cards with pictures.

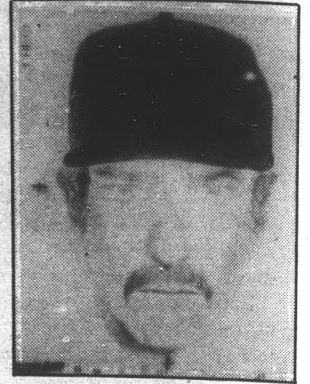

"(The identification card) is a lot more difficult to get than a dime store badge," he said. "Anyone can get a hold of a badge these days."

"If they question our authority we'll show them," he said. Ruzzamenti said incidents like the one Sunday make lawmen's jobs more difficult, although he said it is the first time he's heard of someone posing as a DEA agent.

But in Tempe, Sunday's robbery marked the third time this year in which suspects posing as lawmen have duped victims, said Officer Roger Austin, a Tempe police spokesman.

In February, a man posing as a Tempe police officer convinced a Mesa woman she committed a traffic violation and had her write him a $50 check. He wore a uniform and had a "bubble" light on top of his car.

Later that month, two girls were molested by a man who told them he was a detective and that he wanted to talk with them about a theft.

Alcohol death case might reopen

Tempe police may reopen their investigation into the alcohol poisoning death of a 19-year-old man who had been drinking at a party attended by ASU students, a police spokesman said.

Michael Shane O'Keefe was found dead March 5 inside his apartment at the La Crescenta Park Apartments. An autopsy showed his blood alcohol content was .44 percent, four times the legal limit.

Tempe police spokesman Officer Roger Austin said investigators have received conflicting statements from witnesses and may have to reopen the case. Also, police are investigating whether charges of providing alcohol to a minor should be filed, Austin said.

"There may have been alteration of evidence and that's against the law," Austin said. "We're going back and talking with people and see if we need to reopen the case."

"If they contributed to his death we'll have to reopen it," he said.

O'Keefe, who was an electronics student at the Phoenix Institute of Technology, had attended a birthday party at his apartment complex about 9 p.m. and left about 3 a.m. "in a highly intoxicated condition," according to the police report on the incident.

Worker falls; construction firm cited

A Phoenix construction company was cited for a safety violation Monday after one its workers fell from the Sun Devil Stadium sky boxes work site but escaped serious injury, ASU police said.

ASU Police Officer Charles Loftus said the Occupational Safety and Health Administration investigated the accident and cited Coreslab, the construction firm working on the skyboxes, for failing to use safety harnesses.

Michael P. Bauman, 27, of Mesa, suffered a broken nose during the 8:30 a.m. accident and was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital where he was treated and released, said Loftus.

Loftus said Bauman, an employee with Coreslab, was injured while using a hydraulic wrench to tighten a nut on rebar in a 100 foot segment of prefabricated concrete. A coupling connecting about 30 feet of the rebar snapped and sprang up hitting the hydraulic wrench, he said.

He said the hydraulic wrench then smashed Bauman in the nose and knocked him unconscious. Bauman, who was not wearing a safety harness, then fell to his right, onto a scaffold next to where he was working.

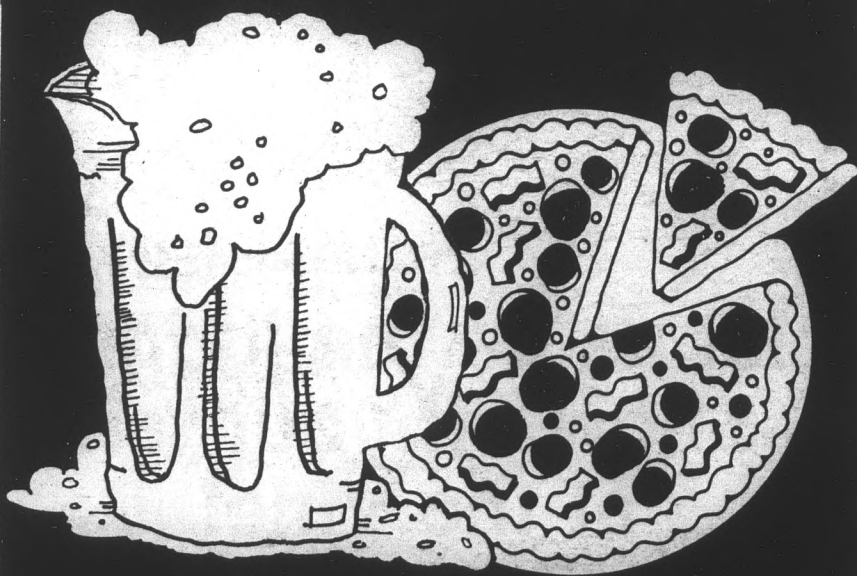

"If he would have fallen to the left he would have fell 100 feet to his death," Loftus said.

Woman injured critically in car accident

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A passenger in a car involved in a single-car accident in Tempe early Monday was injured critically and police are looking for the driver of the car who reportedly fled the scene, police said.

Louise Wellington, 57, of Guadalupe, was injured about 1:14 a.m. in the 9000 block of South 56th Street when the car she was riding in veered for an unknown reason and drove off the road through a barbed wire fence before striking a power pole, said Officer Roger Austin, a Tempe police spokesman.

Austin said Wellington was taken to Maricopa County Medical Center where she was listed in critical but stable condition.

It is unknown why the driver of the 1977 Plymouth fled, Austin said.

Tempe police also reported on Monday:

•A man wearing a tweed suit robbed a thrift store at gunpoint Saturday night and used his necktie to tie up a clerk.

The bandit robbed the Dolly Madison Thrift Store, 2090 E. University Drive, of an undisclosed amount of cash after he entered the store about 11:30 p.m.

•A 23-year-old Tempe woman was arrested Friday night in connection with the stabbing of a man in the 2000 block of East Apache Boulevard.

Margarita M. Cabrello was booked into Tempe City Jail on an assault charge after the 11:08 p.m. incident.

Billy Lewis Spires, of Tempe, was stabbed twice in the arm

police report

with a steak knife after an argument and was treated and released at Tempe St. Luke's Hospital.

•Police are investigating a death threat made against Tempe Fire Chief Cliff Jones's wife.

The threat against Sheri Jones, 39, was left in the mailbox at the couple's Tempe home sometime last Thursday or Friday.

ASU police reported the following incidents Monday:

•Vandals used paint to cause about $400 in damages to two fraternity houses in separate incidents last week.

The first incident occurred sometime Monday at 601 Alpha Drive when the suspects put paint cans in a swimming pool.

The next day at 701 Alpha Drive someone entered the fraternity house and splashed paint on various items.

•A thief stole $2,650 worth of jewelry and compact discs from a room at Ocotillo Hall.

•A thief stole a $750 1985 Honda Elite motor scooter from outside Manzanita residence hall.

•A thief stole $600 worth of text books from the Physical Science A-wing.

•A burglar smashed a window on a Volkswagen parked in Lot 55 and stole $515 worth of property. Damage to the car is $60.

•A thief stole an Alpine stereo and a tool box last Tuesday from a Toyota parked in Lot 51. Total loss is $350.

2 women plunge to their deaths at Grand Canyon

GRAND CANYON VILLAGE, Ariz. (AP) — A Japanese woman who fell to her death at the Grand Canyon Sunday has been identified.

Detective Trevan Woolbright of the Coconino County Sheriff's office said Yuri Nagata, of Gufuku, Japan, who would have turned 22 Monday, lost her balance and fell nearly 400 feet in the second fatal accident at the Grand Canyon in four days.

Nagata temporarily had moved past a guardrail at the Second Trail View overlook on the west rim to descend to the rock ledge from which she fell, said Chuck Lundy of the National Park Service.

The site is about two miles west of Grand Canyon Village on the south rim.

"Evidently, a friend suggested taking a photograph of her, and as she was standing up to get the photograph taken, she lost her balance and fell," Lundy said.

Lundy said she fell about 30 feet to a ledge, then rolled down a 45-degree slope and then plunged 350 feet from that ledge.

The woman was a member of a group of youths on a tour of the United States, Lundy said.

Last Thursday, a West German woman fell to her death at Mohave Point, also west of the visitors village on the south rim.

In that fall, Gisela Elixmann, 34, of Hasbergen Mazwich, had been watching the sun set with her husband from an area where there was no guardrail, Lundy said.

Authorities said she stood up, became dizzy and fell over the edge, plunging about 500 feet.

