By MICHAEL VAN DYKE
State Press

On the fourth day of campaigning for the Associated Students of ASU presidency, the three presidential candidates rolled up their sleeves, wiped the smiles off their faces and challenged the qualifications of their opponents.

Both Sal Rivera and Paul Larson, during a forum sponsored by Students for Free Speech, questioned the qualifications of fellow presidential hopeful Mark Escobedo and his claims of accomplishment over the past year.

Students for Free Speech is a month-old organization formed to sponsor debates for the candidates, said Rick Koontz, debate coordinator.

On four different occasions while answering questions from an audience gathered outside Danforth Chapel, Escobedo emphasized his experience in working on the ASASU executive committee. Escobedo was the first candidate to deliver his remarks, and the forum did not allow him to respond to the other candidate's charges.

Escobedo also said his efforts in contacting Rep. Earl Wilcox, D-Phoenix, and bringing the lawmaker to campus was a main reason the student fight against higher tuition increases was successful last fall.

"Escobedo's gesture to bring Wilcox was nice but actually jeopardized the fight against a tuition hike," Larson said. He added, Wilcox's intimidation of Regent Andy Hurwitz, a key student ally in the fight, created more of a hindrance than a help to the cause.

Rivera pointed out that Escobedo was not involved with the executive committee — an organization of the four ASASU executive officers, two senators and two college deans — as much as Escobedo claimed.

"Mark says he was involved with the executive committee, but I question how much involvement he actually had," Rivera said, adding that others have said that Escobedo was

Tenants refuse to pay ASU rent due to sewage

By RICHARD A. VIGIL
State Press

Three residents of a Tempe trailer park owned by ASU testified in Tempe Municipal Court Thursday that they have refused to pay their rent because University officials allowed the park's sewer system to deteriorate to a point that raw sewage leaked onto their lawns.

ASU has taken the three trailer park residents, Scott Meacham, Teresa Freeman and Raymond Beck, to court because they have not paid their rent since fall of 1988. The Apache Trailer Park is located behind the Dash Inn on Apache Boulevard.

A fourth resident of the park, Eric Campeau, was dismissed from the suit because he paid his rent before the case went to trial Thursday morning.

J. C. Burton, interim judge at the Tempe Justice Court, gave the lawyers five days to file briefs before he rules on the case, filed by the Arizona Board of Regents on behalf of ASU.

Karen Klock, the property's manager, testified that the park, located at 735 W. Apache Blvd., has been properly maintained.

"We have been to the park on several occasions to repair sewer lines," Klock said.

Jim Gridley, an ASU Physical Plant assistant supervisor who has overseen all maintenance work on the park, said more than $4,600 has been spent since July 1 of last year on plumbing maintenance in the park. Ninety percent of that money has been spent for repairs to the sewer system, he said.

But residents said the repairs were not enough. Freeman testified that the space in front of her mobile home was flooded with raw sewage from an uncapped sewer line.

"Every time I flushed the toilet or drained the tub or sink, sewage came up," she said. "I don't think I should be paying rent on raw sewage."

Raw sewage seeps between two mobile homes at Apache Trailer Park, 735 W. Apache. ASU, which owns the park, is suing three residents who say they will not pay their rent until the sewer system is replaced.

Anne Suddarth, a resident of the park who was called as a witness for the defense, said ASU Physical Plant employees who came to the park did little to solve the problem of the sewage.

"They would literally stand there and stare at (the sewage)," Suddarth said.

Meacham said the sewers need to be replaced, but Klock said ASU has planned to close the park and expand residence hall space on the park since it was acquired in November 1984.

She said the residents of the park were given notice of the University's intentions in January 1985, and all of the residents that have been in the park since that time are entitled by state law to be reimbursed as much as $2,200 for the cost of moving their trailers.

None of the defendants are entitled to reimbursement because they all moved in after ASU acquired the property. Beck, who has two trailers in the park, is entitled to move one of them, because he has been a resident since 1982 but moved a second trailer into the park in 1987.

Prof receives $60,000 salary supplement

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

An ASU accounting professor has received a $60,000 salary supplement from the Phoenix office of Arthur Andersen & Co., which is trying to keep nationally recognized senior accounting professors at the University.

The Arthur Andersen/Don DuPont Professorship will provide Professor Kurt Pany with $15,000 for the next four years, beginning July 1, 1989.

David Shrock, associate dean of ASU's College of Business, said senior faculty members include full professors and those close to being promoted to full professors.

Richard Flaherty, director of the ASU School of Accountancy, said Pany's money will be used as a salary supplement and for operating expenses incurred while traveling to professional meetings.

The professorship is to "recognize an existing faculty member for his or her contribution to ASU," Flaherty said. He added that help is needed from the private sector because "our faculty salaries have fallen out of the marketplace."

Pany, 42, has been teaching at ASU for 11 years after earning his doctorate at the University of Illinois.

Pany said he is honored to have received the professorship. It is an indication that the ASU School of Accountancy is continuing to grow, he added.

"If you consider a lot of schools, they have this type of supplement," he said.

Bill Hodges, a partner and head of the tax division at Arthur Andersen in Phoenix, said ASU cannot continue to be competitive without help from outside the University.

"The state is just not properly funding the University so they can compete," he said. "The University is underfunded as far as being able to pay its professors."

Shrock said some senior professors might leave the state for more lucrative offers at other universities.

The average raise for a professor at ASU last year was 3.5

'The University is underfunded as far as being able to pay its professors.'

— Bill Hodges

percent, Shrock said.

"One of their major options is to move," he said. "It is especially true in accounting and finance where the market has gone up dramatically."

Shrock said incoming faculty members' salaries are increasing at a quicker rate than those of senior faculty members already at the University.

"In general, in most business fields, the market rates for new hires has been going up at a minimum of 5 percent," he said.

Trial reveals Reagan approved airdrop of weapons to Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — The jury in Oliver North's trial was told Thursday of a daring plan, said to have been approved by then-President Reagan, that involved an airdrop of recoilless rifles to help the Nicaraguan Contras sink arms-carrying ships.

Whether the airdrop was ever attempted was not brought out in the fifth and last day of questioning North's former White House boss, Robert C. McFarlane. After he left the stand, the jury was dismissed until Monday.

McFarlane said that although he had pleaded guilty to four misdemeanor counts of withholding information from Congress, he felt he should not have been charged.

"I felt quite passionately about the fact that I had not willfully lied to people," he said. But he added that "it was quite clear I withheld information" and "I had to accept the consequences of what I had done."

Prosecutor John Kecker, referring to papers introduced while McFarlane was on the stand, said, "What those documents show is that during the period of the Boland Amendment you and the NSC did a lot of things to aid the military activities of the Contras."

"Yes," said McFarlane. The Boland Amendment, in force between 1984 and 1986 prohibited U. S. help to the guerrillas.

Chilean officials call for swift end to ban of fruit sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-level Chilean delegation called Thursday for "swift action" to avoid further economic and social turmoil in Chile resulting from the suspension of U. S. sales on Chilean fruit over an apparent cyanide poisoning attempt.

The Chilean call was disclosed in a joint communique issued after Secretary of State James A. Baker III met with the Chilean foreign affairs and agriculture ministers.

As Chilean fruit continued to pile up at airports and docks and the livelihoods of hundreds of thousands of Chileans were threatened, the U. S. Food and Drug Administration said a small team of FDA inspectors will be sent to Chile to check security on Chilean fruit.

The State Department meeting came four days after the FDA warned Americans to avoid Chilean fruit because traces of cyanide were found in Chilean fruit shipped to Philadelphia.

There was no sign of an imminent end to the crisis despite the high-level attention it was receiving.

Islamic conference opposes Iran on Rushdie, Afghanistan

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Delegates denied Iran's two major goals at a Moslem conference Thursday, rejecting its order to kill novelist Salman Rushdie and endorsing the interim government formed by Afghan guerrillas.

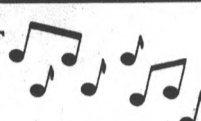

Iran, which is overwhelmingly Shiite Moslem, opposes the interim government because it is dominated by Sunni Moslem guerrillas based in Pakistan.

Foreign ministers of the 46-member Organization of Islamic Conference condemned Rushdie's book "The Satanic Verses." They also issued a separate declaration condemning the author as an apostate, but did not approve Ayatollah Khomeini's religious decree, of Feb. 14 ordering Moslems to kill him.

No mention was made in the declaration of Iran's demand that Islamic Conference members break relations with Britain and other Western powers on grounds they incited and protected Rushdie. Iran severed relations with Britain earlier this month.

Rushdie, 41, went into hiding after Khomeini pronounced the death sentence and Iranian clerics added a reward of $5.2 million.

Correction

A headline on page 1 of Thursday's State Press incorrectly stated that ASU will offer a divinity program; in fact ASU will not offer such a program. The agreement is an emphasis on existing transfer mechanisms between ASU and Claremont College in California. Claremont faculty will come to Tempe to teach classes at the All Saints Catholic Newman Center. Furthermore, all quotes attributed to Richard Martin, chairman of ASU's religious studies department, were actually said by Graduate College Dean Brian Foster. Also, Claremont President Richard Cain said that his school was attracted to ASU because of the University's reputation and proximity to the Claremont campus.

Salary

Shrock said professorships allow ASU to offer competitive salaries to its professors.

Flaherty said the school formed a search committee last fall which conducted personal interviews of those existing faculty members of the school who applied for the professorship.

"They (salaries) haven't kept up with the market," he said. "We need to generate additional support."

Hodges said Arthur Andersen is interested in the ASU School of Accountancy because it provides a pool of recruits to the accounting firm.

"ASU is one of the top accounting schools in the country," he said. "Arthur Andersen is the largest employer of ASU grads."

Flaherty agreed with Hodges.

"We produce very good grads that they (Arthur Andersen) are interested in hiring," he said.

Hodges, who graduated from ASU in 1973 with a master's in accounting, said Arthur Andersen has been in Phoenix since 1956.

Arthur Andersen, with 150 offices and 40,000 employees worldwide, employs about 300 people in Phoenix and Tucson, he said.

"We have had a really successful recruiting program out of ASU," he said.

New wave of racism sweeps through country

Carolyn Hofig
Columnist

Newspapers across the country announced Tuesday that the FBI was looking for "two Middle-Eastern looking men," who had been seen loitering in the San Diego neighborhood where Navy Capt. Will Rogers and his wife live.

A bomb exploded the family van while Sharon Rogers was driving it last week.

A follow-up story Thursday said a man "with a heavy foreign accent" called a Los Angeles radio station to claim responsibility for the bombing on behalf of a pro-Iranian group.

Authorities suspect the attack represents "retaliation" for the July downing of an Iranian jet over the Persian Gulf by the USS Vincennes, the ship which Capt. Rogers commands.

