

Student regent vote bill sent to Mofford

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

A bill that would give voting powers to the student member of the Arizona Board of Regents sailed through the state Senate Thursday by a vote of 26-3, sending the measure to Gov. Rose Mofford's desk for final approval.

Mofford is expected to sign House Bill 2021 into law later this session.

State Sen. Doug Todd, R-Tempe, said the bill passed the Senate so easily because legislators have developed respect for those who have been chosen to fill the student regent position.

"We have gradually shown to our legislature that our student regents have been, without exception, qualified, class individuals," he said. "Patrick (McWhortor) has been visible to the members this year. He has further enhanced the study of our student regents."

McWhortor, the current student regent who has been a vocal supporter of the regent bill, said he was pleased about passage of the measure.

The stage was set for the full Senate to approve the bill Thursday after the Senate Education Committee unanimously approved the measure on March 13. The House of Representatives passed the bill Feb. 16.

The Arizona Students' Association and student leaders at the state's universities have been pushing to get a voting student member on the board since 1974.

"ASA was founded to get student representation on the the board of regents," said Brad Golich, executive director of

McWhortor

ASA. "I'm excited just to see things happening."

Currently, the student regent is the only non-voting member of the board. The position was created in 1978 and was approved by lawmakers on the grounds there would be no voting privileges for the student member.

If Gov. Mofford signs the bill, it would give the student regent full powers to vote and attend all executive session meetings.

The Arizona student regent, chosen on a rotating basis from among the state's three universities, is nominated by the governor for a one-year term and must be confirmed by the Senate.

Todd said he doesn't know when Gov. Mofford will sign the bill into law, but said he hopes she has a ceremony and invites the student leaders who have worked so hard for the bill.

Presidential list narrowed to 17

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

The list of ASU presidential candidates has been narrowed to 17, and the final selection should be made by the end of April, the president of the Arizona Board of Regents said Thursday.

"We are closing in on the process," Herman Chanen said.

Molly Broad, the regent's executive director, said the regents will discuss the 17 candidates at the board's meeting today but will not disclose the names of finalists. She said the regents will report on the candidates' current jobs, ages, gender and other various specifics.

Participants in the search have not disclosed the candidates' names because the hiring process is being conducted confidentially.

The candidates are vying for ASU President J. Russell Nelson's position, which he will vacate in June. Nelson announced his resignation in August and had originally planned to take a year's break before returning to the University as an instructor in the College of Business.

However, in February Nelson accepted the deanship of the business college at the University of Colorado in Boulder. Nelson has held the ASU presidency since July 1981.

The candidate pool has been thinned to 17 from 229 candidates who were being considered in March by a special presidential search committee, a 14-member group of regents, professors, students and community leaders appointed to find a new ASU president.

Chanen said the Chicago-based Heidricks and Stuggles personnel search firm is currently interviewing the remaining 17 candidates.

Campaign workers for Associated Students presidential candidates Mark Escobedo and Paul Larson squared off on Cady Mall Thursday during the final day of the ASASU election. Election results will be announced today at 3 p.m. in the MU Rendezvous Lounge. See story, page 6.

The Rev. Richard A. Pyke stands by the new iron fence erected around Danforth Chapel.

Minister asks for fence removal

By JOIE ANN LA POLLA
State Press

Employees and affiliates of ASU's Danforth Chapel want the University to remove the orange iron fence recently erected around the non-denominational meditation chapel, the president of the Campus Interfaith Council said Thursday.

"This (fence) is a form of discrimination," said the Rev. Richard A. Pyke, a Presbyterian minister with the United Church of Christ. "It's either to keep us in or keep a barrier between positive religious activities and the outside."

George Vail, construction administrator in ASU's Department of Planning and Construction, could not be reached for comment.

The fence, part of the Hayden Library expansion project, encloses three sides of the 41-year-old chapel and blocks direct access to the office and storage room.

"It's really ugly," said Melanie Smyth, a minister with Campus Ambassadors. "Now we call this place Fort Danforth or Danforth Castle."

Danforth is used by ASU religious organizations for meetings that include weddings, baptisms and memorial services.

Earlier this week, Pyke sent a letter to University officials outlining his grievances. The letter stated that in addition to blocking easy access to the office, the fence does not offer any aesthetic attributes or add to the unique character of the chapel.

Pyke also said the chapel's personnel were never notified that the fence would be erected.

Jason Eslamieh, acting assistant director of project management at ASU's Department of Construction and Planning, expressed surprise that the chapel's employees were not notified about the fence.

"I was given the impression that the communication was always there," Eslamieh said.

But ASU is planning to build a gate in front of the chapel to provide access to the office, Eslamieh said.

"We are going to modify the fence so as to make access from the south to the storage and office," he said.

Mary Peters, secretary at the chapel for the past 10 years, said, "The gate will alleviate the problem, but it still doesn't tell us why we weren't notified."

Dean of Student Life Leon Shell said his office wasn't notified about the fence construction either.

"I would have liked to have known

Ship captain was legally drunk when tanker veered off course

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — The captain of a supertanker was drunk when the ship veered off course and ran into a reef, causing the worst oil spill in the nation's history, federal investigators said Thursday.

Exxon Valdez skipper Joseph Hazelwood had a blood-alcohol reading of .061 when measured nine hours after the ship rammed Blight Reef, said William Woody, head of a four-man NTSB team investigating the spill. Woody said Hazelwood's urine sample reading was .09.

The Coast Guard limit for operating a commercial vessel at sea is .04, Woody said.

Hazelwood was not on the bridge when the tanker ran aground March 24. Third mate Gregory Cousins, who the Coast Guard says lacked proper certification, was giving the orders.

Woody said a Coast Guard officer told investigators he smelled alcohol on Hazelwood's breath a few hours after the accident. But the Guardsman and a harbor pilot agreed Hazelwood appeared competent, Woody said.

On the advice of their lawyers, Hazelwood and Cousins have refused to talk to investigators, Woody said.

Supreme Court getting record amount of abortion advice

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is receiving what appears to be a record amount of unsolicited advice as it considers a request to overturn or limit its 1973 decision legalizing abortion.

"There are moments in history that pass quietly. The period we are entering will not," said Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

Missouri and the Bush administration, among others, are urging the court to use the case to reverse or severely limit Roe vs. Wade, the 16-year-old ruling that said women have a constitutional right to seek abortions.

A decision is expected by July.

Iran expels Swiss ambassador after being accused of spying

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran on Thursday ordered the Swiss consul to leave Tehran and accused him of spying after its own consul in Geneva was forced to leave.

Switzerland's ambassador in Tehran, Heinrich Reimann, lodged a formal protest after the Iranian Foreign Ministry summoned him Thursday afternoon and told him the consul, Jakob Schranz, had to leave, a Swiss spokesman said.

Tehran radio said the Foreign Ministry told the ambassador that Schranz was an "undesirable element" because he was involved in "activities incompatible with his diplomatic status," a term used to denote spying.

Josef Hermann, a spokesman for the Swiss Federal Prosecutor's office, said Iran's consul in Geneva, Manouchehr Tale-Massouleh, "engaged in certain activities that led to his having to leave Switzerland" Wednesday night, but he did not elaborate.

McWhortor criticizes lowering college entrance standards

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

GLENDALE — A proposed amendment to lower the minimum passing score of a proficiency test required for entrance into Arizona's education colleges drew sharp criticism Thursday from Student Regent Pat McWhortor.

"What we're doing here is lowering the standards," he told the regents' programs committee. He added that lowering the test's requirements would be counter-productive because the universities are trying to raise standards.

The Pre-Professional Skills Test, the proficiency test currently used by the state's three universities, is a three-part test that includes math, reading and writing. In 1984, the Legislature enacted a bill specifying that all applicants to the universities' teacher education programs must pass the basic skills test.

The amendment would allow the universities to consider for admission students whose scores fall within three points below the passing scores. Currently, education students must score of 173 on the reading portion of the test, 172 on the math and 174 on the writing.

"I'm not sure the policy we have before us is going to achieve our purposes," McWhortor said.

NAU President Eugene M. Hughes told the committee that minorities, low-income students and those who speak English as a second language are most hurt by the test.

"Many students who fail, walk away from the program and the university," he said.

McWhortor, who spent a semester in ASU's College of Education and passed the PPST, said lowering the passing score will not benefit students.

"I'm worried we're still going to have the same problem," he said. "Students would still be required to achieve a certain score, and some would still fail."

"By not being able to pass those sections, I'm not sure they are going to be able to demonstrate that aptitude and leadership."