Parking and Transit Services to begin sale of decals

From staff reports

ASU Parking and Transit Services will begin selling parking decals for the 1989-90 school year Monday, March 20.

Current decal holders will be able to renew their parking permits for the lots they had during 1988-89.

Decal holders wanting to park in the same location next year need to submit a parking renewal form to parking services before 4:30 p.m. March 31.

During the renewal period, parking and transit staff members will be in the MU Cochise Room from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day.

Decal renewals may be paid for by cash, check or credit card. Faculty and staff members may pay by payroll deduction. Cash payments must be made at the parking and transit office in the Campus Inn, but all other transactions may be made at the MU.

Decal holders who wish to change their parking locations for next year may do so during the change period, which runs from April 10 through April 21. Change requests will be processed only at the parking and transit office.

The cost of parking decals, which currently ranges from $37 for a perimeter sticker to $90 for a gate access "A" sticker, is expected to increase next year.

The Arizona Board of Regents will consider the increase during its March 31 meeting at the ASU West Campus.

Other changes in parking policy will take effect for the 1989-90 school year. State law requires that all vehicles registered with ASU prove compliance with emissions regulations. The rule applies to all cars, including those registered in counties other than Pima or Maricopa, as well as cars registered in other states.

People whose cars are registered in Maricopa or Pima counties may submit a photocopy of their cars' registrations. All others will need to take an emissions test that costs $7.50. The testing station closest to ASU is at 1700 N. Hayden Road in Tempe.

The compliance form must be submitted to the county assessor's office and a 25-cent sticker must be purchased to prove compliance.

Forms for decal changes and renewals are at the cashier's office, the MU information desk, the G-wing lobby of the Engineering Center, the Parking Services building, the lobby of the Physical Plant building and the ASU Bookstore. The forms also have been mailed to all campus departments.

For more information, contact Parking and Transit Services at 965-6406.

26 companies to be at Job Fair

By MICHAEL LEWIS
State Press

ASU students interested in summer or part-time jobs will be able to meet with representatives from 26 companies at the Summer Job Fair from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday on Cady Mall.

The job fair is sponsored by the ASU Student Employment Office to allow students to talk to several employers at once, said Heidi Bostwick, Financial Aid Counselor-Employment Specialist.

"It's a good opportunity for students to get tuition money and valuable work experience," she said.

Representatives from the companies will have tables set up for students to receive information and fill out applications.

The companies will be looking to fill many different positions such as camp counselors, hotel reservationists and lifeguards, Bostwick said.

Participating companies include: Disney, Best Western Hotels, City of Tempe Recreation Division, Yellowstone Park, Valley National Bank, Waterworld U.S.A., Dimension Cable, Sherwin Williams, Santa Cruz Seaside Co. and Penn Athletic Products.

Bostwick said the companies give out an average of 900 applications at the fair, which has been an annual spring event since 1986.

Disney and ARA Outdoor World, a tour company, will be staying on campus after the fair for two days to conduct interviews.

The Student Employment office will have a table listing opportunities.

Students needing further information about the participating companies can visit the Student Employment Office on the second floor of the Student Services building.

Conflict of interest restricts lawmaker

PHOENIX (AP) — The House Ethics Committee voted 3-2 Monday that a freshman state lawmaker who is fighting bills to tighten regulation of day care centers has a conflict of interest because he also owns two centers.

Committee members made no mention of licensing records that show the centers have been repeatedly investigated for reports of abuse and cited for violations of staffing and safety rules.

But they said Rep. Bob Burns, R-Glendale, should refrain from voting on the bills in the future because he has a direct financial interest in them.

Burns, who had requested the meeting after complaints from other lawmakers, told reporters afterward that he would comply with the ruling but still did not believe there was a conflict.

Committee members, meanwhile, said they were unaware of news reports Sunday about the licensing records.

The records, obtained by The Associated Press under the state Open Records law, quoted investigators as saying they had been hampered because Burns refused to cooperate with them in investigating allegations about physical and sexual abuse by employees at Burns' centers.

The investigators said they had been unable to substantiate abuse complaints but had substantiated other violations, including repeated under-staffing, by direct observation as recently as last month.

Burns, in interviews, denied that there had been any sexual or physical abuse at his Rainbow Elementary Prep School centers and said inspectors cited him for other violations improperly because he was a long-time critic.

"If conditions are bad, why do people come to us?" he asked. "We're full to capacity and we do no advertising. It's strictly word-of-mouth."

He said he did not cooperate with inspectors at times based on his attorney's advice. He declined to name the attorney.

Records show frequent complaints about staffing ratios as well as other items including a lack of sheets and blankets for cots.

Research shows meteors ended dinosaurs' rule

By SCOTT C. SECKEL
State Press

In spite of the species endangered by man ranging from the giant panda to the California condor, there remain quite a few that he is not responsible for snuffing out.

One example: Tyrannosaurus Rex. Giant meteors are the cause of the extinction of the dinosaurs, the research of an ASU professor emeritus and a visiting scientist suggests.

Michael McHone, a geologist visiting ASU, has identified a type of quartz as originating back to the days when scientists theorize that a shower of meteors ended the giant lizards. The biggest meteors to hit the earth were huge, some as wide as 10 kilometers. They left even bigger craters.

These craters, called astroblames or star scars, left craters up to 200 miles in diameter. Two of the largest astroblames were identified by ASU Professor Emeritus of Geology Robert Dietz.

The meteors caused a combination of nuclear winter, the greenhouse effect and other meteorological mutations that wiped out the dinosaurs. Dietz said about 95 percent of scientists believe this theory.

McHone and other researchers discovered a certain type of super-hard quartz called stishovite is found in the layer of rock that was the skin of the earth when the dinosaurs walked on it.

Stishovite is commonly found only in the vicinity of nuclear blasts, other scientific experiments and meteor craters that have been positively identified according to McHone.

Dietz identified craters in Sudbury, Canada and South Africa as meteor sites, but he said meteors much larger than those which evidently hit the earth may have been covered by the shifting of the sands on the floor of the ocean.

When the earth was bombarded, the sun was blotted out, freezing cold ensued and terrible heat and acid rain composed the weather, Dietz said.

"It was a combination of the nuclear winter and the greenhouse effect," he said.

The stishovite, which is believed to have come to the earth 66.3 million years ago, lies between the Cretaceous and Cenozoic boundaries. These boundaries are believed to have been the surface of the earth at that time.

McHone and ASU chemistry specialists Charles F. Lewis, Ronald A. Nieman and Ann M. Yates published their evidence in Science magazine's March 3 issue.

Moslem leaders denounce threat against Rushdie

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Foreign ministers of Moslem nations began a four-day conference Monday with 150 items on the agenda but attention fixed on "The Satanic Verses" and Iran's order that its author be killed.

The Saudi foreign minister opposed Iran's insistence that discussion of the novel and author Salman Rushdie head the agenda. Referring to Iranian response to the book, he cautioned against "this rabid invasion aimed at undermining the Islamic faith and personality."

By Monday, no mention of Rushdie had been made in conference coverage by the government-guided Saudi media.

Saudi Arabia and other Islamic countries have criticized Rushdie and banned his novel, which Moslems say blasphemes Islam, but have not supported Iranian patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's instruction to his followers to kill the writer.

Last year, the Saudis broke off diplomatic relations with Iran, accusing Iran's fundamentalist Shiite Moslem regime of fomenting terrorism among Shiites in the kingdom.

Prince Saud al-Faisal, the Saudi foreign minister, said Monday that debate on the Palestinian issue and recognition of the provisional government organized by Afghan guerrillas should have precedence on the agenda.

King Fahd of Saudi Arabia opened the meeting of the 46-member Organization of Islamic Conference with a three-minute speech welcoming participants and wishing them success.

Ali Akbar Velayati, Iran's foreign minister, did not attend. Mohammad Khodadadi, head of the Foreign Ministry's Islamic organization affairs department, represented Iran.

Khodadadi said Rushdie's book "is the most important issue to be debated by the conference as far as we are concerned," and told The Associated Press: "We will press for their support for Iran's views on that score."

Rushdie, 41, has been in hiding since Khomeini pronounced the death sentence Feb. 14 and Iranian clerics added a reward of $5.2 million. He was born in Bombay to Moslem parents, but now is a British citizen and has said he does not practice religion actively.

Among aspects of the book to which Moslems object is a scene in which prostitutes are given the names of Mohammed's wives and the suggestion that the prophet wrote the holy Koran rather than receiving it from Allah.

