By KYLE D. ENG
State Press

Bill Frieder took 20 minutes to decide where he would be coaching basketball next year.

It became official Wednesday morning in the University Activity Center when ASU Athletic Director Charles Harris announced that Frieder has become ninth head basketball coach in the 56-year history of the Sun Devil program.

It was revealed that Harris had phoned Frieder Tuesday afternoon, gave him a final offer and told him he had just 20 minutes to respond.

"Janice (Frieder's wife) and I got on the phone and talked it over," Frieder said. "She told me it was my decision. I felt that this was the best thing to do."

Frieder, 47, is currently at the helm of the University of Michigan, where he has guided his Wolverines to their fifth consecutive NCAA tournament appearance.

During his tenure with Michigan, Frieder's nine-year win-loss record of 191-87 made him the second-winningest coach in Wolverine history.

Frieder was named the Associated Press and Basketball Weekly coach of the year in 1985 after guiding Michigan to a 26-4 record and the first of his two consecutive Big-10 titles.

"I'm leaving a tremendous program, there's no doubt about that," Frieder said. "But I think in coming to ASU, I'm coming to a place with great facilities and a committed athletic department who wants to win."

Presidential candidates avoid key issues in forum

By MICHAEL VAN DYKE
State Press

Presidential candidates Paul Larson and Sal Rivera changed the direction of their campaigns Wednesday as both opted not to address heated campus issues in prepared speeches delivered at the second candidates forum.

Mark Escobedo was the only one of the three presidential hopefuls who chose to reaffirm his support for higher entrance requirements and minority recruitment and retention during his speech.

Activities vice president candidates J'Lein Liese and Charles "Spike" Lawrence maintained positions stated Tuesday that student input is essential to the effectiveness of programming from their office.

"I'm not going to sit back and wait for ideas about programming," Liese told about 45 students who attended the forum. "I'm going to go out and ask students what they want."

Lawrence said the door to his office "will always be open" and that he is ready to do a lot of listening to student input.

Executive vice presidential candidates Marco Spagnuolo and Mike Pressendo emphasized different aspects of their qualifications for office.

Pressendo said he has the experience necessary to lead the Senate.

Spagnuolo countered that he is the candidate to choose because he will advocate liberal spending of the senate's funds.

"Students don't get enough from the $999,000 ASASU is given each year from student tuition," Spagnuolo said.

Tami Willingham, running unopposed for campus affairs vice president, joined the other candidates in addressing the issue of freshmen retention and outlined plans to make students feel more comfortable on campus.

Willingham proposed more extensive orientation services and a freshmen survival kit.

Larson took a "philosophical" approach to his campaigning Wednesday by choosing to explain the meaning of his campaign slogan: "A politician does what is popular but a leader does what is right."

ASU agrees to offer divinity program

By SCOTT C. SECKEL
State Press

ASU has entered into an agreement with the School of Theology at Claremont College in California that will provide Arizona students an opportunity to earn a divinity degree, University officials announced Wednesday.

The agreement, described by Claremont President Richard Cain as the first of its kind, will allow students to begin theological studies at ASU and complete their degrees in Claremont, near Palm Springs.

According to Cain, divinity students will be able to earn up to 24 hours of a 96-hour degree at ASU.

Claremont was particularly attractive to ASU because of its reputation and proximity, Cain said.

Elizabeth Daniell, a graduate student in religious studies, said: "I think there's a need in the community for religious studies designed for people who want to go into the clergy."

Cain added that the arrangement also has "tremendous psychological value; theological study is very expensive."

Richard Martin, chairman of ASU's religious studies department, emphasized the empirical value of religious study.

"We study religion in many forms; as historians, art historians, musicians, architects, sociologists, anthropologists, lawyers. All these people are interested in religion," he said.

world/nation in brief

Discovery's energy problem repaired by Mission Control

HOUSTON (AP) — The lights came back on the Discovery space shuttle Wednesday after Mission Control apparently fixed a troublesome hydrogen tank and told the astronauts not to worry about conserving energy.

Discovery's five astronauts had switched off unnecessary lights and computers because of concern about erratic pressure readings from one of three hydrogen tanks aboard the shuttle. The tank, which helps supply electricity, was taken out of service Tuesday while engineers studied the problem.

The crew turned the tank back on Wednesday morning but used only one of its two heaters. Mission Control told the crew that early pressure readings showed the tank was working properly.

"That's good news to hear," replied Discovery commander Michael Coats.

The hydrogen is combined with oxygen in the fuel cells to produce electricity for shuttle systems, with water as a byproduct.

Ground controllers were concerned that without use of the third hydrogen tank, there may not be enough electricity to support a five-day flight, plus two days for contingencies.

But flight director Granvil Pennington said the problem seemed fixed, meaning Discovery is headed for a 6:34 a.m. PST landing time Saturday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., as planned.

"It appears that tank is now back in proper operation, which means that we're back on a nominal timeline," he said. Weather conditions for a Saturday morning landing, he added, "look very good."

Soviets unlikely to close technological gap with West

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Even if Mikhail S. Gorbachev's economic reforms succeed, the Soviet Union won't be able to bridge the technological gap with the West by the year 2000, said a NATO report released Wednesday.

The report, drawn up by U. S. experts, said Gorbachev's drive to restructure the economy will make some progress but not as much as the Soviets predict.

"Even if Gorbachev wins, the gains from new technology and enhanced labor productivity will not suffice to narrow the gap with the West during the remainder of this century," said the report, prepared for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Central Americans reach tentative agreement on peacekeeping plan

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Officials of five Central American nations Wednesday endorsed a plan to send U. N. peacekeepers to the region to ensure guerrillas don't launch cross-border raids.

The plan, which needs U. N. approval, calls for up to 100 military observers to monitor Central American border areas in speedboats, helicopters and all-terrain vehicles.

"We approved the document in the sense that we discussed the document, and there are no disagreements," Nicaragua's deputy foreign minister, Victor Hugo Tinoco, said after talks with military officers and foreign ministry officials from El Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Guatemala.

The head of the Honduran delegation, Ambassador Roberto Flores Bermudez, confirmed the agreement in principle had been reached.

Up to 11,000 Contra rebels have bases in Honduras from which they launch raids into Nicaragua.

In addition, El Salvador says leftist insurgents trying to overthrow the El Salvadoran government operate from clandestine bases in Honduras without that government's permission.

Court says churches 'bugged' by government can sue

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Churches have the right to sue over the federal government's electronic "bugging" of worship services in its pursuit of the Sanctuary movement, a federal appeals court ruled Wednesday.

But the 9th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals said four Arizona churches can maintain their suit only if they can show that the surveillance is continuing or is likely to resume. The Court said a federal judge in Phoenix must decide that question.

The 3-0 ruling appears to be "a great stride forward toward protecting worship services from electronic surveillance," said Peter Baird, a lawyer for the churches.

Justice Department spokeswoman Amy Brown declined comment.

The Court did not say whether government infiltration and secret recording of church services without a search warrant would violate freedom of religion or the constitutional ban on unreasonable searches.

That is also a key issue in the pending appeal of eight Sanctuary movement workers, including five members of the clergy, convicted in Tucson in 1986 of a variety of immigration charges, including illegally harboring and transporting Central American refugees.

Surveillance of the Arizona churches came to light in the criminal case with disclosures that paid government informants had secretly recorded worship services and Bible classes. A federal prosecutor said the surveillance was proper because the church was the site of a criminal conspiracy.

The criminal appeal, challenging the surveillance and some of the trial judge's rulings, was argued before another panel of the 9th Circuit last December and has not yet been decided.

The civil suit that led to Wednesday's ruling was filed by churches in Phoenix and Tucson which said informants working for the Immigration and Naturalization Service attended and secretly recorded their services between March 1984 and January 1985.

Once the surveillance was disclosed, church officials said, their attendance declined, a Bible study group was cancelled, and members became more reluctant to seek pastoral counseling and less open in their prayers and confessions.

The suit sought a ruling that the surveillance was improper and a court order banning it in the future.

U. S. District Judge Charles Hardy dismissed the suit without a trial, saying that even if all the allegations were true, the churches as organizations had not been harmed. But the appeals court disagreed.

"When congregants are chilled from participating in worship activities, when they refuse to attend worship services because they fear the government is spying on them and taping their every utterance... we think a church suffers organizational injury because its ability to carry out its ministries has been impaired," said Judge William Norris in his opinion.

He also said a 1972 Supreme Court ruling, dismissing a suit against an alleged system of domestic political surveillance by the Army, does not bar the churches' case because they, unlike the groups suing the Army, were specific targets of the surveillance.

Minor majors

Frivolous fields of study waste of space at University

Brian Tassinari
Asst. Opinion Editor

ASU has got a major problem. Or more precisely a problem with its majors. We've got some pretty silly classes and majors at ASU. It would seem our priorities are a little skewed when home economics education is being offered while students can't get into English 101.

I'm sure everybody is familiar with the news reports that surface from time to time stating that Johnny in college doesn't know where Great Britain is or that Russia and the Soviet Union are not the same. Often he can't add or write, either.

Given the peril that our education system is in and the budget constraints that ASU faces, why are we offering majors like home economics education?