Hughes said the current PPST would be adequate if it were printed in many languages.

Regent Andy Hurwitz said, "What troubles me about the PPST is it is an exclusionary component."

He added that a student with a 4.0 GPA is excluded from the education curriculum if he doesn't pass the PPST.

Hurwitz said the proposal to lower the test scores is the best he has seen thus far.

"We have to have a cutoff (score)," he said. "I think it's an appropriate solution."

The regents agreed to send the proposed amendment to the full board for consideration at its meeting today.

Meanwhile, the regents' resources committee agreed Thursday to recommend approval of ASU's proposal to hike correspondence course fees from $33 per credit hour to $45 per credit hour. The full board will consider the issue today.

The board also will hear a proposed amendment to university undergraduate education requirements. The amendment would establish unconditional and conditional admission for freshmen and transfer students.

Unconditional admission allows freshmen to enter a university if they are in the top 25 percent of their high school graduating class or have a cumulative grade point average of 3.0.

Conditional admission would allow students who are in the top 50 percent of their high school graduating class or have a cumulative 2.5 GPA.

Resident applicants who meet the criteria would be assured of admission, but non-resident students in the conditional category could be denied admission depending on space restrictions.

Financial aid trust fund tentatively approved by House

By RICHARD A. VIGIL
State Press

The Arizona House of Representatives Thursday gave tentative approval to a bill creating a $2 million trust fund to be used for financial aid to students at the three state universities.

Rep. Bev Hermon, R-Tempe and sponsor of the measure, said the bill should pass when it is brought to the House in a formal vote.

Hermon said she has not talked to the Senate education committee chairwoman Jacque Steiner, but said that she is "sure she will hear it."

The House measure appropriates $1,036,000 to match funds which will be generated by a surcharge on students' registration fees. Full-time students will pay $6 per semester and part-time students will pay $3.

The $1,036,000 figure is based on a projection taken from 1988 enrollment at ASU, UofA and NAU.

Part of the funds generated will be used immediately for grants, while the other part will be placed in a trust fund to be used in the future.

It has been estimated that the trust fund will contain $120 million in 25 years, generating $7 to $8 million in interest each year.

The fund is designed to give financial aid to the so-called "notch group" of students whose families make too much money to qualify for need-based financial aid but who have trouble paying for their education.

A study conducted at the UofA from 1985 to 1987 showed a 21 percent decrease in the number of incoming freshmen from families with incomes from $30,000 to $35,000.

"(The trust fund) gives us another weapon to work with," Hermon said. "We have to remain competitive in scholarships as well as everything else.

"I think this was a very creative solution by the students."

Student Regent Pat McWhortor said he thinks the bill will receive final approval from the house when it comes up for a third reading.

"We're confident that we have the votes," he said.

Andrew Hurwitz, a member of the Arizona Board of Regents, said the bill needs to be approved, regardless of the amount of the appropriation.

"The number of dollars is less important than the Legislature recognizing it's a good bill," he said.

McWhortor said the fight to get the trust fund is just beginning, because the bill must be passed by the Senate.

"I hope we can see a very strong effort on the part of students," he said. "We need to convince the legislators that students support this."

Hermon said the students can be "a major influence" on the Senate to pass the bill.

Hurwitz said the students are behind the legislation.

"The students agreed to do this because the Legislature agreed to match the money," he said.

Rep. John Kromko, D-Tucson, proposed amending the bill to require University employees earning more than $80,000 a year to contribute 1 percent of their salaries to the trust fund. But that proposal, nicknamed the "Robin Hood Amendment," was rejected 27-20.

Rep. Ruben Ortega, D-Sierra Vista, also proposed making the student contribution optional. That amendment also was rejected 27-20.

State Press reporter Tyrone Meighan contributed to this report.

Parking: divine exasperation

Editor:

You must be one of the chosen few to park legally on ASU's sacred campus. You must be blessed not to be issued a ticket. If you have never gotten a ticket on campus, believe yourself to rise on judgment day!

The mighty angels of parking citations are above error

I recently spent 20 minutes of much needed study time arguing with one of those "mighty angels" about whether I (the horrible student) did not have my decal hanging or whether (Gasp!) the mini-mighty-student-angel-ticket-writer made a mistake and didn't see the decal.

It is not expected that these people be angels of mercy and have pity on students who pay ASU to come to school, buy parking decals (even though they are likely to get booted out due to mid-semester construction) and expect (big joke) to park free from worry.

Where were these angels when my car was broken into on campus? They weren't issuing tickets then. Can I charge ASU for the lost $600 worth of damage and stolen property. Maybe that money would make up for all the money I've paid in parking tickets.

Parking officials should realize that there is only One who is perfect and He/She does not work for ASU Parking Services.

Abortion issue about rights . . . but whose rights?

Editor:

I see the propaganda tables are out again. The abortionist table is advertising its slogans "Make abortion safe and legal," "Silent no more" and "Women's rights."

Granted that the Legislature can legalize anything, what makes it safe? That is a lie. It isn't safe for the baby who is tortured to death or, if he or she survives in third trimester abortions, gets sold to a laboratory for medical experimentation. It isn't safe for the mothers who frequently experience everything from perforated uteruses to sterility as well as psychological and emotional trauma over the realization that they have killed their baby.

Who are silent no more? Certainly not the 25 million children who have been slaughtered by their mothers. They were never asked and their screams were silenced.

I agree that the issue is about rights but there is no such thing as the right to murder one's baby because he or she is inconvenient. What about the baby's right to live, to be respected as a human being, to be loved and protected by the one person uniquely privileged to do so, the mother, and by the one profession uniquely committed to preserving life, physicians? What about the rights of the father who is rarely ever consulted or the grandparents whose heirs are being killed? As for women's rights, I suppose they only count for women who survive their mothers. The rights of unborn women do not count.

Abortion is a depraved wickedness; a cannibalistic sign that society has degraded to the level of the vampire; a moral confusion which indicates a total loss of social identity as human beings. Compared to abortion, hubris is an understatement.

I'd have more respect for the abortionists if they would just quit lying and put up a sign that told the truth: "Your Baby Killed Quick and Cheap — Discount on Twins. Use at Own Risk."

My question is: Where are the Christians? Every time the blood table has been put out there they have been unopposed. Why have all the Christian student organizations on campus not organized a continuous public opposition? The salt must have lost its savor.

MR. MICHEL, YOUR DOG IS LOOSE!

Escobedo unqualified

Editor:

This letter is in response to the letters from Roger Garcia and Maria Arvizu (March 30). I do not feel that the issue of the presidential race was the State Press's endorsement of Mr. Larson. Rather, the issue was the merits of both candidates. For the past year I have sat with Mr. Escobedo on both the Senate and Executive Committee, and am finding his so-called qualifications for the job of president a joke.

During his campaign, Mr. Escobedo has told the public about his three-year involvement with Associated Students and the Liberal Arts College Council. His work with the college council has been "limited," according to members of the council itself. As for being "one of the most dedicated people in student government," I must applaud Mr. Escobedo for again informing his backers of what he feels he did and not what he actually has done. Let me inform you about his Senate term. Mr. Escobedo sits back, says very few words — except "aye" (on basically everything, regardless of whether the funding breaks the bylaws) — and takes a lot of credit. I have strong reservations that Mark has ever thoroughly read the laws that bind this Association. Furthermore, on Executive Committee, again Mr. Escobedo sat back, said practically nothing and took credit for what he thought he did.

If Mr. Escobedo would have learned something from sitting on Executive Committee or would have done a half-way decent job, he would be a little bit more qualified than he is now, but he didn't.

I also question the motives of Mr. Escobedo in his decision to bring three appropriations bills to the Senate, knowing full well that we were out of money. WERE THESE PAYOFFS FOR VOTES, MARK?

Mark, I wish you good luck today as the election results are being read, but with an unqualified president such as yourself at the helm of this school, I would almost be willing to transfer to the UofA.

Getting old

Dick Clark quits: Time marches on with or without us

Jeff Greenfield
Universal Press Syndicate

NEW YORK — When he heard the news, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan was somber. "I can't conceive of any news I can give the American people that would offset that," he said.

When Wall Street got wind of the story, the market trembled, falling nearly 80 points in two days before righting itself.

And across America, people were asking, "Where were you and what were you doing when you heard the news?"

The news, of course, is that Dick Clark is stepping down as host of "American Bandstand" after 33 years.