Tehran television, monitored in Cyprus on Monday, said 190 members of Iran's parliament had sent a letter to the Organization of Islamic Conference asking that the meeting take a stand on the book "pleasing to Moslems."

Shiites dominate Iran but make up only 10 percent of the world's 1 billion Moslems, most of whom are of the Sunni sect.

Several conference delegates described the Iranian position on "The Satanic Verses" as "exaggerated" and said it could give Moslems a bloodthirsty image they do not deserve.

Conference sources, speaking privately, said no delegation other than Iran's appeared willing to support Khomeini's execution order.

"Most foreign ministers are convinced Iran is trying to exploit the affair to score propaganda gains" said an Arab diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Diplomats said moves were under way to persuade Iran to drop its demand for Rushdie's death and avoid a confrontation at the meeting with Sunni Moslems led by Saudi Arabia.

They said some delegations suggested Western nations be asked to ban "The Satanic Verses" and most believed Rushdie should be given an Islamic trial and a chance to repent.

Regarding Afghanistan, Prince Saud urged that Moslem nations recognize the guerrilla government, which he said "is capable of binding together the Afghan people in brotherhood and accord."

Only Saudi Arabia, Sudan and Bahrain had extended recognition by the time the conference began.

The provisional government, based in Pakistan, is dominated by Sunni Moslems. Insurgents have been trying to oust the communist government in Kabul, capital of Afghanistan, since the last Red Army soldiers left the country Feb. 15, ending nine years of Soviet military involvement.

Sources at the conference said Iran probably would raise objections to a government dominated by the guerrilla alliance based in Pakistan and demand a significant role for the eight Shiite-dominated Afghan political groups based on its territory.

Iran has warned of a possible civil war in Afghanistan if demands for power-sharing by the Shiites are ignored.

Voting

Sen. Wayne Stump, R-Phoenix and a member of the education committee who has been critical of the voting student regent concept in the past, said that he now supports the idea.

"I have voted consistently 'no' on the original bill and follow-up bills because my feeling was that students were not taxpayers," he said. "However, Patrick (McWhortor) just made me realize something.

"There is absolutely nothing that would ever keep the governor from appointing a regular member from the student population. There's no requirements (for) the other regents that I know about."

Allan Price, a regent spokesman and lobbyist, told the committee that the regents are unanimously supportive of the bill.

The student regents have been able "to take a broader point of view than the single university they came from and the board is very much in support of giving the student regent the vote at this point," he said.

Sen. James Sossaman, R-Higley, said that times have changed, noting that 10 years ago he had to fight the Board of Regents to get a student member on the board. But he added that the student regents have been exemplary.

"They have proved not only to the Board of Regents, but to the Legislature, that they can not only serve with distinction but they can serve with a vote," he said.

The Arizona student regent is elected by the governor for a one-year term and is chosen from one of the state's three universities. The student regent for 1989-90 will be chosen from NAU.

Senate Bill 1204, which is also intended to give voting powers to the student member of the board, will be killed because the House bill has been a success thus far, according to a Senate staff member. Nineteen senators had signed on to S.B. 1204.

After the unanimous vote in the Senate committee, McWhortor said he thinks people are finally realizing that student regents are responsible.

"I'm pleased to see that the committee was supportive of our concept," he said.

Sen. Pete Rios, D-Hayden, said the voting student regent concept should have been approved years ago.

"I never understood why the student regent never had the vote to begin with," he said. "I think this is way overdue."

Reagan

ASU Alumni Center and founder of the Insuring Tomorrow program, expressed surprise that Reagan never intended to charge for his appearance.

"It's great, but I wish they had told us that days ago," Giuliano said. "Had we known that, we never would have started to sell tickets."

Fees blamed the confusion on "miscommunication" between the Speakers Bureau and Reagan's Los Angeles office.

"Reagan staff members, and the president himself, must have been unaware until recently that we were having to sell tickets to finance the event, even though the Bureau knew," Fees said.

"It seems the president wants to come and speak to students, and he wants them to be able to attend for free. This is a win-win situation for the University."

A Bureau spokesman could not be reached for comment.

Event organizers must still pay $12,000-15,000 in security costs for the Reagan appearance. Fees said that proceeds from "Reagan" T-shirt sales and tickets that are not turned in for refund might be combined with Associated Students funds to cover the costs.

Roger Axford, an ASU education professor who last week criticized University officials for spending up to $50,000 on Reagan, said he still expects to lead 35 protestors in picketing outside the University Activity Center during Reagan's lecture.

"Reagan waived his fee because otherwise it would appear that he was just out to make additional millions that he doesn't need," Axford said.

"(Appearing free) doesn't change the fact that he was involved in the Iran-contra scandal, tripled the national debt, cut student loans and abandoned the homeless while he was in office."

Campaign

Larson said time restraints will decrease the number of students that candidates can personally meet this year.

Because of the short campaign, a burden will be placed on the students to become more involved and ask more questions to find out about candidates, Rivera said.

David Cavecche, ASASU elections coordinator, said candidates this year have less campaigning time than previously because the executive committee voted on an election schedule which allotted only one week for campaigning.

Cavecche said he proposed only one week of campaigning in the election schedule he submitted to the executive committee because in his interpretation of the ASASU bylaws, campaigning is restricted to the week before the election.

Cavecche said he is confident that the shorter campaign will not effect voter turnout.

"We can get the word about elections out in one week," Cavecche said. "Campaigning longer than a week cuts into the class schedule of candidates."

But both Larson and Rivera said they would support a longer campaign period.

Students returning to school Monday from spring break witnessed the results of the candidates work as fliers and campaign signs were evident everywhere about the campus.

Candidates for executive offices will appear in their first of two forums this week today at 11:30 a.m. in the MU Rendezvous Lounge.

Each of the eight candidates will be given five minutes to deliver prepared speeches.

After the speeches the three presidential candidates will be seated at a table for a one-hour question and answer period where they will respond to questions from students.

All students are encouraged to attend to find out more about the candidates and to ask the presidential candidates questions.

Also tomorrow, all executive and senatorial candidates must submit a first financial statement which includes receipts from all expenditures as of 5 p.m. Monday evening.

The second candidate forum is scheduled for 11:30 a.m., Wednesday at the corner of Tyler Mall and Palm Walk. The second forum will follow the same format as the first

Star Wars defense plans 'Brilliant Pepples' in space

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former chief of the "Star Wars" research program urged the Pentagon upon his retirement to embrace a new plan for an anti-missile defense system relying on thousands of "Brilliant Pepples" floating in space.

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, who retired at the end of January, wrote in an "End of Tour" memo dated Feb. 9 that the concept known as Brilliant Pepples offered "both improved performance and dramatic cost reduction." He said the total cost could be $25 billion, far less than previous estimates.

"I believe that with continued effort and innovation, a Brilliant Pepples concept that meets Phase I Joint Chiefs of Staff requirements can be proven in two years, with deployment starting three years later," Abrahamson added. "This could be accomplished for less than $10 billion."

The Brilliant Pepples program has been disclosed previously and is based on research underway at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory. The idea is to devise a small, cheap, light satellite that carries its own small computer, sensors and propulsion system.

Thousands of these tiny satellites could then be boosted into space, encircling the globe. If the Soviet Union launched nuclear missiles against the United States or its allies, the Brilliant Pepples could home in on the missiles' exhaust plumes and rocket off to destroy the missiles by colliding with them.

While the program has been detailed previously, Abrahamson's ringing endorsement of the work had not been reported. The Center for Peace and Freedom, a conservative, Washington-based think tank that has promoted Star Wars, released a copy of Abrahamson's memo on Monday.

Lt. Col. Edwina Palmer, a spokeswoman for Star Wars, said the Pentagon would have no comment on the matter.

Abrahamson is traveling, but he did write what is known as an "end of tour report" to acting Defense Secretary William H. Taft III, the spokeswoman said. That report was a "private communication" and the Pentagon has nothing to say on the matter, she added.

Abrahamson's successor, Lt. Gen. George L. Monahan Jr., is scheduled to testify Tuesday on Star Wars before a House subcommittee.

The Star Wars program, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative, is a research effort to develop lasers and other weapons that could automatically shoot down nuclear missiles fired at the United States. Launched by former President Ronald Reagan, the United States has so far spent about $16 billion on the effort.

The Pentagon recently estimated a Phase I Star Wars system using both ground-based and space-based weapons and sensors would cost about $69 billion. Abrahamson, in his memo, said the Brilliant Pepples program was exciting because it offered "greater opportunities for an earlier and more affordable SDI deployment."