While engineers, actors, architects and philosophers follow in the footsteps of Archimedes, Shakespeare, Imhotep and Plato these folks follow who? Betty Crocker?

The first class a would-be home economics student takes is HEE 153, Analysis of Home Equipment. The class

description in the ASU catalog reads: "Equipment for the home. Principles of construction, operation selection and effective use of equipment. Two lectures, three hours lab. May include field trips."

Is it really important for the University to have a class on how to use a refrigerator?

What do they do in the lab — make ice? In all fairness there are some good things that you can learn from this class. For example, when you jam your bagel into the toaster at 7:00 in the morning and it sticks to the heating coil and burns, don't rescue your breakfast with a butter knife.

This would be bad. Useful information but hardly worth its own class.

For the brave souls who get through HEE 153, there's HEE 453 which is, you guessed it, Advanced Analysis of Home Equipment (Frost Free or not, the modern dilemma.) The prerequisite for this upperdivision class is HEE 153 or "instructor approval."

I guess if you have extensive refrigerator and toaster experience you can bypass 153.

For those hell bent on frivolity but not attracted to home economics, ASU offers the entire Department of Leisure Studies.

Leisure studies at ASU ... isn't that redundant?

The department offers areas of emphasis in outdoor recreation, therapeutic recreation, tourism and commercial recreation, urban recreation and youth agency administration/American humanics.

My favorite class in this department is REC 120, Social Psychology of Play — "An introduction to the psychological, social and cultural foundations of play and leisure behavior."

I always knew there was something missing from my childhood — when I was on the see-saw at Stage Fort Park I didn't know the psychological, social and cultural foundations of what I was doing.

To the professors of leisure studies I would like to ask the following questions.

Given the maxim "Publish or Perish" do you actively engage in research? And if so, what exactly does a leisure studies person research?

If you're short of ideas I've got a research proposal that could vault you to prominence in the leisure studies academic community. I call it "The Sociological implications of the Coors Beer can redesign on the Post-Reagan Sports Fan." Think it over — it could be big.

Question two is, when there are faculty meetings do they make you bring the donuts?

Finally, how can a young parent tell if his child is precocious in the leisure studies field. I mean, if a kid plays with Legos all day maybe he'll be an engineer. If he always organizes the hide-n-seek games maybe he'll make a good politician. But how can one tell if a child is marked to excel in the field of leisure studies — does he have more fun than the other kids?

I wonder what a leisure studies think tank would look like. Probably lots of Lazyboy chairs, plenty of brews in the frig (they could talk to a home-ec graduate if they have trouble with this one) and ESPN on the tube.

The point of this is simple. In light of the fact that ASU can't afford to offer enough sections of important classes like English and foreign languages, we should eliminate some of the more frivolous classes and majors at the University.

This isn't to say that there is no need for people in this world to teach home economics or to be familiar with the leisure habits of Americans.

What is true is that it's not worth a separate major.

We would be better served if people interested in these fields got a more general education in history or the arts.

Our society is getting more complex every day and it is very easy to respond to this complexity by increasingly turning to specialization. But by doing this we risk losing sight of the forest for the trees.

If we teach people how to think, not what to think, they will be able to do their job or anything well.

Sure it's great to be able to whip up a Duncan Hines Double Chocolate cake, but don't you have to be able to read the directions on the box?

Maybe not. Maybe that's why God invented frozen food.

Disarming citizens not the answer

Editor:

Your publication's recent commentary and editorial cartoons referring to the firearms control controversy are misdirected and in poor taste. The answer is not to disarm the responsible citizens of this nation but to protect them. In my opinion, this can best be accomplished by first dealing with many underlying social problems such as child abuse, drug and alcohol abuse and mental illness.

For the record, I favor firearm control and a mandatory waiting period prior to the purchase of a firearm. But I am not in favor of restricting the type of firearms available for purchase by the general public.

'Agribusiness' exploits animals

Editor:

While applauding Brian Tassinari's condemnation of the "sport" of cockfighting, I must say that he has greatly misrepresented the facts concerning the processing of chickens for human consumption. He states, "When a bird takes a dip in the hot-oil Jacuzzi at Kentucky Fried Chicken it's because someone is hungry. Killing the bird is a means to an end, the end being food. People have to eat. The birds are dispatched of as quickly and painlessly as possible."

This is comfortable belief, but the facts do not support such a conclusion. To begin, no one "needs to eat" a chicken. From a nutritional standpoint, there are no benefits in doing so that are not also easily derived from a vegetarian diet. In fact, the use of chemicals to hasten production (over 1,000 drug products and chemicals are used by poultry and livestock producers) hardly makes a chicken a nutritional bargain.

From a humanitarian standpoint, Mr.

Tassinari is perhaps unaware that, aside from the very occasional "free range" chicken, the birds are housed in such crowded conditions that dead animals have no space to fall; since feeding and watering is automated, workers enter the building only once daily, to remove dead bodies. The birds cannot walk, stretch their wings or build a nest. Daylight is never experienced, and broken wings, legs and necks are common. Approximately 15 percent of these animals die solely from the stress of their confinement.

Despite what agribusiness would like us to believe, the six billion animals (chickens, cows, pigs, sheep, etc.) eaten by Americans each year do not laze about on the farm before they are killed. These animals, as a rule, do not see the outdoors, walk about or even have space enough to turn around. They are mass produced factory product, and their lives are nothing but misery, exploitation and a gross distortion of nature.

Schubert dead wrong

Editor:

It should come as no great surprise that Mr. Schubert is dead wrong — again. Those individuals who actually read Pat Buchanan's column in the Republic know the true story, but I think it's important everyone else know as well. In his column of March 14, Mr. Schubert implies that Buchanan supports Khomeini "in his campaign of death against . . . Rushdie," and that he is intolerant of the First Amendment ("One wonders why Buchanan supports the First Amendment, even grudgingly.") A full reading of the Buchanan article lays these arguments to waste.

First, Buchanan defends the safety of Rushdie. Before Buchanan refers to Rushdie as a "literary vandal," he clearly states that "Rushdie in hiding is an object of our sympathy." I wonder why that was not printed in Schubert's column. Buchanan goes on to state that "we do not give up Mr. Rushdie, or his rights. The Ayatollah can, in his own apt phrase, go 'to hell.'" I wonder why Schubert left that last sentence out, and ignored the last words of the first sentence. From this article, Schubert draws the conclusion that Buchanan thinks "by comparison, Salmon Rushdie deserves to be gunned down by Khomeini's assassins." Am I missing something? Or, is it because anything written by a conservative author must be threatening to free speech, intolerant or in some other way bad?

Mr Buchanan's point is clear. Although we must support Rushdie's rights, "that does not mean we celebrate what he did." Neo-Nazis are allowed to publish books calling for the death of all Jews, white and black supremacists are allowed to call for racial bigotry and satanic cults are allowed to write books on the benefits of dedicating one's life to Satan. We allow these things to be written, however disgusting they are, because we are a free society. But, do we also celebrate the fact that these books exist?

I would love to see the State Press reprint Mr. Schubert's column next to the Buchanan column. Then the entire campus could see why Ed Schubert loves the First Amendment so much; It allows him to make false arguments and take the words of others out of context.

Pro-choice manifesto?

Editor:

The pro-choice proponent who commented in the March 14 letters was so right! Who do these fascist pro-lifers think they are, the mouthpieces of God?

It is only common sense that a woman should be allowed to remove from herself a piece of her own tissue that appears in her uterus through no fault of her own. This is especially true when one realizes that this tissue could possibly later be accepted by society as human and add to the alarming expansion in global population. In all likelihood, it would not enjoy a high-level quality of life and perhaps even be tormented by its producers. Worse yet, it could be physically or mentally substandard and become an extreme burden upon society. To avoid such events, I propose that a federal committee be established which would devise a formula upon which quality of life should be determined. Any piece of tissue which could not meet these standards would be required by law to be removed from its mother-tissue at no expense in a government sponsored clinic. The tissue could then be purchased from the donor by those involved in scientific research. Obviously, that tissue would command excellent prices in such a market. In addition, I suggest that yearly human viability examinations be administered to all members of society by a Board for Excellence in Living. The human status of anyone failing this simple exam would be revoked by the Board out of sheer concern for society at large, and the tissues of this defunct being would be donated by the state to some benevolent human studies firm.

This system will accomplish all that we pro-choice advocates have pushed for all along. There will be no more back-alley fetal tissue removals, no more child abuse, no more difficulties with the aged, proper fluctuations in the population, far fewer mental and physical diseases, a bolstered economy, and great advances in medical research.

Now, as these fascist, so-called pro-lifers disappear into the jails in which they have always belonged, I ask you to put pressure on your legislators to ponder and pass my proposal for a better, new society — the proposal which is advocated by all of us pro-choice proponents — the true pro-lifers.

Pro-life men 'scared' by women's rights

Editor:

As a supporter of the pro-choice movement I would like to thank Mike Ritter for his enlightening description of the pro-choice woman in his cartoon of March 2. By depicting the pro-choice person as a woman, however, he has omitted the large and active male segment of the population who have taken a stand on women's rights on this issue.

