DSR director predicts plan will cost University

By TYRONE MEIGHAN
State Press

A recently approved five-year parking plan that will more than double parking rates for disabled students by 1992 could cost the University thousands of dollars, the associate director for ASU Disabled Student Resources said Wednesday.

"It will cost so much more to transfer students from those outer lots," Tedde Scharf said. "It would be cheaper in the long run to keep a flat rate for disabled parking."

Ron Kucera, acting assistant director of Parking Services, said he was unaware of Scharf's concerns.

"We have not discussed that concern with her," he said. "But we'll do everything we can do to help her."

Scharf's comments came five days after the Arizona Board of Regents approved the parking plan.

Scharf said if the increased fee forces disabled students to park in lots that are not close to campus, the students will need transportation to their classes. She added that most disabled students cannot board the trams.

"The University will be responsible to provide transportation," she said. "I don't know what they are going to do."

The plan will gradually increase the rates for disabled student parking on campus from the current rate of $47 per year to $105 yearly rate.

According to ASU Parking Services, there were 228 permanent disabled student decals sold for the 1988-89 school year.

Scharf said she supports the idea of treating disabled students the same as other students, but added that some of the disabled students may be forced to park in one of the distant lots because they will not be able to afford to park close to campus.

The plan was originally adopted by ASU administrators and approved by Associated Students of ASU, Scharf and Richard Landreth, assistant director of Parking Services.

But ASASU voted unanimously on March 2 to pass a resolution stating they opposed the disabled student parking increase. The resolution came after several complaints from ASU disabled students.

Vince Micone, ASASU campus affairs vice president, said he is disappointed with the regents' decision to approve the increase.

"I intend to do some further action," he said. "I don't think it is a dead issue."

Micone said he would be talking with the disabled students to determine their course of action.

Scharf said the University must legally provide disabled students with access to their classes no matter where they park.

"The problem is that there is not adequate transportation from those outer lots," she said. "They (Parking Services) would have to have a fleet of carts. If it costs too much, maybe it is not worth it."

Michele Martinez, a Disabled Student Resources staff member who spoke against the fee increase to the regents Friday, agreed with Scharf.

"It would be so much cheaper to leave the rates the way they are," she said.

Scharf said she had agreed to the plan but did not realize the ramifications of it.

"Their (parking services) idea is that we would handle all the parking transportation," she said. "(Landreth) assumed we would provide all of it. We just can't."

Disabled Student Resources has five carts that can be scheduled by disabled students, but only one of the carts is wheelchair accessible.

Scharf said she will send a letter of her concerns to ASU Parking Services; Victor Zafra, ASU vice president for business affairs and members of the board of regents.

Even if only 10 disabled students park in one of the outer lots, Scharf said additional carts or tram service will be needed.

Professors compete for Faculty Senate chair-elect

By RICHARD LEWIS
State Press

Two professors vying for the ASU Faculty Senate's chair-elect office said they want to work on improving the number of women and minorities hired by the University.

The candidates also agreed that the Senate should promote the ASU faculty as a vital resource for the state.

The election between Paul Wong, professor in the College of Social Work, and Arlene Metha, associate professor of counseling psychology, begins today.

"I truly believe we have not really succeeded on campus in helping women receive tenure," Metha said, adding that women represent only 5 percent of the tenured faculty at ASU; whereas the national average is 10 percent.

Wong, who came to ASU in 1979, said he would like to strengthen the role of minority groups within the Senate.

"We need to pay more attention to the issues faced by the women and minority faculty members," he said.

Wong is currently secretary of the Faculty Senate and a member of the Senate Executive Committee. He has also been a senator-at-large and has served on various other Senate and University committees.

Metha came to ASU in 1971 and has been secretary of the Faculty Senate and a member of the board of directors of the Faculty Association. She also has served on numerous other college and University committees.

The Faculty Senate chair-elect serves a full year preparing to take over the chairmanship of the faculty legislative body. Either Metha or Wong will be chairman in 1990-91.

In discussing his platform on Monday, Wong said he hopes to help strengthen the Senate's capacity for policy formulation if he becomes chair-elect.

"The Senate needs to increase its independent role in formulating policy," he said.

He added that he wants to work with the Senate to recognize the needs of many different University groups.

State GOP prepares for sixth Mecham run

By CAROLYN HOFIG
State Press

The warning flags went up almost immediately after Evan Mecham announced Tuesday that he would seek to regain the office of governor of Arizona.

The former governor's candidacy alone would factionalize the Republican party in the state, effectively crippling the right-wing in the 1990 election, some observers said.

news analysis

Others maintain, however, that the dust of the turbulent Mecham recall movement and of the impeachment that drove him from the state's chief executive position one year and two days ago has finally settled. The GOP in Arizona, the argument runs, is thinking forward and is ready to support any gubernatorial candidate.

"I think the Republican party is big enough to take in the whole spectrum of people who would like to belong to it," Mecham said in a telephone interview Wednesday. "We're working with adding to that."

Opponents disagree.

"The Republican party is already split between the mainstream faction and the Mecham-Robertson faction," said Arizona House Majority Whip Chris Herstam, referring to supporters of one-time televangelist and ultra-conservative former Republican presidential candidate Pat Robertson.

The rise of the far right in the Arizona GOP has been marked by instances such as the controversial "Christian nation" resolution passed at the state Republican convention earlier this year.

Herstam, one of the first Republican legislators to oppose Mecham's tenure as governor, said that the rift in the party is "about as deep as you can get it." Mecham's move will do nothing to soothe the situation, he said.

New York company pleads guilty to South African deal

NEW YORK (AP) — In the first prosecution under a 1986 anti-apartheid law, an aviation company and its chairman pleaded guilty Wednesday to importing four jet engines that were owned by South African Airways.

Air Ground Equipment Sales Inc. of West Babylon, N.Y., and its chairman, Robert Fessler, had been indicted Monday.

Their guilty pleas were part of an agreement with federal prosecutors, who said the case was the first prosecution under the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986.

Fessler told U. S. District Judge Mark A. Costantino of Brooklyn that he had been negotiating to buy the engines from South African Airways before the law was enacted. The company went ahead with the purchase and shipped the engines to Israel, where a deal to sell them to an Israeli company fell through, he said.

"A business judgment was made to continue the deal after the law was enacted," Fessler said. The engines were shipped to the United States in August 1987.

The 1986 law bans the importation of goods "grown, produced, manufactured by, marketed or otherwise imported" by organizations that are part of or controlled by the South African government.

Officials work to contain oil spill that threatens city's water

TROIS RIVIERES, Quebec (AP) — Environmental officials worked Wednesday to contain a spill of about 1,768 gallons of oil laced with toxic PCBs upstream from the city's supply of drinking water.

"We still don't know how serious it is for the drinking water in Trois Rivieres," said Yvon Gelin, spokesman for the provincial Environment Department.

He said the oil leaked into the St. Maurice River Tuesday while it was being transferred at the Consolidated-Bathurst Inc. pulp and paper plant. Trois Rivieres, a city of 53,000 people, is midway between Montreal and the city of Quebec.

Vietnam pledges to withdraw from Cambodia by Sept. 30

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Vietnam said Wednesday it will withdraw from Cambodia by Sept. 30, nearly 11 years after an invasion that ended the brutal Khmer Rouge regime and started a civil war.

Vietnam had said previously it would remove its remaining soldiers, estimated at up to 70,000, by September only if a political settlement was reached but would be out by 1990 in any case.

Wednesday's announcement, issued as a joint statement in Phnom Penh, Hanoi and Vientiane, capital of Laos, did not indicate any conditions were attached.

Vietnamese withdrawal and the end of outside aid "will put an end to the civil war and stimulate the Kampuchean parties to settle the internal aspects of the Kampuchean question before September 1989 on the basis of national reconciliation," said the statement, also released by Vietnam's official news agency.

ASU students to join women's rally in D.C.

Irwin Daugherty/State Press

Adrianus Lukito, left, a senior electrical engineering major, signs a banner that will be used in a march in Washington. The Womens Study Students Association (WSSA) in conjunction with the student group of Arizona Right to Choose hope to raise $365.00 to send a representative to Washington to be a part of the Women for Equality March. Nancy Crough a co-facilitator of WSSA, assists Lukito.

By RICHARD A. VIGIL
State Press

About 30 ASU students will join approximately 500,000 women's rights activists in Washington, D.C., Sunday to show their support for legal abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment.