To complete a Phase 1 system built around Brilliant Pepples, Abrahamson said the Pentagon would need to spend about $11 billion on a new space-based sensor system and about $4 billion on a new "command and control ground complex."

"Thus, an entire SDI Phase I system . . . should not cost more than approximately $25 billion," he concluded.

McFarlane 'following policy' in Iran-Contra affair

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane testified Monday he thought he was following then-President Reagan's policy when he withheld from Congress information about Oliver North's activities for the Nicaraguan Contras.

"The policy of the president to me was to keep this movement together, and outside contributions from third countries were not to be shared," said McFarlane, testifying as a prosecution witness in North's trial. He was referring specifically to money solicited from Saudi Arabia for the rebels.

In addition, prosecutors read into the court record a separate McFarlane statement in which he said he had acted "under the guidance and emphatic policy instructions of the president."

The statement was made 10 days ago to the judge who sentenced McFarlane to pay a $20,000 fine and contribute 200 hours of community service for his own part in the Iran-Contra affair. McFarlane pleaded guilty to four misdemeanors, but North, his former aide, faces 12 felony counts.

McFarlane will return Tuesday for a third day of testimony.

Prosecutor John Kecker asked him Monday if he interpreted Reagan's "instructions to permit lies to Congress."

"No," he said.

Again and again, throughout the day, he said that if there is blame for North's actions, it should be his because he was North's superior at the National Security Council.

McFarlane added that after leaving government "I probably got a rise out of him" when he offered North a job.

For the first time in weeks of trial, North smiled broadly. McFarlane said that on two occasions he talked with Reagan about the millions of dollars contributed for the Contras by Saudi Arabia.

The first time, in June 1984 just after Congress shut off U. S. aid to the guerrillas, McFarlane said, he sent a note with the president's daily intelligence briefing book informing the president that the Saudis had agreed to contribute $1 million a month for the Contra cause.

"Good, let's just make sure it stays that way," McFarlane said Reagan told him in a return note.

In February 1985, McFarlane said, he learned from the Saudi ambassador that the Middle Eastern country was going to double its giving and he again told the president. The Saudis eventually gave a total of $32 million.

"If the president of the United States says something like 'let's keep quiet,' is that a direction to lie to other official bodies?" Kecker asked.

"No," said McFarlane.

He pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges involving withholding information from Congress. Criminal charges at the core of the North trial make similar allegations.

"Did you ever instruct North to prepare false answers to Congress?" he was asked. "No," he said.

McFarlane left government in December 1985, after accompanying Reagan in November to Geneva for the summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

It was in Switzerland, he said, that he got a call from the Israeli defense minister who was in New York, asking his help clearing a shipment of U. S.-made Hawk missiles destined for Iran. He said he told Reagan, chief of staff Donald Regan and Secretary of State George Shultz.

The following May, by then a private citizen, McFarlane said he went to Tehran at Reagan's request to try to open discussions. The trip was a failure.

On the way back during a stop in Israel, "Colonel North told me I shouldn't be disappointed because some of the proceeds of the sale (of weapons) to Iran was going to be available for the Nicaraguan Contras," McFarlane said.

"Were you surprised to hear that?" Kecker asked.

"Yes."

"Did you ask anything about it?"

"No. I should have."

Earlier, he testified that North prepared a letter McFarlane sent to Congress in 1985 denying that anyone on the National Security Council staff solicited funds for the Nicaraguan Contras.

Previous witnesses at North's trial — both private fundraisers and contributors — have testified that around that time North gave a number of briefings emphasizing the needs of the rebels but always left the room afterward, letting others make the pitch for contributions.

McFarlane said he was troubled by the draft letter and questioned North about it.

"He said 'I believe I have not violated the law,'" McFarlane said.

"He said he had spoken to many groups (and) . . . if people said 'I want to help,' that in each case he said 'I can't be involved' and said go to the Contra office."

Discovery blasts off, $100M satellite delivered

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts, safely in orbit Monday after a weather-delayed launch, set free a $100 million satellite to complete a globe-spanning network that will let future spacefarers call Mission Control at almost any time.

The 2½-ton Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, its double parasol-like antennae folded, slipped clear of Discovery's cargo bay at 4:10 p.m. EST and floated into space.

"We had a good deploy, on time," said Discovery mission specialist Robert C. Springer.

At a critical moment in the deployment, an unexplained electronic signal momentarily jammed a computer used to deploy the satellite, but then, just as mysteriously, the machine cleared up and appeared normal.

"We didn't get any (more) of those spurious signals," Springer said.

Mission control confirmed that data on the ground showed that the computer was functioning normally.

An hour after the deployment, TDRS's powerful first-stage rocket fired and sent the craft toward a new, higher orbit.

Kathy Sullivan, an astronaut acting as Mission Control communicator with Discovery, told the crew the rocket firing was so accurate that a "trim burn," used to correct errors, was not required.

"Fantastic news," came the reply from Discovery. "Thanks a lot."

A second-stage rocket, set to fire at 10:23 p.m., will carry the satellite toward its work station 22,300 miles over the Atlantic Ocean.

After TDRS floated off, mission commander Michael L. Coats gently moved Discovery away to protect the shuttle from the discharge of the satellite's first-stage rocket.

Deployment of the satellite came 6 hours, 12 minutes after Discovery leaped from its seaside launch pad and raced out of view across a clear Florida sky in a launch that marked a successful beginning to NASA's plan to fly seven shuttles this year.

Discovery, its rockets firing flawlessly, charged smoothly into orbit with five astronauts, the communications satellite and a cargo of experiments that includes four rats with clipped bones and 32 chicken eggs.

"It's a great start to a long launch season," launch director Bob Sieck told a news conference at the Kennedy Space Center.

The 9:57 a.m. EST liftoff was an hour and 50 minutes later than planned. Early-morning fog — so dense it obscured the launch pad from just a short distance away — caused some delay, but the major problem was wind five miles overhead. Officials feared powerful shear forces could tear the spacecraft apart as it raced upward faster than the speed of sound.

To compensate for the wind, a computer aboard Discovery was quickly reprogrammed to adjust the ship's flight angle. The stalled countdown clock was restarted and then ticked without hesitation to liftoff.

Coats, a 43-year-old Navy captain, leads a crew that includes Air Force Col. John E. Blaha, 46, the mission pilot; Springer, 46, a Marine colonel; Dr. James M. Bagian, 37, a physician, and Marine Col. James F. Buchli, 43.

Once in place, TDRS will become the third and final link in a communications constellation that is vital to NASA's future space plans.

By using the satellite network, the space agency will be able to exchange radio messages with the shuttle and other satellites at least 85 percent of the time they are in orbit. A small sliver over the Indian Ocean is the only part of the shuttle orbit blocked from contact.

Before TDRS, NASA depended on ground stations, outposts with huge dish antennae sprinkled at points around the globe. Shuttle astronauts could speak to Mission Control only as they overflew the ground stations, a link that covered only about 15 percent of each mission. NASA will soon close six ground stations at a savings of $3 million a month.

Establishing the TDRS network has been a struggle for NASA.

TDRS-1 was placed into orbit in 1983, but a rocket stage failed and the agency was forced to use small altitude control jets to maneuver the satellite into place, a process that took many weeks and burned most of the precious control fuel.

The second TDRS was destroyed, along with seven astronauts, in the explosion of space shuttle Challenger in 1986.

NASA considered the communications network so important that the main goal of the first mission following Challenger last September was to put a new TDRS in place. The satellite was launched smoothly and now hangs high over the Pacific Ocean.

TDRS-1, now ailing and old, will become a spare once the third satellite delivered by Discovery is in place.

Sharing the shuttle cabin with Coats and his crew is a small garden of plants.

Goggles not a factor in helicopter crash, officials say

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Crew members on a military helicopter that crashed and burned in the desert were wearing night-vision goggles, but that was not a factor in the accident that killed 15 servicemen, Air Force officials said Monday.

Use of the light-amplifying goggles has been questioned in a number of previous military crashes.

Four Air Force Reserve crewmen and 11 Army Special Forces soldiers from Fort Bragg, N.C., were aboard the CH-3E "Jolly Green Giant" helicopter that went down Sunday night in the desert 25 miles northwest of Davis-Monthan Air Force Base here.

Capt. Carlos Roque, a spokesman at Davis-Monthan, said he had no information on the sequence of events leading to the crash and didn't know if there had been any radio transmissions.