And that's what this issue is really all about — women's rights.

It is a well-known and recognized fact that men have held the balance of power in this world since time began. Men were designated as the hunter-gatherers because "bread-winning" in the time of the Neanderthal required brawn, not brains, and for that men were well-qualified.

Time and technology have not done a great deal to alter that.

This country's Constitution was drafted by monied, educated, white males who obviously saw themselves as the cream of the crop, with little regard for blacks or women who were relegated to the back of the buckboard. Perhaps they should have stuck to hunting.

America is still largely a patriarchal society, the majority of our lawmakers and other political and economic leaders being men who still have a relatively tunneled vision of women's role in society. The old cliché "barefoot and pregnant" is an ideal whose time has not yet passed.

Now that women have gained complete control over their reproductive systems and traded in their house slippers for pumps, men are getting nervous. The balance of power is beginning to be more balanced and a lot of men don't like it.

Men have always been in control of the affairs that affect us all. Part of that had to do with education. It was assumed that men needed to be formally educated. Women, however, needed only to know how to cook, sew, clean and deliver babies.

In his book "The Dangerous Sex: The Myth of Feminine Evil" Hoffman R. Hays tells us that women were excluded from education using the argument that "women lacked such capacity (to learn) by nature" and that "she was tried up, psychosomatically, with childbearing, so that any diversion of her blood to her brain would divert it from where she needed it most — her reproductive organs."

For too long we women have been excluded from making choices that had direct bearing upon us as persons. Far too often we have had to petition men for our rights, such as suffrage; rights due us as equal and full members of the human race living in the same democracy under the same Constitution.

Whenever I see a man carrying a pro-life placard or manning a pro-life table on Cady Mall, or holding up a poster of an aborted fetus, I become angry. These men are sending out a message loud and clear that says, "We're scared!"

I get angry because these men know nothing about becoming pregnant at 17 and having no alternative except a forced marriage, as in my case.

These men know nothing about the agonies of carrying a baby for nine months and delivering that child. Nor do they know anything of the the agony of making a choice for abortion.

No, Mike, our problem is not menstruation. It is frustration. Menstruation we have learned to live with. But the frustration of constantly having to fight for our rights and having to wrest them away from dominant males who feel threatened by equality, we will never get used to nor learn to live with that.

And so, Mike, that's what it is really all about. It's about rights and equality for all living, productive members of our society. It is about choices. Choices that only women can make because only women can bear children.

And you can bet if men could get pregnant, abortion

Abortion on demand 'unethical'

Editor:

The entire abortion issue rises and falls on precisely one question: is a babe in the womb a person? The one thing that we must not say is that a woman has a right to an abortion because we don't know when the fetus becomes a person. That would leave us in the position of saying abortion "might or might not" be killing a person.

To tell if a babe in the womb is a person we will have to ask some questions: When are the five major divisions of the adult brain delineated? When can a fetus' brainwaves be detected by EEG? When is the fetus alive by standard hospital criteria for determining life and death in adults? Current medical information indicates that all these criteria are met in the fetus by the sixth (sometimes fifth) week after conception, which is to say that as far as modern medical science can determine a babe at six weeks after conception is a person.

Abortions are not usually performed before the fifth or sixth week after conception for the basic reason that most pregnancies aren't usually confirmed until the fourth week or so, and then the appointment must be made. That implies that currently almost all abortions are performed on fetuses that are already people. That draws us to a conclusion: the current state of abortion on demand is unethical. I ask you: as reasonable human beings, what should our response be?

would have always been legal.

We pro-choice people are not so easy to spot as Mr. Ritter would have us believe by his cartoon. We are not as stereotypical as the pro-lifers. We come from all walks of life. We are rich, poor, young, middle-aged, elderly. We are single. We are wives. We are mothers. We are men who care about women and their rights to make choices about their bodies.

We may not all carry banners, but we all have the right to vote. We may not all stand on boxes, but we are all educated. We may not all believe that the issue is about power, but that abortion is a case of women's rights is not to be denied.

Opponent of El Salvador's government to speak in MU

By MICHAEL LEWIS
State Press

A representative of the leading political and military group opposing the current government in El Salvador will present her view of the upcoming Salvadoran national election tonight at the MU.

Mercedes Salgado, 27, who has been a member of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front/Democratic Revolutionary Front (FMLN/FDR) for the past eight years, will speak in the Cochise Room at 7:30 p.m.

Salgado is a Salvadoran citizen living in San Francisco. She said she works as a Washington lobbyist and speaks about the the crisis in El Salvador to university students.

"This is a decisive moment in Salvadoran history," Salgado said in an interview Tuesday. "The (U.S.) people need to be alert of what is going to happen in the next couple of months."

The FLMN/FDR, which is in the midst of a major political-military offensive against the Salvadoran government, is boycotting the national elections scheduled for this coming Sunday.

The opposition group says the elections are a farcical effort by the current government under President Jose Napoleon Duarte to create a facade of Democracy and escalate the repression of the FLMN/FDR.

"We respect the elections, but we don't believe we have a democracy in El Salvador when you are killed for not voting or for just being opposed to the government," Salgado said.

Salgado said the FLMN/FDR has proposed to postpone the upcoming elections for six months from March until September.

During that period the government could work together with the FLMN/FDR, as well as religious and humanitarian groups to ensure safer elections for the Salvadoran citizens, she said.

Steve DonCaster, a member of the Phoenix area Central American Solidarity Committee, which is sponsoring Salgado's visit, said the ARENA party is expected to win the election. The ARENA party has been closely linked to right-wing Death Squads used for terrorism, he said.

DonCaster said the FLMN/FDR has stated they will initiate offensive military action against the ARENA party immediately after the election to guard against further repression by the government.

"The expectation is that the FLMN/FDR will start an all-out war against the ARENA party," he said.

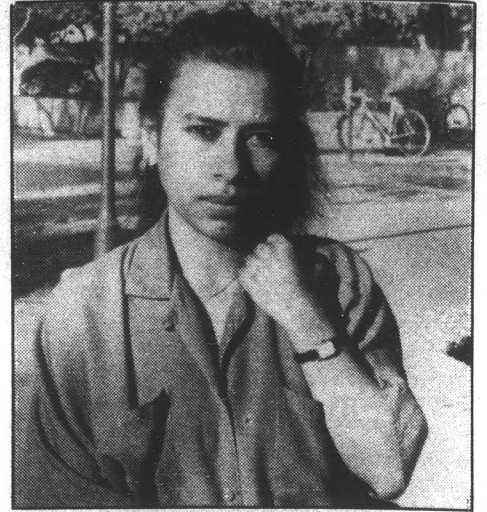

DonCaster said the ARENA party also is expected to begin military action against the opposition group.

"All hell will break loose."

With the possibility for this unprecedented military escalation after the election, El Salvador is a ticking time bomb, DonCaster said.

Salgado said most Americans don't know the role the U. S. government is playing in the Salvadoran situation.

Salgado said she speaks from personal experience about the terrorism and repression subjected to those who oppose the Salvadoran government. As a teenager working for school reforms, she was forced to leave home permanently when national guard groups repeatedly interrogated her family.

Salgado said the situation is desperate for the people of El Salvador. Sixty percent of the people are illiterate, there are only 14 hospitals for five million people and salaries have been frozen since 1984, she said.

Show to feature career attire

By STACY HAYMES
State Press

For graduating students uncertain about what to wear in a job interview, ASU's American Society of Women Accountants is hosting a Professional Fashion Transitions for Men and Women fashion show and luncheon Saturday.

Kathy Rodgers, an ASU graduate and a fashion consultant, will present the seminar-type show for men and women to help them develop their professional wardrobe. The show is at 11 a.m. in the MU, Room 202.

Students are invited to the luncheon to learn how to make a transition from their school wardrobe to a career wardrobe, Rodgers said.

"We will be talking about how to dress for an interview and building a wardrobe," Rodgers said.

Rodgers, who will be giving tips on personal grooming and how to look professional, said applicants should research the company with whom they are interviewing, find out its image and dress conservatively."

In 1980 Rodgers founded "Image of Success", a professional image consulting firm. The company offers individual consulting in fashion, personal shopping service and individual color analysis.

The seminar will focus on what colors should be worn during an interview, the importance of accessories and the proper body language that should be used during an interview.

"They should build their wardrobe on their interviewing outfit," Rodgers said.

"Men should wear a nice suit in gray, navy or pinstripe with a solid colored shirt in either white, light blue or acru. They should dress conservatively and make sure their shoes and socks match."

For the women, Rodgers will be showing what trends are still appropriate and how to be creative with an individual look. She said women should stick to basic colors and dress with quality and taste.

Rodgers suggests an applicant have new or excellently polished shoes; manicured, clean hands; and neat, pressed clothes. They should have good posture, a warm smile and a nice handshake.

Kathy Rodgers, an ASU graduate and a fashion consultant, will present a seminar-type show on Saturday to help men and women develop their professional wardrobe.

"The way you look can be a determining factor over whether or not you fit in the company."

Reservations for the $10 tickets should be made by Friday. For information and reservations call 998-4179.