Jodie Horn, co-chair of the ASU chapter of Arizona Right to Choose, said the students will take part in a march and rally sponsored by the National Organization for Women.

"It's going to be the largest march in history for abortion rights and the ERA," she said.

On Monday, NOW also will sponsor a day to lobby Congress for women's abortion rights and for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, which has been reintroduced to the U. S. Congress.

The ASU Women's Studies Student's Association has been on Cady Mall this week displaying banners that will be carried in the march. Students have been asked to make a $1 donation and sign their names on the banner in support of the marchers.

The donations will be used by the club to send one of its members to the march. Kim Martin, a senior history/economics major, was selected by the club.

"It should be really exciting," Martin said. "I'm glad they selected me to go to the march."

She said the event should be historic because of the number of people expected to participate in the march.

Nancy Crough, a co-facilitator of the club, said Martin was chosen because of her active role in women's issues, including planning most of the events during Women's History Month.

Martin said the march will bring publicity to the pro-choice movement.

"The biggest thing is that pro-choice people have not been in the press," Martin said. "A majority of people are pro-choice. They may not necessarily be pro-abortion, but they are pro-choice."

She said the march also is intended to send a message to the U. S. Supreme Court, which has agreed to reconsider the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade case, which legalized abortion.

Faculty

"In the past, the Senate has focused on the faculty," Wong said. "The Senate needs to pay attention to not only the faculty, but to other constituent groups such as librarians and academic professionals."

"We need to communicate a great deal more with the influential groups and the people of Arizona," he said.

Wong said he also wants to work with the administration and the Arizona Board of Regents to regain competitiveness between ASU and other universities in the area of faculty research.

In the last four or five years, ASU's faculty has experienced a decline in morale because the salaries and support do not match that given at other universities of similar size, he said.

"We cannot compromise the tenure status for professors if we want to maintain excellence at this university," Wong said. "The Senate should take a strong position against any attempt to dilute the protection for the faculty."

Metha said there are three major areas of her platform — equity and diversity, communication and the overall quality of life at ASU.

The Senate needs to improve communication with the regents, especially over the issues of salaries and merit, Metha said, adding that ASU seems to be losing its competitive edge over other universities.

Metha said she brings a great deal of experience to the chair-elect position having served on the Academic Freedom and Tenure Committee.

Because of this experience, Metha said she can empathize with faculty members who have had problems with the current tenure system.

"I've experienced first-hand when a faculty (member) does not receive tenure."

Metha said ASU has been successful in recognizing the changing profile of the student body over the years, but not as successful at recognizing the changing profile of the faculty and its needs.

For example, Metha said she would like the Senate to consider some alternative policies for extended parental leave and accumulating tenure track time for single, primary care parents.

She said some faculty members have lost the chance for tenure because of time taken for family responsibilities.

If elected, Metha said she would work to arrange for an on-going interaction between the faculty and the elected members of student government.

Lorenzo steals from the poor and gives to himself

Brian Tassinari
Asst. Opinion Editor

There may or may not be life after bankruptcy for Eastern Airlines but one thing is certain: Local members of the International Association of Machinist and Aerospace Workers are doing all that they can to pull the plug on Lorenzo's Eastern — which has what may already be a terminal case of labor woes.

"We'll take this whole thing down with us if we have to," said striking machinist Mark Wright to a sparse crowd outside the Student Services Building yesterday. "We want to work for fair wages and we don't think that is going to happen with Mr. Lorenzo in charge."

Wright was speaking at a forum sponsored by the Young Democrats of ASU. He said that his union would be happy to give wage concessions if someone came in and bought the airline, but not to Lorenzo.

When the machinists went on strike over a month ago the union knew one of two things would happen.

One, the pilots would not support the strikers and the machinists union would be broken; or two, the pilots would support the machinists and the company would be broken — thrown into bankruptcy with everyone's job in jeopardy.

Given this unattractive list of options, why did the union strike?

What motivated these rational people to risk almost certain destruction of their careers?

The answer, of course, is Frank Lorenzo. He has run roughshod over the union for so long that it has become a personal struggle. His tough-guy John-Wayne attitude has so alienated the union that substantive negotiations are almost impossible. The machinist union has come to believe that they cannot bargain in good faith with Lorenzo because, in the end, he is determined to break them.

They're probably right.

In 1983, Lorenzo's Texas Air bought Continental Airlines and, by declaring bankruptcy, had all the union contracts voided. He was then free to hire non-union help at a substantially lower wage. Even with these wage concessions Continental lost $74 million in its first four years out of bankruptcy.

Labor and management have been fighting for a long time in this country, but what makes this dispute particularly disturbing is the reason for the fight.

Lorenzo's Texas Air has used billions of dollars in junk bonds to finance takeovers of Peoples Express, Frontier, Continental, and Eastern. These bonds are high-yield and high-risk investments which are secured by the assets of the company being bought.

To pay the interest on these bonds Lorenzo is asking for concessions from the unions — or destroying them.

Frank Lorenzo is a modern-day robber baron whose emergence signals a disturbing trend in corporate America.

Good management to him is taking food off the table of employees so he can meet enormous interest payments on his junk bonds.

If his little game succeeds he walks away with billions of dollars.

If it fails he loses nothing.

The losers are the people who work for him.

The people who are enduring the hardship and suffering the risks are not the ones who will enjoy the rewards, and that's what makes Lorenzo's position immoral.