Sgt. Jill Archer quoted Airman 1st Class John E. Klemack, a spokesman for the 71st Special Operations Squadron at Davis-Monthan, the crew's unit, as saying: "We don't know what height they were flying at when the crash occurred."

The Vietnam-era helicopter, assigned to Davis-Monthan, was ferrying the soldiers from Fort Huachuca, 79 miles southeast of Tucson, to an Air Force gunnery range at Gila Bend, 124 miles northwest of Tucson.

It went down in an uninhabited area adjacent to the Saguaro National Monument about 20 miles northwest of Tucson, after stopping at Davis-Monthan to refuel, Roque said.

"I looked up and I seen a yellow ball, like flames, coming out of the back," said Mike Skrekas, who lives a few miles from the crash site. "Five seconds later I saw it hit the ground, and then there was a red fireball."

A second helicopter was accompanying it but was a reasonable distance away and was not involved in the crash, Roque said.

Air Force Lt. Col. Darrel Hayes said the helicopter that crashed had undergone a mandatory inspection just last Friday that resulted in replacement of its main rotor head shaft nut. It was flown safely three times after that work.

Roque said the flight crew was wearing night-vision goggles that amplify low light but that investigators had determined that the goggles "were not a factor in the accident."

Roque said previous helicopter crashes in which pilots were wearing such goggles "were flying low-level or in close proximity" with other aircraft and that the goggles, "when used in close proximity or low level, may have caused a vision problem."

He said the flight from Tucson to Gila Bend was to be "a regular, straight, level flight." That is, "it didn't involve any capabilities other than flying in a straight line," as opposed to low-level "nap of the earth" flying, following the contour of the land, he explained.

"They were not doing that on this flight," said Roque, "and as a result when they were using the night-vision goggles they were in open air space and not in proximity to anything."

Critics have questioned whether the goggles function adequately when there is no moon or in cloudy weather that obscures stars. The National Weather Service said there were high thin clouds over the Tucson area Sunday night and that visibility was 30 miles. The crash occurred about an hour after sunset and about two hours before the rise of a quarter-moon.

The Orange County Register reported that since 1978, 37 of 41 Army helicopter crashes in which night goggles were used occurred when there was not enough moonlight for the devices to amplify. Those crashes killed 65 soldiers, the newspaper reported.

The CH-3 series of helicopters was designed in the late 1950s and early 1960s and is still flown by the Air Force, Navy and Coast Guard. The Air Force began flying the choppers in 1962 and has 63 left in its inventory.

Identities of the victims were not immediately released. Roque said the bodies would have to be identified through medical and dental records.

Biologist ends stay in 'tiny world within a world'

ORACLE, Ariz. (AP) — Marine biologist Abigail Alling ended five days of isolation in a tiny world within a world on Monday and said the experimental environment was "truly paradise."

"What surprised me was how easy and relaxed the whole thing was," Alling said after stepping out of the 23-foot-square, greenhouse-like enclosure that cut her off from the rest of Earth's environment.

The miniaturized ecosystem inside the test module provided her air, food, water and all other needs in a preview of the time when a team of eight men and women plan to stay in a larger but equally sealed-off structure for two years.

It was "an experience you have to experience. The three aspects of science — the experiment, the experimenter and the experience — became a unity," Alling said after cheers and hugs from colleagues working on Biosphere II, an ambitious $30 million scientific project in the desert north of Tucson.

The privately funded research mission is designed to see whether human beings can exist in a completely enclosed world, possibly as a precursor to space colonization. Four men and four women, who call themselves "biospherians," are scheduled to enter a 2½-acre structure in September 1990 for a two-year stay.

In the Biosphere experiments, plants and organisms are used to purify the air and water and to replenish the oxygen supply, according to Margaret Augustine, the project director.

Food is grown, harvested and prepared inside the biosphere, and wastes are biologically treated and recycled for fertilizer, she said.

Alling, a Yale University-trained marine-mammal scientist, said she enjoyed her stay in the enclosure. She said she busied herself by harvesting and cooking her own food and working on her contribution to Biosphere II, which will include a 35-foot-deep, 1-million-gallon "ocean" as one of its seven separate environmental systems.

The test module is a self-contained greenhouse about the size of a single-car garage. It is topped with a futuristic steel-and-glass canopy rising to a height of 20 feet.

Lack of room forced the omission of the chicken, fish and goats that will be included in Biosphere II, but Alling was able to choose from an array of fruits and vegetables for her diet of 2,500 calories a day.

She stayed in touch with the outside world through a telephone and computer.

Carl Hodges, director of the UofA Environmental Research laboratory and a project consultant, said he couldn't have been happier with the five-day test.

"It's very simple to say how we feel about this," Hodges said. "It's a huge success. I'm ecstatic."

Two more weeks of experiments will be conducted on the test module but without a human occupant.

Even after the two-year test is completed in Biosphere II, Hodges said, the project will be far from complete.

"When we close for two years, that's just another step," he said. "Biosphere II is designed to last 100 years."

The Biosphere II project is located on the 2,500-acre Sun Space ranch, located near Oracle, a small town at the foot of the Catalina mountains about 30 miles north of Tucson.

The ranch is owned by Space Biospheres Ventures, a for-profit research company financed largely by Texas oilman Edward P. Bass.

If the full project succeeds, Space Biospheres Ventures plans to market versions of the biosphere to governments and researchers studying such endeavors as preservation of endangered species or space colonization.

Strikes throughout Brazil expected to cripple cities

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Labor leaders said they expect Brazil's major cities to be brought to a complete halt on Tuesday at the beginning of a 48-hour general strike called to protest frozen wages.

Jair Meneguelli, president of the radical left Central Workers Union, predicted on Monday that the strike "will be the biggest . . . this country has ever seen" and will keep millions of workers off their jobs.

It will be the third general strike since Brazil returned to civilian rule in 1985. A December 1986 strike was only partially successful and a strike in August 1987 failed completely.

"This year, the two labor movements have put aside their rivalries and we are much better prepared," Meneguelli said.

The strike has been planned for weeks by his union and the more moderate General Workers Central, the two largest and most militant labor organizations in this continent-sized nation of 144 million people.

Of Brazil's 60 million-strong work force, the two organizations claim to represent nearly 35 million workers.

Meneguelli and Joaquim dos Santos Andrade, president of the General Workers Central, appeared together at a news conference Monday.

"We will stop all economic activity in Sao Paulo (South America's largest city and Brazil's industrial and financial center with 10 million people), Rio de Janeiro, Porto Alegre, Belo Horizonte and many other cities," Meneguelli said. Andrade nodded in agreement.

Marilia Goncalves, news media spokeswoman for the Labor Ministry, said by phone the government would respect the workers' right to strike and that "everything indicates it will be a peaceful movement."

The wage freeze is part of a government economic package introduced Jan. 15 aimed at controlling runaway inflation of more than 1,000 percent.

Willis returns to ASU lineup

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

At this point of the Six Pac schedule last year, the ASU baseball team was 2-7 and in last place. This year finds the numbers reversed, but Coach Jim Brock is guarding his optimism.

The 12th-ranked Devils (19-7 overall) are now sitting at 7-2 record in the conference for a first-place tie with Arizona. Their spring break road trip produced a sweep at Stanford and a 1-2 split at California.

"Clearly we're not in any trouble," Brock said, "but we haven't accomplished anything big yet either."

"I don't think that a particular number of wins this early in the year is necessarily significant of anything other than the fact that you've got a chance. You're one of those teams."

Six of the Devils' seven wins have come via sweeps of the leagues two bottom teams, UCLA and Stanford.

UCLA (1-8) may be the one team clearly inferior to rest of the Pac. Stanford (2-7) is down but Brock said the Cardinal is better than its record indicates and will be a factor in the race.

"I think the UCLA sweep at home is no big deal, and winning one of three at California is no big deal, so the difference is the Stanford sweep," he said. "They were definitely in a state of disarray at the time."

The trip was a long one. It rained nearly every day, making for tentative schedules. A non-conference game with Santa Clara was rained out, Sunday's Cal game was delayed due to a wet field. The Devils were not able to take batting practice all week.

Fatigue had crept in.

ASU first baseman Steve Willis returned to the Sun Devil lineup after breaking his wrist in January. Since his return to the diamond, Willis has hit .313.

"I kind of felt we were struggling some toward the end," Brock said. "I wouldn't have wanted to play again the next day."

The Devils are home now for a two-game series with Cal-State Long Beach today at 7 p.m. and Wednesday at 2:30 p.m.