Controversial officials replaced by Mofford

PHOENIX (AP) — Gov. Rose Mofford has replaced two controversial members of the state Lottery Commission and found a new job for a long-time associate on the state Racing Commission.

She also named former judge Bruce Meyerson to replace former U. S. Attorney Michael D. Hawkins on the Appellate Court Appointments Commission, which makes recommendations to the governor for appointments to the Supreme Court and Court of Appeals.

Rose Mofford

Hawkins represented Mofford when she was under investigation by the Maricopa County Attorney's office over financial disclosures and expenditures of state money last year.

The governor filled the Racing Commission post held by Vern E. Glasser with a long-time associate, former state Liquor Superintendent Lloyd Robertson.

Robertson's term will expire Jan. 17, 1994. George Robles of Tucson and Gary D. Curtis of Safford were named to the Lottery Commission in place of L. W. "Budge" Ruffner and H. E. "Curley" Moore, both of Prescott.

Curtis, whose term will run through Jan. 20, 1993, was named to succeed Ruffner, a Prescott newspaperman who resigned in protest after Mofford named Moore to the commission.

Robles, whose term will expire Jan. 17, 1994, was appointed to succeed Moore, a former Yavapai County Sheriff and long-time Mofford associate who resigned from the commission in order to seek work with the state Liquor Department, an agency that could pay him more.

Named to the Commission on Trial Court Appointments for Pima County was Terry Lynn Chandler of Tucson, whose term will expire Jan. 18, 1993. She succeeds Stephen Weiss.

Tom Henz of Phoenix was named to succeed Mary Kathryn Wisdom on the Commission on Trial Court Appointments for Maricopa County. His term runs through Jan. 18, 1993.

James V. Whitten of Tucson was named to the Industrial Commission, succeeding Grover Vernon McCracken. Whitten's term expires Jan. 17, 1994.

Samuel J. Benedict of Casa Grande was appointed to the state Livestock Board, succeeding Edward H. Bricker Jr. Benedict's term runs through Jan. 17, 1994.

Tom R. Clark, a Tucson Democrat, was named to succeed Lawrence Hecker in a term ending this July 1 on the Board of Medical Examiners.

Carolyn Wazlak, a Tucson Democrat, was named to succeed Nancy Reif for a term ending Jan. 18, 1993, on the state Board of Dental Examiners.

Frank Sackton, a Tempe Republican, was reappointed to the Regulatory Review Council.

The nominations are subject to Senate confirmation.

Judge in Navaho trial retains position

WINDOW ROCK (AP) — Two Navajo Supreme Court justices Wednesday rejected a request to disqualify Chief Justice Tom Tso from hearing cases involving the struggle for control of the nation's largest tribe.

Geoffrey Standing Bear, an attorney for Chairman Peter MacDonald, asked for Tso's disqualification on Monday. He alleged that Tso had sided against MacDonald by swearing in Leonard Haskie and Irving Billy, the Tribal Council's latest nominees for interim chairman and vice chairman, respectively.

Meanwhile, Mark Aspey, an assistant U. S. attorney in Phoenix, declined to comment on a Navajo committee's refusal to release tribal financial documents to federal investigators. The documents were sought for presentation to a grand jury.

Tribal officials said the investigators wanted a printout of suppliers and vendors who had received $5,000 or more from the tribe since January 1987. The council's Advisory Committee ordered the books closed to the investigators.

Aspey said the government might take action to force the tribe to release the records. However, he said any such move would be closed to the public because it involved a grand jury.

In another development, dissidents who form a majority of the 88-member council said the winter meeting would not resume until Friday.

The winter meeting, which began in early February, has been extended because of dissidents' attempts to oust MacDonald, who has been accused of official corruption.

Standing Bear claimed in his motion for disqualification that MacDonald had lost confidence "in the ability of this court to render an impartial decision or opinion in this case."

Tso had removed himself from the case, leaving associate justices Homer Bluehouse and Raymond D. Austin to explain their 2-0 decision.

They reasoned that Tso's swearing-in of Haskie was "more symbolic than legal recognition."

"We of the court do not see the action of Judge Tso swearing in the interim chairman and vice chairman as being illegal because it is part of the regular duties of a judge to swear in chapter officials at all levels of Navajo tribal government," they wrote.

It was the second legal setback within three weeks for MacDonald. The high court recently threw out his suit contesting the council's placing him on indefinite leave.

In that decision, the justices ruled that the council cannot be sued over its legislative functions and that MacDonald should not have sought out his brother-in-law in Kayenta as the judge to hear his request for an injunction.

However, they did not directly address the legality of what amounted to the council's suspension of the chairman.

Helicopter investigators consider weather factor

TUCSON (AP) — Air Force investigators looking into a helicopter crash that killed 15 servicemen are considering factors such as weather, maintenance and weight but have ruled out a suspect rotor fastener, a spokesman said.

The CH-3E "Jolly Green Giant" helicopter carrying 11 Green Berets engaged in desert training and four Air Force crewmen, crashed Sunday night in the desert 25 miles from Davis-Monthan Air Force Base.

Capt. Carlos Roque, a Davis-Monthan spokesman, said Tuesday that use of night-vision goggles, which have been implicated in numerous military helicopter crashes, have been eliminated as a possible cause.

Investigators also ruled out the main rotor shaft nut, a fastener about a foot in diameter that holds the main rotor head to the helicopter frame, Maj. Fran Turnstall said.

It had been checked two days before the crash as part of a program to inspect more than 300 CH-3Es and similar helicopters belonging to the Air Force, Navy and Coast Guard for defective nuts, spokesmen said.

Turnstall said it was removed, inspected and found to be adequate. But another Pentagon spokesman, Air Force Lt. Col. Darrel Hayes, said the nut had been replaced Friday.

Degree

"The Claremont Theology School is a very good academic institution that will enrich our offerings in this area."

The tie between a private theology school — Claremont is owned by the Methodist Church — and a public university will not cause any conflict between church and state, said Martin.

"We at ASU, of course, aren't in the business of preparing people for pastoral careers; that would neither be appropriate nor in the interests of a public institution," he said. "What we are interested in, and what's very beneficial to ASU, is our study of religion."

Daniell said that secular schools are "not equipped" to offer a divinity degree.

"One of the reasons religious studies were started in secular schools was because theology students saw a need for religious studies from the secular perspective," she said.

"I think it will make a very interesting dialogue between the two types of schools."

Classes taught by Claremont professors will be held at All Saints Catholic Newman Center, just across the street from campus on the corner of University Drive and College Street.

Larson said he chose the slogan because it best represents the difference between himself and his opponents.

"ASU doesn't need a politician, ASU needs a leader," Larson said. "I am the right leadership."

But Escobedo continued to keep the issues close at hand in his speech.

"There is a problem of retention of students at this University," Escobedo said. "Arizona doesn't adequately provide the necessary financial aid to keep students in school, and that needs to be changed."

Escobedo said he would lobby the Arizona Legislature to make sure ASU will receive the funding it deserves.

"I have in mind action now, not just talk," Escobedo said.

But under questioning from the audience, the candidates each identified a different campus issue as the most pressing.

Larson said as president he would focus on undergraduate issues including availability of courses and class sizes.

"This institution is here to instruct students," Larson said. "If they can't provide quality instruction why are we here?"

Escobedo said he is concerned about the 50 percent dropout rate of freshmen and plans to lobby legislators for funding to help keep economically disadvantaged students in school.

Rivera named improvement of the "broad quality of the student experience" as his chief concern.

"I want to make sure that every area affecting the student is handled and that no issues are neglected," Rivera said.

Survey: in-state college costs on the rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — College costs rose much faster than inflation for in-state undergraduate students attending state colleges and universities, with the average hike 6.3 percent last fall, says a survey released Wednesday.

The 1987-88 hike surpassed the 1986-87 boost of 5.4 percent, according to the annual survey by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities and the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

The latest increase also outpaced the 1988 inflation rate, which was 4.4 percent, according to the Consumer Price Index.

The average price of full-time attendance in fall 1988, including tuition, fees, room and board, was $4,397 for in-state undergrads, the survey found. That's $302 more than they paid in 1987.

The authors said the increasing charges reflect "a shifting balance in the share of costs paid by students, their parents and public resources."

The state with the highest rate of increase was Oklahoma, where the Legislature has mandated tuition hikes of 15 to 20 percent for each of the next four years, said AASCU spokesman Mike Mulnix. "It's still fairly reasonable. The average will be right around $2,000 a year for tuition and fees" this year, Mulnix said. "But percentage-wise, it's a large increase."

Pros, cons of ValTrans scheduled for debate

By RICHARD A. VIGIL
State Press

The Young Democrats of ASU are sponsoring a debate on Proposition 300 today at noon on the Student Services Building lawn.

Arguing against the ValTrans proposal will be George Chasse, the chairman of Voters Against Senseless Transit. Former Associated Students of ASU president Chris Cumiskey, representing Residents for Safe and Efficient Transportation, will argue in favor of the proposal.

A moderator has not yet been named for the hour-long debate.

The ValTrans proposal would increase the state sales tax by one-half cent, using the money to expand public transportation systems in the Valley.

The revenues generated from the sales tax increase would be used by the Regional Public Transportation Authority to buy buses and expand bus service to other areas of the Valley.