It's not as if "Bandstand" is the most popular program on television. It's no longer seen on a network, but is screened on local stations through syndication. And it has been years since the show was the staple of afternoon TV, with teenagers racing home from school to learn the latest steps to the Stroll, the Swim, the Mashed Potato.

It's not as if the tunes that "Bandstand" popularized reflected the best of rock music (yes, there is a best, dammit). Frankie Avalon and Fabian and Connie Frances and Paul Anka embody an unappetizing tradition in rock music: the homogenization of black sounds into "acceptable" white words and faces.

So what makes the news so appalling? It's another blow to our endless quest for permanence, for a sense of immortality.

For most of us, the first stirrings of unease about our time on Earth comes when a familiar milepost disappears: a corner candy store, the elementary school we attended, a doctor's office or a vacant lot now turned into a skyscraper.

It's the feeling we have visiting the streets of our childhood: any familiar sight among the strange stores and faces is like a beacon from a lighthouse, the promise of safe harbor.

For the American postwar generation, Dick Clark was our beacon. His blandly handsome face first graced the nation's airwaves in the summer of 1957, the year after he took the Philadelphia-based show at the age of 26. His face and voice were ideally suited not just to TV, but to calming the fears of our parents, who saw in rock music the embodiment of their racial and sexual fears.

Indeed, Dick Clark made folk heroes out of the south Philadelphia adolescents who danced the afternoons away. Bob and Justine became as familiar as the president — and got just about as many letters.

Most important, year after year, Dick Clark never got any older. The show moved to Los Angeles; they finally let black kids on the dance floor; the show went from a daily to a weekly offering; but Dick Clark was always . . . there.

In fact, literary types used to joke that there was a portrait of him in an attic somewhere, picturing a horribly ravaged, frail old man, but that of course was just rumor.

Dick Clark had, in other words, become one of the few things we could count on. The Dodgers weren't in Brooklyn anymore; America didn't win all the wars it fought; marriages sundered and children drifted away; presidents could lie to you; Japanese cars might outperform ours; but Dick Clark was always . . . there.

So what's left now? Well, New York still has the Statue of Liberty and the Empire State Building, and there is one Automat left, which is more a museum than a place to eat.

And Washington still has its monuments and grand public buildings, and the lake is unlikely to leave Chicago, and in dozens of small communities, earnest citizens have kept the old courthouse, the Civil War memorial or the riverfront alive and well.

It's just that there was something comforting about a living, breathing human being who never aged, never changed, and seemed rooted to the podium of a TV dance set as some ageless sequoia reaching to the California skies.

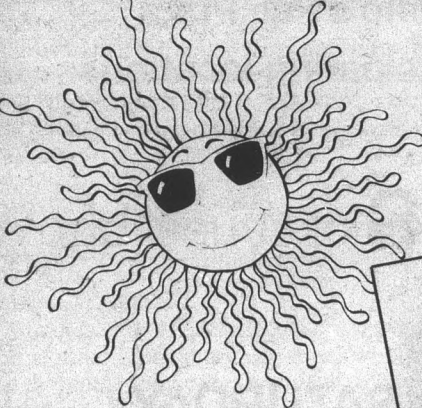

Ah well, sic transit gloria . . . come to think of it, Gloria always was my favorite Bandstander.

'For most of us, the first stirrings of unease about our time on Earth comes when a familiar milepost disappears: a corner candy store, the elementary school we attended, a doctor's office or a vacant lot now turned into a skyscraper.'

Complaint filed against ASASU presidential hopeful Escobedo

From staff reports

A campaign staffer working for Associated Students of ASU presidential hopeful Paul Larson filed a complaint against opponent Mark Escobedo Thursday, alleging that Escobedo falsified a campaign financial statement.

Keith Woods said he filed the complaint because "it is only fair that we all play by the same rules."

The complaint follows the admission Wednesday by Escobedo that he failed to list at least $200 from contributors on one of his financial statements. The statements are required by the ASASU Election Code, and falsification of a statement can result in disqualification from the election.

Escobedo could not be reached for comment.

Results of the three-day run-off election, pitting College of Liberal Arts Sen. Mark Escobedo against State Relations Director Paul Larson, will be announced at 3 p.m. today in the MU Rendezvous Lounge, ASASU Elections Director David Cavecche said.

The election concluded Thursday night as the two candidates and their staffs campaigned on campus until the polls closed at 9 p.m.

Aides from both camps called the final day of campaigning "uneventful." Both Escobedo and Larson spent the day talking with voters in an effort to lure last-minute supporters to the polls.

The ASASU Elections Commission, a three-member committee that monitors the elections process, is scheduled to meet today at 10:40 a.m. to consider another election complaint filed by Woods against Escobedo. The complaint alleges Escobedo posted campaign fliers in an MU bathroom in violation of the ASASU Election Code.

If the commission finds that Escobedo violated the code, they may assess five "penalty points" to his campaign. Any candidate who is penalized 20 or more points is disqualified from the race.

Cavecche said the commission will consider the falsification complaint April 3. The maximum penalty for falsification is 20 points.

about it in advance," Shell said.

Student Life supervises the use of the chapel and works with the Campus Interfaith Council, a body that coordinates activities among campus ministries and off-campus student-oriented religious centers.

Paul Meyers, construction manager of the library project, said the problem is "in the process of being worked out."

"It's being taken care of," said Meyers, an employee with Porter-Ruscilli Construction Inc., in Phoenix. "We are going through all the proper procedures and paperwork. Eventually that (the problem) will be worked out."

Pyke said that in addition to the inconvenience the fence has caused, the gate construction at the entrance of the chapel office will force the removal of a "peace pole" in front of the chapel.

The "peace pole" concept was developed by a prayer group after the World War II bombing of Hiroshima to promote peace throughout the world, he added.

The pole at Danforth Chapel reads, in four different languages, "Let peace prevail on Earth."

Pyke said he dislikes the idea of moving the pole.

"It's not a great concession — we want the removal of the fence," he said.

The fence was constructed in January during the Martin Luther King Holiday weekend, Peters said.

ASU football player, ex-player arrested on separate charges

By MIKE BURGESS
State Press

An ASU football player and a former team member were arrested at their Tempe apartment early Thursday in connection with two separate incidents, police said.

Mark A. Hayes, 20, and Michael A. Simmons, also 20, were arrested about 6:54 a.m. at their apartment at 1750 S. Price Road, No. 166, said ASU police Sgt. Bob Jones, head of the department's detective squad.

Jones said Simmons was arrested on charges of second-degree burglary and felony theft. He was booked into the Maricopa County Jail. Bond has not been set, according to a jail spokeswoman.

Hayes, an offensive tackle for the Sun Devil football team and a junior communications major, was arrested on an Arizona Department of Public Safety traffic warrant for failing to appear in court. He posted a $96 bond and was released Thursday.

Police said they did not know the charge for which he failed to appear in court, but said it probably was not serious because of the low bond.

Simmons, a junior majoring in family resources and human development, was arrested in connection with the Feb. 26 theft of a Colt 10mm hand gun from a dormitory room at the Cholla Apartment complex. Police served a search warrant at the residence and recovered the weapon, Jones said.

Hayes

Simmons

"Simmons has been an investigative lead since the beginning, but it took this much time to put the case together," Jones said.

Simmons, a former offensive lineman for the ASU football team, has not been with the team for more than a year due to a serious neck injury.

Simmons refused to talk to police about the incident, police said.

Police declined to release the name of the gun's owner, but said he has been or will be referred to the dean's office for violation of the University Code of Conduct. The code prohibits the use or possession of weapons on campus.

Jones said Simmons and the gun's owner know each other, but declined to reveal the relationship.

police report

Tempe police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- An armed robber entered the ABCO at 1845 N. Scottsdale Road in Tempe, pulled a stocking over his head and aimed his gun at a clerk demanding that she empty her cash register, police said.

- The suspect, wearing a fatigue jacket and baseball cap, then fled on foot with an undisclosed amount of cash.

- Three cars were stolen from the University Theatre area on Broadway: a 1980 Mazda, a 1986 Nissan and a 1985 Honda.

ASU police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A 1967 Ford Mustang was stolen from Lot 59. Loss was $3,000.

- The wallet of an ASU West campus employee was stolen from a filing cabinet in the personnel office at the Montebello branch. Loss was $50.

- A black Honda motorcycle belonging to an ASU student was stolen from Lot 28. Loss was $450.

- An ASU student's motorcycle seat was stolen from Lot 53. Loss was $100.

- The car of an ASU student was broken into in Lot 59. A stereo, equalizer and five cassette tapes were taken. Loss was $305.