Long Beach was originally booked as schedule filler, but the 49ers are in the midst of a spectacular season. Under the direction of new head coach Dave Snow, they are 22-1 and ranked sixth in the nation. This after posting a 14-45 record last year.

Sun Devil first baseman Steve Willis, who broke his wrist in January during a collision with catcher Eric Helfand, returned to the lineup and hit .313.

Helfand, who also broke his wrist, is now playing in JV games and may be ready for the weekend when the Devils play host to USC.

Ciak named to academic All-America squad

By KYLE D. ENG
State Press

The Pac-10 women's basketball all-conference team was announced Monday, and there was not a single Sun Devil on either the conference team or the all-freshman team.

Heading the list of all-conference players was Stanford's Jennifer Azzi, who was also selected as the Pac-10's player of the year.

Also making the team were incumbents Oregon center Stephanie Kasperski, USC's Cherie Nelson, and Stanford's Katy Stedding.

Kasperski, a 6-7 center, led the conference in blocked shots. Nelson, after a slow start, scored 50 points in a losing effort against Cal last weekend.

Incidentally, the Devils were the only team not to place any players on all-conference team. The exception was Cal, who placed a player on the all-freshman team.

Among the Devils who were passed over on the team were guards Karen O'Connor and Rosalind Senior, and center Fran Ciak.

O'Connor started all 28 games for ASU, leading the Devils in scoring, averaging 19.5 points a game, while placing in the top ten in the Pac-10 in assists and steals.

Although only a sophomore, O'Connor has assuaged the ASU record books. Her career statistics of 785 points places her 10th on the ASU all-time list, her 220 assists puts her sixth on the list, and her 116 steals places her eighth on the list.

O'Connor also is in the top ten in field goal percentage shooting 51.2 percent, and free-throw percentage connecting on 75.4 percent on her shots.

Ciak, a 6-4 center, also started every game for ASU. Although she only averaged 14.0 points a game, Ciak not only lead the Devils in rebounding, but her 10.2 rebounds a game average led the entire conference.

She also exploded for 30 points and 20 rebounds against Cal earlier this year, to make her only the second player in history to ever do so.

Senior started only six games, but her 34-72 (47.2) shooting from the 3-point line placed her third in the nation in the category. In one game, Senior made seven straight from 3-point land, and finished the game shooting 7-8 from long range.

ASU head coach Maura McHugh didn't take the news lightly either.

Asked if she felt like she had been ripped off McHugh said, "Yeah I do."

"I think the girls deserved some reward. Karen and Fran deserved to be placed on the team at the very least."

According to Pac-10 Public Relations Intern Mike Selleck, the voting is done by the coaches.

"I guess like with any voting, people are going to have their favorites," Selleck said. "It might be too that since ASU finished in last place that their players didn't get the recognition they deserved from the other coaches."

Also released yesterday was the Pac-10 all-freshman team.

And also snubbed in the voting was freshman forward Shannon Gridley.

Gridley, 6-foot-3, started 10 games for the Devils this season averaging 7.0 points and 3.9 rebounds in her first season. Her biggest game of the year came against Stanford, the nation's fifth-ranked team, when she came through with a stellar performance scoring 21 points and grabbing 11 rebounds.

"I thought Shannon would definitely make the all-freshman team," McHugh said. "I guess they overlooked her as well."

Of the four players that weren't named to either team, one player can take solace.

Ciak was recently named second-team academic All-America. The junior boasts a 3.68 GPA, with a concentration in German and Political Science.

The naming of Ciak marks the fourth ASU athlete to be bestowed an academic All-America honor this year. The others being volleyball players Tracie Kisro and Noelle Fridrich, and football linebacker Mark Tingstad.

Keady could be the Sun Devils' ticket for success

Chris Dorsey
Asst. Sports Editor

How many times have you splurged to buy a couple of Pick tickets?

Our expectations soar high with claiming the multi-million dollar jackpot, but come every Wednesday and Saturday night dreams of owning a brand new Ferrari or Porsche are shattered when only one number matches those drawn.

This scenario somewhat resembles the one facing the ASU basketball team.

Prior to the start of the season (before buying the lottery ticket), we are ecstatic and pumped for the upcoming hoop season. The returning players, who are quality individuals with good basketball minds and skills, should provide the Devils with a winning season.

While at a local convenience store you ask the attendant for a lottery ticket, no make that two, it's time to go out on a limb.

The numbers on one ticket are 20-9, 15-3, 1 and 2, the other ticket bears the digits 12-16, 5-13, 9 and 10.

The first set of numbers are looking pretty sweet and stand a good chance and putting a few bucks in your pocket. However, the second set of numbers are down right disgusting. No one wants to play with these digits.

The numbers of the first ticket are those of a winning basketball program while the second, yes you guessed it, is a losing record, that of ASU this season.

While you are at home watching the numbers drawn. The first one is 12 and from there on it is pretty much self explanatory.

But in order to win the jackpot you must choose new numbers of course.

The Sun Devils are scouting for a new head coach, and ASU athletic director Charles Harris is in the mood to play the lottery. As a matter of fact he is willing to pay big money on this go around.

Harris wants to win the Pac-10 lottery bad, and with a good ticket can achieve his goal.

Who knows what his numbers are? He isn't telling anyone about his lucky ticket and the lottery isn't the big game at the moment. Everyone is betting money and eager to find out who is going to bring him success.

It has been rumored that the key to the future is Purdue head coach Gene Keady.

Keady suffered a losing season this year at the helm of the Boiler-makers. His 15-16, 8-10 Big Ten record made the fans in West Lafayette, Ind. cringe.

Despite their anger they do not want to see their coach leave town. When Purdue played Northwestern Saturday night, the fans applauded Gene and at halftime chanted, "Keady, Keady, Keady."

It was senior night at Mackey Arena, but the attention focused on the mentor not the athletes. Signs were posted throughout the arena in regards to Keady's departure, fliers were handed out, and the sell-out crowd was doing its best to influence Gene's decision.

However, Sunday, the Purdue coach flew into Tempe to check out the situation.

"We visited yesterday (Sunday)," Keady said in a press conference in Indiana Monday. "We are looking at maybe making a change. Right now, it is strictly up in the air."

Could he be the winning numbers on Harris' lottery ticket? It will be revealed soon because Purdue failed to qualify for the NCAA and NIT postseason tournaments. This enables Keady to talk freely and make a decision soon.

Keady informed the Lafayette press Monday that his decision whether to take the ASU job would be made by Wednesday at the latest. Coincidentally, the same day as the Pick drawing.

Could it be Harris will hit the jackpot?

The 10th year coach at Purdue had nothing but good things to say about his visit to the Valley.

"Arizona was impressive . . . They are committed to a quality basketball program."

The Arizona Board of Regents have called a tentative meeting for today to consider the signing of the new basketball coach.

It is getting about time to lay all the cards on the table, and most Sun Devil fans are cracking their knuckles in anticipation.

The bowl is stirring up the numbers, and the audience is awaiting the results.

Will ASU have its first winning season since 1982 under Mr. Keady?

And is Harris getting excited because he knows his ticket is a winning one?

Sun Devil netters enjoy 3-match winning streak

By KRISTI HOWELL
State Press

The Sun Devils' three-match winning streak has given the men's tennis team a boost of confidence needed to go up against the tough competitors it will face during the remainder of the season.

"After this weekend, the team is really starting to believe in themselves," ASU coach Lou Belken said.

The Sun Devils completed their longest winning streak of the season with three straight victories last weekend.

These wins include a 5-1 win against U. S. International on Wednesday, a 5-4 upset of eighth-ranked South Carolina on Friday and a 5-1 victory against San Diego State on Saturday.

South Carolina, who should improve on its No. 8 ranking after recently defeating UCLA, showed the Sun Devils fierce competition.

"The South Carolina match came down to the number-one doubles match that gave us the win," Belken said. "There was great play on both sides of the court."