Arguably, the tag "Middle-Eastern looking" and the mention of a "heavy foreign accent" simply serve to describe the suspects more accurately.

But the stronger argument holds the terms mark a descent into the murky depths of racism, all the more odious because they seem to bear the mantle of justifiability.

Would the writer identify Henry Kissinger as "a man with a heavy foreign accent?"

Would a news story say that police are searching for "two European-looking men?" Would any socially semi-conscious journalist write that the suspects are "two African-looking men" or "two Asian-looking men?" "Two Central American-looking men" are being sought . . . ?

Or to see the problem from its darkest side, consider the passage "two Jewish-looking men."

Such statements are beginning to sound like the precursor to a witch-hunt, which, in both its literal and its figurative sense, is entirely within the capabilities of American conscience.

Racism is the stupidest sentiment the United States can summon, when one thinks of its foundations. But it's rampant in American history.

Truth is, the melting pot doesn't work. Oh sure, the United States can boast representatives of nearly every culture on Earth.

But nationality doesn't magically disappear as a body crosses the border.

In fact, it often becomes more obvious: "Whatever happened to that Irish kid you went to junior prom with," my great aunt persists in asking; "Funny, you don't look Italian," people say to a friend with a noticeably ethnic name.

Nationality or race has become a convenient mode of identification in America — but not necessarily an innocent one.

It's also a handy way to single people out. This country had perhaps its worst bout with racism during World War II, when the federal government approved placing thousands of Japanese Americans in internment camps.

The United States held its citizens of Japanese descent without charge, summarily denied them due process, unlawfully seized their property and, to this day, only grudgingly admits it may have done something wrong.

Mostly, governmental apologists maintain, the racist hysteria was justified at the time.

As if the U. S. Constitution were a somewhat proposition.

"Middle-Eastern looking" Americans have already sampled the vile flavor of "justifiable" racism. As violence rages in the Middle East, misinformed tempers in this country are often vented on hapless emigrants from that area.

When the Ayatollah Khomeini makes an outrageous statement, Americans tend to assume all Moslems agree with him. When Arab terrorists strike, all Arabs can expect to be painted with the same brush.

Of course, national racism tends to be a cyclical affair in America. The country has gone through various spells of hate against the Chinese, Eastern Europeans, Italians and Germans. The stance is even softening on the Russians — and conceivably on the other citizens of the Soviet Union as well.

Hopefully Americans with their roots in the Middle East will bear with their countrymen through this latest spell.

Even more hopefully, perhaps Americans will grow out of this habit soon.

Protest scheduled for Reagan speech

Editor:

So Ronald Reagan is waiving his usual speaker's fee to talk here at ASU. What a guy! Of course this has nothing at all to do with the fact that only 2,200 of the possible 14,000 tickets were sold. If you believe that, you probably think Reagan had absolutely no knowledge of the infamous Iran-Contra scandal, too. I guess, to his defenders, he would look no sillier addressing a near-empty auditorium than he did taking the "moron defense" in denying any knowledge related to Ollie North's gang and their shady White House basement dealings.

It is ridiculous that Reagan is even coming here in the first place. The leader of the most corrupt administration in American history is going to address a "leadership" conference. To have him talk about "insuring tomorrow" is far worse than the proverbial fox guarding the hen house. The tomorrow handed to us by that man is, for starters, one of a whole generation permanently paying off the largest budget deficit in all human history. Just what is there to be proud of? I encourage everyone to stay away from Reagan's speech. Please join us on our peaceful protest picket line outside the Activity Center Monday at 10:30 a.m.

Reagan visit to be educational

Editor:

I would like to congratulate the ASU officials responsible for bringing Ronald Reagan to campus next Monday. Having a former president speak in the Valley will be a valuable experience not only for us students but for the entire community. While leading this nation for eight years, Reagan no doubt impacted the course of national and world history forever. Whether one agrees with his policies or not, to hear firsthand the thoughts of such a man on the future of our country, and the problems and opportunities that we will face in the upcoming years, is an educational experience.

As the fifth-largest university in the country, we should work to bring many more national leaders of all views to campus. Hopefully strong student support for this event will allow us to do this.

Miller Beer ad — Bad taste, unfulfilling

Editor:

We blew it! Recently, we distributed in your newspaper a "Spring Break Guide," which outlined Miller Brewing Company's planned activities in Daytona Beach, Fla., and South Padre Island, Texas, during March.

Since its distribution, concerns have been voiced about the "tone" and content of the brochure.

Miller's intention was to create a humorous takeoff on spring break. We certainly did not intend to produce material which might be considered offensive or inappropriate. Consequently, we've stopped all further distribution of the guide.

As you know, Miller enjoys a long-standing reputation for creating high-quality advertising and adhering to responsible marketing practices. We remain committed to both.

Privacy

Device makes it difficult to reach out and harass someone

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

If someone raps on your door or rings your bell, the sensible response is to ask: "Who's there?"

There's nothing impolite about the question. You have a right to know who is standing outside your door, and why, before you open it.

Or, if you have a peephole, you can look out. If a Girl Scout is standing there with boxes of cookies, you can safely slide the bolt. On the other hand, if you see a man with a ski mask over his face, it would be wise to grab the phone and call the cops.

There may be peaceful nooks and crannies in this country where a person can open a door and be sure that the caller is friendly. But in most big cities, and many of the small ones, it's a good idea to find out whether the knock or ring has come from the big bad wolf.

There is nothing more precious than your fundamental right to privacy and security. When you are in your home, nobody can enter without your consent. Even a cop has to have a search warrant to cross the threshold. If you wish, you can simply ignore a knock. You're under no obligation to talk to someone simply because of the knock on your door.

But then we have that most wondrous and devilish device — the telephone.

Everyday, millions of Americans get phone calls they don't want or need.

They hear from pitchmen who want to sell them siding or fences, stock market peddlers who offer to make them rich, hustlers of every conceivable product.

This is known as telemarketing. Or junk phone calls, a more accurate phrase the telemarketers hate.

The millions of unwanted calls also include the old standby — the panter, heavy breather and obscene talker.

Few unmarried women listed in big-city phone directories haven't received at least one such call. Some creeps will phone the same female dozens of times. There have been cases of women who have been harassed by the same panter or dirty-talker for months.

There is little you can do to defend yourself against the nuisance or harassing call. You can get an unlisted number, but there's an extra charge and many people don't want to be cut off from those who have a valid reason to call them. You can unplug your phone, but you could risk missing an important call.

For obvious reasons, my number is unlisted. But a guy once managed to find it and amused himself by making drunken, abusive phone calls late at night. After several nights of this, I changed numbers. I shed the jerk. But I had to spend hours phoning friends and relatives to give them the new number.

So I've always thought how nice it would be if there was some way of knowing who was on the other end of the phone when it rang.

And now, though modern technology, phone companies can provide you with a little screen that displays the number of the phone that is being used to call you.

It hasn't come into widespread use yet. But phone companies are planning to soon offer the device, known as "Caller ID," in several Eastern states and on the West Coast.

If they can get by the legal hurdles being put up by various consumer advocates.

Through a strange twist of logic, the new service is being called an invasion of the privacy of those who make the phone calls.

They say your privacy will be violated because the person you call will know the number of the phone you are using. And in many cases, by knowing the number they can determine who you are and where you are calling from.

Therefore, their precious right to privacy — phoning you without you knowing who they are — will be violated.

Huh?

Well, that's what they say. And they are making a big fuss in states where the service will be offered.

Maybe my logic is cockeyed, but it seems to me that the person whose phone rings has a first option on privacy and freedom from jerks.

If a woman's phone rings, and a guy starts panting and sharing his lascivious hopes and dreams, it would be nice if the woman could jot down his phone number and give it to the police. Then the caller could discuss his need to pant at strangers with a judge.

If some pitchman calls you about an unwanted product or service more than once, as they often do, you will have his number, and you can take legal action to put a stop to it.

Sure, a phone creep can find away around it by going to public pay phone. But in zero weather, he's less likely to go trudging out with a pocket full of quarters.

There may be some cases in which there are valid reasons to not want your number revealed. Someone phoning in a tip to the police about a neighbor peddling drugs might have good reason to remain unknown. A pay phone would provide that cloak.

The phone company in Pennsylvania argues that "Caller ID" acts as sort of a peephole in the door, so you can see who is knocking.

The critics say that a caller has the right to put a finger over the peephole.

Well, if someone knocks on my door and puts a finger over the peephole, they will soon find a cop knocking on their back.

And when this service is offered around here, I'll be among the first to subscribe.

It's not the best solution to nuisance calls. I prefer that there be a button on my phone and when I push it, a piercing sound pops the eardrum of the caller.

But I doubt if something that useful will ever be on the market, although I can hope.

Schroeder speech to kick off Insuring Tomorrow

By ROBIE KAKONGE
State Press

U. S. Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., will make the first guest appearance of ASU's Insuring Tomorrow student leadership conference at 12:30 p.m. today.

Schroeder, who will speak in the Student Services courtyard, plans to discuss issues concerning equal rights, day care and the American family.

Approximately 200 ASU students and 45 students from other universities nationwide plan to attend the weekend-long national conference.

Toni Brown, the program's activity director, said other guest speakers plan to address current issues concerning abortion, ethics in leadership and the U. S. savings and loan industry "mess."

"The emphasis of this seminar is for students to meet with national leaders who will provide students with the facts they need in order to make their own choices as future leaders," she said.

The Saturday segment of the program, which will be held at Tempe Mission Palms Hotel, will feature Ed Kane, an ASU professor in the Business College.

Kane plans to address the savings and loan issue and what it means to students.

Paul Bender, dean of ASU's Law College who will speak after the luncheon Saturday, plans to address the legal perspective on abortion.

Mark Pastin, an ASU management professor who is the author of "The Hard Problems of Management: Gaining the Ethics Edge," plans to discuss ethics in leadership.

David R. Gergen, an editor at U. S. News and World Report and a former communications director for former President Ronald Reagan, is scheduled to be the keynote speaker at Saturday's dinner.

During the dinner, five ASU students will each receive a plaque in recognition of their outstanding leadership in their colleges.

Reagan is scheduled to speak at the closing session on Monday at 11 a.m. in the UAC. He plans to speak for 20 minutes and will answer students' questions for 40 minutes.

During the closing session, Arizona Gov. Rose Mofford plans to welcome the former president, who will be introduced by John Fees, the Associated Students of ASU president.

Tickets for the Insuring Tomorrow Program are still available for $35 through ASASU. The price includes free entrance to all program events plus a T-shirt.

Conference participants must be members of a registered campus club and each organization is restricted to sending one member to the conference.

Free tickets to see Reagan are still available at the Gammage ticket box office and at Dillard's ticket outlets.

The Insuring Program is being sponsored by the Sun Angel Foundation.