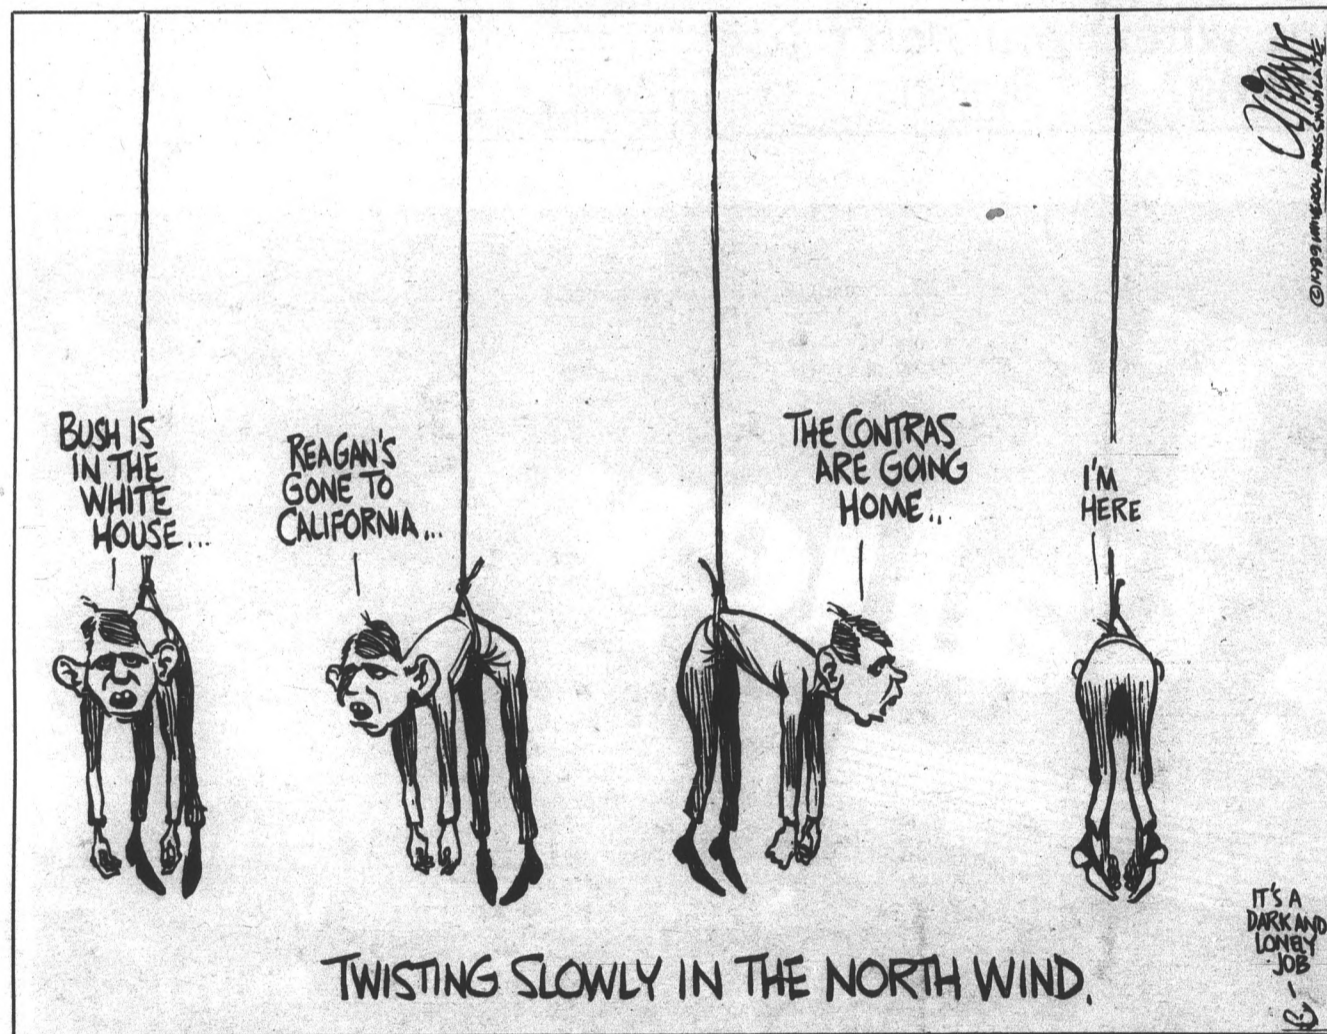

Frank Lorenzo is a myopic bean counter with no concept of the principle of synergy. To him, employees are an expendable resource to be exploited and then discarded onto the scrapheap.

To Lorenzo, labor management is like strip-mining; exploit the resource then move on, regardless of the damage done. Unfortunately, those left behind have to deal with the scars.

He doesn't understand that a loyal and happy work force is more productive and contributes to the bottom line more than a few dollars in wage concessions.

Frank Lorenzo is a modern-day robber baron whose emergence signals a disturbing trend in corporate America. Instead of building a company through innovation and hard work he has chosen to build by taking from others — his workers.

People like Lorenzo are called innovative new-breed managers, but since when is stealing from others innovative? And if a callous disregard for the lives and livelihood of others is the new breed, than I think I like the old breed better.

Bush, Exxon deserve condemnation

Editor:

George Bush and Exxon deserve nothing but condemnation for their handling of the Alaskan oil spill. Obviously Bush is lying to the American people and covering up for Exxon, claiming they are doing a good job when in reality everything is out of control.

Bush has not declared the area a disaster area for Exxon's benefit, too, hoping fishermen will sell out cheap to Exxon when emergency funds do not materialize, thus allowing Exxon to force them to sign agreements not to sue.

What is going on in Washington and in Alaska by Bush and Exxon is immoral, and I am sick of the Republicans and conservatives in this country thinking the only important things in life are their two gods — money and corporations.

KFYI radio had a special program about this neglect by the president and Exxon and urged people who are angry over the whole situation to cut up their Exxon cards and boycott the company. I have done that and more, and I urge any readers to do the same. One can also write to the head of the Interior Committee, Arizona congressman Mo Udall, at 522 Roosevelt, Phoenix, 85003 or call him at 261-3018.

It is tragic to see that this country is stuck with such a superficial, callous twit like George Bush for president. A real leader would have gone to the oil spill personally within a day and would have had people like the National Guard mobilized instantly. But not Bush, he would rather sit on his butt and wallow in self praise.

Mecham's sixth bid for governor will split GOP

"Ev Mecham's campaign announcement will create further divisiveness within the GOP and make it very difficult for us to win the governorship in 1990," Herstam said.

Jack Londen, national GOP committeeman for Arizona, takes a more pragmatic view of the impact of Mecham's renewed bid for governor.

"It means we're going to have a primary," he said.

Any factionalizing within the party will "depend entirely on the other candidates," said Londen, himself a potential aspirant to the governor's office.

Londen said he believes the party will rally around its gubernatorial nominee when the time comes.

Representatives of two campus Republican groups at ASU said students among the GOP are ready to support whichever candidate emerges from the primary.

"Most of the people that I've spoken to in the organization have been very Republican-oriented and not so much a matter of factions," said Paul Kline, a senior political science major and chairman of the College Republicans at ASU. "They are all just people who are interested in Republican politics, period."

Robert Davis, a political science junior and a member of Student Republicans agreed that the GOP in general rated as far more important to the group than quirks and characteristics of the assorted candidates.

However, Mecham may require a little extra selling among the student body, Kline said.

"Overall, there was obviously a very negative perception about Gov. Mecham on campus," he said. "It would be kind of foolish to say that there's going to be this great ground-swell of support for Evan Mecham, if he were to run again, from ASU."

"There's just not a good perception of him at ASU."

Kline said he believes the anti-Mecham sentiment is largely temporary, and the student group will concentrate on issues instead of personalities.

"Something that a friend of mine was saying before is that now everyone is concerned about the Mecham faction, but in '76, everyone was concerned about the Reagan faction," he said.

"Things have a habit of normalizing themselves."

Mecham was elected in a three-candidate race in November 1986. Within a month of his January 1987 inauguration, he repealed a state holiday honoring civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. because he believed that the executive order, through which his Democratic predecessor Bruce Babbitt instituted the holiday, was illegal.

Mecham opponents started a recall petition and eventually garnered enough signatures from registered voters to force a recall election, although the governor was removed from office before the new vote could take place.

In January 1988, Mecham was indicted on six felony counts. He was acquitted of those charges, which included fraud, perjury and filing false documents concerning a $350,000 campaign loan from Valley developer Barry Wolfson, but politicians on both sides of the philosophical spectrum began calling for Mecham's resignation.

On April 4, 1988, the Arizona Senate voted to impeach then-Gov. Evan Mecham for improperly using the $80,000 "protocol fund" of campaign donations to bail out his Glendale car dealership and for interfering with an investigation of a death threat made against one of his aides.

Mecham maintains the impeachment was illegal, deeming the date Arizona's "day of infamy."

He had filed paperwork for a re-trial, but the Senate rejected the request.

Another legal question concerns whether Mecham legally may run again for the governorship. The Senate failed to pass the so-called "Dracula clause," which would have precluded Mecham from re-applying to the position, by a two-thirds majority.

However, the bill did receive a pure majority, 17-13. Attorney General Bob Corbin has been asked to clear up the gray area; his opinion is expected within the next two weeks.

Mecham has said he will fight the Dracula clause in the Supreme Court, if necessary.

Although Mecham lost the governor's office, his supporters made considerable progress at the polls in November 1988. Several Republicans who had voted for impeachment, including Senate president Carl Kunasek, lost their seats to farther-right Mechamite candidates.

The Republican party found itself divided into pro- and anti-Mecham camps.

But the division in the Arizona GOP started with the impeachment, Mecham said.

"How could you make a greater rift than the people who engineered replacing the Republican in the office illegally, as I'm stating, with a Democrat?" Mecham said.

But Mecham said he will not be campaigning on the past.

"I don't like to see personalities brought in," Mecham said. "I think you can campaign very cleanly but you can campaign very intensely by talking about

"Our party membership is growing, mostly at the expense of the Democrats. We've got people shifting over in a pretty steady stream, and we're going to try to increase the flow of that."

issues and principles and records. That's what I want to see done, and that's what I do."

State Democrats are gearing up for a different kind of battle if Mecham becomes the Republican nominee, however.

Glenn Davis, executive director of the state Democratic Party, said, "His style of politics is to attack heavily, to do tabloids, basically smearing his opposition. We'd certainly have to adapt our strategy to deal with his sort of negative-style campaigning."

"His campaigns tend to be pretty down-and-dirty. It would be a very unpleasant campaign. I think it's going to be a very unpleasant experience for the state, all told."