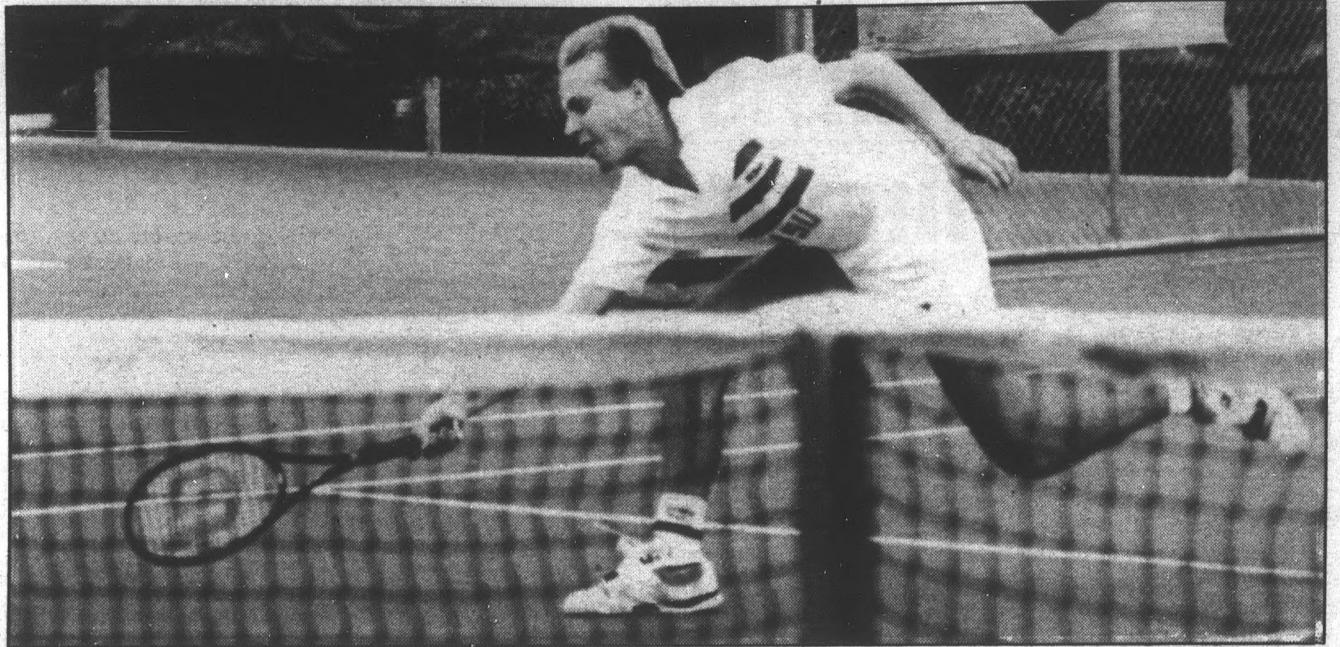

Sun Devil sophomores Brian Gyetko and Daniel Marting teamed up and went three sets to win the No. 1 doubles competition.

Gyetko was a key contributor last week, securing victories from all three of his singles matches, which included a three-set win against South Carolina's 16th-ranked Steve Longley.

"Brian Gyetko, who had been struggling, saved a match-point and came back to win against South Carolina," Belken said.

Gyetko's success has brought him a record of 5-7 in singles and 7-2 in doubles.

Senior ASU captain Jeff Wood also had an impressive week, with all of his singles match-ups going to three sets. He emerged victorious from two of them, leaving him with a 7-5 record.

Wood teamed with Dave Lomicky in doubles play and clinched another three-set win.

"Brian and Jeff played, gave it their all, as did the rest of the team," Belken said. "It was a great week for the program."

Tracksters gear up for next meet

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Despite a third-place finish in the inaugural meet of the 1989 track season, ASU coaches are optimistic going into this weekend's matchup on the turf at Sun Angel Stadium.

The Sun Devil men's and women's track teams will play host to Texas, Wichita State and Princeton Saturday. The field and running events begin at 11 a.m. and noon, respectively.

"All three schools have good distance programs," said ASU assistant coach Ken Lehman, who is in charge of the distance events.

ASU head coach Tom Jones said he hopes the team turns in a better performance than it did March 4, the team's first meet.

The women finished third with a score of 46 behind UC-Irvine, 69, and Texas Tech, 60, while the men's team also captured a third-place finish with 44.5 points behind Texas Tech with 84 and UC-Irvine with 66.5.

ASU field coach Ed Gorman said he is not complaining. "We have to be realistic," he said. "They've (the Sun Devils) been training since August. They did fine."

"You have to keep the first meet in perspective. We have to get the bugs out."

Jones said the team suffered from first-meet jitters. "It's a tough time for our program," he said, adding that the team is lacking in depth.

A bright spot for the Sun Devils occurred three-time All-American Lynda Tolbert who qualified for the The Athletic Congress competition this summer in the 100-meter high hurdles with a time of 13.66 seconds.

"The girls (sprint team) ran very well," Jones said. Teresa Barrios produced a top performance for the women's distance team.

Barrios' time of 4:25.26 in the 1500-meter ranks third in ASU history.

Lehman said he was pleased with all of the distance runners.

Laura LaMena, who competed in the 3000-meter event; Barrios, who ran in the 800-meter and 1500-meter; Amy Komitzky, who participated in the 5000-meter; and Kathy Jarvis, who ran in the 800-meter and 1500-meter turned in competitive performances, he added.

Barrios said she was not entirely satisfied with her finishes, noting that it was the first meet and they were events she usually does not compete in. Barrios is typically a 3000-meter and 5000-meter runner, but the team needed her in the 800-meter and 1500-meter.

In preparation for the upcoming meet, Lehman said his distance team will concentrate on fast workouts and relaxation.

While Lehman was excited about his women's team, Gorman was ecstatic about the men's field team.

Decathlete Matt Zuber won the javelin with a personal best of 53.34 meters, placed second in the long jump, third in the pole vault and fourth in the hurdles.

"He had a busy, busy day," Gorman said.

ASU high jumper Carl Johnson and decathlete Gary Lee also contributed good performances in the first meet, he said.

The women's field team did not have any competitors. Like most of the probation-stricken track and field team, the men's distance squad had a limited number of participants March 4.

"The men's (distance) team was very thin," Lehman said.

Participants on the squad included Darren Viner in the 800-meter event, Dave Spargo in the 1500-meter event, and Paul Boudreaux and Rob Dorf in the 5000-meter event.

"I thought they ran fairly well," Lehman said. "They need a lot more improvement compared to the women's side."

Finn tones defensive skills, batting strengths

Sun Devil third baseman John Finn was ASU's Gold Glove award last year and his play earned him all-College World Series honors.

By TOMI McELROY
State Press

Senior third baseman John Finn enters this week with the fifth-longest hitting streak in ASU history.

Finn's 22-game streak began against Florida State on February 4, the fifth game of the season.

On the spring break road trip against Stanford, Finn's first at bat was a home run off of Mike Mussina, one of the nation's best pitchers.

In Berkeley against California, Finn hit the game winning RBI.

Finn's offensive abilities have been under the coaching of hitting coach Jeff Pentland. "Coach Pentland has helped me tremendously," Finn said. "He's been the guy that's been with me for the last four years and he's helped me a lot."

This season Finn has concentrated on being a contact hitter.

"It's helped me tremendously to make contact with the ball and not try to go for home runs all the time," Finn said. "I'm a spray hitter now."

Pentland has seen improvement from Finn over the years, but this season seems to be his best.

"Finn has the ability to hit the ball hard on the ground," Pentland said. "Mentally he is a lot more confident in his ability to hit."

Finn is the lead-off hitter in the Sun Devil line-up.

"John Finn has done everything you can ask of a lead-off hitter," ASU head baseball coach Jim Brock said, "and his defense at third base has been brilliant."

Finn came to ASU from Oakland, Calif., in 1985.

As a freshman, Finn was used sparingly at shortstop and mostly went in as a pinch runner.

In his sophomore year, Finn began to see action in the center field position and batting in the second spot of the Sun Devil line-up.

Last season Finn started in center field and later moved to third base after an injury to Bobby Dombrowski.

"Whatever would help the team I was willing to do," Finn said, "third base is the reaction spot and my quickness, hard work and dedication payed off."

This season Finn and Dombrowski were tried at the third base spot, and Finn has started at the position since Feb. 8.

"I like the spot. If I go any further I am going to be an infielder," Finn said. "For me to see ground balls everyday will help me in the long run."

Finn enters this week only two games shy of moving into fourth place in the ASU annals for a hitting streak. Montreal Expo Hubie Brooks captured the fourth place spot in 1978 with 24 consecutive hits.

Garvey says controversy will not hurt political career

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Garvey, whose all-American image has been tarnished by revelations he allegedly fathered children out of wedlock, says the controversy will not force him to renounce a future in politics.

"I would still like to represent people in political office," Garvey said Monday on "Larry King Live," a talk show broadcast on the Cable News Network.