Eastern trimming costs, employees to work 60 hour weeks

By The Associated Press

Eastern Airlines told its remaining workers to put in up to 60 hours a week and take periodic time off without pay, as the strike-crippled carrier seeks new ways to trim costs, an airline spokesman said Thursday.

Also Thursday, Eastern resumed jetliner service between Boston and Washington, but a spokesman had no comment on reports that Eastern was trying to hire new pilots it needs to add other routes.

"We have said continually that at some point, if the pilots won't fly, something has to be done," company spokesman James Ashlock said, but added that he would not talk about possible hiring of new pilots.

The formerly seventh-largest U. S. carrier will wind up the second week of its strike Friday.

Ashlock said Eastern's remaining 1,500 non-union employees will share new jobs, such as housekeeping functions left by the strike of Machinists union members, some of whom worked as janitors.

There will be 60-hour work weeks without overtime and some employees will be forced to take periodic weeks off without pay, the company said. Details were still being worked out, but Ashlock said workers will still receive company benefits while on their unpaid weeks off.

"There are not going to be any layoffs right now," Ashlock said. "As we are now stabilized at this schedule of about 110 flights a day, there's not enough work to justify the amount of people on hand."

Eastern doesn't want to lose the employees because it still hopes to rebuild, Ashlock said, so the company will assign new work duties and rotate unpaid weeks off.

Eastern, with nearly 30,000 employees before the strike began, laid off 8,500 non-union workers in the strike's first four days.

not as dedicated to the position as he now claims.

Rivera also said Escobedo may not be qualified to fill the president's office because of his lack of working knowledge of an executive position. He added that Escobedo's work as a senator doesn't qualify him to be president.

"The offices of senator and president are completely different entities," he said. "One office isn't transferable to the next."

But Rivera maintained that he is qualified because of his

"broad experience" in ASASU and his work this year as the administrative assistant to President John Fees.

Larson said, "My opponents have their qualifications and we all have strengths in different areas, but I am out here because I think my qualifications can help students the most."

Rivera said when he entered the University and had an interest in becoming involved in student activities, but he found it difficult to find out about events.

Rivera said when he became involved in ASASU he wanted to help other students find the best opportunities to become involved at ASU.

Escobedo said he chose to become involved with ASASU because of his concern about the deterioration of the quality of education at ASU.

Larson said he has no plans to become a politician, but has enjoyed his experience in student government and has postponed plans to attend medical school for the opportunity of becoming president.

Commuter Awareness Days to inform off-campus students

By SCOTT C. SECKEL
State Press

Commuter Awareness Days, a week-long program of events designed to provide information to the 38,000 ASU students who commute to campus each day, will be staged next week by the Office for Off-Campus Student Services.

Pat Schweiss, director of the division, said that since so many students commute to ASU, "we thought it would be a great way to set aside student dollars for themselves."

Richard Landreth

The division of ASASU Campus Affairs was formerly called the Tenant/Commuter Association.

Among the services offered are: an apartment listing service and weekly vacancy list, a babysitter list, a commuter newsletter, a guide to off-campus living, bus guides and mediation in landlord/tenant disputes. All services are free to students.

According to Schweiss, approximately $1,000 will be spent on events, with local merchants such as Domino's Pizza making contributions.

Commuter Awareness Days will feature the largest campus philanthropic event of the year, a six-mile walk around Tempe to benefit Project Concern, will be held Saturday. Registration for the walk will be at 9 a.m. on the Sahuaro Hall lawn and the walk will begin at 10 a.m.

Project Concern is dedicated to funding children's hospitals and helping underprivileged children. The Residence Hall Association is working in conjunction with the Office for Off-Campus Student Services for this event.

On Wednesday, students will have a chance to sound off about parking problems during a parking forum at 4 p.m. in the Great Hall of the Law School.

Richard Landreth, Assistant Director of Parking Services, will field questions from a panel composed of Student Regent Pat McWhortor, Associated Students of ASU State Relations representative and presidential candidate Paul Larson and law student David Jordan.

The audience will be allowed to ask Landreth questions "until they are all answered," Schweiss said.

On Thursday, the last official ValTrans forum before the March 28 election be held, Schweiss said. Tempe Mayor

Harry Mitchell and Steve Beard, technical developer of the transportation system, will speak in favor of ValTrans at 4 p.m. in the Great Hall.

Diane Kresich of the Laissez Faire Institute and ASU communications professor John Crawford, representing Voters Against Senseless Transit, will provide the opposing viewpoint. Each side will have 10 to 15 minutes to present their arguments and will field questions from the audience.

To increase awareness of the name change, a grand office reopening will kick off events on Tuesday, with the Fates band playing Top 40 and oldies hits at 1 p.m. in the MU Rendezvous Lounge. A reception at 4:30 in the alumni lounge will feature speakers Student Affairs Vice President Betty Turner Asher and ASASU Campus Affairs Vice President Vince Micone.

Issues regarding ValTrans brought to forefront at campus debate

By RICHARD LAMPING
State Press

A heated debate on the lawn of the Student Services Building Thursday over the controversial ValTrans mass transportation system brought to the forefront current issues regarding the system.

The debate, sponsored by the ASU chapter of the Young Democrats, featured former Associated Students of ASU President Chris Cummiskey representing Residents For Safe And Efficient Transportation (RSET), and Tom Smith, a spokesman for Voters Against Senseless Transit (VAST).

"It appears to me that you want our money, and after you get it you're going to do whatever you damn well please with it," Smith said referring to Phoenix politicians who favor the transit system.

But Cummiskey said estimates state that the Valley's traffic problem will be much better if ValTrans is approved.

ValTrans, a light rail system that would service the entire Valley, will stop on campus near the bookstore.

Smith said the $8.4 billion it would take to build the system would be a waste.

"There are no demographics in Maricopa County to support a rail system," he said, adding that Metropolitan Phoenix will continue to expand outward and will not produce the density of population necessary to support a train system.

The area's highways, which will carry 99 percent of the traffic 30 years from now without a ValTrans system, will still carry 98 percent of the traffic with the system, he said.

However, Cummiskey said estimates show the Valley will be a densely populated by the year 2020.

"The density (of the highways) will be reduced (by ValTrans) up to 33 percent at rush hour traffic," he said.

But Smith said Cummiskey's figures are incorrect.

"No, they're not going to get that kind of relief; even according to ValTrans officials," he said. "Growth is going to be spread out."

He added that he cannot envision people walking one-half or one-fourth of a mile to get to a transit station.

Smith said his organization would like to see a system of more high-occupancy vehicles and carpools. He also suggested that businesses offer various working hours to their employees, thus placing motorists on the roads at different times and alleviating some rush-hour traffic.

"What we're looking at in 103 miles (of a train system) is connecting all areas of the Valley," Cummiskey said. "No area of our city should be left out."

He said the public will be kept up-to-date on the system's development. Because politicians who support the system are accountable to the public, they will not go against the wishes of the community, he said.

"Los Angeles is a very good indication of what Phoenix will be in 20 to 25 years," Cummiskey said. "It's that kind of lack of planning that took place in L. A. that we don't want to have here."

Students attending the debate asked how the Valley's intense heat will affect the train system. They also wanted to know how future energy and fossil fuels will be used in Phoenix.

Cummiskey said common sense dictates that ValTrans will be able to resist the temperatures, and the system will help the energy problems as well as the pollution problems cars create.

Smith said the pollution problem is decreasing now, and has been for the last 10 to 12 years.

He added that new technology in automobile development will help the pollution and energy problems.

Member of Salvadoran left-wing front predicts civil war

By MICHAEL LEWIS
State Press

Even as violence escalates between the left-wing front and government-backed military of El Salvador over the upcoming national elections, a representative of the left-wing front said last night that escalated civil war will be the only alternative.

Mercedes Salgado, a member of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN), spoke to a standing-room-only audience of more than 100 in the MU Thursday evening of the critical and potentially dangerous circumstances surrounding the national elections scheduled for March 19.

Salgado said the FMLN will initiate unprecedented military action against the party that wins the election. She said the proposals by the FMLN to the current Duarte government have been ignored.

"The only alternative we are going to have is to go through a violent way," she said.

Salgado said that three months ago the FMLN proposed a postponement of Sunday's elections for four to six months and formation of a committee with representatives from all parties to develop a plan to ensure safety for Salvadoran voters.

This and earlier proposals have been met with reprisals of terrorism and repression by the Salvadoran army and right-wing death squads, she said.

Salgado said the main problem in her country is U.S. intervention. She said the United States has spent more than $3 billion in military and economic aid in El Salvador in the last three years, and currently gives more than $2 million each day to the military-backed government.

"Eighty percent of that money has been used to continue the civil war," she said.

Salgado said there have been 70,000 people killed in El Salvador between 1980 and 1987. The ARENA party, the party expected to win Sunday's election, has predicted that 100,000 Salvadorans will be killed in the next six months, she said.

Salgado said that regardless of the outcome of the elections, the U.S. government should stop its economic and military aid to the right-wing government.

"Without aid from the United States the El Salvadoran government wouldn't last one day," she said.

Salgado said the majority of the Salvadoran people are unhappy with the current government. There are 750,000 political refugees currently in the United States fleeing right-wing death squads, she said.

"The Salvadorans should be allowed to work out their problems for themselves."

Irwin Daugherty/State Press

Mercedes Salgado illustrates what she claims is the misrepresentation of the Salvadoran political situation by the North American press Thursday in the MU Cochise Room.

Police search for Tempe bank robber

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

A bandit robbed a Tempe bank of an undisclosed amount of cash Wednesday, police said.

Police said the suspect robbed the Valley National Bank branch at 2528 W. Southern Ave. about 3:41 p.m. after he handed a teller a note that read: "This is a holdup, give me all your money."

No weapon was seen and the man fled the bank on foot after the teller filled a bank bag with cash. He was last seen in an industrial complex near the bank. A police canine was called but could not find the suspect, police said.

Police described the suspect as a Hispanic male in his early 30s, about 6-foot and 200 pounds. He had a stubble beard and was last seen wearing a dark baseball cap, black plastic frame sunglasses with yellow mirrored lenses, a tan pullover shirt and jeans.

Tempe police also reported Thursday:

•A man was arrested Wednesday after he allegedly led police on a one-mile chase after an officer tried to stop him for speeding in a residential neighborhood.

Anthony Fabbiani, Jr., 19, of Tempe, was arrested on suspicion of unlawful flight, trespassing and for a felony theft warrant issued by the Tempe Justice of the Peace Court.

Fabbiani was arrested about 11:10 a.m. in the 1000 block of Westchester Drive after he abandoned his vehicle. Police chased him on foot through the backyards of three homes before taking him into custody.

•ASU student Eddie Lee Manuel, Jr. was arrested early

police report

Thursday on suspicion of second degree burglary.