The heart of the ValTrans proposal is a 103-mile automated light rail system linking downtown Phoenix with other parts of the Valley, including ASU.

Proponents of the proposal argue that by reducing the number of automobiles on Phoenix's freeways and streets, ValTrans would make driving easier and improve the quality of the Valley's air.

Opponents argue that the decrease in the number of cars will not be significant enough to alter the amount of air pollution, and that the proposal is not worth its $8.4 billion price tag.

The issue goes before Maricopa County voters in a special election March 28.

House tentatively agrees on key amendments

PHOENIX (AP) — A House committee reached tentative agreement Wednesday on key amendments to an omnibus auto-insurance bill, including an immediate 15 percent rate rollback.

The full House, meanwhile, acted on legislation allowing sawdust on restaurant floors and regulating adult "peep shows," while the Senate passed an open-enrollment bill opposed by Democrats, including Gov. Rose Mofford.

The Senate also confirmed several of Mofford's appointments and killed a bill that would have established a commission to set salaries for county officials.

A Senate committee approved a mid-year budget-balancing package including more than $64 million in supplemental spending for this fiscal year and almost $20 million in budget cut.

The House Banking and Insurance Committee spent nearly four hours debating amendments to the omnibus insurance bill sponsored by Rep. Karen Mills, R-Glendale, the committee chairman, then recessed with more than a dozen proposed amendments still pending.

Along with the 15 percent rollback, the committee adopted an optional no-fault plan and a provision that would give the state Department of Insurance authority to approve rates in advance.

House Majority Leader Jim Meredith, R-Phoenix, called those three amendments "the guts of the bill."

"I will predict that we can close this thing out within an hour once we start a meeting tomorrow (Thursday)," Meredith said. "I think everything will go rather quickly. I know a lot of the amendments are just technical."

The committee rejected a 20 percent rollback proposed by Rep. Sandra Kennedy, D-Phoenix, by a 9-6 partyline vote, then approved the 15 percent rollback on a voice vote.

Meredith predicted that the rollback would be a part of whatever bill finally is approved by the full House.

"I don't know what the Senate's going to do, that's a different animal over there," Meredith said. "But as far as the House membership goes, I can predict that that 15 percent will stay on through the House."

Mills championed the optional no-fault plan. The proposal would not go into effect until after the 1990 general election because it would require a constitutional amendment that must be approved by the voters.

The prior-approval provision would give the Department of Insurance authority it now lacks to approve insurance rates before they take effect. The department currently is barred from ruling that any rate is excessive so long as there is competition among auto-insurance companies.

The committee rejected 8-6 a mandatory seat-belt proposal that Rep. Bill English said would have helped hold down insurance-company costs.

In other action Wednesday, the House passed 57-2 a bill regulating adult "peep show" businesses and voted 54-5 to allow restaurants to have sawdust on their floors, a practice currently prohibited by health regulations. Both measures were sent to the Senate.

The House voted 33-26 to kill a bill that would have allowed the state Board of Regents to cancel payment on checks that are not cashed within two years.

The open-enrollment bill, passed by the Senate on a 16-12 partyline vote, now goes to the House. The measure would let parents send their children to other school districts tuition-free, so long as the districts agree and someone pays the student's transportation costs.

A bill that would have set up a commission to determine salaries for county officials failed in the Senate. Fifteen senators opposed the measure, while 14 supported it.

"I think everyone has forgotten what this bill was designed to do, and that was to take the monkey off our backs," said Rep. Pat Wright, a Glendale Republican who voted for the measure.

Players' response in favor of Frieder

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

The ASU basketball players revealed signs of relief Wednesday when Bill Frieder was named the new head coach.

The Sun Devils had been unaware who would be directing them next season until Athletic Director Charles Harris announced Frieder would be leaving his post at Michigan to coach at ASU.

Frieder said he did not have time to talk with the ASU athletes because he wanted to get back to Atlanta to meet with the Michigan players who were preparing for first-round NCAA competition against Xavier in the Southeast Regional.

However, he said he would call all of the Sun Devil players, because there is a lot of work to do.

"There's no question the program is down right now," Frieder said. "This is a tough job, I'm not going to lie to you. We've got a lot of work to do. Our goal is to put a competitive team on the floor and see progress each year."

Many of the ASU players did not know Frieder personally, but were aware of his reputation.

"I don't know a lot about him, but I'm being positive about the whole situation," Lewis said. "He's had success at Michigan. I'm looking forward to a successful season next year, and I think he can give it to us."

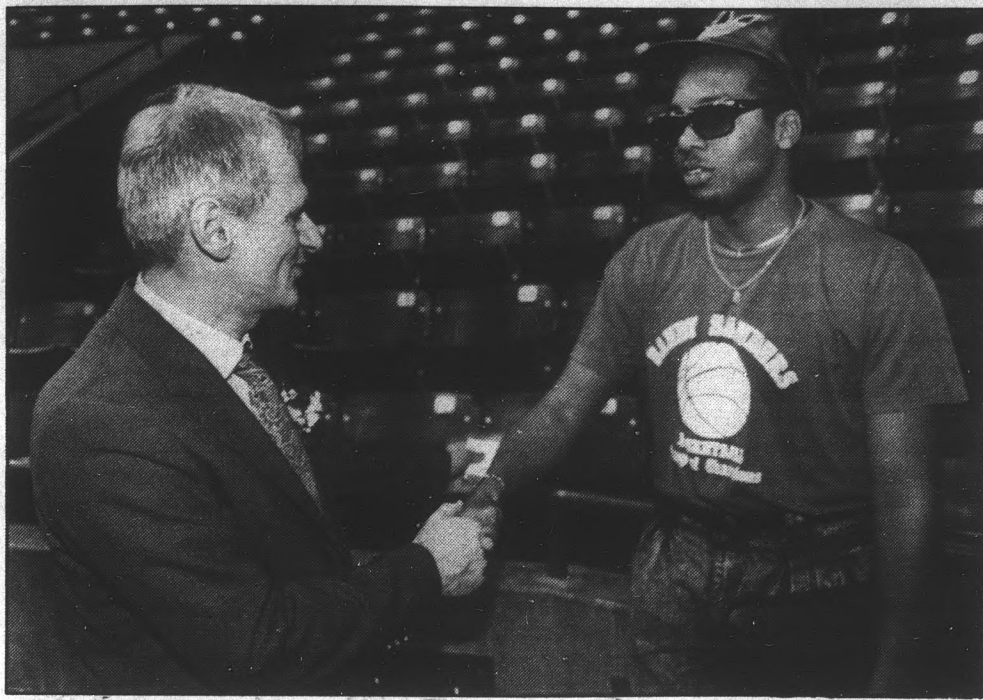

Frieder reassured everyone at the press conference that he could lead the Sun Devils to victory.

"I'm an extremely hard worker and I have confidence in myself that we're going to do things the right way and get the program turned around. But it's not going to happen overnight."

Junior guard Tarence Wheeler said a successful coach at one school provides no guarantees that the wins will carry over to another. But Frieder's experience should be an asset in reviving the ASU men's basketball program.

"Being around a lot of talented players (at Michigan), he knows what it takes to win — that's the key," Wheeler said. "He is stepping into a good situation and he is giving to the cause."

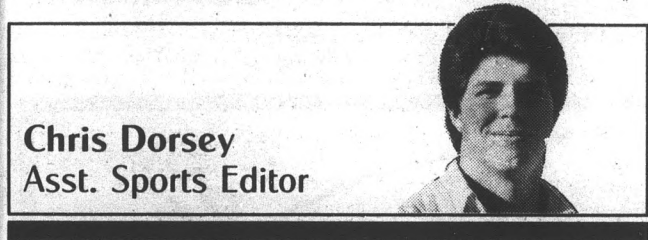

Junior forward Mark Becker said the ASU basketball program is on the rise and

Harris' decision beneficial for ASU hoops

Chris Dorsey
Asst. Sports Editor

I think it is a pretty safe bet to say Bo Schembechler is a very upset individual.

But he is 1,500 miles away and at this moment I don't really care and I have a feeling most of you don't either.

You all know the story by now. Schembechler's boy, Bill Frieder, has opted to take on the basketball coaching position at Arizona State.

This turn of events has left Michigan's athletic director (Schembechler) dazed, stunned and way out in left field.

Frieder accepted the Sun Devils' offer this morning in front of the local media, pep band, cheerleaders and several ASU players.

He made the announcement with a sparkle in his eye and a glow of confidence and poise. There is no doubt about it, Mr. Frieder is eager about becoming the head coach. However, in a way the man does feel bad about deserting his team two days before the NCAA tournament.

That is the reason why Schembechler is flying off the handle and heckling Frieder for fleeing with no warning whatsoever. But Bo — relax. Take this situation with a grain of salt.

Frieder attempted to contact his superior before flying out to Tempe, but Schembechler could not be reached. He has an unlisted number and his office number has been changed.

The end result of this dilemma: Frieder will not be sitting on the bench when his old team takes the court against Xavier, Friday. Schembechler got his two cents in: Wolverine assistant Steve Fisher will be the man guiding Michigan through the tournament this year.