World issues to be examined by students

From staff reports

Students for Environmental Awareness and 11 other student organizations will be at the Student Services Courtyard today to "celebrate global awareness," and provide information on world issues.

More than 11 tables will be set up from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. to provide information on a variety of issues ranging from AIDS, animal abuses, apartheid, Central America and environmental concerns, said Donna Riggs, a member of SEA.

"These are issues that affect all of us," she said.

Riggs said a poll will be conducted at the event, asking students what their greatest global concerns are.

"We hope people will take the time on Friday to investigate, educate, contemplate and maybe just decide for themselves where they stand on even one issue," she said. "That would be a big step forward for many."

Other organizations involved in the event include AIDS Awareness, Amnesty International, the Native American Students Association and the Women's Studies Student Association.

Court upholds convictions of 8 Arizona activists

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal appeals court on Thursday upheld convictions of eight Arizona activists in the church-based sanctuary movement for helping Central Americans enter the United States illegally, saying their religious beliefs did not excuse lawbreaking.

Even if the sanctuary workers could prove that enforcement of immigration laws against them interfered with their religious beliefs, "they cannot escape the government's overriding interest in policing its borders," said the 9th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in a 3-0 decision.

The court rejected the defendants' claims that their actions were justified by the United States' refusal to grant political asylum to refugees from strife-torn Central American countries. The ruling also upheld the secret taping of church services and Bible classes by government informants.

The 1986 trial in Tucson was the first major federal prosecution of sanctuary workers, part of a movement endorsed by numerous religious denominations to give refuge to Central Americans who enter the U. S. illegally.

The court described the operation as "a modern-day underground railroad" that smuggled people from Mexico to Arizona, sheltered them in churches and sent many of them to Chicago, from where they were dispersed to "safehouses" around the nation.

The eight defendants, including five members of the clergy, were convicted on various charges of conspiracy, transporting, harboring, and aiding illegal entry of aliens. All were placed on probation. Several other defendants were acquitted, pleaded guilty to misdemeanors or had charges dismissed.

The Rev. John M. Fife III of Tucson's Southside Presbyterian Church, one of the defendants and a movement leader, said he was disappointed by the ruling, but continued to believe "we have every right to defend refugees and victims of human rights violations."

He said no decision has been made on whether to appeal.

The appeals court upheld U. S. District Judge Earl Carroll's decisions to keep the jury from hearing evidence the activists believed the aliens were entitled to political refugee status, and that their actions were compelled by alleged U. S. violations of the immigration law and international law.

U. S. immigration officials have denied political asylum to more than 90 percent of the applicants from El Salvador and Guatemala. Sanctuary workers say the figures show violations of laws guaranteeing refuge for those fleeing political persecution and armed conflict. Administration officials say most of the aliens left for economic reasons.

"A rule which would allow (the defendants) essentially to put Reagan administration foreign policy on trial would be foolish," said the opinion by Judge Cynthia Holcomb Hall. She was joined in the decision by fellow Reagan appointees Charles Wiggins and David Thompson.

Prosecutors cannot be required to meet the "incredibly difficult burden" of delving into the facts of each alien's case to prove the defendants didn't believe the aliens were legitimate political refugees, Hall said.

She also said the defendants had no right to decide that lawbreaking was their only option.

ASU License Plates

Students • Faculty • Staff • Alumni • Friends

On April 1, you can show your ASU pride in an all new way.

April 1 has been declared ASU License Plate Day. As a special convenience for anyone who wishes to show pride in ASU, arrangements have been made for the Motor Vehicle Division to be at the Spring Football Game on that day.

To pick up your ASU plates, just bring your old plates, your car registration and $25 to the north end of Sun Devil Stadium between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. on April 1 (the game starts at noon). It's that simple.

Not only can you show your Sun Devil pride, but you can also help deserving students, because $17 of the $25 annual fee goes toward an ASU scholarship fund.

Personalized plate applications are available and can be mailed in to the Motor Vehicle Division. Plates must be exchanged by the registered owner (or spouse), and you must have your current registration with you. If you are exchanging your plates during your regular registration renewal period, you will need your emissions test compliance form and your regular registration fees.

Transformation of Valley-wide canal system under ASU study

By MICHELE McDONALD
State Press

ASU is involved in a study to transform the Valley-wide canal system from an eyesore to a series of walkways, bike paths and restaurants, according to Madis Pihlak, assistant professor of the ASU Department of Planning.

The study totals $91,200 and is funded by a grant from the National Endowment of the Arts and matching funds from Phoenix metropolitan cities and Salt River Project, Pihlak said. The canal study should reach completion in August 1989 for the cities to use, Pihlak said Thursday.

"Now we're laying the framework for what the canal will become," he said.

Tempe has 25 linear miles available to develop out of the total 181 miles of canal in Maricopa County. ASU plans to work with Tempe to plan future canal redevelopment, he said.

"Tempe has a lot of possibilities," Pihlak said. "These canals are a great resource and should be used.

"We'll be sharing (design information) back and forth (with the city)," he said.

Keith Walzak, a planner with the Tempe Community Development office, said Tempe is looking at the principal and lateral canals and possibly canals that have been covered up by developers.

"We want to make them accessible for the public," he said.

Tempe plans to approach each project differently and the success depends upon both private and public participation, he said.

"We're trying to pursue some kind of design guidelines for the city of Tempe," he said. "We want to be totally open to different design possibilities."

Walzak said joggers and cyclists could use the Tempe Canal, which divides Tempe and Mesa, because it would be limited to a series of bike paths, walkways and rest areas.

"All you really have is a corridor," he said.

Michael Fifield, assistant professor of the School of Architecture, said the study is undergoing a series of meetings, data gathering and workshops and is designed to act as a guideline for the cities.

Redevelopment of the canal will have a positive impact on the cities because it adds another recreation dimension to the community, he said.

"So far, they've (the cities) been very receptive and there has been a great deal of enthusiasm," Fifield said. "The cost isn't going to be placed upon the taxpayer ... and there doesn't appear to be a specific developer that is going to have a windfall profit."

Pihlak said converting a one-mile stretch of canal will cost $400,000. However, land, normally expensive, does not need to be purchased because the cities and the Salt River Project already own it.

The Hohokam Indians originated the canal system that SRP's system follows, he said.

Pihlak said the canals are as unique to Arizona as the Golden Gate Bridge is to San Francisco or Central Park is to New York.

"They are the symbol of our city," he said.

Mutilated bodies found in well; deaths possibly drug-related

DOUGLAS (AP) — Sonoran State Judicial Police have found the mutilated bodies of six men and three women buried in a well on a ranch near Agua Prieta in what Mexican authorities said Thursday were drug-related killings.

A statement issued through the Sonora state prosecutor's office in Hermosillo said five people have been arrested and four of the victims identified.

The Arizona Daily Star reported that the slayings were triggered by the kidnapping Sunday of a couple in an apparent drug-related incident.

Meanwhile, Douglas police officer Rudy Salazar also said there was an unconfirmed possibility that another two bodies had been found in the area.

He said Mexican federal officials from Hermosillo had been called in to help Sonoran authorities with the investigation.

Salazar said the bodies were discovered Wednesday night or Thursday morning on the Los Alamos Ranch, about three miles west of the city of Agua Prieta and within about five miles of the international border.

Agua Prieta, about 130 miles southeast of Tucson, sits on the border across from Douglas.

Salazar said he had been told the victims apparently were tortured, "clubbed, stabbed and shot." He added, "They had been mutilated."

Salazar also said one or more of the bodies may have been covered with lime, a substance that could hasten decomposition and make identification more difficult.

Mexican investigators declined to disclose any information, including whether the deaths were drug-related, Salazar said.

But Salazar said the names of three victims had been made available through the Barragan funeral home in Agua Prieta, where they had been identified by relatives, as Francisco Javier Buelno, Antonio Santiestaban Vasquez and Lilia Beatriz Sanchez-Soltero.

"It is of course something that we will be looking at," Hallums said.

Tucson police have said they believe the deaths of the five victims found Monday were drug-related. The Arizona Republic reported Wednesday there were five pools of blood inside the shed, each surrounding torn burlap and plastic bags and ripped plastic sheeting, and that there was "the strong, unmistakable smell of marijuana."

An official with the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in Tucson said from the description, the shed slayings resulted from "a drug rip-off or a drug deal gone bad."

Anthrax

Band chosen to tour with MTV's 'Headbanger's Ball'

By MISH TELL
State Press

Sheer lunacy combined with an array of vigorous guitar screamin' is what makes Anthrax one of metal's leading maniac bands.