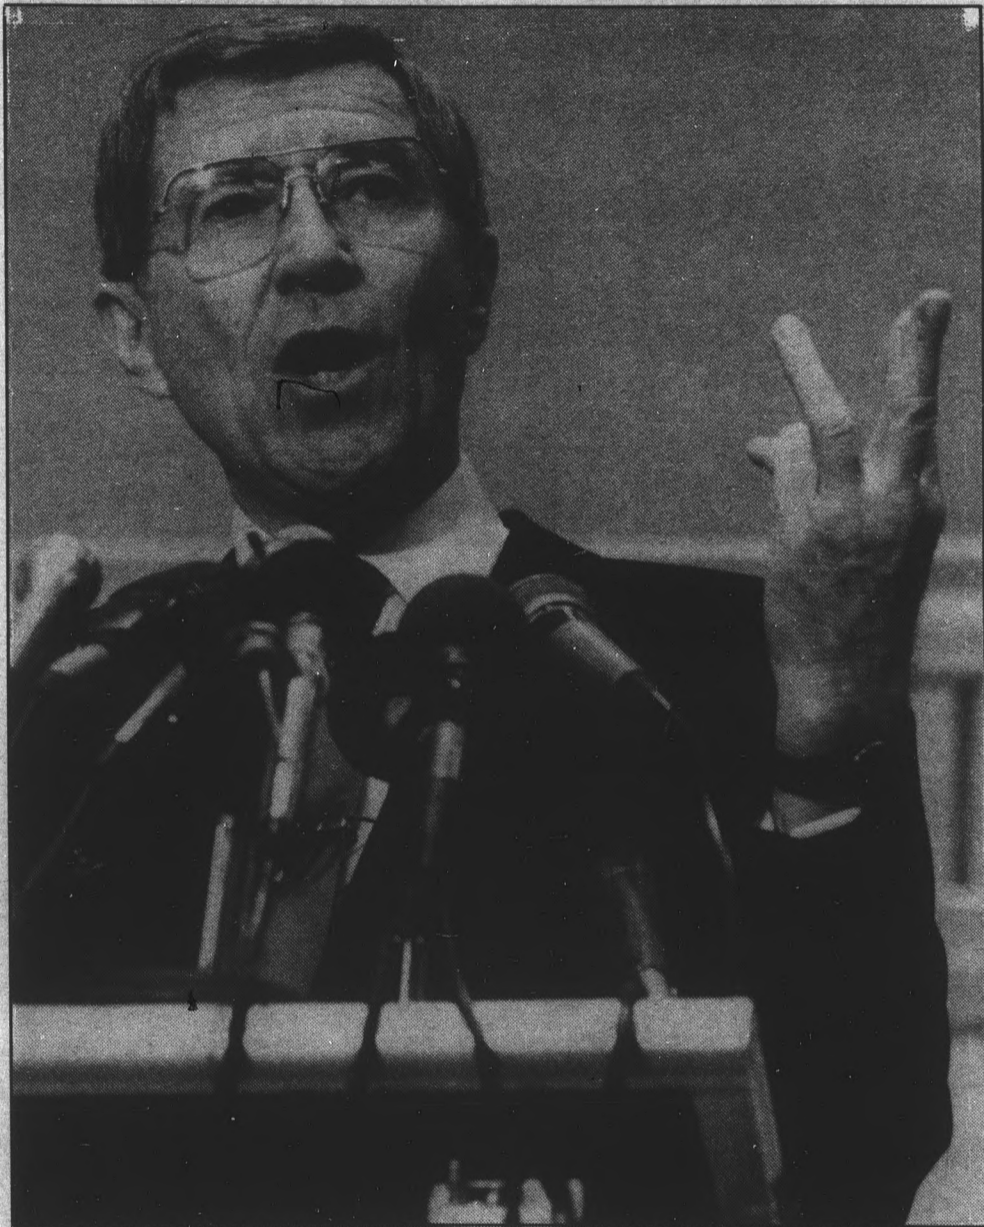

Viewed on a national scale, another Mecham candidacy represents nothing positive, Davis said.

"I think it's a net negative for everybody in the state, Democrat or Republican," he said. "It's a real black eye nationally."

"The image damage is very noticeable. Evan Mecham is perceived nationally as some very controversial figure who is attacking his state leadership and his state. He's back on center stage in Arizona, and that's not the kind of national image you want to have."

Londen also mentioned the Mecham

Can Mecham run? ASU profs says 'yes'

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

ASU political and legal observers said Wednesday that while former Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham probably has the right to run for office again, they don't think he can win the 1990 general election.

Louis F. Weschler, acting dean of the College of Public Programs and a professor of public affairs, said Mecham "is certainly entitled to run again."

"I actually think he'll do pretty well in the primary, but I don't know if he would win the general election," he said.

Joseph M. Feller, ASU associate professor of law, agreed.

"On the legal issue, I believe pretty strongly that he can run again," Feller said.

But Paul Eckstein, who helped prosecute Mecham in the impeachment trials, disagrees, saying Mecham can't run because the Dracula clause actually did pass.

Although the Senate voted 17-13 in favor of the Dracula clause, less than the two-thirds margin required, Eckstein said the Senate did not act properly in requiring a two-thirds vote because of a 1910 territorial statute that says only a majority vote is required.

Feller said that Eckstein may have had a case if he had brought it up at the time of the hearings, but it is too late.

Pit bulldogs attack Tucson boy

TUCSON (AP) — A 9-year-old Tucson boy has been hospitalized after being attacked by two mixed-breed pit bulldogs, authorities said.

One of the dogs was destroyed after the attack Tuesday and the other was caged in the Pima Animal Control Center.

Ryan Westphal was walking home from school and was a few houses from home when he was set upon by the two dogs, which were owned by a next-door neighbor, police said.

The dogs broke Westphal's arm, shredded his ears and cut his face and neck severely, hospital officials said.

They said the boy needed seven hours of surgery for the injuries and was in stable condition Wednesday.

Animal Control officials said the dogs are of a pit bull-boxer mix and are a bit larger than the average pit bull.

Dolly Sullivan, owner of the dogs, was cited by animal control officials for violation of leash laws, violation of the biting dog ordinance and for not having the dogs licensed.

stigma on Arizona.

"There's a certain amount of laughter (outside the state)," Londen said. "I'm not saying that's at all justified, but that's what happens."

Still, Mecham sees himself as an asset both to the party and to the state.

"Our party membership is growing, mostly at the expense of the Democrats," Mecham said. "We've got people shifting over in a pretty steady stream, and we're going to try to increase the flow of that."

That doesn't necessarily mean the GOP is stronger than it was before Mecham, according to Jack Londen.

"It's wider but it's not quite as deep," Londen said.

It has grown numerically, but the tension and dissension has risen, too, he said.

The Secretary of State's office said it listed 710,001 registered Republicans and 653, 561 registered Democrats statewide as of January.

Mecham cited his refusal to raise taxes and the passage of weights-and-measures regulations as examples of his service to Arizonans while he was governor.

Also, parts of his comprehensive anti-drug program have been adopted. He points to the tougher enforcement law that was pushed through in the first legislative session of his term.

Ironically, Mecham said, the same "team" of legislators who supported his drug plan later voted to impeach him.

This time, Mecham has set about establishing a broader base of support at the district level.

"Essentially we have got most of the party offices and workers working on the idea that we're the people's party and we're going to work toward electing people who respond to the electorate instead of special interests and the power brokers," Mecham said. "It's just as simple as that."

"We've got about twice as many precinct committee people as we've ever had before," he said. "A lot of the people who are my friends are in the key positions."

This is not an attempt to rout out his opponents within the GOP, Mecham maintains.

"I'm not trying to read them out of the party," he said.

"I want to see the districts organize and be active in bringing more people to candidacy to challenge for the seats in the Legislature," Mecham said. "I want to see everybody have to defend their own record to stay in the Legislature."

Will Mecham's record — legalities permitting — carry him to a second shot at the governor's office?

"He will never win," Herstam said. "Ev Mecham could never win a general election in Arizona.

"The only chance of any victory he has is in the Republican primary, and that's only if there's a crowded field of candidates. Hopefully, that will not occur."

In any case, the rift may remain.

"My opposition to what Ev Mecham stands for has always been very clear, and that opposition will always continue," Herstam said.

Could that send voters to the Democrats in the 1990 gubernatorial race?

"I don't think so, but it could if this is just a blood-letting campaign," Londen said. "You know, the Democrats are just rubbing their hands together."

"But we've got 17 months. We ought to be able to do some healing by then."

As for the GOP in Arizona, Londen said, "We're bottomed out. I think we go uphill from here."

"I think we'll win in 1990. I don't know how or with whom, but I think we will win."

ASU changes tactics in university improvement

By MICHAEL LEWIS
State Press

The Arizona Students' Association has changed its tactics in preparing its 1989 Undergraduate Education Report, deciding to focus on single issues needing improvement at the three state universities rather than listing all of the student's complaints as it did in the past.