Schembechler's response, "I don't want somebody from Arizona State coaching a Michigan team. A Michigan man is going to coach Michigan."

Fair enough. Even Frieder expected the worse as he told the media in his press conference Tuesday morning. Schembechler called his own press conference an hour after the new ASU coach stepped off the podium.

Welcome to the world of college basketball Bo; this stuff happens quite a bit. But this time, the ball is in your court.

There are going to be doubters, sure — why not. He has not stepped onto the UAC floor to coach yet, but to announce his decision to coach. Upon his arrival, the media attacked him for leaving prior to the tournament, which in most cases is a no-no.

But this decision is not affecting the Sun Devils in a bad way, for the most part it is a step in the direction this program needs to become a dominant force in the Pac-10.

This is where Charles Harris (ASU's athletic director) and I agree. When asked why he pushed Frieder into making a rushed decision and not being too concerned with Michigan, Harris replied that his top priority was to the Sun Devils.

"Quite frankly, my obligation is to do the best thing for Arizona State, he said."

I'm sure this statement will probably offend a few people, but what school do you attend? Always remember everyone cannot be happy.

Michigan fans in Atlanta will be welcoming Frieder with open arms. They will be holding the knife, with which he stabbed them in the back, in their hands hoping to return the gesture.

The players — they are ready to move on. Coach called them Tuesday morning about 5 a.m. explaining his situation. For the most part, they were disappointed but wanted him to be in Atlanta. Frieder said he wouldn't miss it for the world.

Well give Harris some credit. When Steve Patterson resigned Feb. 4, the AD claimed he would bring a big name coach to the Valley. Now it is five weeks later and he has handed over one of the premiere college coaches in the country who is dedicated to basketball.

"I am a hard worker," Frieder said, "I would rather be doing something for the program than playing golf."

So, Devil fans, the future does look bright. But can Bo say the same? I doubt it.

Quick decision puts Frieder at the Sun Devils' helm

The naming of Frieder as head coach comes one day after Purdue's head coach Gene Keady announced that he was not interested in the Sun Devils' head job. Keady's announcement ended a week of speculation in which he was expected to be the next ASU coach.

Frieder doesn't think he was the second choice, though.

"I was offered this position three years ago," said Frieder, referring to the period after former ASU coach Bob Weinbauer was released of his coaching duties. "So to say I was the second choice is an inaccurate statement."

"Charles (Harris) and I have talked many times since (Steve) Patterson left. Some conversations would be about myself coaching the team and sometimes we would be discussing the other candidates."

With his team in the midst of a first-round NCAA tournament game against Xavier in Atlanta, Frieder admitted that he does regret the timing of the announcement.

"I do regret the timing of it," Frieder said. "There will be some negatives about me on that end (in Michigan), but some positives on this end."

"I feel badly about my players. I've talked to all of them since my decision this morning and told them that I would be there in Atlanta to meet them."

Unfortunately for Frieder, all he will be doing in Atlanta is greeting his players.

Approximately one and a half hours following Frieder's press conference, Michigan Athletic Director Bo Schembechler called his own press conference. Schembechler announced that Wolverine assistant coach Steven Years would coach the team, not Frieder.

"This basketball team will be coached by Steve Fisher, that is the way we're going to enter the NCAA," Schembechler said. "It's my decision to make and I have made it."

Schembechler, who became the athletic director in July, was apparently infuriated over the fact that Frieder had not directly contacted him about his decision.

"I made every effort to contact him (Bo)," Frieder said. "But in this year's faculty directory his home number is unlisted, so I left a message with the assistant athletic director, the sports information director and Bo's secretary."

Harris said that he is seeking a contract for Frieder, who made a reported $90,000 a year at Michigan, a four-year deal which will pay the new coach a reported $300,000 annually.

The deal is subject to the Arizona Board of Regents approval. Harris said that he hopes to set up a teleconference with the regents on Thursday.

Discussing the future of the Sun Devils, Frieder said he had no particular timetable for the team except that they be competitive among their Pac-10 foes.

"Right now I just want to take an overall look at the program and start from square one," Frieder said. "Of course the number-one priority is recruiting."

"I've also asked Mark (Brand, ASU's director of media relations) to get me the phone numbers of all the players so I can give them a call when I'm in Atlanta this weekend."

Frieder also was asked if he would keep current ASU assistant coaches, in particular ex-interim head coach Bob Schermerhorn. Schermerhorn, who has been running the Devils since Feb. 8, guided ASU to a 2-7 record since taking over.

"Then we'll look at the assistant coaching situation. I understand that Bob has been running things around here,"

Frieder said. "I would like to get to talk to him real soon."

Evidently Frieder's wife, Janice, had a feeling her husband would take the job. She was in the Valley last Monday by herself, searching for homes and looking at the different schools for their only child, Laura, who will be 10 years old this Monday.

"When it comes down to it I guess I had a gut feeling about this one," Janice Frieder said. "I kind of felt that this year Bill would feel he had to move."

Although Frieder guided his 10th-ranked team to a 24-7 record this year, fans in Michigan had run out of patience with the ninth-year coach.

Frieder was being booed after Michigan games recently by Wolverine fans, but Frieder disregarded the displeased fans.

"Yes, there were some upset fans," Frieder said. "But I believe that group of people was in the minority of the rest of the fans."

UofA head coach Lute Olson, in Boise, Idaho, preparing for the Wildcats' NCAA tournament first-round game with Robert Morris, applauded the hiring.

"I think it is a great hire for ASU," Olson said. "At Michigan he is a name coach and he can draw in the quality athletes it takes to be a winner."

"I definitely believe this gives a message to other conferences that the Pac-10 is only going after top-quality coaches."

"Not only has Bill been a good friend for many, many years, but he is such an excellent coach as well. I am looking forward to coaching against him next year."

One of the main reasons Frieder gave for leaving such a highly regarded program such as Michigan was his goals.

"With the exception of winning a national championship, we have done everything we can at Michigan," Frieder said. "It is time to start a winning tradition here at ASU."

Bill Frieder

Devils mount early surge, hit with crucial mistakes

By DEAN GYORGY
State Press

Explosive starts and smoldering finishes have plagued the Sun Devil baseball team throughout the year, and that was the pattern again Wednesday as ASU defeated Cal-State Long Beach 9-6 at Packard Stadium.

The Devils scored all of their runs in the first four innings, and had to battle their own late-game mistakes to hold on to victory.

"It wasn't pretty, but we won," ASU coach Jim Brock said. "It's happened several times before . . . we get some runs early and decide that's enough, and that's usually not a wise decision.

"We have to play on emotion."

Wednesday's starting pitchers were not around very long.

ASU scored twice in the first inning on a Mike Kelly double and a bases loaded walk by 49er starting pitcher Thomas Urbani.

Senior lefthander David Cassidy began for ASU. It was his first appearance since Feb. 11, and the lay-off showed as he allowed three runs in the second inning before being chased.

The first two Sun Devil hitters reached base in the second, and Urbani was gone too. He was relieved by Andrew Croghan, who promptly gave up a two-run single to Martin for a 4-3 ASU lead.

ASU scored two more times in the second inning, once in third, and twice in the fourth with the help of Anthony Manahan's third home run of the year.

Brian Dodd (4-1) relived Cassidy, and went 3½ innings for the win.

The 49ers scored twice in the eighth inning off Dave Alexander to make it a final 9-6. Alexander (6-1, 3 saves) lost his first game of the year last Sunday when he gave up a late-inning three-run homer at California. Brock said he may still be feeling the side effects.

"He didn't look very confident," Brock said. "He'll have to deal with making a comeback. He's kind of guarding his fortune, and we want him to be as aggressive as he was when he was a poor hungry kid."