But this band has style; a sort of intimate "class" rarely associated with guitar heroes of the head-banging genre.

And why? Because the members care what music, in general, is saying.

So much so, that MTV has chosen this band to lead a 30-city "Headbanger's Ball" tour in which MTV cameras will be shooting footage throughout the country for an upcoming broadcast.

Fortunately, Phoenix has been chosen as one of the cities to host such a hot event. And who knows? Maybe some clippings from this show might show up on MTV in the near future, according to Anthrax promoters.

Performing at the West Valley Pride Pavillion next Saturday, April 10, at 7:30 p.m., as the headliner in a three-band-bash also featuring Helloween and Exodus, Anthrax will prove that wrath still lives in rock 'n' roll.

No matter how fast the guitar sparks.

But does this band actually consider themselves thrash veterans?

"I don't know what thrash is," Scott Ian, rhythm guitarist said. "We think we're a heavy metal band. 'Thrash' didn't come around until 1983. We've always been into heavy metal."

Anthrax, who obtained its name from a biology class, as Ian states, "it's some sort of disease," are native New Yorkers with an attitude. Supporting the latest Anthrax wax titled "State of Euphoria," Anthrax hopes to show the real light into what this band is about.

Anthrax, who is known to shy away from the notorious "devil this, devil that" inclination and stick with lyrics on reality, believe that witnessing their music live will easily define the nature of its music.

Anthrax, who recently toured nationally with Ozzy Osbourne, is happy with the recent success and exposure from the road.

"It was real good (opening up for Ozzy)," Ian said. "I just wish it was a longer tour. It only lasted 36 shows."

"We were lucky to open for such a well known act — obviously, it was great for us," Ian said.

Playing with such a popular rock 'n' roll precedent as Ozzy has opened many doors for Anthrax. The most important of those doors is exposure to a large variety of metal listeners in which Ozzy is known for having such a strong cult following.

"Before we left the stage, we had thousands of Anthrax fans," Ian said. "Everyone was on their feet."

However, playing to sold out arenas and warming up for a national act may be a different experience as compared to the MTV tour whose shows will be in smaller, more intimate halls.

But Ian stated, the strength in Anthrax shows ignite with the response from the audience. When the crowd goes zany, it spurts energy to the members of Anthrax which in return, makes its music crank.

"I don't know what to expect (from this show)," Ian said. "It depends on the crowd. It will be a real good show if people are going crazy. Our live show shows how much we love playing."

But despite the commercial success MTV may represent, Anthrax feels they will never "sell out" or change its music to fit anyone's style.

"We don't consciously try to make our music different," Ian said when asked about the LP and its role with MTV. "It's just (pure) Anthrax."

But with the recent surge in speed metal bands climbing up the charts, for instance, Metallica's LP "... And Justice For All" seeing mounds of success with its MTV video, Ian is happy to see the music isn't changing, rather, the changes are in the demands of the music listener.

"Metallica didn't change for MTV, MTV changed for Metallica. (If they have,) I don't see it," Ian began.

But when it came to picking a heavy metal outfit to headline the "Headbanger's" tour, MTV came to Anthrax.

"MTV came to us, when they wanted to promote a heavy metal tour," Ian said. "We thought we'd take advantage of it."

According to Ian, Anthrax is enjoying the growing of its success. And this tour is expected to add even more opportunities to Anthrax's lineup.

Tickets are $17.50 and can be picked up at the Pride Pavillion, Dillard's, or Zia Records.

Actress's new movie reads like 'calendar'

By KEITH POND
State Press

Beverly Hills is a big place for movies these days. America's insatiable desire to see the always opulent and often tasteless bastion of the rich and famous seems to spawn a new offering every season. "Troop Beverly Hills," starring Shelley Long, is the most recent film that attempts to cash in on the Rodeo Drive mystique.

I went into the theater with an open mind (honest!) After all, I told myself, Long's previous forays into the moviemaking business haven't been all bad. Mostly bad, yes, but not all bad. She plays the rich dilettante that she evidently was born to portray, so I naturally thought that maybe this time she would have gotten it right. She's a wealthy, discontented housewife who has lost sight of any true meaning in her life. The way she attempts to achieve a deeper purpose is to lead a troop of over-indulged, neglected rich girls through an adventure in, as Long's character says, "female bonding."

If handled with finesse, it is conceivable that the weak premise could show some meaningful relationship development along with some pertinent insights into the empty loneliness that people with entirely too much disposable income can face.

Oh well, better luck next time. The possibilities that exist for any type of meaningful dialogue or situations were completely ignored in favor of ridiculously boring pulp. If there is a cliché or trite situation that was not included in this film, it was not for lack of trying. Predictability is a term that leaps readily to mind. Every scene followed exactly where you would think it would. If it had been any more predictable, they would have had to make a calendar out of it. In short, one does not "see" this movie; one endures it.

As Long traipses into her new role as "Wilderness Girl Troop Leader" with ignorant glee, she meets with doubt from her charges and hostility from the overzealous head of the Wilderness Girls, Velda Plendor (Betty Thomas). Undaunted, the fearless Long begins to educate the girls in the ways of survival in the Beverly Hills' jungle.

This type of urban survival training does not mesh with the aggressive approach taken by the decidedly unglitzy Thomas, who takes it upon herself to derail Long's career. Instead, the intrepid Long shows her inner fortitude by successfully thwarting the conniving Thomas. As brilliantly original as this all is, it just doesn't work very well. When any insights are offered, gems like "money isn't everything" and "friends are really important," they are heavy-handed and obvious.

As the all-important Wilderness Girls Jamboree approaches, Long begins to realize that she needs to change her ways just a bit and become a productive person. The troop finally comes together under a new realization of self-worth (and some really snazzy Giorgio outdoor equipment) and confronts Plendor and her Rambo-esque band of red-feathered girls in a test of endurance against nature.

I won't give away the ending, but I'm sure you'll rest easier knowing that there are no surprises to spoil the parade of boredom.

Director believes award to be significant to country

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Pelle the Conqueror," an austere tale about a father and son forging a new life in harsh Danish farm country, brought Denmark its second consecutive Oscar for a foreign language film Wednesday night.

The Scandinavian country won its first Academy Award last year with "Babette's Feast."

"Oh it's so exciting," said a nervous Bille August, the director and writer. "I made a film about a poor immigrant from Denmark and here I am standing in my tuxedo and this shiny thing," he said holding up his statuette.

The story is told through the eyes of Pelle Hvenegaard, a Swedish boy who accompanies his widower father, played by Max Von Sydow, on a perilous adventure early in the century. Pelle finds his new home exciting and forbidding as he draws inner strength from his and his father's sufferings.

"I think it means a lot to Danish film," August said when asked about the significance of the award. "It is very important to people in film in my country."

Thirty-one countries submitted entries in this year's Academy Awards. Selection of each nation's entry is made by a jury composed of filmmakers from that country and only one film, which need not be released in the United States, is accepted.

The Foreign Language Film Award Committee screened all entries before voting to nominate five films.

Former child star wins first Academy Award

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Rain Man," the story of a conniving car salesman who learns to love his autistic brother, won the Oscar for best picture Wednesday night and brought top honors to actor Dustin Hoffman and director Barry Levinson. Jodie Foster, the victim of a gang rape in "The Accused," was named best actress of 1988.

"Rain Man" also captured a prize for the original screenplay by Ronald Bass and Barry Morrow, bringing its total to four Oscars at the 61st Academy Awards. Tying with three each were "Dangerous Liaisons," the ornate drama of drawing room seduction in pre-Revolutionary France, and "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," the brilliant combination of live action and animation.

"This is such a big deal!" said Foster, a former child star who won her first Oscar.

"Cruelty might be human and it might be cultural, but it's not acceptable, and that's what this movie is about," she said.

"I'm supposed to be jaded by this time, but I'm not," said Hoffman, who also won the award for "Kramer vs. Kramer" in 1979. He embraced loser Gene Hackman while on his way to the stage, where he basked in a standing ovation in tribute to his meticulously researched portrayal of an autistic savant.

"We tried to be as faithful as we could and be entertaining," said Levinson of the low-key "Rain Man," which also starred Tom Cruise as Hoffman's brother and has grossed $134.6 million at the box office.

"This is really about two actors — Dustin

Hoffman and Tom Cruise," Levinson said. "If they didn't deliver the performances they gave, I wouldn't be up here this evening."