This new single-issue approach used in the annual report issued to the Arizona Board of Regents was developed in hopes of setting more attainable goals for the regents, said Larry L'Heureux, president of the NAU Associated Students.

"It's a marketing approach," L'Heureux said Wednesday. "The purpose of the new approach is to get some action."

The report, listing class size and availability as a major student concern, blames insufficient legislative funds as the reason for undergraduate education problems.

L'Heureux said the regents have been aware of the undergraduate problems in the past, but have had their hands tied because of legislative budget constraints.

"What it comes down to is a major funding problem," he said. "The regents can't make improvements without money."

NAU students have proposed a cultural and ethnic studies class that would help increase the sensitivity to different backgrounds for both students and staff, L'Heureux said. He added that this idea has a good chance of making a positive impact on the regents.

"We're already having dialogue about it," he said.

Brad Golich, executive director of ASA, which represents 82,000 students across the state, said there have been some improvements in the quality of undergraduate education since past reports have been issued, but there are still areas needing drastic improvement.

He added that ASU students, in addition to wanting smaller class sizes, have also asked for better advising and more sections in those classes that continually fill up because of high demand.

In reference to legislative funding, Golich said ASU students believe current funding reflects an emphasis on research receiving priority over instruction.

UofA students suggested lobbying the Legislature for more than $500,000, which would be awarded to instructors for excellence in the classroom. The students said this should be implemented because they feel there is more emphasis on research than on instruction.

Golich said UofA students also suggested offering a senior-year course summarizing the most important aspects of their undergraduate major.

Golich said the report is important because student involvement can help initiate a positive change at the universities.

"The students have to get involved in telling the legislators that higher education has to be a funding priority in Arizona," he said.

Court bans Navajo tribal police chief from reservation

WINDOW ROCK (AP) — The Navajo tribal police chief who was found in contempt of court earlier this week was banned from the reservation by court order Wednesday in the continuing dispute over elected Tribal Chairman Peter MacDonald's administration.

Earlier, a second tribal official resigned, prompting a former MacDonald aide to say the embattled leader's support was dwindling rapidly.

On Wednesday, Tribal Judge Robert Yazzie of the Window Rock District Court signed an order excluding Tribal Police Chief Wilbur Kellog from the reservation pending an April 10 hearing into why Kellog had failed to enforce orders issued by tribal courts.

Police Maj. George John, who Kellog had attempted to fire earlier, was named acting police chief by Yazzie's order.

Kellog had been found in contempt and fined $500 by the Tribal Supreme Court earlier this week for having failed to enforce a court order barring MacDonald appointee J. Tonny Bowman from taking over Yazzie's court in a Yazzie ouster attempt by MacDonald. The high court also has found Bowman in contempt but deferred assessing any penalty.

Yazzie's order barring Kellog said tribal police may request the aid of the Apache County Sheriff's Department or that of federal agents if needed to keep Kellog off the reservation.

Kellog had scheduled a news conference for Wednesday afternoon in Window Rock but didn't show up and his whereabouts could not be ascertained.

On Tuesday, MacDonald's chief of staff, attorney Richie Nez, said in announcing his immediate resignation that though he praised MacDonald's efforts as chairman, "I cannot condone the recent actions of MacDonald holding the entire Navajo Nation hostage . . . with little or no attempts to negotiate or unite the two opposing factions of the tribal council."

"I will not be a participant in the game of judicial musical chairs," said Nez, referring to several attempts to dismiss judges or members of the Tribal Supreme Court and the tribe's equivalent of an attorney general.

MacDonald was placed on paid administrative leave by a vote of the majority of the Tribal Council after witnesses before a U. S. Senate select committee testified he received gifts and kickbacks in connection with tribal business dealings.

MacDonald, who has denied any wrongdoing in that regard, has maintained the council's action was invalid and illegal. He also has attempted to retain his authority by firing opponents and those who attempt to remain neutral.

Also on Tuesday, Ruth Bitsui, personnel director under the MacDonald administration, also resigned, saying she did so because she was unable to give her job the effort it needed because of turmoil in tribal government. She said that neither side had pressured her to resign.

ASU drafting plan for student lockers in buildings

By KEVIN B. OLSON
Contributing Writer

The Office for Off-Campus Student Services is drafting a plan that will ask the University to install student lockers in campus buildings.

Wayne Lokensky, assistant director of the OOCSS and a sophomore political science and history major, said the plan calls for the placement of lockers within each college on campus.

To use the lockers, students would need to provide their own combination lock and possibly pay a small fee.

Lokensky said the plan was originally drafted to serve the needs of commuter students, but the lockers, if approved, would be available to all students.

Many of the details included in the plan still need to be worked out, he added.

"We think it will be a great way to provide a service to commuter students," Lokensky said. "Nearly 34,000 of our student population comes from off campus and we need to be aware of their needs."

"I definitely think this is a step in that direction."

ASU presently has two locations where lockers are set aside for students, but space is limited.

Near the information desk in the Memorial Union, there are about 60 lockers available for 25 cents on a first-come, first-served basis.

The ASU Bookstore has approximately 100 free, key operated lockers. The lockers are available to bookstore patrons only and are cleaned out nightly.

Tanya Smithson, an ASU freshman and part-time bookstore employee, said some students, especially during finals, abuse the privileges and store books or backpacks throughout the day.

Vince Micone, Associated Students of ASU campus affairs vice president, who oversees the operations of the OOCSS, said funding for the lockers is still uncertain.

He speculated that it would come either from the Physical Plant, the ASASU budget — which is "tapped out" — or from monies donated by participating colleges.

Micone added that the number of lockers needed for each college would depend on the results of a one-year pilot program slated to begin in the fall of 1989, pending the plan's approval.

The program would be conducted at selected colleges and the students' use and responses would be monitored.

The participating colleges would decide where to place the lockers.

Officials from the University's Planning and Construction office, the office that would eventually determine the feasibility of the plan, could not be reached for comment.

A college potentially interested in the plan is the campus' second largest, the College of Business.

David Shrock, the associate dean of the college, said he likes the concept of having the lockers.

"I think it would be useful on campus," he said. "If you have an interview or a presentation on a particular day, what do you do with all of your stuff? You don't bring it all with you. You're trying to be professional."

However, if the plan is approved, Shrock said the placement and number of lockers is important.

"We don't want it to look like a high school hallway if we were to allow them inside," he said.

Sal Rivera, a sophomore political science major and commuter student, said he thinks the plan could make life a little easier for the average commuter student.

Rivera had commuted 40 minutes, one-way, from his West Phoenix home until he recently moved a block from campus.

"I think it should be something they (the administration) should support," Rivera said. "I know I would've used them if they were here when I had to lug around my stuffed backpack all day."

State files to keep confiscated property

PHOENIX (AP) — February's seizure of more than $2 million in cash, guns and land has crippled a major drug ring on the Arizona-Mexico border, authorities said in asking a court to award it all to Arizona.

The Arizona Attorney General's Office has filed suit in Maricopa County Superior Court to keep the assets confiscated from the smuggling enterprise known as Los Tios (The Uncles), authorities said Tuesday.

Court documents allege the group is led by Yolanda Molina de Hernandez and her husband, Antonio Hernandez-Pena, both of Agua Prieta and both among those being sought by Mexican police in the torture slayings of 12 people there, the Mesa Tribune said in its Wednesday editions.

The bodies of three women and nine men were found last week in a well or covered with lime and buried in an earthen septic tank.

Also sought are Hector Fragoaso Burgueno, 45, owner of the abandoned ranch, and Jesus Ruiz Tapia, both of whom have been charged with murder, concealment and criminal association.

Arrest warrants also were issued Tuesday for Jose Gastelum and Tito Pena, on charges of "crimes against the state," Mexican authorities said.

Mexican police have said they believe Fragoaso, who they say is an American, has fled into the United States.

Four others are in custody on charges of concealment and criminal association, while seven people were charged with drug sales.

The drama

Lacrosse team emerges victorious against UofA in final seconds

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

There were seven seconds remaining in the ASU lacrosse team's most dramatic game ever when the Sun Devils scored the winning goal against the UofA Wildcats.

Cheers and hugging followed the victory Wednesday on the team's field, and ASU coach Clark Mercer said he still could not believe it.

"The win brought tears to my eyes," he said, as his players came up to him with high-fives. "I would rate this as the most dramatic game we've ever had. It's still hard to believe."