Manuel, 20, of Tempe, was arrested about 3 a.m. at 900 S. Terrace Road and booked into Tempe City Jail.

ASU police reported the following incidents Thursday:

•A thief stole a student's $850 Honda motorcycle Wednesday from Lot 15.

•A thief stole a $250 gold hood ornament from a 1988 Jaguar parked in Lot 59 on Sunday. Damage to the hood of the car is $250.

•A thief stole $165.25 from a petty cash box left in an unlocked file cabinet in the Engineering C-wing. The theft occurred sometime Tuesday or Wednesday.

•The Police Department's bicycle enforcement unit issued 35 citations Wednesday in addition to 102 warnings. Four bicycles were booted.

•A female student was arrested for underage possession of alcohol Wednesday south of 615 Alpha Drive. She was cited and released.

•A thief stole a $20 bicycle Tuesday from the Language and Literature building.

•A thief stole a University employee's wallet and its contents valued at $12 from an office at the Life Science building Tuesday.

•A thief stole an Arizona license plate Tuesday from a motorcycle parked in Lot 57. Loss is $10.

Archaeological site open for public viewing

By CLARE L. GOLDSBERRY
Contributing Writer

An archaeological site north of Cave Creek, excavated with the help of ASU students, will be open to the public Saturday.

Spur Cross, also the site of the ASU Anthropology Department's annual archaeological spring dig, will be open for viewing from 10 a.m. to noon as the concluding event in Arizona Archaeological Week.

The research project is funded by Norton Development Company, owner of the property.

This is the fourth consecutive year the dig has taken place at Spur Cross Ranch where several villages "from various time periods" exist in the desert foothills northeast of Phoenix, according to Arleyn Simon, a faculty associate at ASU.

Interest in conserving the prehistoric records and recognition of the importance of such sites have led land developers to underwrite projects such as the one at Spur Cross, said Simon.

"They are not required by law to preserve sites, but are doing this voluntarily," she said.

According to anthropology major Amy Cobb, participants in the "dig" work closely with archaeologists and graduate teaching assistants to learn how to uncover artifacts and preserve what they find.

"We go to the site and start from day one," Cobb said. "We look at the site, survey it, are divided into groups and begin digging in different areas."

Spur Cross Ranch, explained Simon, is the site of several villages. Site No. 19 contains several buildings "with stone walls dating from about A. D. 1100 to 1400."

Excavation at Site No. 19, which is the largest of the nearly 100 sites on the ranch, was started last spring.

Work will continue at this site as workers seek answers to such questions as whether certain rock types are used to build structures with specific functions.

In addition to the many professionals at the site, many volunteers, including the Desert Foothills Chapter of the Arizona Archaeological Society, as well as students are assisting.

"It's a cooperative effort by a lot of people in the community," Simon said.

Cobb related how she had discovered a "left-over dinner" which included a "rabbit mandible with teeth," in addition to "large, decorated pieces of shell bracelets, beads and pottery" during excavation of the site.

Cobb said that a hearth was found which is very important to archaeologists because they are able to radiocarbon date the area.

Spur Cross Ranch is located on Spur Cross Road, north of Cave Creek Road. Signs will be posted directing the public to the area.

UofA attempting to qualify guards as cops

PHOENIX (AP) — The University of Arizona has not proved its case yet for letting campus security guards qualify for police pensions, a middle-level state court said Thursday.

The three-judge Court of Appeals panel based its unanimous opinion on court papers filed so far in a dispute between the university's local pension board and the manager of the state Public Safety Retirement Fund.

But it left open the possibility that it might rule for the university if the local board establishes that guards are campus policemen and face the same kinds of hazards as other police and firefighters.

The public safety retirement fund offers higher benefits than the retirement fund for regular employees. Regular campus police officers are in it already.

University of Arizona officials said they would have to have their lawyers study the decision before deciding whether to appeal.

STATE PRESS EDITORSHIP

The ASU Student Publications Advisory Board is now soliciting applications for the State Press editorship for the Fall Semester 1989.

Applicants for the position of editor:

- must be a full-time student at ASU in good standing (not on academic or disciplinary probation);
- Must have a cumulative grade index of 2.50 or better;
- must have served two semesters on the staff of the State Press;
- must have completed a minimum of 15 hours of journalism courses, including news writing, reporting, editing and journalism law;
- must not graduate prior to the completion of the term of appointment.

Applicants must also:

- submit at least two letters of recommendation from university faculty members and/or professional journalists;
- list on the application form the titles of all journalism courses completed and the grades earned in those courses;
- submit at least two examples of a news story, feature story or editorial written for the State Press or another newspaper; and describe on the application form the functions and responsibilities of previous positions held on the staff of the State Press or other newspapers.

Applicants must pick up application forms at the State Press office, Matthews Center North Basement. The completed forms must be typewritten.

The deadline for receipt of applications will be 5 p.m. Friday, April 7, 1989.

Pregnant teens aided by 2 ASU nutrition students

By STACY HAYMES
State Press

Two ASU nutrition students are helping teen-age girls decide on the right foods to eat while they are pregnant as part of their studies.

"We talk to them about specific food groups, specific nutrients and breast feeding versus bottle feeding," said Kim Meier, a senior who works with six pregnant girls, who range in age in age from 15 to 18 years old.

The two students are working at TAPPS (teen-age pregnancy program), a Mesa vocational-tech school as part of their field experience course.

Laura Robinson, who counsels two girls a week, said she enjoys working with the teen-agers and said she believes the counseling is helping them become better mothers.

In the program, the nutrition student meets with each girl and discusses weight gain, diet records and foods the mothers have been eating.

Robinson said, "We go over diets and assure that they get what they need while they are pregnant."

Robinson said she chose the project because she eventually would like to become a counselor for young people.

Meier said, "The most important nutrients the girls should be getting are protein, iron, folic acid, Vitamin A and C and calcium."

Meier said she got involved in the program because she was interested in teen-age pregnancy and would eventually like to go into counseling.

People "think of it (teen-age pregnancy)

as a sad thing but most of them seem very happy and enthusiastic about being pregnant," Meier said.

Julie Spicher, an ASU graduate who earned a masters in nutrition in August, established the program five years ago.

"We have probably 40 (mothers) in the program," Spicher said. "It is an option for them to attend school.

"We have had a lot of cooperation. They are real receptive to hearing about nutrition. I think ASU students help. They can relate to younger students telling them what to eat rather than adults," Spicher said.

Spicher, now a dietitian in the Mesa public school system, conducted research and found that the teen-agers improved their diets after participating in the program.

Mile-long hiking trail planned for Tempe's 'A' Mountain

By MICHELE McDONALD
State Press

Tempe Butte, home of ASU's "A," will be the site for Tempe's first designated hiking trail system, the Tempe Parks and Recreation administrator said Thursday.

The approximately mile-long trail will replace the series of undesignated trails on the butte, Duane Dawson said.

"There are trails that have been worn in from people using them," he said. "Right now we have a significant amount of people climbing the butte. They go everywhere and scar it up."

The designated trail will traverse about 250 feet of the 300 foot butte, and parts of existing trails will be used, Dawson said.

Dawson said the trail will start by the railroad tracks near Third Street and Mill Avenue or the Hayden Flour Mill on Mill Avenue, he said.

The trail will angle up the south side of the butte and loop around to the north side, completing a full loop. A portion of the trail will travel up to a ledge, located under the highest point on the westside of the butte, Dawson said.

Picnic benches, drinking fountains and rest stops will be available to hikers, he said.

Bill Ream, who served on the City Council from 1972 to 1988, said the trail should be designed for all levels of ability to use.

Ream said he has climbed the butte "a couple of hundred times," but now has a heart condition that prevents him from climbing the butte in its current condition.

"(Currently) that butte is almost untouchable," he said. "This trail will let everyone use it."

Dawson said the trail will be on the designing board for another month. Construction will begin in June, and the trail should be open by the end of the summer.

"The trail will be a unique asset for the community to have it in the middle of town," he said.

He said there are not cost estimates for the project.

Dawson said the city will use natural stonework and vegetation to conceal the scarring created by numerous hikers on the steep trails.

"That is a major concern about how to address the scarring," he said.

Also, this trail system will be accessible to the handicapped, unlike the crude footpaths on the butte, Dawson said.

Portions of the butte are as much as 20 percent in grade and are too steep for most people to walk, he said.

Dawson said perons, which are steps with ramps, will be used to decrease the steepness of the grade to 10 percent.

Up to 80 percent of the trail may be available for wheelchair use, and designers are studying how to accomplish this goal, he said.

Three directors take 'New York' in short(s)

By JILL CHRISTINE HERBRANSON
State Press

Ah, New York, spawning ground of everything from the eclectic to the extravagant, the precocious to the pasty-faced, the fortunate to the fortuneless.

These cliché aspects and many more are all embodied in Francis Coppola's, Martin Scorsese's and Woody Allen's collaborative new film, "New York Stories."

This movie is made up of three shorts: "Life Lessons" (Scorsese), "Life Without Zoe" (Coppola), and "Oedipus Wrecks" (Allen). There are a million stories in the naked city; these are three of them.

"Life Lessons" stars Nick Nolte as Lionel Dobie, the disheveled and scruffy yet brilliant and famous artist, with Rosanna Arquette as Paulette, his live-in nymphette and would-be artist. He loves her, she loves an evil performance-artist type. He's fervent, she's faltering. She's a vision of loveliness, he never washes his hair. All in all, an interesting introspection into the human condition.

"Life Without Zoe" is the weakest segment. Precocious pre-pubescent can be amusing, but unfortunately the young actors in this story could not carry it off. This is surprising, considering the prestigious personages crammed into this project — one would imagine that under Coppola's direction, casting would have been more particular. At any rate, the story itself needs a little more backbone as well — it is rather sloppily put together, racing through any sort of plot development.

The center of the story is a young girl named Zoe (Heather McComb), whose father is a renowned flute player and consequently abundantly rich. Zoe's parents are separated and are both usually traveling, so guardianship falls on Claudio, an employee of the hotel in which Zoe lives. Claudio is played by Giancarlo Giannini, and is the funniest and most worthwhile character of this story — the shining light in the darkness.

Secret gems, shieks, thieves and misunderstandings riddle the film for about 30 seconds, as the film whizzes through these thoroughly stupid sub-plots.

A highly disturbing scene in which Zoe and her upper-crust friends are en route to an extravagant costume ball has an unseen transient residing in a cardboard box reach out and grabs Zoe's ankle, demanding food.

Lastly is the "Oedipus Wrecks" story, starring Woody Allen as Sheldon, Mia Farrow as his fiancée Lisa, and Mae Questel as the Jewish Mother from Hell. Sheldon is at the brink after living his whole life with his mother telling everyone how he used to wet the bed, about the blanket he always sucked on, about his impending baldness. His troubles seem to be over after he takes her to a magic show and she actually does disappear — but in a wonderfully bizarre Twilight Zone twist, Sheldon is soon subjected to a magnification of his personal hell to other worldly proportions.