"First of all, I want to thank Anne Tyler for writing such a wonderful book," Geena Davis said in accepting the first prize of the night at the 61st Academy Awards. She has said she read Tyler's novel when it was first published and coveted the role of Muriel.

"Dangerous Liaisons" won Oscars for Christopher Hampton's adaptation of his play and for art direction and costume design. "Roger Rabbit" won for film editing, sound effects and visual effects.

"The Milagro Beanfield War" won for best score and "Mississippi Burning" for cinematography. "Bird" won the Oscar for best sound and "Beetlejuice" for makeup.

Named best song of the year was Carly Simon's "Let the River Run" from "Working Girl." The academy could find only three songs to nominate this year instead of the usual five and didn't see fit to have them performed during the show.

The year's best foreign language film was Denmark's "Pelle the Conqueror" a grim tale about an exploited farmworker and his son.

With Wednesday's ceremonies, the Academy dropped the traditional line "The winner is . . ." in favor of "And the Oscar goes to . . ." The intent was to soften the sense of competition, but several presenters, including Cher for best picture, reverted to the old line.

More than 1,500 early bird fans, many with sleeping bags and food, had packed bleachers facing the four 24-foot Oscars that guard the Moorish arches at the entrance to the auditorium.

Hollywood's annual tribute to itself, televised live on ABC, moved at its usual plodding pace and was burdened with heavy-handed production numbers. The industry relied heavily on nostalgia, recruiting as presenters such old-time partners as James Stewart, Kim Novak, Bob Hope and Lucille Ball.

The 1989 season followed a record year at the box office. More than 1 billion tickets were sold in 1988, with gross revenues of $4.38 billion.

Audience gives approval as Davis takes Oscar

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Geena Davis, as the free-spirited dog trainer in "The Accidental Tourist" and Kevin Kline, as the wild-eyed, oversexed safecracker in "A Fish Called Wanda," were surprise Oscar winners in supporting roles Wednesday night.

"First of all, I want to thank Anne Tyler for writing such a wonderful book," Davis said in accepting the first prize of the night at the 61st Academy Awards. She has said she read Tyler's novel when it was first published and coveted the role of Muriel.

The award to Davis drew yelps of approval from the audience of 6,500 in the Shrine Auditorium, possibly because the favorites appeared to have been Frances McDormand for "Mississippi Burning" and Sigourney Weaver for "Working Girl."

"This is astonishing" said Kline, who also had not been considered a front-runner.

With Wednesday's ceremonies, the Academy dropped the traditional line "The winner is . . ." in favor of "And the Oscar goes to . . ." The intent was to soften the sense of competition.

No single picture dominated the early going, although "Rain Man" and its star Dustin Hoffman were favored to take home top honors. The low-key drama about a conniving car salesman learning to love his autistic brother had eight nominations, more than any other movie of 1988. It was considered a good bet to win Oscars for best picture, best actor and best director, Barry Levinson, and has grossed $134.6 million at the box office.

Yet "Rain Man" lost in the first two categories for which it was nominated. The Oscar for original score went to "The Milagro Beanfield War" instead, and "Dangerous Liaisons" won for art direction.

"Liaisons," an ornate drama of drawing room seductions in pre-Revolutionary France, also won for its opulent costumes.

"Bird" won the Oscar for best sound, "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" for sound effects editing and "Beetlejuice" for makeup.

The year's best foreign language film was Denmark's "Pelle the Conqueror" about an exploited farmworker and his son.

Kathleen Turner (left) and William Hurt starred in the Oscar nominated film "The Accidental Tourist." Geena Davis (right) received an award for Best Supporting Actress.

Even glitz, Snow White can't save Oscar pageant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar producer Allan Carr promised the Academy Awards' opening number would be the most exciting 15 minutes in television history. It seemed like hours.

For the record, the man who took "La Cage Aux Folles" to Broadway tried to fulfill his promise with a Snow White look-alike trilling "Proud Mary" to Hollywood brat packer Rob Lowe.

That was after the dancers, encased in glittery, golden five-pointed stars, trooped onstage.

As Oscar audience members stared blankly, a Snow White impersonator with a voice reminiscent of another cartoon heroine — Betty Boop — strolled through the Shrine Auditorium singing spoofs of popular songs rewritten with Oscar-oriented lyrics.

A groan swept through the crowded Oscar press room minutes later when a somber Lily Lowe, cast as Prince Charming, tried to sing and dance. He came up a few octaves and steps short.

All of this took place in a re-creation of the Cocoanut Grove, the nightclub where the Academy Awards were originally presented.

Amid a bevy of sequined hoofers, crooner Merv Griffin introduced various Cocoanut Grove diners, including veteran actors Vincent Price, Alice Faye, Dorothy Lamour and Roy Rogers.

Dancer Cyd Charisse unreeled a few classic tango steps.

When the number mercifully ended, Lily Tomlin strode down a grand staircase at center stage.

"Well I told them that I'd be thrilled to do the Oscars if they could just come up with an entrance," she said. "And think of it, more than a billion and a half people just watched that. And at this very moment they're trying to make sense of it."

As she made her entrance, Tomlin intentionally lost a shoe. She joked about it, recalling the late Ed Sullivan's propensity for calling a really great show a "really great shoe." A dancer from the chorus line crawled down the steps behind her, recovered the shoe and tossed it offstage.

ASU prepared to claim regional championship

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

April Fool's Day will not be all smiles and pranks for the ASU women's gymnastics team, but instead a day of seriousness and effort to reach their goal of winning the NCAA Regional in Salt Lake City.

The eighth-ranked Sun Devils will be in the second rotation featuring national powers Utah, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

'If everyone gets their brains together, I think we can win.'
— Karli Urban

"Being in the second rotation, we have a fair chance to win the meet as we are going head-to-head against the top teams," ASU coach John Spini said. "I'm glad we're able to sneak in there ahead of Arizona. This will probably be the best regional in the country as five of the top 12 teams in the country will be there."

Spini's crew will begin competition on the floor exercise with gymnasts Karli Urban, Molly Carpenter, Michelle Colavin, Heather Carter, Tracy Butler and Marika LeSieur.

"If everyone gets their brains together I think we can win," senior gymnast Urban said. "It is all mental — the physical can be done."

The floor exercise is the best event for the Sun Devils, which is the apparatus on which they scored a team-high, 48.55.

ASU assistant coach Lisa Zeis said the squad was working on the floor without spotting the routines to provide a realistic atmosphere.

"We trained great this week," Zeis said. "We are going to hit and be consistent."

The Sun Devils (7-13) are the fourth seed at the meet with a 190.37 average, while No. 1 Utah maintains a 192.22 score.

Spini has seen his team drop two matches to the Utes already this season.

"The kids are doing a real good job of staying mentally stable," Spini said. "They are tough athletes and do well when it counts. Every meet is make or break so we must do well."

The last time Spini was hoping for a high score, his Devils came through, thumping the Wildcats 192.35-190.65.

ASU placed second at last year's regional and advanced to garner eighth place in the NCAA Championships. The championships take the top 12 scores from the regionals around the country.

"The girls are really psyched," Zeis said.

Urban knows what will be the key to the Sun Devils' success on April 1.

"We need to be mentally strong," she said. "Everyone needs to be more confident."

Marmie directs civil war of Maroon and Gold

By GARY JACKSON
State Press

Three weeks.

As if the hot sun and full pads were not enough, the ASU football team has had to listen to whistles blowing and coaches yelling — for three full weeks.

But on Saturday the ASU spring football game will provide the Sun Devils an opportunity to show the coaches that their screaming was clearly heard.

With a validated ASU I.D. card or $2, spectators can watch the climax of spring football practice during the Maroon and Gold scrimmage at noon at Sun Devil Stadium.

"The players have been working really hard this spring," quarterback coach Mike Martz said. "We'd like them to have fun and end on a positive note."

Defensive line coach Mike Ackerley said, "It's a time for the kids to play without the coaches standing directly over them."

But most important, spectators can watch blood and guts — the elements that American sports are made of.

"You can finally go out and beat up on each other and have fun at it," offensive lineman coach Tom Freeman said. "The game is to have fun more than anything else."

Freeman said the starting offense and defense played each other during a scrimmage on Wednesday to provide an indication of what to expect from the team as a whole.

"I thought the offense and defense both had good moments, which is what you look for in a scrimmage," he said.

But in Saturday's contest, the teams will be divided up.

"We're looking forward to the spring game," ASU head coach Larry Marmie said. "It's real competition and the teams will be evenly matched."