The Sun Devils captured the 13-12 win in a game that was up for grabs throughout and constantly changing hands.

"This is the kind of situation we've put ourselves into all season," Mercer said. "We seem to come back in the last part of the game. It's never over until it's over."

Senior goalie Kurt Jones agreed: "I thought we played a great game, but I played average. I let too many goals in. But I'm glad we beat UofA my senior year."

Mercer said the victory is the first time ASU has beat the Wildcats since 1987 in a non-conference game. The last time before that was in 1981.

Earlier in the season, ASU lost to UofA in Tucson in a non-conference game. Each year, the teams play each other twice in a league and a non-conference game, alternating the home field advantage for the league game each season.

Sun Devil Scott Belodeau did not play in the game but he was vocal on the sideline.

"The drama," he said when the game was tied, adding that the closeness of the game with half a minute left was almost too much to watch.

UofA coach Mickey-Miles Felton said the day was the result of a jinx.

"The last time we lost to them was on a Wednesday," he said. "We don't usually play on Wednesdays. Maybe we shouldn't again."

Felton said he was disappointed with his team's performance.

"I thought we didn't play up to our ability," he said. "We just came off two wins and we were too confident. We don't care who it is — we don't like to lose."

Mercer said the ASU squad excelled on the field and key performers were Brad Paris, Tim Hackert and Mark Raskis on the long stick mid-field line — a defensive-oriented line that is in charge of getting the ball back from UofA.

Also, team captain Greg Walaitis made five goals and three assists, and senior Mike Clark and John Mortarotti had three goals apiece.

Mercer said Jones turned in another fine performance at the Sun Devils' goal.

ASU had two goals in the first quarter, four in the second, two in the third and five in the fourth.

The Wildcats had three goals in each quarter.

The Devils' will begin practice today in preparation for their weekend trip to San Diego where they will face the University of San Diego and UC-San Diego Saturday and Sunday, respectively.

"This will be a chance for them to improve their skills," Mercer said about the upcoming non-conference encounters.

The Sun Devils will have to win their final league game of the season April 15 against San Diego State to nab home-field advantage in the playoffs April 21. The game will be held at 1 p.m. on ASU's field, behind the softball field.

This is the third consecutive year that the ASU lacrosse team will make an appearance in the playoffs.

"We set our goal," Mercer said. "We are one step away from getting home advantage. We are right on target."

Sun Devil sprinter has a large family tree

Holmes optimistic about 4-way final home track meet

By KELLY PEARCE
State Press

Sprinter Toinette Holmes' extended family can be found sprinting, jumping and throwing each practice day — her family is comprised of members of the ASU track and field team.

"We are all friends," the junior justice studies major said. "We are family. That's what it's all about."

Holmes and the rest of the squad hope to out-sprint, out-jump and out-throw San Diego State, Iowa State and Adams State in a quadrangular meet beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday at Sun Angel Stadium.

ASU head coach Tom Jones is looking for the team's top performance of the season and hopes to end the year on a high note.

Holmes, Lynda Tolbert and Jacinta Bartholomew have been the backbone of ASU's sprint team.

Seniors Tolbert and Bartholomew will make their final debut Saturday as Sun Devils along with ten other athletes including distance runners Teresa Barrios and Laura LaMena, sprinter Owen McGregor and decathlete Gary Lee.

Holmes said the team is geared up to go out with a flash.

"We're looking to win," Holmes said, adding that instead of focusing on achieving individual personal bests, tracksters will double up on events to pull off a team-effort victory.

Holmes said she most likely will run the 800-meter event and possibly the 200-meter and 400-meter sprints in addition to the relays.

"I really don't mind the extra events," she said. "The women's team doesn't have much depth so we need to double up to win."

Holmes, who describes herself as a competitor, said she is content with the first three meets of the season. She established a personal best of 53.96 seconds in the 400-meter sprint during the third meet March 25 finishing second behind a Louisiana State sprinter.

This mark moved her into third place on the ASU Top 10 list in this event.

Her performance in 1989 is much improved from the prior season, she said.

"Last year I had a tough time," Holmes said, adding that problems with former coach Clyde Duncan and workouts not geared to her personally contributed to the difficult season.

Despite the fact that the team is ailing from a two-year probation, Holmes said first-year coach Jones has been a motivator this season.

'Being selfish on the track is no help.'

"Coach Jones is doing a great job of keeping morale up," she said.

And keeping spirits up on the track is essential to winning, Holmes said.

"Being selfish on the track is no help," she said. "The better each person does, the better we do as a whole."

Even though the ASU season will draw to a close Saturday, Holmes will heat up tracks around the country running unattached.

"That's the good thing about track and field — You can go other places even if you can't compete with the team," she said. "I am looking to do bigger and better things."

Currently, Holmes is trying to get club sponsorship, hopefully with her relay teammates. In 1988, the sprinter was a member of the 4x400-meter relay team that placed third at the NCAA championship.

Because morale boosting is important to Holmes, she said members of the track team who will run unattached are trying to attend the same meets.

"We want to travel together," she said. "The morale will still be there."

Looking to next season when the Sun Devils will be able to compete in NCAAs, Holmes said she has far-reaching goals.

"We want to win NCAAs," she said. "It's a long goal but we can come very close to that. That's what we're psyched up for."

Sprinting has been a part of Holmes' life ever since she was in elementary school in Baldwin, N.Y.

"It's all I could do," she joked. Holmes participated in relays and found three other people to run with her.

'The better each person does, the better we do as a whole.'

"We were the fastest four and always seemed to win," she said.

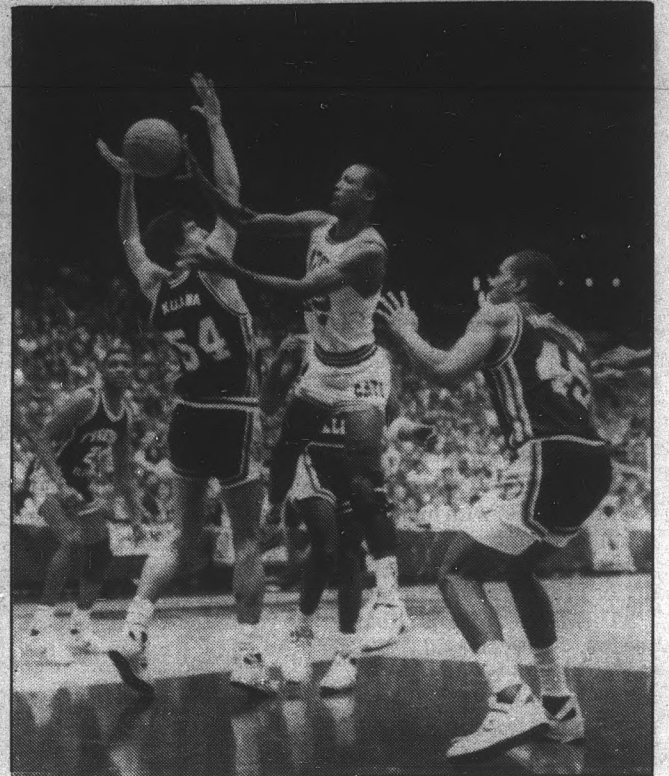

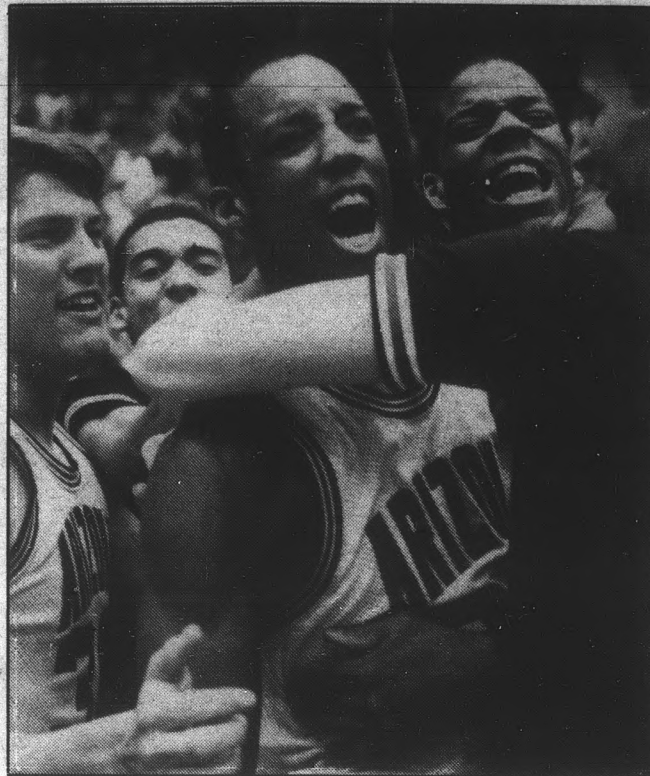

After achieving success at an early age, Holmes excelled at Baldwin High School, sprinting to all-state honors in 1985.