It's doubtful that all three stories will be equally enjoyable to any given viewer, but the good thing about this film is you have three chances to like it. There's really something for everyone . . . but you might just have to wait it out to see it.

Big sound — and lots of horns — pays off for band

By KEITH ROSENHAGEN
Contributing Writer

Drums, bass, guitar and horns — lots of horns — are the ingredients to one of the Valley's greatest musical forces. They are the modern vendors of rhythm and manpower — better known as the Groove Merchants.

"We could beat any other band in town in a tug of war," said bassist Tracy Mortimer, band spokesman during a lighthearted interview Wednesday night.

The Groove Merchants, made up of 10 experienced players, aged 29 to 41, are not only large in number, but also in sound. Their rhythm and blues style is reminiscent of the early

James Brown and Blood Sweat and Tears. Within this sprinkling of influences, the Merchants pack their show with the energy found in the modern-day brass of Tower of Power and Jack Mack and the Heart-Attack.

The band found its beginning as a fill-in for Valley blues guitarist Chuck Hall, at what used to be Heydays (now known as Zeros). Mortimer was contacted by Heydays' manager and asked to put together a basic rhythm-section with a couple horn players.

"We started just getting volunteers, and the next thing you know we had 10 guys," said Mortimer of the band's beginning. "By the time we got up to eight or nine guys we

The band, originally put together in September 1987, saw a considerable turnover of players in the first year. This caused a lack of solidity in the group.

"There have been 26 to 27 people in this band in the course of a year and a half," said Mortimer, who now refers to former on-call members as the Merchant reserves.

"But now we have a steady lineup and that means there are guys taking on the responsibility (of the band)," Mortimer said of the present day Groove Merchants.

The most recent member, and one who brought with him an attitude of commitment, is Rich Cross, trumpet player and ASU alumnus. Cross also brought to the group his experience — 10 years to be exact, part of which he spent with ASU's marching band.

When asked about the pros and cons of such a large group, Mortimer responded that the joy of making good music outweighs any disadvantages found in coordinating so many players.

"Mainly what we're going after is party music," he said. "All music should evoke an emotion in somebody. And our emotion that we're trying to evoke in this music is 'Let's have a good time, 'cause it's all right.'"

The present day Groove Merchants maintain closer relations with each other than members did before. They have a family atmosphere that they take with them on stage and off.

This closeness can lead to heated emotions between players; however, tempers cool off when they perform together.

"No matter what's wrong in my life or what's screwed up, when we're out playing with the Groove Merchants everything's right," said Cross.

The Groove Merchants feel their music is enduring. Rhythm and Blues is time-enduring music and is satisfying to play, said Mortimer on behalf of the band.

They don't worry about reaching a certain audience. The band has found their party music format readily received by all kinds of people.

"I've been surprised in a lot of instances just at how wide an audience we've been able to appeal to," said Mortimer. "It's like I said, it's just party music."

The Groove Merchants will be appearing tonight at 8 at the Vine Tavern for their outdoor Saint Patrick's Day celebration.

The Groove Merchants will be playing 8 p.m. tonight at The Vine Tavern, located at 801 E. Apache Blvd.

Superstitions

Is there any truth to these myths or are they based on fear?

By MISH TELL
State Press

- Step on a crack . . .
- Break your mother's back . . .
- Step on a line . . .
- Break your mother's spine . . .
- Step on a stone . . .
- Break your mother's bones . . .

Superstitious sayings have been around for centuries. Fearing black cats crossing one's path and walking under a ladder — both symbolizing bad luck — are some of the more common.

But are they real? Can a belief actually influence a person's behavior?

"I think most superstitions come from the fact that most people have not awakened to their divine nature," said Jack Stethens, psychic at the House of Dawn in Phoenix. "I believe in the power of man and God and that man is a part of God. He can make of his own life a masterpiece or a mess."

A superstition is an irrational belief, often based on fear, which is accompanied by a strong belief in supernatural forces and powers affecting one's life, according to the "Dictionary of the Mysticism" and the "Occult" by Nevill Drury.

But superstitions aren't always on the negative side playing to fear and insecurities. Often times, superstitions are used to symbolize good luck.

Take, for instance, a rabbit's foot. Carrying around a rabbit's foot in one's right pocket is noted for bringing good luck and prosperity.

But Stethens feels a superstition is like a placebo or "something that works for people as a crutch" because they have not found their divine energy or strength in themself, yet."

Stethens also said that even though everyone is born with eternal knowledge, parents and the environment often play key roles in changing this knowledge. Superstitions, then, play a vital role in what the individual believes, he said.

Still, many people all over the world believe there is something hidden inside a little charm, or a positive or negative force lies within a given number, enough to influence a behavior.

In light of St. Patrick's Day, many people believe a four-leaf clover found in a patch of three-leaf clovers brings good luck and fortune.

In Irish folklore, leprechauns were said to haunt wine cellars and guard mounds of hidden treasure, according to Drury. In fact, it is said that the leprechauns are the little elves who watch the pot of gold underneath a rainbow. If one sees the pot of gold it is lucky; but if one sees both ends of a rainbow, bad luck will come.

Superstitions. Superstitions. Superstitions.

Triskaidekaphobia is fear of the number thirteen. Everyone feels a little queasy on Friday the 13th, and many hotels have even gone as far as not placing a 13th floor in the elevator numbers, or really just renaming it the 14th, in their structures.

Knocking on wood after a statement is supposed to bring good luck and so is picking up a lucky penny on the street, of course, only if the heads side is showing.

But even though superstitions can be fun, some people take them seriously.

"With superstitions, people are placing in their minds what is going to happen," Sandra Schaeffer, expert in metaphysics, said. "They've got this negative energy and have placed it into their subconscious. For instance: walking under a ladder. You're not going to fall and break your leg if you walk under a ladder unless you've placed that thought in your subconscious," she said.

Stethens feels that superstitions do have power but only "the power you believe in. It's your belief in something, anything that gives this power over to you. Then, the power happens, even if it's just an illusion," he said.

Weddings often contain hidden symbolism controlled by superstitions.

For instance, the continuous band of a wedding ring is said to be round for eternity; but if a diamond is placed in the center, the bride and groom will have a rocky marriage.

Throwing rice at the new bride and groom is a superstition that supposedly fools the evil spirits into acknowledging the marriage. Nowadays, it is used to symbolize the fruitfulness of the marriage. Superstitiously, if rice is not thrown at a wedding, the new couple will be poor.

Other lucky superstitions include throwing salt over the left shoulder and cutting the first piece of one's own birthday cake.

When giving a friend a new wallet, place a dollar in the billfold for good luck. Also, where money is concerned, never place one's purse or wallet on the floor, said Schaeffer.

All the energy from the day of people scurrying, working and corrupting runs through the floor and places negative energy in the flow of your money. It's bad for your aura, according to Schaeffer.

Actress's movie career off to a 'flying' start

NEW YORK (AP) — Amidst all the gore and sticky substances of "Fly II," Daphne Zuniga emerges relatively unscratched with just a splotch of blood on her forehead.

She's been just as fortunate throughout her career, starring in Rob Reiner's romantic comedy, "The Sure Thing," a year after leaving school and going on to appear in Mel Brooks' "Spaceballs" and co-starring with Lucille Ball in "Stone Pillow," a TV movie.

Zuniga was studying theater at the University of California at Los Angeles in 1984 when a friend asked her to help read a scene for an agent, who was impressed enough to sign both women.

"I'm tempted to say it was luck but I believe there's a right time and a right place for everything," said Zuniga, a native of Berkeley, Calif. "I didn't plan it but I was ready for it. If you're given the opportunity, you have to take it."

In "Fly II," the sequel to David Cronenberg's classic horror film starring Jeff Goldblum, Zuniga plays the girlfriend of the original fly's son (Eric Stolz), who suffers from the same disease that transforms him from man to insect.

"I'm in love and he's changing into a fly," Zuniga shrugged. "On all sets you have distractions but you multiply that with all the machines and noises. It took a lot of concentration to get quiet and focused."

Zuniga also recently played a Latin dancer who falls in love with a Catholic priest (Tom Berenger) in "Last Rites." It was her first role in a movie in which she had a love scene.

She said Berenger ("Platoon") helped her with the awkwardness of the scene:

"He (Berenger) said something which Debra Winger had told him that helped him in 'Betrayal.' She said, 'Let's just stay in bed all day and it will go by quicker.'"

"Tom was great. I trusted him fully. That's important when you're so vulnerable, emotionally and physically and for the first time. It was wonderful. I was very fortunate."

Zuniga considers herself fortunate in most of her films. In "The Sure Thing," which co-starred John Cusack, she was helped by the sensitive direction of Reiner.

"Rob was an actor so there was no problem with communication, none whatsoever," she said. "He understands about romance and love and all those feelings very well. I just fully trusted him to bring out qualities that I wasn't in touch with or didn't remember."

"I was worried about being funny enough, but Rob pointed out that comedy comes from reality."

But for Brooks, mastermind of such off-the-wall films as "Blazing Saddles" and "Young Frankenstein," comedy comes from every direction. Zuniga was admittedly nervous about working with a director whose previous stars included such wacky comedians as Madeline Kahn and Teri Garr.

"My background was in dramatic training and much more realistic. I really had to trust him and he really helped me find that big isn't necessarily bad — in fact it's preferred!"

She found Brooks to be serious about his work, however, sometimes running his crew through multiple takes, and had a similar experience with Ball, discovering that television's zany Lucy Ricardo was a dedicated professional.

"She's very serious about what she's doing," Zuniga said. "She knows what works for her and I really had to earn her respect. In the very beginning, she said I looked wonderful but I had to speak up and express more. I took that as a sign that I wasn't satisfying her but that wasn't it at all. She was very warm and supportive."

Zuniga has long been involved in social causes, accompanying her mother to anti-war rallies. The actress co-founded Young Artists United, an organization of Hollywood activists, and is also a member of CISPES (the Committee in Solidarity With the People of El Salvador). Her father is from Guatemala and is especially concerned about human rights in Central America.

"My family has been threatened so it's not just an intellectual commitment, it's something deeper," she said. "My parents not only cared about issues but expressed it. They were both students and both were very expressive. They said if you believed in something you should pursue it."

She has certainly been determined to advance her acting career and is anxious to try as many different roles as possible.

"I have been offered a few genre films, special effects movies, but I really feel like I haven't been typecast because I've played a real broad variety of parts."

"I'm just reading scripts and would like to do something more down to earth, where my leading man stays a human being through the whole thing."