ASU finished the 1988 season with a 6-5 record for fifth place in the Pac-10 and Marmie said he is anticipating better results this fall.

"We're concerned about being as good as we can be," Marmie said. "We expect to be an improved team this year."

"We want to make sure that we try to improve the older players who have been with the program for two to three years. We also want to get the young players in the right position that will benefit the team and allow them to be the best they can be."

Unlike the Wednesday scrimmage, Saturday's will be keyed more on players rather than a team effort, Ackerley said. Execution and technique will attract the coaches' attention, he said.

"We will be watching the individual performances — the players who go in and get the job done," he said. "We will be looking for the ones who can make big plays."

Martz said the main advantage of the spring game is that it simulates a real game as opposed to practicing drills.

"It's a good test to see what they can do,"

Martz said. "We had a good scrimmage Wednesday, but were still up and down — we're not consistent yet."

Marmie said the purpose of the early practice is to get a jump on the upcoming season.

"We've been pleased with what we've accomplished so far this spring," Marmie said. "We're not where we want to be, but we've made some good progress."

Marmie said the team has to operate at a much faster pace during the season. But at spring practice, he said there is time to focus on fundamentals without having the pressure of preparing for a game.

"If you don't like what you see in practice, you can back up and do it over again when you don't have to worry about playing a game on Saturday," Marmie said.

Because of current injuries, Ackerley said some players will be moved to different positions for Saturday's game. If someone excels at a new spot, he said it is possible the change could become permanent.

ASU tennis player Jennifer Rojohn was the only Sun Devil to play three games against her Texas opponent. She won the match 7-5, 5-6, 5-3.

Women netters shutout Longhorns

By VICKI CULVER
State Press

The ninth-ranked ASU women's tennis team won its sixth consecutive game against 17th-ranked University of Texas, 6-0, yesterday at Whiteman Tennis Center.

"We played extremely well," ASU coach Sheila McInerney said. "Our schedule has helped us, and the girls feel good."

The victory marked the team's fourth shutout of the season, leading to a 14-8 overall record.

McInerney said that although the Texas game was a shutout, she considered each match a battle of its own.

"From an individual match standpoint, we were close," she said. "We deserve to win close matches when we work hard."

In the singles competition, No. 1 seed Krista Amend defeated Texas' Diana Merrett 6-2, 6-3.

Other individual winners for ASU were No. 2 Kristi Jonkosky 7-6, 6-1; No. 3 Barbara Thompson 7-5, 5-0; No. 4

Jennifer Rojohn 7-5, 5-6, 5-3; No. 5 Paola Conte 6-3, 6-1, and sixth seed Karen Bergan 6-4, 7-5.

Rojohn, who was out part of the season due to knee injuries, was the only player to battle all three matches, and McInerney was impressed with her motivation.

"Jennifer, with her bad knee, was out there fighting like crazy," she said.

Jonkosky was down in her first match, 5-2, but went on to win 7-6.

"She slowed down and got out of rhythm," Jonkosky said about Texas' Carla Cossa, adding it was at that point that she made her attack.

Jonkosky was not sure, however, why Cossa tired out in the second match, but claims it may have been the heat.

"The heat is definitely to our advantage, but it's hard to tell if it affects the other teams," she said.

McInerney noticed the Texas girls wearing out in Jonkosky's court, as well as in the No. 3 spot.

"You've got to be tough in the first set, and jump on them in the second," she said, adding that the second and third matches are the most important.

Texas' biggest weakness, McInerney said, was their mental game.

"Tennis is all psychological," she said. "The other team gave in and lost confidence."

Jonkosky was expecting much more of a struggle out of Texas and was surprised when they gave in to the victory so easily.

"They are a good team," she said. "We were looking for a tough match, but they weren't as tough as we expected."

Saturday and Sunday the Sun Devils play back-to-back away games against third-ranked UCLA and ninth-ranked Southern California. McInerney feels her team's chances of winning are good with their victorious streak behind them.

"We're going to go out and compete hard, and we'll just have to see what happens," she said. "Good things happen to those who work hard."

She also feels that the consecutive games and traveling are an advantage. "I'm sure the girls would rather play matches than practice," she said.

Butler achieves success through determination

By CHRIS DORSEY
State Press

In 1984, the USA women's gymnastics team captured the silver medal led by the grace and stunning performances of Mary Lou Retton, Kathy Johnson and ASU assistant coach Michele Dusserre. A 14-year-old girl watched the games as an alternate and could not contribute to the effort.

Now, five years later, Sun Devil gymnast Tracy Butler will be counted on for key results for the team's success at the NCAA Regionals in Salt Lake City this weekend.

Butler, a freshman, placed 10th in the all-around at the 1984 Olympic Trials. The national team took the top seven finishers.

But due to her determination to represent the country, Butler refused to call it quits. The Worthington, Ohio, native continued in international competition and set her goal for the 1988 games in Seoul, South Korea.

However, she was hit with a major setback. In March of 1988, Butler fractured her elbow — an injury that required surgery. Again her determination took over; she was ready for her second go-around in the Olympic trials in June, only four months after her injury.

"I was doing really well at nationals, then I fractured my elbow," Butler said. "I wanted to give it everything I had since I worked so hard."

The Sun Devil watched the Olympics in Tempe and began training for the upcoming season, in which she has proven to be a solid cog in its good fortune.

During one point in the season, Butler was ranked in the top 10 in the country on the balance beam. This event poses as a challenge for her, which makes her strive to accomplish a good routine.

"Beam has always been my favorite event," Butler said. "It is the most challenging."

Achieving success is never enough for this freshman. She feels that an individual can always go one step further.

"I don't think you can ever be satisfied," Butler said. "Once you become satisfied you have nothing else to shoot for."

Butler has been competing in the all-around for the Sun Devils this season and captured All-Pac-10 honors — as a freshman. She scored a 9.80 on the uneven bars, which is her best tally this season.

Now the competition becomes more intense; a shot at the national title is on line. Her mentor, John Spini, feels Butler can capture a national title at the NCAA championships.

"I look for Tracy to be in contention for a national championship in several events," the ASU coach said.

Consistency could be the major factor in garnering All-American honors. Butler cited that the floor and beam are areas to focus her attention.

But teammate Karli Urban, who is the lone senior on the squad, believes that Butler's performances hit errorless.

"On beam, she has been awesome all year," Urban said. "I don't think I have seen her miss."

Urban was impressed with the newcomer and said she has been vital to the team.

"Tracy is the most awesome freshman to come into this program," she said. "She has really pulled through for us. You can always count on her to hit."

Butler shares the same respect for her peer. And in the season they have competed together, the freshman has drawn close to the All-American performer.

"She (Urban) has such a leadership personality," Butler said. "I look up to her more than I have anyone."

It is very unlikely for Butler to compete in the 1992 games — her focus for now lies ahead in the collegiate ranks and being a part of the Sun Devil's national title team.

Sun Angel features world's top athletes

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

A field of former Olympians and top world track competitors will fill the starting blocks and heave shot puts, discuses and javelins during the 10th Annual Sun Angel Track Classic Saturday.

In addition, several former Sun Devil athletes will return to their collegiate stomping ground.

The day will feature more than 350 athletes from around the globe competing in 34 field and running events, beginning at 3 p.m. at ASU's Sun Angel Stadium.

Tenth-year meet director Herman Frazier, ASU's associate athletic director, said at least 200 of these competitors will be Olympians.

The past nine classics have featured more than 60 Olympians, and six American and three world records have been broken at the ASU track.

"I have seen it develop into one of the best meets in the Southwest," Frazier said.

The former ASU runner competed in the classic in 1980, 1981 and 1982. In 1980, his 4x100-meter relay team set a classic record of :39.65, and in 1982 his 4x400-meter team established another of 3:03.81.

Frazier encouraged fan support to fill Sun Angel Stadium. Speaking as a former athlete, he said it makes a runner perform at a higher level when there is a large crowd rooting him on.

Those fans that do attend the meet will be able to see former Sun Devil Andrew Parker attempt to recapture the crown he received in the 100-meter high hurdles during the 1987 Sun Angel Classic.

Parker said he is hoping to surpass his initial classic appearance when he won the high hurdles with a :13.51 time.

The former ASU sprinter finished his last year of eligibility in 1988 and is completing his justice studies degree this spring. Parker will run unattached for Jamaica under the guidance of Tom Jones, head coach of the ASU track team.

"I feel like I felt in 1987," Parker said. "I'm ready, psyched up and I'm looking to do good."