In 1986, she was recruited to ASU and has bettered her times each year since. But Holmes said she has a lot of running yet to do.

Elliott honored with Wooden Award

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sean Elliott, called the "consummate team player" by his coach at Arizona, collected a distinguished individual honor Wednesday when he was named the winner of the John R. Wooden Award for 1989.

Elliott, a 6-foot-8 senior forward, finished third in the national balloting by sports writers and sportscasters last year, behind winner Danny Manning and Hersey Hawkins.

This year, Elliott edged out such stars as Danny Ferry of Duke, who also was among the five finalists for the 1988 Wooden Award. The other finalists this year were guards Sherman Douglas of Syracuse, Charles Smith of Georgetown and center Stacey King of Oklahoma.

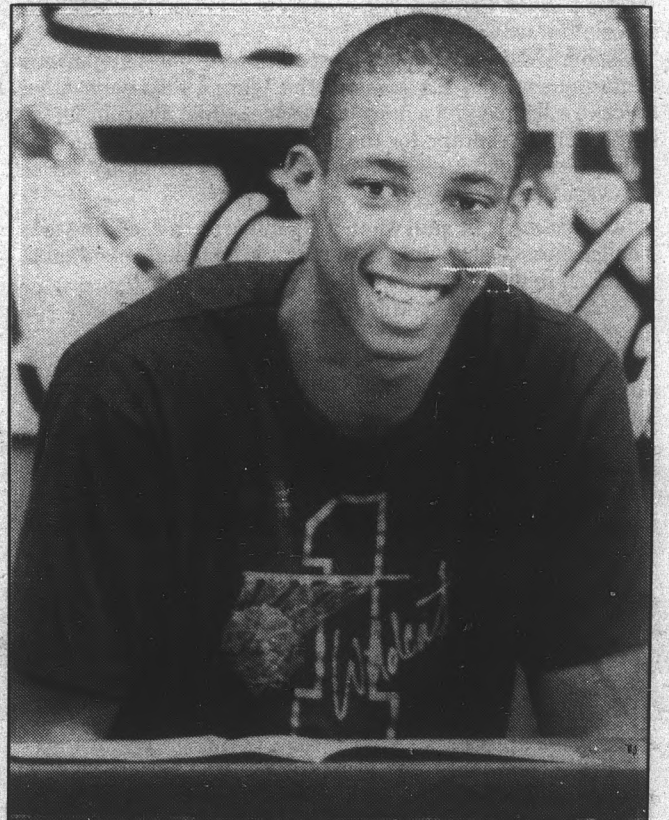

Elliott received 1,871 points in the voting, with Ferry second at 1,721, followed by King with 895, Smith with 486 and Douglas with 356.

The winner was announced — by Wooden himself — during a luncheon at the sponsoring Los Angeles Athletic Club.

"Wow," Elliott said, temporarily groping for words. "It feels good; with all the great players out there, I don't think you can really name one guy. There are probably several guys out there more deserving than I am."

But Arizona coach Lute Olson doesn't think so. "I think he's the consummate team player. He's at his best when his best is needed," Olson said of Elliott, who averaged 22.3 points a game this season and had 2,555 career points to replace Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (then Lew Alcindor) as the Pac-10's all-time leading career scorer.

The guidelines for Wooden Award candidates extend beyond the athlete's accomplishments on the court. To be eligible, a candidate must maintain at least a 2.0 scholastic

Olson says rumors about Kentucky job no cause for alarm

TUCSON (AP) — Arizona basketball coach Lute Olson says he has not decided whether to become a candidate for the coaching job at Kentucky, but sounds like he's not interested.

But he also said he has not ruled anything out yet. "We obviously have a good program going in Tucson," Olson said. "Everything is really of a positive nature here."

But he added that he feels there is no harm in listening to what other people have to say.

"There's not anything here that would cause me to have an interest in (Kentucky) other than to listen," he said.

Olson's team finished the regular season ranked No. 1 by The Associated Press, and his star player, Sean Elliott, The AP's Player of the Year, on Wednesday received the John R. Wooden Award in Los Angeles.

The Wildcats also won the Pacific-10 Conference regular-season title and postseason tournament and made it to the NCAA Sweet 16 before losing to Nevada-Las Vegas.

He told AP Tuesday that he had a preliminary discussion about the job last Friday in Seattle at the NCAA Final Four with Kentucky's new athletic director, C. M. Newton, a longtime friend. He said Newton had requested it and had obtained permission to talk to him. Eddie Sutton resigned as Kentucky's coach last month under fire.

"We love it here," Olson told the Tucson Citizen Wednesday. "We are very happy in Tucson, and this thing has been blown out of proportion."

"Just because someone is willing to talk, that doesn't mean you're on the next flight out of town."

Kentucky, despite a storied basketball history, has been the target of an NCAA investigation over alleged rules and recruiting violations, and could face sanctions including probation.

Olson also was considered a leading candidate in 1985 for

Suns beat Jazz for seventh straight in Phoenix

PHOENIX (AP) — Kevin Johnson scored 13 of his 32 points in the fourth period and Tom Chambers had 11 of his 30 in the final seven minutes as the Phoenix Suns beat the Utah Jazz 114-104 Wednesday night.

The victory put Phoenix 3½ games behind the first-place Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA's Pacific Division. Utah lost in Phoenix for the seventh straight time despite 29 points from Karl Malone and 28 from Thurl Bailey.

Phoenix, 33-5 at home this season including a 26-0 mark against Western Conference foes, trailed 74-73 after a 10-1 Utah run with 3:53 left in the third quarter.

Malone was called for a personal foul and a technical with 2:57 remaining. Johnson sank one free throw, rookie Dan Majerle hit a pair and Chambers added two more foul shots 24 seconds later for a 78-74 lead.

Phoenix, ahead 82-77 entering the fourth period and 86-81 with 10:26 to go, saw the Jazz close to 89-88 on John Stockton's three-point play with 7:20 remaining.

Johnson made two free throws with 7:11 left, hit a layup 19 seconds later and then made five free throws in a 42-second span for a 102-96 lead with 4:02 to play. Chambers added a steal and stuff and Johnson had a layup to cap a 9-2 run for a 106-96 lead.

The Jazz never got closer than seven points thereafter as Chambers scored five points down the stretch.

Eddie Johnson finished with 21 points for the Suns while Jeff Hornacek had 13 and Armon Gilliam 10 plus 15 rebounds. Stockton had 23 points and 16 assists for Utah, which is 4-31 at the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

average and "display strength and character on and off the court."

Olson said Elliott certainly deserves the award in all regards.

Relating that a Tucson high school is naming their gym "Sean Elliott Gymnasium," Olson said, "I told Sean that they usually name things after people who are dead . . . or at least out of college.

"I think that indicates the respect he's earned. He's the best role model I've ever seen."

Ferry and the other finalists, with the exception of Smith, were on hand for the Wooden announcement.

"It's great for me just to be considered one of the top players," Ferry said. "Sean had a great career and a great year. He's the kind of guy who makes the big shots for you."

Ferry recently received the basketball writers' award as the nation's top player.

"I think it's fitting that Sean won one of the awards and Danny won the other," Olson said. "They've had similar, great careers and have been extremely valuable to their programs."

the Kentucky job, after his second season at Arizona, but dropped out of the running and Sutton took the job.

"We had chatted about things in general, and he had wanted to talk with me about their vacancy," Olson said of his meeting with Newton, who took over as Kentucky's athletic director only Saturday, after ending his basketball coaching career at Vanderbilt.

Olson said the two served on the Olympic basketball committee together for four years and go back a lot longer.

"The position I took was that it doesn't do any harm to listen," Olson said. "It's not a situation where I'm an official candidate. It's a matter of a preliminary visit with him."

Olson said he told Newton he would get back to him "to indicate that I've weighed some of the things we talked about." He called the meeting "more a case of chatting as opposed to formally talking about it."