"Whether this will affect that, I don't know. Obviously, there will be some people who won't vote for me."

Garvey said part of the problem may be his reluctance to end relationships.

"There were times when I probably should have stopped a relationship, but it's always been difficult for me to do that," said Garvey, whose first marriage ended in divorce.

"I just hate to hurt somebody. There have been times I knew it wasn't there and I continued on because I didn't want to end it there and thought the relationship would just drift apart."

Garvey has refused to acknowledge that he fathered the children, but has promised to lend financial support if paternity is proved. His bride, Candace Thomas, has offered to adopt the children.

Last month, San Diego station KNSD-TV reported that a San Diego woman said she recently gave birth to Garvey's child. The other woman alleging that she is pregnant with Garvey's child is Rebecka Mendenhall, a CNN producer who was engaged to Garvey until recent months.

Last month, Garvey married Thomas, an interior decorator from Palos Verdes, Calif.

ASU shoots for a new pair of shoes

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

LOS ANGELES — Horns of a dilemma
Although the above headline was used in the recent issue of Sports Illustrated to describe the disadvantages of being Michael Jordan, it also seems fitting for the ASU men's basketball team.

The Sun Devils' season ended with a 94-82 loss to USC Thursday in the first round of the Pac-10 basketball tournament in the Los Angeles Forum.

"It just got rid of the misery this season," ASU senior Torin Williams said after the game. "I was stressing out."

ASU suffered one setback after another with injuries and then the resignation of head coach Steve Patterson's, who bequeathed the reins to Bob Schermerhorn.

But ASU athletic director Charles Harris is hoping a new coach will provide a fresh start for the ailing Sun Devils.

Schermerhorn wanted to be a candidate for the head coach position at ASU, but also applied for that job at other universities.

USC coach George Raveling said Schermerhorn did a good job of coaching after taking the helm under difficult circumstances. Raveling also said that Schermerhorn's name would resurface next season with a head coach title in front of it.

But Schermerhorn said that might not necessarily be true. The choice for the new Sun Devil coach appears obvious — Gene Keady of Purdue. If Keady does not clean house and begin his tenure at ASU with a new coaching staff, Schermerhorn said he would rather assist at ASU than coach elsewhere at this time.

Although the Sun Devils' potential for next year looks good, the team's final game exemplified this season's setbacks.

ASU, the No. 8 team in the Pac-10 going into the tournament, experienced several highs and lows during its loss to USC, which was No. 10. This was the first Trojan victory during the three years of the conference tournament.

Senior Trent Edwards, who was named to the All-Pac-10 team, scored 15 of his 28 points in the first half. Williams and junior Alex Austin each scored four points for the next highest tally for the team.

After Edwards drew first blood in the game, hitting a jumper to give the Sun Devils a 2-0 lead, Trojan Anthony Pendleton sank a 3-pointer to give his team a 3-2 advantage USC did not relinquish its lead for the remainder of the game.

"We were concerned with Pendleton, and evidently didn't find him too well in the first half," Schermerhorn said. "He lit it up and we found ourselves in a hole."

The Sun Devils used 1-3-1 and 2-3 zones and man-to-man defenses, but Pendleton scored 22 points in the first half as the Trojans held a 46-29 lead at the half.

Starting ASU guard Ron Waller only played 16 minutes in the game because of a strain to his right groin muscle.

Junior Mike Redhair played 18 minutes and walk-ons Rich Goldberg and Steve Koehler also made appearances in the game.

Although Pendleton was scoreless in the second half, missing on one free throw and four field goal attempts, Chris Moore scored 16 of his 31 points to keep the Trojans from falling.

"They gambled in the second half with gimmick defenses and took Pendleton out of it," Raveling said, "but it opened it up for others."

USC's Ronnie Coleman opened the second half with a jumper to give USC a 19 point-lead, equalling the highest margin in the first half.

Edwards moved in for a lay-in and Moore followed with one of his own. ASU traded basket for basket and the Sun Devils would have gone to the locker room with a 53-48 lead, if this had been the first half.

Austin sank a field goal and two 3-point shots to move ASU within 11 points, 50-39.

But USC built a 21-point lead, 69-48, before the Sun Devils made another attempt to take control of the game.

With under three minutes to go, Williams was fouled on a lay-in and made the extra free throw to move ASU within 10, 87-77.

"I thought we could come back at the half," Schermerhorn said. "We're not used to being ahead in games. But we started our run a little too late."

UofA holds top billing in AP hoops poll

By The Associated Press

Arizona held the top spot for the third straight week as the top four teams in the final Associated Press college basketball poll were the same teams the NCAA seeded Nos. 1-4 in its tournament.

Georgetown and Illinois each moved up a spot for second and third, while Oklahoma, which lost 98-86 to Missouri in the Big Eight championship game, fell from second to fourth.

Arizona, 27-3, top seed in the West Regional, received 46 first-place votes and 1,219 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters after winning the Pac-10 championship with a 73-51 victory over Stanford.

Georgetown, the Big East champion after beating Syracuse 88-79 and top seed in the East, got 13 first-place votes and 1,155 points. The Hoyas are 26-4.

Illinois, 27-4, top seed in the Midwest after capping its season with an impressive 89-73 victory over Michigan, was named No. 1 on three ballots and had 1,121 points.

Oklahoma, 28-5, received 989 points. The rest of the Top Ten was North Carolina, Missouri, Syracuse, Indiana, Duke and Michigan.

North Carolina, the Atlantic Coast Conference champions after a 77-74 victory over Duke, and Missouri each jumped four places from last week. The Tar Heels, 27-7, had 976 points; The Tigers, 27-7, had 875.

Syracuse, 27-7, Indiana, 25-7, Duke, 24-7, and Michigan, 24-7, each dropped two places. The Orangemen had 863 points, and the Hoosiers had 834. Duke had 808 points, and Michigan had 666 to round out the Top Ten.

Seton Hall led the Second Ten for the second straight week, followed by Louisville, Stanford, Iowa, Nevada-Las Vegas, Florida State, West Virginia, Ball State, North Carolina State and Alabama.

The Crimson Tide, 23-7, was the only new member of the Top Twenty and the Southeastern Conference champions replaced St. Mary's, Calif., which dropped out despite not playing any games last week. The Gaels were defeated in the semifinals of the West Coast Athletic Conference tournament the previous weekend to fall to 25-4.

Fourteen teams were ranked in the preseason poll and each of the 17 regular-season polls, with Georgetown and Oklahoma the only two to remain in the Top Ten throughout the season.

Villanova, Georgia Tech, Florida, Ohio State and Temple were ranked in the preseason poll but didn't make the final.

Entry-Level Programmer/Analysts

Start At The Top. Then Work Your Way Up.

When you start with the world's leader in the computer and communications services industry, the only direction your career can go is up.

EDS is a place for achievers—people who make things happen. If you're interested in applying your talents in the information processing services industry, you won't find a better place to grow than EDS.

Consider the exciting options offered by our highly-respected developmental programs—nationally recognized as models for the industry. Our Systems Engineering Development (SED) Program provides technical challenges and opportunities to those interested in becoming programmer/analysts capable of solving complex business problems in a sophisticated technical environment.

Systems Engineering Development

This comprehensive development program provides the instruction in programming, systems analysis and business skills you need to become one of the best-prepared professionals in the field. To qualify, we ask for:

- ▶ A 4-year college degree (any major) with a minimum 3.0/4.0 overall GPA preferred
- ▶ Demonstrated technical aptitude
- ▶ Good communication and customer-interface skills
- ▶ A proven track record of achievement
- ▶ A willingness to relocate (nationwide)

Successful candidates will receive competitive salaries and excellent company-paid benefits—and a supportive environment where your contributions are recognized and rewarded.

Take the first step toward reaching your top career potential today.

EDS has immediate openings and is conducting on-campus interviews on March 14th and 15th. If you want to start at the top, contact the Placement Office for sign-up.

FIRST RESPONSE[®] is the only 5-minute, yes or no pregnancy test.

I just did it!
The FIRST RESPONSE
Pregnancy Test.

Well, what's the news?

Only
FIRST RESPONSE can tell you in 5 minutes!
Turns pink for pregnant. Stays white for not pregnant.
And it's so easy to see.

You knew,
in just 5 minutes!

Yup, and
when FIRST RESPONSE says yes or no, it's for sure. With other tests, you have to wait longer
for results.

So which is it,
yes or no?

Now, why do you think
I'm smiling?

You can always trust your
FIRST RESPONSE..