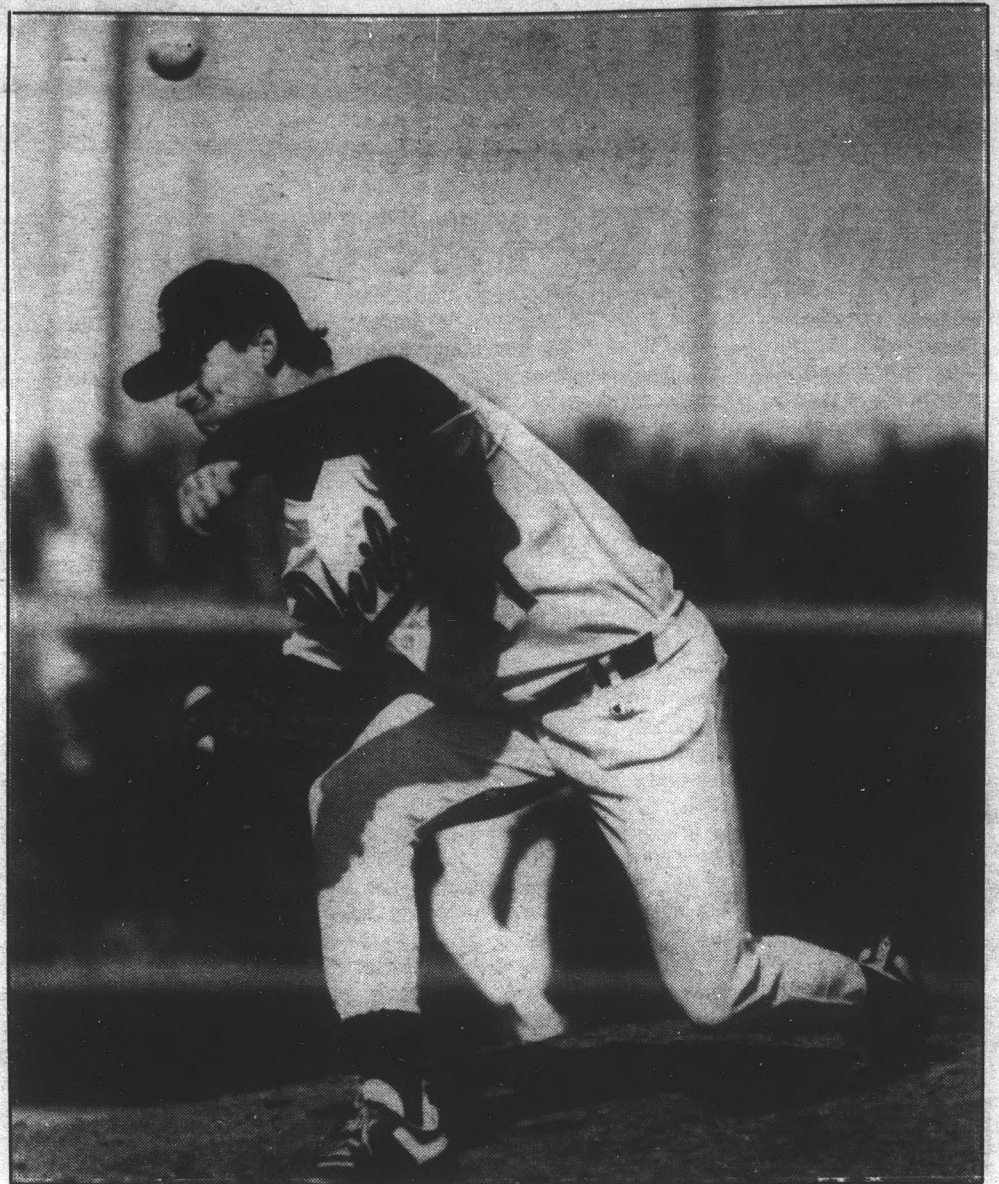

Catcher Eric Helfand made his first varsity appearance of the year since breaking his wrist in the January collision with Steve Willis.

Helfand played in JV games on Monday and Tuesday, but saw limited catching duty due to soreness in the wrist. On Wednesday, he caught the full nine innings.

"It felt great today," Helfand said. "It gets better every day. There really was no pain."

Brock has been pleased overall with the catchers he has used to this point, but said he has great confidence in Helfand's ability, and it is good to have him back in the lineup.

"It's like a good umpire," Brock said. "When he's doing his job well you never notice him. He missed two months, and we just put him back there and don't worry. He just catches and throws them all. Whatever he hits in the next few weeks will be just a bonus."

ASU swimmers shoot for title at women's NCAA

By CHRIS NACKINO
State Press

Eleven qualifiers from ASU's eighth-ranked women's swimming and diving teams begin competition today at the NCAA Championships in Indianapolis, Ind.

Seven of the Sun Devils' 11 qualifiers are returning All-Americans from last year's squad, which placed sixth at the national meet.

The one-meter diving event will begin the first day of competition with Pac-10 runner-up freshman Janae Lautenschlager representing the Sun Devils.

Five additional events will take place, including the 200-meter medley relay, 50 and 500-meter freestyle, 200-meter individual medley and the 800-meter freestyle relay.

Competing for the Sun Devils will be freshman Kristen Neidhoefer in the 200-m IM, sophomore Jennifer Linder in the 500-m freestyle and a trio of swimmers including sophomore Michelle Thompson, Nancy Osborne and freshman Heidi Hendricks in the 50-m freestyle.

The second day starts off with the 200-meter freestyle relay, followed by the 400-meter individual medley, 100-meter butterfly, 200-meter freestyle, 100-meter breaststroke, 100-meter backstroke and the 400-meter medley relay.

The Sun Devils 200-meter freestyle relay team placed first at this year's Pac-10 Championships and set a new school record with a time of 1:33.41. The winning team consisted of Thompson, Hendricks, Osborne and senior Missy Allington.

Thompson, Osborne and Hendricks will compete in the 200-meter freestyle, while teammate Neidhoefer will swim the 400-m IM, 100-m breaststroke (along with Hendricks and junior Susie Mortenson) the 200-m freestyle events. Thompson and Osborne will also compete in the 200-m freestyle.

Sophomore Jodi Quas, a returning All-American will represent ASU in the 100-m butterfly and 100-m backstroke. Osborne will also swim in the 100-m back.

Sun Devil Thompson, who was the sixth-leading scorer at the Pac-10s, placed second in the 100-m free, fourth the 50-m free, and fifth in the 200-m free at the 1989 conference championships.

The final day of competition will host the 200-meter backstroke, 100-meter freestyle, 200-meter breaststroke and 200-meter butterfly.

The competition concludes with the 400-meter freestyle relay, 1,650-meter freestyle events.

Quas will compete for the Sun Devils in the 200-m backstroke, followed by Osborne and Thompson in the 100-m freestyle.

Three ASU swimmers will compete in the 200-meter breaststroke, Mortenson, Neidhoefer and Linder, who will also represent the Sun Devils in the 1,650-m free, 200-m butterfly and the 400-m free relay.

What's in a name; Frieder, is that it?

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

Newly appointed ASU men's basketball coach Bill Frieder may be well-known throughout the Midwest as the former head coach at Michigan, but he may have a difficult time gaining recognition in the Arizona desert.

Students were not exactly dancing in the streets after Frieder was named head coach at a Wednesday morning press conference by Athletic Director Charles Harris. In fact, most students interviewed on Cady Mall had never heard of him.

Most knew who Indiana coach Bobby Knight is. UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanaian was well-known, and just about everyone knew that Lute Olson coaches down in Tucson. But Bill Frieder?

One student thought Frieder was the president of Eastern Airlines.

It may be a difficult task to bring excitement back into ASU's floundering basketball program, but at least one student said Frieder should be able to do a good job.

"Hopefully if he gets some new recruits he should be OK," senior Allen Shinbashi said.

Shinbashi did say he was somewhat surprised at the timing of the announcement.

Tenth-ranked Michigan, 24-7, plays Xavier, 21-11, in a first-round NCAA game Friday at the Southeast regional in Atlanta, and Michigan Athletic Director Bo Schembechler said Frieder will not be coaching in the tournament.

"I'm sure the people in Michigan aren't too happy," Shinbashi said.

ASU has been searching for a coach since fourth-year coach Steve Patterson resigned Feb. 4 before the Sun Devils' Pac-10 Conference game with California.

Second-year assistant Bob Schermerhorn was named interim coach and said he wanted to keep the job full time or stay on the staff of the new coach.

The Sun Devils have had three coaches and two winning seasons since 1982. ASU finished 12-16 this year.

The guessing was brought to a close Tuesday morning when Michigan coach Bill Frieder announced he would take the helm of the ASU basketball program.

Players

Frieder could have instant success.

"We have some good players," Becker said. "I think any coach coming in next year would do well."

Becker said he was sad when former coach Steve Patterson left, and when interim coach Schermerhorn did not get the nod for head coach. But he said it would not be difficult to adapt to the new coach.

"I think as a team we can make an easy transition to his style," Becker said. "I'm just glad I know who my coach is next year."

Freshman guard Ron Waller, who is from Detroit's Southwestern High School, said the coaching style would be a relatively easy transition.

"It's not going to be hard, we already had to make an adjustment this season," he said, referring to Schermerhorn taking over the head coaching position midway through the season.

Waller, who used his quickness to earn the starting shooting guard position for the Sun Devils said Frieder emphasizes the fast break and not the half-court offense.

Wheeler, who played at the same high school as Waller, said he likes Frieder's style of basketball.

"I think the tempo is fitted for not only me, but all of the players," he said.

The only apparent setback of Frieder being named head coach was that the players were not informed before it was publicized.

"I wish I could have found out from the athletic administration," Wheeler said. "I believe they knew who the coach was going to be and they could have informed us."

"It was shocking to me to hear Frieder would be coach since he has to play on Friday."

Becker said the players were left in the dark.

"I understand them not telling us who it was going to be because of leaks," Becker said. "They told the cheerleaders and the band that there was going to be a press conference, but they didn't tell us. I think that was wrong."

Waller added, "I felt that we shouldn't have to find out by watching the news."

Devils prepare conquest to defend mat title

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

ASU's goal of defending its national title is going to be an uphill climb but can be achieved with hard work and consistency, according to coach Bobby Douglas.

"We find ourselves in a unique spot this year, as everyone is gunning for us," Douglas said. "We have to wrestle hard in every match, as everyone wants to dethrone the champion." The Sun Devils claimed the national championship last season as the underdog with 93 points. They sent seven qualifiers and all earned All-America honors.

This year the numbers are different but the names are familiar.