Rose could be banned from baseball for life

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose bet heavily on baseball games during the 1987 season under a code name, two Ohio newspapers said Wednesday, citing unidentified sources.

If true, the Cincinnati Reds manager could be banned from baseball — for life if he bet on games involving his own club.

A person referred to in an Internal Revenue Service court affidavit as "G-1" — whom the Plain Dealer of Cleveland and the Cincinnati Post quoted sources as saying was Rose — bet $8,000 to $16,000 a day on games during a stretch early in the 1987 season.

Although Rose is not referred to by name in the IRS affidavit, the newspapers said they were told by federal sources the code name "G-1" means Rose.

Rose declined comment on the newspaper reports.

The Post quoted the document as saying G-1 bet an average of "$2,000 per game on four to eight games per day, approximately four days per week."

The IRS affidavit quoted unidentified government informants as saying the bets were placed through Ronald Peters, 31, a Franklin, Ohio, cafe owner who was described in a Sports Illustrated story as Rose's principal bookmaker. Peters said Monday he would plead guilty to federal charges of tax evasion and cocaine distribution.

Peters declined to tell reporters whether he had any knowledge of Rose having bet on baseball games. Peters, under pressure of his plea agreement with federal prosecutors, is cooperating with federal investigators looking into drug trafficking.

The newspapers also reported the document indicates that Paul Janszen, a friend of Rose's, urged Peters to pay a $50,000 gambling debt the bookie owed Rose and Janszen.

The Plain Dealer said U. S. District Court records show Janszen became an FBI informant and began wearing a wireless microphone in April 1988 and that federal agents taped at least four conversations about the debt. Janszen's lawyer, Merlyn Shiverdecker, declined comment on the reports.

While Rose has denied betting on baseball and using bookies, he has admitted he frequently bets at race tracks.

Rose's lawyer, Reuven Katz, said Wednesday he would not comment on the report.

U. S. Attorney D. Michael Crites declined comment on the reports or whether the government is investigating Rose.

Washington lawyer John Dowd, who is directing baseball's investigation of Rose, was registered Tuesday night at a Cincinnati hotel.

Hershiser's shutout streak ends

CINCINNATI (AP) — Orel Hershiser lost his magic and record shutout streak in his first inning of the season and later lost the game Wednesday night when the Cincinnati Reds beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3.

Hershiser's string stayed at 59 innings and was stopped when Todd Benzinger hit an RBI single with two outs. The run was set up by one of Hershiser's two throwing errors.

Hershiser, who did not allow a run in his final six regular-season starts last year, pitched seven innings and gave four runs, only two of them earned, on seven hits. The Cy Young winner and World Series MVP struck out six and walked one.

The Reds' lineup, batting .323 lifetime against Hershiser, came out swinging. Barry Larkin opened the bottom of the first with a single up the middle and advanced when Hershiser made a wild pickoff throw.

Hershiser then struck out Chris Sabo and Eric Davis before Kal Daniels walked on four pitches. Benzinger, facing Hershiser for the first time, singled sharply on a 2-0 pitch and Larkin scored easily ahead of right fielder Mike Marshall's throw.

The crowd of 20,964, held down by temperatures in the upper 40s, responded with a standing ovation for both Hershiser and Benzinger, a hometown player acquired from Boston in the off-season.

PERSONALS

AAA CHI-O'S, Theta Deltas, Fijis, Sig Eps, Theta Chis: Enormous amounts of "Joy to the World" can be found when you're "Dancing on the Ceiling" with your "Sugar Pie Honey Bunch" and "Brown-eyed Girl" - so get ready for a win at Greek Sing and remember, "Don't Let Your Babies Grow up to be Cowboys." Love, the Pi Phis.

A-PHI CHRISTY - We did it! I don't know how, but we actually kicked ass in Greek Games. Thanks for a great weekend and call me next time you want to battle again, build a float, or anything else that comes to mind. (PS - I've got your money.) Phi Sig Coach.

ASASU AND RHA - Will two heads prove to be better than one? SAA.

ASU GREEKS! Phi Psi 500 is coming soon. Look here for further announcements.

BOB K. I love you alot. You're my hero. Also - does that mean I have 221 more strikes? Thank you. Love, The Funk Queen.

CD PLAYERS: Get charged for game 1 against SAA. Good luck!

COLETTE A. - Your phone's always busy! How about breakfast, 7:30 - Friday, College Street Deli? D.

DELTA SIGS 15153: Vegas was a blast!! Thanks for an awesome formal. Love, the girls from the E-Z Sleazy.

DELT JON: Motorcycle rides and slip n-sliding. Saturday night was great! Hope to see ya soon. Jenn.

DEVIL'S ADVOCATES... "On your left, home plate." Good luck! SAA.

DON'T BE left out of the tradition. Order your Yearbook today. Call 965-6881 now for more information.

GOOD LUCK to all the Greek Sing teams! From the Women of Sigma Kappa.

GREEK SING Team A: We hear your show is good. Why don't you just sit down and watch the winning show. Team F.

GREEK WEEK Letter Day - Show your spirit and sport your letters! Sign in at front of M.U.

JINI AND Jayne - Only 21 days until I'm 21. Looking forward to celebrating it with you. Love ya both, Tommy.

JODIE: I'M very lonely without you. Because "Every memory repeats and every step I take retreats, every journey always brings me back to you." But please realize everyone makes mistakes. I wish you could forgive and forget. I love you more than anything in the world and you told me you felt the same. So let's forget the past and who was right or wrong and start over. And if you have faith in us it can be done and once again our hearts will beat as one. Think about it and let me know. Love, Miserable.

LETTER DAY: Show off your fraternity or sorority and be proud to be Greek!

PERSONALS

MICHAEL XOT: Thank for all you've done for me. You're the best! I love you.

PHI PSI 500 Fever is in the air. Watch out.

PHI SIG Gregory: Wish I could be the one dancing with you tonight! Love, Madam X.

PIKES, PHI Sigs, Tri Sigmas and Lambda Chis: The Tri Deltas are ready to take Greek Sing! Get excited and sing your little hearts out!

PI PHI is proud of Greek Steering Members Amy Davis and Debbie Zeschke! Good luck this week! We love you!

PI PHI Vicki - I'll be watching a certain brown-eyed girl tonight! Looking forward to an ultimate vacation with you Saturday, Steve.

REACH - IS the championship within your reach? SAA.

SIGMA KAPPA Sara P. - Here's your personal you never receive. Crossing streets is not as safe without you. Craig.

SIGMA KAPPA: If it weren't for your holier-than-thou attitude the other sororities would be glad to have you here.

We're here for you, ASU State Press Classifieds

SIGMA KAPPAS: We're glad to have you here on ASU's campus! The Thetas.

STATE PRESS Sports Extra, "SAA wins challenge!" Good luck! SAA.

STEVE: HAPPY 22nd. Sweetie! Wondering what your gift is? How does dinner overlooking the Pacific Ocean sound? Start packing! I love you!! Marie.

STUDENT FOUNDATION - Be ready to award SAA the Softball Scholarship! Good luck in the challenge! SAA.

SUN DEVIL Spark: Bring your cameraman to capture the champions, SAA. Good luck! SAA.

THROW A pie in the face of a Pi Phi! Our Second Annual Philanthropic event will be held April 12th at 4:30 p.m. Don't miss it!

TKE BIFF: Happy 21st Birthday! Have a super day, you deserve it! I love you!! Spiff.

TRI DELTAS: The time has come to win Greek Sing! Let's make it the Best!!

TRIDELT CARRIE: Glad you made it! We'll have an awesome weekend! Don't want to let you leave too early! Lotsa love, Rob.

TRIDELT TRACY P. - Well, since you didn't get a fireball, I figured this would be the next best thing. Happy 19th Birthday! Clay.

TRI SIGMA Holly - I don't know what happened to the football player. Maybe he went slip n-sliding. Jenn.

TRI-SIGS ALI, Lara, Amy, and Tree: Good luck at Sing tonight! Love you guys! Tam.

"WELL, PAUL, you know we're gonna be at Greek Sing tonight, and I hear KKG, Chi-O, Sigma Pi, Sigma Chi, Teke, and Kappa Sigma are gonna have a great show. Some fine youngsters, Paul."

WOLFUMS: ROSES are red, violets are blue. 30 days from now, I'll be married to you! Love forever, Cutiekins.