ASU wrestling coach Bobby Douglas will lead the Devils today in the quarterfinals of the NCAA Championship in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Grapplers advance to NCAA quarterfinals

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — On paper it looks like the 59th annual NCAA wrestling championship could go to anybody.

There is a dogfight for the top notch between five teams, which includes the Sun Devils, after the first day competition.

ASU, the defending national champion, advanced six grapplers into the quarterfinals, which is the most of any team in the tournament. Iowa and Oklahoma both have five wrestlers each competing in the championship bracket.

Everyone is chasing after the favored Oklahoma State, which pulled out to the early lead and never looked back opening day.

The Sun Devils are currently holding down the fourth-place slot, but should advance or move up higher in the rankings as competition goes along.

Junior Zeke Jones, who is seeded ninth, pulled off a crucial decision over Iowa's Steve Martin in a 118-pound second round match.

Martin drew first blood, something Jones knew he was going to do because of his aggressive wrestling style.

But Jones came storming back, scoring key reversals and take-downs in the final period. When the final horn sounded, it was Jones victorious by a tally of five to three.

"The season started yesterday," Jones said. "The training began seven months ago, but the season lasts three days."

Iowa coach Dan Gable boasted the same statement two days prior to the national tournament.

The next contestant for Jones will be defending national champion Jack Cuvo of East Stroudsburg.

"I feel confident," Jones said. "I know he can be beat."

Jones recorded two wins in the preliminary round to meet up with Martin.

While Jones and five other Devils continued to wrestle, the season ended Thursday for 126-pounder Marco Sanchez and 167-pounder G. T. Taylor.

Sanchez was ousted by Curtis Willey of Millersville, 5-4. Taylor recorded a win in his inaugural NCAA meet in the pigtail, the freshman defeated eighth-seeded Frank McKeon of Cleveland State 5-3. The first round was when he exited by way of Chris Gessner of Notre Dame, 5-4.

Junior Saunders continued the Sun Devils quest to defend their national title.

Saunders struck early against Travis West of Portland State and held on with a 14-5 pummeling. The Pac-10 142-pound champion is seeded fourth and recorded three wins on opening day.

He defeated Ryan Johnson of Central Connecticut 7-5 and Marty King of Bloomsburg 11-6. The three victories for Saunders puts him at an impressive 40-5 clip for the season.

Following in Saunders footsteps was Junior Thom Ortiz. Ortiz (150-pounds) tallied an escape over Pat Hogan from Northern Iowa with 1:45 left to wrestle in the second period.

The one point was the only scoring of the match besides the riding time issued Gressley Ortiz at the end of the match. The All-American recorded the 2-0 decision.

Ortiz beat Oklahoma's Brandon Dennington 8-0 in the first round to advance.

"It's an exciting tournament," Ortiz said, "and it looks like it could be close — anyone could win it."

Classwork stalls traveling of ASU men linksters

Top-ranked Devils compete in 3-day classic at Fresno State

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

As midseason approaches for the ASU men's golf team, midterm grades in the classroom are becoming somewhat of a concern for head coach Steve Loy.

The top-ranked Sun Devils begin play today at the three-day, 54-hole Fresno State Golf Classic at Fresno, Calif., but Loy was undecided up until Wednesday as to who would make the trip because several golfers needed to stay behind to make up some classwork.

"We're basically trying to get caught up in the classroom," Loy said. "We're trying to do our best job to keep up with academics."

Sophomore John Bizik, who had a solid performance last weekend at the Golf Digest Intercollegiate in Houston, including a hole-in-one, is one of the golfers who will stay behind.

"He has a lot of classwork to make up," Loy said. "He probably played about the best all-around game last weekend."

Senior Jim Strickland, junior Per Johansson and freshman Phil Mickelson automatically qualified for the Fresno tournament, while freshman Brett Dean and juniors Dave Cunningham and Scott Frisch will round out ASU's team.

Another problem Loy has had to deal with is the superior depth of the team. Loy said he has to persuade players to keep trying their best at qualifying rounds, as that is how he decides who will compete in tournaments.

"We've got a lot of depth," Loy said. "I'm pleased with that, but it makes it tough for the players and coach. All the players have to keep playing to win."

"When there's this much depth and talent, it's tough to say you're playing your best golf. It's a situation where a lot of good players makes it more difficult for the coach and players to make good decisions."

The Fresno tournament marks the second straight weekend the Sun Devils have played, but Loy said his players are not road weary.

"These boys are here to win, and the only way to do that is to go play," Loy said.

The Sun Devils, who have been ranked No. 1 for a little more than a week, faltered somewhat in Saturday's final round in Houston and finished in a fifth-place tie.

ASU was in third place after the second round, but shot an 11-over 299 and finished with a three-day total of 878, 17 strokes behind champion Louisiana State.

"Overall, I was pleased with most of our performance," Loy said. "We were exactly where we wanted to be after 42 holes, but we have to play 54 to win."

Loy said he didn't think the No. 1 ranking affected the team's play.

"Our boys have been handling it very well," he said. "Golf is a unique game. All you have to do is hit the next shot. There's not an opponent to beat. You're only as good as your last tournament."

And Loy said the Fresno tournament will be a good one for the Sun Devils to win. ASU finished second at Fresno last year, three strokes behind Texas-El Paso.

"We always seem to be close, but we never seem able to win there," he said. "By the end of March, we want to have our lineup pretty well decided. We just want to continue to make progress and do our best."

"It wasn't one of our best weeks, but it's nothing to be ashamed of."

Women gymnasts must hit to outscore intrastate rival

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

Consistency has been the major problem facing the 10th-ranked ASU women's gymnastics team this season.

However, the Sun Devils must perform clean and perfect routines in order to defeat intrastate rival Arizona tonight according to ninth-year coach John Spini.

"We have to hit," he said. "We haven't hit 24 sets (in entire competition) this year."

The Devils, who will perform in their final meet of the season, play host to UofA tonight at 7:30 in the University Activity Center.

ASU is coming off of a 189.55 score in a triangular with No. 6 Oregon State and No. 3 Florida. Lady luck was not on the Devils side as they suffered several misfortunes.

Sophomore Michelle Colavin fell off the balance beam during her routine. Despite the setback the All-Pac-10 performer earned a 9.05 after giving it a final effort. But due to a bruised knee sustained in the fall, Colavin was unable to compete in the floor exercise competition.

This week has also seen junior Heather Carter come down with a cold limiting her routines. However Spini said he liked what he has seen while she has been at the practice gym and expects her to be ready for the Wildcats.

"Heather is really looking good in workouts," Spini said.

Carter has missed the majority of the season because of a knee injury. She will see action in the floor exercise.

This is just the tip of the iceberg; the Sun Devils have been plagued with injuries which prohibited them to compete as a full team.

Marika LeSieur made her return to action by scoring a 9.5 on the floor exercise, and since then she has developed into one of the Devils links to success in the vault and the floor.

LeSieur missed the rest of the season because of a severe ankle strain.

"We have not had a strong floor line all year," Spini said.

But during spring break the Sun Devils showed their coach and other Pac-10 competitors that they could score high. ASU finished third at the Pac-10 meet with the score of 191.10, only .10 better than the Wildcats.

It was the Sun Devils highest score of the year and Spini is looking for a repeat performance.

"We need to beat UofA and by a point," Spini said. "What we need is a 190.50 and I'd like to score a 191."

The reason the Sun Devil mentor is concerned with scoring so high is because ASU needs a high home meet score for the national seeding process. The season best at the UAC is 189.75.

"We are going to prove to everyone that we are the team that people think we are," LeSieur said.

And despite all of the diversity, the Devils are going to defeat Arizona in the eyes of All-American Suzy Baldock.

ASU strength and conditioning coach John D. McBride will coach the Sun Devil team participants in the U.S. National Weightlifting Championship this weekend.

U.S. weightlifting tourney to lift off with ASU team

By KRISTI HOWELL
State Press

The first U. S. Weightlifting Federation Championship to be held in Arizona will take place Saturday at ASU's P.E. East.

More than 40 of the most competitive collegiate male and female Olympic-style lifters in the country, including a few former Olympians, will participate in the 1989 National Collegiate Championship.

The competition will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until approximately 7 p.m. Admission to the event is $2.

As a requirement of national collegiate meets, drug tests will be administered to all the competitors by the U.S. Olympic committee.

The meet director, John D. McBride, a strength and conditioning coach for ASU, has been lifting competitively for eight years and starting coaching two years ago.

"Olympic lifting consists of snatches and clean and jerks, not bench press, squats and dead lift — that's power lifting," McBride said.

The meet will feature both individual and team competitions, with participants being judged on the total amount lifted in the snatch and clean and jerk events. Medals will be awarded to the top three teams as well as the three highest finishers in each weight class.

There are 10 individual weight classes and a team consists of four members. No more than two competitors in one weight class can be on the same team.

The ASU weightlifting team consist of Chad "Sparky" Howard in the 75 kg. weight class; cheerleader Mike Tobin, also in the 75 kg.; Terry Porter in the 87.5 kg.; and former Sun Devil discus and hammer thrower David Bickel in the 100 kg.

"We should place in the top three team title," McBride said.

The ASU team will enter this competition as tough competitors.

Porter was the former Nebraska and Colorado State Champion, and Howard and Tobin both have placed in competitions.

Howard, who will not be wearing his Sparky uniform for this showing, said he is looking forward to competing at the collegiate level.

"For the last four and a half years, I've been cheering for all athletes, now I get a chance to be the athlete," Howard said.

After training seriously for the past eight months and placing from first to fourth in five meets, Howard said he hopes to set three personal records in this meet.

"I plan to snatch 100 kilograms and clean 120 kilograms. That will beat my record by

ASU Baseball

Arizona State's Six-Pac schedule continues this weekend as the Sun Devils play host to Southern Cal for a three-game series at Packard Stadium.

Game times are 2:30 p.m. today, and 1 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

ASU's starting pitching rotation will be Rusty Kilgo (3-3) tonight, Sean Rees (3-1) on Saturday, and Kip Yaughn (3-0) on Sunday.

ASU leads the all-time series with the Trojans, 49-43. Last season, each team swept a series in the opposing ballpark.

All ASU baseball games are free to students with a validated ID.

ASU Men's Tennis

The ASU men's tennis team will put a three-match winning streak to the test when it plays host to No. 1 ranked California at 1:30 p.m. today, and No. 12 Southern California at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

It was one year to the day, March 18, when ASU recorded perhaps its biggest win under head coach Lou Belken, upsetting then top-ranked USC, 5-4, at home.

"That match was the turning point of the season," Belken said. "I believe that USC win helped us gain more confidence and vaulted us into the NCAA Championship."

ASU Track and Field

The ASU men's and women's track and field team will play host to Texas, Wichita State and Princeton Saturday at Sun Angel Stadium. The field events will commence at 11 a.m. and the running events will begin at noon.