ASU will send eight wrestlers to represent the University and bring the championship home. Wrestling in Oklahoma City will be Zeke Jones (118 pounds), Marco Sanchez (126 pounds), Junior Saunders (142 pounds), Thom Ortiz (150 pounds), Dan St. John (158 pounds), G. T. Taylor (167 pounds), Jim Gressley (177 pounds) and John Ginther (190 pounds)

Gressley and Ginther are the only seniors on the squad and have earned All-America accolades.

Douglas' crew is currently ranked third in the nation behind top-ranked Oklahoma State and Iowa.

OSU will send its entire team (10 wrestlers) to the championships, just several miles down the road from Stillwater, while the Hawkeyes invade Oklahoma with nine grapplers.

"Each year, the NCAAs get tougher and tougher to predict," Douglas said. "Iowa and Oklahoma State, along with ourselves, Michigan and Penn State can win the meet. But there are several schools like Oklahoma and Iowa State who could greatly affect the meet."

The Sun Devils left Tuesday to prepare for nationals. Jones will start things off Thursday when ASU takes to the mat at the Myriad.

The Ann Arbor native has compiled a 31-7 record this season and finished sixth in 1988. Jones, a junior, is making his third trip to the NCAA tournament.

Sanchez, a freshman, finished third in the Pac-10 meet and earned a berth to Oklahoma City. In his inaugural season, Sanchez tabulated a 17-18-2 mark.

Saunders is making a return trip to the national tournament but this time as a Division I wrestler. In 1987, the junior won the Division II title at 142 pounds. He earned a chance to wrestle in the NCAAs. Saunders tallied a 37-4 record, and was second on the team with wins behind St. John.

Ortiz earned All-America honors last year with a fourth place finish. The junior from Tucson posted a 30-6 record this season.

The best bet on the team to win an individual title will be

St. John. He has a record of 40-1 and is ranked second in the country.

"St. John has developed into one of the nation's top wrestlers and he has the talent and ability, both physically and mentally, to win a national title," Douglas said.

Making a heroic return to the national tournament is Gressley. In January, the senior was told his wrestling career could be over after a herniated disk in his neck. But Gressley went on to win his first Pac-10 title. He has a 25-6 record this season.

Gressley's counterpart, Ginther, is shooting for All-America honors for the third time in four years. Ginther is 21-3-2, and missed the beginning of the season due to an injury.

"John is capable of winning it all," Douglas said. "He has been wrestling strong throughout the year. John always seems to come through at the end of the season and if winning his first Pac-10 title is any indication, John will have to be reckoned with at the NCAAs."

The final wrestler is Taylor, who is a redshirt freshman making his first appearance at the tournament. Taylor has posted a 15-8-3 mark throughout the season.

Douglas stated after the Pac-10 tournament that he is sending more wrestlers, but that the Sun Devils will not be sending the quality that they did last year.

The tournament kicks off today with the pigtailed in the morning and concludes with the finals Saturday night.

No. 1 ASU tennis player Brian Gyetko returns the ball during a victorious singles match in earlier action. He has been the key to the Sun Devils' success this season.

Netters face brutal competition

By KRISTI HOWELL
State Press

A tough stretch lies ahead for the ASU men's tennis team, beginning with its match-up against No. 1 ranked California at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

"This weekend is just brutal," ASU coach Lou Belken said. "It starts a part of our schedule that is real tough."

This weekend also marks the anniversary of the Sun Devils triumph last year over then top-ranked USC team.

One year ago to the day, March 18, ASU defeated the Trojans, 5-4, at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

"That match was the turning point of the season," Belken said. "I believe the USC win helped us gain more confidence and vaulted us into the NCAA Championship."

This year USC has dropped to fourth in the national rankings, but still poses a threat to the Sun Devils, who lost 5-4 to the Trojans earlier this season in Los Angeles.

Last season, ASU split its two matches with USC and California, defeating the Golden Bears and the Trojans at home, but losing on the road.

The lineup for this weekend's matches will probably be led by sophomores Brian Gyetko and Dave Lomicky at the No. 1 and 2 singles seeds. In doubles play, the 19th-ranked duo of Gyetko and sophomore Daniel Marting will play at the No. 1 ASU spot.

The California and USC conflicts mark only the beginning of play for the men's tennis team. The Sun Devils play host to Texas Tech on March 20, 10th-ranked Clemson on March 21, and Ohio State March 22.

"Clemson is always real tough," Belken said. "Playing in our conference is tough enough, then we bring in top-10 schools."

Belken said he feels that after last week's three-match winning streak, his team should play well against the tough competitors they face in the coming week.

"The kids feel good about themselves after this week," Belken said. "Their physically intense, they compete well, and their starting to believe in themselves."

The men's tennis team is young, but it is on its way to becoming a strong team, Belken said.

"We're a team maturing rapidly," Belken said. "We're much, much better than we were."

"We need a lot of support this weekend. I hope to see a lot of students out there. There will be some great matches."

ASU gymnast smokes opponents on the rings

By LAURA SCHMIDT
Contributing Writer

After four years on the ASU gymnastic team, Patrick Kalani Pa has matured into a creative athlete who has become the team's "rap'in, smok'in and jiv'in smokemaster."

For three years Kalani, a senior graphic design major, has been the only ring specialist on the squad. For two years the 5-foot-11 native of Hawaii has been the team's leading "smoke master", the gymnast who awards an ashtray for an individual's "smoked" routine performance at each meet.

Kalani also writes a "smok'in rap" song for the team and "raps" to the "smoker" gymnast after each competition. At a January meet, the team voted Kalani as the "smoker" after he performed his own skillful "Kalani trick" on the rings.

To do the trick, Kalani must hold his strong arms in an inverted cross position while maintaining a straddle with straight legs and pointed toes.

"I liked it and so did Kalani," coach Don Robinson said. Kalani didn't create a "rap'in" song for himself, so Robinson sketched a cartoon of Kalani performing his trick.

Kalani said that since judges grade 12 other tricks in his routine on different levels of difficulty, his "trick" would not make the whole routine.

Kalani performed his trick as part of his routine at four separate meets with good scores. However, new gymnastic rules have caused debate among judges on whether to deduct two-tenths off the final score. The rules say that an atypical straddle done in a strength trick (such as a cross) on the rings, under the category of originality, will be penalized.

Kalani is not performing the trick because of the new rules, but his desire to strive to the top in the next two meets is not hampered. His goal is to become an All-America gymnast before he graduates in December.

Kalani said that he will stop competing on the team this spring, but he will help coach in the gym during the fall.

Robinson said that Kalani will help coach the still rings. "He will be a student volunteer coach," he said.

Kalani said he has wanted to become a serious gymnast since his freshman year in high school, when he was told about an All-America athlete.

He added that when he walked on the ASU team as a freshman and saw the All-America plaques of the top six college gymnasts in the nation covering Robinson's office walls, he knew he wanted to be an All-American.

"I knew from the start that I wanted to compete," he said.

Kalani does not have an athletic scholarship because he was not recruited on the team as a freshman. He red-shirted for ASU in 1985 and realized how tough collegiate competition is.

Because of the demanding schedule of a graphic design major, Kalani decided to concentrate only on the rings so he could become a more successful competitor.

When Kalani returned to his homeland in December, for the Hawaiian Invitational, and won a third place trophy on the rings, his high school gymnastic coach wished him good luck and told him, "Imua," which means "go for it" in Hawaiian.

Kalani said he joined the team with a serious plan to be a competitive athlete, not just because team practices are a good workout. Robinson said that Kalani has always been a positively motivated gymnast on the team.

"Anyone can be a cheerleader but how long can it last?" he said.

Robinson said that Kalani's team contribution has been outstanding, and his performance has been good, with a 9.3 his top score this season.

"You have to be good to compete on the team," he said.

WATCH OUT FOR PENGUINS. SMALL, MEDIUM AND LARGE.

They've been spotted all over. In three different sizes. Lots of delicious flavors. And over 21 different toppings. From fresh strawberries to crushed brownies.

It's Penguin's Place® Frozen Yogurt. As rich as ice cream. But with only 1/2 the calories. So you can get a large. Without getting larger.

2 FOR 1  2 FOR 1

Penguin's love to travel in pairs. So you spring for the first, and we'll treat you to the second. Small, medium or large yogurt. But to keep Penguins from becoming an endangered species, only one coupon per customer.

VERY LOW CALORIE FROZEN YOGURT
Toppings extra. Not valid with any other coupon.

The Towers is making you a "Hair Raising" offer.

When you sign a lease for summer school at The Towers, you'll receive $50 in goods and services at Crimpers. You'll look great after a visit to Crimpers, the hair and makeup salon in the shopping mall at The Towers. At The Towers you'll also feel great about the price of a lease for the summer session. The total cost is only $600, which includes utilities, housekeeping, covered parking and the Crimper's Special. And that's not all. The Towers offers the same amenities and services for summer school that we offer during the fall and spring semesters. Enjoy Towers pool service (tea and towels), weekly housekeeping, planned activities and parties, exercise equipment and optional meal plans, all at a very affordable price. Call 894-2320 or come by for more information on summer school and full academic term leases.