He said he may no longer be on the ASU team, but the competitor practices with the squad daily.

"It is hard to practice alone," Parker said. "The key thing is that a coach is there. My event is a technical one — you can't see yourself go over the hurdles."

Former ASU runner Jeff Smith will make his third appearance in the Sun Angel Classic. The athlete, who will

Devils prohibited from running in Sun Angel meet

Jeff Smith

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Although the Sun Angel Classic is taking place in the ASU track and field team's front yard, the Sun Devils will not be able to participate.

The team was sentenced to a two-year probation by the NCAA last summer and can only compete in four home meets in 1988.

While ASU is able to participate in University-sponsored meets, Saturday's classic is not considered a home meet because it is put on by the Sun Angel Foundation.

"I think it is a tribute to them," said Herman Frazier, meet director and ASU associate athletic director. "It is a down year for them."

Frazier is in charge of identifying and bringing high-caliber athletes to Sun Angel Stadium from around the world.

Earlier in the season, ASU track redshirts were led to believe that they would be able to participate in the classic.

Track

run unattached, also practices with the ASU team and is coached by distance coach Ken Lehman even though he finished his eligibility last spring. The physical education major will graduate in May.

"It helps because I'm around a running set," Smith said.

The runner placed fourth in the 1988 classic and third in 1987, competing in the 1500-meter event.

"I feel pretty good," Smith said, adding that he would like to finish the race with a time of 3:42 minutes. "I'm just going to go on pace. I'll run 60 seconds a lap with a kick in the last 300 yards."

Besides the former ASU athletes, other competitors will show their talent on the track.

Olympian Harvey Glance, who has competed in five Sun Angel classics, will run unattached on the 4x100- and 4x200-meter relay teams — the same teams that captured wins during the 1988 classic.

"Between relays and open events (in Sun Angel classics), I have run nine races and won eight," the 32-year-old sprinter said.

but a closer look at the terms of the probation prohibited them.

ASU head coach Tom Jones said, "There's nothing we can do about it so why be upset?"

ASU field coach Ed Gorman agreed, adding that he will not miss the event for anything.

Jones and Gorman sit on the Sun Angel Classic committee in charge of putting on the track meet each year.

Former Sun Devil sprinter Andrew Parker, who will compete in the classic unattached, said ASU athletes are being left out.

"I think that it is a bad thing," he said. "The athletes and the school are paying for something a coach did. This turns people off — they don't want to associate with a school on probation."

Former ASU distance runner Jeff Smith, who also will run in the 1989 classic, said the exclusion is unfortunate.

Glance, who has been living in Phoenix for the past five years, is the proud owner of five international gold medals. He competed in the 1976 Summer Olympics, in which he won a gold medal on the 400-meter relay team and was a member of the 1984 and 1988 Summer Games.

"I feel like I could go another four years if I choose," he said. "But your goals lessen the longer you are in the sport."

Glance, who will be running with the Sports Track Club, said the Sun Angel Classic will be tough, but he is mentally and physically prepared.

"The season is still young," he said. "The competitors come out ready. This is a guideline to the long season ahead."

Calvin Smith, who has competed in several classics, will be a member of the same 4x100-meter relay with Glance. He was a member of the winning 4x100-meter relay team in 1987.

Smith also won a gold medal on the 1984 4x100-meter relay team from the United States.

The 28-year-old sprinter, who will run under the Mazda Track Club, said he is confident about the classic.

"We should do very good," the Tampa, Fla., native said. "I'm in good condition and I'm going to go out and run."

Devils shoot for another win

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

ASU's top-ranked men's golf team will attempt to win its second straight tournament when play begins today at the Augusta Intercollegiate in Augusta, Ga.

The three-day, 54-hole tourney will continue through Sunday at the Forest Hills Golf Course.

Freshman Phil Mickelson won the individual championship, and the Sun Devils placed five of their six golfers in the top 25 during a victory March 18 at the Fresno State Golf Classic in Fresno, Calif.

ASU beat UofA by five strokes as Mickelson, a left-hander from San Diego, shot an eight-under-par 208 for his first collegiate victory.

Mickelson has posted seven top-10 finishes in his nine tournament appearances and owns the team's best scoring average at 72.15.

"Phil has played beyond our early-season goals, but he is a very dominant player," ASU head coach Steve Loy said. "The win was very important for Phil and the entire team."

"Winning a championship will help the team, and we are looking to continue our momentum during this tournament."

Loy said his team, which has been No. 1 for about three weeks, is not affected by the lofty ranking.

"There's no question we've established our excellence," he said. "Now we just have to defend it and continue to improve."

The Sun Devils will be battling a 14-team field, including Oklahoma, Temple, Memphis State, Colorado, Virginia Commonwealth, Hawaii, Florida Southern, Richmond, Austin Peay, Michigan State, Army, Augusta College and Huntingdon (Ala.) College.

"I think this next week is extremely important," Loy said. "Thus far we've had a few good performances, but from my point of view we haven't had two good performances back to back."

Before the Fresno victory, ASU's last championship was at the Ping Arizona Intercollegiate in January.

The Sun Devils have posted five runner-up finishes along with the two wins in nine tournaments.

At Fresno, junior Per Johannson, the 1988 national junior college runner-up, shot a 212, while senior all-American Jim Strickland and junior Dave Cunningham shot 218, and junior Scott Frisch tallied 219.

"I thought the top five players in this lineup were as good as we've had all year," Loy said. "Anytime you get five players under 219 (216 is par), you should win the tournament."

Phil Mickelson

Vollstedt uncertain of ASU's play after month layoff

A long layoff has given the ASU women's golf team plenty of time to catch up on schoolwork and prepare for the upcoming Lady Sun Devil Invitational, April 10-12 in Phoenix.

The fourth-ranked Sun Devils have not played in an intercollegiate tournament since the Patty Sheehan Invitational March 5 at Monterey, Calif. ASU finished in third place there, 17 strokes behind champion Texas.

ASU head coach Linda Vollstedt said she does not know if the long layoff will hurt the team.

"There's really no way of knowing," Vollstedt said. "You have to look at it in a positive light."

"There have been some pluses: they've had a chance to catch up in school and work on individual games and techniques."

Vollstedt said academics is a very important component of her team.

"School is just as important as golf is," she said. "They feel that if they do well in class, they'll do well on the course, too."

Vollstedt said the team is looking forward to defending its title at the Lady Sun Devil Invitational.

Five different schools have won team titles on the Stone Creek Golf Course, previously known as Anazasi Golf Course. ASU (1981, 1988), Oklahoma State (1982, 1987) and Tulsa (1984, 1985) each have won two crowns, while Southern Methodist and Florida have claimed one title apiece.

"They remember how it felt last year to win, and we would like to do it again," Vollstedt said.

Vollstedt said her team still has room for improvement, but added any of her players could win.

"We have not peaked yet," she said. "But, we're right on track. We've been very consistent, and any one of four players could win this tournament."

The favorite has to be ASU senior Pearl Sinn. The two-time All-American is ranked No. 1 in the country and currently is playing at the Dinah Shore Invitational.

Sinn, who is the only golfer to ever win the U.S. Amateur and U.S. Public Links Championships in the same year, placed 11th at Monterey.

But another golfer on the rise is junior Amy Fruhwirth. The preseason All-American has finished runner-up at the last two tournaments.

Also playing well for the Devils is junior Missy Farr, freshman Lynne Mikulas, senior Hether Hodur, freshman Julie Shephard and sophomore Mindy Bono.

After the Lady Sun Devil Invitational, ASU will attempt to defend its conference championship at the Pac-10 Championships, April 23-25 at Pasadena, Calif.

— DAVE HODGES

Sinn records best amateur golf tally

From staff and wire reports

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Juli Inkster, off to a slow start on the LPGA Tour this year, showed signs of breaking out of her slump with a 66 Thursday to take the opening-day lead in the $500,000 Dinah Shore tournament.

Her 6-under-par round at Mission Hills Country Club was good for a two-shot lead over Dale Eggeling.

Beth Daniel, Lori Garbacz, Jody Rosenthal and Liselotte Neumann of Sweden were another stroke behind at 69.

Pat Bradley, the 1986 Dinah Shore champion, was another shot back in a group at 70 with Anne-Marie Palli of France and Bonnie Lauer.

Defending champion Amy Alcott was in a group at 71, and Nancy Lopez matched par-72.

Arizona State golfer Pearl Sinn shot a 75. Her 3-over-par round was the lowest score by an amateur in the tournament.