Wrestling

The top contender for an individual title, Dan St. John continued to climb the ladder. The top ranked Sun Devil decisioned Jeff Kworknik of NC State 11-4. St. John blanked Mark Reiland of Iowa 6-0 in the opening round of the tournament.

With four seconds left in the second round match between ASU's Jim Gressley (177-pounds) and Northern Iowa's Rich Powers, it was not certain who would be wrestling in the semi-final match.

Gressley held a comfortable 10-5 lead in the second period, but faltered only holding a 12-10 advantage with 20 ticks left on the clock.

Powers was riding Gressley in hopes of defeating the All-American. But Powers dreams were shattered when Gressley and the clock got the best of him 12-11.

"It felt great," Gressley said. "I'm just taking it one at time and doing my best."

For the Sun Devils it was John Ginther who wrestled with great intensity walking through his first day matches. The senior defeated Jeff Spinetti of West Virginia. Ginther threw Spinetti to the mat with 37 seconds into the match hurting his opponent and leading from there on.

Gymnastics

"We are not going to let injuries stop us," the junior said. "We beat them at Pacs and we're going to burn them on our own floor."

Baldock has recorded a 9.8 on the uneven bars along with Tracy Butler and Colavin at the conference meet, and the trio earned all-conference allocates.

"We are very strong on bars," Spini said.

According to Butler, ASU has been preparing for UofA with great intensity.

"Our workouts this week have gone really well," the freshman all-arounder said. "Everyone realizes how crucial it is to get a good score."

And to get that high score Spini is hoping for will require a team effort and a strong performance. Junior Collette Anderson agrees with this statement.

"It is going to take everything we have," Anderson said. "Everything has to come together at once (for a high score)."

Ice Devils round out year

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

The ASU Ice Devils hockey club closes out the season with a pair of home games this weekend against Southern Cal, but big preparations already are in order for next year's schedule.

The Ice Devils (3-9) battle the Trojans at 5:30 p.m. today and Saturday at Tower Ice Palace, 38th Street and Thomas Road at Tower Plaza in Phoenix.

But the eyes of coach Dan Murphy are focused on an attractive home schedule next year, which includes a before-Thanksgiving date with Iowa State and a Nov. 30 battle against Wisconsin.

"We're going to have lots of big teams to play," Murphy said. "It will be a challenge."

But is ASU ready to meet the challenge? "We better be ready," Murphy said. "We're only four or five players from being a good contender. If we can get some money from the various organizations, then we'll be set."

Negotiations also are being conducted with Fiesta Bowl officials about playing host to a college hockey tournament around Christmas. Murphy said he has received "quite a few" oral commitments from teams interested in playing in a tournament.

But for as much enthusiasm as he has for next year, Murphy said he would like to go out with a bang this season.

"We just basically want to finish the season with everyone feeling good about each other," Murphy said. "We want to end the season on a good note and maintain good fan support."

The Devils are coming off a split with UCLA March 4-5, with ASU winning the first game, 8-5, but losing the second, 5-4.

But since the games were played as ASU began Spring Break, the Ice Devils were playing at only about half-strength.

"It was still a great series," Murphy said. "One of our whole lines was missing, but I was still fairly pleased with the effort."

Murphy said he expects all his players to be in uniform today.

Admission to the games is $3, $2.50 with a validated ASU ID.

The "Sin City" Alternative

A lot More for A lot Less.

There is a choice. When you choose The Towers for the full academic year, you can save up to $500 on your summer school room rates.

MORE OF THIS.

A lease for summer at The Towers is only $600 with utilities and services included. The first 100 residents save $500 on summer leases when they sign a lease for a full academic year. The next 100 save $400; the next save $300.

LESS OF THIS.

It's hard to have fun when you're low on cash, but that's what happens when you have to pay high summer lease rates, phone hookup charges, and those astronomical Arizona Air conditioning bills.

OVER THERE

In Sin City, roommates have the inalienable right to live like pigs. The bad part is that most of them do.

OVER HERE.

At The Towers you won't have a roommate during the summer, but you do have housekeeping service. We even scrub the bathroom and take out the trash!

THE VIEW FROM SIN CITY:

You'll savor your view of the parking lot and the dumpster, complete with all the street noises and smells that you'll learn to call "home."

So if you deserve more than "Sin City" this summer, call or come by the leasing office at The Towers for more information.

Stanford hoops suffers defeat in NCAAs

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Marc Brown riddled the Stanford defense with long-range shooting, then sank two free throws with three seconds to play Thursday as Siena shocked the Cardinal 80-78 in the opening round of the NCAA East Regional.

It was an improbable ending to an improbable game in which Brown, who finished with 32 points, was both hero and goat as Siena blew a 16-point second-half lead before pulling the game out.

The 5-foot-11 sophomore twice missed the front end of two one-and-one opportunities in the final minute that might have clinched the game before sinking the game winners for Siena, which played before fans for the first time in 10 games. They had played their last nine in empty arenas because of a measles outbreak at its campus at Loudonville, N.Y., outside Albany.

The victory marked the third time since the tournament expanded to 64 teams in 1985 that a 14th seed in a regional had beaten a third seed. It also occurred in 1986, when Cleveland State beat Indiana and Arkansas-Little Rock beat Illinois.

Siena, champions of the ECAC North Atlantic Conference, led by as much as eight points in the first half, but Stanford, the Pac-10 runner-up, came back to tie it at 37-all at halftime.

Stanford scored the first two baskets of the second half, but the Saints went on a 24-4 binge in which they hit five 3-point baskets and a three-point play to make it 61-45 with 12:10 to go.

The 13th-rated Cardinal then scored 13 straight points in a 21-5 run that tied the score at 66 after a Todd Lichti dunk following a steal with 6:36 left.

The game stayed close and Siena led 78-76 with 54 second left when Brown was fouled and missed the front end of a one-and-one. He missed again 20 seconds later and Stanford's Adam Keefe was fouled on the rebound.

Keefe made both shots to tie the score at 78. Brown then brought the ball up court against the Cardinal defense, worked the clock down, got a one-on-one matchup against Lichti, a third-team All-American. He drove the right baseline, was fouled by Lichti and sank both free throws to give the Saints the victory, improving to 25-4.

Terry Taylor tried a 75-foot desperation shot that hit the backboard as time ran out on the Cardinal, 26-7.

Jeff Robinson added 20 for the Saints.

Keefe scored 22 points, including the last 12 Cardinal points. Lichti, who went out briefly in the first half with an injury, had 17 and Taylor scored 11.

UofA slams Robert Morris in round one

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Sean Elliott scored 27 points and Anthony Cook added 25 Thursday as No. 1 Arizona opened with a 21-2 run and beat Robert Morris 94-60 in the first round of the NCAA West Regional.

Elliott scored 19 points in the first half for the Wildcats, who have won 10 straight. Arizona, 28-3, scored the first 12 points of the game and held Robert Morris to one field goal in the first seven minutes. The Wildcats led 54-26 at halftime.

Robert Morris, champion of the Northeast Conference, got no closer than 21 points in the second half. The Colonials, 21-9, were appearing in the NCAA tournament for the first time in six years.

Cook scored the game's first basket on an alley-oop dunk and had six of the Wildcats' first 12 points as Arizona dominated inside early.

Robert Morris, which has no players taller than 6-foot-7, shot only 24 percent in the first half and 32 percent for the game. Vaughn Luton, who had 23 points, was the only Robert Morris player in double figures.

Arizona coach Lute Olson substituted freely from the middle of the first half on, and all 12 Arizona players saw substantial playing time.

Reserve Sean Rooks scored 16 points for the Wildcats and Jud Buechler scored 11, all in the first half. Arizona shot 54 percent for the game.

Michigan team goes on without Frieder

By The Associated Press

Head coaches will be the most important substitutes for Missouri and Michigan in the NCAA basketball tournament.

The sixth-ranked Tigers and No. 10 Wolverines will be led by interim coaches when they open tournament play on Friday.

Michigan assistant Steve Fisher was thrust into the spotlight Wednesday after head coach Bill Frieder announced he was leaving for Arizona State. Fisher will debut as Michigan's maestro when the Wolverines meet Xavier of Ohio in the Southeast Regional at Atlanta.

"I'm going to be nervous but I think that's healthy," Fisher said. "Once the ball goes up, I'll be the same Steve Fisher. I don't think there will be any type of pressure."

Missouri interim coach Rich Daly has had a little more time to prepare for his tournament opener, against Creighton at the Midwest Regional in Dallas.

Daly took over last month after Norm Stewart collapsed on a plane with bleeding ulcers. A few days later, Stewart also learned he had a tumor on his colon and a diseased gall bladder.

The Tigers lost five of their first nine games under Daly before winning three straight in the Big Eight tournament, including an upset of Oklahoma in the final.

"It's not my team, but I'm in charge," Daly said. "I haven't changed a thing offensive-wise and defensive-wise. We're doing the same stuff. But practice and ... everything else is different."

Fisher, a Michigan assistant for seven years, said his players are taking the coaching change in stride.

"They've done an outstanding job of filtering out the distractions, and that's not easy to do," he said.

"I think they'll play well. I know they'll play hard." Loy Vaught, a junior forward, said Fisher can handle the job.

"Coach Fisher used to run a lot of the practices," Vaught said. "It's not a really big change. He's just got on a different hat now."

Wolverine guard Rumeal Robinson said the change won't affect the team's play in the tournament.

"We're up for this tournament," he said. "There has been a change and we have to accept it."

"The guys on the team really looked up to (Frieder) and respected him ... But there are certain things in life you have to adjust to, just like in a basketball game."

Daly, a recruiting specialist, had not run a practice in more than a dozen years before Stewart's illness.

"This time of year, that's a tough situation because they've gone so long with somebody else in practice," Daly said. "To make practice interesting is not easy. I can't run a practice exactly like Coach Stewart. I'm not the same person."

"I'm just trying to do the best job with the players than can possibly be done. There isn't time to sit and reflect. I'm not thinking beyond this year. I'm not even thinking beyond this week."

Minnesota 86, Kansas St. 75

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Willie Burton scored 18 of his 29 points in the first half and Minnesota took a 14-point lead in the first 11 minutes, beating Kansas State 86-75 Thursday in the East Regional of the NCAA tournament.

The Golden Gophers, 18-11, held on in the second half as Kansas State made a late charge. The Wildcats, 19-11, used a fullcourt press for a 14-4 run, closing to 67-62 with 4:39 left.

Louisiana Tech 83, La Salle 74

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Randy White scored eight of his 22 points in the final six minutes Thursday as Louisiana Tech held off a late rally and beat La Salle 83-74 in the NCAA tournament's Southeast Regional.

Louisiana Tech, 23-8, led by as many as 13 points. The Bulldogs were ahead 63-53 with 8:29 remaining before La Salle scored seven straight points on inside baskets by Don Shelton and Jack Hurd and Bob Johnson's 3-pointer with 5:50 left.

Oklahoma 72, East Tennessee State 71

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mookie Blaylock's baseline drive with 1:21 remaining gave fourth-ranked Oklahoma a 72-71 victory over East Tennessee State in Thursday's first round of the NCAA Southeast Regional.

Blaylock's shot from underneath the basket gave top-seeded Oklahoma, which twice trailed by 17 in the first half, only its second lead of the game.

Clemson 83, St. Mary's 70

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — David Young scored 21 points and Elden Campbell scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half as Clemson spoiled St. Mary's first NCAA appearance in 30 years with a 83-70 victory in the West Regional Thursday.

The Tigers' next opponent will be top-ranked Arizona, which defeated Robert Morris 94-60 earlier in the day.

Arkansas 120, Loyola Marymount 101

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mario Credit scored 24 of his career-high 34 points as Arkansas took a 15-point halftime lead Thursday, and the Razorbacks beat Loyola Marymount 120-101 in the NCAA Midwest Regional's first round.

Arkansas, 25-6, plays 12th-ranked Louisville in Saturday's second round. The Cardinals beat Arkansas-Little Rock 76-71.

An NCAA record first-round crowd of 37,232 watched the doubleheader in the Hoosier Dome. The previous record of 25,286 was set in the Hoosier Dome in 1987.

Illinois 77, McNeese St. 71

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Kenny Battle scored 18 points and Lowell Hamilton 17 Thursday night as Illinois, the top seed in the NCAA Midwest Region, survived a late 3-point assault to beat McNeese State 77-71 in a first-round game at the Hoosier Dome.

The Illini, 28-4, broke a close game open by outscoring the Cowboys 24-4 over the final 6½ minutes of the first half and first five minutes of the second period.

Virginia 100, Providence 97

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Richard Morgan scored 33 points, including four free throws in the final 1:36, leading Virginia past Providence 100-97 Thursday night in the first round of the NCAA tournament's Southeast regional.

Providence, which won its first 13 games, ended the season 18-11, losing seven of its final eight. The Friars led 95-94 after Matt Palazzi's 3-pointer with 1:52 remaining.

Louisville 76, Arkansas-Little Rock 71

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Kenny Payne scored 17 points and LaBradford Smith added 15 as Louisville, pulling away on free throws in the second half, beat Arkansas-Little Rock 76-71 Thursday in the first round of the NCAA Midwest Regional.

The 12th-ranked Cardinals, who have won the NCAA championship twice this decade, lost a seven-point lead early in the final period but took control as Little Rock got in deep foul trouble in the final 10 minutes.

Louisville converted three-point plays three times down the stretch, and Keith Williams and Tony Kimbro added two free throws apiece in the closing minutes.

The Trojans, meanwhile, missed the front end of a one-and-one three times as Louisville opened an eight-point lead.

Nev.-Las Vegas 68, Idaho 56

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Stacey Augmon scored 17 points and David Butler added 16 as No. 15 Nevada-Las Vegas pulled away late in the second half Thursday night and beat Idaho 68-56 in the NCAA tournament's West Regional.

Augmon scored seven of his points to key a 12-2 run that ended the first half, enabling UNLV to erase a 20-15 deficit and take a five-point lead.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 27-7, scored the first five points of the second half and Idaho never was able to get closer than seven points in a game played before a highly partisan sellout crowd of 12,400 at the Boise State University pavillion.

The Runnin' Rebels, who have won all nine of their NCAA first-round appearances, led by as many as 18 points before UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian pulled most of his starters.

Ball St. 68, Pittsburgh 64

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Paris McCurdy scored six points in a decisive 11-point spurt Thursday night, leading 18th-ranked Ball State past Pittsburgh 68-64 in the Midwest Regional for its first NCAA tournament victory.

The Cardinals, 29-2 and winners of 16 straight, play third-ranked Illinois Saturday in the second round. The Illini beat McNeese State 77-71 earlier Thursday before 37,232 in the Hoosier Dome. The evening crowd, which was 10 more, set a record for NCAA first-round games.

Duke 90, S. Carolina St. 69

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Phil Henderson scored a career-high 22 points and Danny Ferry added 18 as ninth-ranked Duke dominated inside and beat South Carolina State 90-69 Thursday night in the NCAA tournament's East Regional.

Duke opened a 35-22 lead in the first 15 minutes and led 49-34 by halftime, scoring 12 of 20 first-half baskets on layups or dunks.

West Virginia 84, Tennessee 68

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Herbie Brooks scored 22 points and Ray Forster added 19 Thursday night, leading 17th-ranked West Virginia past Tennessee 84-68 in the first round of the NCAA East Regional.

West Virginia, 26-4, took a 17-5 lead behind an 8-0 run. The Mountaineers led 34-19 with 2:28 left in the half before Dyron Nix scored Tennessee's last six points of the period, pulling the Volunteers to 35-23 at halftime.

West Virginia scored the first six points of the second half led 47-27 after Berger's jumper from the lane with 16:53 remaining. The closest Tennessee got the rest of the way was 57-45 after Doug Roth's 3-pointer with 10:28 to play.

Two-time NBA All-Star announces retirement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Norm Nixon, who faded from the NBA limelight after he was traded from the Los Angeles Lakers to the Clippers in 1983, announced his retirement Thursday.

Nixon, a two-time NBA All-Star, has been plagued by injury in recent years, missing both the 1986-87 and 1987-88 seasons.

The 33-year-old Nixon played in 53 games for the sagging Clippers this season, averaging 6.8 points and 6.4 assists per game.

"Coming back off two injuries at this point in my career, I realized early that this wouldn't be the platform for my return because of the Clippers' commitment to young players," Nixon said.

"I have chosen to end my time with some dignity rather than go out riding the bench."

After being selected as a first-round draft pick by the Lakers in 1977 out of Duquesne, the 6-foot-2 Nixon helped the Lakers win two NBA titles, in 1980 and 1982.

But the Lakers traded him to the Clippers in October of 1984. The deal included the Clippers' getting Eddie Jordan, with center Swen Nater and the playing rights to guard Byron Scott going to the Lakers in exchange.

Nixon, who made the NBA All-Star team in 1982 with the Lakers and again in 1985 with the Clippers, ends his career with a 15.7 points-per-game average, and he also averaged 8.3 assists during his 768 games in the league.

His assists total of 6,386 puts him seventh on the NBA's all-time list, and he shares the league's record for most minutes in a game, 64. That marathon mark, which he shares with Eric "Sleepy" Floyd of Houston, came on Jan. 29, 1980, in a four-overtime game between the Lakers and Cleveland.

In his first year with the Clippers, who then were in their final season in San Diego before moving to Los Angeles, Nixon averaged 17.2 points and 11.1 assists per game, a franchise record.

Injuries, however, slowed him dramatically in recent years. He missed the 1987-88 campaign after rupturing his right Achilles tendon. He was sidelined the previous season by a ruptured tendon in his left knee + suffered while playing softball during the summer.

"Norm Nixon had a terrific NBA career," Clippers general manager Don Baylor said. "Despite serious injuries over the past two seasons and diminished playing time, Norm has conducted himself like a true professional."

Nixon, a native of Macon, Ga., is married to actress Debbie Allen.

Johnson may not have known he was taking steroids

TORONTO (AP) — Ben Johnson's doctor may have given the sprinter, without his knowledge, the steroid that cost him an Olympic gold medal, sprinter Angella Issajenko suggested Thursday as a federal inquiry concluded three weeks of sensational testimony.

Johnson's coach, Charlie Francis, had testified that his star sprinter was taking the steroid Estrogol in preparation for last fall's Seoul Olympics.

Francis said he could not figure out how another steroid, stanozolol, turned up in Johnson's urine test at Seoul since he had not taken the drug for more than a year.

Issajenko suggested Johnson's personal physician, Dr. Jamie Astaphan, may be able to clear up the mystery.

She said that she and Johnson had thought they used Estrogol in training for the Olympic Games, where Johnson was stripped of a gold medal.

"It was not until the inquiry was called that Jamie told me that the name was furazabol with a Japanese trade name of Miotolon," — not Estrogol — she said in response to questions from commissioner Charles Dubin.

Miotolon is "very similar in structure" to stanozolol, Steve Timmings, a supervisor with the Mann Testing Laboratory in suburban Mississauga, said in an interview. "I would suspect its properties would be similar."

All are anabolic steroids, which are derivatives of the male hormone testosterone.

The commission has a sample of the drug Francis says his athletes were taking before the Olympics, Robert Armstrong, senior commission counsel, said outside the hearing. He refused to say whether it has yet been analyzed.

Johnson has denied he knowingly took banned drugs.

Astaphan, yet to testify, has denied from his home in St. Kitts that he gave Johnson steroids.

"Anything is possible," Astaphan's lawyer, Lorne Levine, said. "I think it's somewhat doubtful there could have been a mistake made by Dr. Astaphan or any of the athletes. This is an experienced physician."

Issajenko said she first suspected in 1987 that the steroid Astaphan prescribed was not what he had said it was. She said it had side-effects — particularly muscle stiffness — similar to those she experienced with stanozolol.

"I couldn't find the word Estrogol anywhere and when I took anything over 1 cc, I would have the same reaction as when we used oral (stanozolol)," she said.

"I believed it was probably Winstrol V," a form of stanozolol used mainly by veterinarians.

Issajenko and her husband, Tony, as well as Francis, have testified Astaphan's medicines were always unlabeled.

"We trusted him," Issajenko said.

Issajenko, 30, concluded more than three days of emotional testimony in which she confessed to taking banned drugs for nearly a decade.

Her husband Tony, on the stand for only two hours, said he took drugs in 1984-85 in an attempt to salvage his waning sprint career.

Before he retired in 1985, he said he injected Johnson with steroids on several occasions during training camps at Guadeloupe and Florida.

Asked if Johnson knew he was getting steroids, Tony Issajenko said: "I had no doubts that he knew."

The couple corroborated some the testimony given by Francis, whose eight days on the stand set the stage for what is to follow in the months after the inquiry resumes April 3.

Francis contended sport's loftiest goals are unattainable without drugs. He identified more than a dozen of his athletes and others in Canada and around the world who have used steroids or condoned their use.

And he told how his troupe of Toronto runners used banned drugs and hard work to grow into one of the world's top sprint teams.

"We can only call one witness at a time," Dubin cautioned before adjourning the public hearings for two weeks. "Experience has shown that often evidence let at the very end of an inquiry may well cast a different light on what has preceded it."

"Therefore, I am hopeful that everyone will keep an open mind, as I must do, and not arrive at any conclusions about any of the individuals or organizations until all the evidence is in, the arguments heard and my report is issued."
